Wei Ying talked a lot, which wasn't surprising since he was quite the chatterbox. He described his earliest memories as an orphaned child left on the streets, how he was adopted by the Jiang family and met with a feisty and petulant boy named Jiang Cheng, and the elder sister of everyone's dreams, Jiang Yan Li. He went on to talk about the siblings, how they played and grew up together, got into trouble and fights but equally loved by the sister, shared bowls of lotus root pork rib soup and had meals on the same table especially when Madam Yu wasn't around, and the events that transpired through their teenage years. He continued to narrate the ups and downs of their lives, the fall of the Yunmeng Jiang in the hands of the Wens, the rebellion war against the foes and the involvement of the Yin Metal, how the boy named Wei Ying, or A-Xian as he was fondly called, was lost to the Dark side and eventually returned with vengeance, how this A-Xian was betrayed by those who wanted a slice of the action, a piece of the Yin Metal power, and manipulated, then finally, driven the man to despair. At the same time, the elder sister wedded a man of the Jin lineage who contributed to A-Xian's misery, but miracles prevailed, and she birthed a son whose name was actually given by the exiled and hated A-Xian, in a last, but alas, futile bid to keep a fading memory the three surviving Yunmeng siblings as one family.

The story continued until the end, past the elder sister's death, beyond A-Xian's return and redemption; he offered vague, general details about A-Xian after that, skipped lots of details about the Lan man named Han Guang Jun. Instead, he focused on giving altered, greatly abbreviated accounts of what he knew about A-Cheng and Jin Ling up till the present - the two individuals that he knew the elder sister dearly missed, whilst in life and surely, after that too.

"Thank you, Mister. It is a good story," the spirit of Yan Li sniffled and wiped away an unseen tear, "... and in good time too. We're almost at your destination." Indeed, the windy river circled around the forests' edge, passed the fringes of the Underworld cities and slums, and back to the foot of the hills. A modest, wooden pier could be seen in the horizon, which connected to the land and a gravel footpath with a bright white line in its center to indicate to spirits where to queue up for their turn to enter the Ten Courts.

Wei Ying swallowed hard; he felt as though he'd flipped through volumes of books depicting his twisted, meandering and roundabout life stories and those of the people around him; his eyes teared, his head throbbed, and his parched throat tightened in discomfort. He had a macabre thought that since this was the end of the line for him, at least he could leave the world in peace, knowing that his story had been told to someone who would remain for an eternity - or at least long after he disappeared from the face of the realm.

Something knocked against his trousers, and he had a small idea. He pulled out the rattle drum in his safekeeping, and handed it to his shijie. Yan Li accepted it hesitantly with one hand while her other held the paddle to their boat; she was confused at what to do with a child's toy, after all.

“Please, jie jie, take this as a token payment for giving this lost spirit his last boat ride in this life. You can think of it as a souvenir or a good luck charm from the story I've talked about. It could symbolize the character of Jin Ling who is the youngest babe in the story, thus, he deserves a toy meant for babes too,” Wei Ying said with a strained and wry grin.

“A Gusu Lan boy once gave A-Xian this toy, before the latter was adopted by the Yunmeng Jiang family. A Lanling Jin man married the elder Jiang sister of A-Xian. The pronunciation of Lan was incorporated into the name of the newborn son of that elder Jiang sister, as you've heard, which is Jin Ru Lan. So, if this toy is passed down from one person to another, and is given to Ru Lan--” he reached up to touch Yan Li's hand, and made her twirl the rattle drum once, so that it made couple of drumming sounds, “--would that not be a serendipitous reunion of the great families Lan, Jiang, and Jin, and that Jin Ru Lan, birth name Jin Ling, is truly a blessed child to shoulder the legacies and to hold the future of these families?”

Jiang Yan Li stared at the toy, mesmerized by the simplicity and the deep meaning it held. She twirled it again and again, like a little girl who discovered a new toy. The sounds were light, crisp and clear, because the surrounding atmosphere was as still as the dead of the night.

Suddenly, Wei Ying's shijie started to cry - it wasn't from the story, or rather, something ignited inside her after the storytelling - and she murmured and stammered between soft sobs, “J... Jin Ling... my baby... I used to shake a rattle drum... for him... his smiles, his laughter... with his father, Jin Zixuan... ah... his uncle, A-Cheng...”

Wei Ying rose from his seat, alarmed by the sudden change in her behaviour, and her choice of words. The long paddle was inadvertently released and Wei Ying rushed to grab it before it sank into the murky, bubbling acidic waters.

“... Jie jie !” he shouted.

Jiang Yan Li started to grip her head, then clawed at her face and chest with one hand, while the other continued to twirl the toy - the hypnotic drumming sounds seemed to break something inside her, causing tremendous pain in her head, and a great restlessness from within her bloodied bosom.

“A-Xian...! A-Cheng...! I-I need to see them again! My son...! I missed everyone so much! And this pain in my heart...! So much blood, the pain...!” she started to stumble back and forth unsteadily, as though she had been struck by some kind of painful illness, and Wei Ying panicked because there was really very little room to maneuver before one’s foot touches the sides of the narrow boat.

“... Jie jie ! Calm down, please!” he shouted again, one outstretched hand holding her sash on the waist to keep her from tumbling over, the other clutching at the surprisingly heavy paddle, and his legs spread out evenly to maintain his balance, as the boat started to sway and tilt dangerously side to side; his limbs were trapped and he feared that if either of them move too fast, too much, both would undoubtedly fall overboard and drown in the rippling flesh-eating waters.

Then, something vibrated inside one of Wei Ying's pockets, as if to answer the commotion of a desperate, shrieking deceased maiden yearning to see her loved ones in the land of living - and immediately, Wei Ying understood. He didn't need to do anything; the enchanted straw doll chose its destined target by climbing out of the pocket on its own, like a stiff Paperman, and it floated to the shijie. It was the female straw doll, and it glowed brightly with soft hues of lavender speckled with gold. The doll flew past her, touched her shoulder, causing the anguished woman to emit a similar lavender-gold luminescence too, and it transformed into a man-sized portal behind Yan Li.

Jiang Yan Li turned around violently at the new presence, nearly tearing off the sash that Wei Ying held tightly to. She still drummed the toy in her hand, and cried louder in distress when she saw what was beyond the portal, now that memories were suddenly returning to her and she could recognize faces that she shouldn't have.

It was blurred on the edges, but one could clearly make out the images of Jin Ling lying on a clean, sterile hospital bed, all nicely wrapped up in white bandages from head to toe. However, Yan Li's sight focused on the other, clearly visible man in the middle - Jiang Cheng, in a plain purple hospital gown, who looked every bit as she remembered, probably with a few more creases, wrinkles and scars - sitting beside the bed, with a sling around his arm and a spoon of soup in his other, trying to feed the poor boy wrapped up like a spring roll. The light from the portal was bright, and illuminated above everything else; even Wei Ying had to squint his eyes because he couldn't shield them with his busy arms.

Something jolted on the boat, and Wei Ying thought Yan Li snapped her gaze to the side, towards Jin Ling's direction, and her body jerked - probably awashed with fear, horror, shock, relief, all at once. "I... I feel his presence! My son! My precious baobei , Jin Ling! He's... He's hurt, lying on the bed, with A-Cheng! I-I must go to them!" the delirious shrill voice pleaded. A keening wail, then Wei Ying had to shut his eyes and let go of the sash because the woeful piercing cry was too much for his senses to handle. Jiang Yan Li sobbed, leapt through the portal with the rattle drum in hand, and screamed for A-Cheng and her son. The portal closed immediately with a deafening fwip ! when she stepped through, but not before Wei Ying heard the clamour of a dropped cutlery, of more confused shouts, and ugly, very raw, heart-wrenching crying.

Wei Ying was left alone in the darkness of a starless night, standing on the reed boat with the single long paddle still intact in his grasp, slowly, slowly drifting towards the pier.

.

Lan Zhan tip-toed from the pool back into the bedroom, as though he was afraid that his footsteps may creak and cause a stir to the absolute silence that pervaded the tiny cave-home. The white rabbit had stopped the earthworks for a while, to rest its paws a bit after digging for long hours. The black rabbit was in a temporary kitchen, balancing precariously on its hind legs, preparing a steaming pot of soup on a portable stove; it took a sip of the thick brownish liquid and nibbled on a mix of chopped root vegetables - carrots are a must-have -, potatoes, corn, tomatoes, lentils and slivers of meat, egg and tofu, from a ladle. Mmm, savoury, thick and delish, but needs a bit more salt, it thought, and licked its chops, wiggling nose and whiskers included. The furry black creature turned off the stove fire with a soft click, and whirled around just to see its master slowly make his way across their dwelling. It made a brief but strange chittering sound and shrugged, before returning to prepare the belly-warming snack for the occupants.

Lan Zhan felt guilty, but there was really nothing to be ashamed of, nor to be judged, for his immoral behaviour and the addiction to debauchery - he mentally slapped himself on the wrist, and chastised his inner voice to stop using such negative connotations. He reasoned with himself again and again, that it was as natural as passing wind from the rear or getting the belly-aching hiccups - something one tries not to do, but it happens anyway, and one feels unpleasant and unsettled in the aftermath.

Life for Lan Zhan swung like a pendulum - he'd spend a few hours with Wei Ying and for himself, before a deep 'itch' crawled from within. He'd eventually find himself standing on the floor mat to rid that annoying, soul-gnawing crawl on his skin - his loins, actually - then transport himself into a world of earthly pleasures, and of unbridled, wanton sexual release. He would spend aeons in there, emptying his baby-making eggs to father generations of offsprings, tire his very naughty and lively penis, swarmed with lovely nubile bodies and loved from head to toe with lovers' kisses, licks, suckles and caresses; he'd burrow deep and stay inside his lovely Wei Yings and their children, enjoying the finest orgasmic sensations from intertwining their bodies and engaging in repeated breedworthy sexual intercourse, to make sure only the fattest, healthiest and the most perfect babies are continuously conceived from their sinful, unholy and incestuous unions - and then, return to the real world after a couple of minutes have passed, in real time. His lower body would be drenched with spilled evidence of his illicit lovemaking, his upper body covered with scratches, lovebites and bodily fluids from both genders, thus he staggered straight into the pool for a quick wash, before returning to lovely Wei Ying's side - the original - and the countdown to the next 'itch' is set in motion.

Returning to bed quietly, logically, didn't serve any purpose, since Wei Ying was still unconscious. The sleeping man fared slightly better over the course of recent days, even weeks - it was fine to lose track of time, in the middle of a wilderness paradise. His body had some bruises, scars and closing wounds left, there was a tinge of pink on the still-pale complexion, he was still awfully thin and haggard from the lack of intake of solid food, but at least his breaths moved in a constant, reassuring tempo, and his pulse wasn't erratic nor fading away. Lan Zhan believed that if he tried to move Wei Ying off the bed, or make loud noises such as thudding footsteps, something might break; so, he treated the man like a delicate flower petal, and did everything he could to make sure his beloved was safe and sound in a tranquil nest of sleep-warmed pillows and goose down blankets upon the new king-sized double bed.

The bed dipped slightly when Lan Zhan sat on it, and he slowly, gently turned Wei Ying's naked body - aided with ample Invisible Hands - until the latter lay prone on the mattress. He brought a bottle of their favourite massage oil and hoped the perfumed elixir would somehow stir the stationary figure with scents from a shared past. Lan Zhan gave Wei Ying's stick-thin thighs and calves exquisite massages, but the latter was unresponsive although the blood circulation improved, in the form of a thin sheen of sweat on the skin, a more prominent rosiness in colour, and a tell-tale firmness and suppleness to the touch.

Using Invisible Hands, Wei Ying's hips were gently lifted off the bed and Lan Zhan slid beneath between the younger man's boneless legs; he faced the spouse's groin while the latter continued to lightly snore into a pillow, face-down. The husband deftly inserted three oil-lubricated fingers, past the familiar ring of muscle and knew where to deliciously knead and draw circles, squares, stars and flowers deep inside the blossomed rosebud. Lan Zhan's digits violated the man's anus frequently - since he refused to do it with his oversized penis, which could cause more damage and distress to the weakened body - the finger job was, technically, done for valid health reasons. He spent minutes, hours, lovingly assaulting the walnut-sized gland with expert fingers and perfectly-memorized movements, performing cultivation moves with precise finger-strokes against the defenceless, swollen prostate with unrivalled mastery, and caused the tiny organ to balloon in size, fill up with tasty fluids and flavoursome sweet nectar, convulse powerfully in a series of rapid muscular contractions and relaxations - until Wei Ying's unconscious body was forced to react - silently - from primal instinct and from the fiery pleasures electrocuting the nerve-ends of the non-existent sexual meridians; a tremor sizzled through the spine, a wave of muscular pulsing rocked the core of the body from deep within, surging outward with liquid molten pressure, the hips bucked and quivered noticeably, molested balls tightened, the meaty, hard arousal stiffened then twitched dangerously close.

Lan Zhan simply continued his patient, unyielding thrusts of his fingers into lovely Wei Ying's squeezing tunnel of love with one hand, and use his other hand to stroke the cockflesh at a relentless pace - with tender swipes to the sensitive hairy balls in-between - then locked his lips around the shuddering, thick-veined organ, comforting it with the the tightness of a swallowing throat; Lan Zhan face-fucked Wei Ying's turgid member a few times, suffocated in a dense bush of hairy, lover-scented pubic curls, and actually felt bloated pulses of seed running up the underside of the very excited phallus - he let his tongue lick the shaking length of admirable girth in maddening upward strokes, coaxing the dark angry-red organ to release everything, every pent-up desire, every last bit of syrupy pleasure, in a faraway, distant hope that perhaps the mind-blowing orgasmic explosion could jostle lovely Wei Ying awake - and finally, finally, Lan Zhan savoured the delicious, thick milky sauce in his mouth - warm, absolutely Wei Ying-licious, comforting, homely, loving, wife-y - in hearty volcanic ejaculations and rich gushing oozes, fifteen creamy loads in total; but the continued sexual assault on the trembling organ drew out a few more sputtering drops when it became too excited, electrocuted, mixing its liquids with faint signs of pungent pee, to Lan Zhan's delight, and to Wei Ying's unconscious but sexually flushed, hip-shaking, shuddering completion.

Lan Zhan placed Wei Ying back into a proper resting position, wiped his mouth out of courtesy, and also wiped down the spouse's nether regions. Then, he leaned over to place a sweet kiss on Wei Ying's forehead, wordlessly thanking him for the tasty meal and for spending quality time together despite their challenging situation, before walking to the other end of the room where the guqin awaited.

Lan Zhan selected a number of calming, healing songs from memory, and began to play the instrument. Sometime later, the black rabbit politely entered the room with bowls of qi -invigorating soup, and the white rabbit resumed its digging.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

p.s. Made some typo corrections and beta-ed the second half of this chapter. That's what happens when I post a chapter in a rush without re-reading...!

Chapter 130

Like a piece of iron stuck to a magnet, once the reed boat docked at the pier on its own, Wei Ying couldn't sail away no matter how hard he paddled with the long stick. He used his legs to push against the wooden planks, rowed insanely in the opposite direction, but the boat remained steadfast in its spot amongst rippling waters, bobbing gently to the rhythm of the currents flowing by the riverside. He theorized that the boat was a magical sentient object that heeded its master - however, since Jiang Yan Li had stepped through a portal leading back to the Mortal Realm, the boat no longer responded to anyone's will. Wei Ying cursed silently under his breath; he would've loved to take a leisurely river cruise in the Underworld for his personal amusement, if not as the last thing he could enjoy while he was still, well, existing.

Faint barking sounds jolted him back to reality, and they seemed to emanate from the direction he came from. Wei Ying knew that he shouldn't dally around, since the guards could follow his trail by travelling along the river's edge. He quickly disembarked from the boat, careful not to slip or touch the acidic water's surface, trotted along the pier before taking a sharp turn away from the bright white line painted on the gravel; he refused to toe that line at all. He knew he couldn't run forever, so while making his way through prickly bushes and dense undergrowth, he scouted around to see if there were any abandoned buildings or caves that he could use as a safe house.

Just then, he spotted a sign pointing towards a rugged path leading uphill. In the dim light, he could hardly make out some serpentine symbols etched onto it, which are partially related to the language of the Dark Arts - and the fact that those symbols actually hissed and wriggled like live worms. He read the words "Danger ahead!" and "Do not touch!", and need not look further - he sprinted forward with glee, hoping that whatever that lay ahead was right up his alley.

.

A large windswept barren crater lined with lava streams, like a hole punched deep in the middle of a volcanic mountain, lay as far and wide as the eye could see. It was a scenery fit for the heart of Hell - the surface was cracked, there were multitudes of geyser vents and bubbling pits of lava, with some brackish salty pools near the base; everything was grey, bumpy, jagged, dry, dusty and encrusted with ink-black volcanic ash or rock. The stinging smell of sulphur permeated the air and at times, made Wei Ying's eyes water; the air was arid and hot that mirages appeared in the far end of the rim of the crater; thankfully, a bodiless spirit did not have to fear extremes in temperatures although it may experience unsettling discomfort from the assault on its senses. Every few minutes, tremors rumbled through the downward slopes of the topographical marvel, resulting in tiny landslides of rock and sand, and billowing clouds of dust rising up the air.

If the amount of signages hastily hammered to the crater grounds was an indication, then whatever that was held in the middle would be considered as the biggest, baddest, meanest and fiercest monstrosity that the Underworld has ever seen. During the uphill trek, even while munching on foraged berries and nuts (his Dark Arts knowledge about the geography and the flora and fauna of the Underworld came in handy - thank goodness he didn't skip any chapters while pouring through those ancient tomes during his previous life as the Yiling Patriarch), Wei Ying became increasingly smitten by the conspicuous signs with ostentatious messages - "Do not enter, or risk getting EATEN!", "TERROR ahead! Proceed at your own peril!", "LETHAL biological warfare weapon ahead! You have been warned!", "You will DIE instantly! Turn around NOW!", "You are walking into the den of the MONSTROSITY! Begone, trespasser!", et cetera ad nauseum , which only served to inflame the man's curiosity to take a few more steps into the unknown.

A light hike and jog past what he thought to resemble as jagged outcrops, gritty sand dunes, mud-cracked landscape, and a large blood-splattered poster nailed to a dead tree trunk screaming the words “MONSTROSITY! DO NOT PROCEED!”, Wei Ying eventually broke into a sprint when he recognized the secret held in the centre of the bowl-like depression - it was Wen Ning with his limbs spread-eagled and tied to large poles to the side!

“Wen Ning! Wen Ning! Can you hear me?” Wei Ying asked repeatedly, and waved a hand in front of the man who was almost on his knees.

Wen Ning was barely conscious and his face was covered with dust, grime and dried mud. His head lolled in all directions as he struggled keep his half-standing, half-stooping position like an elderly man with a bent back; his knees caved in probably out of cramps and fatigues, but the chains forced him to remain upright on the soles of his feet, and more chains made sure that his lifeless, dangling hands were spread out like broken wings on a bird that had been trapped when it met its untimely end. Wen Ning wasn't coherent - he mumbled syllables that didn't make sense, he wasn't aware of his surroundings, he blinked his eyes blearily and the dark circles under them were even more pronounced than before, and he was so pale and his limbs were like jelly, that Wei Ying thought the Wen gongzi could collapse at any time and expire in front of him. It was mind-boggling, even unthinkable, how the guards of the Underworld could call the baby-faced man a ‘monstrosity’!

After giving a couple of hearty shakes on the torso clothed by multi-layered ragged black robes, in which Wen Ning remained unresponsive, Wei Ying discovered a large ugly diagonal gash from one shoulder, near where the black veins started, to the lower waist of the other side, where torn strips of cloth used as a makeshift belt hung loosely. It was a wound that could never heal - much like what Wei Ying witnessed on his shijie 's chest; the wide, gaping laceration on Wen Ning's body perpetually oozed congealing viscous black liquid - his undead blood -, which although didn't change the colour of the man's clothes, gave some clues as to what ill-fate befell him before he was spirited off to the Underworld.

Realizing that the longer they stayed at that bottom of the crater, the more exposed they were to the risks of natural disasters, falling stones, or becoming shrivelled like dried plums placed under the hot sun - except that the high ceiling of the Underworld was eternally moonless and lacked any source of light -, Wei Ying took some time and effort to pick apart the chains that tied his friend to the poles.

“For a ‘monstrosity’, the security is certainly lax around here, and the materials they used to bind you are brittle as rusted metal,” he murmured to a semi-comatose Wen Ning, noting that there wasn't anyone in the vicinity to watch the prisoner - probably out of fear of being terrorized or devoured by the fearsome ‘monstrosity’. He raised a fist-sized rock and pummeled a weakened spot on the chains, cave-man style; the chains were as needlessly large as those that anchored warships to moors, but prolonged exposure to erosive gases, volcanic atmosphere, violent winds and occasional bursts of superheated vapours left much of the material deteriorated and pockmarked with holes. Soon, the ends of the chains that imprisoned Wen Ning were successfully cleaved, and the man ended up with several more trailing chain-links on his body on top of the smaller ones that he already had on his garments.

Wei Ying put one of Wen Ning's hands around his shoulder, and slowly and carefully, the duo started climbing up the crater that was filling up with shifting sands; a sandstorm seemed to be blowing in, and Wei Ying didn't want to be caught in one.

.

All Wen Ning needed was just a drink of water - and he received lots of it, in awe and gratitude of the man who saved his life yet another time.

Wei Ying dragged the weakened, partially conscious Wen Ning to the top of the crater, where a natural spring flowed into a brook that led to, and supplied water to, the Ten Courts around the foot of the hills. There, he found plenty of lush forests as compared to the crater behind them, and therefore, abundant fruiting berry bushes, succulent wild vegetables and ripened nuts hanging off branches of trees that grow on damp soil. He fashioned scoops out of large leaves to give Wen Ning a much-needed trickling shower, have his face wiped down and cleaned, and a life-saving drink. Without any cultivation or the ability to transfer qi, Wei Ying could only try to feed a bit of food to the man made to sit in a lotus position, but the latter choked, coughed and spat half-chewed mush of fruits and nuts - at least he was stirring to full consciousness.

“Wen Ning? Wake up! Snap out of it!” he whispered and rubbed soothing circles on the man’s back; he wasn’t sure if there were any guards around, so they needed to remain quiet.

Wen Ning finally blinked a few times, and greedily accepted another scoop of water with tasty moans, gently fed to his mouth, and croaked with a raspy voice, “... Wei... gong ... zi ...?”. Wei Ying took a few gulps for himself and nodded energetically. He dropped everything and held Wen Ning’s arms, then shook them with a sense of gladness, of welcoming back a long lost friend.

“Eh? You do recognize me! That’s great, Wen Ning! What happened to you? Why did you end up here? The last time we met was... err... before summer, right? How have you been since then?” Wei Ying exclaimed his barrage of questions, and Wen Ning had to squeeze his eyes for a moment to steady his wavering consciousness.

Wei Ying was concerned about the other man’s state, so he held himself back and waited patiently for Wen Ning to digest his current situation. Then, as though some cobwebs had been cleared from the mind, the man suddenly lurched forward and grabbed his wrists in a desperate bid to seek answers.

“... Wei gongzi ! Wei gongzi ! Si Zhui! Where is Si Zhui?!” Wen Ning cried.

Wei Ying sighed - it was going to be a longer day than he thought. There was much to tell, and even more to ask; Wen Ning’s story is probably as colourful as Wei Ying’s, as the two shared a lot in common, both in the past and present - however, this was no time for catching up for old times’ sake, and certainly no time to sit down to enjoy tea together. He placed a forefinger on Wen Ning’s lips to gently shush him.

There was much to do, but everything had to start from somewhere. He calmly asked the alarmed man what was the last thing he remembered.

.

Lan Zhan had professed his hatred towards womankind after what happened to his spouse and the three boys whose fates he did not know - because he had completely disconnected from the outside world -, and swore to avoid any encounters of the female kind. However, as repulsive as his discerning palate deemed the fairer gender to be, he could not overcome that disturbing, unquenchable thirst for the flesh; he thought he had been infected by the curse of the incubus, since his spouse had not displayed any symptoms of transforming into one while lying on the bed; or worse, he thought he was haunted by the dirty stories that Wei Ying used to rant during their sexcapades, and that startling and honest, impassioned accusation that the husband actually has a unspoken penchant for - he detests the word, and can never bring himself to say it audible - vaginas.

In any case, Lan Zhan had sought the black rabbit for some counselling advice; it crawled up and down the man's body and sniffed at his erogenous zones, before declaring that there was nothing wrong with him, and a caveat that the man should really go to the nearest major hospital for a full check-up by a certified doctor. By then, Lan Zhan was livid, because all that pawing, nibbling and tickling with rabbit whiskers made him hard again - so, he stomped off to the floor mat out of pure bad habit and the desire to 'scratch that itch', and teleported himself to a sexual buffet paradise; the dungeon was, again, filled with the choicest, more beautiful and fertile females he had ever laid his eyes upon, and he had no other option but to yield to his boiling lusts, and started sampling each individual morsel, the stretched-open virginal holes, invitingly welcoming his overexcited, cum-leaky penis to conquer and deflower every willing Wei Ying within his grasp.

Two minutes later - with another two thousand babies perfectly conceived with explosive, arching servings of his seed, and are well on the way to full-term births; he added another notch to his list of achievements and unlocked the prized Top Baby-maker award, again -, Lan Zhan returned to the cave-home with his body sexually flushed, panting heavily, eyes glazed from orgasming too fast, too much, and his loins had shrivelled to, say, normal sizes, and his back ached from pistoning non-stop for way too long. He quickly hopped into the pool for a quick dip, then refreshed and cleansed himself from all traces of unholy desires, and marched straight to the bedroom to cuddle up with his beloved - in a desperate bid to salvage his tattered pride and reputation as a loving, faithful husband, and to atone for his sins - although surely, the spouse would never know if the husband never told.

Alas, something was amiss. Lan Zhan had spent so much time surrounded by soft curves, feminine voluptuousness, cherubic baby fat and jiggle-worthy mounds, that he actually missed groping, ravishing and squeezing (forcefully) F-cup sized boobs, and sleeping between them. Ample breasts weren't just sexual objects of desire, but as a source of nourishment, of primal happiness and satisfaction, and of comforting deep-seated fears and anxieties; if anything, Lan Zhan wished he could just take the boobs and run from the insatiable harems, because he swore that he'd avoid females as much as he could.

He flipped Wei Ying so that the latter lay face-down, and tried to sleep on the younger man's buttocks to recapture the experience of being buoyed by bosoms. After a while, he realized there was not much fat, in fact some bony protrusions poked into his skin and caused discomfort, and the amount of muscles on Wei Ying's ass was probably withering away from the lack of use - it was akin to lying on an old, flat pillow, and Lan Zhan nearly cricked his neck in doing so -, so he got up with a huff, then fluffed up the slightly springy but flat-ish ass, and started to pinch, knead and jiggle the twin glutes. He promised silently to include massages on the buttocks as part of their daily exercise regime from that day onwards, in the hopes that Wei Ying will regain his bouncy bum with the perfect balance of elasticity, firmness, tension, shape and volume, soon.

Lan Zhan turned around and faced down into the crack of Wei Ying's buttocks until the bridge of his nose was snug between twin peaks, in another futile attempt to relive the softness he remembered - the area had been thoroughly cleaned and perfumed, by the way - and out of pure bad habit, inhaled noisily until his lungs filled with Wei Ying's musky scent with a faint hint of sourness. It didn't take long for Lan Zhan to suffocate from the lack of air in that awfully tight, narrow strip of space, so he grunted in annoyance and got up again. He swatted the taut flesh and bent down to gnaw on the surface out of spite - to leave a bite mark in vengeance -, and unexpectedly, Wei Ying let out a string of warm, bubbly soft farts. Lan Zhan flinched at the unsavoury sounds, and even more when he caught a whiff of what ailed the younger man's barely-functioning digestive system.

He realized that he'd been so preoccupied with his own troubles and what he thought were Wei Ying's needs, that the spouse's basic bodily condition had been rather sidelined. Sure, Wei Ying slept on a bed with enough pillows and blankets to last a lifetime, he was fed as best as possible through non-intubation means, and his body received adequate care such as getting cleansing wipes, and moved to different positions periodically to prevent blisters and pressure sores - but with such commendable efforts going in , some would be metabolized into possibly toxic wastes and by-products, and where or when would these go out ?

The black rabbit made an off the cuff remark about "being incapacitated and immobilized for so long, surely he's already an invalid and classified as a vegetable by the Kingdom's medical standards; and vegetables take in nutrients from the air, water and soil, and nothing goes out until it's harvest time", and Lan Zhan retaliated by grabbing the furry animal by its ears and he gave the tuft of fur on its rump a punishing squeeze - and it squealed for mercy from the pain, and from the sheer embarrassment, when pea-sized droppings dribbled onto the floor.

Later, the black rabbit had to pick up its own poop and disinfect that bedroom on its own. Then, to add salt to the wound, it had to figure out Lan Zhan's dilemma of the spouse - carefully and with admirable finesse and strength, it carried Wei Ying while walking on its hind legs to the outdoor springwater pool at the back of the home, and gently placed him into the warm, soothing and swirling waters by the poolside. Wei Ying sat boneless with his back against the poolside and the water was up to his waist. The black rabbit asked the white rabbit for a bit of help, in the form of a professional masseur, rabbit-style. The white rabbit gleefully hopped over from the home, glad to take another break from the incessant digging.

The white rabbit curled itself on Wei Ying's belly while being half-submerged in the very comforting warm waters - it was getting a nice rinse at the same time too -, and began to knead Wei Ying's belly with its four paws. It made little pushes, bounced on the abdomen, and when the fun kicked in, it danced and twirled around the man's navel with dainty but impactful steps of fleet-footed furred padded feet.

Within a few minutes, Wei Ying's belly rumbled - once, twice, then a series of low growls and squealy and squelchy sounds. Whatever that needed to be expelled from the bottom, could do so with ease, aided by the fast flowing undercurrents at the pool bed, and everything would be swept away downstream, where more streams and pools form a network of budding freshwater lotus farms near the cave-home.

The next time Lan Zhan saw Wei Ying, he practised his guqin while two walking rabbits carried the younger, unconscious - but visibly relieved - man using their forepaws, back to the bedroom; Wei Ying was already bathed and dried with a towel, and he was tenderly tucked into the bed for another musical healing session by the master of the house. Lan Zhan kept to his and the spouse's promise, of doing it at least once a day - and he didn't think Wei Ying's enfeebled body could take more stress than it should. He had pleased and relieved Wei Ying once earlier that day, at the front and now the back, so that should be enough for a job well done - for now.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 131

In a way, Wei Ying found himself to be in a similar situation as Wen Ning, about two decades earlier - a dead man who was still technically alive, kept by some manner of life support so that the body was left in the Mortal Realm, but the spirit was shoved into the Underworld. Back then, Wen Ning's ruined body had been beaten up and speared by unscrupulous cowardly guards from the mining facility manned by Wen slaves, then carried through the Qiongqi Path on one rainy night, patched and sewn back in the 'Mounds, before being covered by yellow Energy talismans that continued to emit life-giving qi to sustain the wrecked vessel. Wen Ning certainly forgotten about the time spent wandering in the Underworld, since any resurrections came with a guaranteed mind-wipe to make sure that he never knew what happened in Hell; Wei Ying's case had been the same during his childhood days as a starving, sick and feeble street orphan, although in-depth studies about the Dark Arts later in life helped him to understand those small cracks and gaps in his memory, deep-rooted fascination about the supernatural and the unexplored, and even teased out few hints about the feared realm of the dead.

"Wei gongzi , Wei gongzi , where is this place? Why is it dark all the time? Did you come here to save me? You're a real hero and you've saved my life again!" Wen Ning started praising his former master - and he did it with such child-like sweetness that blushing Wei Ying gladly peeled the skin of a berry and popped it into Wen Ning's waiting mouth to shush him up for a moment. The berries in the Underworld looked like cherry tomatoes - bright bloody red that bled abundantly upon munching them - and tasted like strawberries, except that their skin was bitterly toxic to any typical Underworlders - those who have lost their bodies, officially declared dead, and have passed on -, although the fiber-rich peels are fine for consumption by the living - including those who hovered in a limbo between life and death. Wei Ying read about such berries from studying arcane books that delve into the Dark Arts, and it made sense because the toxic peel was a natural deterrent to prevent the common Underworld population from overconsuming the berries, thus safeguarding the plant species from extinction. Moreover, eating berries was one of the tidbits he remembered about the realm of the dead, because he vaguely recalled being a small child running through such shadowy creepy forests, and someone taught him how to properly forage for food in the Underworld wilderness. The fact that Wen Ning reacted immediately to the berries by spitting them out when he had his first bite - whole ripe berries - told Wei Ying what he needed to know about Wen Ning's state of existence.

According to Wen Ning, life had been pretty much... extraordinarily ordinary, at least in Wei Ying's terms. The man and Si Zhui travelled mostly around the heavily populated Great Eastern Coasts, whilst making occasional trips inland, such as going village-hopping when there are festivals, replenishing certain supplies found only in mountainous regions, following the trail to greater adventures - in which, Wen Ning proudly declared that they helped the locals to solve some mysteries and in the process, grew up, matured and learned more about themselves -, and of course, the seasonal pilgrimage to the 'Mounds to visit Wei Ying and Lan Zhan - the last time they met was around the time when spring flower buds turned into summer blooms. When Gusu closed its borders in summer, the two were, like so many other travellers including cultivators and the common folk, trapped and had to adapt accordingly to survive the harsh rule of the Imperial regime. Fortunately they didn't stand out like true Gusu Lan disciples, or cultivators of other smaller sects, and they weren't rich nor famous - so they kept on their toes to evade Tian-led patrols and enforcement officers, until the fateful day when they found themselves cornered in a barricaded Caihong Town.

Back to Wen Ning's innocuous questions - Wei Ying habitually downplayed the man's intelligence and didn't want to complicate matters by making long-winded explanations. "Well... we're actually on the other side of the flat world," he started, and gestured with his open palm placed horizontally in Wen Ning's line of sight, and pointed at the palm facing downward. "Here, it's always dark, because the sun at the upper plane never shines through, so essentially we're in the shadowed part of the world. It's like living underneath a piece of rice paper, y'know?" Wei Ying tried his best to look smug, and Wen Ning's eyes shone even brighter in the so-called darkness of the Underworld. The former Yiling Patriarch felt his pride (and cheekiness) swell up twice its original size.

"Enn! Wei gongzi is such an astute man of knowledge and science! I couldn't really grasp what my older sister said long ago about how the world is supposed to be round, how it spins like a ball but is tilted at an angle, and therefore leading to days and nights, and the seasonal cycles... but you made it sound so easy! Our world is like a piece of rice paper, after all!" Wen Ning exclaimed excitedly and nodded fervently in agreement. At that point, Wei Ying internally facepalmed, his ego deflated to half of what it used to be, he bit his lower lip in instant regret, and he sent a silent apology to Wen Qing - in name only, since she no longer existed - for teaching bad things to her little didi.

Wei Ying adjusted his sash and cleared his throat; he needed to divert the other man's attention away from the terrible realm that surrounded them, and focus on the task at hand. "Err... anyway... Anyway, it's hard to say if I'm here to save you, because I was dabbling with a bit of my usual Dark Arts magic, and ended up here... I'm-- I'm just passin' by like takin' a walk into the woods, and couldn't ignore a man chained to sticks on the ground! So... yeah! So I found you and rescued you, after all!" he grinned in his sea of white lies and clearly made a mockery of Wen Ning's fate, but that was fine and dandy, because the latter looked satisfied with the answer - Wen Ning even made little bows of gratitude while sitting cross-legged. "But let's get back on the topic. Tell me what happened before you got here, because it's important that you let me know every single detail that you can remember," Wei Ying nudged the other man gently, and popped in two more peeled berries into the latter's mouth as a token thank-you for putting up with his unscientific bullshit and half-truths.

“Wei gongzi , I remembered that both Si Zhui and I entered into Caihong Town, and just as the gates closed to ward off a sudden arrival of a wave of monsters, I heard faint flute music and a cacophony of female screeches too...” Wen Ning narrated in between hearty chews. As elucidated earlier by Si Zhui back in Gusu, the two tried to evade the succubi and their undead forces. Si Zhui was put into a deep stasis using magical means, and chunked into the casket so that he would not be pursued and preyed upon by the undead. Wen Ning said, while demonstrating with flailing hands, that he ran across the streets with the casket on his shoulders, in plain sight of the enemy, and none of the monsters even noticed him. “A-Yuan was as smart as you too, Wei gongzi ! He correctly guessed that the undead wouldn’t be interested in the dead anyway, so I was definitely not on their hit list, and so was he when he sealed off his life energies,” Wen Ning added.

However, eventually they were cornered in the temple grounds, and that was when the dissonant flute music reached its crescendo - which announced the arrival of several fierce, but quite normal-looking human females. Upon a bit of probing, such as finding out the choice of costume - which was claimed to be of the glitzy, flesh-revealing Far, Far Western barbaric style - Wei Ying determined that they were some of the Tian sisters - thus evidencing that the females had planned the attack in advance and chose their target carefully - because--

“-- Wei gongzi , it was terrible, because one of those females played the flute, and her skills were even better than yours! It completely overwhelmed my consciousness within minutes!” he cried in despair, and Wei Ying nearly swore a filthy cuss at being made to look inferior to the Tian sisters’ magical and musical firepower. “I couldn’t fight back the sinister shrill voices inside my head telling me what to do... those evil voices commanded me to move my limbs to their whims no matter how much I resisted wholeheartedly, and my senses became blurry, dark, suffocatingly smoky, filled with a kind of endless void of dread, gushing with the metallic tang of blood and cries of malice and vengeance, and numerous illusionary skeletal hands appeared to pull at my legs and threatened to drag me into this inky black chasm that wanted to swallow me whole,” Wen Ning tried to explain his experience, which ended up a rather confused and disjointed mess of macabre descriptions - but Wei Ying knew well what he said; he had been there, done that before.

Wen Ning realized he had lost the battle of wits and for the control of his own mind and body - so, at the entrance of the mausoleum and while clutching desperately at his head from the agony caused by the flute, he swiftly sent a coordinated, powerful kick to the casket with a special talisman stuck to it; a downright dirty and easy trick he’d learnt from the brilliant Yiling Patriarch long ago, about how to quickly write a simple (but Grand Cultivation Council-unsanctioned) talisman using a bit of qi as a makeshift ink-brush - that the casket was instructed to zip through the air on its own like a guided missile ala Paperman spell -, and locate a safe landing spot within the catacombs beneath the stone building. Then, he applied the Gusu Lan seal to the large doors to prevent any intruders from entering the mausoleum, plus a silent prayer for Si Zhui’s safety, because he really didn’t think anything could protect them from the powerful monsters - especially one that wielded flute music even greater than the Yiling Patriarch (and Wei Ying seethed and stewed silently at that comment).

“That’s all I can clearly remember, Wei gongzi , because after that, the flute music took over my mind and everything was jumbled,” Wen Ning shrugged helplessly with slumped shoulders. Right after that final noble act to safeguard Si Zhui’s body, the flute music had gained complete control of Wen Ning’s entire being. The last distorted and blurred image he could recall was a sight from thousands of miles above the land - he could see distant mountain ranges, networks of waterways, and everything beneath him, including the town, was so, so tiny and fragile -, his vision was framed by cloud cover and the hoarse voice of his feral roar, his fingers arched into claws and the black veins on his neck and joints bulged tremendously until several of them burst, further fuelling the pain coursing through his body, the maddening and inexplicable anger and ferocity that muddled his consciousness - somehow, he ended up either flying to the skies or someone carried him to high altitudes - he couldn't pinpoint which - and then--

-- And then, gongzi, there was a snapping sound. I'm not sure if that was a bone or something else, but I dropped from high above Caihong like a heavy rock toppled off a cliff!" Wen Ning's eyes went wide with amazement to illustrate how preposterous his situation was, and how breathtaking was the experience of falling to one's death. "I blacked out then, and I think I fell so hard and fast, that I must've punctured through the rice paper of the world that you spoke of," Wen Ning cutely raised and open palm and aligned it horizontally, mimicking Wen Ying's actions moments ago, and using a forefinger from his other hand, hurriedly dove through the palm and between fingers to illustrate how the so-called rice paper was perforated, "So your explanation of this perpetually dark world makes sense, gongzi ! I must've hit the ground so hard that my body punctured a hole through the hard earth - because I know I can move boulders and layers of soil with my bare hands - and appeared on the other side... the dark side!" Wen Ning grinned proudly at his analysis and conclusion, but Wei Ying was far less impressed - nevertheless, he smiled back stiffly and patted the man's shoulders in a vague praise; but more importantly, he gained a deeper understanding of Wen Ning's demise. Dropped from a few thousand miles above ground, nothing - not even an enhanced fierce corpse of the mighty Ghost General - could survive the fall; Wen Ning's body was in all likelihood shattered beyond recovery.

Wei Ying was about to dismiss the rest of the rather unbelievable discussion and let Wen Ning rest, because it seemed that whatever happened in the past really didn't matter anymore - Wen Ning was dead, they were both stuck in the Underworld, and Wei Ying probably needed a bit more time to figure out how to salvage Wen Ning's situation - could a bodiless spirit of a fierce corpse be resurrected, perhaps inserted into a new body? Would a fierce corpse's spirit even be considered an equal to a living person's spirit? - amongst many other titillating unexplored questions about the secrets behind the Dark Arts, that made the gears inside Wei Ying's head spin with renewed interest in the taboo and the prohibited.

Wen Ning seemed to have gotten the gist of foraging from the forests of the Underworld, so he reached far to the side at a bush, and plucked a couple of berries. Then, following the footsteps of Wei Ying, he carefully peeled the skins off. "Wei gongzi ," he said with a respectful bow and presented a shiny, de-skinned cherry tomato-ish berry as an offering for the great former master, the life-saver, the eminent sage, and the everything for his - Wen Ning's - world.

Wei Ying took it with a self-congratulatory grin and easily popped it into his mouth, then patted the man's cheeks (and inadvertently left a smear of berry juice there), "You're a good boy, Wen Ning, and thank you for telling me what happened. Remind me to do something about your weakness towards flute music, to strengthen you against the influence of Dark magic, and to power you up, once we're outta here."

Wen Ning grinned in return, his face brimming with new hope now that he had truly found his saviour.

.

"Wei gongzi , Wei gongzi , why do they label me as a monstrosity? All the signs around the crater seemed to say the same thing... it's awful! Is it because of my reputation? Or is it because I look scary to the people of this world? Do you have any news about Si Zhui? I left him in the mausoleum of Caihong Town. We probably missed a meeting with Jing Yi shixiong since travel became restricted when the Imperial regime imposed new rules. How is Lan er gongzi ? Is he still cooking up storms in the kitchen back at the cave-home? I missed his tasty sweet-sour fried pork, and till recently, Si Zhui kept on harping about his perfect mild-flavoured savoury fish congee and double-boiled herbal chicken soup! Oh, meeting you here reminds me of how much I missed being around close comrades, and I really want to celebrate this feeling when we return to the upper world!”

Wen Ning was too innocent, and too precious, partly because of his lack of awareness, and that he has an annoyingly absolute trust in people’s kind words without an ounce of skepticism or suspicion. Many times, Wei Ying wanted to grab the baby-faced man and huggle him to death - but Wen Ning was technically dead once, and now twice - so he reined in the itch in his hands and shoved them into his pockets. They trotted downhill from the far side of the crater rim when Wei Ying heard distant barking, with adorable Wen Ning following him closely and asking him little, sometimes unimportant, sometimes irrelevant, questions non-stop like a lost puppy that had found its master.

Wei Ying made it look so easy and appeared to have all the answers at his fingertips. He mixed a whole bunch of white lies, fictitious accounts, surreal and mind-boggling reasons strung together to sound awesome - but a load of bull, really -, and came up with fantastical responses that didn’t really make sense - but they did, to Wen Ning, at least. He knew that if the husband was around, he’d get a slap on the buttocks for bullying and playing the poor kid for a fool - except that the husband was nowhere near:

“Well, you’re right - your reputation precedes you, and you inspire fear and panic wherever you go, unfortunately even in this world. It’s just on the other side of the rice paper, as the saying goes, and you know how thin and delicate rice papers are!” - which was partly true, except that it wasn’t due to his misnomer title as the Ghost General. Fierce corpses, when killed, would appear in the Underworld as an image of their human form; there hadn’t been any documented instances where fierce corpses remained in their original form in the Underworld - until Wen Ning’s anomalous arrival, of course - and that probably scared the hell out of the Underworlders, just like how humans would be frightened by hungry ghosts drifting by in broad daylight.

Wen Ning commented that when he stirred into consciousness, he saw two trembling giant men towering over his kneeling form - one wearing the mask of an Ox, and the other with a Horse - and they had just chained him to the poles. Upon the first sign of wakefulness - a grunt, a cough, eyes opening blearily - the two giants screamed for their mothers and the names of strange gods, and left him hanging inside the crater bowl since then - doomed to die of loneliness, starvation or thirst. Wei Ying had to stifle a laughter at Ox-Head and Horse-Face’s bizarre reactions, so he ruffled Wen Ning’s untied and long, wiry hair to show that he was pleased with Wen Ning’s performance to scare everything in sight, regardless of realms;

“A-Yuan? Oh... err... believe me, I’m sure he’s fine. In fact, I’m very sure comrades from the Gusu Lan sect had gotten in touch and rescued him. Yeah, you can count on my word for that! So, when we get back, make sure to take A-Yuan to visit his friends... like Jing Yi and Jin Ling, okay? The trio is inseparable, you know that!” Friendly back-slaps followed, as though to illustrate how close the three junior disciples are.

To that broad, cheerful and reassuring statement, Wen Ning responded with an endearing “Enn!” because he knew best how happy Si Zhui was when they were together, especially under the roofs of teahouses, and nothing else really mattered.

“Lan Zhan? Eh? We... err... ah...” Wei Ying stammered a bit and looked every bit embarrassed, sheepish, yearning, dejected and finally, broke into a wide, but not fully, the trademark one-million dollar grin, “... we’re doing just fine. Yeah, just fine. I’ve been down here for quite a while, y-you know, from that dabbling with Dark magic! So I don’t really know how he’s doing right now. I’m sure he’s still cooking up a storm in the kitchen. As always, yeah... you know... the usual... food... and... s-stuff...” and his voice trailed off into a mumble, as he pretended to be busy dodging branches, avoiding tripping over gnarly tree roots on the surface, and always be in search of more wild edibles.

Wen Ning gave the quintessential head-cocked, brow-raised “No I don’t know” look, but he didn’t pursue the line of thought even though Wei Ying’s answer didn’t quite make any sense. Not long after, Wei Ying shoved a clump of pinkish weed flowers into Wen Ning’s mouth and he dropped any remaining questions for the moment - one bite, and the man knew that the succulent flower petals tasted like sweet red bean filling in rice dumplings, minus the starch.

.

Wen Ning wasn’t smart to begin with, but he is tenacious in learning from his mistakes and past experiences. So, he wasn’t really off the mark when he said that the distant barking had been following them for some time and only grew closer rather than farther, no matter how far they walked away from the crater - in which, he remembered a similar pattern painted during his traumatic encounter with the Tian sisters in Caihong, except that the sounds were from flute music. At that realization, the sounds of barking became noticeably louder, and there were even heavy grunts and sounds of farm animals.

Wei Ying sighed in defeat and knew that the time was up, albeit too soon. It was really unfair, he thought; he really wanted to bring Wen Ning to the city undetected, maybe let him stay with the Li family and experience the rich, pampered life of being the baby in the eyes of grandpas and grandmas - alas, that was not to be.

“... perhaps, some other time, then,” he muttered to himself.

“Wei gongzi ? Did you say something?” Wen Ning asked curiously, as they trudged down a slope towards the foot of the hills. The forests have thinned out and gradually opened into wide expanses of grasslands with blades as high as one’s waist.

Wei Ying shook his head with a tight smile meant to dispel any notion of anxiety, “No, not really... say, Wen Ning, how are you feeling now? Better? Able to lift boulders and run a hundred-meter dash?” He still held on to one of Wen Ning’s hands around his shoulder to balance the man who complained that his legs were a bit wobbly from kneeling too long, and the fatigue that ate his strength from being left hungry for an indeterminate amount of time at the bottom of the crater.

“Enn! After eating the flowers, nuts and berries, I feel much better now!” Wen Ning nodded, and proudly removed his hand from the former master’s shoulder to prove that he could already stand on his own two feet. He even hopped from one leg to the other, swung his arms to a typical morning exercise routine, and paced on the same spot to showcase his newfound physical prowess. Wen Ning’s health had returned, and his spiritual qi levels have been somewhat restored - and Wei Ying found himself feeling bittersweet about his stead's astounding improvement over just a couple of hours, as compared to his own stagnant condition for the past days, weeks even months trapped in the belly of the Underworld.

The feared foot of the hills loomed closer despite neither of them taking a step forward - Wei Ying had suspected, and now confirmed, that the guards of the Underworld were no mere sentries hired to keep the departed in check - especially those sent to pursue him after the release of the fearsome Monstrosity of the Underworld (another meaningless title to add under Wen Ning's belt, really). From a far distance, Wei Ying could make out the shadowy outlines of an Ox, a Horse and scores of other helmed foes rustling behind the bushes, though their sounds were aptly covered by a passing breeze; Ox-Head and Horse-Face were special sentinels of the Underworld who, when faced with great threats to the realm's security, will not hesitate to use powerful space-warp magic to entrap their targets - Wei Ying and Wen Ning had been trapped in a bubble of space, forced to walk around the crater, and no matter which direction they moved - or not move, because the destination will automatically gravitate towards them anyway over the course of time -, they would always end up at the foot of the hills leading up to the Ten Courts, where armed guards gleefully wait with weapons brandished and shields held up.

Wei Ying couldn't afford to let Wen Ning suffer another harrowing episode of being tied up, of being brutally separated from his loved ones, and possibly dealt with another soul-crushing death-blow even in this miserable afterlife.

"Wen Ning! Let's play a game and answer me as quickly as possible! Who's the person you really want to be with, right now?!" Wei Ying suddenly broke a long pause after being mired in his own thoughts. Wen Ning was caught off-guard, and stammered, "Err, err... err... why are you asking this out of nowhere, gongzi ? I'm right beside y-you!"

The shadows of the Ox and Horse, and their men, crawled cautiously closer, the faint growls and whines of bloodhounds blended into the increasingly strong gusts of wind near the foot of the hills, however the enemy did not ambush nor launch a siege upon them - because they were afraid of Wen Ning, and Wei Ying could smell their trepidation in the air. That bought him a bit more time.

“No, you have to exclude me because I’m not part of the game’s answer! Hurry up, Wen Ning! Who’s the person you want to be with, for the rest of your life?!” Wei Ying shouted above the din of swishing winds blowing past tall grasses.

Wen Ning took a full minute with mumbles and stutters of various familiar names, with cute head-scratches, and finally came up with the loudest, clearest answer with the biggest grin he could muster on his pale undead face. “D-Don’t laugh, gongzi , but I-I want to be with my only living relative, A-Yuan! I... I want to stay with him, m... make sure he grows up to be a fine young adult, and keep... keep visiting his friends Jing Yi and Jin Ling... and... and go night-hunts together!” He yelled back in reply because the winds were getting a bit too strong, and the man had to grab on to violently whipping grass blades to keep his balance.

Wei Ying nearly shed a tear, and he could always attribute his teary eyes to sand that had gotten into his eyes. He took a few steps away from Wen Ning and reached behind to tuck his hair properly from the wild winds lashing at his figure, then said resolutely, “Then you keep that promise, for my sake, okay?! Don’t forget to visit Lan Zhan once in a while too! Remember that!”

Wei Ying's voice suddenly cracked, raw with emotion, and became hoarse from the shouting. Something glowed in his pocket and zipped out like a magic projectile. This time, it was the child straw-doll, radiating bright crimson red like those cherry tomato-like berries they snacked on earlier, although the luminescence seemed to be cut off by a glimmering layer of black. Wei Ying thought that, ironically, the child-doll chose Wen Ning because Wen Ning is truly the babe of his circle of friends, although the real reason would be something along the lines of Wen Ning's need for life energy for resurrection - as a fierce corpse, he probably needed just a fraction of a fully-fledged adult's life energy for the reconstruction of his body and soul.

Wen Ning was jaw-droppingly shocked at an animated little toy that flew from his former master, and marvelled at how it moved like a real Paperman despite being made of stiff, inflexible materials. The figurine flew above his head before he could ask who, what, how or why, and he was too astonished for words at the little pink, orange and red sparkles that trailed its flight path and rained on his head like a shower of stardust; he even raised his chain-strapped hands to touch those glittering falling lights, and his eyes widened with amazement at how warm they felt - that he forgot to ask what his former master meant with those cryptic last words.

The enchanted straw doll transformed into a portal door behind Wen Ning in an instant, and Wei Ying needed to tip-toe to look over Wen Ning's shoulders to see what was on the other side; it was another scene in a hospital, this time with the two boys Jing Yi and Si Zhui covered with bandages - not as much as mummy-like Jin Ling - and Jing Yi was trying his hand at a xiao flute while sitting cross-legged on his single bed - based on his clumsy finger movements, he'd never reach the gracefulness of Xi Chen da ge, Wei Ying laughed inwardly -, while Si Zhui - oh, precious baby A-Yuan - gingerly plucked on the strings of a guqin on his lap, while sitting in the same manner as his future-husband Jing Yi in the neighbouring bed - the boy's fingers looked hurt and wrapped with rolls of gauze until they look like fat unwieldy clubs than nimble digits, but he seemed determined to play a piece of music, note by note; Wei Ying couldn't take in all the details in a single blink of an eye, and he knew the portal didn't last long - and there was no time to explain anything to Wen Ning, with the footsteps of Underworld guards now becoming truly, frighteningly audible, stampeding through the grass like a dreadful, racing heartbeat.

Wen Ning was too absorbed with the light show above him to notice anything else, so with one final huff, Wei Ying raised his right leg and gave the man a heartfelt kick to the shins. Wen Ning yelped in surprise and as expected, tumbled backwards - straight into the portal's gaping but shiny maws. For a brief moment, Wei Ying heard a pandemonium of musical instruments thudding on the sterile tiled floor, of unbridled cries of joy, and of keening ugly noises that sobbing men make. With a final, resounding fwip!, the door to the world of the living closed in a split second once its target was secured.

For the second time, Wei Ying was left alone in the darkness and in this instance, he actually crumbled to his knees, his shoulders drooped, and the floodgates finally opened. He wept again and again at the mounting losses, and did not even flinch when swords, sabers, spears and the scary growls of hungry hounds surrounded his heaving, curled body on a sea of swirling grass.

.

“Was that the right thing to do?”

“I see. You’re right. You know, and therefore, you can. I should not have to question your decisions and interfere with your actions.”

“Mn. Congratulations... for achieving what I couldn’t. I would’ve been stuck in an analysis paralysis, and be embroiled in endless controversies if I had done that - but you executed everything flawlessly. You’ve signed pacts with our allies and enemies, and brought everyone, everything under your rule. There is one question - what of yue fu and yue mu ’s children? Are they not still on the loose?”

“Really? That must’ve been a brilliant contract you’ve signed with Tian dalaoye , to forcibly put the entire Tian clan under the Kingdom just by colluding with their leader. Did you apply the same strategy to the rest of the species and multiverses? You did? Wonderful. I applaud your far-reaching success and to the glory of our Kingdom. I take pride that you are the ideal Dream version that I could never become.”

“How are your children and the runaway teenage boy from next door? Mn... mn... I should do that too, if I have children - to let them run free and enjoy the life that they deserve, under their father’s watchful eyes. Unfortunately, I have two tentacle-kin who have morphed into rabbits that cling to me and the spouse all day. Have you found your wife yet?”

“Please explain, what do you mean by ‘when you find your wife, I will find mine’? Hn... mmn... I see. That... that’s a lot to take in. If Wei Ying returns, then by a twist of Fate of your design, you’ll finally have that malicious Uncle Wei in your arms, and you’ll return to my Dreams - and bring along with you the entire Kingdom that is now part your Dreams. It... it almost sounds like an exchange of some sort, do you agree?”

“Mn. Yes, it would change my life drastically, but so as long as your assurance stays - that I can still find, retrieve and have everyone, everything, in my Dreams, at any time of my choosing, it should be alright... correct? Mn... mn... you understand my inner needs and wants better than anyone else, I do not need to elaborate on my insecurities of losing my loved ones and my hard work from the recent past. Alright, I accept the deal in good faith.”

“Ah, thank you for bringing it up, even though I did not explicitly mention that. Yes, I would like my spouse to have an equal say and have equal rights in making such decisions. He has some unsavoury hoarding tendencies though, I have to warn you first. You’ll need to devise some ways to encourage him to let go of certain things. I’ve tried my best all my married life, and I’ve been unable to change his desires - but I believe that’s what constitutes a married life anyway; to be able to tolerate, accept and love unconditionally towards each other, including every facet of that person both good and bad.”

“Mn... Mn... yes, I’ll be fine even if this one single Wei Ying is more than I can handle, and I hope you can, with yours. Thank you for your concern. We can always meet in our Dreams to air our grievances about our wives.”

“Oh, no, no, don’t be. You can have Wei Ying’s four siblings too... in fact, please go ahead and take all the Wei-kin, Lan-kin, master/beast-kin and all other kins the Kingdom has created since its inception. Although I have my marriage certificates to document my marriage with those four particular individuals, you can easily annul or change them in our Dreams, and make them yours. I’m perfectly happy with my one single lovely soulmate, and you know you can handle more than I do... Mn... mn... yes, thank you for the offer, we can always meet in our Dreams and conduct family bedroom rituals, I'm sure of that."

After a few more exchanges, Lan Zhan could finally switch off the Fairy Messenger call, and the puffy amber ball of light fizzled out of existence. He exhaled, and felt very tired; he hadn't talked nor listened this much in a while, and his span of concentration had diminished due to the recent lack of use; he would like to blame it on old age and pretend that he had grown older, plus wiser, but he suspected it was because he focused his entirety on the comatose spouse and his endless frolicking with nubile mates that rendered him incapacitated in many ways - all the hot bloodedness going down there between the legs couldn't bode well for him in the long run, surely.

It was a surreal experience to hear his own inner voice telling him what needs to be, and will be done unto him, through the precursor of the telephone. He had been terrified by the ghostly amber ball of light at first, and pulled out of one of his numerous Wei Yings in the underground dungeon in mid-ejaculation; that phantom luminescence chased him with such fervour and precision, and with such a creepy calmness, he knew he was bested in a twisted game of cat and mouse, or a bout on nerves of steel - thus, despite his reservations and reluctance in cracking open his shell of isolation, he decided to stop wasting precious time (and trickling seed), and take the call.

"Lao gong... lao gong..." his Wei Yings purred and mewled at him, and used their fingertips and toes to slide up against his legs and thighs to coax the harem master to return to his delicious husbandly duties. They had been obedient to remain silent throughout that important call, which took place once a week - because the Regent of the Kingdom was courteous enough to respect the real Grand Patriarch and provide periodic updates on the affairs of the government and the company -, that Lan Zhan - or rather, his exceedingly turgid and twitching Lan Zhan Jr. down there - felt obligated to indulge in their cries for pleasures of the flesh as a reward for being such exemplary wives for the man who often drowned in his passions, behind closed doors in the subterranean domains of his Kingdom.

Lan Zhan looked at his groin, and was pleased that the phonecall didn't disrupt his planned routine - he remained hard down there despite the ruined orgasm, therefore he was still game to feast on today's specially prepared menu: a true 'Tunnel of Love' lovingly prepared by virginal Wei Yings of youthful ages, and predominantly constituted of a particular gender - again, he sighed in exasperation - he was getting worried of solely causing a population boom of unimaginable magnitudes, nine months from now.

In this naughty game of 'how long can you go, in this devilish Tunnel of Love', which he had to pre-order a day in advance, a long line of beds snaked along a passageway leading out from the dungeon. Upon each bed lay a precious lovely Wei Ying nestled in twisted bedsheets and blankets, spread-eagled and writhing wantonly in the nude, waiting to be deflowered - every Wei Ying played with his or her naughty bits, using fingers or more conveniently, jars of lubricating massage oils, bottles of aphrodisiacs, and an assortment of good ol' P-Cool sex toys including vibrators, dildoes and massage wands - to the point where they edged themselves continuously and teetered on the brink of explosive orgasms - the whole Tunnel was filled with tasty moans and cries for the beloved husband to hurry up, hurry up, fill 'em up and shoot everything out.

Lan Zhan's mission is simple - as the master of the harem, his task is to sample each Wei Ying-delicacy with minimal effort and reap the maximum rewards - like a real laoban . He would easily slide his slick arousal into one Wei Ying, which instantly detonates that Wei Ying's climax, and he would enjoy minutes of exquisite kneading, undulating muscular walls around his extremely excited penis like grasping hands - fifteen twitches in total, sometimes more -, then pull out, and insert his pre-cum leaking cock into the next waiting Wei Ying-rosebud about to erupt into a shower of sexual juices and bodily fluids. The heavenly sensations are usually too much for his immoral body to handle, so he often finds himself lying helplessly on his lovely Wei Yings as he mounts each one - simply insert and be still, and repeat -, while few other Wei Yings trailed after him and take every opportunity to reach from behind, kiss his earlobes, flick and pinch his nipples in nnngh-inducing bursts of sadistic bliss, lick his flushed sweaty skin, and their fingers find their way down, down, to caress and play with his shivering, swollen testicles, accompanied with playful nibbles and loving tongue-action to coax the prized family jewels to keep producing the cherished milky nectar.

There are many options in this game - he may find a Wei Ying to be very desirable (especially the tight juicy young 'uns), and engage in a full round of hip-trembling, lip-smacking delectable sexual intercourse and father more than just one babe; he could opt to taste a set of ten Wei Yings with his raging hard-on and keep thrusting like a horny wild beast into those orgasming birth canals, in perfect arithmetic sequences of one to ten, and ten to one and add another cross to his productivity (十; shi ; ten); or, he could fantasize himself as the rapist of his Dreams, and penetrate each waiting rosebud with such eagerness and force, disregarding the pain and discomfort experienced by each Wei Ying who brutally lost their virginities to the greedy, sex-starved man, that by the fifth or sixth orgasming Wei Ying, he becomes too excited, too hard to hold off his impending earth-shattering climax, and deliberately and pleurably spills his one-twos - depositing just enough to plant his flesh and blood in the fertile gardens inside the lucky Wei Ying, while keeping his full thirty-twitches and his full-blown bodily orgasm at bay until he reaches Wei Ying number ten. The husband makes sure that when he finally climaxes, so does his Wei Yings, because logically and according to the law of physics and the cosmos, two orgasms going off in unison is surely better than one.

In any case, Lan Zhan lost count again of how many Wei Yings he had sampled in the Tunnel of Love. He arched his back, thrust his hips delightfully, relishing in the clenching, succulent wetness of cocksleeves moulded perfectly to his phallus, wringing a fountain of creamy seed out of him ruthlessly, his eyes rolled to the back as another launch sequence started inside his pelvis, his jaws slackened when molten pressure rose in bulging volleys, his nostrils flared and he roared with great satisfaction when his cockhead slammed into cervixes and wombs and rubbed passionately against them to generate even more friction to fuel the scorching lustful flames - the first of many ejaculations squirted with great force and was visible from the outside as a little, transient 'bump' on lovely Wei Ying's lower belly, his hands flailed instinctively to grab and claw at anything - a big milky-white breast, the voluptuous sharp curve of a waist, or if he's lucky, another male's boner -, his toes curled so tightly that they cramped up because it felt too divine to bed so many Wei Yings, to taste their sweet cries and squeezing heat, to release the boiling pressure and gush out torrents of semen that his godly loins kept making, just so that the lucky husband could continue the timeless act of entwining mind, body and soul and make plenty of babies with all the Wei Yings he's ever wanted - right beneath the floor mat of his home.

Then, he realized another amber ball of fluffy light had landed on his nose - it was another Fairy Messenger call - and he sneezed in mid-orgasm.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 132

“He’s an escapee who enjoyed the life of the rich and famous of our realm, and endangered our citizens by dabbling in sleazy businesses such as smuggling contraband and dangerous goods! But he has fallen into our hands once again! His punishment must be twice his crimes!”

“He’s a hardcore criminal who pretends to be of good standing and character! He’s an imposter and lies about who he really is! His alibis, the Li family, have deserted him, claiming that everything had been a fraud, and that they didn’t really know him! This con artist was allowed to roam freely among morally upright citizens, offering sham products and services to swindle our people, and corrupt their hearts!”

“He’s an illegal who broke many laws by moving between the restricted borders between the slums, the city and the surrounding lands without permission! He thinks he can walk freely without fear of our might and authority? Hah! He should think again, for the sake of his puny remaining existence!”

“What’s more, this doomed spirit unleashed the Monstrosity of the Underworld which our da shixiong, Brother Ox and Brother Horse, worked so terribly hard to wrestle and chain to the grounds where it first appeared - with that spectacular explosion that created the crater which rocked our society and forever scarred our lands! Now that the monster has been unknowingly released into other realms, causing untold damage, this damned spirit must be immediately deported off the Cliffs to atone for his wrongdoings! Extinguish this spirit as soon as possible!”

The unsavoury accusations built up one upon another, followed by spearheads poking his torso, abdomen and back, as he was forced to march forward. Wei Ying didn't care anymore nor listened to those upsetting words, because his mind was filled with remorse - of not being a better man, of not achieving what he had set out to do in his brief, mundane life, of not having his last chance to talk to his family and friends or to mend broken ties, and of not having his last good-byes with the beloved husband. He had given up hope of convincing the Underworld guards about his true identity and to let him go - they wouldn't listen, and were adamant that he was a nameless spirit who had overstayed, and it was time to be reincarnated - recycled, really - into something more useful, such as a piece of twisty crystal for someone's kitchen stove.

The Underground Guards were giants - at least seven feet in height -, hulking on the ground with massive hunched backs, wore heavy plated armours adorned with hellish designs, such as skeleton figures, vampires, bulging-eyed demons with fanged, ugly teeth, and sharp-tip tailed bearded devils that breathe out fire and smoke, and were equipped with equally impressively-sized weaponry made of obsidian-like materials. Their helmets were impressive, larger than a man's torso in size, and wholly covered their faces except for slits or openings on the metallic frames - together with red pupilled eyes, smoky breaths and the discolored exposed leathery skin on their hands, Wei Ying deduced that those super-sized mammoth humanoids weren't really humans (or former humans). He'd seen lesser ones - skeletons and zombies, even the odd human-looking spirits who wore smaller versions of such hefty armaments -, though those weaklings were relegated to city patrols, thus leaving the cream of the crop to guard the sacred paths towards Reincarnation - where unrest is likely to happen -, and the surrounding areas such as the local version of the Styx River and its forests - where fugitives, both harmless and harmful, are known to hide or launch their own guerilla warfare.

Wei Ying's shoulders slumped in despair, when he was pushed and shoved past long queues leading to the Ten Courts, drawing curious glances from scores of listless or sobbing spirits who gawked at the unusual ensemble of many guards escorting one thin, smudgy young downtrodden spirit. He was given the fast lane treatment because his reincarnation was past due, and given his new criminal record, he didn't need any judgements from the officials that served the Lord of Hell - he was already found guilty on the spot, and got a one-way ticket straight through the Mountains and have his butt kicked off the Cliffs.

The guards had patted him down and made snide remarks about how the man who managed to free the Monstrosity of the Underworld ('Wen Nnnnnnniiiiing!', one could almost hear the former master call out the name in a needy, whiny voice, and hoped to see a shadowed figure zoom into the scene, ready at his beck and call), was woefully inadequate in his equipment and his sleeve-pockets. They snatched his rather light money pouch with their grubby hands - fortunately, Wei Ying had left everything, including his paltry fortune, documents, a smattering of day-old candies, stationery, pocket tissues, business cards, paper clips and whatnots he'd acquired in the Underworld, with the Li's -, and confiscated a handful of berries, nuts and flowers from his trousers' pockets. They found the final straw toy - woven into the form of an adult male - but Wei Ying begged to keep it because it was a memento from his childhood days that he found in the Underworld; apparently, innocuous inanimate objects do find their owners in the afterlife, as evidenced in many legends and fairy tales of the past, and the guards couldn't detect any magic or strange auras around the straw-made toy, so they let him have it. A few individuals pointed out that 'something bright and sparkly flew out of his pockets' before Wen Ning was spirited off through an unauthorized portal but the guards couldn't locate the source - and suspected the handful of magical berries, nuts and flowers inside Wei Ying's pockets - so everyone ate their fill to make sure that the man would not be able to cast any strange spells after that.

The disquieting whispers around him grew, when queueing spirits started chattering amongst themselves about the man who was whisked ahead to an unusually quick end. Even without knowing what he'd done, those former humans audibly speculated about his character and the circumstances behind it, and they were as divisive as the variety of horrid opinions people had about him - that he was a rebel against society with terrible manners, stole money and cheated people, and was beaten up by the police until he was mortally wounded; a bad guy who flouted the rules and ended up with a death sentence and a noose around his neck; a mad man who turned into a mass murderer that wielded axes and chopping knives until he found himself at the receiving end from grieving and vengeful relatives of his victims; a sickened soul that couldn't be saved even with prayers or psychiatric treatment and soon, crazy voices told him to commit suicide; a disrespectful person who cursed his parents and was kicked out by his family, then properly met his untimely death in the jaws of a wild animal in the woods; a convict who took his twisted pleasure in raping little girls and fat old maids, swindled rich maidens and went wild with his illicit trysts - and deservedly drowned in a pig cage submerged inside a river; et cetera ad nauseum . Wei Ying gritted his teeth and balled his fists in seething anger, because he believed he didn't deserve such derogatory, offensive descriptions, that he was clearly framed and being put in a terrible light, but he could not say anything in defense, or snap at his ill-mannered spectators, due to the sharp, pointed blades pressed against his throat.

“Get a move on, you piece of dead human trash!” Ox-Head bellowed and kicked him in the back of his legs. Horse-Face slapped the side of his face, and Wei Ying's ear rang from the stinging pain.

The bad-mouthing spectacle continued for some time, and followed Wei Ying wherever he went - such is the dark side of human nature, deeply entrenched in ugly behaviours and despicable habits; Wei Ying maintained his composure because he couldn't afford to lose his grip like the last time, two decades ago, and commit more wrongdoing that he'd already accumulated. Thus, he steeled his heart, and braved the ruthless crowds.

With the Ten Courts now far behind, he tirelessly ascended thousands of steps of stairs into the Mountains. Wei Ying continued to suppress his unhappiness and irritation at the incessant gossiping around him, and the maltreatment from the escorts; instead, he tried to busy himself by enjoying the sights around him and gauge his location. The misty mountains with jagged outcrops and steep valleys reminisced those of Gusu, lending a fascinating yet relaxing ambience to those who patiently lined up for the final leg of their life journeys; though, sadly, the peaks were perpetually shrouded in grey, damp fog in the darkness of the Underworld, so there wasn't really anything to cheer or shout about. Crows and a few other feathered scavengers circled in the air, but they merely observed the solemn procession with mild interest since there weren't any dead bodies to feast on. There wasn't much to admire on the ground either, since it was fundamentally a giant staircase that wound its way across a mountain range; the stone steps were very well-worn by countless spirits that walked on them throughout the ages, once decorated by holy scriptures and ancient sculptures that had eroded into obscurity over time, caked with dust that were kicked around by shuffling shoes and sometimes bare feet, and there were hardly any grass or weeds around since they've been mostly plucked by bored spirits or stomped upon too often. The queues headed into several buildings and out along the way, which Wei Ying guessed to be checkpoints and probably more judgement chambers - but he didn't get the chance to visit those places (and he didn't really want to, anyway), since the guards were rushing him through as though he was about to miss his flight (in a 21st-century analogy, in seemed).

Near the peaks, he started to feel the jitters when slopes and valleys plunged into depthless inky-black chasms and ravines, as though the fabric of the land was torn asunder by the sheer sudden forces of nature, leaving abrupt, dramatic landscapes in its wake. The spirits sported tell-tale signs of succubi attack such as gaping lower abdomens, so he knew that he was returning to the time period when he perished in Caihong. There were numerous rituals required for those in the proper queues - collecting and reading pamphlets handed out by officials by the roadside; changing their clothes, if needed, to meet the minimum standards for a decent reincarnation; writing their sins, regrets, wishes and final words on pieces of coloured paper, then tying them on the handrails or the leaves of certain millenia-old sacred trees that grew in some areas; taking purifying baths and performing cleansing rituals; praying at specific shrines set up along the stairs to wish for a better life in the next cycle, or to plead for leniency and to spare curses from their descendents; to meditate and chant sutras for a calming finale - and so many more, that Wei Ying had to miss in his hurried march to the top, where the first signs of a wide, barren platform decorated with holy banners and flags on its edges - the Cliff - emerged into view.

Wei Ying held his breath, and felt awed by the breathtaking sight of a pure black night sky canvas dotted with drifting faint yellow firefly-like lights - remnants of spirits that had been extinguished - with the craggy mountainous landscape largely behind him, the accompanying whoosh of surprisingly fresh chilled mountain breeze, and a sudden uplift in his energy and mood - as though his ethereal body felt invigorated, his feet light and floaty, his feelings soared to new heights he'd never felt before during his stay in the Underworld, the anguished and sorrowful thoughts dissipated that his heart no longer felt heavy - whether such changes in him were deliberately engineered by the altered auras atop the Cliffs, or if he was truly repentant and started seeing things in a new light, he would never know - but he felt that he was quite ready to face his end and to meet his maker.

A haphazard bunch of spirits thronged the Cliffs, as jumping to one's final death is as interesting as watching an accident scene of the 21st century; there are proper markings on the floor to designate spirits where to queue up, submit their paperwork, go through last minute checks by the officials, and so on; however, the thrilling screams of panic, keening wails or simply pure unbridled joy (rarely, but it happens sometimes) echoing into the deep unknown draw the attention of many, and like nosy neighbours, spirits hang around the edges of the Cliffs to watch how others prepare for their fall, take the plunge, and for some lucky ones, turn into beautiful explosive puffs of firefly lights if they slammed at odd-angled rocks below and die earlier deaths - to the detriment of the freefall divers, and to the entertainment of others waiting for their turns. A few chatty spirits have running commentaries on the best techniques for the Perfect dives, others spend the whole time being rooted to the ground because they were either too remorseful to exit their pitiful existence, or they were afraid of heights - and had to be dragged by tired, lazy, uncaring officials back to the queues. Several groups were engrossed in discussing and speculating their next cycle of life - not knowing that they were all doomed to reincarnate into stuff less glamorous than a strand of weed in another world, not to mention the possibility of becoming the next twisty crystal to power someone's 21st-century induction cooker -, while there were those who preferred to be alone and hard at work with an eleventh-hour prayer to attempt to see their lives flash before their eyes. It was a fabulous sea of humanity at the brink of extinction, and Wei Ying wished he could, if Fate ever offers a chance, stay longer in the Underground and experience the various colours, emotional upheavals, raw and unscripted drama and theatrics, of Men who had reached their metaphorical finishing lines.

Perhaps as an unexpected response from someone high above to Wei Ying's unspoken plea, Ox-Head raised a clawed hand to signal the group to stop at the entrance to the Cliffs. His pace had dropped significantly in the last few flights of steps, and had fallen to the back; he had trouble breathing and he sweated so much that his helmetless bovine head was covered with matted fur. "We... We take a break here! I... (huff)... (huff)... need to catch my... breath! Oh, I feel dizzy too... curse this stupid thin mountain air... It's so much... better in the lowlands... (huff)... (huff)..."

"Shixiong, you jogged too fast for your age, and you forgot how heavy you weigh! You shouldn't push yourself too far especially for a little wimp like this insignificant spirit," Horse-Face neighed and laughed - his body was still in top condition even after the run up a few thousand steps -, and instructed the other guards to remain at the entrance and to make sure there were no more attempts to escape. Horse-Face shoved Wei Ying with the hilt of a sword and with such force, that Wei Ying stumbled unceremoniously forward.

“You! Count yourself lucky that we won’t make haste to end your pathetic, miserable existence! My hooved feet are a bit sore from the amount of climbing and walking, so I won’t even bother to kick you down the Cliffs. Hang around here, boy... one of the officials will see to your last rites and enroll you for your turn soon! You’ve delayed everyone’s schedules long enough, so don’t inconvenience others who are of better standing than you, and who are more punctual for their appointments!” he snarled and waved at several lower-ranked officials for service. A dark-robed faceless humanoid without legs - a ghost, probably - bowed, and hurried into a nearby shack to prepare some pots of tea and plates of snacks for the guards. Another tentatively approached the upset Ox-Head with a first-aid kit of sorts - jars of herbal tonics for altitude sickness, energy boost drinks, and some bottles of medicinal salves.

Wei Ying was shunned by the spirits at the Cliff top, because he arrived with the terrifying guards - and the whispers started once again, trying to guess - incorrectly - what terrible crimes he must have committed in life to deserve such a fate. Wei Ying refused to listen to the rambling lies, because he knew the consequences of yielding to anger and hatred - once bitten, twice shy -, so he decided to spend his time there as fulfilling and as worthwhile as possible, while he still could.

“Mister, mister! You need to change your clothes! The ones you’re wearing are said to be stolen from the Underworld city and should not be worn here in such a terrible, smudgy state, so we need to get you the plain white ones!” one ghostly official cried and chased Wei Ying like a mother would to a child who wore his shirt on backwards. The Cliffs were sacred, much like any temple grounds, so improper and indecent wear was prohibited, after all. Wei Ying strode ahead, faster than the snail’s pace of a floating ghost who did not have any legs, deftly avoiding capture, and responded petulantly, “I’m still sweating from being rushed uphill, so let me cool down first! I refuse to wear anything that will be stained with stinky bodily fluids for my grand finale!” The ghost believed his tale and backed off gracefully - in actual fact, Wei Ying hardly broke a sweat, because he was used to traverse through mountains daily back in the days of living in the ‘Mounds, so he felt just fine, really; plus, he really didn’t want to put on those icky and scratchy white mourning robes again .

Wei Ying took advantage of the short-lived freedom to visit several shacks manned by officials around the busy and almost boisterous rocky platform, who freely gave out basic necessities for those who needed a final touch-up. Besides a measly selection of garments, there were also toiletries and cosmetics, light food and beverage options, holy books and meditation texts, even a postbox for those who would like to pen down their final thoughts on paper and mail it to a faraway Underworld post office, where reasonable hopes and wishes may appear in the dreams of loved ones that were left behind. It was akin to the departure lounge of a 21st-century airport, with few vendors, kiosks and vending machines serving the needs of travellers who may have forgotten to get something done before their flight.

The young man walked around, browsing boredly from one shack or stall to another. He grabbed a bag of lotus seeds - a classic favourite for the former Yunmeng resident - and snacked nonchalantly along with a jar of water mixed with honey and lemon. However, he was irredeemably attracted to the smell of alcohol and exotic tinctures and liquors - there was a small bar that served drinks for those who needed stronger, manlier brews before leaving. As he neared the rickety wooden building, he noticed a few bartenders and waiters busy catering to the wants of the patrons who sat on bar stools next to the countertop, or in cushioned seats around larger tables. One tall figure hunched on his stool with his head resting on the counter was particularly striking, because his clothes were regal, flowing, pearl-white patterned with clouds, his lush long hair swept to the back, and he looked awfully familiar.

The man groaned, and turned his head around, chin still resting awkwardly on the edge of the counter. Wei Ying could see that he had more than a few drinks - several emptied jars lay chaotically on the tabletop -, his face was flushed and the man was in most likelihood dead drunk, he wore a white forehead ribbon - Wei Ying's non-existent heart raced and he sprinted towards the man, all sorts of thoughts, emotions, hopes and despair running through his mind in circles--

“--... Xi Chen?! Xi Chen da ge ?!”

.

At the same time, all Underworld guards who had stationed themselves at the entrance to the Cliffs and enjoyed the refreshing teas and snacks served by ghostly officials, suddenly groaned in perfect unison with their hands on their bellies. Ox-Head roared in agony as he rushed to the toilets not too far away while unbuckling his belt in desperation, but Horse-Face bested him by a few gallops with plenty of unpleasant sounds and smells emitted from his shivering equine rump. The remaining minions had to make do with a natural setting as their outdoor loo; everyone suffered acute diarrhea and food poisoning, because earlier, they had eaten Wei Ying's magical berries with the skin intact!

Trouble brewed when Underworld officials overseeing the operations in the Cliffs rushed to the aid of the sickened guards. Several spirits saw this as an opportunity of a lifetime - the entire platform was left unsupervised - and started to break away from their queues, toe out of their white lines, and run for freedom. A trickle of escapes soon attracted the attention of others, who called their comrades and similar-fated friends to band together in their struggle, to fight, to rush down the Mountains and trample the Ten Courts with little or no guards to resist their overwhelming numbers; the unarmed officials, who had relied on their nightmarish looks and empty menacing words to keep the spirits obediently in queue, suddenly found themselves punched, kicked, pelted with sticks and stones, stampeded, and rampaged by innumerable disembodied men and women; the threat of the biggest jailbreak ever recorded in history of the Reincarnation paths loomed upon the Realm of the Dead.

.

Lan Zhan realized he had reached the greatest pinnacles, crested the highest peaks, enjoyed all manners of pleasures of the flesh possible in the Mortal Realm, and had nowhere else to go, but down, down into a slumbering, refractory period of sorts; whether the state is temporary or permanent, remained unknown and he was in a limbo - because he knew he had overused his tool, ruined his appetite by insane amounts of binging, broken many records and his Junior in the process - that he decided that enough is enough, since nothing could get him up any more. His penis was no longer responsive and had gone limp and soft on him, his loins thoroughly shut down on seed and hormone production and gone to eternal sleep, and his sex drive had gone fishin' for good.

Lan Zhan's two-minute trysts (equivalent to two infinite periods of time in the underground dungeons) outlasted many of any living being's lifetimes, and for a god like him, he concluded that he had ascended beyond nirvanas, beyond redemptions and beyond reincarnations - he had achieved Perfection when it came to his sex life, and more broadly, his purpose on Earth if one considered the functional reason for a male to exist in the first place, that is, to go forth and fertilize, multiply and propagate uncontrollably.

The black rabbit cackled, in a creepy but smug way, when it presented a document on a silver platter to the Grand Patriarch. Lan Zhan picked up the scroll, untied a ribbon and read its contents - it was an end-of-period statement of accounts depicting the number of Wei Yings provided and utilized - which was complete; not even one Wei Ying was spared -, and the number of pure-bred descendents he was served and later, that he willingly, and delightfully, sexually devoured. Below the mind-boggling statistics - which consist of an uncountable number of digits -, the fine prints laid out the charges for amenities, cleaning, room service, food and beverages, and other minor details, plus the rental fees for using the dungeons for his personal carnal pleasures, and a token sum for healing and caring for the one and original Wei Ying currently cuddled in his arms.

“It’s not just for me, Grand Patriarch. The money goes to meimei’s future too, such as putting together a piggy bank to pay for her education, and to buy her enough candies and toys as she grows up,” it began its explanation with both paws opened and raised, as though demanding for the payment stated at the bottom of the page. Lan Zhan nearly rolled his eyes with a resigned sigh, at how the black rabbit obviously winged around the crux of the issue by shifting the blame to its sister first - how irresponsible!

“It’s also compensation for all the hard work that we’ve done, including building this lovely Spring Palace Resort complex made from a hollowed-out mountain in the middle of the ‘Mounds, the surrounding farms, gardens and courtyards,” the rabbit swept a paw in a graceful arch to illustrate the vast and impressive network of cavernous chambers and tunnels connected to the bedroom, “... and to set up a trust fund to raise your young when more of your... err... descendents are born in nine months’ time,” the rabbit pointed a paw at the guilt-inducing floor mat not too far away. “See? It’s all good, and taken care of, in exchange for some reasonable amount of monies. In case payment is a concern, I do accept instalments, or better yet, with barter in goods, assets and properties from the Kingdom too,” the rabbit leaned forward with a glint in its red eyes, and a sinister toothy smile that made its whiskers curl upward a little.

Lan Zhan gave an indignant snort at the incredulous situation. He petulantly dropped the unrolled page onto the silver tray and waved the rabbit off. “Talk to the Regent to settle this. He’ll add a generous tip if you explain the situation logically to him too. He can dream out all that is needed to foot the bill and any extraneous charges that you may eventually think of, you sly rascal,” sarcasm dripped heavily in his voice as he addressed the former emo-teenager who kept hounding him for spending money - like a teenager that keeps asking his parents for the same thing for every tiny bit of household work done; Lan Zhan was disgruntled, even unnerved, that the black rabbit knew how to push his hot buttons and get him riled up - to the point that he would sometimes lapse into cussing, use of stereotypical bad language, and plain rude behaviour, that is, absolutely against his principles and natural character. Only Ernie could draw the worst out of him, and Lan Zhan preferred to minimize his interactions with that dastardly devilish bunny or pet-son.

The black rabbit devolved into a string of victorious, evil laughter and hopped off with the scroll in its mouth, fantasizing promised grand fortunes like carrots dangling in front of its red eyes.

Alone in the room, Lan Zhan returned to tend to his lovely spouse embraced in his arms. Wei Ying snored softly against his chest and visible paunch; the husband ran fingers through the spouse’s hair, which he had just trimmed earlier so that the comatose man wouldn’t feel too hot during the warmer days. Next, the husband bent down and inhaled the scents off

Wei Ying's face, neck and shoulders - and smiled lightly, pleased that bathing the pale, thin and frail, almost bony body with perfumed floral waters mixed with herbal oils, had kept the man looking and smelling rather fresh. At times, Lan Zhan believed that Wei Ying appeared more like a desiccated porcelain doll, or an embalmed body of sorts, because he was always cold, visibly weak and sometimes, at death's doorsteps with blue lips and fingernails, and worst of all, perpetually unmoving. Wei Ying never woke up, but his condition didn't improve either despite being given plenty of massage, qi transference sessions and various traditional treatments, good, tasty liquid food and adequate hydration. The young man was becoming lighter by the day, that deep down, Lan Zhan was afraid that someday, the wind or something else may blow into the bedroom and spirit off his beloved at a moment's notice.

Since he no longer visited the floor mat and its denizens living beneath the ground, Lan Zhan spent most of his days with the spouse, checking his vital signs from time to time, fussing over his looks, wiping and cleaning every inch of the man's skin, even giving back-scratches and ear cleaning, in which he believed, incorrectly or not, that such favourite pastimes of the couple could stir something within Wei Ying and wake him up.

A light knock on the door, and this time, a fluffy white rabbit with a chubby rump tapered to a fuzzball-tail tip-toed in. It - she - carried a tray; not with documents, but with two bowls of watery congee with strips of meat, egg omelettes and vegetables inside. She had completed the earthworks and furnished the couple's new Spring Palace Resort, so with nothing else to do, she acted - without being told - as their second servant of the house; she was as useful as her gege but multitude times better in character and morals, is diligent, hardworking and smart, though she does not speak - because she is still a tiny tot in terms of her species' limitless lifespan. Unlike her calculative gege, the white rabbit never asks for treats, rewards or payments for her contributions to the household - if she received any, it would be deposited back in her family's cloud drive and returned to her parents, because that was how she was programmed.

The white rabbit placed the tray on the bedside table, and hopped into the crack of space between the Grand Patriarch and the former Matriarch - now a nameless, stateless person. She nuzzled against Lan Zhan's meaty chest and rubbed her soft nose - even gave a couple of licks - to Wei Ying's lips - perhaps to moisten the chapped lips, or to gently call its mother to wake up, wake up, because the family is waiting.

"Mn. I miss Wei Ying too," Lan Zhan whispered as he patted the rabbit's squishy rump and stroked its body from the tips of the furry ears to the pinch-worthy tuft of tail, and leaned over to give his sleeping spouse a tender kiss on the forehead, in a bedroom awash with the faint glow of amber table lights, body-warmed blankets and pillows, the delicious smell of home-cooked food made with love, and the faint whine of a white rabbit that prayed for the return of her parents' joy and happiness.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 133

Similar to his predecessor, the Regent of the Kingdom, who is also an eminent Gusu Lan master, took frequent toilet breaks while ensuring that the empire and Wangxian Co. Ltd. ran smoothly. However, rather than to use such breaks for leisure, personal or procreative reasons, the Regent took advantage of the difference in the passage of time between Heaven and Earth to maximize his outputs - like a real, performance-driven laoban .

In the Mortal Realm, within the span of a few hours to a few days - equivalent to a toilet break for small or large nature -, he could set up tens of new enterprises and seal as many political or business contracts, issue hundreds of new policies, conduct thousands of training and inspections, and give instructional guidance to tens of thousands of officials and managers, so that they could manage their respective departments with near-perfect efficiency - and still have time for a pot of pu'er tea, and run a few very personal errands, such as signing off bills from the Grand Patriarch's new residence (it's as easy as dreaming up the required paychecks and monies), check on the Dream-kin children (and one kind-hearted teenager - his former neighbour -, who agreed to accompany and take care of the two monkeys running riot in Yiling), and teleport to the other side of the globe to look for his wife.

“How do I know? Of course, I do. I know, therefore, I always can, my inferior self. The time of Sundering of our destinies is nigh, and there are already felicitous, auspicious signs of its impending arrival:

The Lavender Blossom of Yunmeng from the past has returned, which will take root, spread its glorious, warm thriving carpets of blooms, thus solidifying the foundations of our nation and its people with an exciting blend of the old and new, like fresh softness and sweetness after a rainstorm upon the jaded, hardened earth;

The Faded Sun of Qishan from the present has appeared, and the youth shall bask in the light of its dying embers and take a flame each, to start anew with their own new fires that will burn brightly into the 'morrow, and;

Lastly, the Rising Clouds of Gusu is all that is left to take us all to greater heights and yonder, to the next century - and from the Heavenly astrologers' foresight, so will the return of my wife and yours. We will carve our own paths forward from then on.

These are the necessary ingredients for a new beginning - your reality, my dreams, and vice versa. So, I suggest that you, my inferior self, to stop indulging in meaningless acts of procreation and re-focus your life on your wife where things matters most... oh, you already have? I'm impressed with your self-restraint. Well done, Wang Ji. You've seeded enough offsprings for many lifetimes? The more the merrier, then - I shall have more Dreams to explore, conquer and rule under my, our, name, in nine months' time. You've brought me more than joy, Wang Ji, and you're not as inferior as I initially thought.

Mn... Mn... very well. We will talk again soon. I quite like using the good ol' Fairy Messenger spell, it brings back nostalgia, a rustic feeling of the traditional, and I'm sure it's the same for you too. Mn... Mn... alright. I'm on my way to try and find my wife again, and I hope you find yours soon. Good bye."

The Gusu Lan master made sure to check every nook and cranny in the lands Far, Far to the West, for clues of his wife's whereabouts, as often as he made his toilet breaks, until the point where the natives, the invading incubi and their descendents were accustomed to see a man with majestic white robes make pit-stops in every village, town and city, enquiring tavern masters, shopkeepers, merchants, restaurant owners and innkeepers about his beloved's whereabouts.

“Oh, it's you again! I'm sorry to say, sir, that I haven't seen your missing wife this week either. Black clothes, pretty face, long hair, a red topknot ribbon and a mole beneath the lips, correct? Nu-uh, I haven't seen such a person. By the way, I really like your straight long black hair, is it real? I've always thought people were born with blond and reddish curls. Your dark brown almond eyes are lovely too... oh! I'm not trying to flirt around, sir... although when you speak our language with your unique accent, it does feel rather intimate...!”

“Ho ho ho, it's you again, Gusu Lan master! I don't want any trouble with you and your ilk, so let me report to you upfront - no, this week, I haven't seen any signs of your wife. In fact, he hasn't returned here since he left this country of the Far, Far West region ages ago. And no, he hasn't been seen preying on the children of the schools under my care too - I swear! The headmaster of our homeland, in the Cloud Recesses Of The Dreams, appointed me to set up many organizations to collect fresh warm bodies, including kindergartens, nurseries, kids' corners, fun fairs, temples, clinics, shopping malls, and markets, and supply them to our kind all over the world and in other realms. Oh yes, I won't lie, we've spread out to every corner of the universe although our numbers are small... yeah, the one hundred escapees from Heaven was the first wave, and there's been a whole more emigration going on since then. It's so much easier to earn a living out here, and have a full belly, than in the Cloud Recesses Of The Dreams, and we haven't caused any major troubles to society... so give me and my brethren a break, okay?”

“It’s... it’s the Grandmaster from the Cloud Recesses Of The Dreams! Good morning, Grandmaster! I’m... um... I’m still very young... but, but... um... I look like a ten year old human girl, and c-can already have s-s-sex with boys who reached p-p-pu... puber... pubert-t-ty! Ah, I’m a succubus, actually. My father is an incubus from your hometown, but I haven’t seen him since I was born in a nest here nor know his name, unfortunately. My mother is a teenager living not far from here, but I’m not allowed to get close to her, otherwise she may remember what happened at the clinic... oh, did you know, I was conceived when she was just a twelve-year old girl, my nanny said. She was tricked when she went to the clinic for a minor headache, and her mother left her in the care of the doctor - who was my father - and the nurses - my aunts and uncles -, for a couple of hours while grandma went to the market. Nana said that mom’s ailment didn’t need to be cured because it was just due to a lack of sleep, and instead, I was made on the doctor’s examination table with i-i-illi-cit, un... under... underage love and lust, along with many brothers and sisters in the clinic for several weeks, until it closed down after someone complained about its pervert staff! The nurses made sure we were born fit and healthy, using plenty of brown vials to keep our mothers sedated and forgetful, and one of the nurses became my Nana! Ah... I’m sorry for talking so much, I’m excited to talk about my background but no one else from my circle of friends seems to be that interested since we were all brought into the world about the same way. Oh! Is... is this red packet for me? T-T-Thank you, Grandmaster! Thank you for your wishes for my bright future! A man in black robes? Oh... I don’t remember seeing any. People over here do not wear robes, and instead, prefer cloaks, tunics and trousers. Ah, okay... good bye, and thank you, Grandmaster gong gong !”

The Regent sighed after the nth encounter, and checked his holo-phone. It was time to return from the toilet break in the Heavens; he wouldn’t want his aides to knock on the doors of the toilet stalls in panic. With a graceful twirl of fingers, he teleported out of the Mortal Realm with a barely noticeable fwip !.

Not too far away, a door to a Far, Far Western-esque church of a different religion creaked open. A shadow dressed in a clergy's grey long tunic scurried out and into an adjacent back alley, blending perfectly into the dingy surroundings of an unnamed medieval town. Moments later, a young boy barely nine years old stumbled out, his face flushed and crying softly, tiny hands bruised with fingerprints held up the drawstrings to his torn pants. He tottered unsteadily down unswept and muddy steps at the building's doorway, with something warm, slimy and white trickling down his thighs, and his genitals throbbed painfully with unfamiliar pain after being pinched, squeezed, stroked and sucked so violently that he thought he had been rendered dysfunctional for life. It was his first time trying to tell the truth about cheating in a school exam because that incident left him restless and remorseful; instead, an unknown cloaked priest with a calm, soothing voice took the chance to lock him inside the confessional box within the deserted and cavernous halls, and sexually assaulted him with such horrifying pleasure and toe-curling vigour, that the boy lost his first true wet ejaculation to the priest's dirty sweaty mouth - and yet the boy never had a chance to see his attacker's face shrouded in cloth and shadow. His shrill sobs and screams echoed the interior altars and chapels, but went unheard as stained glass, heavy wooden doors and rich tapestry and curtains muffled the cries for help in a remote town where, like wolves in sheep's clothings, sex predators lurked even in the holiest sanctuaries to prey and devour the innocent, under the watchful but unhelpful eyes of holy statues of gods and saints. The boy swore never to believe in his god, and would turn to a life of crime and evil in a futile lifelong attempt to wash away memories of painful, unclean touches that would haunt him forever.

.

One of the rituals that all spirits undergo before reaching the Cliffs is to drink the Wine of Oblivion, so that they may forget about their previous existence and reincarnate in peace, and start with a clean slate for their rebirth (which technically, no longer happens, since the best reincarnations end up as twisty crystals for someone's stove). However, Lan Xi Chen, renowned newly-minted Sect Leader of the Gusu Lan, was cursed with a peculiar ability that many would envy in the world of living, though not so much in the Underworld, when one is poised to leave the old and start anew. His amazing golden core - or at least an ethereal, afterlife version of it - remained viable deep inside his chest, and easily metabolized the effects of all liquors made by the servants of the Underworld.

He claimed, through slurred words, interspersed with hiccups, and rude burps between sentences, that he was given ten jars of the special Wine, but his memories remained as bright and clear as daylight in Gusu's coastal white-sand beaches on sunny summer afternoons (a vague popular saying that Wei Ying also learnt during his younger days studying in the Cloud Recesses), whilst other spirits whom he had acquainted with and formed close friendships over the long, sombre climb up the steps, easily started to forget after their first jar, and by the time they stood at the Cliff's edge, they were filled with enviable carefree attitudes, unbridled joy and fearlessness, and could leap off with little or no lingering attachments, regrets, or wants from their previous lives.

"It's not fair, gongzi ! The officials gave up on me and stamped a 'No Exit' on my passport," Xi Chen cried out in frustration and fished out a dog-eared page from his sleeve pocket that bore the said red-ink mark with a big "X"; a passport is given to every spirit that passes through the Ten Courts, and as he (or she) makes his way through the various stages and rituals, a stamp is placed to indicate the progress to completion and towards Reincarnation; understandably, those who stayed back for official reasons - Jiang Yan Li, for instance -, for unstated but generally accepted reasons - Grandma Li being one -, or those who entered illegally or never made it through the Ten Courts - Wei Ying and Wen Ning being prime examples -, would not have that precious document in their possession; "See? I've received green stamps in every box drawn on this piece of paper except the biggest one at the lowest end! I've been a very good person, obeyed every single order, performed everything according to the officials' instructions, guidebooks, signs and flow charts - and yet, everyone I've known, including the twenty spirits that journeyed with me up these never-ending mountains, have successfully jumped off the Cliffs and left me behind!" Xi Chen howled drunkenly and shook his passport in the air - to no one's attention -, and shoved an empty clay jar to the ground, leaving a rather dangerous-looking, sharp-edged mess on the floor littered with peanut shells, used cutlery and tableware, leftover food, cigarette butts, and other bits of trash.

"Ah... yes, yes, the whole world isn't fair, is it? Come on, let go of those emptied jars and lets get you outside for a bit," Wei Ying murmured and began to collect tipsy Xi Chen's long, haphazardly arranged limbs, while the latter kept pointing at himself - his chest, specifically -, barking out how lonely he is, and how he is doomed to be forever alone (in which Wei Ying rolled his eyes and huffed in exasperation).

It took a bit of effort for Wei Ying to drag the tall and surprisingly heavy, inebriated man off the bar stool and out into the open, where the air was fresher and hopefully, would re-energize and clear Xi Chen da ge 's mind. Obviously, Xi Chen was very drunk - his golden core worked hard to ward off the memory-wipe effects of the Wine of Oblivion, as well as the worst of hangovers of other lesser and more ordinary brews served and consumed at the now-abandoned bar; but not everything could be absorbed, so there was some residual intoxication left in the man's bloodstream -, thus, being a drunkard with bleary and blurry vision, and nerves that didn't quite connect to the senses, Xi Chen didn't recognize Wei Ying and treated him like the friendly strangers he'd met during the walk up the Mountains.

The Cliff top was deserted and refreshingly calm and quiet, when the last of the sick guards and harried officials hurried downhill to pursue the mass of escaped spirits. Wei Ying deposited Xi Chen da ge into a wide lounge chair meant for those who wanted to catch a few peaceful winks before departing for good. Then, he found a clean towel in one of the cabinets inside the bar, wetted it with some cold tap water, and used it to wipe the da ge 's face. The young man noted that the eldest Lan's complexion looked healthy and rosy, and his appearance was picture perfect - a rarity for those who died; Lan Xi Chen must've passed away in a state of perfect beauty and bliss - except for a strange white scarf around his neck.

Wei Ying, ever the curious child, stealthily unwrapped the scarf in an attempt to reveal what secrets hid beneath the cloth around the Sect Leader's slender neck, but Xi Chen reacted instinctively - almost as if out of pure terror - his accuracy, dexterity and speed, even in a drunken state is amazingly and terrifyingly good - and swatted Wei Ying's fingers with one of his hands, while the other hand balanced an untidy crumpled ball of chilled wet towel atop his forehead. Wei Ying yelped and retracted his itchy and now reddened fingers.

"G' away... 'm not eating anythin' else... please, no more of those lotus seed buns... wuuuu... the pain, why can't I f'rget the painnnn... creepy crawl'es burrowin' out of my throat... it hurts... wuuuu..." Xi Chen mumbled drowsily, very uncharacteristic of his usual stoic and elegant demeanor, and behaved more like a grumpy old fool with his head lolling from side to side. Wei Ying quietened down and swallowed hard - perhaps on behalf of the man who likely sported a large gaping hole under the scarf -, when he realized the probable reason for Xi Chen's death. Lotus seed buns made by succubi hand and served to the ignorant living - Wei Ying had seen them more than once while he was still alive, and he knew how those killer poisonous foods worked.

"It's strange. If you were killed after having those lotus seed buns, why is your body still whole? Surely you've seen the other spirits and their conditions, especially around their lower abdomens," Wei Ying remarked, as he rummaged Xi Chen da ge 's robes - including pulling down his sash and outer garments to check his belly and beneath. The older man giggled and rudely burped when his stomach was unintentionally rubbed - Wei Ying looked for tell-tale signs of succubus attack, such as gouged groins or split tummies - surely, a man with such a brilliant, tasty golden core would've attracted a swarm of those monstrous female cannibals.

Intoxicated Xi Chen swatted the offending molesting hand from his treasure trail and six-pack abs, and threw the used wet towel at Wei Ying. The younger man yelped again at the soppy attack, and retreated from further efforts to sully the eldest Lan's dignity. Xi Chen suddenly grunted and inhaled loudly, then became quite lively and threw energetic kicks and punches in the air - he's a man of extremes when under the influence of alcohol -, "Blast those demonesses, I'd rather blow myself up than to let them dine on my body! Alas, I lacked barrels of explosive gunpowder, so I threw myself onto my sword, dying, being eaten alive from inside out by those horrendous creepy crawlies... disgusting bugs that had festered within the sacred temple of this body, after I'd swallowed too many lotus seed buns, in trying to sate that gnawing hunger from fleeing Gusu empty-handed without food... and I flew! I flew so far from those wretched demonesses, that no one could catch me, and I was fated to die alone... forever alone! In a graveyard of steep mountain rocks and uninhabited river gorges close to Lanling! Forever alone, you hear me?!"

Wei Ying facepalmed with secondhand embarrassment as he witnessed Xi Chen da ge try to logically narrate a story, with an added touch of unnecessary theatrics and exclamation marks, to illustrate dramatically with overzealous body movements, and to exorcise the alcohol from his bloodstream, all at once. The older man demonstrated an admirable cultivation move, with whooshing sleeves and thudding shoes, then somersaulted through the air and landed on the roof of the bar that had served him the accursed liquor just minutes ago. His final pose of outstretched arms, with one leg delicately tip-toeing on a piece of roof tile whilst the other leg hung behind at a perpendicular angle and in perfect balance - like a dancing ballerina -, chin tilted upwards, an exaggerated frown etched on his face - a dazzlingly humiliating display of a man, formerly known to be half of the venerable Twin Jades of Gusu Lan, now seen to be truly immersed in an alcohol-infused hallucination of a madman - definitely a deserving candidate for the award 'forever alone' because the unforgettable rooftop imagery had burned itself into Wei Ying's eyes.

"Err... please calm down, and get down from the rooftop," Wei Ying reached out with one hand in a helpful gesture. "Let's not talk about what happened in the past, okay? Instead, let's talk about the present. We can go down the Mountains, escape to the Underworld civilization and get you to safety. How does that sound?" Wei Ying offered with his sweetest, kindest voice, and really hoped that the da ge would stop risking his life - or afterlife - and get off the building that creaked and shook dangerously with each spin he made on the roof tiles.

Xi Chen totally ignored the younger man's advice. His glazed eyes glinted in the darkness, as he seemed to search the skies for a moon. He lowered his arms into a position that Wei Ying recognized as for playing the xiao flute.

"I had steeled my heart to leave everyone, everything behind, but my passport denies my onward passage. Oh, how I long to meet A-Yao, and Nie da ge. We were the perfect trio! If only... if only I can be reborn in the same village as them, even as their xiongli, I would be grateful to the gods. But fate is cruel... oh, so very cruel..." Xi Chen's shoulders slumped drastically, and his sorrowful looks became a prelude to an unbelievable show of how to cry manly tears. His shuddering body softened in stance, lost the steam that had gathered from earlier spirited movements, his legs trembled and Wei Ying yelped (another time) to dash forward in case the older man lost the hope in his heart and his delicate balance on the roof tiles altogether. Wei Ying was increasingly frustrated from trying to (man)handle Xi Chen da ge and his extremely volatile mood swings in his drunken state.

“Ahhh!! Be careful! You can’t topple off the roof, otherwise you may roll over and fall off the Cliffs! Without your fulfilled passport, you will never reincarnate!” Wei Ying shouted, and Xi Chen managed to twirl on the tip of his shoe at the last second before really falling off the building - Wei Ying’s heart was in his throat at that point.

Xi Chen da ge paced back and forth the rooftop and pretended to play the unseen flute, and he probably heard a repertoire of depressing music inside his mind. Wei Ying had to get the older man’s attention out of the gutter of sorts, so he switched gears. “Is there something more promising, of someone alive and loved, waiting for you out there? Who else do you want to be with, whom you know is living and breathing and not in this Hell right now?” Wei Ying asked, and he felt a distant but distinct spark of hope welling up from his non-existent heart.

The older man stopped playing his flute and looked upwards into the inky blackness. He cocked an eyebrow, “Hmm? Who else do I know that still thinks of me and is still alive? I left shortly after I was forced to sign off a paper and the fate of my sect, so I am guilty of being the greatest coward of my clan!” he shook his head, helplessness visible on his face, “... but so does everyone else who sat in the Council when the meeting with the Tian-surnamed generals of the Imperial army for the first time. No one has virtues anymore, no one cares and loves for each other anymore, we are divided in our goals to survive... There is no hope left for the Gusu Lan, to each his own, for better or worse! Even my uncle, who was said to have accepted a deal from the demonesses and left his clansmen in those horrid females’ hands, while he enjoys buffets and teas in Caiyi Town!” Xi Chen da ge swung his fists angrily and his wavering body nearly lost its balance - Wei Ying’s non-existent heart nearly burst from its ribcage from fear and shock -, “I kept my white robes, I was a better man than most, and yet this is the ending that I get... wuuuu... I’m forever alone... A-Yao, Nie da ge

...” he rubbed his face in his sleeves, crying again like a distraught child, in all likelihood.

Wei Ying clawed at his own face at the horror unfurling before his eyes, as Xi Chen descended into a mess of disjointed, incoherent thoughts and words, and more alarmingly, he ran out of roof tiles to walk on, and started stepping on the sloping parts of the rooftop. “Ah! Turn back! Turn back!” he yelled and flailed his arms to signal the man, but his shouts fell on deaf ears.

Xi Chen sniffled audibly to clear his airways. He lifted his arms again to play an imaginary xiao flute - probably, another very sad and touching musical piece filled the air inside his drunken mind. Then, after a few moments, something seemed to flicker in his gaze and he stilled. His hands adjusted themselves - a little higher, extended outwards into a horizontal manner, in which Wei Ying recognized as a position used to play-- “-- di zi (笛子; transverse bamboo flute)?” Wei Ying said unconsciously, loud enough to be heard.

Xi Chen played an imaginary dizi flute for a few seconds, then paused. “My... younger brother... Long, long ago, when we were just mere teenagers, we got drunk in the Cloud Recesses after accidentally drinking wine that was mistakenly labelled as tea. As a loving elder brother, I asked him what he wanted, that I would grant his every wish, in my unthinking state. He kept harping on wanting a dizi, I didn’t know why at that time... he was smitten with the musical instrument and wanted nothing else. There was something about the dizi that captured his heart, even at such a young age while we were busy studying in classes with children from the other sects. Ah, I kind of forgot what happened, because I became giddy and light-headed after that. Do you think-- eh? Why, gongzi ? Why are you crying?”

The sparkle of hope in Wei Ying’s chest had burst into grand blossoms of fireworks. He was sobbing and snivelling like a fool himself, and he started to fish out the last item he had in his pockets.

“Say it loudly! Who is this younger brother of yours? Do you wish to see him again? He’s alive right now and he needs you too!” Wei Ying yelled at the top of his lungs; somehow, his fingers fumbled and he couldn’t reach in to pull out the final straw doll fast enough. He cursed his clumsiness, but he was too afraid to open his teary eyes, to see what would happen next, to want to celebrate his joy that hadn’t reach its closure, to catch a glimpse of his much-missed husband, to desperately hope for a chance to return, to say for the final time a heartfelt ‘Sorry’ and ‘Thank You’ before it was too late-- “Wang Ji, my dear gongzi . His name is Lan Wang Ji, and yes, I would like to see him once more,” Xi Chen calmly replied. Suddenly, he looked prim and proper, as though he had never taken a swig off a jar of wine; he stood upright, hands by his side, legs placed together and balanced precariously on a narrow ledge at the end of the roofing, and no longer played around like a drunken fool.

Xi Chen da ge ’s lips curled upward - faintly, truly reflecting the emotional restraints of a pure-blooded Gusu Lan. His long, tied hair flowed, his pristine white cloud-patterned robes swayed gently, buoyed by invisible winds.

The final straw doll emerged on its own from Wei Ying's pocket, glowing bright with radiant blue and streaks of starry white, and flew straight towards Lan Xi Chen.

.

High above the new Spring Palace Resort, an unusual weather pattern formed. Massive rain clouds gathered high above, blocked sunlight and coloured the entire landscape in hues of greys and monotonous. Strong gusts of wind blew, flattening shrubs, seedlings and vegetable plants within moments. Lightning and thunder struck repeatedly, and two rabbits - one white and the other black - could be seen darting into the caves for shelter.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 134

Wei Wuxian is a man of many talents - and of many tragedies. Currently, he, in his many physical manifestations, is the number one cause of disasters rocking the Kingdom's political and economic landscape, and when he or his kin makes a move, surely conflicts, confusion, unrest and scandals ensue in his wake.

“Your Highness! This is madness! We’ve signed a peace treaty with the Tians, and yet the Great Four Siblings of First Father Wei continue to dishonour the ceasefire and wage war across the multiverses! Tian dalaoye and his wife have filed numerous complaints after their house was burned down, caught in friendly fire whilst the Four Great Generals bombard every known planet, galaxy and universe that bear signs of the Eight Terrible Sisters’ trail! The people are revolting, because they can no longer safely work in their offices, shop in the supermarkets or live in their apartments in peace, for fear of being shot down from the stratosphere or black holes! Even our allies are unhappy at the state of affairs, because their businesses, colonies and spaceships are wrecked in the process as well! It’s a witch hunt, a mindless path of annihilation of unimaginable proportions, a meaningless drain on the Kingdom’s resources and loss of precious, innocent lives, that must be stopped at once!”

“Your Majesty! Terrible news! The One Hundred And Eight local gods of Qishan and their relatives have gathered at the Heavenly Palace courtyard and are staging a mass protest! They refuse to leave until their concerns are heard and resolved! It is your adopted children, led by that Wei brat, that is causing such distress amongst the local gods and demi-gods - the ghostly apparitions and widespread rumours of haunting have driven away all merchants from Yiling and its surrounding settlements, and the economy of the province is on the brink of collapse! The local deities no longer receive offerings and worship from their believers, because people are too afraid to go out! Lives and belongings go missing, scary sounds and conversations dominate the now-abandoned and emptied Market Streets, and even the farm animals are spooked! Even worse, the Earth Gods have joined the fray and are using this opportunity to demand for better salaries and workers' welfare - otherwise they will break into the hospitals and hold the Grand Patriarch's recuperating relatives in the Mortal Realm as hostages! The Patriarch's mentally ill uncle has started hiring lawyers to get him out and he wants all our fortunes to be placed under his name - otherwise, he claims that he'll take the side of the ghostly children, sue us for human trafficking and involvement in slavery and child abuse, and wreak havoc to our finances! Our coffers will surely go empty soon!"

"Your Excellency! The Lord of Hell calls for your leadership at times of crisis! His realm, the Underworld, is in a state of utter chaos, after the greatest moving mass of un-Reincarnated spirits have escaped their paths to rebirth and stampeded through the cities and slums in the vicinity! According to the Lord's reports, it seems a spirit of Wei-kin had poisoned the guards at the Reincarnation path, and indeed, hell broke loose after that! The security forces and police of the Underworld are overwhelmed, and the escaped spirits have taken over huge swathes of the realm, pillaged and burned everything in sight, barricaded themselves in key administration buildings of the Lord's government, armed themselves with tremendously powerful weapons stolen from the Lord's armouries, and left behind ruins and smoking debris! The Underworld is not equipped to handle a rebellion of this scale! Please, you must send the Heavenly armies to save the Realm of the Dead, lest the delicate balance with the Mortal Realm of the Living becomes jeopardized!"

"Great Emperor! Trouble brews in the Far, Far West upon the Mortal Realm, which is beyond our jurisdiction! The Dragon King of the Seas reports that his oceanic waters have been polluted by poisons made by incubus led by that Wei individual you've been looking for, and his comrades' descendents of the succubus-kin. The poisons are transforming the Sea People into marine fierce corpses, and the seas are no longer safe!

It's a plague of monumental proportions, Great Emperor, as the Dragon King's realm covers more than seventy percent of the Mortal Realm known as Planet Earth! Nobody can sail or swim safely, let alone live in the fouled waters, and the water cycle has been disrupted due to the toxic substances... the people of the Mortal Realm face a terrifying prospect of not having enough rain in the immediate future, and a prolonged drought that would kill off all living creatures on land!"

"My Lord! There is more from that side of the globe! Delegations of foreign gods have arrived and lined up in front of the gates to the Heavenly Palace! There are so many of them that we've not seen before, so we don't know what to do other than to let them in and wait at the courtyard! They demand to see you, because of a spate of losses in the numbers of the faithful due to the invasion of the incubi and succubi borned of our Kingdom's people! One particular Wei person seems to be spearheading the crusade against these gods! Amongst their accusations and claims, include how the faithful followers of these foreign gods have been tricked, assaulted and disappointed by scores of sham miracle cures, sale of counterfeit religious products and services, the rise of fake priests, monks and shamans, crimes conducted under the guise of the holy and sacred, and many more! Please, you need to attend to these angry gods, because our officials are at a loss of how to handle their fury and wrath, especially since some of them started to wield lightning and thunderbolts, fireballs, earthquakes and hurricane-like winds..."

The Regent of the Kingdom rubbed his temples tiredly. Things escalated pretty quickly in between a few toilet breaks, and now, he has a new, profound respect for the Grand Patriarch who had been able to control and rein in his Wei Yings during the past few tumultuous months, compared to his own pathetic and pitiful short tenure so far on the throne. He thought he was doing a marvellous job in knowing what the real Lan Wang Ji wants, and doing what the man would have never dared (even in his Dreams); he believed that if he realized the Grand Patriarch's visions of Perfection by carrying out the Patriarch's wishes and actually achieving astounding performances and results, he would garner some praise and worth from the man who started it all - the One Who Dreams -, thus solidifying his own position as a suitable replacement, if not a successor, of the Grand Patriarch himself.

However, Wei Ying and the many variants of the same man, threw a giant monkey wrench into his plans through their horrible antics, and are in the midst of causing his spectacular downfall, toppling him from the pedestal at such an alarming rate. The Regent knew that the longer he left the Wei Yings to cause untold disruptions, disturbance and damages in every corner of multiverse, the closer the Sword of Damocles hung over his head - by a thread, even -, and he should withdraw and cut his losses as soon as he can - because he knows .

The Gusu Lan master rose from his throne and - to the surprise and horror of every Palace servant in sight - removed his glorious jewelled crown.

“I’m... taking another toilet break,” he announced calmly and without any hesitation.

“Again, Your Highness? At this hour and time?” one of his panicked, sweaty aides asked with a respectful bow with folded hands at the front, terrified at knowing that he and the other servants would have to tell the impatient, furious crowds outside the Palace to “wait a little bit”.

The master simply walked past without giving a second look at the rows of officials who lined the throne room with their backs bent forward. “I sense a change in the air. The much-awaited Clouds of Gusu has risen, it is time,” he muttered vaguely - indeed, he detected an abnormal vibration of magical auras from the arrival of an individual that would complete his prophecy, and he knew the next time he scoured the Mortal Realm for his missing wife, Fate would allow him to finally meet the person he fondly calls Uncle Wei.

“Huh? Clouds? Gusu? Change in the air?” the throne room erupted into a series of muffled whispers going back and forth between servants who had to remain in bowing position while trying to guess what their ruler meant. The Regent left for the gents just around the corner, down the hallways outside the throne room.

One servant sniffed the air and wrinkled his nose, when the Regent was out of sight, and declared, “Ah, I see. My nose tells me he’s having a tummy ache, and everything must wait until he concludes his... large business... during the break.”

Everyone in the room politely covered their noses with their sleeves, and nodded in docile agreement.

.

Uncle Wei, who had been forcibly married into a family that he was close to - particularly one of the sons -, was adamant to enjoy his freedom while it still lasted, on the other side of the globe. The villain knew that nothing lasts forever, including his ways of wandering to the ends of the earth, his perpetual penchants for causing mischief and misery unto others, even his joys with that one boy from the family that he ran away from, and now, the many boys, girls, offsprings and numerous descendents that he'd thoroughly groomed, nurtured and savoured over the unending times - because he had one last trick up his sleeves.

He knew that he is alone in his pioneering ways, and no matter what great deeds he'd done for his kin - including breaking new grounds with mind-boggling inventions and awesome spells; teaching his kins how to infiltrate, seduce and attack their prey; equipping his comrades with weapons and magics never thought possible; even opening portals so that his kin could invade other realms and across universes -, sooner or later, he'd meet someone stronger than he, or find a dagger through his back and stab that poisoned black heart in his chest, or be betrayed, cheated and ratted out by those who felt threatened and jealous over his achievements. In his dim, hopeless view of the world, the future is always bleak, that he must always view others' help and support with caution, that he would never fall in love or do something unconditionally for others, that there is always a price to pay, that the only way forward is to be self-reliant, to reinvent himself continuously, and trust only his two hands to get the job done.

Thus, he quietly engineered his ultimate destiny as an act of self-preservation, and in posterity, to add another notch to his belt so that he may boast about his awesomeness, someday. He used the key fundamental trinity elements of existence - Creation, Time and Fate - to machine his own brand of immortality, eternity and greatness.

While his kin still flew above the Dragon King's seas in search of new populations to prey on, Uncle Wei had already unleashed his seeds, in the form of particles not so different from Ernie's virulent ones, but exceptionally robust, revolutionary for its kind, even capable of hijacking Ernie's already-incredible viruses and thus, the most far-reaching of them - with a single sneeze. Thus, the fate of the universe, and all universes for that matter, had been sealed; Uncle Wei became godly, omnipresent, and he could respawn anytime and anywhere he wanted.

When incubi started to attack human settlements and plant their evil seeds in their females, Uncle Wei was light-years ahead of the game. He recklessly used Time magic to create time paradoxes and loops, going back and forth between the prehistoric past and the distant future to ensure that his existence shall prevail no matter what, since the beginning of time, until the end of days for the multiverse. He was extremely careful in his approach, so that he flew below everyone's radar and stealthily conducted his devilish experiments, unnatural implantations, prohibited spellcasting, illegal enhancements and the ilk. Thus, amongst many other horrible things that had happened in the Mortal Realm (and the rest of the Kingdom and beyond), this included spawning and editing Tian dalaoye , his wife and their Eight children from time immemorial using the multiverse's root core programming (which he easily hacked into, because he is essentially a Wei Ying, who is an inherent savvy expert in dabbling with such frowned-upon activities of messing up known worlds, sequence of events, and timelines), seeding infinite swarms of succubi-kin - his descendents, technically - in the Far, Far West since the Summer of 20XX B.C. so that chronologically, the events would lead up to his release in that same region, later on around Wintertime.

Fate had spelled out that he would be caught soon and relinquished back to the hands of the family that he escaped from; all cosmic signs pointed to that direction and even the Book of Judgement stated the same thing. No matter how he camouflaged his appearance, disguised himself or changed his behaviour, there was no escape to his destiny to be returned to the Realm of the Dreams by the terribly fearsome Gusu Lan master who had whacked his buttocks with the much-maligned feather duster. However, Uncle Wei had done enough damage by then, silently re-written history, holy texts and encyclopedias, and enjoyed the fruits of his labour and loins, that he was fine to 'take a break' and return home - for a limited time, of course. He did miss little A-Ji's sweet rump, and truthfully, he didn't mind getting bitten and clawed by the feral monkey known as A-Xian, because later on, he could rough up the kid and have his fun too in a juvenile way. He only wished that the husband of the forced marriage wouldn't whip him with the feather duster so often - he could work on his persuasion skills or use his creative mind to trick the man to stop using that weapon of stinging terror, he thought.

With that and with everything set, Uncle Wei adjusted his overalls and his fake toolkit, politely knocked on the door of an unsuspecting victim, and waited for a response. Today, he was a plumber; his days of disguising as priests, and before that, as a school teacher and a doctor - any many other professions he'd tried and enjoyed both as a pastime and to earn very good meals - were kind of over. He felt a need to return to simpler times, especially one that didn't need prior reading of many books and manuals.

The door creaked open, and three pairs of eyes peeked out - a young boy who had probably just hit puberty and two older teenage girls stared at him from the gap. They eyed him up and down, startled at his attire and presence.

Uncle Wei nodded and pulled down his cap to hide his eyes from view, "Good afternoon, I'm here to inspect your water pipes. There have been reports of leaking pipes lately, so the local council sent me to check if fixes will be needed before anything untoward happens to your beloved homes."

The oldest girl, probably sixteen years of age, pushed to the front of the trio and shook her head, "Sorry, Mister, but our house doesn't have water pipes. We get our water from the well behind our house for bathing, washing and cooking."

Uncle Wei blinked - he was likely confused as he'd just returned from the 21st century where any township's water supply was more developed than 20XX B.C. -, and quickly corrected himself, "Err... right, gotcha. How about kitchen stoves? The mayor tasked me to check and make sure the gas... err... the firewood quality meets the approved standards mandated by the local council."

The second teenage girl spoke this time, "We have a kitchen stove at the back, but our mommy said we shouldn't let strangers into the house while our parents are away."

"Oh? What time will your parents be back?" Uncle Wei asked nonchalantly, and pretended to write a note on a piece of rice paper using an ink-brush.

"Um... um... dad's gone for work at the farms and will only be back by sundown. Mom's gone to the market and to have afternoon tea with her friends, she'll be back a little earlier before sunset too," the little boy blabbered, and immediately his sisters hissed at him to shut up and not to reveal such private details to unknown men.

Uncle Wei smiled brightly. He leaned forward and whispered, "Do you know that if I have to come back here a second time for the inspection, your parents will be charged a gold piece for the overtime services. The bill will be sent by the town council straight to your mom and dad, so you probably don't know this. But..." he winks evilly, "... if you let me in quickly and allow me do a good job, then your parents won't have to worry about losing a gold piece! No one will ever know, I promise you this! You'll be doing a good deed for your family!"

The children in this town are mostly illiterate, and the thought of losing money, especially when they lived in poverty, was scary.

After a hesitant pause and some low whispers amongst the children, the door opened wider and was left ajar. Uncle Wei grinned happily and like a wolf invited to saunter into a house full of tasty, juicy lamb, he made sure to close the door behind him and lock it with a resounding ‘click’.

Hours later, the vile uncle sat on a bench in a nearby deserted park under the shade of many trees. The late afternoon sun was bright but it wasn’t as hot anymore once its angle of descent was noticeable. He used a toothpick to pick his teeth and remove a couple of soft pubic hairs, and made some rude smacking sounds to clear his palate.

The girls were devoured naturally without any added spells, flavourings or preservatives. A brown vial with special ingredients did the trick; after making sure the girls carried his flesh and blood, in triplets, no less, he instructed the future mothers of his offsprings, using hypnosis-like techniques, to go forth and prostitute themselves and get into gangrapes, so that their pregnancies would be fully justified with no perpetrators to be identified. Then, the girls were telepathically commanded to visit a particular clinic run by his brethren to ensure yet another generation of fat healthy incubus and succubus children, or whatever supernatural demons that pop out, is added to the statistics of a burgeoning population of great, monstrous evil living in the shadows of Mankind. Easy peasy, he thought, and he congratulated himself for beating even the Grand Patriarch’s records - the entity named Wei Wuxian, in his Uncle Wei manifestation, is solely responsible for filling up the scale pan for Evil on the eternal Balance of Good Versus Evil, after all.

The little boy, whom he discovered to be ten years old, was a tasty side-dish. He convinced the boy that he was a certified doctor who worked as a plumber and a stove technician part-time - what are the odds, really? - and said that the boy looked terribly unwell, which could be attributed to being afflicted by curses and demonic influence. Unfortunately for the victim, the man's vile words were taken as gospel, and soon, the boy undressed - under the pretense of getting a diagnosis - and had his nearly hairless genitals checked.

"There's a swelling of malaise and bad spirits inside your groin," the uncle said, after molesting the boy from head to toe to his sadistic satisfaction, and then he followed up with a simple question, "Tell me the truth, boy... Do you sometimes find sticky white stuff in your underpants at nights with hot feverish feelings throughout your body?"

"Yes, sir," the boy nodded and started to panic, because nobody taught him what nighttime emissions and wet dreams were.

"Oh no," the man tsk-tsked, "That's not good, because that's the excess of evil stuff spilling out when you're having nightmares, and you can actually die if you hold it in for too long".

"What should I do? I don't want to die!" the boy cried in alarm.

"Come, let this uncle massage and suck it out, so that you will sleep better tonight," Uncle Wei grinned his million-dollar smile full of pearly whites and behind them, a forked tongue that eagerly wiggled in anticipation for a taste of sweet boy-juice. The uncle began to fondle the child's genitals and caressed the soft but oh-so-adorable pretty penis; he gave it a few strokes to get the veins pumped up with blood, peeled the foreskin back to reveal the prized treasure within, and offered a generous assaulting lick at the glistening bulbous pink tip with sweaty, greasy lips. The boy moaned and his hips bucked and trembled from unfamiliar, but very, very good feelings welling up from within his loins.

“Oh dear, did you know your balls are uneven? One’s slightly higher than the other, and that’s no good. It’s unhealthy. I’m a certified doctor, so I know. Let me fix it for you, boy, so lift it up for this uncle to have a closer look,” the uncle coo’ed at the plump testicles and patted the boy’s hand. The boy nodded and followed the instructions to the letter, so he willingly pulled up the skin around his groin and exposed the cute, pale hairless scrotum for the man to admire. Uncle Wei gently attacked the eggs filled with unejaculated virginal seed, with plenty of sweet licks and suckles, until both testicles jerked erratically from bolts of excitement and pleasure, trapped within their ballsacks with nowhere to escape, and experienced shuddering testicular orgasms that the boy was unprepared for, with plenty of orgasmic grunts that the boy shouldn’t make at his tender young age. It was a prelude to an afternoon of delicious child rapes; of emptying the boy of his pure milky nectar using that terrible forked tongue, until not a single drop was left and his ballsacks were left dangling loosely and uselessly; of teaching a boy the ropes of enjoying an adult’s mind-blowing blowjob until he willingly pumped his hips into the uncle’s dirty rapist mouth and from the exceedingly exciting pleasures short-circuiting his pelvis, squirted clear seedless syrup and pee straight into the man’s waiting palate; and later, of inseminating a child’s anus with enough thick, viscous monstrous seeds that would eventually carve a womb inside the boy and bear demonic babies in a few month’s time.

Uncle Wei sighed as he reminisced about the sweet lovemaking sessions and nearly slid a hand into his trousers, when his holo-phone buzzed. With an annoyed groan, he shelved away the fantasies and memories, and took the call.

“Hnnn... uh-huh... uh-huh... yes, I’ve not forgotten our pact and I’m keeping up my end of the bargain. Thanks to your insider information from leaked Fairy Messenger calls, I’ve calculated the exact time and location of the Sundering and have mapped out what needs to be done to safeguard our interests. The hyperlink to the family cloud drive was most useful, as I was able to inventory and back-up everything, to make sure nothing will ever be accidentally deleted or re-written, and that we can always access the drive to make use of the abundant, infinite resources availed to us. I’ve e-mailed you the instructions, did you already receive them? You have? Good.”

“Yes, yes, keep chasing the Eight Children of the Tians and lay waste everywhere to stir up riots and unrest. We need to distract everyone’s attention while we carry out our master plan... you can place your trust in me, because I’m the greatest mastermind of all Wei-kin! Ha ha ha, no offense to you, of course, since you’re my second-in-command and also a copy of every known clone of Wei Wuxian... so you deserve the same recognition and rank as I have! We all know it’s a futile wild goose chase for those eight girls, who are our distant nieces anyway. Having them to send our unwary First Father Wei to the Underworld was a brilliant idea, and I commend you for that! We’ve always needed an extra hand to cause more chaos and confusion everywhere!”

“Nnn... Mmm... yes, bring your other three siblings together and get ready to be shipped off to the Dream realm, where even better prospects await us! I can guarantee that you’ll be most satisfied with our new home. I’m a certified Dream-kin, so I know. I only ask for your temporary help and service to drive the Regent to do our bidding - without his knowledge, of course - so please bear with the inconveniences and angry phonecalls from the Kingdom, for the time being. I hope you don’t mind.”

“Mmm-hmm... Mmm-hmm... yes, of course, we’ll be in touch even after we’re transported to the Dreams. Oh! My pick-up has arrived, I must go now. See you on the other side soon, da ge , ‘k? Alright, bye-bye, and love you too.”

The holo-phone fizzled out of existence, and right on the dot, some bushes at the far end of the park rustled. Uncle Wei leaned back into the bench, closed his eyes, and relaxed completely with a dreamy smile on his lips, like a lazy drunk who’s had too much to drink and too giddy for his own good.

Uncle Lan emanated such tremendous qi energies that lightning crackled on the surface of his body, his long lush hair flew wildly - but perfectly in curved locks -, and the air surrounding his form vaporized into scorching pure heat. He stormed through the park with two kids and a teenager in tow. As the fiery Gusu Lan master stomped through the instantly-incinerated grass fields, his awesome sphere of power flattened nearby bushes and shrubs, and trees split apart from whirlwind-like forces, sending debris, leaves and gravel stones flying into the air. Teenager Xi Chen trailed behind from a safe distance, and he held each of A-Xian and A-Ji’s hands tightly to keep them safe, and from running away from the awesome but frightening spectacle.

Uncle Wei paid little attention to the arrivals, other than to open one eye and squint at Uncle Lan.

“You’re here,” he muttered impassively.

Uncle Lan heaved a sigh and extended a hand towards the man with unruly hair and half-buttoned overalls, “Enough running. You’ve done enough. Come back with me to Gusu.”

.

It must be a divine joke of cosmic proportions, Lan Zhan thought.

There was a flash of lightning inside the bedroom, and suddenly, his elder brother appeared out of nowhere, from high above. Lan Xi Chen was as naked as a newborn - but otherwise, perfect in form and health -; the younger Lan brother is most probably traumatized for life after ogling Xi Chen da ge ’s impressive nudeness; without warning, the tall man fell from the top of the bed and landed squarely on Wei Ying’s frail, thin body - the bed screamed in agonizing creak with the added weight - Wei Ying actually made a soft, but an unmistakable “oof!” sound upon being squished by Xi Chen’s immense frame - fortunately the blankets that covered Wei Ying cushioned the blow a bit, and it appeared that Wei Ying was finally awoken by the impact and he was about to be suffocated by Xi Chen’s broad muscular bare-skinned chest. A long, painful groan from the tangle of limbs and human-sandwich confirmed Lan Zhan’s initial suspicion that his beloved spouse actually roused from his long slumber by the landing force of his older brother, however the Grand Patriarch was too stunned at the shocking turn of events, and his logical thinking process was rendered inoperable for a few good minutes.

Those few good minutes ticked by, while thunder roared and winds lashed outside the Spring Palace Resort, and the first waves of torrential rain began to sweep through ‘Mounds.

Lan Zhan was at the bedside and stood over the two slumbering men. Wei Ying nnngh'd in distress as eyes moved behind the closed eyelids, his fingers moved for the first time in ages , and his legs slid on the king-sized mattress in random directions. After rolling his older brother - so that he didn't have to stomach the imagined sight of Xi Chen slamming his nipples into Wei Ying's puckered lips - and arranging the man's long limbs so that he lay beside lovely, fidgeting Wei Ying - he made sure to put a purple pillow over his older brother's groin to protect whatever dignity that was left -, Lan Zhan could finally breathe out a sigh of relief.

His brother had returned - for inexplicable reasons -, and Wei Ying was waking up. His heart leapt in great joy and he thought his soul had gone to Heaven and back; he kept telling himself that he wasn't dreaming, wasn't dreaming at all, the nightmare was finally over, his Perfect Happiness was about to begin, his One Big Happy Family is at long last here--

-- Grand Patriarch. A parcel has been teleported into our residence. It's addressed to you and it's very urgent," the black rabbit announced with bouncy hops into the bedroom with a very large, thick book balanced precariously on its back. It was a wonder that the furry animal wasn't squashed by the size and weight of the tome; it looked like someone ripped off a tabletop off a piece of furniture and strapped it onto the bunny. The rabbit's hind legs jerked and it jumped onto a study desk at the corner of the bedroom, where it unloaded the gigantic book atop it; the desk creaked dangerously but held up well nevertheless.

The black rabbit seemed unfazed at the events that had occurred in the bedroom, nor at the new arrival. Next, the white rabbit hopped into the room and immediately skipped onto the bed. She proceeded to nibble and lick Xi Chen's face and Wei Ying's lips. Both nnngh'd in irritation at the same time; Xi Chen turned his head around to avoid the adorable but moist attack, while Wei Ying wrinkled his nose and looked like he was about to sneeze from the flicking whiskers.

“Grand Patriarch,” the black rabbit cleared its throat audibly to regain the man’s attention, “The greatest storm is upon us, the Sundering of Realities has commenced. Please, Father, open this new Book of Judgement and write our new destinies for the future.” An exquisite ink-brush made from jade and precious gemstones was presented from its paws.

Lan Zhan took a deep breath and steeled his heart and mind; he could always spend more time and cuddle up with Wei Ying, gently wake him up and wish him good morning with kisses and hugs; he could always pat his older brother’s shoulders to rouse the man from slumber, then serve him a pot of freshly brewed pu’er tea, and finally sit down together for the much-awaited heart-to-heart talk, and to find out how he has been doing since disappearing from the Cloud Recesses after Jin Guangyao’s demise. He could - always, and anytime - but, he knew what needed to be done, first and foremost.

He picked up the ink-brush and strode across the bedroom to the study desk. Lan Zhan flipped open the huge book; the cover was as thick as a man’s forearm and was adorned with rich embroidery and metal carvings that bore ancient mystical symbols. The moment he reached down and touched the tip of the ink-brush to the top of the first page; the parchment was thick, fibrous, aged into yellow and brown shades of colour - the moment he penned the first word, everything in his vision glowed white until the brilliant incandescence swallowed up the entire bedroom, and in reality, the world too.

.

It is said that while the stars are realigned, while destinies are rewritten, and while time is reset to its origins, Wei Ying had a wonderful dream.

He dreamt of having a barbeque dinner outside a new home of sorts - a cave carved out from the mountains, which wasn't too different from what he started with his husband long, long ago. His husband was a master chef, and made delicious grilled spicy sweet-sour pork, roasted chicken, baked fish with herbs, and lots of potatoes and root vegetables spiced with chilli and other exotic spices, and plenty of other dishes on the side, ranging from appetizers, main courses to sweet dessert soups.

The moon was bright - he wondered briefly why he shed a tear at the plain old sight of a moon and its stars -, the air was chilled and fresh, and the atmosphere was lively. The dinner turned out to be a reunion of happy families; Jiang Cheng and Jin Ling arrived to show Wei Ying's shijie how the bratty boy had grown up, got married, and hosted a large dinner across multiple clans; Jing Yi and Si Zhui came bearing snacks and fruits, and even sneaked in a few jars of Emperor's Smile for their favourite teacher in the art of night hunts - accompanied by the man's old pal, Wen Ning who was, surprisingly very much alive and looked like the days before he died as a Wen gongzi ; and of course, everyone was surprised when Lan Zhan's brother appeared from the cave to officially kick-off the ceremony and wished everyone good health, prosperity and great fortunes in their futures - and to start the dinner proper.

In that dream filled with good food, music, dancing and merry-making, everyone talked and cheered each other. Wei Ying enjoyed getting pampered and handfed by his shijie whom he'd miss so much (and Jiang Cheng was left alone and he kept rolling his eyes at every instance of affectionate displays between them), although she insisted that she couldn't remember anything other than 'I just woke up one fine day on my son's bed'. Jin Ling competed with Wei Ying for attention from Jiang Yan Li - for obvious reasons - so the man didn't linger too long, and next, he went off to pester the former fierce corpse-turned-slave who had turned back into a normal, healthy human being. Wen Ning was so adorable and agreeable, that Wei Ying had a great time showing him tricks (and bullying him some), although when asked about what happened, Wen Ning only shrugged and replied that he couldn't remember anything other than 'I just woke up sandwiched between Jing Yi and Si Zhui, and everyone screamed in terror - but everything turned out all right after that'.

Soon, it was time to grab another roasted chicken drumstick off the grill. He tottered happily towards the husband, murmuring, "Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, can you get me one of those xiao ji ji ?", in which the husband shot a dirty look at him because chickens should be treated with more respect in more ways than one, but he relented anyway - because Lan Zhan loves Wei Ying very, very much - and picked up the biggest, fattest drumstick for the beloved spouse. Wei Ying whooted with glee and held the tasty, greasy drumstick with his right hand and suddenly, Lan Xi Chen was by his side. The tall man uncorked a jar of Emperor's Smile, and he gave a regal smile at Wei Ying too while handing it to the overjoyed younger man.

With a drumstick in his right hand, a jar of the best wine in his left, surrounded by his family and friends, Wei Ying was the happiest man on earth in his dreams. He needed to tell the world about his joy, and the first to hear the news was none other than--

--Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan! I'm so happy tonight to have everyone attend our dinner! This is my Perfect Ending, with all of us together as One Big Happy Family! Ah... there's something in my eyes, I'm... I-I'm not crying... I'm h-happy..."

The husband saw that Wei Ying didn't have enough hands to take care of himself, so he stood in front of the spouse, raised his sleeves and dabbed the tears off Wei Ying's reddened cheeks. Wei Ying started to sniffle and hiccup like a drunken crying fool, and he hadn't even taken a swig from the jar yet.

"Lan Zhan... Lan Zhan... I'm so happy... I'm... I'm sorry for all the bad things that have happened in the past... and thank you, for staying by my side so that we're finally here, in this beautiful dream of the best ending ever... wuuuu... wuuuu..."

Wei Ying sobbed like a child then, and Lan Zhan simply took a step forward and embraced him. Wei Ying wailed at the warmth of Lan Zhan's hands, the soothing scents that reminded him of love, family, and home, and the comforting voice of the one man that he calls 'soulmate'.

"Lan Zhan!!!" another keening cry.

"Mn. I'm here... I'm here," the calming words repeated like a mantra, and soon, Wei Ying was lulled into a daze, then slowly, slowly, drifting into slumber - the voices in the background drowned away into white noise, his vision darkened from sleepiness, even the sensations of his fingers grasping the drumstick and the jar of wine numbed and faded into nothingness, then he felt himself floating, melting, sailing further and further away...

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 135

Wei Wuxian stood atop a lonely, deserted cliff sparsely covered with grass. Lil' Apple had abandoned him when it couldn't find enough to eat, and there weren't apples or other kinds of summer fruits growing in the mountain tops either. There was nothing but barren rock faces and tufts of browns and greens on the ground, and the winds were especially cold during freezing, foggy days.

The man knew he probably fell ill after days of travelling alone - who knew that surviving alone in the wilderness could be so tough? In his youthful days, he was more capable and resourceful, his senses keen and sharp, and his movements nimble and unfettered like an uncaged feral beast; however, after having his heart silently broken when Lan Zhan said "I'm going this way" when he was intent on going the other direction - away from Gusu, away from what could've been a beginning of a new, warmer relationship with the man he'd called 'confidant', sometimes 'soulmate', and now, a Chief Cultivator who is probably too busy in picking up the pieces left by Jin Guangyao's treachery, let alone go and look for him in the lonesome cliffs - Wei Ying had been so distracted by the sudden loss of companionship, the upheavals in his life post-resurrection in Mo Village after the revelations about what actually transpired sixteen years ago, after witnessing the secrets buried beneath the Guanyin Temple that brought closure to every accusation ever thrown at him before and after the resurrection, after being officially vindicated and feeling the greatest relief to wash over his entire being from the agony that gnawed at his heart for sixteen long years and from all the lives he did not take but was held guilty for--

"-- ahhh... and now, I don't even know what I'm thinking anymore," the man grumbled at the same time his stomach made similar noises. His thought process had been spiralling non-stop since he had too much unproductive time doing nothing else except to wander aimlessly around the borderlands of Gusu; his health deteriorated because he stopped hunting for food and ceased to care for himself regularly; his robes did smell rather ripe after being left unwashed for weeks even months - time was a blur when he wasn't keeping track of his life anymore -, his complexion was pale and even sported a slight unshaven look because he never looked at his reflection since he hardly walked past a river, not to mention having enough to drink sometimes; he was always mired in depression from being left alone and neglected for too long, because he kept thinking about the "what if's, such as, what if he stayed behind, and what if he said he'd follow the man who said that he was "going this way" - so much so, that a near-permanent frown was etched onto his brows, his lips perpetually curved downwards, he looked like a lifeless doll being dragged up the mountains and now, the cliffs, that anytime, a gust of frosty wind may blow anytime and send his shivering, feverish, frail body flying off the edge and into the deep ravines below.

Wei Ying sighed in resignation, and slapped himself lightly on the cheeks to clear his mind. Too many "what if's and "I should have"s have dominated his mind lately, and it was very unhealthy - both physically and mentally. He decided to indulge in one of the few remaining pastimes that reminded him of happier times, and hoped to stave off any further depressing or, heaven forbid, suicidal thoughts over leaving the so-called confidant-cum-soulmate for petty reasons such as career options - comparing a glorious Chief Cultivator versus an anonymous jobless vagabond, is a no-brainer - and directions in life - Han Guang Jun has so much more going on for his future, compared to him, a man whose life ended sixteen years ago and he'd just closed the last chapters of his storybook and solved his mysteries, so there is really nothing else left to keep him moving forward... or, is there? So, he pulled out his favourite bamboo flute made by the man in question, his lips automatically found their place on the surface of the smooth wooden instrument, and his fingers immediately glided over a few holes that had been carved with loving attention, to produce a masterpiece written in the name of their undeclared love.

His flute-playing skills remained impeccable despite the trembling fingers from cold and hunger, and his garments were soggy, wet and chilled from passing grey mountain fogs. Each note was filled with his heartfelt feelings, sharp and shrill, pierced the heavy and choked cloudy atmosphere in the hopes that he may find a shaft of light to illuminate where he stood, perhaps an angel from the heavens to reach out and deliver him from this sad, miserable existence.

Past the first passage of the musical piece, he heard footsteps rustling through the grass from behind. He stilled and silence reigned once again atop the cliffs. He turned around; from afar, low-lying clouds billowed by and he thought he saw a shadowy image of a man - perhaps a mirage borned of his desperation and feverish state - but he smiled, oh, how uplifting he felt when he smiled, the first in such a long time throughout his soul-searching journey into loneliness.

He stumbled forward towards the imaginary image, which kept shifting in position, sometimes closer, sometimes further ahead, but he pursued the blurred figure that didn't seem corporeal or solid to the touch. Soon, the grass beneath his worn-out shoes gave way to stony, sharp edges that sloped dangerously downwards, and he slipped on the damp, slippery rocks in more than a few instances, ignoring the sounds of fragments tumbling off steep gradients but never quite following up with a thud or splash, because the ravines were incredibly deep chasms, but Wei Ying kept chasing after the shadowy outlines of a man he believed to be--

Wei Wuxian, once known as the fearsome Yiling Patriarch, wielder of the greatest form of the Dark Arts, was said to have fallen off a high cliff one foggy day in the mountain ranges surrounding Gusu, was never found and even if he was, he would've never really recovered after that.

.

At least, according to the tales weaved within the walls of the Jingshi, that was how the story of Wei Wuxian ended. Wei Ying didn't like it one bit because of the generally and reasonably Bad Ending for his character - still the anti-hero, from his perspective. His suspicions were fuelled by further clues - of how the er gongzi never looked at him straight in the eyes when he narrated the bedtime story, of how his tone or choice of words lacked conviction and emphasis, of how each time there were slight inconsistencies in the tale. This time, it was 'footsteps' that made the protagonist turn around while playing the flute - the day before, it was just 'a footstep', as an example.

"How can you be so sure that I was thinking of you when I fell? You weren't even there when that happened. By the way, did I really fall off a cliff? I can't remember what happened after we parted ways on that mountain, but I distinctly recalled pulling on Lil's Apple's reins and waving behind at you when I walked away. I even made an awesome poem about mountains and rivers at that time, do you remember that? Let's see, that poem was..."

Lan Zhan dabbed a washcloth over a drop of soup trickling down the careless man's chin, even when the latter continued to rant at his dissatisfaction about the whole setup of the story; real or not, Lan Zhan would never confirm its veracity, and he often responded with his typical silent treatment - which wordlessly told Wei Ying that he wasn't getting answers anytime soon, not when he was still mostly bedridden and under house arrest, and could use a bit more downtime than getting riled up over bedtime stories narrated by a man whose brief sentences consist of less words than one could count using fingers.

“It’s just a hunch. You can believe it or not. Your choice.”

Wei Ying licked his chops and watched how Lan Zhan carefully spooned more old cucumber soup, plus a tasty, melt-in-your-mouth chunk of the gourd, and a strip of herbal chicken meat, then blew on it five times to cool it down, before serving. Mmm, delish.

No matter what happend, Lan Zhan will always be there to pull me out of trouble and save me, Wei Ying smiled thoughtfully and eyed at the man he called confidant, soulmate, may-----be boyfriend (he could imagine his detractors rolling their eyes or in their graves), and distantly, he wondered if they were married in a previous lifetime - because calling him ‘ lao gong ’ didn’t sound too far-fetched either. His heart swelled every time he noticed the meticulous care given since the day he woke up in the Jingshi (again, he vaguely remember chastising himself) and found himself incapacitated, but in a nice way.

According to the nameless servants loyal to the Han Guang Jun that periodically enter the Jingshi to help make the bed, sweep the floor and wipe the surfaces of the room’s decor and furniture, some time must have passed after his epic fall (that he could never remember, strangely); border patrols found him lying in a pool of blood near a riverbank at the foot of dangerously steep and high cliffs, and Wei Ying was said to have suffered brain-damaging concussions, multiple critical wounds and internal hemorrhage all over the body, nearly bled to death and broke all his bones, tendons and ligaments, qi meridians; even a tree branch found its way through the man’s rib cage but missed the heart - thus, his golden core was shattered beyond recovery. Wei Ying was horrified at the descriptions and checked his body - sure enough, there were many large but nearly invisible scars that were healing well, thanks to the incredible magical potions, herbs and healing treatments drawn up from ancient texts from the Library Pavillion of the Cloud Recesses.

Regardless of the healing, the servants said, it was obvious that Wei Ying knocked his head too hard and more than just once while falling - thus, explaining the loss of memory when he regained consciousness. Moreover, as demonstrated by the rather weak, uncoordinated and sluggish movements of his limbs - he had trouble rising up from the bed, feed and clothe himself, hold an ink-brush, let alone try to stand, even with a walking cane -, the doctors in the Cloud Recesses pronounced his body to be permanently damaged, and in cultivation terms, an invalid. Wei Ying could no longer practise cultivation and he had lost all capabilities to wield qi energy and magics.

Wei Ying was devastated at the news, and he was depressed and frequently cried in bed, hidden from the outside world by Jingshi's comforting cocoon. Lan Zhan made all the difference despite Wei Ying's seemingly doomed future - the er gongzi spent nearly his entire days and nights in the building, talking, soothing, accompanying the young man, with some rotation of duties with the servants, doctors and very few, very rare other visitors who were allowed to see to Wei Ying's needs. Wei Ying had the impression that he wasn't a celebrated guest of the Cloud Recesses, since everything was done in hushed tones, under the shadows of secrecy, plenty of warnings to 'keep it down' and not to disturb others, and the fact that access to the Jingshi was restricted and there was never a surprise visit, not even a peek, from typical young adventurous, curious disciples, so surely not everyone knew or was aware of his presence safely stowed inside the Jingshi.

Lan Zhan spent an inordinate amount of time playing healing music with his guqin in a room scented with sandalwood incense, so that Wei Ying could meditate and calm his shaken soul. He made sure Wei Ying followed a simple routine every day of:

Waking up in a nest of sleep-warmed pillows and blankets on double king-size bed (sometimes, if he was up by five in the morning, he would be greeted by the lovely view of the broad expanse of Lan Zhan's chest snug against his face - he wasn't sure why the er gongzi wanted to sleep beside him, or why there was a double bed in a room meant for a bachelor - but he wasn't complaining because it's the gongzi's room after all, and the man's all-night presence was a welcome treat to ward off nightmares - plus, Lan Zhan smelled quite nice, mildly sweet, beneath the layers of sandalwood and incense-flavoured smoky odours),

Getting a wipe-down with a washcloth soaked in heated fragrant bathwater (it took several attempts, but eventually, the humiliated, red-faced Wei Ying stopped resisting and allowed the er gongzi to undress him - because he was kind-of disabled with his limbs still covered with bandages, and his joints ached badly and couldn't bend that much anymore - and miraculously, Lan Zhan knew how and where to wash him, even in the most private areas. Lan Zhan never showed any look of horror or interest even while squeezing a washcloth around his soft penis, gently dabbing on his sensitive balls, or wiping soapy water off his hairy pubes - if there were any, the older man was a master of feigning disinterest and kept an impassive, stone-cold facade at all times),

Having his bodily needs taken care of (it was mortifying, the younger man admitted, to be carried to the outdoors to pee and poo under watchful eyes - but it was better than being incontinent on a soiled bed - and soon, Wei Ying was a natural at peeing and pooing with the er gongzi's help because logically, these were strictly physical, health-related and hygienic activities - pride and ego be damned, the younger man didn't mind being held by those strong arms so that he could squat properly and safely, then release whatever that needed to be released, gases, solids, liquids and the ilk),

Having his hair trimmed, washed and combed (because for some unspoken reasons, men in that day and age had to keep long hair and it would be a concern if his hair became unruly, unmanageable or worse, became flea-infested for petty reasons such as not being able to comb one's hair. Lan Zhan was a maestro at keeping Wei Ying's hair in line, and there was always a neat topknot on his scalp, and never a stray piece of hair fell into his face, in which Wei Ying was grateful for),

Having three square meals a day, two snacks and one supper, made of simple but nutritious and mostly liquid-based meals (he always thought the servants of Gusu Lan cooked the dishes that could be picked-up by anyone during mealtimes - much like a take-out -, but after watching the er gongzi regularly leaving the Jingshi at predetermined times, usually after asking Wei Ying what he wanted to eat, then returning half an hour later with a tray full of steaming-hot goodies of exactly what he stated that he wanted to have for his meal - Wei Ying realized the secret behind the er gongzi 's actions and was mind-blown at the possibility of ordering anything off the menu - including spicy dishes, though he was discouraged at having too much of those due to his delicate recovering stomach, and Wei Ying had to agree, after suffering a bout of diarrhea just after one ambitious try),

Having his muscles and joints exercised in a similar manner as a professionally-prescribed and well-planned physiotherapy rehabilitation (Wei Ying enjoyed being challenged to move his limbs and a chance to walk around the immediate vicinity of the Jingshi for some fresh air, and he would obey the er gongzi 's instructions to return, especially when he was covered with a bit of sweat and his muscles started to complain, or if it started to rain), Having some time for reading and anything else that could keep Wei Ying's mind off his condition (which was essential for his recovery, since feeling useful and productive meant that his mental state improved, which also contributed to his physical energy levels and intrinsic motivation to do more and thrive even in such challenging and formidable situations),

And, to save the best for the last - Wei Ying received very personal, sometimes suspiciously affectionate, attention from the er gongzi in the form of unsolicited and unexpected full-body massage (Lan Zhan's fingers worked magic even better than the doctors' acupuncture or potions from the healers' cauldrons), scratching (on the back and anywhere else where his useless limbs couldn't reach), and ear-cleaning (he was squeamish at first, but he found his favourite slice of heaven by lying on the er gongzi's lap, and he always fell into a wonderful dreamless sleep after the first, intimate excavation works in each tenderly serviced ear).

At this rate, Wei Ying thought he wouldn't mind staying or hiding in Gusu forever, as long as Lan Zhan was by his side. The man giggled at the idea of settling down - finally - and starting over as an ordinary peasant - which wasn't quite as insane as it sounded, because he was, in fact, already disqualified from all manners of the supernatural and the superpowered, had to end his days of adventuring into unknown lands, fight off bandits and awesome monsters, or hunt for exciting treasures - but he could still wield a shovel in a farm, or earn a pretty piece of gold with his gift of gab if he sharpened his selling skills - probably.

That was three months ago, six months after they parted ways on the iconic mountains outside of the Cloud Recesses.

Returning to the present, Wei Ying's health and mood had vastly improved - as seen with his appetite, which included five emptied bowls of congee, soups, vegetables, fish and fruits on the tray, plus a chicken drumstick bone picked clean by Lan Zhan's fingers and fed mouthful by mouthful to Wei Ying like a mother bird would do for its chick -, and he had become very close, dependent and clingy to the said man - in a good way, at least as seen on Lan Zhan's soft and barely visible smiles each time the younger man whined his name in an endearing manner - though, such intimate and saccharine sweet acts were reserved only when they were the only ones in the Jingshi, and when Lan Zhan had his eyes on and only on Wei Ying.

As the older man took the tray and bowls to the entrance of the Jingshi and placed them on the doorsteps - servants would come and take them away later - Wei Ying checked his abdomen to see if the meal had caused his thin frame to fill out a little bit more. It was a preposterous notion, of course, but he couldn't help but to wish that he'd gain back the state of his former body - which the doctors already dismissed as impossible. He sighed in disappointment and leaned against the bed frame, pillowed by a cushion against his back.

“Ah... look at my body, it's wasted, bony and soft, with a bit of flab on the tummy because I've been sitting and lying down almost the whole day. I can't feel my golden core anymore, my muscles are unresponsive, I can't even clothe myself properly or take care of my basic bodily needs,” he whined, and illustrated his inability by stretching one hand to the other side - a basic pose needed to tie some button knots, and he winced at the pain throbbing from scars on his arms. “Lan Zhan, you promise you'll look after me for the rest of your life right? Don't back out on your words, because I'm an invalid now! I rely entirely on you from now onwards!” he called out, not too loud, lest outsiders hear his voice. He always did that - telling the other man that he was handicapped and needed extra tender loving care - perhaps it was a (bad) habit borned out of a deep-seated anxiety or a need for reassurance - in which Lan Zhan never hesitated to give, to promise, to guarantee, without ever raising a tiny bit of discontent on his part.

“Mn. I’ve resigned from my post. So that I can live here and focus on what is important to me. Since we’re staying in the Cloud Recesses, the servants and I will see to your needs. You’ll be able to live here as comfortably as possible. You’re safe with me, Wei Ying,” Lan Zhan replied casually and returned to the bedside with a washcloth to wipe Wei Ying after every meal.

Wei Ying stared hard at the approaching man, and in mock anger. “Ah... your actions and words are very cheeky, I’m blushing even as we speak! Stop doing that!” and he crossed his arm and looked away petulantly, trying to hide his embarrassment from such flirtatious exchanges - unbelievably, coming from the former standoffish er gongzi .

Lan Zhan ignored Wei Ying’s exaggerated antics, and sat on the bed - the mattress dipped at the welcoming weight. He proceeded to peel Wei Ying’s hands away from the chest and started cleaning each finger with the cloth. Wei Ying felt frustrated, red-faced and very, very loved - simultaneously - that he responded in the only way he knew best to get the other man to do nicer things for him, and make him feel better from the lovey-dovey-ness. A sneak attack, of course.

“L... Lan Zhan! T-These undergarments are very thin! Even after having the hot meal, I still feel cold! Do something about it!” he complained - a little half-heartedly, because he started feeling guilty and additionally, more embarrassment, the moment he puffed out his chest to show the man how little he wore while indoors; due to the amount of healing salves, patches and whatnots all over his body, and the skin on some parts of his body was still sensitive from the treatments, Wei Ying insisted to wear as little as possible. Moreover, the Jingshi was sometimes a little warm as windows tended to remain closed even at daytime, so thin garments were a must; and at nights, Wei Ying secretly relished partial skin-to-skin contact when he deliberately rolled into Lan Zhan’s arms and faked a few snores.

The older man was perfectly in tune with Wei Ying's wants. "Mn. Come, let me hold you, keep you warm," he said calmly, patiently, then put away the washcloth and spread his arms invitingly. Wei Ying nnnnh'd like a spoiled child, turned around, and effortlessly, without thinking twice, leaned back and let his body fall into a comfortable human bed called Lan er gongzi, with great firm yet pillow-like pecs (and a nice, strong, reassuring heartbeat beneath), six-pack abs that seemed to have sunken into a bit of paunch on the abdomen, brimming with perfect body heat, a strong embrace from the sides that hooked themselves around his navel like the best seat-belt ever, and the most desirable baritone voice and arousing sounds of breathing echoing the room from behind his ears.

"Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan," Wei Ying mischievously chanted on the bed and rocked himself a bit to the rhythm of the beloved name. He yawned at the end, unexpectedly, because Lan er gongzi had become Wei Ying's one and only source of comfort in life, throughout a full spectrum of turbulent to peaceful times, and he could completely relax into Lan Zhan's embrace and feel his soul replenish with that man's gentleness and kindness.

"Mn. I'm here, I'm here, I'm here."

Three feather-light kisses, one on the nape, one on the earlobe, and one on the shoulder. Wei Ying giggled instinctively at the ticklish feelings, and for that moment, believed that everything in his upended world will turn out to be perfectly fine.

Somewhere in the distance, a guard from a watch tower beat some drums to announce the time, and to inform everyone in the Cloud Recesses of the return of Sect Leader Lan Xi Chen from the Carp Tower in Lanling. Preparations to welcome their leader back to the Gusu Lan headquarters are well underway.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 136

It was said that when Jin Guangyao's treachery was exposed, the mysteries of the Yin Metal and fierce corpses' attacks were solved, and the Dark Arts master Yiling Patriarch was finally vindicated of the slew of accusations and murders that occurred nearly two decades ago, during one eventful Summer. Sources familiar with the events reported that the intriguing man parted ways with the then-newly appointed Chief Cultivator, Han Guang Jun, in the mountains outside of the Cloud Recesses, with the reins to a rather familiar donkey in hand. Those who were obsessed with the remaining tail-end of the epic saga followed the trails left by the Yiling Patriarch, much like hardcore readers of a fantastical novel chasing the prized epilogue chapter, so that they, too, can finally lay their fanatical pursuit to a deserving rest.

The last paragraph probably read this way, and would become part of fables passed down over generations by words of storytellers, and would eventually be forgotten since nothing was written in literature:

“Sometime during the end of Fall, border patrols of Gusu found a blood-soaked, broken body by a riverbank beneath some high cliffs; the victim was said to be dressed in black, and some speculated that the body belonged to the Yiling Patriarch himself, if not an anonymous unfortunate traveller. Dead men do not reveal their secrets, and the matter was never investigated, nor the reason for the apparent accident, or at worst, a case of suicide. In any case, there were no further mentions of the Yiling Patriarch, and everyone thought this vague incident brought a final, though hardly satisfying, closure to the books. As the first snow of Winter fell and painted the mountains of Gusu in soft hues of grey and white, just as the signs and tracks of people who passed by were erased over time, so too, have people stopped talking about the enigmatic figure named Wei Wuxian, and his name was relegated to the obscure annals of mankind's convoluted and long history since time immemorial."

What a wonderful end that would make to a literary masterpiece, if it had ever been written - except that nobody cared because all eyes and ears were directed to the Grand Cultivation Council, whose new Chief Cultivator suddenly resigned just months after warming up the Chief's seat due to "very distressing personal and family reasons" - even the legendary 'Cries of the Red Clouds' signal flare was launched and bathed the Cloud Recesses in blood-red luminescence for an entire, fateful night, which drew out Ze Wu Jun out of his brief self-imposed seclusion and clan leaders from all corners of Gusu, to converge into a grand meeting in the heart of the province that lasted for many days.

With the Gusu Lan temporarily out of the picture due to internal affairs, the surviving major sects vied for the coveted rule of the Council:

The Lanling Jin's reputation had been dealt a terrible reputational blow despite having many other promising candidates among their ranks, and possessed incredible wealth and resources at their disposal;

The Yunmeng Jiang was reluctant to put up a fight after being involved in and personally scarred by prior events. Although they have sizable armies of cultivators and wield enough military clout to garner decent respect from the others, they were still one of the poorest sects, their leader was considered too young and inexperienced, and to the displeasure of many, linked to the former Yiling Patriarch with influences from the much-maligned Dark Arts;

The Qinghe Nie escaped unscathed from the previous scandals but their numbers remained pitifully small and incompetent, although they inherited large amounts of armaments and magics from their previous Sect Leader and were still considered to be a serious contender.

A handful of smaller sects rose up to the challenge and demanded for a chance to have a say in the Council's meeting halls still headquartered in the Carp Tower, so the world of cultivation was once again rocked to its core, then thrust into a series of violent demonstrations and showcasing of raw power in the form of conflict and land grabs, mindless destruction of property and mass murders; grand competitions and tournaments between heroes, champions and leaders; adventures in search of ancient, mythical and powerful artifacts and weapons that would give sects an extra edge over one another; endless political drama and bickering in the dark, twisted hallways amongst Council meeting chambers - the meetings between elites of the sects were marred by fraying tempers, baseless accusations, taking sides and worse, taking bribes, and biased arbiters trying to diffuse the situation so that everything returned back to square one; even hiring mercenaries to carry out assassinations, poison incense smoke and wines, and set up traps that would kill victims and made to look like suicides - the grim picture was made messier and murkier with the involvement of the Imperial Court of the capital city of Chang'an, where representatives have been sent to meddle in the affairs of the Grand Cultivation Council, with the intention to seize control of the entire cultivation world and unite everyone under the Emperor of Chang'an.

All in all, for the common layman, the entire spectacle proved to be an entertaining read in the periodicals, a way for gambling dens to place their bets on winners and losers, and as a perfect subject to gossip about in teahouses over brews, liquors and snacks. Farmers still had to plant rice fields and grow enough food; artisans needed to invent and craft things for everyday use and for enriching the cultures of the Middle Kingdom; merchants earn their gold in trading activities to keep supply lines open and to prosper the economy; scholars study to advance literary and scientific progress towards a better future; and nobles and officials do their part to govern and run the nation towards a more civil society. The world of cultivation is rife with violence and unnecessary warfare, so the longer the void of leadership and the suffering of innocent bystanders, the faster the descent into irrelevance from modern times, that the entire topic risked becoming a joke upon itself, and that someday, people may decide that enough is enough, to turn their backs - even outlaw - the entire art of cultivation and spellcasting, and let the legends fade away into extinction for the greater good of Mankind.

.

The passage of time grinds to a standstill when frozen crystals sway, spin and twirl down from the blue skies, then descend gently onto the ground, unchanged. The beauty of each snowflake is locked in its glimmering geometrical form, unique in its pattern to set itself apart from thousands, probably millions of others in the same landscape of a featureless, barren plot of snow-covered piece of land located around the Jingshi. Lost in an ocean of ice and left to the elements, every crystalline individual eventually melts and blends into the thawing earth, becoming droplets of snowmelt that eventually soak and disappear beneath the surface.

Then, a mighty shovel comes along, looms threateningly above for a while, before slamming brutally into the hard soil. With an energetic twist, an explosion of wet slurry, stones, dirt and soggy plant material gets flung into the air, and sends waves of refreshing early Spring air mixing into the freshly tilled garden.

Wen Ning worked hard to crush the grip of winter upon the land, so that flower and vegetable seedlings could find a comfortable new home to grow their roots.

The pace of time picks up with each lively blow, like the pounding of heartbeats of animals that slowly wake up from their hibernation slumber. Shrilly birdsongs, trickling streams, a few fluttering insects, and even a whoosh of chilly breeze add to the orchestra of an awakening Nature. There are some movements beyond the corner of the Cloud Recesses where the Jingshi is nestled in; workers carrying goods between buildings, young men marching - never sprinting - through the hallways after classes, children laughing and running around with toys under the watchful eyes of their mothers, scholars and teachers shuffling about with piles of books and scrolls, and a few groups grumbled and grunted while practising martial arts in the courtyards and in freezing springs, in the traditional belief that working out in torturously cold temperatures can strengthen one's body and sharpen one's mind.

Three boys in their late teens trotted towards the Jingshi with armfuls of trays filled with food; their cheeks rosy from the cold, their faces delight with pride despite being smeared with grease and oily sauces, since they were requested to cook today's meal and bring the banquet from the communal kitchens - and they have plenty to show off this time. Their help was much appreciated, since the master of the house, Han Guang Jun, admitted that he had a few back-to-back appointments; the trio volunteered to take charge of domestic matters as payment for the great and marvellous Han Guang Jun's generosity and kindness.

Lan Jing Yi had been given special recognition by the Gusu Lan master, seemingly for an undisclosed list of acts of bravery, leadership and night-hunting, amongst other valuable services rendered that were never detailed in writing, and was elected as the leader of his squad, as well as one of the trusted personal bodyguards of the Twin Jades of Gusu Lan. The boy never really knew what he did to receive such a prestigious rank, but in the true spirit of Gusu Lan, he never questioned his elders' decisions either. Besides getting a whole lot more attention and praise from the sect, he was tasked to be at Han Guang Jun's beck and call and to guard the Jingshi from its nosy neighbours.

Lan Si Zhui, formerly a disciple of the Gusu Lan sect, was grateful to return to the Cloud Recesses just when the first Winter snowstorms hit the Great Eastern Coasts of the Middle Kingdom; both he and Wen Ning had just started adventuring to earn life experiences and some money from ridding villages of the undead, vengeful spirits and other disturbances that needed to be exorcised - however, they hadn't made enough to pay for a roof above their heads, and hardly anyone would be willing to seek out their help during the cold, tough times in the relatively quiet, dead winter season. Han Guang Jun specifically invited the two to live in a shed converted into a decent living space equipped with a fire stove, located on the piece of land situated behind the Jingshi - with warm meals and accommodation paid by the man himself, in exchange for some domestic help, particularly in caring for someone special.

Jin Ru Lan, who, like many young men of Jin lineage, had been unwillingly drafted into a long list of fighters in the tournaments organized by the Grand Cultivation Council to select worthy candidates for key positions for the next Council sitting - including the post of the Chief Cultivator, once the tournaments reach their final stage; he was (un)fortunate enough to meet Sect Leader Ze Wu Jun in one of the preliminaries, and was royally kicked in his ass - actually, he was smacked on the buttocks with a xiao flute, because a real kick from the legendary man would maim, and in all likelihood, kill the boy straight out. A teary-eyed Ru Lan confessed to Ze Wu Jun while lying prone on the ground with a split, bruised ass, that the fight was a ploy by the Jin elders to remove all traces of the deceased Jin Guangyao, his network and his influences from the ranks of the Jin family. The boy divulged the dark secrets of the Lanling Jin in the fighting arena whilst a frighteningly tall Ze Wu Jun towered menacingly above him, and declared that he was merely a pawn for the Jins' political games and had no say in the matter. The boy's defeat meant that he was barred from returning to the Carp Tower until he could find some way to prove himself and salvage his pride, and that he needed to seek refuge with his remaining trustworthy, blood-related link to the outside world, his uncle in Yunmeng.

The first gusts of violent wintry winds blew then, leaving the boy with torn, open pants shivering on the hard dirt, and a very hesitant Ze Wu Jun couldn't help but to pity the boy whose fate vaguely echoed his former confidant, A-Yao; there was always animosity between their sects, partly stemming from the time when Ze Wu Jun's younger brother slaughtered a number of Jin guards, at the marble stairs leading to the Carp Tower, to rescue the then-masked Yiling Patriarch when latter's identity was exposed, during the last summer. Nevertheless, Jin Ru Lan was given mercy and taken in by the Gusu Lan until the Winter season passed, and he was promised an escort to Yunmeng when insect calls herald the arrival of Spring and its better weather conditions for travel. The boy, fondly called Jin Ling, was left to Jing Yi's care, and was thrilled to meet Si Zhui and Wen Ning when he had his first dinner in a warm home within a snow swept Cloud Recesses.

"Wen Ning!" a brash, loud voice called out from a crack of an opened window, "I see the three coming back with lunch! Go and wash your hands, and help set up the table!" followed by a series of hacking coughs.

"Enn! Wei gongzi , I heard you! (知道啦) You don't have to shout because you're still recovering and your breathing isn't steady yet! I'll come in soon, and help you with your bandages too!" the fierce corpse replied with a grin and set his shovel to the crumbly soil. Wen Ning had done a terrific job since morning - being impervious to the extremes in temperatures meant that he'd been tilling the soil since a freezing early Spring dawn and would earn a few more silver pieces from the owner of the property. The land around him had been turned over, and a few ditches had been dug for irrigation; not too far away, a large hole had been excavated for a lotus pond too.

Wei Ying closed the window to keep out the cold air that sucked away energy from his feeble body. On the outside, he looked alright with some healing scars and lesions, though his arms were wrapped into clubs and he had to use crutches, after accidentally spilling a pitcher of scalding hot water onto himself when he tried to fill a wooden basin for a footbath; he couldn't hold anything heavier than a basket of fruits, and shivered easily in the cold ever since losing his golden core after his body, nervous system, critical musculature and its qi meridians were irreparably broken; without usable limbs, he relied heavily on the three boys and Wen Ning for his personal needs, and to keep Jingshi in a respectable condition while its owner was out with his usual daily businesses.

The young man yawned and thought of changing out of his pyjamas - and it was already close to noon -, but then realized that his fingers were trapped underneath the layers of gauze, so he couldn't even undress from robes tied with button knots and sashes. He used the rough texture of the fabric to lazily scratch his neck, and wondered if the owner of the house would return soon to join them for lunch, or if he would have to again, rely on the boys to clothe and feed him. It didn't really matter, he thought; Si Zhui was an expert in taking care of seniors (and senior citizens alike, but Wei Ying didn't want to be called an 'old man' because he was, arguably, technically just a few years older than the trio in a resurrected body of Mo Xuan Yu) - Si Zhui always happily volunteered to take care of Wei Ying's demands out of feelings of filial piety and of a shared past, which was very much praised and supported by Wen Ning; Jing Yi, on the other hand, acted more like the aloof, annoying, bossy 'big brother' due to his elevated status in the hierarchy; Jin Ling, being an outsider and an unwelcome Jin refugee in a place full of Lans, preferred to observe from the sides, share a few awkward interactions and moments with Wei Ying as distant relatives of sorts, quietly learn from the two older boys and later, surprise everyone with his smartass-ery, sometimes.

Deep down, Wei Ying was acutely aware that the boys and Wen Ning would leave once the mountain passes around the Cloud Recesses reopen following Spring. He'd miss their company ever since they joined him in his eventful (but forgettable) recuperation spent entirely within the four walls of Jingshi. Although they lived separately from the man, they'd left their indelible marks everywhere in Wei Ying's life since his awakening :-

Wen Ning's tireless toiling with heavy manual labour to keep life in Jingshi running as comfortably as possible during the blizzard days and nights, and now, due to Wei Ying's incessant pleas and Han Guang Jun's one-worded "Mn" seal of approval, he helped to make the empty piece of land behind the Jingshi as productive as possible. Wen Ning was eager to earn his keep and prove that he has become a better man since learning to live independently from his creator - for every task he accomplished to prepare a pleasant, farming lifestyle for the former Yiling Patriarch-turned-commoner, Han Guang Jun agreed to pay him a small sum, which the (ex-)fierce corpse could pocket and use to treat his nephew (of sorts) snacks, finance the boy's outdoor adventures in the coming seasons, or buy gifts and equipment as needed.

Si Zhui learnt, through painful, sometimes humiliating trial-and-errors, of how important living skills were, from his first outing after deciding to part with the former Yiling Patriarch in summer with a simple but remarkably unforgettable leg-hug. Thus, he spent an inordinate amount of time with residents of the Jingshi to learn how to repair his clothes and shoes, the best ways of washing his garments and keeping them clean, cook tasty but simple meals for a man and a fierce corpse, perform basic first aid on people and maintenance on Wen Ning, and a host of other survival skills that the maestro of wanderlusts - the former Yiling Patriarch - was more than delighted to share. Soon, Wei Ying's meagre wardrobe included not only Gusu Lan white (mourning-like) robes, but also some more colourful tunics and trousers that Si Zhui experimented with and fitted perfectly; he also enjoyed - to his palate's joy after surviving on months of plain or mildly flavoured liquid-y foods - sampling Si Zhui's homemade dishes and herbal soups, and most of his bandages - both neat and messy ones - decorated his body like medals worn with pride.

Jin Ling, the self-proclaimed dog whisperer, taught Wei Ying some tricks on how to avoid confrontation with those dastardly canines, listen and learn the language of mountain wolves, and even made a set of light bow and arrows for him as a peace offering for all the hardships, hurt, resentment and painful memories that lingered after the rather inconclusive end at the Guanyin Temple. With warming relations even in the deep of winter, Wei Ying shared stories from the past over hot meals with him and the other boys, including those of Jin Ling's uncle and departed mother, encompassing happy, funny, exciting, horrific and sad ones. Jin Ling was especially interested in tales about his parents since his uncle hadn't been very forthcoming to supposedly protect the boy's fragile emotions, so Wei Ying indulged in the request, knowing that Jin Ling had come of age and deserved to know more about his origins. Soon, the two embarked on little projects to pen down Wei Ying's oral history on paper, and they produced little notebooks filled with details about the events that transpired from more than sixteen years ago, along with family trees, real-life accounts from an external perspective, and close-ups on first-hand opinions about the Jins that probably nobody ever knew (or dared to say).

Jing Yi, who has the brightest future amongst them, took every challenge and request in his stride; he tagged along with his two best friends and helped in every way he could - because as a firm believer of karma, he knew that the better he treated the former Yiling Patriarch, the more favours he'd receive from not just Han Guang Jun, but from the rest of the Lan family council too. He was torn between wanting to follow Si Zhui, Wen Ning and even Jin Ling out of Gusu once Spring thaws, or remain in his home town to closely follow the developments of the Grand Cultivation Council that seemed to gravitate towards Lanling and Nie sects, or even northwards towards the capital city of Chang'an. While biding his time until the point where the crucial life-changing decision needed to be made, he practised his cultivation under the personal supervision of the Twin Jades of Gusu Lan, and kept his spirits up by listening to Wei Ying's entertaining stories. In return, Wei Ying considered him as an exceptional disciple, particularly since it was Jing Yi who lead the border patrol that found his red-soaked body beneath mist-covered cliffs around the end of Fall and safely brought him to the Cloud Recesses; the four juniors that were there to witness everything, swore to secrecy and their loyalty to Jing Yi, and became special servants who continued to privately serve the residents of the Jingshi, away from prying eyes and nosy neighbours. Those boys were rather ordinary but were really obedient, respectful and kind-hearted, like true-blue Gusu Lans; they helped to keep the Jingshi in a meticulously clean condition, tended to his needs under Jing Yi's guidance when the owner of the house wasn't around, and gave the best group body-massages - they served Wei Ying like how a harem of boys would pander to a king's whims, so the man had nothing to complain about. Wei Ying never quite remembered their names and personal histories, so he simply called them Lan Jia, Lan Yi, Lan Bing, and Lan Ding out of practical convenience (蓝甲, 蓝乙, 蓝丙, 蓝丁; "A, B, C, D").

Soon, there was a knock on the door, and the visitors did not wait for any response before rushing in. Wei Ying wooted in glee on the king-sized bed the moment he heard socked footsteps inside the Jingshi - past the grand front meeting room which was usually used by Han Guang Jun and any official guests, then to the middle chamber where a large dining table resided - and there were clangings of trays being set down, plates and cutlery being arranged, and the first whiffs of mouth-watering smells -, then one pair of pitter-pattering footsteps rushed through the study room at the back where one can read, meditate, play musical instruments and perform other scholarly, intellectual activities accompanied by minimalist decor and a calming atmosphere, and finally, Si Zhi's face poked out from the entrance of the bedroom.

“Wei qianbei !” the boy, now rightfully a young man, beamed, “Oh thank goodness you’re awake! I was afraid you may still be sleeping past eleven in the morning! Han Guang Jun asked for some help with lunch arrangements earlier today, so we made many delicious dishes in the communal kitchens... and guess what? On the way back, we bumped into Ze Wu Jun and him, and they’ve just finished a meeting with the elders! Han Guang Jun invited Ze Wu Jun for lunch here, they will arrive within the hour!”

Wei Ying’s eyes went wide and he started adjusting his pyjamas - oh, how awful he’d look, having lunch in his nightwear and with unbrushed hair and teeth, unwashed and unshaven face and probably some icky body odours as well. Si Zhui easily grasped the man’s alarm, and assured him, “Don’t worry, there’s enough time for a quick wipe and I’ll make sure you appear presentable in front of the Twin Jades with a fresh set of bandages.” Si Zhui wasted no time and walked into the bedroom with a wooden basin filled of life-savers in one hand - vials of soap, shampoo and fragrances, washcloths, a grooming kit, and a small pile of rolls of bandages, ready for use - and a pitcher of hot water in the other. “Jing Yi’s already running out to the fields to get Wen Ning prepared too, and Jin Ling will make sure there will be enough chairs in the dining room and that everything is properly set up on the table,” he added.

Wei Ying sighed in relief. He was glad that the boys knew what to do, so he only had to raise his arms to let himself be undressed, pampered and prepped for a busy day ahead.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 137

4:45 am

Long before the first rays of sunlight break into dawn, the four servants randomly named Lan Jia, Lan Yi, Lan Bing, and Lan Ding, gently knock on the door before entering. They carry with them wooden basins filled with steaming hot water, wash cloths, bottles of fragrant soap and perfumes, aromatic oils, sets of acupuncture needles and acupressure mats, rolls and sticks.

5:00 am

By the time topless Lan Zhan wakes up beside an equally topless Wei Ying on their shared, sleep-warmed bed filled with pillows and tangled blankets (always on the younger man's side, since Wei Ying is known to perform acrobatics whilst asleep), his strong, muscular arms still around the other smaller man in a snug embrace, Wei Ying moans incessantly - two acupuncture needles stuck on his temples to keep him peacefully sedated, while four pairs of oiled hands worked on one delighted foot; Wei Ying gets a heavenly foot massage until both his feet become numb, relaxed, swollen from having fluids circulated, pooled then fill up every nook and cranny, veins and baby-soft skin, joints and bony protrusions; the four pairs of hands do not stop there, and continue their pleasurable journey up the legs to the inner thighs, where every last strand of flesh and muscle is expertly kneaded, rolled and gently squeezed, that Wei Ying's body collapses into its own bonelessly, that he dreams of cotton candy, inexplicable euphoria and floating sensations, of being paralyzed and dipped into a jar of honey, trapped and unable to move, but he can't really think or figure out what is happening because he is experiencing a very relaxing form of brain fog.

5:30 am

Lan Zhan participates in the daily ritual of pleasuring his beloved, without the latter's knowledge, of course. With Wei Ying being so pliant and obedient while barely conscious, he easily locks his lips and indulges in deep kisses and titillating tongue-play with the younger man, whom he remembers to be his spouse from a previous timeline. He takes his sweet time to molest every inch of lovely Wei Ying's skin, inhaling his body odours and licks off the sheen of sweat beginning to form on the erogenous zones, and pays particular attention the breasts; the nipples swell up nicely from constant groping, and fat is slowly building up on the pectorals - he is patient to mould and shape Wei Ying's body to his desires -, the navel twitches with each swirl of tongue into the crevice, and shivers when that wet, saliva-coated muscle trails down the treasure path of hair and Wei Ying-flavoured scents, down, down to find the prized pot of glistening pre-cum slicked gold nestled in dark curls, at the end of the rainbow, figuratively speaking. Wei Ying moans.

6:00 am

The first rooster crows, but the Jingshi is already very much alive with tasty sexual sounds, grunts and gulps. Four sets of lip and tongue attack one hairy testicle and alternate energetically with the other after every few minutes. Wei Ying experiences extreme testicular orgasms, as his balls are squeezed until they're tight against the sacs, then, passionately ravaged with deep swallows, toe-curlingly pleasurable licks, soul-draining vacuum-like rapidfire suctions, vibrating hums and the terrifying Invisible Hands spells that tug and molest unendingly, until every last nectary droplet has been coaxed out, and only happily-shrivelled and spent eggs are left behind. Simultaneously, four fingers stretch his anus and wiggle inside liberally, stroking the cleaned, muscular walls in all directions until Wei Ying dreams of having uncontrollable diarrhea - he couldn't control the very nice, nnngh-inducing spasms running through his rump and his muscles refused to tighten up because they too, have gone to slumber -, and then those four fingers became eight digits in total, and they attack Wei Ying's prostate gland with plenty of sweet rolls, massages, caresses, presses, ball-dribbling, quick vibrations, and all sorts of sensual motions, that Wei Ying actually cries out in his sleep when he dry-orgasms again and again.

The sexual assault continues with fingers Etherealizing deep into Wei Ying's pelvic region, and four hands begin to grasp, grope and tenderly knead the sensitive, swollen bits; the four sets of lip and tongue move in for the kill, nibbling, licking, then taking turns to deep-throat the man's exceedingly excited and turgid penis, standing out from its nest of curly hairs, exposed out into the open, as four young men dip their heads between Wei Ying's spread thighs again and again, forcing the twitching organ to shudder and quiver with such delectable pleasure when hot friction, arousing wetness and hnngh-inducing suction rhythmically strike the defenceless meatstick too many times, too fast, too deep, that his pelvis starts to bend and bow in a telltale impending climax; he humps into each throat gratefully and spears as far as his jelly-like limbs would allow even in his sex-infused sleep, and then he stills; his hips shake and shudder uncontrollably, a series of muscular contractions run up and down his spine and lower body, molten liquid pressure fills his insides and rises higher, and higher, Wei Ying moans loudly in lucid dreaming and calls out Lan Zhan's name repeatedly in tandem with the pulses coursing through his bloodstream, his eyes open and shut partially, his jaws slack and his fingers and toes curl delightfully, his body arches, convulses, seizes, one, twice, thrice--

--the four servants release their victim and continue to play with the man's balls and prostate, while Lan Zhan "Mn"s in acknowledgement, then like a hawk, swoops down to swallow Wei Ying's wildly twitching hard-on - and the ensuing erupting creamy goodness, warm complex musky tastes, fifteen excited ejaculations that burgeoned to twenty by a swirling tongue that knows very well of its spouse's weak spots and how to make every spurt count, and fingernails raking lines on the younger man's smooth buttocks in a primal display of ownership - that Wei Ying belongs only to Lan Zhan and no one else, after all.

The lovely blowjob continues until the sun has risen above the mists blanketing the mountains of the Cloud Recesses; Lan Zhan patiently bobs his head up and down, swallows repeatedly the increasingly tired, short-circuited, disturbed-in-sleep Wei Ying, who moans incomprehensible words and animal-like grunts, struggles and starts kicking away pillows, messing up sweat-soaked bedsheets stained with other bodily fluids because those four fingers were unrelenting in their quest to play with the prostate and other wonderful places inside the groin; tasty moans turning into cries for mercy, as the assaulted prostate is swiftly emptied in a quick succession of orgasmic explosions, and could only convulse continuously with nothing but copious amounts of transparent, seedless fluids to offer, and soon, even random sprays of pungent morning pee because the young man's bladder has lost its control from getting too much head, too much pleasure, that every over-excited nerve-end is scorched and electrocuted - Lan Zhan wrings out everything that his beloved can give, savouring the taste and smells of a man who eventually devolves into a mass of quivering, convulsing flesh whose sole purpose is to enjoy being pleased, to hump his hips blindly in the dark, and to squirt every last drop in gratitude, of hoarse cries and tasty growls in a bedroom with four soundproofed walls, because no words can describe how wonderful the man feels within his gone-to-heaven body dying from too many orgasms in span of an hour, reviving after the fifteenth, sometimes twentieth twitch each, because sex always invigorates, whether in wakefulness or in slumber.

7:00 am

The day has started, and Lan Zhan mourns the end of his mourning ritual. His hands play with Wei Ying's lifeless penis for a little while more, while he gives the beloved man sweet kisses flavoured with the latter's sexual fluids as a heartfelt thank-you gesture. Sweat-covered and panting Wei Ying lets out a loud string of farts because his belly is still shuddering from the earth-shattering aftershocks that continue to course through his veins. The servants remove all evidence of the ritual, including the acupuncture needles, then clean everything up, and give the sleeping former Yiling Patriarch a wipe-down with soap and warm bathwater.

A quick bath and a new set of pyjamas later, Lan Zhan leaves the Jingshi to run some daily errands. The servants can be seen doing laundry in the backyard and sweeping the verandah with straw brooms.

7:30 am

Wen Ning is already up and hard at work in the fields behind the Jingshi. He's a diligent man, and tries to take advantage of the longer daylight hours when Spring approaches. He has the tools stored in the shed, and plans drawn by his creator-cum-former master on what needs to be done, so he works quietly without disturbing others who may still be asleep. Si Zhui, who has been up since a couple of hours earlier, has been busy with house chores and laundry. If the weather permits, he helps out with Wen Ning on the lighter tasks, such as planting seedlings and clearing out unwanted winter grass or small rocks from the farm. A chicken coop housing birds and rabbits has been set up at the behest of Han Guang Jun (after being pestered by the man under his care), and Si Zhui is in charge of keeping the place clean, feeding the animals and replenishing their drinking stations.

Wei Ying nnnghs in a freshly made bed, dressed in clean clothes, and rolls around the king-sized mattress out of spite - the sunlight rays shine into his tightly-squeezed eyes and he curses whoever that forgot to pull the curtains. He slides a hand into his trousers out of (bad) habit and touches himself to relieve his imagined morning wood - then remembers belatedly that the doctor said that his sexual meridians were supposedly destroyed, so he wouldn't feel any sexual urges or even grow hard; he was declared impotent, to his utter disappointment. Strangely, his lower body tells him that everything's just fine, and in fact, he feels pleasantly emptied down there, and his spirits feel rather clear and light, good enough to start a new day on a positive note. Wei Ying curses his bad luck for missing out on the pleasures of masturbation, but thanks his body for being forgiving, and making him feel nice, even normal, in every daybreak without being haunted by the bodily need to release. He nnnghs again, smacks his lips (something tastes musky and strange in his palate), scratches his chest (something is swollen and feels itchy), and rolls over until his pleasantly (but strangely tired) hips catches his favourite purple pillow (that used to belong to Lan Zhan) - then snores.

7:45 am

Lan Zhan returns from foraging special herbs from the surrounding misty mountains, and carries packets of medicines bought from the local healers, some household goods from the morning market and other provisions needed by the Jingshi. The four servants bow respectfully to welcome the returning master of the house, and take the goods in.

The master of the house tip-toes into the bedroom to wish Wei Ying an affectionate, whispery 'Good morning, sleepyhead', with loving kisses on the latter's cheeks. Wei Ying nnnghs in disgruntlement at a sloppy sensation on his face, and turns away. Lan Zhan smoothly uses a forefinger and jabs - strikes - a special pressure point on Wei Ying's nape, and the latter is stunned into unconsciousness instantly. Wei Ying gets a warm cuddle when Lan Zhan lies on the bed and embraces him from behind, with one hand gingerly moving down to caress the sleeping loins - it's time for a dessert.

The king-sized bed creaks rhythmically when Wei Ying is given a loving handjob with god-tiered sexual mastery; the younger man's hips tremble and shakes uncontrollably, very erratically, and very, very excitedly, as he pumps into Lan Zhan's sexy-licious hands and readily spills clear fluids with tendrils of creamy whites into a waiting bowl placed atop the bed. The man is milked again and again because Invisible Hands, Lips and Tongues swarm all over his genitals; there is only gentle oozing, hardly a sputtering ejaculation, hot, viscous dollops trickling down like fat, pregnant crystal-clear beads from the swollen and thoroughly abused cockslit; Lan Zhan polishes Wei Ying's very tired penis and forces the penile muscles to work overtime, and the prostate gland to empty itself until there is only vacuumed air left in it, in wonderful pulses of squeezezy, squelchy contractions.

He wishes Baby Wei Yings good mornings too, by kissing each testicle and giving them a good aerobics workout with plenty of feather-light caresses and vibrating lip-suckles, before pulling back the man's trousers. He pours the bowl of Wei Ying-flavoured goodness into a vial - a paltry few teaspoonfuls -, and pockets it for a mid-morning snack, later.

The servants continue their work in the Jingshi, unfazed at what goes on behind the bedroom's doors.

8:00 am

At this time, Jing Yi arrives - still bleary eyed - and struts around like a leader inspecting his troops. Lan Zhan compliments Jing Yi for the excellent service rendered by the four faithful servants - who are formally assigned to the boy's care -, and Jing Yi's chest puffs up with pride like a cockerel's. He starts showing off by telling the servants to do a better job, to be better Gusu Lans, to follow the footsteps of their leader and the great and marvellous Han Guang Jun, et cetera ad nauseum ; Lan Zhan smiles faintly at the boy's antics, before leaving again.

(Unbeknownst to many, the four men mysteriously appeared in the Cloud Recesses one fine day, and were inducted into Jing Yi's brand-new squad, just a day before he was ordered by Han Guang Jun to patrol a very specific and scenic riverbank beneath distinctly identified mountain cliffs. Lan Jia made clever excuses to distract and divert Jing Yi's attention so that the boy arrived at the precise location and time; Lan Yi who scouted ahead crushed a hidden cache of ripe beetroots on the slopes, then gently catches Wei Ying's fall at the pre-ordained moment; Lan Bing helped the older Lan Yi to drag an unconscious Wei Ying through a slurry of mossy ground and beet juice; Lan Ding conveniently prepared signal flares and Fairy Messenger spells behind his back, so that when Jing Yi cried in shock at the sight of a bloodied man on the riverside, an urgent call was made to the Cloud Recesses, and Han Guang Jun ordered Jing Yi to bring back the beloved man. All four technically unnamed Lans took all necessary measures to safeguard the secrecy of the search and rescue mission, including bashing up unfortunate fellow travellers who crossed their path - so that nobody else knew that the former Yiling Patriarch was actually still alive and well in a world that had considered him dead.

Jing Yi took the credit and was promoted, of course, and all is well from henceforth.)

Jing Yi walks with a skip in his steps on cloud nines with praises echoing inside his ears, and marches to the shed behind the Jingshi to invite Si Zhui and Wen Ning to a sumptuous breakfast. Everyone gets sect-sponsored buffet meals, three times a day, at the communal kitchens and dining halls although the fare is typical of Gusu Lan - mild, bland, mostly vegetarian or light on meats, with rice, noodles and soups that do not really fill one's stomach to the brim, but are good enough to last until the next mealtime. For extras, such as grilled chicken wings, mutton chops, beef skewers or fried fish, or even exotic or special dishes not found on the menu, one would have to fork out their own money and pay the kitchen to cook such foods. Jing Yi acts like the 'big brother' of the trio, and after getting a pat on the back from the eminent Han Guang Jun, he's likely to spend a bit more for his best buddy Si Zhui and their favourite fierce corpse-turned-guardian for night hunts, Wen Ning.

When Jing Yi meets up with Jin Ling in the dining halls with Si Zhui and Wen Ning in tow, they boys have a rowdy time catching up and planning the day's exciting events - either go adventuring outdoors or tag along with a patrol squad, if the weather is good, or play games indoors and practise their cultivation and other skills, if a storm is coming.

Wei Ying nnnghs, stretches, and furrows his brows at the brightening skies - wistfully, he wishes to have telekinesis powers to pull the curtains and shut out the annoying sunlight; he is too lazy to rise up and do it himself. He frowns again, noting that his little junior down there feels even more lifeless than before, despite the extra sleep. He swears that by now, he should've been more horny, now that the sun is up and his blood is pumping - he even humps on the purple pillow to test out the machinery of his genitals, but to no avail. He tries to play back memories of reading pornographic books or watching couples having hot sex in the bushes during his younger days, and he flutters his hips against the pillow like a real man would drill a lover's hole - but his penis refuses to respond, and his balls feel worryingly very, very empty. He curses his disability that has seemingly, cruelly cut off his sex life and castrated his twin jeweled eggs.

Wei Ying grumbles something incoherent and stops squirming against the abused pillow that smells of the man's privates. He simply rolls over to the other side and away from the glimmering window, his legs still wrapped around the beaten-up purple pillow - and snores.

8:30 am

Depending on luck, if the trio of boys have something up (and fun) in their sleeves that require Wei Ying's participation, they would barge into the Jingshi and drag the man out to start his day. If not, then Wei Ying is left blissfully curled up on the bed and he gets to indulge in his lazy lifestyle of sleeping in until eleven o' clock.

The Jingshi is in a perfect state of existence, with nary a speck of dust on the surfaces, nor a piece of decor or earthenware out of place, with every ink-brush and book properly stowed in drawers and cupboards to where they belong, and with every inch of wooden floor scrubbed and polished like the day the building was first constructed. A pot of tea and a claypot of softly bubbling herbal soup is left on the dying embers of a stove, in a kitchenette which makes up an annex located adjacent to the Jingshi. The servants leave the building to carry on with their daily duties as proper Gusu Lan disciples, and hope that the flavourful smells wafting into the bedroom would wake the man up, but Wei Ying continues to roll into another corner of the bed balled up like a cooked shrimp, and drools into the unfortunate purple pillow.

Lan Zhan, having relinquished his leadership role of the sect, has taken up a part-time teaching position in one of several schools in the Cloud Recesses.

The job keeps his mind sharp, and when teaching students swordplay and martial arts, maintains his body in excellent shape. Besides making himself useful to the sect, and that his great and marvellous presence continues to make waves amongst aspiring disciples, captivated youths and bedazzled teenage girls, he is able to supplement his income of sizable stipends paid to all members of the elite ruling class of the Gusu Lan housed within the city. It helps to pay the bills and for Wei Ying's medicines too.

10:00 am

It's the school's recess, and Lan Zhan has not a moment to lose. The vial is gladly emptied but it is not enough. He uses his undisclosed godly powers to teleport, sometimes to slow down the passage of Time, Create a distraction or even alter the Fate of some people, so that he has another chance to return to the Jingshi and spend some very high quality time with his beloved.

He smiles - wider this time - at the sight of an innocent, sleeping Wei Ying who refuses to wake up although golden sun filtering through the windows spotlights on his twin buttocks. Wei Ying loses his trousers and his springy ass gets plenty of love, molestation, kisses, gentle swats and nibbly bites. The chilled drafty air tickling his naked butt causes the man to nnngh in annoyance. Unsurprisingly, Wei Ying gets sexually assaulted, and he dreams of having warm calloused hands groping his body, of being crushed by a heavier man's weight, of sounds of heavy panting his ears, and worst of all, of his penis forcibly shoved into a spinning, oscillating fleshlight filled with delicious protrusions, tentacles, suckers and all sorts of bumps, friction-fraught textures, and naughty patterns drawn on the inside.

The whole spectacle turns into a nightmare of sorts, when he dreams of wandering aimlessly in his old home in the Lotus Pier, involuntarily leaking, sometimes spraying, pee onto the floor of the classroom in-between explosively pleasurable spurts, because his hips trembled non-stop from mind-blowing phantom sensations attacking his genitals with his foreskin peeled back; something hard and hollow invaded his cock, then pushed and pulled repeatedly along his irritated, swollen urethra, and he ejaculated everywhere like watering gardens with a dysfunctional hose, fifteen twitches each; someone seemed to be sucking on the straw stuck in his penis then playfully blowed bubbles of saliva into it, and his balls inflated then deflated like balloons filled with boy-juices, drained out, filled again; the tip of the straw inside his body morphed into a hand-like appendage, and it bloated in size until it enveloped his prostate gland with five warm, slimy fingers - Wei Ying cried in panic, and he watched in morbid fascination at an X-ray projection on the classroom blackboard, at how the ghastly inhuman and incorporeal fingers grasped and clenched his prostate like pumping a manual air-pump, then maddeningly, rolled the gland with the fingers against the palm like a ball of hard tanghulu candy; the sensations were terrifyingly good that poor Wei Ying thrashed helplessly in his nightmare; he kept cumming, peeing, was unwillingly sucked off, had foreign objects inserted into his tortured penis, and his prostate raped by ghostly fingers - to the amusement of his former classmates featured inside the nightmare, those terrible teenage bullies that he hated for life, who laughed and jeered at him for not being able to control his bodily urges.

Eventually, the nightmare fades away into a float-y, absolutely relaxing scenery of divine mountains, clouds and sheep, sprawling temples and pagodas, and calming chanting from unseen monks; having his body been drained again and again until he thought he was in a nirvana of sorts, and finally, feels lips ghosting on his cheeks like an unsettled, unfulfilling good-bye kiss.

(Lan Zhan nearly yields to his primal instincts and so desperately wants to shove his hips against Wei Ying's tasty buttocks; the natural desire to penetrate and fuck lovely Wei Ying into the mattress is great, though he holds back because he remembers that in this timeline, wild and untamed Wei Ying is a virgin who hasn't experienced any form of sexual intercourse yet; he wants to save the best for the last, and that Wei Ying's first time embodies the highest ideals of Perfection; he fantasizes of taking Wei Ying's virginity on a crimson coloured king-sized bed on the night of their blessed wedding, and the delicate rosebud that he'd have carefully moulded, shaped and made to fit him and for him only, shall finally bloom and receive his abundant love and virile seed.)

11:00 am

Wei Ying finally wakes up, thoroughly rested, yet feeling a little uneasy at the last bit with nightmares from the past, with very twisted things done unto him. Sometimes, it is Si Zhui who gets him up in bed, then serves the man a cup of tea and a bowl of nutritious herbal soup that had been simmering in the kitchenette to 'start' his day. The boys stop by to accompany the man still in his pyjamas and regale him with tales of their exciting, fun-filled morning - for instance, having caught jungle fowls from the forests or fishes from the river, having composed a new musical piece or discovered a new martial arts fighting technique, or making some interesting gadgets and trinkets to show the former genius-cum-inventor of sorts. The bedraggled man usually nods with plenty of yawns, and tries to shake off the last bit of sleepiness from his bones. He gets a bath, a nice grooming session, and dresses up with the help from the boys. By the time the sun is high in the middle of clear, frosty blue skies, Wen Ning has completed his farm work and will be eligible for a decent pay for his efforts. They all gather around, sometimes with snacks in hand, and spend good time with Wei Ying, in the comfort and warmth of the Jingshi.

11:30 am

School's out, and Lan Zhan hurries to a few other meetings, usually to discuss some internal sect matters with elders and council members of the Gusu Lan. Wei Ying had declared before that he has no interest in such things - and he didn't want to interfere in matters that were beyond his control, especially in his current weakened and pitiful state -, so Lan Zhan gets scot-free in making many important decisions without the need to consult his beloved soulmate.

12:30 pm

An hour after awakening, Wei Ying's stomach finally follows suit with earnest rumbles. He is eager to crawl out of the extremely attractive sleep-warmed bed filled with noisy boys and a cheerful fierce corpse. Depending on arrangements made using Fairy Messenger spells (which are precursors to the phonecalls of the modern era), the boys may or may not join Wei Ying for lunch.

In most cases, Lan Zhan returns with trays and baskets of food made exactly to Wei Ying's wishes, after having confirmed some details using the said Fairy Messenger spells. Wei Ying hobbles on his crutches to the middle dining room, where he greets his favourite man with hugs and rather unsightly pawing - he can't get enough of physical contact with his Han Guang Jun, and could hardly bear to part from the man for more than half a day -, and Lan Zhan reciprocates with plenty of cuddles and thinly-disguised groping and fondling as they maneuver carefully to the dining table - since Wei Ying's crippled legs were essentially like jelly sticks held up with crutches. Wei Ying enjoys being fed by his man by chopsticks, a spoon or even by hand.

Lunch - Wei Ying's first meal of the day - is a lively affair, when the younger man is wide awake and filled with energy, and a filling stomach. If the boys are around, he'd spend time talking to them until mealtime is over, in which the boys politely bid their good-byes and carry on with their day. Sometimes, Wei Ying wishes he was young again and strong enough to join them, but he resists complaining too much; he knows that in time, he could walk around the fields and inspect Wen Ning's handiwork, visit Si Zhui's shed to teach him some advanced night-hunting techniques, or follow Lan Zhan to the disciples' dormitories and check how Jin Ling and Jing Yi are doing (he knows that Lan Zhan will fuss over him and the distances that he trudges from the Jingshi, such as risking pneumonia from the wintry temperatures, or accidentally tripping over things and breaking some bones).

However, Wei Ying also knows that he should let the boys live their own lives and not become "that busybody uncle". So, he looks forward to spend a lazy afternoon in Lan Zhan's arms, meditating with his guqin music, perform some exercises or playful wrestling - that somehow devolves into naughty tickling, bites and pinching, heavy petting, and his favourite secret pastime, a brazen and coquettish request of "Er gege , er gege , please play with my xiao didi ..." then he gives various excuses such as needing some sex-ercise, while seductively wiggling his hips on the bed - which instantly riles up the older man and Lan Zhan makes sure to fondle Wei Ying's naughty bits until, to the young man's delight, his usual (though not so impressively endowed) over-five inch erection stands up proudly to attention.

Wei Ying feels loved, that Lan Zhan would indulge in all of his childish demands and naughty shenanigans unconditionally. He also feels loved, because, through practice and experience, he knows that only Lan Zhan can make him hard.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 138

1:00 pm

Lunch at the Lan's has always been a quiet affair, and on most days, there is no difference.

Everyone eats politely, maintains a respectable distance from one another, and follows proper dining etiquette fit for the scholarly and the elite; the eldest - which is usually Han Guang Jun, sometimes Ze Wu Jun or occasionally Master Lan Qi Ren if that reticent old man decides to pop by for an 'inspection into the state of affairs of the precious nephew and the family's tattered dignity' - is invited to start the meal, and the youngest - who are usually the trio of boys - eagerly serve the senior members by picking the greenest vegetables, the juiciest meats and fattest chicken drumsticks and wings for them, and place them in their bowl.

Wei Ying, for some unspoken but universally understood reason, is the exception - he is allowed to talk with his mouth full, sit with one leg on the chair, and gets dibs on the best portions by having Han Guang Jun serve to the younger man's whims and demands. The moment he verbalizes his wish for the choicest meaty cuts or a particular part of fish, it is gone before everyone's eyes because chopsticks-armed Han Guang Jun has a super-secret technique of blazing, lightning speeds to pick and place the requested portion perfectly into the middle of Wei Ying's bowl.

Conversation is allowed around the dining table if Master Lan Qi Ren or other elderly Lan members aren't around. For Han Guang Jun, having a little merriment whilst dining on healthy home-cooked food is perfectly acceptable; in fact, he's been very generous in allowing more crude, but perfectly natural behaviours in the Jingshi ever since Wei Ying took up permanent residence in the Jingshi. When Wei Ying scrunches his face, tilts his hips to the side and takes aim towards Han Guang Jun, and then, lets out a barely audible fart while heartily chewing and talking to the boys, the older man smiles faintly in perfect acceptance of the creature comforts of having loved ones around under the same roof.

2:00 pm

It is a little after lunchtime, and the boys and Wen Ning decide to run off and carry on with their day after stopping by at the Jingshi for a wonderful meal prepared by Han Guang Jun. The Jingshi finally experiences a period of peace following the rowdy get-together, and all is fine within its interior chambers; the front door is finally closed and locked with a resounding 'click'.

The afternoon ritual starts when the four servants arrive to collect the used tableware and eating utensils, and they take some time clean the Jingshi too - the bed must be made again, the furniture wiped, the footprints on the floor mopped, the decor polished, and every inch must be swept with straw brooms, no less. Atop a new set of fresh sheets tucked to the edges of the bed, sun-dried blankets and cleaned pillows, two men engage with what could be termed as a post-meal affectionate cuddle; a wholesome act of enjoying each other's touch, embracing one another because Wei Ying simply cries out like a child "bao bao !" (抱抱!) with wide-open arms and Lan Zhan could never refuse such a lovely request, giving light massages, backrubs and gentle circles on the small of the back, and sharing soft whispers of 'How's your day' and 'What have you been up to'.

It doesn't take long for a "hug hug" (抱抱) to become a "touch touch" (摸摸), even with the servants shuffling about the room with their chores. Wei Ying had long suspected that those four men were no ordinary disciples raised in the Cloud Recesses, and probably hold very special roles by secretly serving Han Guang Jun while disguising as troopers under Jing Yi - the boy is too young to lead a squad and his incompetence glaringly shows when the troopers are doing things not sanctioned by their so-called leader - and Jing Yi is probably in the courtyards playing games with Si Zhui and Jin Ling without taking his role seriously.

Wei Ying isn't too concerned though, because when he's in the mood for Lan Zhan's "touch touch", he throws all caution into the wind and grasps the older man's hand. Slyly, with a coy wink or two, he pulls the hand down to his crotch and lures the latter by wiggling his hips to brazenly showcase his naked and hairy bush between the legs. Wei Ying gives various silly excuses, such as, " Er gege , before we start with meditation and rehabilitation exercises, I need some warm-up. I've been having some disturbing dreams since this morning, so maybe it's a good time for a play session to relieve my stress," then naughtily maneuvers the latter's fingers to wrap around his rising hard-on - a dark, reddening and swelling meatstick pulsing in anticipation; Wei Ying hadn't felt such excitement whilst awake since getting out of bed -, "Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan," and his voice becomes endearing, sugary sweet and needy, "Gege, please play with my penis? I want to be touch-touch'ed by your lovely big and muscular hands..."

Lan Zhan sighs. Wei Ying doesn't need to ask twice.

.

“Ah... ahhnn... mmmh... hnngh... Lan Zhan... it feels so good... aahnn... Please be my girlfriend!”

Lan Zhan missed a breath and coughed, and his hand, which had been obediently stroking Wei Ying's cock until completion - a weak flutter of droopy, loose penile muscles, followed by tasty moans and just five lovely round droplets of diluted, watery white spewing out from the angry-red, swollen and brutally rubbed cockslit -, his hand stopped. Wei Ying whined in disappointment though his hips continued to pump into that marvellous fisted hand, but that changed when Lan Zhan instinctively squeezed the very tired, half-limp tube of flesh a bit too firmly, and the young man yelped.

The older man released his grip and glared at Wei Ying that screamed a one-worded “Preposterous!”, then scooted a bit further to the edge of the king-sized bed. Lan Zhan was topless and still had his pants on, unlike the other younger man who was totally in the nude - so Lan Zhan felt a little safe from the sudden, unexpected threat to be visualized, then described, as being of the inferior sex.

Wei Ying bent over and started rubbing his fingerprint-bruised cock. Lan Zhan offered an apologetic, but wordless slight bow of head.

After a few moments, Wei Ying had regained his composure. “It seems my penis wants to be played by you, and it can only grow hard from your touch. I tried to masturbate this morning, and in fact, every morning, but that never happens! My penis is head over heels for you, and so am I. Lan Zhan, I... I can't climax without you! So... please, be my girlfriend!” he attempted his proposal again, this time on his knees atop the bed, with shining sad-looking puppy eyes staring straight into the other, and he grasped both the older man's hands together - never mind that they were covered with cum and other musky, smelly bodily juices.

"I'm a man, and it felt like part of me died when the doctor said that I could never become erect or have sex with someone. But... you, you're different! Lan Zhan! You're the only one that my body responds to... so, please, go out with me!" Wei Ying cried out and desperately wished for an affirmative answer from the person whom he considered as confidant, and soulmate - never mind that the servants were still milling about the Jingshi with straw brooms and mops, because they never raised their heads or eyebrows at the spectacle anyway.

Wei Ying crawled two steps forward, Lan Zhan backed off with two steps as well, until he teetered on the edge of the bed. The older man felt very embarrassed and looked away, although his hands held by Wei Ying's felt very, very warm, and he knew that his ear-lobes were on fire as well.

"It's... it's just a physiological reaction. With practice, with enough healing, your condition can be... mended," the older man stammered, anxious at the awkward atmosphere.

Wei Ying remained steadfast and unfazed, "But, it's true! Although it feels so good to be touched by you, that I can only cum in your hands... my heart swells with a lot of very, very nice feelings each time we're together! I keep thinking only about you all day! It's more than just a bodily reaction, Lan Zhan. It's so strange! I think it's... it's..."

The terrifying L-bomb word was never uttered, as Wei Ying was overcome with indescribable feelings and lustful thoughts, then leaned forward and forcefully kissed the older man's face. His cum-streaked hands started to paw hungrily at Lan Zhan's naked torso and tug on the drawstrings of the pants; and when they finally tipped over the edge and tumbled down from the bed, it looked every bit scandalous as a naked young, unruly naked man trying to rape a reluctant older man with his pants being ripped off against his will.

"Wei Ying... stop this! My... pants! You're just acting in the heat of the moment! Calm... down!" Lan Zhan was muffled when lips locked against his, and Wei Ying started writhing greedily against his body, exchanged heavy, panting breaths and a very noticeable boner poked at his pubes which then turned into a humping machine in no time. Lan Zhan was worried that defiant Wei Ying might injure himself, given his weakened state and the uncontrollable surge of lust boiling in the latter's veins, and he couldn't bear to push the desperate man away, lest he hurt the feeble body, knock into a bone or something, or worse, break his heart - so he quickly raised a forefinger and jabbed at a special spot on the about-to-be-rapist's nape, and Wei Ying collapsed into a grateful heap of post-lunch napping.

Noting that Wei Ying acted like a horny teenager - technically he was one trapped in a young man's body, after all - Lan Zhan sighed again and returned the man to the bed. He spread-eagled Wei Ying's boneless form and performed some super-secret diagnostics using his god-tiered powers. Wei Ying's body was thrumming with pent-up sexual energy that could find no release since all meridians had been destroyed - it was like pouring water into a series of pipes that had their openings blocked, so something would have to give way at some point in time.

Lan Zhan did not miss the opportunity to sample the sizzling sexiness of a naked Wei Ying buffet spread out wantonly on a clean bed, with a mighty delicious-looking engorged arousal sticking up into the air; it twitched softly in tandem with the younger man's breathing, and swayed gently like a pendulum, even invitingly, beckoning Lan Zhan to have a taste. Twin eggs rise and fall, fast filling up with the sweet nectar that Lan Zhan knew he would have to - but willingly, even eagerly - empty out as soon as possible.

He knelt between the man's legs and lowered his head, diving in into the special treat repeatedly until Wei Ying was left moaning in his unconscious state, orgasming continuously, to the point where his loins were thoroughly drained, the penis finally numbed, limp and lifeless, the balls shrivelled into prunes, the lustful flames happily sated and put out, and he would suffer a miniscule amnesia so that the humiliating episode would be, hopefully, forgotten.

Lan Zhan wiped his mouth with his sleeve after putting on his robes, and burped politely. One of the servants handed him a handkerchief so that he wouldn't soil his clothes further with another man's cooled, ejaculated and slimy seed.

.

Wei Ying yawned and dug himself deeper into a cocoon of Lan Zhan's firm body - there's a noticeable paunch too, which doubles as a wonderful cushion for the strangely aching back -, of sandalwood scent, and in the comfortable dimness of a bedroom with curtains actually pulled back, then turned to the side and nearly, unknowingly kissed a male nipple upon a bulging pectoral - and yawned again. A pair of strong, muscular arms embrace him - as always - sheltering the younger man and keeping him safe and warm, and they remain in this position for some time every afternoon.

Afternoons are a blur for Wei Ying, sometimes. He attributed the brain fog, gaps in his memory, and a rather sluggish state of awareness, to his broken body - which always felt pleasantly emptied whenever he's with Lan Zhan. He was told that his spine had been severed and he'd suffered from concussion amongst a long list of damages, that Lan Zhan gathered the best doctors and surgeons, to treat his ragdoll-like body for seven days and seven nights, used up buckets of blood stolen from the medicine halls which left the chief shamans furious, emptied many cupboards filled with pills, dried herbs, pastes and other treatments despite protests from the local apothecaries, and even rummaged the entire Library Pavillion for curative recipes until the librarians lodged formal complaints against him--

-- Is it true, Lan Zhan? That you had to kneel while holding whipping bamboo sticks in front of your uncle's home for three consecutive nights while I was still out cold and recuperating in the Jingshi? Jing Yi mentioned being heartbroken at watching you punish yourself like that, to seek forgiveness for the troubles that you... no, I caused," Wei Ying murmured and his fingers drew circles on the older man's bulging belly absently, lost in his own thoughts.

Lan Zhan, whose own fingers had gone on their own to twirl Wei Ying's hair into braids, stilled. He hummed a bit while trying to recall what exactly had happened, and said, "Mn. I had released the Cries of the Red Clouds when we were sure you were safe within the Cloud Recesses. The elders didn't like the alarming bloody glow upon the city, but I needed to convene the extraordinary meeting. I announced my resignation as Chief Cultivator, and renounced my role and rights as the second-in-line heir to the sect. The message got through to those who needed to hear it, although I was punished later because my uncle was furious."

Wei Ying frowned and fretted, guilt clearing eating his conscience. He looked up and was a little taken aback when he realized that Lan Zhan had been gazing at him the whole time - soft golden-tinged eyes that seemed to stare straight into his heart and soul, captivating his full attention and drew out his innermost thoughts and feelings. There was no remorse or regret in his handsome face, only satisfaction that he believed he'd done the right thing.

“Even Ze Wu Jun too? I heard from the servants that he ran out of the forests in panic that night, thus cutting short his self-imposed exile, because that special red flare was supposed to be used only when grave danger befalls upon the city. Si Zhui gave examples based on what he remembered from his lessons, such as when the city is under siege by powerful enemies, or if there is imminent disaster due to raging fires or floods.”

Lan Zhan nods with another “Mn”, and lowers his head to give a sweet kiss on Wei Ying’s forehead - although they are not formally bound by romantic ties, the level of intimacy between them is astounding, even for the younger man. Wei Ying kept guessing what Lan Zhan’s affectionate acts meant, but he couldn’t figure out if it was just a brotherly “like” or the other, more daunting L-bomb word. Having given up on deciphering the discreet man, Wei Ying merely giggled in amusement, and from the tender gestures that Lan Zhan loved to shower on him. The fingers on his hair started to massage his scalp, and Wei Ying began to feel a little drowsy with little pinpricks of fission running through his cottony consciousness.

“It worked in the end. That’s all that matters,” Lan Zhan replied with a resolute but calm voice, followed by another kiss on the exposed shell of an ear - more giggles ensued -, “My brother received the full explanation directly from me, and he gave some thought to my requests. He agreed to take over and start off as the new Sect Leader. He refused the Chief Cultivator seat for reasons related to his principles - he was adamant that a fair trial, such as tournaments and polls, should be held to consider his candidacy. My uncle was mad at the loss for our sect, but at that point, neither of us really cared. I have you, Wei Ying, and my brother gained a newer, greater purpose in life other than drowning in his sorrows of the lost past.”

Wei Ying tilted his chin upward and stretched a bit - nnn....gh - then smiled brightly, “Wow! What did you say to your brother to elicit such a huge turnaround response? I remembered watching him becoming depressed, losing appetite and even wandering around listlessly in the days after the ruined Guanyin Temple was cleared.”

Lan Zhan simply placed a forefinger on Wei Ying’s lips to indicate that it was a secret that could not be revealed. Wei Ying let it go - he’d learnt since long ago that some things in life are best left buried or inconclusive. Another heavy question lingered in the air.

“Are you really sure about your decision? By dropping everything to take care of me for the rest of your life, means you’re no more than a lowly commoner living precariously in the comforts of the rich and powerful ruling Lan family. If you drew the ire of someone, or if some person holds a grudge against you, things can go south very quickly with little or no help from your family. I mean... I... it’s not like I’m insisting that you stay with me, but... you know, I sometimes feel kinda... kind of... err... I’m not in a position to say anything either, and I’m now just a cripple--”

Wei Ying was gently silenced with a kiss that replaced where the forefinger was - his words melted into a passionate exchange of sensitive lips and tongue, and he closed his eyes and mmmhs into the molten heated, and quite erotic contact.

The four forgotten servants filed out of the bedroom quietly, having completed their afternoon cleaning tasks, and in deference to their true master's wishes, they closed the doors on their way out.

4:00 pm

The best way to keep Wei Ying's mind off the gutter - not necessarily dirty things - is to keep his body busy.

“Ah, Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, not so hard please... If you do it too roughly, I'm afraid the juice will squirt out and all that'll be left is saggy skin and leftover pulp!” Wei Ying chortled obnoxiously and tried to push the invasive hands away, as the older man patiently massaged his breasts in wide, circular kneading motions. He bucked and curled with laughter when his ticklish ribs were gently attacked with meaty finger pads that pressed a little too hard on his sensitive (and screaming) tickle-nerves. The windows were closed to prevent snow and the cold from getting in, and thus, he could make as much noise as he wanted without disturbing the relatively quiet neighbourhood. (Also, he didn't want Wen Ning to fly all the way from the shed and find the couple in a state of nudity with hands pawing on each other.)

The younger man was informed that according to the medical texts in the Library Pavillion - of which the sources were never quoted nor shown to him -, he needed a lot of massages to recover his strength, though the manner in which the treatment was carried out was dubious at most. Wei Ying didn't question how he was molested multiple times daily by his saviour - still confidant and the most trusted person in his life -, how the man's thick, calloused fingers would glide, knead and rub everywhere - even his ticklish armpits and groin areas, and his most intimate parts were not spared -, or how sometimes, suspicious methods were employed to stretch and relax the muscles and glands, so that "slowly, budding meridians may sprout and take root like newborn plant seedlings in the garden... someday."

"Ah, Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, don't pinch, bite and suck my nipples so hard! You're not a baby anymore, and I have no milk to give... Ha ha ha... Aaahhnn!" Wei Ying was a riot of cries and squeals, of kicking and punching limbs, on a messy bed of tangled bedsheets and pillows; he thought they were playing another game to keep off the afternoon cabin fever, and to give his heart a nice cardio workout after a nice and filling lunch, so the man was having a blast. Lan Zhan's vague explanation of "removing toxins using lips specially enchanted with magic found in the ancient texts from the Library Pavillion" didn't hold water, but it was all fun and games in a visceral sense, and Wei Ying enjoyed some contact sports with the er gongzi too.

"Ah, Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, my breasts are swollen, my nipples are puffed up because you attack them like this every single day! Plus, I look a little curvy and soft from the lack of exercise, and my complexion is quite fair and smooth from the lack of sunshine and from all the good food you've been feeding me... In fact, if I didn't shave off all these body and facial hair, someone could mistaken me for a maiden instead! You're a terrible man, groping me wildly when I look like this!... Ah ha ha ha!"

Lan Zhan growled in annoyance, and shifted his position so that Wei Ying was pinned down by his wrists to the bed surrounded by a nest of pillows. The older man started to pepper bruising kisses and hard nibbles from the chest to the collar bones, upwards the pale slender throat and along the jawline - the stubbles did not faze him one bit. From afar, it looked like Wei Ying was being raped, with Lan Zhan pressing down on his spread-eagled body - but never crushing the smaller man - and settled between his legs. Wei Ying laughed again and again like a boy engaged in play-wrestling, and even mischievously crossed and locked his legs around Lan Zhan's hips to draw the latter's crotch against his. Lan Zhan grunted at the touch and grind very, very sensuously, and firmly, in a counterattack, which delighted Wei Ying in many ways and sparked something deeper, fiercer, more primal, more lustful within him.

Outside the Jingshi, the late Winter and early Spring sun was setting. Fortunately the curtains are tightly closed, though if one tried to peek from a near distance, there are silhouettes moving very vigorously in the gaps between windowsill and curtain cloths, and strange, animalistic but muted sounds flowing through the cracks in the wooden walls.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 139

5:00 pm

By the time the sun dipped below the horizon, Wei Ying had completed his daily physical routines, including massages, meditation and if the weather wasn't too blizzardy, a quick walk around the vicinity of Jingshi. He suspected that his spotty memory tended to miss out on some 'other' activities, because he always ended up feeling more tired, drained and emptied than expected - in many inexplicable but pleasant ways; also, it feels as though his waking hours - especially lively afternoons - last way, way longer than he believes, and are filled with so much more thrilling events than what he initially thinks. He blames his forgetfulness, caused by the damage done to his brain that affected his attention span and his ability to retain at least three out of possibly thirty things accomplished over the course of the day, and he has an inkling that Lan Zhan has a hand in it.

(Of course, thirty is just about right, including mind-blowing and salacious, but consensual acts more aptly described in racy erotica that probably doesn't need further elaboration in this narrative.)

Having nothing else to do but to wait for his second meal of the day - dinner - when temperatures in the Cloud Recesses plummeted in the dark, Wei Ying resorted to teasing, sometimes flirting, with his girl, or rather, boyfriend in the confines of their shared love nest, or rather, bedroom.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, since when did you grow so fat? You were so slim, handsome, and muscular before, and had a bodybuilder's six-packs during the end of Summer. But look at you now, at the precipice towards Spring, you look like you've gained the weight of a young pig around your waist!"

"Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, is that a hairless spot at the top of your scalp? Ah, your hair's thinning around the hairline too, you're starting to show the typical male pattern baldness! Did you shave your hair just to make that moustache and beard on your face, or are you turning into a macho daddy at the shockingly young age of mid-thirties?"

"Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan.... aah! Don't yank at my balls and twist like that! It hurts... oww!"

The older man paced inside the Jingshi and tried his best to place his order to the kitchens using a Fairy Messenger spell - a precursor of ordering food through the phone -, because snow had fallen and he didn't want to walk through the ice and get his robes (and food) chilled and wet; also, secretly, he was quite used to modern conveniences he'd experienced in the previous timelines. The spell was a godsend, and he was fortunate that at least one of the four servants that he was most accustomed to, was near the communal kitchens at that time; food could be ordered from the chefs, picked-up and delivered to the doorsteps. Wei Ying's incessant teasing - a sign of boredom - was irritating at most, and disruptive to his crucial conversation to the servant - because he dictated how exactly he wanted the braised pork to be cooked, how long the fish needed to be steamed, and how many drizzles of soy sauce goes into the stir-fried tofu and vegetables. A quick tug between Wei Ying's inner thighs was all it took to silence the man for a minute - easy, immediate, and accessible at all times, when they played an amusing game of going pantless inside Han Guang Jun's den of sleazy indecency.

Lan Zhan taught Wei Ying some ways to redirect the latter's burgeoning frustrations and lusts, lethally combined with boredom and sense of being disabled, helplessness and in despair, that could find no productive outlet and risked overwhelming the younger man's well-being - by staying youthful, juvenile, naughty, and given a free rein on how obscene or vulgar he wanted to be. Soon, careless words can be spoken when the two were alone in the building, offending touches are allowed, and walking around pantless or naked, and then wrestling, grappling, making risqué gestures and pawing at one another, is perfectly fine. Wei Ying was allowed to play with, and granted full rights and access to the personal playground named Han Guang Jun, and vice versa.

So, it wasn't a surprise when they spend hours trying to snatch each other's penises, swipe a molesting touch at the other's dangling hairy balls, sneak a pinch at a defenceless puffy nipple, ambushed with a vicious pluck on a stray curly pubic hair that grew out at an odd angle, or jab a finger or two into buttocks when least expected (and Wei Ying has a bad habit of getting a whiff from his victorious finger after scoring a hit, then wrinkle his nose in disgust, just to ruffle the old man's feathers and for good ol' boyish fun). Lan Zhan was mindful that if he accidentally triggered Wei Ying's switches and turned him on into a horny wild beast in heat, he could always send a two-finger stab to the back of the neck and send the latter to sleep for a few minutes, which rewinds his memories a little so that they can continue from where they left off, in proper - with or without a wonderful comatosed quickie blowjob in between.

In any case, Lan Zhan succeeded in making an order of a five-course meal for two, plus a pot of pu'er tea, to be delivered at a specified time. By the time the amber fluff of light dissipated to signal the end of the call, Wei Ying was back in action and grabbed the older man's privates in retaliation. Lan Zhan hnngh'ed once, but he didn't collapse in shock or run helter-skelter from the bold attempt at outraging his modesty (because he's so used to it, and had done it, and been done, in the past timelines); he simply walked away to another chamber in the Jingshi, with a giggling Wei Ying tagging along from behind, still stroking the stubborn boner to full hardness.

After Lan Zhan took out a recent copy of the Cultivation Times magazine from his bookshelf, the tables were turned when he swatted away Wei Ying's pre-cum lubricated hand and took charge of the situation. He nudged the younger man towards the bedroom, where he intended to read the magazine to pass the time, and his hand never left an increasingly vexed and alarmed Wei Ying's crotch. As soon as they stumbled through the bedroom's entrance, Wei Ying ahhnn'd loudly, jerked his hips into the air three times, legs shaking like real jelly and his back arched, eyes rolled to the back and his jaw slacked, his face locked in a weird half-yawn, half-snarl, half-laugh, and his wildly twitching, angry-red, glistening, bulbous penis spilled teaspoons of watery, whitish milk onto the floor. Lan Zhan secretly lapped up the tasty snack from his coated hand, before resuming his warfare against the unrepentant man.

Later, Lan Zhan relaxed and leaned into the pillows with Wei Ying by his side, one hand continued to knead and massage the dying (again) strained, desperately throbbing over-sensitive meatstick organ, the other languidly flipping through the pages of the magazine, Wei Ying groaning like an incoherent animal struggling on the bedsheets with weakly flailing limbs, begging for mercy, for a breath of air, for not murdering his searing-hot and burnt-red arousal, kept leaking and sputtering pearl-like crystal-clear droplets like a mini fountain gone mad, at the same time, Wei Ying sang incomprehensible praises for the man to have made him cum, that only a girlfriend could achieve, and it felt so heavenly to orgasm into Lan Zhan's hand repeatedly that it hurts, hurts his hypersensitive quivering xiao ji ji so much, and so, he pleaded Lan Zhan again and again, to date him, to be his girl, to marry him soon and be his lao po - and Lan Zhan promptly snorted in disdain, then sent a two-finger stab close to the man's Adam's Apple to shut him down for a bit, before rebooting the obnoxious pervert back to life.

(To Wei Ying's conscious mind, he still hadn't cummed once since waking up in the Jingshi, and he's always been desperate to find that Special Someone who could get him to ejaculate and free his babymakers. The quest... continues.)

6:00 pm

Dinner is another quiet affair at the Lan's, unless they have guests over. The trio of boys and Wen Ning join them sometimes, though when it gets dark and temperatures dip to subzero, each pair prefer to stay in and have their meals in the comfort of their own homes - Si Zhui and Wen Ning, Jing Yi and Jin Ling -, while keeping in touch using Fairy Messenger spells, sometimes a mischievous Paperman passing letters and messages around - whatever that sparks fun and joy to the boys during the dreary nightfall.

Wei Ying has Lan Zhan all to himself, and he takes full advantage of Lan Zhan's kindness, generosity and affection for him; he gets hand-fed with appetizers, main courses of steaming-hot meats and vegetables, soups, congee and freshly cut fruits. Post-dinner mutual belly rubs are one of Wei Ying's favourite activities; while Lan Zhan has noble and therapeutic intentions to aid the younger man's impaired digestion (a string of loud, rude burps from Wei Ying is strangely comforting too), Wei Ying is delighted to be entertained with molesting the older man's love handles, playfully jiggling them, sticking finger-tips or tongue-tips into the deep fleshy navel, then rub his abdomen against Lan Zhan's impetuously for personal amusement - he loves to watch how layers of wiggling flab measure against his bony-thin, sunken and scarred tummy.

7:00 pm

The four servants arrive with a large wooden tub of hot water, and Wei Ying uses his excuse of wanting the hot bath to remain naked (or pantless) around the Jingshi - the servants pay no heed to his antics, because their loyalties lie with Lan Zhan's spoken orders. As the couple soak in the tub together, the servants take away the used dining trays and tableware, and scrub clean the interior of Jingshi for the third time that day.

With filled bellies and dimming lights, the men are less likely to engage in physical activities compared to the roughhouse-filled afternoon. Lan Zhan takes the opportunity in the lull to review the next day's teaching material for his part-time job and grade the students' reports. Wei Ying too, lends a hand in marking some papers - and he's actually quite the astute examiner and mentor, when he is serious in his work - and writes some useful and out-of-the-box answers in the corners with a red ink-brush, so that when the students receive their marked papers, they also learn from an unnamed assistant-teacher that, for instance, during life-saving situations, a piece of ordinary rice paper could be used as a makeshift but functional talisman if one applies the correct mythical words and chants, however being mindful that such acts are unsanctioned and prohibited by the Grand Cultivation Council, and therefore students are strongly advised not to leave any tell-tale evidence of such misuse of magic in broad daylight.

Wei Ying also practises his flute - a new handmade one gifted by none other than the man sharing the same wooden bathtub as him - to strengthen his lungs. Progress is slow, but steady - within a few months, he is able to play a few passages at one go without succumbing into fits of hacking coughs, and he hopes to be able to play a duet with Lan Zhan when the seasons change and the flowers fully bloom. The couple leave the bathtub when their limbs are pruny and nicely warmed up in the freezing wintry night. Lan Zhan makes sure to dry Wei Ying properly, comb his hair, and dress him up in (one of many sets of) pyjamas for the rest of the evening. They continue to spend some productive time together, whether reading, performing stretching or light exercises, admiring the silvery moonlight from the window, or simply talking about plans for the 'morrow, then share sweet nothings while gazing lovingly into each other's eyes and cuddling up with one another in the lounge chair of the front room, with a bowl of stove-warmed herbal soup or plates of mildly sugary desserts for supper in the middle dining room, or simply, lying on blankets arranged on the floor of the study room at the back ala camping indoors.

8:30 pm

Everything is perfect within the Jingshi - everything has been cleaned and arranged to where they belong. Wei Ying is already fast falling asleep on the king-sized bed despite his protests that he wanted to stay up late - because his days feel really, really short -, but he is easily defeated by four pairs of hands gently attacking the soles of his feet in circular presses, and other toe-curlingly marvellous shapes, pressures and motions. The wonderful reflexology miracle, multiplied by the abilities of four well-concealed grandmasters of bodily pleasures and relaxation, leaves the younger man breathless, at the edge of slumber. The killing blow is dealt when Lan Zhan kisses the man's cheeks to wish him good-night to the latter's consternation, and with Wei Ying's head atop his lap, he gives the younger man the most perfect ear-cleaning session ever. As soon as the well-worn bamboo earpick erotically and pleasurably assaults the ear canal in circles, squares, stars and other organic and mind-blowingly delicious shapes, the same as how his feet and legs are being unravelled, undone and conquered by the four servants, Wei Ying finally snores.

Rituals are meant to be repeated, until perfection is achieved along with the desired results. The morning ritual is requested of the servants, and soon, four pairs of hands begin to sexually massage Wei Yings defenceless, naked body on the bed. He doesn't stop orgasming until close to midnight, and Lan Zhan continues to busy himself with his usual, mundane pastimes - such as catching up on more reading, flipping through the classified section in the periodicals to look for more worthwhile jobs in Gusu, practising his cultivation indoors, making a couple of private Fairy Messenger calls as necessary, work on his artisanal skills including painting and calligraphy, altering the passage of time so that he can actually get some real work done - he still has his godly role to fulfill, and he teleports in and out of the Jingshi as needed; of course, he stops by every few minutes to check on Wei Ying's peacefully sleeping form, and makes sure that every single last drop of ejaculate, no matter how liquid-y or pee-pungent, is properly extracted, savoured then swallowed, and that the bed remains spotless throughout the night.

Due to the time-altering effects, by nine o' clock (which has been rewound from midnight, but it's hard to tell because the man kept going back and forth in Time to run his godly errands), Lan Zhan completes his list of daily tasks in the Mortal Realm and in other worlds, and is able to slip into the bed unnoticed by a tremendously sated, drooling young man at the side whose hips continue to jerk sporadically from powerful aftershocks. The lights in the Jingshi are out at exactly the time stipulated by the Lan's family rules for bedtime.

All is well at the Lan er gongzi 's home.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 140

Ordinary people always ask, “What happened to you?” or “What will you do?”, necessitating some defensive responses, such as, “I was born this way”, “A boulder fell on me when the first snowstorms hit and scarred my face, and my limbs aren’t working as well as they used to”, and “I don’t have any future... the people of the Cloud Recesses are kind enough to take me in, so I’ll think of a way to repay everyone and stay on.” He didn’t like questions related to the past and future, because it always meant - or at least felt - that he was explicitly, sometimes outright accusingly, blamed for his own prior misfortunes and whatever baggage burdened his shoulders, and forced to come up with a patchwork of commitments that he couldn’t promise that he’d follow through. Wei Wuxian was supposed to be a man of carefree existence, born to run in the wild, soar to the highest heights and dive to the deepest depths of Man’s limits - he lives in the now, the present, the today; he is not weighed down by the yesterdays, and he shouldn’t need to worry about the tomorrows.

Thus, Wei Ying kept mostly to the trio of boys and Wen Ning, who understood him a whole lot more than the rest of the residents of the Cloud Recesses, even when he regained the ability to move around almost normally; with a half-mask on the face to conceal his true identity (it looks like the one he wore when he first woke up in the Mo village not too long ago) because a handful of Lan disciples remembered a particular Wei gongzi walking through the hallways around the end of last summer; and a walking cane which immensely helped him amble his way around the neighbourhood and trek through some gardens to reach the front gates (and he could walk no further, as he does not carry the necessary Jade Token that allow him entry or exit from the city). The rich and genteel turn up their noses at the handicapped man whenever he approached them, because he dressed like a peasant and was sometimes smudged with mud; the kind and friendly politely greet him and sometimes exchange a few words about the nice Spring weather; the housewives particularly take a liking to his sweet charming words peppered with praise for the beauty of flowers and females

- and reward him with candies or whatever they were cooking in their kitchens at that time; the children, especially the mischievous bratty kids, love to bully him by tripping him and stealing his walking cane, and tease him about the so-called ugly mask - Wei Ying would swing his fists in frustration and immediately call out the boys' naughty deeds, and in the spirit of the Gusu Lans' rules and to the boys' chagrin, the little 'uns are forced to admit their wrongdoing to their mothers and received spanks on their buttocks in broad daylight, to Wei Ying's amusement.

Wei Ying sighed every time he stood outside the Jingshi - the air was chilly and fresh, but it wasn't as frosty as before, and he has freedom to explore and exercise his limbs better than compared to being cooped up inside the building all day. Wen Ning had laid the foundation to the piece of land behind the Jingshi during the last few weeks of winter, and by Spring, it was filled with neatly-arranged rows of thriving seedlings. The trio and their fierce corpse had started the new year with a new mission in life - to spend more time together and explore the world as a quartet, to help those in need and to rid the world of evil (at that point, Wei Ying had to applaud their bravado); they started to conduct night-hunts at dawn and dusk, make their own plans and traps, and sometimes camp out overnight when travelling to further village in search of undead creatures to exorcise and earn their own pocket money. The farm was increasingly left to the four servants who were unofficially ditched by their leader, because Jing Yi thought they were rather cowardly when they discouraged him from sneaking outside past nine o' clock at night to hunt down more dangerous, and rewarding undead prey. Wei Ying felt a little lonely, which he tried to make up each time the boys visited the Jingshi for a convenient meal, but that too, happened quite sparingly as the days lengthen, and entered into the full swing of Spring.

In the fields, Wei Ying didn't need to put on his mask, and he could act naturally without worry of being found out. The servants tended to the lotus pond filled with fish, a barnyard where goats, chickens and rabbits lived, and the farm grown with vegetables and fruiting plants. Wei Ying did a little shovelling, but a twinge on the back muscle forced him to hand the tool to one of the servants, and he decided to help weed one patch of the land; he could at least squat under the shade of large mountaintop trees and use his fingers to pluck the errant plants. He entertained himself by sticking stones and twigs into anthills, flip over beetles and watch them wriggle helplessly upside down, capture caterpillars and then dropping them into the pond of ravenous fish (he tried not to imagine that he'd be eating those same fish who ate the icky hairy caterpillars in a few months' time), and generally had good fun getting rid of pests.

"Wei gongzi sure looks to be having a good time," a gentle voice said from behind him.

"Enn!" Wei Ying replied without turning around - he knew who it was, and there was no cause for concern at all -, "Er ge is teaching at the school, and I've been waking up early to no one in an empty Jingshi, since the sun is so bright at seven," he picked up a stick in which he'd skewered a pesky snail, and tried to feed it to the rabbits near the chicken coop. Naturally, the rabbits hopped away with disgust when the slimy morsel was shoved to their whiskers, and continued to munch on fresh grass and chopped vegetables laid on the ground by one of the servants. "There's plenty to play in the outdoors, compared to staring at the four walls all day during wintertime, and I'm served with warm home-cooked meals at least three times a day. Of course I'm having a good time," Wei Ying added, and finally turned to the side and beamed a wide grin.

Ze Wu Jun took a few steps forward and crouched besides Wei Ying. He picked up a slice of carrot and calmly lifted it up to the animals; immediately, perhaps because the tall man radiated with such a tranquil and benevolent aura, two rabbits, one black and one white, immediately skipped towards him and started to nibble without hesitation. Even a few fuzzy yellow chicks peeped with interest and started to crowd around the hem of his robes.

“Eehhh, that’s not fair! They never do that to me,” Wei Ying cried out in disappointment, “Those two always kept a safe distance and refused to be held by me. They run away each time I get closer, but they’re fine when er ge picks them up by hand or when the servants feed them.” Ze Wu Jun smiled in response but didn’t reply to the man’s complaints of (mis)handling animals. “It must be because you’re such a marvellous Sect Leader that even the animals pay their respects to you and willingly eat out of your hands!” the younger man said with a cheerful, but thinly veiled sly tone.

Ze Wu Jun had known Wei Ying for a long time, and the tricks the man can play on others to earn favours. He merely reached into his robe and pulled out a brown paper bag, which revealed a stick of candied fruit wedges - and Wei Ying wooted with glee; he hadn’t eaten many street snacks since staying inside the Jingshi, partly because Lan Zhan forbade such unhealthy treats from the grounds of his home. The taller man waved the stick invitingly with a knowing smile, and Wei Ying didn’t need to say ‘please’; he proceeded to open his jaws wide and bite into the first candied fruit at the end of the stick - mandarin orange. One jovial munch of a mouthful of citrus coated with caramel sugar and bursts of refreshing zesty, tangy sweetness, and Wei Ying mmmh-mmmh’d with absolutely delight.

“Xi Chen da ge , you really know the way to a man’s heart! You’re such a wonderful da ge ! Lan Zhan never bought any of these for me, he’s such a pompous stuck up stinge!” the spoiled man (brat) remarked in between hearty crunchy chews.

Lan Xi Chen barked out a polite laugh. “Wei Ying,” he addressed the younger man affectionately with his birth name, “Remember, one of the rules around here is that you shouldn’t say bad things behind one’s back,” which promptly shut up Wei Ying and he winced before breaking into an apologetic grin, “Ah... Lan Zhan’s a fabulous cook though he’s very strict about my diet. He’s a great person for taking care of me... I mean, you’re great too! I’m eternally grateful to you, Sect Leader, for accepting me and allowing me to take shelter within this beautiful sanctuary while hiding my identity from the rest of the world!” He quickly gave a curt bow with folded hands at the front, and Xi Chen had to place a palm over to wordlessly tell him, It’s okay, It’s alright.

As Ze Wu Jun fed the animals and Wei Ying (somehow, they ended up with Xi Chen holding up the stick of candied fruits, and Wei Ying deftly pluck one morsel after the other with his mouth - the next one was honeydew melon, followed by an apple wedge), the older man explained that since before daybreak, he’d taken Lil’ Apple down the mountains with a cart of metal ores mined from the caves near the Cloud Recesses, and travelled to Caiyi Town to meet some merchants. “It was tough to negotiate with the laoban to barter for grains in a noisy teahouse full of patrons having their having breakfasts, but we managed to return by the time the sun is high in the sky, with a cartload of wheat and rice sacks,” he sighed tiredly, “Then, I had to attend to some sect matters without a break, and just when I was headed towards the textile factory that makes our distinctive white robes, Wang Ji called and asked me to check on you, to make sure that you’ve woken up from sleep” and he gave a sheepish grin - probably on behalf of his overzealous worrywart younger brother.

Wei Ying clicked his tongue irately, “Ahh, that man... he shouldn’t have troubled you, because I’ve been a good boy and waking up by sunrise... but more importantly, da ge, why did you trade a cart of metals for an equal volume in grains? The whole thing would’ve been worth at least three times as much in food value!” he exclaimed in exasperation. Xi Chen was caught off-guard by the younger man’s comments - he thought he’d receive a gentle lashing about his busy schedule, or an empathetic pat on the back for helping out his sibling - and paused to think.

“.... three... times?”

“Of course!” Wei Ying swung his arms in the air impatiently and chewed the chunk of honeydew even faster, “Back during my teenage years in the Lotus Pier, I helped my foster father to deal with shrewd businessmen, miserly merchants and fraudsters and tricksters who anchored their ships at the Great Lakes to seek great fortunes in Yunmeng’s lush and rich valleys. Since Jiang Cheng was too young, I was tasked to check the quality of their goods, memorize their prices, gather intelligence of what commodities are in high or low demand, and source vital information on trade from reading periodicals to befriending friendly suppliers and gossip in teahouses. That was pretty much how Lotus Pier rose into a hub for commerce in the inlands of the Great Lakes waterway system. Every astute trader knows that you can drive hard bargains with metals, because they’re non-perishable and can be forged in valuable tools and weapons, as compared to, say, farm produce that can only last in the shelves for mere weeks!”

Xi Chen’s eyes went wide with amazement at the revelation, and Wei Ying grimaced an “auuugh!” to the skies in regret at the Gusu Lans’ massive loss due to the failure of their fledgling leader.

Wei Ying used his fingers to pull out the final apple wedge from the stick and almost swallowed it whole in his dismay. He grabbed and shook - with extraordinary strength - at Ze Wu Jun’s collar - sticky fingers be damned - and insisted that he should follow the latter the next time the older man intends to travel and trade his people’s blood, sweat and tears for a decent amount of goods, commodities and food.

“At the very least, da ge , I will make sure Lil’ Apple’s efforts will be worth its time. That donkey is a helluva beast to persuade to carry anything , let alone pull a cart or two!” Wei Ying’s toothy grin was unmistakably convincing, and Lan Xi Chen had to sigh loudly with a nod. He did have a hard time pulling the reins of the errant equine uphill with the grains, after all.

“Mmm. Alright, let me discuss with Wang Ji about this,” he finally said. He reached for Wei Ying’s walking cane to signal the man that they’ll both need to make a short trip away from the Jingshi for a while. “Perhaps you can help me appraise the value of our factory’s textiles and fabrics, which I’m planning to sell next week to exchange for more food; our inventory is running low since there has been no replenishment during winter. You’d do a superb service for the Gusu Lan sect if you could help.

And... I bought quite a number of street snacks from Caiyi Town while I was there in the morning, and left them in my sect office. I’m sure I cannot finish everything, and it’ll be such a waste to give them away,” he added, with a gentle, knowing wink.

Wei Ying became a very, very happy man.

.

(Continued from the first chapter of the arc...)

Life in the Cloud Recesses for Wei Ying needn't be lonesome as the height of Spring approaches and as an exam season kicks in - thus keeping Lan Zhan rather busy -, even with the gradual loss of the company of his favourite trio of boys and his old pal Wen Ning. Ze Wu Jun, whom he fondly calls ' da ge ' - because he tried it once, that man never flinched or showed any signs of disgust, and he'd stuck to it ever since, also, it felt pretty good to have an elder shixiong for once since he'd always been the most senior in the Jiang family - has been making visits to the Jingshi several times a week, whether to have a quiet meal with his younger brother's family (of sorts - accordingly, at least from the eyes of the ruling class of the sect, Lan Zhan is appointed as the legal guardian for Wei Ying, Si Zhui, Wen Ning, and partly, Jing Yi and the servants; Jin Ling is placed under Xi Chen's care after the buttock-revealing disgrace the boy had to endure in the tournament), to discuss about the sect's internal matters or family-related decisions (in which Wei Ying acts to be disinterested in, but in all likelihood, he is eavesdropping the front meeting room whilst lying in bed), or enter unannounced to innocently 'check on the two' and catches them play-wrestling in bed, sometimes without a shirt or a pair of pants on. Xi Chen never batted an eyelid at their intimate, affectionate shenanigans in Jingshi or in the bedroom, hardly raised an eyebrow whenever Wei Ying held Lan Zhan's hand in front of his eyes, or ever questioned the younger brother why he kept feeding Wei Ying by hand and with his own chopsticks. Wei Ying surmised that Lan Zhan must have told Xi Chen da ge something far-fetched, impactful and monumental that fundamentally altered the man's perception of their relationship, that the young refugee (really, Wei Ying is one) has been easily accepted into the folds of the ruling Lan family in the Cloud Recesses.

Wei Ying is grateful for Ze Wu Jun's help, in letting him stay and maintain his concealed identity - he also never pried into Wei Ying's past and circumstances, and treated Wei Ying very well. Due to the grave injuries from the cliff fall, he was no longer a practitioner of the Dark Arts, let alone in cultivation and in martial arts - Wei Wuxian, now more commonly known plainly as Wei Ying, is an ordinary, flawed, weak and magic-less man whose body had sustained wounds and was deemed crippled, relied on others for his personal and bodily needs, and clung onto the one and only man who still cared for him in this cruel, merciless world, Han Guang Jun, sheltered within the fortress-like walls of the Cloud Recesses. Lan Zhan was a busy man, especially in the mornings when he taught disciples the art of becoming perfect Gusu Lan men, so fortunately, his older brother, who was technically even busier as the Sect Leader, was around in case Wei Ying needed some back-up support.

By Spring, Wei Ying had generally regained his strength and solid footing on the ground, and returned to his humblest roots to become a carefree simple folk, temporarily residing in the Cloud Recesses and under the protection of the Twin Jades of Gusu Lan. He also gained some notoriety from the less savoury descriptions given by nosy neighbours, because Jing Yi didn't do a perfect job to keep prying eyes away:

A lazy freeloader in Han Guang Jun's Jingshi room, because he never did any chores to earn his stay - the four servants kept everything in good shape and order;

A spoiled rotten child since servants did all the housework and cleaning, so he was always babied, and unknowingly, stripped of his adult status - people have heard the great and marvellous Han Guang Jun treat a masked Wei Ying like one, such as calling the latter ' baobei ', patting the man's head, holding his hand while crossing the street, carrying stuff for the man, and so on;

A terrorizing farmer, when some people witnessed Wei Ying giving harsh instructions to slave-like Wen Ning on where to dig the irrigation ditches or plant the seeds, and worse, some livestock animals actually went missing and were later found behind the Jingshi for unknown reasons. It was rumoured that chickens, ducks, goats and rabbits were kidnapped from other residents' backyard farms; suspicion fell on Wen Ning at first, because some people thought that the pale but well-built man wasn't an ordinary human being who dared to work in the dead of the winter wearing only a thin layer of rags with swanky-looking chains - but a decree from Ze Wu Jun silenced the naysayers; some out-of-court settlements were made, and the rule of 'not saying bad things behind one's back' was enacted in proper.

(In actual fact, Wei Ying was indirectly the culprit, because he insisted for a jar of Emperor Smiles to go with his dinner when the two were alone and dined with candlelights, and Han Guang Jun relented to pander to the spoiled child (man)'s whims. Later, the er gongzi was seen stumbling around clumsily, dead drunk, and stealing livestock from his neighbours to satisfy the kept man's unreasonable demands to start a ridiculous-sounding enterprise of selling eggs and meats - anyway, the neighbours were hushed up with money from the Lan family's coffers.)

An outrageous daredevil (measured by Gusu Lan standards) who befriended and flirted with young girls and housewives using cheesy, sweet words, then started bartering with uncles and aunties for 'equipment' using his sweet charming words as currency - and sometimes, he'd sell off little trinkets, pottery and insignificant decor from the Jingshi in exchange for more substantial 'equipment'. Soon, one corner of Jingshi had to be carved out as a workspace for Wei Ying's ill-gotten, accumulated trash, which consisted mostly of half-completed projects, plans, tools, spare parts, broken things that could be fixed but there was no commitment as to when, and so on - a small mountain of 'stuff' that was festering and growing adjacent to the Jingshi was testament to that claim;

An accomplished craftsman who foraged nearby forests for materials while he was unsupervised (read: when Lan Zhan wasn't looking), and then made good use of the ‘equipment’ he’d earned from the neighbours, to make sellable stone and woodwork, tinkered with metal scraps salvaged the local iron forges and blacksmiths, create little gadgets and other improvements to household goods found within the Jingshi; soon, he weaved gorgeous and durable but premium-priced baskets, crafted pretty shiny accessories that ladies would pay exorbitant prices for, made decorative pottery, sculptured stone figurines, and even turned a straw broom into a deadly staff with an extendable chained head armed with awesome-looking hidden spikes carved with lotus, dragons and phoenixes - an instant sell-out which fighters would be dazzled and would pay high prices too.

Well, at least that was what Wei Ying would like to believe, and pen down into his autobiography which he was still (and will always be) working on, except that, the latter half of that story was pure bullshit, and a pathetic attempt at glorifying himself at the expense of others, to say the least.

“I did not steal goats. They’re obviously too bulky and they make too much noise when carried off the ground,” Lan Zhan seemed unperturbed as he refuted the claim.

Wei Ying stared at him, appalled by what he implied in what wasn't said, but he let that one slide. He simply grunted in agreement, and used the ink-brush to cross out a sentence from a stack of drafts; he’d found plenty of empty rice paper notebooks and decided to lay his hands on a few to start writing his own version of his life story, post-ending credits, so to speak.

“Actually, I’ve been keeping the neighbours out of the fenced grounds, so there shouldn’t be any gossip about what you’ve been doing in the Jingshi. If anything, it’s probably what people outside of the neighbourhood say that you’ve been hearing. Wei gongzi, I’ve warned you many times, you need to always keep your mask on when you walk into crowded areas such as the morning markets, the school, the factories, the mines, or the office complexes,” Jing Yi added another nail to the coffin of what could’ve been an intriguing, mystifying and best-selling book that aired the Gusu Lans’ dirty laundry out in the open. Wei Ying huffed indignantly and made more crosses and circles on his drafts - he would need to make more corrections and re-write, later.

“ Gongzi , we aren’t leaving you; it’s just that we’ve been going out more often now that the snow is beginning to melt and the roads are opening up, to raise funds for the community, forage for edibles, track down more powerful monsters and hunt for treasures that could be useful for our cause. Why, just last week, the juniors defeated a Bat yaoguai in a cave below the city, and following the information gleaned from the Library Pavillion about undiscovered magical armaments, we found an ancient, abandoned armoury filled with enchanted armour and weapons that the ancestors of the Gusu Lan had left for their descendents, but was buried and forgotten over the passage of time!” Wei Ning was super-excited with his adventures now that he no longer needed to work in the farms all day, and Wei Ying was green with envy at how his creation was enjoying life much more than its former master. He growled with an upset ‘hmp!’ and made more notes to the sides of the pieces of paper; there were plenty of wonderful adventures that the boys and their fierce corpse encountered daily, and his one-dimensional bland biography filled with a braggart's skepticism and sarcasm, of false finger-pointing and wild speculation, and of self-deprecating humour and sometimes, offending remarks about other individuals, merely proved the point that his life was indeed, plainly put, boring and lonesome these days.

“Other than the part about my butt-bearing defeat in the tournament that needs to be deleted... Is that what the pile of scrap metal and wood outside the building really is? Did Wei gongzi really sell off things in the Jingshi and created that bunch of stuff out there, that is purported to hold great value? Where’s this amazing straw broom that can kill with a single blow?”

Jin Ling was even more super-excited at the prospects of finding more treasures within the Cloud Recesses, and craned his neck to look out the window at that said chaotic pile of trash. Nearly everyone tsk-tsk'ed at the boy simultaneously; Jin Ling is such a naive and innocent child, after all.

“Everyone, Wei gongzi is writing a book to pass the time and fulfil his own personal fantasies. There shouldn't be any pressure for him to keep to the facts or to write passages about events that do not involve or interest him. It's called 'fiction', so please, let him be and let's support his endeavour!” the cognizant and empathic Si Zhui gently chastised the others on the dining table, and clapped his hands twice to call for their attention. They were supposed to enjoy a lunch prepared by the trio of boys inside the Jingshi in an early Spring mid-day; Wen Ning had just finished some farm work and ate everything in his bowl with finger-licking satisfaction, and somehow in his tired and overindulgent state, carelessly ended up asking about the progress of Wei Ying's writing - leading up to the raucous protest (or, list of corrections) by the same individuals who were written inside the drafts without their prior consent.

“Y... Yeah! These days, I just want to have good sleep, good food, good companionship, and a good way to pass the time. It's all very simple, really - the joys of pursuing the simple things in life, including writing nonsense for my personal amusement... t-that's what it's all about!” Wei Ying added to the rebuke, although there was really no need to be overly defensive about his intentions and actions. He was already a free man and needn't care about the criticisms from others.

Everyone shrugged and couldn't be bothered to argue back, because Si Zhui's lotus root pork rib soup was super-excellent. Soon, the middle dining room of the Jingshi was once again filled with agreeable mmmh-mmmhs and greedy slurps.

Lan Zhan looked nothing out of the ordinary and finished his bowl of soup a little sooner than the rest.

Ze Wu Jun was hyper-aware of his younger brother's emotional state. He put down his half-finished bowl and turned to the side.

“You didn't steal any goats, Wang Ji. You merely borrowed one for a night, and the next morning, I brought it back to its owner,” Lan Xi Chen murmured with a low, barely audible whisper.

“Didn't steal.”

Xi Chen smiled and knew the younger sibling all too well. Whenever Lan Zhan reverted to his two-worded phrases, it meant he was deep in contemplation, riled up in all seriousness, or wasn't quite his usual self.

“Mmm. I know. You didn't. Now shouldn't you go for seconds? There's still a lot left in the soup pot,” the taller man gestured towards the middle of the dining table. He had a long, angsty discussion with the poker-faced sibling (who didn't look or sound angsty, but Xi Chen knew too well how Lan Zhan portrayed his angst, concerns and distress), but in the end, the Sect Leader managed to persuade Lan Zhan to loosen his leash and let Wei Ying travel out of the Cloud Recesses a bit, strictly for business purposes, of course; the next cartload of minerals was due for sale in the coming few days, and the sect may be able to open up new trade routes by establishing a supply line with the province of Yunmeng made of fine white silk (which is of superior quality than ordinary silk textiles), mountain bamboo products

(in the hands of talented artisans, they sell well), jars of mountain springwater (with claims such as boosting one's immunity and prolonging one's lifespan), tools, accessories and souvenirs fashioned out of metal and precious stones (of which there is high demand from low-lying settlements around the Great Lakes, such as Lotus Pier - someone would have to convince Sect Leader Jiang Wanyin to agree to the trade and open up the money-laden floodgates for merchants), and even herbs and wild vegetables from the highlands (which are exotic and if properly marketed, can fetch good prices from interested buyers); all of these crazy but realistically believable ideas came from Wei Ying, of course, and Lan Xi Chen is more than happy to capitalize on it, because he hasn't had any praiseworthy ways of earning money for the sect since he took the reins from his younger brother.

“Wang Ji?” Xi Chen asked again and cocked his head, curious but unalarmed - Lan Zhan did have a habit of overthinking sometimes, to the point of inaction; the older brother again, knows that very well.

Lan Zhan gave a faint disgruntled snort, “Didn't steal”, louder this time so that everyone, especially Wei Ying, could hear his final standing. The man raised his empty bowl, and Si Zhui respectfully, and eagerly refilled it with the flavourful brownish broth topped with a few slices of softened and firm lotus roots and chunks of melt-in-your-mouth fatty pork meat.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 141

While the four servants cleaned the middle dining room, everyone moved to the largest front meeting chamber of the Jingshi. With the boys staying over after the sumptuous meal, the meeting chamber became a warzone, at least to the house owner's standards - the furniture had been rearranged without his consent, chairs of all shapes and sizes were grouped messily to where the boys wanted to sit, and according to how they wanted to sit, tables were moved so their positions no longer followed to where they belong, supposedly along certain gridline patterns formed on the wooden floor (thus, breaking the feng shui, if any), and even decor pieces were taken off the shelves because they boys were curious and wanted to take a closer look - and weren't returned to their proper places. Still, Lan Zhan was able to take deep breaths and keep his sanity, because Wei Ying was beside him and that was what mattered most. Wei Ying still looked dishevelled despite Si Zhui's best efforts to comb his hair and tie the robes - he barely rose out of bed before lunch, after all -, and he busied himself by flipping through disorderly piles of paper on a desk that had been dragged out from the study room.

Lan Zhan muttered something about "in every timeline, there is always a constant - that the name of Wei Wuxian will always drop into obscurity after the events of the Guanyin temple, and the name of Lan Wang Ji shall follow suit - fates intertwined as confidants (and even soulmates) to one another - thus, the publishing of such a voluminous piece of written literature will garner little interest from the greater public, and at most, become a legendary sales flop and relegated to the dusty shelves of libraries that would be buried by the sands of time". The trio of boys were already busy exchanging excited conversations about the afternoon plans and didn't catch his words; Wen Ning hung around in the background and tried to make himself look useful (or busy) by serving tea and plates of roasted peanuts, so he missed what Lan Zhan said; and Lan Xi Chen's interest prickled with intrigue; he grabbed a handful of nuts and leaned closer. Wei Ying merely scratched his head since he couldn't fathom what the older man meant, though it sounded rather offensive that he'd be forgotten by the masses, and already, the flames that buoyed his aspirations as a young writer had been put out by ice-cold water.

With arms flung into the air with a loud "Ahh, I give up!", fickle-minded Wei Ying ditched the idea of publishing his fictional biography after lunch, barely a week after the idea was conceived and he already had some drafts to show. The whole thing was shelved, along with his previous suggestions of setting up an enterprise to sell organic eggs and antibiotic-free meat from the farm behind the Jingshi, or a workshop to make magic-less amulets, charms, gadgets and (fake, useless, but swanky-looking) talismans - the pile of trash that Jin Ling pointed out earlier was proof that he tinkered with the concepts of becoming his own laoban, as amongst the mountain of stuff there were half-constructed models of three-tiered chicken coops, partially completed farming equipment, unused sets of carving and sculpting tools, prototypes of fancy but gaudy-looking trinkets, and stacks of talismans made from cheap rice paper stolen from Lan Zhan's personal stash of calligraphy-grade parchments (of note, Wei Ying tried to dye the paper with yellow turmeric powder stolen from the kitchens, though the resulting talismans looked fake as hell.)

Then, out of the blue, Si Zhui politely asked from the corner where the trio mingled and had in-depth discussions of something, in which Jing Yi and Jin Ling started hissing at him to stop seeking outsiders' view (and that caught Wei Ying's attention, of course), "Wei gongzi, Wei gongzi, what do you think? Since we'll be joining the next trip down the mountains to sell some Gusu Lan goods, we wanted to contribute some things, in some way, to pay back the generosity of the people of the Cloud Recesses who've treated us so kindly during winter.

Jing Yi thinks he could bring along the magical armours and weapons that we found in the Bat cave last week, and make a quick buck in Caiyi Town, since the equipment seemed a little too big and heavy for anyone in the Cloud Recesses to wear. Our ancestors must have been brawny, large-sized cavemen! The value of the powerful magical enchantments could probably be four times of normal finely-crafted equipment.

Jin Ling is fascinated by the idea of a straw broom with a hidden, detachable spiked head that can double as a perfect assassin's weapon of choice. He's good with making bow and arrows, and he wants to try dabbling in weaponizing everyday items, which he thinks will sell well since many adventurers gather in that town in search of quests and treasures."

Si Zhui had to raise a hand and keep his feet planted firmly on the floor, when he was pummeled by fists - in a light-hearted manner - by the other two red-faced boys for having their secret discussions divulged in front of the Twin Jades of Gusu Lan, one of whom is the highly respectable Sect Leader. He continued to elaborate the crux of the issue.

"Do you think this is wise? I spent a few months after summer in Caiyi Town, and noticed that there are already quite a number of blacksmiths and weapon stores with booming businesses. They probably boast better-sized armaments and have more interesting products on display, so I'm a bit uncertain if their ideas would sell. We don't even know what kind of adventurers usually walk into the shops to browse for goods, or what kind of monsters they intend to fight--"

Wen Ning finally had a chance to interject and he held up two plates to the air to grab everyone's attention, "Enn! I followed A-Yuan closely and we explored quite a fair bit of Caiyi and the other towns in the Cai district. There are plenty of farms in the vicinity, but none that grows peanuts; there are plenty of teahouses that we've patronized, and all of them serve every other nut except for these peanuts! In fact, I think these good-quality peanuts from Lanling, near Shandong, would be hot ticket items in teahouses, restaurants and most eateries in town!" He even popped one from a plate and gave it a hearty crunch to demonstrate to everyone in the room how fresh and aromatic the snack was.

At that point, Jing Yi wrinkled his eyebrows in disdain at the extremely mundane proposal, "Who the heck would want to sell peanuts to teahouses and earn silvers, when we can sell plate armours, shields, broadswords and spears to other sects' headquarters and famous weapon stores, and earn gold ingots?"

Jin Ling didn't like how his awesome transformed straw broom was seamlessly dismissed by the two former Wens of their group, especially by food, "Y-Yeah! I used to eat those kinds of peanuts everyday in my hometown, and there's nothing extraordinary about them! A broom that makes people bite the dust is worth a hundred... no, a thousand times more than a peanut! Yeah, this... err... Dustless Broom that I will invent, will earn tons of profits more than mere dusty, dirty peanuts!"

The entire talk about peanuts versus weapons was becoming ridiculous, and Sect Leader Lan Xi Chen struggled to keep a straight face, but ended up choking and coughing into his cup of pu'er tea; one of the servants quickly handed him a handkerchief. Lan Zhan, however, had other things in his mind. He was deep in thought and considered what the boys and Wen Ning said. He tapped his fingers on the surface of a table in the meeting chamber, in harmony with his clothed feet on the teakwood floor. "Market research..." he muttered.

Wei Ying jumped from his seat excitedly and nearly fell because his crippled legs couldn't hold his weight, and he had to steady himself against the chair's armrest. Lan Zhan was by his side almost instantly. "Of course, we need market research!" the young twentysomething exclaimed with a clap of hands and promptly stole his soulmate's idea (right next to him, no less), "Everyone has a point, but they don't add up!"

"What do you mean, Wei gongzi?" Jing Yi asked.

"Well, it's true that magical armour and weapons that you find from your treasure hunts, and straw broom and other crazy inventions that you make, will certainly be worth a lot," he started, and both Jing Yi and Jin Ling suddenly sported smug looks, "Also, I'm not disregarding simplistic, but still profitable ideas of selling peanuts or other agricultural produce to put food on our tables," and Wen Ning grinned adorably at being acknowledged for his contribution, "But Si Zhui has a good point that we all need to consider - what do the customers in Caiyi Town really want?"

Jin Ling's eyes went wide with amazement, though not necessarily an enlightened one. "Customers...?" he murmured, dazed.

"Yes! Customers are kings, and customers are always right!" Wei Ying cheerfully rounded up his foreword to a topic he had long held interest in, but never quite had the right audience until then, and immediately launched into what would, in another timeline, be an incredible sales pitch to introduce a then-unpublished idea-cum-commercial, finance and literary-wonder titled "Wei Ying's A wesome S elling Skills", which is more aptly known by its acronym - the A.S.S.

.

Wei Ying lectured in length about the importance to find out what people would want to buy, and what the Cloud Recesses could offer as an equal trading partner - one of the basic tenets of the principle of supply and demand. They should make one, or a few visits to the Cai district and anywhere else where their target market resided, and survey the population. “You should have on hand some prototypes, samples or miniature models, and show them what you think they would like to see, buy and use, using words that you think they would like to hear. By the end of the day, you’ll have a better of grasp of what will sell, what wouldn’t, and what taglines or advertising jingles to go along when you finally mass produce the products and go to the streets for sell-outs!” he waved his hands in wide, sweeping arcs, and impressed upon the band of bright-eyed young boys and Wen Ning. Even Ze Wu Jun seemed interested, judging from the way he sat on the seat’s edge and gripped the sides of the abused furniture in anticipation of receiving the holy grail of How-To-Sell sermons.

Then, he described how they could dive in and capture a slice of the market from the competitors - colloquially known as a ‘pie’ or its locally flavoured version, cong you bing (葱油饼; scallion pancakes) -, expand the pancake’s size and have a bigger bite out of it - by adding more varieties to capture a wider demographic of customers, for example -, or create an entirely new pancake for themselves - by innovating and inventing completely new products that people didn’t know they need, until then. They could sell the products by themselves, hire some (cheap, affordable internal labour) disciples from the Cloud Recesses, or establish distributorships, engaging third parties to promote and market in places beyond their reach, or other contractual arrangements.

“However, we must be careful not to become too influential, too famous or too powerful that the Imperial Court may see us as forming a monopoly or a cartel with a handful of allied merchants! The taxman will come after us, jealous competitors will falsely complain about our heavy-handed ways of running the business, or worst of all, the Emperor may take a liking to a successful venture and force us to hand it over to the Imperial Court!” he warned, citing corruption and antitrust laws that had been designed since 2000 B.C. in the Middle Kingdom.

The talk veered into the area of how to set up and run an enterprising business, including advertising and promotion, and collaboration - even collusion - with allied traders. Wei Ying went on to describe how to first get people’s buy-in to try - once they’ve snared the first wave of customers, they should try to get the word out by mouth, by posters, by street announcers, and by tie-ins with other merchants and their products and services.

“Running a business is like surviving, then thriving, in a complex but perfectly natural ecosystem. You want to dominate the rest, but you should really co-exist with the big boys, climb up to the top of the food chain, and earn bigger returns in as many spaces as possible - which should be your main goal. You can use discounts, free gifts and all sorts sales tactics to snare a good bargain and a better deal, but you should never engage in price wars too extensively, otherwise, everyone loses once your unique product offerings become mere cheap, indistinguishable commodities to the customers,” he explained using awe-inspiring concepts that bedazzled the jaw-dropped young ‘uns.

“Wei gongzi ! Magics ‘R Us is a large franchise that specializes in selling enchantments and magically-imbued weapons... I know the owners of the store in Caiyi, so perhaps I can discuss with them and forge a trading alliance. I can enroll into its genuine suppliers programme for supplying magical treasures solely out of the districts surrounding the Cloud Recesses... that way, I can make sure that the treasures found around here have ready buyers and at good prices. If I can get my friends to help out, and keep the supply of treasures coming, eventually, the high-quality and powerful relics of the Cloud Recesses will be famous throughout the entire country with the widespread influence of Magics ‘R Us!” Jing Yi was the first to offer his insights after sitting through an hour of Wei Ying’s lessons about the A.S.S.

“That’s right, Jing Yi. You don’t have to keep making one-time sales in Caiyi Town - you can make it a sustainable, long-term business venture with your downlines! Bring on the sales of the Gusu Lans’ greatest treasures!” Wei Ying winked and gave the boy a thumbs-up, paired with a sparkly million-dollar smile that would surely capture the hearts of anyone being lured into a sleazy pyramid scheme, a Ponzi scheme or their ilk. Ze Wu Jun raised an eyebrow at the statement that sounded wrong on so many levels, and for the second time, choked and coughed into his cup of tea. He had to excuse himself and run to a corner of the meeting chamber to clear his throat, as he didn’t want to look and sound too impolite in a room full of young, creative minds. The hapless servant with the handkerchief followed him.

Jin Ling refused to be outsmarted by his peers. “Umm... Wei gongzi !” he shouted and raised his hands desperately (and very competitively) for unnecessary reasons, “I... I have another suggestion! I could approach blacksmiths and sundry shop owners with my Dustless Broom idea! They know their customers, and can give out samples for them to try - if there is a demand, I’ll not only be able to sell to fighters and assassins, but also housewives and street cleaners too! I’m good at making weapons and can start a weapons forge team here in the Cloud Recesses!” and he stood tall with arms on his hips with great pride at his smartass-ery.

Wei Ying hesitated before giving the boy a well-deserved thumbs up and a half-a-million dollar grin, “Er... Yes, that’s an excellent idea too! Good job thinking that one up! Make sure you conduct a proper field trial, because we should confirm that the users know how to handle the brooms. If the idea flies, I'll teach you how to draw up a business plan to address any... err... customer and safety concerns... before carrying out the mass production, okay?" Jin Ling nodded energetically, since he'd been given the blessings from the A.S.S. master, and the prospect of receiving personal training boosted his confidence. Ze Wu Jun had taken another peanut and upon hearing the horrific proposal, his breath hitched and the peanut went down the windpipe. Violent, racking cough ensued in that corner of the room, and the servant patted his back in the hopes of getting the offending peanut out.

Lan Zhan had, in theory, read, heard and worshipped the entire A.S.S. theory in a past timeline, so he didn't need to see to the end of the repetitive, and rather silly conversation. Instead, he stood up and went to see to his brother's condition. Right on the dot, the servant dashed to the kitchenette of the Jingshi to fetch a jug of cooled water.

Wen Ning was adamant that his peanut idea would still work in the face of awesome weapons. Peanuts were, as everyone knew, plain foodstuff commodities that merchants can easily buy in abundant amounts from elsewhere, if there was a business interest - but there wasn't, really, since there were so many other types of nuts around typically found in teahouses; therefore, his peanut idea wouldn't command any special attention from customers - unless with discounts and other forms of bargains.

"Wei... Wei gongzi !" Wen Ning jumped and waved his hand from behind, because despite his height, people tended to ignore his rather dead-ish presence. Wei Ying gestured at him to speak up. "Umm... if... if the weapons and other items sell well, why not add the peanuts as free gifts or bonuses to the merchants and their customers? You said... err... 'a bang for your buck', right? Let's use peanuts to entice them to buy from us! They're cheap to grow and roast, and I've already planted hundreds of peanut seedlings in the farm behind the Jingshi... so there'll probably be mountains of peanuts by the time harvest season rolls in!" Wen Ning pointed at one of the windows towards the farm; indeed, the fierce corpse had planted countless vegetation and crops at the end of Winter, and who knew what alternative treasures would sprout out from the piece of tranquil, ploughed land.

Wei Ying had been so enamoured with the boys' crazy ideas involving fancy killer weapons that it took him a full minute to reverse his gears back to the topic of peanuts. He cocked his head and gave the fierce corpse a curious glance, wordlessly asking 'Explain' and 'What do you mean'.

Wen Ning proudly listed down some examples, "Err... like, how that aunty in the morning market gives free extra vegetables if we bought a sack of potatoes... so, let's say, for each sword sold, we'll give two bags of peanuts at no extra cost!" He quickly grabbed Jin Ling's sheathed Suihua off the floor and held it up high, then raised a couple of plates of roasted peanuts beneath it near the hilt to illustrate the offering.

Immediately the boys snickered and started to cackle like juveniles exchanging dirty jokes with one another. The imagery was rather vulgar, with the sword pointing towards the ceiling, and two bunches of peanuts rolling around in their plates underneath it.

"W-What's so funny? The peanuts I grow will be big, so the customer gets two huge bags of hard-shelled, and very large tasty juicy nuts!" He jiggled the plates temptingly, but that only incited the boys to start losing their balance on their chairs and soon, they started to roll on the floor with crazy laughter. Si Zhui was grinning from ear to ear too, and promptly asked Wen Ning to put everything down, lest he embarrass himself further.

Wei Ying gleefully joined the boys on the floor because he has a dirty mind too. Lan Zhan calmly and patiently pounded his older brother's back, because apparently, after spitting out the offending peanut, Ze Wu Jun took a grateful sip of refreshingly palate-cleansing water, and choked again in the dark corner of the Jingshi.

.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, the boys will be taking their first real trip out of the Cloud Recesses in recent months, I feel so excited for them! Not only are they starting new adventures for the new year, but they're also entrepreneurs in the making with plenty of ideas for prospering the Gusu Lan sect!”

“Mn.”

“I'll also have the chance to tag along, with your brother's permission, to make sure that we engage in proper negotiations in favour of your sect. I feel really good about being appointed as an advisor of sorts, it really boosts my confidence despite my physical condition. In fact, I'm very excited about this chance to walk through towns and cities and meet more people, I might even unknowingly ditch the walking cane halfway! Ha ha ha!”

“Mn. You do not need to worry, Wei Ying. I will be by your side during the trip.”

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, you’ll always carve a walking stick out of bamboo, just like in the past, when you made bamboo flutes on the go, just for me, right?”

“Mn. Always for you, Wei Ying.”

“Ahhh... why must you reply like that! It feels as though you’re flirting with me. I’m blushing even though we’re alone in the Jingshi, since everyone left after the afternoon snack... Oh! Lan Zhan, I need a new identity since I can’t walk around and introduce myself as Wei Wuxian... the former Yiling Patriarch! Someone out there could hold a grudge against me and go after my back!”

“Mn. You should wear the mask but use a new name. Business owners and merchants are more willing to talk if they know how to address the person properly.”

“That’s right! So... I should stick to the Lan surname to avoid any suspicion, since I’ll be wearing white like the rest of you, and travelling with the group from the Gusu Lan sect. Ah... Lan... Wu Xian? No, no, that’s too obvious. Lan... Wei Ying? That sounds a bit girlish. In fact, it almost feels like I’ve been married into your family and have taken your family’s name! Ha ha ha!”

“... it... sounds lovely. Very lovely.”

“Lan... Lian Hua? Lan... Hua Lian? No, no, I should avoid using the Lotus flower as part of my name, it is too telling because lotus does not typically grow in the mountains of Gusu.”

“As long as you use the Lan family name, I am... very happy... and satisfied.”

“Err... Lan... Wang Xian? Does that work? It mixes our names a bit, and it sounds quite easy to the tongue for pronunciation.”

“... Wei Ying, that name is... reserved. Please use another.”

“Eh? Reserved? You mean, like, for your future son or daughter? Ha ha! Alright, let’s see...”

“Mn. It would be a nice name for a baby.”

“Huh... for a baby, you say. I wonder when you’ll get married and have a child! In a month? A year? In ten years? Ha ha ha...”

“Mn. It does not matter. When I get married, and have a child with my spouse, it is perfectly fine.”

“Lan Zhan! Stop looking weirdly at me, did you drink something strange just now? Your face is a little red all of the sudden... I must’ve pressed the wrong hot buttons in you with that joke... Ha ha ha! Anyway... Lan... Wu Ji? How does that sound?”

“Mn. It is good.”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 142

(This was written after a long hiatus, so expect that some things will go missing, be changed without reason, or made up on the fly. Mind you, Wei Ying loves surprises, and Lan Zhan doesn't mind playing God in their world to pander to his beloved's whims :-)

Wei Ying is as bratty and whiny, as he is as bold and witty. The order, however, is inconsequential, because these qualities equally define and encompass his irksome personality.

It was supposed to be a typical dinner for two - including a bit of mischief right before the one and only main course. Since the boys and the rest of the group were busy with their own evening plans, it was decided that Lan Zhan and the significant other could have an ensemble of dishes that didn't take up the entire surface of a dining table, for once. The master of the house ordered - rather, he brought from the kitchens with barely-restrained hurried footsteps and a handful of steaming-hot goods in his arms - a platter of tasty deep-fried, sweet and sour squirrel-shaped fish - which Wei Ying had quietly professed his love for during past encounters with that local Gusu specialty -, plates of winter vegetables, tofu and mushrooms stir-fries, and a pot of the perennial lotus root pork rib soup (Wei Ying thought that the kitchens probably had a huge, eternally boiling, bubbling cauldron filled of his favourite soup hidden away in a corner, where Lan Zhan could always scoop up bowls from the said imaginary gigantic vessel).

As Lan Zhan cleared the middle room of the Jingshi of discarded, half-completed Wei Ying-themed projects that had been carelessly left all over the place, and arranged the cutlery and dishes - because Wei Ying hardly lent a hand in menial tasks such as setting the table -, the latter naughtily picked off chunks of meat from the fish with his (possibly unwashed) fingers - still crispy, dry and gratuitously greasy, because Lan Zhan didn't want to drench the beautifully-carved meat in bright red sauce and leave it to soak into a state of unacceptable sogginess. Wei Ying ignored calls of his name as he skipped - hobbled, really, as fast as he could with his weakened legs -, and a fistful of fishmeat, to the front of the Jingshi to look for his regular visitors-cum-playmates.

Lan Zhan merely shook his head and sighed. He continued to patiently, and generously, wiped the table, decorated the tabletop with flowers, semi-precious glittering stones and candlelights, and arranged the tableware in perfect geometrical patterns; even taking the time to garnish the dishes with seeds and nuts, chopped spring onion and more seasoning, bits of herbs and spices for texture and taste, and anything else that would make the mouth-watering dinner for a loving couple, as amazing as a man-turned-god could successfully pull off with his own two divinely hands. The amber-warm and ambient atmosphere that pervaded the interior of their shared home, with soft guqin music playing in the background (magically performed, no less), and muted sandalwood mixed with exotic and calming scents, couldn't be more intimate, even romantic, for any person who hadn't experienced the grace and hospitality of His Eminence, Han Guang Jun.

Wei Ying, however, was a different ball game altogether. He couldn't care less about the venue and seemingly luxurious setting for dinner - his whiny, noisy stomach would be sated in a short while, which was a regular, daily occurrence (because Wei Ying never went hungry for as long as he was under Lan Zhan's care), and he wanted to have a little fun and attention before having his first bite.

Crouching behind the doorsill and a partially-closed heavy wooden door lined with ornate cloud-themed patterns and translucent but sturdy rice paper, and away from the biting freeze, Wei Ying waved a piece of deep-fried fish out in the open and hoped its aroma would permeate through the frosty air. The chickens and rabbits have returned to their coop, the birds and insects have mostly disappeared or gone to sleep, and very little nightlife sprang out especially when temperature plummeted after the early sundown - but a few denizens of the dark do emerge after the last vestiges of a fiery, cloudy sunset sank beneath a horizon of frost-covered bamboo and barren hilltops. A pitter-patter of padded footsteps, and finally, a soft rumbling mrrreow! could be heard. Wei Ying tsk'ed and clicked his tongue rapidly, enticing what seemed to be a small figure cast with long shadows from flickering torches located outside of the building.

“Wei Ying,” the comforting voice called out from within the Jingshi, amongst the indistinct sounds of clinking porcelain and rustling cloth.

“Enn! Just a few more minutes!” the eager reply came, as several balls of shadow appeared at the front of the Jingshi and approached the proffered offering of Gusu’s famous fried fish.

.

The so-called minutes eventually stretched into half an hour, but not before pouty Wei Ying received a gentle tongue-lashing of brief, four-syllabled lectures about inappropriate feeding of strays, the risks of harbouring dirty, diseased animals, the dangers of drawing blood when fighting off vexed four-legged furries, and-- partner-cum-amnesiac lover, the more he tells off the latter, the more likely the offending act would recur anyway.

“-- and please, stop disturbing the neighbours’ pets, Wei Ying,” the older man tenderly admonished, although knowing his younger, feisty bed

Wei Ying sniffled - partly from the cold outside air, and partly from getting teary-eyed after howling in pain from being ambushed by frightening claws and fangs -, then dutifully raised one arm higher so that Lan Zhan would do a better job in bandaging his bleeding limb. Dinner had gone cold, the deep-fried fish on the table had lost its crunch, and there was a large, ugly, bloated swathe of white gauze wrapped around the palm and the back of his right hand. Never mind that the ruined meal that was within arm's reach and that his stomach protested from being left empty for too long - it had the privilege of never missing a meal during waking hours within the Jingshi; both men sat beside the dining table while one tended to the other's wounds.

"It wasn't my fault! I'm a good man doing a good deed by feeding poor, hungry animals. You can't blame me that the cats love yours truly to bits - the neighbours', the strays, or those that come out from the mountains at night. Plus, they looked clean, behaved well when given food, rubbed my legs when they're happy, and made awesome purring sounds while smiling at me!" he cried in retort.

Lan Zhan stilled in mid-wrap and gave the other a quizzical look. "Wei Ying, our neighbours trained their animals well like any typical Gusu Lan would, by following our family rules; the strays in the Cloud Recesses are few in number and they are not known to attack people; and I've not heard of feral cats sneaking into our city from the mountains because they naturally do not thrive in these highlands," he replied calmly like a seasoned teacher answering a student's inane questions - in four-syllabled phrases sprinkled with plenty of thoughtful pauses in-between; he even tilted his head to gesture their surroundings outside the window - the perpetually chilly and mist-blanketed scenery of bamboo and pine forests, jagged rocks and steep cliff faces that the Cloud Recesses is famous for. A light-blue healing spell was weaved out of thin air, and the bandage around Wei Ying's hand glowed, which left the younger man feeling better when the throbbing discomfort numbed away for the time being. The edges of the cloth moved on their own, tying themselves into neat knots and then tucked themselves beneath layers of sterile white.

Wei Ying stared at the spell-casting spectacle with interest, and simply blurted dismissively, "Yeah, yeah, whatever," without really giving a second thought. He turned his injured limb in front of his eyes, and admired Lan Zhan's medical handiwork - it had transformed in appearance, perfect and symmetrical in shape, like a tidy band around the palm, clean and bloodless, and still glowed with magic as tendrils of life energy worked their way beneath the gauze to repair the broken skin, mop away the spilled rivulets of blood, and cleanse all signs of ill and hurt. When he looked up, he realized that Lan Zhan was staring at him expectantly, with his arms on his hips. It was time for a truthful confession as payment for the skilled treatment.

Wei Ying sighed heavily and shrugged. He flung his arms up in the air to show his exasperation, "Alright! I lured the cats with fried fish, and a few of them came. I recognized the cream-coloured one owned by that grandma living down the street, a couple of stray tabbies who frequent this area, and one ruffled-looking calico individual that I've not seen before - so it must've been from the bush outside the Cloud Recesses. I stroked the critters' backs and flicked their tails for fun as they ate the treat on the floor. Since the calico was a male, and fully-fledged males are such a rarity because they're so unapproachable, so I... errr..." he faltered and fidgeted restlessly for the right words, "... err... went ahead and touched its balls. But-- but, oh my goodness, Lan Zhan! Did you know how soft and warm cat's balls are?" he waved his arms excitedly - having forgotten about the injury -, and started to make suggestive grasping motions with his fingers, "The firmness and softness merged in perfect unison and in ultimate sensory harmony! The tuft of silky fur around each berry-sized sphere, the full weight felt as one dribbles them like bouncing a cuju (蹴鞠) ball, the tantalizing elasticity when pressed using fingernails...!”

His wild descriptions came to a grinding halt when he finally realized that he looked like an overexcited fool in front of the stoic, expressionless - except for the dreaded pursed lips and a tightened grip around the well-built waist -, even slightly annoyed - which was probably held back by Han Guang Jun’s immense self-control and discipline -, but very eminent figure of the Cloud Recesses - one who, in all likelihood, does not speak of, nor think highly of, playing with the testicles of lesser creatures. Wei Ying cleared his throat and quickly descended from his juvenile adrenaline-high, adjusted his limbs to neutral positions, and sat like a proper gentleman at the dining table with his head bowed down in guilt.

A sigh from the older man. Wei Ying could feel the bewildered stares on him, and of holes being drilled into his body, possibly his soul as well, in search of the answers to the universal conundrum of “Why, Wei Ying, Why” that is usually accompanied with a pained or strained facepalm. His naked toes wriggled restlessly upon the clean wooden floor of the dining room, his rump felt tight on the cushion of the teakwood chair, tiny itches started to dance from the nape of his neck down to his small of his back; unable to contain his viscerally-obvious anxiety, he reached for a pair of chopsticks on the table to signal that he was apologetic, he deserved to curl up into a non-testicular ball and be ignored for his idiocy, and it was time to move on from an unfunn dirty humour session to a decent mealtime for two.

“... you said, there was a calico cat? As in, orange, black, and--”

Wei Ying didn't want to dig a deeper hole into his grave and dwell on the matter of outraging the modesty of felines of the same sex, so he lightly waved off the question and grabbed the chopsticks with his injured hand, and a bowl of cooled rice with the other. He winced when a twinge of pain shot up his bandaged open palm - the spot where--

-- Yeah, yeah, that kind of cat. Colourful and cute. The one that spun around and hissed like crazy, then bit and scratched me out of spite because I pinched its sensitive balls. It was wrong of me to abuse animals, so I apologize. I quickly washed my hands in the bucket of freezing water by the doorway when I yelled for help, and by the time you arrived, all four cats had run away from the noise. Now, can we start on dinner? I'm sorry, I can't wait anymore, and I'm really famished!" His fingers shook uncharacteristically as he tried to steady himself by balancing his grip over the small, but noticeable sting beneath the gauze. His eyes remained off focus, directed at somewhere between the rice bowl in front of him and the plates of chilled dishes that had been left neglected on the tabletop.

Lan Zhan must have noticed Wei Ying's predicament and shoved away his line of questioning - both his larger, meatier hands reached out to cover the latter's with such tenderness, wordlessly telling the latter not to rush, that he wasn't upset anymore, and that he could and would wait for whatever that needed to be said, at the time of Wei Ying's choosing. Gentleness and warmth ensued in the amber-colored candle lit backdrop of a quiet, curtained dining room; it was dark, moonless and frigid outside in early Spring, but inside the sparsely furnished part of the Jingshi, unornamented oil lamps that painted everything in warm, cozy hues and unembellished thick padded walls kept temperature slightly above bearable levels so that both men were comfortable even whilst dressed in their night robes.

Lan Zhan's thicker fingers slid along Wei Ying's hands, caressed the fresh bandage, and carefully gripped each other like a protective shield encasing the younger man - the significance was not lost to the latter - Wei Ying spiritually felt a person's true warmth, or rather, the other's body heat, through their touch - the contact between their skin blazed with unseen imaginary sparks and electricity, his heart did skip a few beats in anticipation of where the older man's fingers would touch next, or if he would hear the swishing of cloth and robes, or - he would dare not hope for - but he suddenly had a terrible, terrible, desperate want of sensing, feeling, listening, smelling, tasting the nearness of their shared intimate presence, of two men sitting alone in a room with nothing but the sounds of their heavy breathing in the immediate vicinity; alas, the pervading silence was constantly broken by the rhythmic, soft but purposeful notes of guqin, rising with discernible intensity and pace until the melodious strings crested like a crescendo of streams flowing one after the other towards waterfalls, blending well with the stronger scents of incense with increasing hints of fragrances that awaken, energize and refresh, albeit without any trails of smoke from anywhere within the building - another sign of mood-altering magic being used to create what is desired, to forget what isn't, to put one's mind at ease and to disarm any guarded feelings.

Wei Ying was enthralled by the moment of, for the lack of better word in his crude vocabulary, hand-holding, with his best buddy and heroic saviour - not to forget, a bed-warming partner, possibly a faraway wish for a soulmate, though that nagging thought of sharing body and life with another person of the same gender continued to be the final, baffling obstacle that needed to be crossed - and helplessly locked gazes with Lan Zhan; the man named Lan Wang Ji has such a pretty and handsome face, he thought - it was meaningless to describe what is already perfect, from the endearing middle-aged creases around the brows to the depths in the eyes that spoke of enormous but secretive yearning, the surprisingly still-youthful face (has Lan Zhan nearly reached Immortality through his diligent study of cultivation, he wondered), impeccable facial proportions that checked all the boxes to qualify as the exemplary classic Middle Kingdom-esque look, including the flawless bridge of nose, strong jaws with nary a strand of beard on the masculine chin, then below the delectable-looking broad shoulders, a desirable body build, equipped with incredible musculature hidden beneath layers of robes, and smooth, almost shiny but long and sturdy limbs too (why, oh why is this man blessed with the lack of body hair compared to others of his kin, the younger man marvelled) - and again, it was fruitless to pen down an exposition about a Man of Perfection, at least according to Wei Ying's unhindered and unfiltered inner thoughts, and how shameful it feels to praise the beauty of another man and to belittle his own male existence, without feeling threatened nor an inkling of conflict or uncertainty.

The older man's now-concerned expression softened - as much his emotionless visage could muster, probably - and Wei Ying's heartbeat raced so he held his breath instinctively for no explicable reason - although, since when does instinct have to do with reason, anyway?

Lan Zhan looked away and almost - Wei Ying's heart nearly plunged in disappointment - broke skin contact, but the tiniest, gentlest touch lingered - and in fact, Lan Zhan shifted in his cushioned seat and leaned closer - to Wei Ying's joy, delight, and strange, disturbing yet overwhelming uncontrollable excitement, pulsating from deep inside his gut at the prospect of getting physically closer under such an enrapturing dramatic stage show filled with blurry mists, sparkling, fuzzy, strobing lights and lovey-dovey pinkish overtones; Wei Ying wished for the next scene to appear because he wanted to know what happens next to the two starring men, or, god forbid, wannabe-lovers; he irritably wanted to turn to the next page of that sizzling romantic novel with such impatience, and read what happens to the bewitched captive; as his body swayed unsteadily in giddiness, he craved for more than fleeting touches, proximity or entwined hands; he felt his skin burn with prickly sensations and unfamiliar molten heat - where Lan Zhan's fingers grazed his forearms moments before radiated with weird thumping tightness, of a sour metallic tang that blurred in his vision, a deafening hitch in breath that weighed like a tonne of rock inside his head and soon, his immovable legs, then wintry-cold shivers wrecked his insides with sudden anxiety and at the same time, colourful, indescribable exuberance that caused his nostrils to be flooded with the smells of screeching sounds .

As Wei Ying started to respond, with bizzare sluggishness, at the onslaught of competing and confusing signals, his mind refused to believe the warped reality it was entrapped in; the inner voice still begged greedily for more than just skinship and closeness with Lan Zhan, it *demand*ed to be treated with more aggressive violence, more possessiveness - Wei Ying was a man too, damn it, he could surely take it -, the voices echoed and twisted inside the hollows of his alarmingly aching temples, his forehead felt very uncomfortably hot, but all he could hear were disembodied spoken words that insisted to be pushed, to be grabbed, to be crushed, to do and to be done the worst - everything in the dining room seemed to spin and bogged down with descending, descending spiralling into the abyss, gravitating to a pinpoint of blackness, and that fried fish in its silver dish still looked tempting, as distorted and stone-cold as it may be - Wei Ying unflinchingly wanted to have his body violated by his secret crush in some way, to have his self and soul to be owned in some respect, but strangely he tried to focus his sights on the special, tasty and delicious person - no, morsel - but the room was darkening, falling, falling, he was floating downwards through the ground, yet the voices brazenly commanded that it/Wei Ying to be declared to belong to, and only to--

.

Wei Ying had been a terribly incorrigible brat to abuse a feral cat's testicles, and having bitten off more than he could chew - or rather, it should've been the other way round, since he was bitten and scratched by that feisty ballistic feline -, he deserved to stay in bed all night and complain, non-stop about his suffering. He should've been witty and thought twice before pinching someone else's family jewels - never mind a person's or an animal's -, but he was absolutely witless and irredeemably reckless in his course of action, that now, he had to pay the price of his bold carelessness and mindless bravado, and lie in bed all night to endure a fever and possibly, an infection.

“Lan Zhan...” the once-insufferable man groaned pitifully, thought it wasn’t clear if he was truly repentant and needed a good, forgiving hug, or if his condition was deteriorating, tormented by the illness. Wei Ying tossed and turned under the cover of thick blankets as his body was wracked with symptoms of wildly-swinging temperatures, involuntary shudders, tummy cramps, chattering teeth, pale blueness in the extremities, disconcerting sensations of having one’s internal organs forcefully twisted and caused to bloat and swell, and the like.

Regardless of what had transpired, Lan Zhan too, was regretful. “I should’ve thought better than to assume you only needed a simple bandage, some well-intentioned advice, and a full stomach to spend yet another pleasant evening in the Jingshi,” he said, as he emerged into the comfortably dim bedroom with a tray. “A-Jia made this nutritious detoxifying porridge after I sent an urgent Fairy Messenger call right when you blacked out and fell from your seat. A-Yi took some of my deposited earnings from my teaching position from the Treasury office, and went off in search of a doctor outside the walls of the city. A-Bing is taking turns with A-Ding to prepare a pot of herbal soup with whatever ingredients they can find in the kitchens and medicine cabinets at this late hour,” he patiently listed down what he’d done, while taking his place beside Wei Ying on the bed.

Wei Ying grunted something incomprehensible, his eyes were bloodshot and glazed with indeterminate pain, and from time to time, he drifted in and out of consciousness. Soon, the younger man found himself in his top favourite position in the recent months - lounging on the mattress with his back pillowed by Lan Zhan’s wonderfully warmed and muscled pectorals and six-pack abdomen (with an added layer of fat, of course), and two strong arms that kept embracing him from behind - while being swaddled with a large body-warmed blanket in a cocoon for two. He observed with trepidation, through unfocused, hooded eyes, at how the soiled bandage on his right arm was magically unwound to reveal, unsurprisingly, multiple inflamed lacerations across the exposed palm that spread outwards to a larger expanse of the hand. The repaired skin had swelled beyond its limits and broke through like a burst blister, leaking disgusting-looking thick pus mixed with dark crimson blood that refused to clot properly; the entire area ballooned until his fingers looked like unshapely clubs, was covered with unsightly purplish bruises and red spots, and bulbous veins lining the back of the hand stuck out like contorted, misshapen branches of trees of the Burial Mounds, filled with viscous and foul-looking liquid - there were signs of internal bleeding, festering rot, and more likely, of acute, unnatural blood poisoning.

“Am I going to die, Lan Zhan? Will I lose my right hand, will the disease reach the rest of my body, and will I be permanently crippled? Am I so useless that a cat bite could kill me? This sickness spreads so quickly, I’m afraid I’m already at Death’s doorsteps! Ah, Lan Zhannnn, help me...!” he cried in despair in his dazed state, before his limbs flopped uselessly on the rumpled bedsheets, and he fainted again for a bit.

Lan Zhan sighed and kissed Wei Ying’s clammy cheeks from the side as a gesture of assurance - and noted with concern at how his beloved was running a very high fever. A few very powerful healing spells were cast right in front of Wei Ying with suspiciously experienced finesse, and when Lan Zhan believed he had done what he could with respect to magical treatments, he turned his attention to the tray on the bedside table while making sure that the blanket around their shoulders didn’t fall off. Regardless of the vast library of supernatural curative techniques he had in his disposal, Lan Zhan could not ignore the fact that Wei Ying hadn’t eat anything since sundown, and that was a big no-no according to his house rules; Wei Ying must never be allowed to go hungry in this world.

There was an audible grumble when Wei Ying woke up bleary-eyed to the sight of icky-green and grey porridge that wafted unappetizingly bitter and medicine-y smells. He even turned his face away, nnnngh'ed and squeezed his eyes shut in a show of disdain at the served sustenance that could potentially cure his ailment, though not necessarily one that the taste buds would willingly agree to. Lan Zhan frowned at the childish behaviour, then lowered the spoon back to its steaming bowl. Next, the whole tray was carefully placed on the bed by his side, and Wei Ying realized that his belated dinner consisted not only of the bowl of the horrid-looking gunk, but also the wonderful food that he'd missed earlier that evening - the visual stimulation helped to quell any further rejection of whatever Lan Zhan planned to serve to nourish the enfeebled body. Wei Ying watched, through feverish spells, full-body chills and the occasional queasiness in the stomach, at how two long, muscular hands poked from behind and masterfully worked on the tray to satisfy his formidably stubborn, onerous palate.

A fresh spoonful of sticky gunk (Wei Ying refused to call it food, let alone medicine) was scooped from the bowl. Then, from the side, chopsticks appeared to pick out pieces of fried fish, and to Wei Ying's amazement, low-level and miniscule-sized Fire spells were cast. Each chunk of meat, followed by slices of cooked greens, slivers of tofu and mushrooms - every portion was painstakingly heated up with spell-powered precision - not too hot, not too cold - once again, invigorating the flavours that had been lost to the chill in the air, fluffing up the textures of bite-sized excellence, crisping up the flesh and skin of the famous Gusu dish without overcooking it - soon, it no longer looked like a spoonful of gunk, but rather, it was spoonful of forgettable porridge topped with easy-to-eat, ideally sized, incredibly flavorful and wholesome fish and vegetables just as the moment the banquet came out of the kitchen's flaming wok.

However, Wei Ying isn't easily impressed, so he upped his ante. "Nnnh, s'thing's missing," he drawled and feigned a look of disinterest, though he could not resist licking his lips and dry-swallowing at the spoon brimming with goodness that hovered so temptingly close to his face.

Lan Zhan sighed and used the outstretched pinkie finger of the hand that held the rather heavy and packed porcelain spoon, to twirl a wee bit in three clockwise circles, and weaved a yellow-hued spell out of the fingertip. A dollop of bright red sweet-sour sauce gurgled with simmering heat and launched itself from its saucer, arched and performed acrobatic spins and rolls above a rather entertained Wei Ying, and landed flawlessly right atop the chunk of mouth-watering flaky browned white fishmeat, gracefully without a sound. Wei Ying murmured an astonished "Waaah!" with a wide grin not seen since he was stricken by the disease, and Lan Zhan knew he'd hit bullseye with his circus trick.

Lan Zhan leaned in from behind until his cheeks were practically sliding next to Wei Ying's and their embrace became as close as humanly possible - oh how Wei Ying blushed at the loving gesture, that he thought he felt the older man's strong, solid heartbeat upon his goosebump-ed back, and his own heart raced in tandem of the intimacy of that heated, utterly romantic moment -, then the older man patiently blew at the steaming spoonful a few times out of habit, before finally serving the mouthful of heaven to Wei Ying's waiting lips.

Mmm, delish. Accompanied by the brightest, happiest smile ever.

.

Dinner was a relatively quiet affair after that. Sickened, feverish Wei Ying continued to fall into brief comatose spells at inopportune moments, such as when he was about to take a gulp of the lotus root pork rib soup, or while in a hearty mid-chew; Lan Zhan's amazingly agile chopsticks skills, together with his hyper-aware senses, made sure that nothing fell out of place, and that Wei Ying wasn't too troubled by his state - the young man continued to ramble, whine and laugh quite a bit in between bites, as though he was merely intoxicated from having one too many jars of Emperor Smiles, safe within Lan Zhan's arms.

At one point, Wei Ying asked about Lan Zhan's unexpected mastery of spell-casting, and pointed out that had the latter be able to cast such powerful magic and with immaculate accuracy and control, "the giant turtle in Xuanwu Cave would've been toasted and chargrilled to perfection, then carved into slabs fit for a king's barbeque party", or more recently, he wouldn't need suffer so much from being stabbed by Jin Ling at the steps of the Carp Tower during the exposé of his true identity, amongst other past blunders that led Wei Ying to bleed or spit out blood. Lan Zhan acknowledged that the younger man was talking about the Fire and Healing spells he'd demonstrated, and deftly dodged the questions with vague but believable half-truths, such as "sixteen years is a long time", that "sometimes, in the heat of the moment, I may not have used the best of my abilities", and "Wei Ying, speak less when eating. Come, have another spoonful".

"Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, I'm sweaty all over. I think the porridge is beginning to show its effect, and my body is trying to expel the poison," a disoriented Wei Ying mumbled anxiously as he weakly tried to wipe his brows and torso with sweat-soaked sleeves. He was a ball of uncoordinated restlessness; he gritted his teeth, his fingers grappled uselessly at the bedsheets and his heels dug into the mattress each time aches flared within his body; at least he wasn't dry-heaving with nausea and he could thank his lucky stars for keeping a full belly.

The older man swore never to leave Wei Ying's side for too long, and had sought A-Jia's help to take away the emptied dinner set and bring a basin of heated springwater with a washcloth. The loyal, unassuming servant, dressed in typical Gusu Lan robed uniform, continued to busy himself with a scheduled cleaning of the Jingshi at the end of the day; he politely stayed out of the bedroom, though he did slip into the master's private chambers periodically to enquire if there was anything else he could assist with, or if his services was required to tend fo the master's (and his mistress') needs.

Lan Zhan was a little relieved when A-Jia relayed that A-Yi had found some help, and that someone would arrive within the next hour.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, I cannot stand the burning fever anymore, my limbs are shaking, my heartbeat is erratic, and I'm dizzy from my screaming senses,” Wei Ying suddenly groaned with his eyes closed, as though he was trapped in a hellish nightmare, and unknowingly, started peeling his clothes off right in front of the older man. “Ah, Lan Zhan, it's so hot, so hot, I want to get rid of his heat but I cannot! It's pooling inside my stomach, it itches, it hurts, it's so irritating! I want to push, squeeze everything but nothing comes out in the end...!” he cried softly and started to sob. It was dark inside the bedroom with the curtains drawn, however Lan Zhan recognized the unmistakable faint, silvery outline of a thin, bony man agonizing over his illness, to the point where he stripped himself naked and started to perform what Lan Zhan thought to be an extremely sensual dance.

Wei Ying arched his back off the bed, spread his legs, and started to rhythmically hump against sweat-damp cushions while complaining about being tortured by feverish chills. He twisted and turned, wrapped with sheets that did nothing to hide the wanton display - which included having the young man openly caress and claw at his groin and inner thighs, then, perhaps in his delirious, unthinking state of mind, vigorously masturbate in plain sight as he cried and desperately wished to shoot something - anything - out of his overwhelmed body; he scissored and crossed his legs repeatedly in such an erotic manner that reminisced come-hither motions, coaxing his single audience to come, come closer and have a taste of the exceedingly appealing, blossoming lust.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, help me... please make me feel good...” the persuasive, sultry voice mewled with such conviction and beguiling unspoken promises, that the older man didn’t know if Wei Ying’s illness was worsening or if things had taken an awful turn and transformed the man into an irresistible sex demon. Wei Ying moaned loudly, almost frustratingly, when his barely functional left hand moved at a furious pace between flexing legs, albeit with a noticeable awkwardness at certain angles, due to him not using his usual dominant masturbatory limb. His crotch started shaking like an engine fired off to a wrong, explosive, sputtering start, joined by the creaks of protest from the bed beneath him; the sounds of his panting breaths overshadowed the aahhns, mmmhs and nngahhs that tumbled carelessly from the lips in-between coherent words; the air smelled of something electrical, something exciting, something roaringly carnal - the other man’s heightened senses picked up every signal from his apparent mate; a siren’s call to seduce and draw Lan Zhan into an ageless, timeless pleasurable act of sharing their bodies, entwining their passions, surging to the highest pinnacles of joy until everything else spilled over again and again, and promised to leave the two more than just breathless, sexually inebriated and happily incapacitated for the rest of the night.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan... ahhhn... please do anything... touch me, I really want to--- nnnh... please, please, play with my penis, suck my dick, get it out, get it out... please, I cannot wait anymore...!” the cries continued unabated. The silhouette of a semi-erect phallic organ bobbed excitedly and jerked once, twice, then started to drip from its tip - a sparkle of candlelight caught inside the clear, crystalline surface of a pearl droplet, and Lan Zhan nearly tripped when he ambled towards the desirable figure on the bed with newfound delight.

The bedroom door was quickly closed and locked with a resounding 'click!', but not before the swishing sounds of sashes being rudely pulled off and of robes being kicked away impatiently were heard from the outside.

Lan Jia, the ever vigilant, faithful elder servant, bowed his head and proceeded to sweep the main entrance of the Jingshi without uttering another word.

.

Despite the promise of a full night of intense lovemaking and spectacular marathons of multiple climaxes masked by the spell of the unidentified malady, Lan Zhan, the secretive overachiever of the Gusu Lan sect, managed to complete his clandestine marital duties just under an hour and not another minute too soon.

Rosy-cheeked Wei Ying slept like a drooling baby on the bed with a strained but silly smile etched on his face, after having been - for a lack of better word, due to the difficulty to describe unimaginably godly acts in mere mortal terms - delightfully emptied more than an average healthy man should have to experience, or even endure, in a lifetime . The older man's endeavour did not stop there; after swiftly making the bed to smooth out creases and wrinkles - with little success, due to Wei Ying constantly taking up prime estate on the mattress -, opening the windows a little to let much-needed cool and fresh Spring air in and clear away the pungent sweet odours that still echoed of Wei Ying's animalistic orgasmic screams, then briskly wiping the cushions and floorboards of still- vibratingly warm evidence of their abundantly spilled lusts - unfortunately, there were just too many dried stains -, he finally dragged the neglected basin of bathwater out from the corner of the room and start wiping sweat and other unspeakable bodily fluids from Wei Ying's randomly twitching and shuddering body - more from earth-shattering cosmic pleasures that continued to course through his thoroughly satisfied flesh and bones, than from the fever that seemed to be under control -, when A-Jia's slightly hoarse voice was heard from the front chamber of the Jingshi.

“Announcing the arrival of His Greatness, Zewu Jun!”

Lan Xi Chen strode into the Jingshi without further invitation, and caused alarm for poor A-Jia who pleaded with the tall, imposing man to wait at the guest area for the master of the house. “Nonsense, this is a matter close to my heart as the Sect Leader, and to my utmost interest as a sibling, just as it is a private family matter that no outsiders should interfere,” he said with a resolute tone, and A-Jia had to back away in deference, with the straw broom held tightly against his chest.

Lan Zhan, aided by his godly powers, did what he could in a matter of a few precious seconds, and managed to unlock the bedroom's door using remote magic, and he looked absolutely flustered from his exertions. He did not really have the chance to calm down his sexually-charged spirits, freshen up his flushed appearance, or comb his slightly unruly and long hair - it was unbecoming of a person of his rank to look dishevelled in front of his elder brother, really; he simply donned a soiled, silky white nightgown and pulled a naked, snoring Wei Ying into his arms on the bed, and remembered - nearly to his horror - to plop a semen-stained washcloth onto the latter's crotch so that the naughtiest bits were at least decently covered

(alas, nothing could be done about the glaringly obvious jungle of hairy curls on the younger man's body) - and then, finally, right on the dot at eight o' clock in the late evening, the door swung open violently with the grandeur and might of ten harried and panicking rampaging Lan Xi Chens who--

-- I heard from your servant, A-Yi, on my way out from the evening Council meeting, that Wei Wuxian had been poisoned and you were in a terrible state of anguish and despair! What happened... err... err... what is this... Wang Ji?" the voice boomed with concern that sounded like an angry blaring horn, before cutting short at the scandalous sight that greeted Zewu Jun.

Lan Zhan sighed, tiredly, this time. He had some serious explaining to do.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 143

Wei Ying wanted to curl into a distressed testicular ball and be left alone to wallow in his humiliating puddle of misery inside the comforting darkness beneath layers of smelly, stained blankets.

“Wei gongzi , please, show me your hand? I need to take a pulse diagnosis to ascertain the nature of the sickness that ails you, and whether your condition has improved from... my younger brother’s efforts.”

His imaginary testicular ball shrunk away and shook in defiance, refusing an audience in his cordoned-off fortress of self-imposed solitude. The lump of goo-covered blanket nnngh’ed with an embarrassed squeal to indicate a deafening ‘No’ to one of the world’s greatest medical practitioners in the Middle Kingdom of that era. Everyone, even Wei Ying, knew that Zewu Jun was a master of the Five Sacred Arts of Metaphysics, a champion for the Four Grand Scholarly Skills, even a renowned user of the Triumvirate Circles of Celestial Well-Being - and that having his pulse checked by such a prestigious figure of the cultivation world was akin to shaking hands with a celebrity that one had every right not to wash that said hand for weeks to come - and yet, Wei Ying was most unflattered at the lamentable circumstances surrounding his chance for a honourable medical check-up.

“Wei gongzi , please do not feel alarmed or ashamed. Based on my study of human psychology in the past decades, it is not wrong nor sinful to be fascinated at something that naturally excites the senses, to the point of obsession and self-harm. Fluffy, feline, round, warm things are just one such example.”

The obstinate lump on the bed stopped inching away each time the da ge tried to slide his fingers beneath the edges of the blanket to reach for either of the young man's wrists. It helped that Zewu Jun's calm and steady voice effectively placated the other man's visible unease.

"Another fine example happened when Wang Ji was just a little boy at the tender age of seven," he started. From a faraway corner of the bedroom, Lan Zhan's voice could be heard, "Ge ...!" (Brother!), however the da ge refused to cease his storytelling that promised the tantalizing reveal by airing his sibling's dirty laundry, in more ways than one.

"My dear brother, as you should know by now, has an obsessive streak in him that is not only incurable, but also debilitating at times. Behind our old house was a bamboo grove, and long ago, there lived a particular orange-coloured bird that visited often during Springtime. It sang brightly and beautifully every sunrise, and with a peculiarly melodious song - that dear Wang Ji was captivated by its performance and would refuse to leave for school before listening to its tune."

Wei Ying too, was captivated by the curiosity of learning a facet of Han Guang Jun that probably no one else knew; he slowly crawled out of the blanketed lump, blinked with bleary eyes from the darkness of his makeshift cavernous entrance framed by blankets that reeked more than just sweat, to the unspoken delight of the da ge. One wrist was easily caught for a medical check-up, without the young man even realizing what had happened.

"A couple of weeks in, one of our neighbours decided to buy and rear cockerels and pullets in his backyard in preparation of the coming seasonal festivals. You do know how it's best to raise your own chickens, so that you can decide how firm, fat or tasty the meat will be, according to what you plan to cook, and later, what you want to eat - right?"

Zewu Jun's new budding fan nodded energetically, and even licked his lips unknowingly. A charming, fond smile shone from the older man's pearly whites, and Wei Ying decided it was safe to venture a little further out into the open expanse of the bed's mattress. Zewu Jun's disarming charm worked, and he had no trouble pressing a thumb at another spot on the wrist, this time closer to the forearm, presumably to examine the state of the younger man's inner body health using the ancient art of deep pulse-reading. He listened with scrutinizing attention as much as Wei Ying was engrossed by the colourful story about Lan Zhan's childhood.

"It was to nobody's surprise that one by one, the cockerels habitually put on competing shows every morning by crowing as loudly as their little feathered bodies were able to, to alert and amuse the entire village," and Wei Ying choked with laughter at that point, "that my little brother was left crying tears of frustration because he couldn't enjoy his favourite birdsong before school. It was quite a sight, as you can imagine, to have chubby-faced Wang Ji arrive at the classroom with swollen eye bags, and dried snot and tear stains on his collar, and he remained that way through the first lesson."

Wei Ying sat by the bedside with the blanket now properly draped over his shoulder, and he giggled and kicked his legs that hung from the bed's edge, like a child being entertained by an intriguing yet humorous tale - and had his other wrist casually checked. Lan Zhan cried out "Ge ...!" again from a distance, ostensibly to refute the facts laid out by his elder brother's sharp memory of times shared together nearly three decades ago. The er gongzi and a red-faced A-Jia worked hard to arrange and pile soiled and dirty clothes, sheets, pillowcases and cushion covers to be washed later, whilst furiously mopping and wiping all surfaces of unsavoury traces of the former's bedroom workout not too long ago.

“Then, one morning, we woke up to an unusually peaceful sunrise. Lan Zhan spent a full fifteen minutes enjoying his breakfast of congee and soymilk on the dining table with his cherished birdsong from outside the window. I was too busy to notice the stark difference in the atmosphere, because as long as Lan Zhan was able to get out of the house with his robes buttoned up properly, and his shoes weren't worn wrongly as it happened often before, I was a happy young teenager rushing off to beat the morning school bell.”

Wei Ying smiled dreamily and stared at the da ge, still entranced. Since he was naked, the older man rose from his seat, unsuspectingly pulled away the errant dirtied blanket, and started to touch, press, and knead certain pressure points to determine if any other parts of the body were injured or bruised. Wei Ying never protested how he was manhandled like a tamed animal, even when his injured right palm was momentarily unwrapped, examined, then loosely re-wrapped - he never winced nor felt any pain from such gentleness from the medical maestro; Wei Ying realized that he could entrust his entire body and well-being to the expert hands of Zewu Jun.

“Can you guess what happened after that? When the two of us returned at lunch time, there he was - our neighbour, a man in his forties, with a rather intimidating big belly and a bigger, bushier beard, huffing in anger! He knocked on the gates impatiently with such an upset look on his face, as though he wanted to rush in and murder someone!”

A-Jia hurriedly left the bedroom with an armful of dirty laundry that stank with fishy, possibly cheese-y, and other unappetizing stench of man-made fluids. Lan Zhan quietly instructed the man to immediately handwash the offending articles in the lotus pond behind the Jingshi and erase all evidences without being seen in public, then hang them to dry behind the bushes, so that nosy neighbours wouldn't ask why the Jingshi was running a massive clean-up exercise in the middle of the night; he could not afford to risk being found out if A-Jia took the laundry to the common washing facilities near the middle of the Cloud Recesses. Poor, tired A-Jia would have to make several rounds to carry the loads of laundry that needed to be taken care of. Alone, Lan Zhan returned to mop the floor until the glazed wooden surface was squeaky clean.

“I asked him, what did he need from us, and why was he trying to break the gates to our house. What do you think he said?”

Wei Ying squealed excitedly and shook his head, wordlessly telling the da ge to “tell me, tell me”. Fingers touched, circled, examined, and massaged along his former meridian points from the nape of his neck to the tailbone, then on his thin chest, along the ticklish ribs, until right below his sunken navel, but Wei Ying totally ignored those intrusive sensations.

“Incredibly, he pulled out two cockerels from the inner pockets of his robes - no wonder he looked so scary with a large belly that seemed to twitch and move on its own! Both birds flapped their wings helplessly whilst dangling upside down from where the man held them high up in the air, from their clawed feet - but neither made a sound, not even a cluck or a squawk!”

“... Ge !” Lan Zhan shouted a third time from the back with barely-restrained annoyance. Wei Ying started to bounce on the bed, knowing that he was close to the big reveal. Why didn't the chicken make any noise, he so badly wanted to know.

“It turned out that Wang Ji sneaked into our neighbour’s backyard shortly after he woke up at five, and casted the Silence spell on the entire flock. When the sun rose, none of the cockerels could crow! Dear little and extraordinarily talented Wang Ji did all that single handedly, just so that he could listen to the special birdsong from the bamboo grove behind our old house. Such passionate, one-track mind obsessiveness, do you agree?”

With little left to one’s imagination of how that entire scene panned out, Wei Ying morphed into a ball of obnoxious hiccupy laughter, even slid off the bedside and started rolling on the freshly cleaned but slightly damp floor, to Lan Zhan’s consternation - because Wei Ying’s body still bore drying streaks of sweat, pee, purulent discharges, mucus and whatnot (including the mysterious milky white stuff that smelled distinctly of pee mixed with bleaching agents), and god forbid, the areas where he bulldozed like a rolling pin were left imprinted with icky stains in his wake - which had to be mopped again. Xi Chen smiled knowingly, and let his patient have a moment of fun, while closely observing the latter for any other signs of further disability, and to determine the state of his wakefulness, responsiveness, mobility, and more importantly, his overall health outlook.

“Poor Wang Ji became a crybaby and had to own up to his mistakes in broad daylight, in plain sight of every aunt and uncle living around our street. Fortunately, the neighbour forgave him after the spells on the chickens were quickly undone. My little brother stayed away from having steamed, fried or grilled chicken for a week after that, probably because it reminded him of how terrified he felt, being scolded by that fierce neighbour of ours until he was left in tears. Those curious onlookers did nothing to help but to gawk at how a seven-year old boy bawled in the middle of the day, near the middle of the street. It was an embarrassing episode that I’m sure he wanted to forget for the rest of his life.”

Wei Ying had rolled in the other direction and across the bedroom's floor (with Lan Zhan chasing from behind with a soggy wet mop), laughing with absolute joy and cheeky mirth that surely, his guffaws could be heard from outside of the Jingshi. A mortified Lan Zhan couldn't tolerate having his pride torn down right in front of his secret beloved anymore, so finally, he had to call for a time-out in his cleaning duties, and tapped Xi Chen's shoulder with the mop's handle.

Zewu Jun maintained his flawless serene visage and turned around, neither startled nor expectant, full of knowing, feigned innocence that roughly translated to "What? Did I say something wrong".

"... Ge , please. Enough."

Wei Ying continued to cackle and howl his ugly laughter deep into the night.

.

As far as Wei Ying knew, Lan Zhan had narrated what happened that evening to his aptly concerned elder brother in wordy passages of four short syllables each, and surprisingly, spared no detail; Wei Ying heard only part of the explanation and thought his account sounded like a crippled poem that made little sense to the uninitiated, but Zewu Jun either read the rest of the story off his younger brother's mind telepathically, or had the uncanny ability to fill the blanks between largely disjointed nouns and verbs - in any case, it was a testament to the mythical bond between the Twin Jades of Gusu, that Zewu Jun understood Hanguang Jun exceptionally better than anyone else on earth.

He was disappointed, though, when they reached the part where he fell into a prolonged feverish semi-consciousness spell on the mattress that left him with a gap in memory - he remembered the fever flared into hellish heat and that he begged desperately about something , but the rest was lost to a mental fog-block; the sight of plenty of bodily fluids splattered everywhere in the bedroom, even upon his naked body, and a very flushed-looking Lan Zhan staring at the shocked Zewu Jun standing at the doorway, upon his awakening - that was what he clearly remembered in the aftermath, but not before that. At this particular point, Lan Zhan glossed over and skipped the seemingly loathsome episode, thus robbing Wei Ying of the complete recount.

The younger of the Twin Jades mumbled about how various appalling-sounding substances were spewed, ejected and expelled during that hour, possibly due to the curative porridge's effects, that he felt it was inappropriate to verbalize the harrowing experience, and that it was enough to know that Wei Ying recovered after that; Lan Zhan insisted that he'd done the right thing to wash and wipe away all traces when Wei Ying finally woke up, at about the same time the elder Lan brother was welcomed by the scene of smelly, sticky, dripping and icky carnage - he even forbade either to come within five paces of the used, soiled washcloths, and that only A-Jia and him should handle the cleaning duties of his bedroom. Wei Ying was simultaneously grateful and apprehensive at the revelation, because truthfully, he did feel much better when he woke; however, at the same time, he wondered what exactly, and how much, did he erupt or squirt out like a wet sponge squeezed with such inhuman force within the span of an hour, if Lan Zhan's notoriously brief description were to be visualized in a whimsical manner.

He sent a cursory glance at his best buddy, but Lan Zhan did not return the favour and kept his eyes to the shiny glazed floor - a sign that something was certainly amiss, if not hidden like a dark secret.

“Well, the diagnosis tells us that it was certainly a case of internal poisoning, judging from the way the cat’s bite swelled up from within and broke out on its own, and continued to leak putrid fluids - because the blood became toxic and the flesh started to liquefy into a blackish, viscous mix, thus the injury could never heal naturally on its own. It also spread throughout the body very quickly, as I detected traces of tissue damage, bruises in key organs, and a general degree of hemorrhaging, swelling, and liquefaction of flesh, musculature, bones and blood vessels, from the deepest veins to the extremities - which were fortunately stopped in its tracks by Wang Ji’s healing spells before the festering infection got out of control.”

Wei Ying shuddered at the sterile, methodological and clinical way in which Zewu Jun detailed his findings. “What on earth was inside that cat’s mouth that could cause such terrible damage and be fatal to the bite? It was barely a nip and scratch, for a full-grown animal,” he wondered aloud. Garbed in a fresh and rather translucent nightgown of his own, he grabbed a naked pillow and hunched over it, anxious to learn what happened, and what would have, if Lan Zhan hadn’t acted expeditiously to neutralize the feline-caused threat. He made himself a nest of clean, new blankets, cushions and pillows that A-Jia thoughtfully excavated out from the well-stocked storeroom, and had a fresh new bedspread to sit on that smelled of sunlight and Springtime flowers - again, with the help of A-Jia’s speedy housekeeping services.

“This poison... or perhaps, a disease or a plague, if it needs to eat away its living host to survive, thrive and infect others... is not selective and seems to consume everything it comes into contact with, from the inside out, and starting from the weakest points such as an open wound,” Zewu Jun continued.

The youngest man raised his right arm and stared at the fresh new dressing - he caught glimpses of the injury when Zewu Jun unwound the bandage during the storytelling, and the latter replaced it with his own superior version - coated with medicinal herbs and pastes he'd brought along in a pouch tied to his sash where Liebing hung from. The swellings around the lacerated areas had subsided, the bleeding had stopped, the pus and other foul discharges had been swabbed away, and his fingers no longer looked like mini-drumsticks; he shivered at the thought of being eaten alive from the inside by an unseen invader. Thus, he was thankful that Lan Zhan had purged the worst effects of the poison out of his body, and the elder brother had done an outstanding job in aftercare towards recovery.

“ Ge , do not forget, the poison affects the mind and the heart too,” Lan Zhan interjected. Wei Ying immediately scratched the back of his head and felt around his scalp with one hand, and the other started grasping his chest for any physical signs of residual damage. He looked unruly, with his hair sticking out wildly in various directions and knots, and he still felt grimy and greasy all over; the only thing in the bedroom that hadn't been cleaned was he, after all.

“Mmm. From your explanations before, Wang Ji, it does seem the sickness afflicts not only the physical body. Compounded with high fever and disorientation of the sensory organs and thinking processes, the mind begins to wander and causes the body to behave strangely, such as uttering impossible things, and then the heart too, with wildly swinging emotions and uncontrollable feelings being acted out irrationally. Fortunately for Wei gongzi , the porridge's effect must've kicked in by then, and forced the body to expel the poison along with any other diseased liquids for an entire hour - that's more than enough time to bleed a man dry, along with any vile poisons, diseases, maladies and imbalances of yin-yang residing within the afflicted body; it seems Wei gongzi has nearly returned to the pink of health, that you've been acting quite lively in the last half-hour, and you seem to be in good spirits too."

Wei Ying concurred with the doctor's summary and nodded. He still has his suspicions and worries about what horrible things that must've been done to him during that deadly hour, nevertheless, he discreetly thanked Lan Zhan anyway and the other man responded with a curt nod. Just then, a flustered and panting A-Yi head peeked in from the bedroom's doorway, possibly after having run out of town and then returned in record time; Lan Zhan gestured at him to proceed to report his updates. The servant in his twenties bowed respectfully, particularly at the esteemed Zewu Jun, before reading off an invisible list he'd memorized inside his head.

Following Zewu Jun's advice outside the Council's meeting rooms, A-Yi had informed servants of Master Lan Qi Ren - one of the very few Council members who knew about Wei Ying's existence within the walls of the Cloud Recesses -, to seek the Master's advice soonest, if not the next morning; A-Bing and A-Ding received a Fairy Messenger call to prepare some tasty, nutritious meat soups following centuries-old recipes from the elite Lan family's library - plus, Zewu Jun had a premonition that his younger brother was probably too preoccupied with saving Wei Ying to have dinner, and that if Wei Ying was conscious or on the verge of recovery, would need more nourishment for the night - so both boys were ordered to prepare some supper and bring to the Jingshi by nine o' clock; A-Yi was fortunately given clear directions to the nearest apothecary that was still open at that hour, and a list of herbs and medicines to buy, based on Zewu Jun's vast knowledge of the healing arts that he could accurately guess what a patient needs for at least for the next couple of days.

“Zewu Jun, Hanguang Jun,” the man addressed the masters of the Lan family and raised a stuffed bag into view, “A-Yi will take leave now to stock up the cabinets in the kitchenette with the purchases, and start boiling a pot of water.” He bowed and quickly left, and before Wei Ying could ask whether he should expect to take more icky porridges or worse, bitter medicine tinctures and pills, or other pungent, strong-smelling traditional remedies - two voices called out from the front of the Jingshi. A-Bing and A-Ding have arrived with soups and supper, and Wei Ying promptly forgot about his worrisome question.

Wei Ying seemed well enough to grab his walking cane from the bedside and make a dash to the dining room - hobbled, at best -, so Lan Zhan allowed him to do so, but he constantly peered over to make sure that the younger man didn't lose his footing or slipped on the floor. Lan Xi Chen placed a hand on his younger brother's forearm to pause the latter when Wei Ying limped through the doorway. He leaned in to whisper in a low voice, and away from Wei Ying's hearing range.

“Wang Ji, I should commend you for casting the exact, or perhaps, a brilliant repertoire of very powerful spells that even I couldn't identify after running a series of advanced investigation techniques from the pulse-reading. I would like to have a word with you about this later tonight to learn what exactly you did, and tomorrow, we'll send a few men to search the basement of the Library Pavillion for more clues. That's why I enlisted our uncle's help, because he knows where certain scrolls or tomes are located. We should prepare our treatments ahead of time when more cases arise.”

Lan Zhan shifted uncomfortably in his stance when his spellcasting ability was put under the microscope - it is said that when Zewu Jun probes, one can feel rather intimidated by the sheer intense scrutiny behind the deceptively composed facade, and shrivel up from the keen attention.

However, he did not miss the implication of the last sentence. “The Library Pavillion? More cases? What do you mean, da ge ?” he asked. Wei Ying had already left and both men could hear his bustling, joyful shouts and mentions of chicken noodles, stir-fried noodles with black soy sauce, pork congee with mixed innards, heated pastries with fruit and meat fillings, and some sweet candies and deep-fried snacks - specially approved by Zewu Jun so that the younger brother had no reason to refuse to be included into Wei Ying’s regimented diet.

Lan Xi Chen shrugged in the darkened, now-tranquil bedroom. Although the windows were shut to retain the heat within the Jingshi, the sounds of cold, wet laundry being slapped against poolside rocks filtered through, along with that of linen sheets being diligently scrubbed and rinsed. He said, “I planned to tell you later when the first round of investigations are completed, but it seems the cases have caught up. When I went to Caiyi Town last week to barter a cartload of minerals for grains, the town police informed me about a recent spate of lethal poisoning cases that they thought were the works of mysterious assassins. There were very few clues besides dead bodies found in their homes at different days and times, all exhibiting classical symptoms of internal and blood poisoning, with no obvious clues of ill-intent such as a knife-cut, a needle hidden under clothes, or a poison-laced letter, or natural causes such as snake or insect bites, or toxins in the river water.”

Lan Zhan was drawn to the mystery narrated by his da ge , because he knew that what happened in Caiyi probably hit too close to home - particularly since Caiyi was somewhat considered a vassal town to the Cloud Recesses, and frequently depended on the cultivation forces from his hometown for administration, defense and expansionary support. “ Ge , what happens in Caiyi will shortly find its way to our city. The town is a gateway to the Cloud Recesses, but how can we stop it if we cannot see it, let alone identify the cause and effects until it is too late?” he murmured and rubbed his chin thoughtfully. The clamouring echoes from the adjacent rooms of Wei Ying demanding to see what the servants brought in anticipation of a filling supper, were promptly ignored in the midst of such a serious, intriguing discussion.

Xi Chen da ge observed his sibling and was pleased that the latter showed interest in the case despite not holding office in Council or active memberships in any elite groups of the broader Lan family; the former hero Hanguang Jun had no obligation to be mired in such things, after all. That assured the older man that Lan Zhan should be allowed more clues from the earliest examinations and hopefully, to contribute to the investigation. He straightened up his posture with an equally serious expression on his face, and said, “Wang Ji, you should know that the remains of the victims were discovered in an advanced state of deterioration, due to the destructive and digestive effects of the poison - mangled, disfigured, burst open or caved in, liquefied, and the like. The police couldn’t rule out anything just yet, however, one particular feature stood out, though - in almost all ten victims recorded to date, each had at least one or two identifiable open wounds that the person had no history of. A teenage girl was found in the garden with a fractured hip bone, an old lady in the kitchen with her throat torn wide open, a middle-aged man near the outhouse of a textile factory, with a gouged belly. The pieces of the puzzle did not seem to match, and the chief police officer promised to dig deeper and share the findings in my next visit to Caiyi.” disclose rule out

The younger of the Twin Jades raised an eyebrow at the news, and his facial expressions tightened with striking tension. The fact that Wei Ying’s life-threatening acute case was not an isolated one, and that he’d learned the gritty, graphic details what happened to those who weren’t saved - caused an unspeakable outrage to spark and start to simmer deep in his heart. His fists balled and his stare hardened, wordlessly demanding for the culprit’s identity.

His elder brother sighed this time, because he had no answer to offer. However, he added, “-- on my way back with Lil’ Apple, I came across the angry-looking aging owner of the apothecary who asked if I’d seen some stray cats and dogs in the hillside forests surrounding the hiking trail. He’d been regularly feeding several of them since individuals migrated out of Caiyi probably from overpopulation, or worse, from abandonment by their owners due to the harsh winter. I praised his kindness and generosity, but he rudely refuted my gesture; dumbfounded, I missed his next few sentences, but I distinctly remembered that he said something about how the elusive creatures looked sick and unhealthy, some even sporting venomous-looking tainted fangs and diseased limbs, after feeding on the garbage dumps and even graveyards in the town. He cursed the hands of men who caused misery to the four-legged creatures, and that he preferred if the strays perished in the cold instead of making their way out of town and spreading their filth, in his words, ‘just as what happened over two decades ago’, and that he was prepared with enough medicines and cures to, say, ‘fight off the plague this time’. I quickly left before he spewed more hatred about former pets being tortured and poisoned, and events that even I couldn’t remember from long ago... and when A-Yi told me about what happened to Wei Ying-”

Lan Zhan stepped forward impulsively with wide eyes, and nearly stammered - but managed to pronounce in very clear, unmistakable terms -, “Wei Ying.... cats... poisoned... Caiyi...”

The eldest of the Twin Jade nodded in agreement, seemingly because he could read Lan Zhan's thoughts simultaneously. A thorough search of the Library Pavillion could unearth the history of more than twenty years ago; the apothecary owner may have more information and even a potential cure for the poison if enough research was done back then; they needed to act fast, because nobody knew if Wei Ying was the only, or the first of many victims within the fortress-like walls of the Cloud Recesses; the cats are, in all likelihood, agents of pestilence arising from Caiyi, and the whole situation appeared to be a ticking time-bomb of epidemic proportions...!

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 144

The next morning, the Jingshi became a hotspot for the hectic, the noisy, the wise and one rather cranky master of the house who was unaccustomed to having so many guests under one roof - his roof.

“Wang Ji?”

Lan Zhan looked stoic and expressionless while sitting at the dining table covered with century-old musty-smelling scrolls, piles of dog-eared books, well-preserved ancient documents, dusty stone tablets and the ilk - however, only his elder brother sensed the turbulent storms raging inside the younger of the Twin Jades.

The junior disciples and Wen Ning arrived at daybreak, brimming with one, energy to invite the resident couple of the house for a breakfast at Si Zhui's now-respectable cottage in the fields of vegetable seedlings and a lotus pond, and two, ideas on what to gather and sell in the much-anticipated first trip to Caiyi when the mountain passes have been finally cleared of glacial ice. Naturally, when they learned of what happened to their favourite Wei qianbei during the night before, all hell broke loose in the study room at the back of the Jingshi.

“Wang Ji?” A hand waved at the front of Lan Zhan's eyes and he frowned ever so slightly to look up from a thick medical manual about toxins and cures. Even Zewu Jun was taken aback by the response because he did not expect the cool pillar of ice (at least, to the elder Lan sibling's perspective) to crack with a crease of his brows.

Earlier, back in the study room, Wei Ying handled the crisis much better than his partner, despite the fact that he was a victim and that he was still recovering. Like excited puppies surrounding a shiny object of curiosity, the three boys kept checking, clamoured, fussed around the Wei gongzi, and the man happily let them admire and marvel at his bandaged right hand, molest his entire body when he went topless so that the boys could see, touch (then admire and marvel again) the scars and healing injuries that he proudly wore as a badge of honour, and captivated them with his unnecessarily flamboyant, exaggerated tales of his struggles with the poisoning episode - only Wen Ning rolled his eyes when Wei Ying described how close he was at Death's Door, that he'd stepped into the Underworld and met with the demonic Lord of Hell, and that he'd played a prank and gave that deity the middle finger so that he was angrily kicked back into the world of living - in any case, watching how Si Zhui, Jing Yi and Jin Ling made admiring and marvellous 'ooooh...!' sounds with amazement sparkling in their eyes, was surely worth the price of impressing them with a few more amusing lies.

“Ge,” Lan Zhan addressed his older brother, “I’ve checked these texts, but they contain disparaging details that won’t help in our investigations. I have said before, the poison is not unique enough to be clearly identified from a medical perspective; it kills by eating up and liquefying victims from the inside out, which is no different from the deadliest diseases or substances known to man, and this may be as common as say, a hidden vial of concentrated acid added into someone’s food; it does not have any specific antidotes, based on current knowledge - a simple powerful purge such as the powerful technique of ‘Cleansing Seven Earthly Inlets To Eight Heavenly Outlets With Nine Superior Ways’, plus normal symptomatic treatments for wounds, infections, poisoning, fever and stomach ailments, when administered in time, can save the patient. That is my experience in treating Wei Ying, and my personal stand in this issue.”

Zewu Jun hummed in vague agreement, and placed another stack of books heavily onto the tabletop with a dull thud. The brilliant, older Jade of Lan correctly deduced, based on the fact that his younger sibling was chatty in his explanation, relaxed in his posture, and had a rather disturbed aura of impatience mixed with a pinch of annoyance - that Lan Zhan wasn't upset about what was happening to his life, his partner or his home; rather, Lan Zhan sounded like he didn't want to waste anymore time to comb through the medical literature, as he saw no value in doing so - of course, since he was reportedly the first and only man to treat such a novel disease in recent years.

“No complaints, Wang Ji. You know our Gusu Lan standard procedure for investigations, and as Sect Leader, I expect no less from you to see this through, what with your eyewitness accounts and your wealth of otherworldly experiences - if what you told me last night is true,” the da ge replied with a smooth, firm tone, and then placed a rather dust-coated hand on Lan Zhan's shoulder to give a reassuring grip.

“Wen Ning has gone ahead to single-handedly pack everything we intend to barter and sell during our stay in Caiyi, in no less than five cartloads in which he shall personally prepare and harness horses loaned from the communal stables; Jing Yi has taken a squad of senior disciples to patrol extensively and secure the perimeters from any further wildlife invasions using magical talismans; Jin Ling proudly leads a class of highly motivated teenage disciples who are about to graduate, to take their pre-examination test of hunting down and caging up cats, dogs and rodents caught from the streets - he's dead-serious about this, because I told him that his precarious future of staying in the Cloud Recesses whilst enjoying my protection, hinges upon the success of this massive round-up; my servants are busy browsing the Library Pavillion's basement to pick up tens out of the thousands of books lined up in the shelves, so that we don't have to go through them on our own,” the taller man stated and pointed at the fresh pile of books he'd deposited for Lan Zhan to speed-read.

“ Ge ... do we really have to?” Ah, such an endearing question flavoured with a hint of childish whine. Lan Xi Chen smiled and thought that his heart melted a little more for the sweet, unyieldingly succinct younger sibling, who looked like the pouty nine old boy he remembered long, long ago, always clinging onto his pants, always hiding behind his legs, always peeking from behind his large sleeves, always checking, wordlessly or not, with a little indecision and hesitation, of what he did was truly correct and necessary for the greater good. The hand on Lan Zhan’s shoulder reached the back of the man’s head, and the da ge briefly enjoyed a private moment of patting his little brother’s head, smoothing a few errant strands of hair that stuck out of line, and touching the ever-present silky white forehead ribbon that bore the cloud-like symbols of their family’s strength.

Lan Xi Chen nodded resolutely. “Mmm. Our uncle has stationed his servants in various archives and stores of records in the Cloud Recesses to collect enough information to re-create the timeline of events two decades ago, and this morning, he is personally escorted by at least three Council members to speak to the owner of that apothecary. Last evening, the Council meeting had already been informed of rumours of several more similar poisoning cases and even deaths in the outlying villages of Caiyi, so the Council takes this matter seriously. People are panicking and desperately searching for cures everywhere without knowing what exactly to look out for. I’m on my way to the Central Hall to seek an update from everyone; with the Council’s blessing, we may make this trip to Caiyi sooner than expected, and possibly be summoned to present our findings to the town mayor and our proposal to lend a hand to eradicate this plague,” he narrated the rest of each person’s roles and responsibilities for handling the case; implying that the younger sibling should carry his own weight and do his part too without protest. The da ge tucked his hands behind his back solemnly, breathed heavily in a show of earnestness, in the hopes of being able to command the errant side of the younger sibling not to stall any longer.

Lan Zhan sighed faintly but did not reply, and stared blankly at a page of a book on the table; it crackled in the brief silence in the dining room as a breeze blew into the building, sending forth a burst of sandalwood to the senses from a nearby incense burner, along with mouth-watering smells coming from the kitchenette, and odours of many kinds of people - the perfumed, the bland, the sweaty, the scentless too. He swallowed hard; he hadn't had a gulp of tea since an hour ago, and his tea cup had run dry; one of his servants had forgotten to refill it. While the Lan er gongzi mulled over his current state, the front chamber of the Jingshi was bustling with activity, and sounds of rushed footsteps echoed into the middle dining room - an eclectic mix of servants from the three esteemed members of the elite Lan family - Lan Wang Ji's, Lan Xi Chen's and Lan Qi Ren's - each doing their bit by shuffling and sharing information, materials and all matters related to the case.

A-Bing and A-Ding had set up a temporary extension to the kitchenette to accommodate more fire stoves, chopping boards, kitchen counters and shelves, and were cooking up a banquet for lunch which is when everyone was expected to reconvene at the Jingshi; in the meantime, the two boys also had their hands full with making sure everyone, both masters and servants, were well-fed with morning snacks and invigorating herbal soups - except that in their excitement and struggle of managing too many things at once, they had forgotten to fill their master's tea cup.

A-Yi, who had procured the first batch of age-old cures from the apothecary when Wei gongzi first fell ill - fortunately purchased before the expected stock-out for when the plague struck more people that morning -, was terribly occupied in experimenting with numerous potions, plants, animal parts and other substances, in a bid to re-create and improve the recipes verbally shared by the apothecary's owner. Specially appointed servants from Lan Xi Chen and Lan Qi Ren's homes streamed in and out of the kitchen's extension to hand over ingredients that were requested or to try.

Faithful A-Jia stood his ground at the front chamber of the Jingshi, masterfully coordinating the movements of people around the building like weaving a complex orchestral masterpiece of countless musical instruments, after having spent a restless night meticulously washing down the bedroom and doing the laundry - now, he was to make sure that the floors were always cleaned, the decor and tools in places which they belonged, the furniture spotless of foreign fingerprints, the kitchen and all manners of household supplies well-stocked, schedules run on time, and that everyone in the Jingshi was relatively comfortable while working diligently - except for his master's thirsty throat.

"A message from the Central Hall! Zewu Jun is invited to a gathering of a quorum of over seventeen senior Council members, seven sages and a number of village heads who managed to attend at this hour, to receive an update at ten o' clock sharp, and a decision about the mission to Caiyi Town!" A-Jia's voice boomed from the front, that all present in the Jingshi heard and acknowledged the crucial event. Messengers were shuttling back and forth, and A-Jia was key to make sure that nothing was left out - except for the er gongzi 's cup of tea, which was sadly overlooked.

"Wang Ji, ge has to go now. Be a good boy and complete this stack too? Report your findings to me when I return an hour later," Xi Chen da ge said, or rather, ordered, in a charming, persuasive voice while pointing at the pile of new books that hadn't been touched. Unfortunately, the younger sibling's gaze remained steadfast on the book that he didn't seem to be reading with much enthusiasm.

Xi Chen leaned in and lowered his voice into a whisper, "Wang Ji, remember that I'm the Sect Leader and I have powers to make sure everything runs perfectly fine in our family, and in the Cloud Recesses - and that you're in my debt for asking me to take on this leadership position in the first place. Do your bit as promised, or you'll be reneging on our...

deal .” The older man stood up straight and tipped his head a little to bid his little brother good-bye, and turned around to leave the building. The sun was rising high; there was not a moment to lose - the eminent Sect Leader had a waiting audience in the Central Hall.

At the doorstep of the dining room and out of earshot of A-Jia at the front chamber, Zewu Jun stood with an air of scholarly demeanour with one hand in the front and one behind, then paused to murmur in a low voice, “Oh, and dear little brother, I know there are things that you cannot, or would not share, and that is perfectly fine between us. We have our own little secrets that each of us want to keep. But please, don’t think of using the ‘Cleansing Seven Earthly Inlets To Eight Heavenly Outlets With Nine Superior Ways’ as a guise to confound others. That detoxification technique is legendary, never verified, and simply does not exist. I invented the name and wrote it into the textbooks of the Cultivation World under a pseudonym a little more than a decade and a half ago, so I know.” With that, Zewu Jun disappeared from the sight of an astonished and flustered Hanguang Jun - though nothing else showed on the younger man’s face barring a hardened, constipated stare.

When the da ge left the Jingshi, Lan Zhan finally released the breath he’d been holding in, and heaved a sigh of relief and belated shock - to no one’s attention, alone in the dining room. Outside, A-Jia continued to make periodic announcements, depending on the messengers that came by or through Fairy Messenger spells that were sent his way. Next, the servant declared that Master Lan Qi Ren had returned with the entourage, and had arrived at the gates of the Cloud Recesses with the apothecary owner as a visiting guest. There was hardly any time to ruminate over what the da ge had said.

A loud creak emanated from the innermost chamber of the Jingshi. “Eh? The moustached sourgrape is back? Ehhhh?? Is he going to examine me again? I hate to strip in front of that uncle of yours! It doesn't feel nice to be touched by him!" Wei Ying cried from the back, in the relatively undisturbed bedroom that had been closed off from the hive of activity within and around the building.

"Shh! That's rude, Wei qianbei !" Si Zhui's voice hissed softly although one could hear the boy chuckle when he did that.

The two men sneaked out and joined Lan Zhan when they realized that the coast was clear; Si Zhui was the one who dragged Wei Ying into the bedroom earlier to let the Twin Jades have their talk. Ever the vigilant, sensible godson-of-sort, Si Zhui was quick to grab a pot of steaming pu'er tea from the kitchenette and bring it to the dining table. While he quietly refilled Hanguang Jun's cup - to the latter's unspoken thanks -, Wei Ying continued to blurt and spew his complaints about how he was manhandled by his partner's uncle just a couple of hours before.

It was shortly after the three boys and Wen Ning had a nice breakfast brought over from Si Zhui's cottage, when Zewu Jun, Master Lan Qi Ren and some servants arrived to meet with Lan Zhan and Wei Ying. Zewu Jun immediately recognized and accepted the fact that everyone in the house was on the same page, and after some discussions, they went on their separate ways, each armed with a mission of sorts. Whilst two of the juniors had to carry out their tasks away from the Jingshi, Si Zhui was assigned the responsibility to care for Wei Ying and to assist Hanguang Jun where possible, while the four servants of Lan Wang Ji busied with household chores.

Master Lan Qi Ren, being the most skeptical and suspicious of the lot, stayed back until he had the chance to check on Wei Ying's condition - to which the Twin Jades had to agree because Master Lan Qi Ren's words were akin to the law, and none of the juniors were present or capable enough to oppose such callous treatment to their favourite Wei qianbei . Poor already-topless Wei Ying was shoved onto the freshly cleaned bed and had his pants forcibly removed in a series of protests and angry shouts - fortunately, no cuss words were used -, so that the aged uncle could take a better look with dim, squinty eyes. While Si Zhui huddled together with Hanguang Jun to read some texts in the dining room, Wei Ying was, for a lack of better word, groped and had his modesty outraged by, quote, greasy, roaming and probing fingers and facial hair in a bedroom meant for two excluding the dirty uncle, unquote - before Master Lan Qi Ren was finally satisfied of his own diagnosis and left to seek the apothecary owner - Wei Ying complained liberally and plentifully in the aftermath, though Lan Zhan easily shushed the younger man with a curt "Wei Ying", and Si Zhui helped to fill the gaps to explain that the uncle needed to be convinced before he would commit to help someone that he generally disliked.

Wei Ying was, in some distasteful, even uncomfortable ways, silenced into submission and he grumbled a lot from that time onwards, while pulling his clothes together and brushing his unruly hair from what he claimed to be a thinly veiled-sexual assault. The only time he took his own initiative to stop complaining was when someone else entered the dining room - be it a servant not of Lan Zhan's authority, or Zewu Jun who made a couple of trips to and fro to the Jingshi in helping to select and moving research materials excavated from the Library Pavillion and other sources around the Cloud Recesses.

"Wei Ying." That certainly pulled everyone back to the present.

The effectively shut up Wei Ying, and the younger man sighed - then suddenly, though not surprisingly, changed his mood into a brighter one, and Wei Ying skipped from the bedroom to the dining table with a wide grin. Within a heartbeat, he was sitting by Lan Zhan's side. Si Zhui went off again in search of something to nibble, and promised to continue helping Hanguang Jun to pour over the stacks of unread materials.

"Mmm? What is it? Do you need anything?" the younger man purred rather sexily, dressed in an unkempt and messily-buttoned white robe - from afar, it looked as though Wei Ying had been ravished by many men, with a bed head of messy hair, with his rosy, sweat-dampened complexion exposed in plain view, and with one shoulder bared when the collar slipped all the way down to almost, but not quite, reveal a puffy pink nipple with its areola ringed by the notoriously curled body hair -, and leaned his cheek on one of Lan Zhan's shoulder. Wei Ying settled in for a nuzzle against Lan Zhan's broad shoulder, seated side by side with his one and only favourite male partner.

Lan Zhan relaxed into his chair, relished the comforting weight that Wei Ying placed upon his torso, and finally turned a page on the book he was trying so hard to read since his elder brother walked into the room in askance of a heart-to-heart talk and more reading materials to bulldoze through, fifteen minutes ago.

"Mn. Nothing." Calmness, steady, gratitude, satisfaction, intimacy, a comfortable kind of love - those words were unsaid, but were nevertheless mutually understood.

Wei Ying sighed and remained seated, enjoying the warm sunlight filtering through silky curtains into the chilled room in early Spring. The noises, interruptions, and annoyances from the outside were easily blocked when the two were alone, and more so, when Wei Ying's good left hand silently slinked from beneath the table to reach, then touch, and brazenly - but stealthily - intertwine with Lan Zhan's; the latter felt his qi rise, and he was eager to complete his job so that he could have more time to do what he believed to be more valuable or cherishable, such as a cuddle with his beloved - another two pages were turned on the book.

Si Zhui returned with a tray of cut fruits, bite-sized dumplings packed with sweet and savoury fillings, accompanied with enough plates and cups for all three occupants of the room, to last for the rest of the busy, lively morning. He arranged the tableware and cutlery carefully on one corner of the table, in the prescribed perfect geometrical symmetries, then obediently took one volume from the stack that Zewu Jun brought, and started leafing through the pages.

Lan Zhan wasn't cranky anymore.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 145

A snippet of conversation from earlier that morning:

“Wei gongzi , one of the Eight Heavenly Outlets of a mortal is the outlet for all things Desirable and Lustful. If Wang Ji claimed that he had neutralized the poison and purged this pathway last night, it would mean that you’d have shamelessly masturbated until completion, out in the open in the Jingshi, which is clearly a property of the elite Lan family.”

“Hah??!! What the f---... no, let me rephrase that, your... Honour, Royalness, Majesty, Whatever. What makes you think I did that? I can categorically state that I do not know, because as Lan Zhan pointed out, I was hit by the fever caused by the poison. You can ask him what happened, not me. And what’s wrong with jacking off, anyway? Don’t you hot-blooded Lan men do that too, to relieve your stress at the very least?”

“ Gongzi , please do not feel threatened, I was merely stating the facts and educating you, a visiting guest from the outside world, about the ways of our Lan culture, norms and prohibitions. Regarding the ejaculation of a man’s semen, which is considered an outlet of lusts according to our sacred texts, the Gusu Lan sect is well-versed with the cause and effects, and how to achieve such a splendid climax to rid one’s body of the lustful, sinful feelings that intoxicate us. Masturbation would be the only probable way, according to my analysis, given that there weren’t any females around during the time of the purge, nor any other feasible methods to extract the woeful seed from your body; fear not, gongzi , there is nothing wrong in touching oneself, as we men understand our bodily needs - except that it should not have been done in a culturally inappropriate and offensive way.”

“So... you’re saying that I shouldn’t have jizzed all over the bedroom, and that you’re implying that it’s offensive to sow my seeds inside the Jingshi? Hey, it wasn’t my fault, ask your little brother over there! I woke up covered with icky stuff on my face, nose, mouth and painted streaks all over my belly... and yeah, watching A-Jia clean the room, I know it got on the floor, the lampshade and ceiling too... why, even my backside felt slimy and so were the bedsheets! I don’t know how it’s humanly possible to do that, but I did it, didn’t I?”

“... Ge , here’s your cup of tea. Please. Must you always pry so deep into everyone’s private lives?”

“Ah, thank you for the gracious hospitality - I’ve started to develop a penchant for Yunnan’s fragrant teas since you brought some to our city last autumn... mmm... and about me being a busybody... toot-toot, Wang Ji. I’m the Sect Leader, and I must make sure our family rules are upheld at all times. What do you say, Wang Ji, in Wei Ying’s defense? Or are you liable for punishment too, for the man’s inappropriate masturbatory behaviours that potentially broke at least five rules and offended our people and properties, which equates to a sentencing not less than ten years in the dungeons beneath the Cold Springs? You’re his guardian during his stay here, so you, my dear little brother, may be eligible for sentencing too, depending on the outcome of the Council’s deliberations.”

“AHHH!!! I plead insanity! I wasn’t aware! Please accuse me of being mentally ill at that time and that I’ve peed, poo’ed, puked, farted and cummed everywhere inside the bedroom, until poor, traumatized A-Jia had to suffer through multiple cleanings, and the precious, historical Jingshi building and all its priceless artifacts, treasures and literary materials were sullied with bodily fluids in my name! Leave Lan Zhan out of this! Don’t punish him!”

“... no, ge . It does not work that way.”

“It doesn’t? Do tell, Wang Ji. How do you explain your way out of this, and how does the damning evidence lead the case to a full acquittal for Wei Ying? I may know him well as a good man with questionable behaviours, but the Council elders do not; those old twits read more about Wei gongzi from his glorious, notorious days as the infamous Yiling Patriarch than a fraction of what he was then, today. I do not have enough political clout to vouch for his good behaviour, unfortunately.”

“Lan Zhan! I don’t like the way he’s maneuvering the discussion to his favour - da ge , don’t you dare give me that evil eye! Lan Zhan, listen to me! Just say that I did it, I will think of a way out after I’m imprisoned! I’ve got a track record of escaping from jail, including that time under Wen Chao’s terrible rule and his even more terrible giant dog.”

“... Wei Ying, stand by my side and hold on to my sleeves if you’re apprehensive. Ge , first of all, I am the owner of the Jingshi. The deed to the building and its surrounding lands had been signed off by our late father to my name, and this was also endorsed by the Council elders. Having my home wrecked in the way that you described - although I cannot confirm nor deny the extent of it - is to me, the Master of this house, as trivial as accidentally breaking and spilling a jar of expensive wine on the floor. It needed cleaning, but at the end of the day, it is not an issue of concern. You are here today, and you do not seem deeply perturbed by its current state, are you not?”

“Hnn. Well said, dear little brother. Very well, I shall consider the Jingshi, a cultural relic and historical site of great significance to our family, as completely intact, unaffected and unrelated to the case of Wei Ying’s misdemeanour.”

“Eh? Ehh?? My bodily fluids, my cum, spilled like a jar of expensive wine? Is that how you see me, Lan Zhan?”

“... nnngh, hush, Wei Ying, and don’t pull on my sleeves too hard. Ge , second, I am not offended, and I speak in my capacity as the Master of the Jingshi. Whatever that transpired behind the doors of the bedroom, whether a man touched himself or not, whether in my presence or not, whether in my sight or not, is of no consequence. Wei Ying is my best friend, my confidant, my brother-in-arms, my special guest living in my home and we spend the nights sleeping on the same king-size bed - he may touch himself and behave inappropriately in the private confines of the bedroom, and I am absolutely not offended. We’re... best buddies, after all.”

“L-- L-- Lan Zhan! Nnnnh! You’re making me b-- b-- blush!”

“Wang Ji, masturbating with another stranger could be considered culturally inappropriate. You know which rules this relates to.”

“ Ge , it’s as culturally inappropriate as to masturbate alone in one’s bedroom. Do you prohibit our men from touching themselves when they’re sleeping at night on their own? Do you, say, prohibit residents of the house to spit, cuss, curse, dirty, even throw a few punches here and there, and behave badly in their own property? As Master of this House, I proclaim it is perfectly inoffensive for Wei Ying to conduct himself improperly, such as the culturally inappropriate act of masturbating on my king-size bed even in my presence and sight. Does this help you conclude the case?”

“Ehh??? What do you mean, Lan Zhan?! Was I really jacking off last night with you on the bed? Auuugh, this is so humiliating and shameful! Why didn’t you stop me?”

“Hnn. Well argued, my boy. You’ve resolved my doubts, for now, and I can’t think of any other wrongdoings by Wei gongzi during the poisoning episode from last night. Fret not, I was merely testing the two of you... for unimportant reasons. I hope you don’t mind.”

“Lan Zhan! What is the meaning of this? What’s going to happen--”

“Wei Ying, stop bouncing around. Your robes are slipping off again, and you’ll attract unwanted attention if you remain that way for too long. You’re unwashed, and you smell as bad as you look right now. Go and take a bath behind the Jingshi, Si Zhui will boil enough water to keep your bathwater heated long enough.”

“... ahh! Pervert! How dare you look at me that way! Ha ha ha ha ha!”

“Seeing that Wei gongzi is well again, Wang Ji, may I have another cup of this wonderful Yunnan tea please?”

“Mn. Of course, ge .”

(And of course, Lan Zhan is relieved that his elder brother never found out that half of the fertile fluids discharged during that passionate hour the night before belonged to him; in which many joyful, thrilling, hot rich loads were left inside a delirious Wei Ying, and then, later, scraped out with prostate-attacking fingers. Wei Ying thoroughly enjoyed himself, as usual.)

.

Being classified as a recovering patient has its perks. Wei Ying was, at that time, the only known survivor of the poisonous plague, although the wise men of the Cloud Recesses hadn't yet determine many aspects of the affliction, such as whether it was a man-made poison or a plague spread by filthy animals living amongst the general population in the province of Gusu. As a living testament to the vicious, deadly nature of the illness, Wei Ying was allowed to move around as before, chaperoned by Si Zhui or any other individuals of his choosing, to eat and enjoy whatever he wanted for the sake of speeding up his recuperation, strengthening his vital signs, and rejuvenating his liveliness. The only downside was that he needed to be studied by selected wise men who pledged to keep his identity a secret - even from the Council and high-ranking officials of the ruling Lan family -, which included being begrudgingly subjected to repeated loathsome physical checks, consequently, getting molested by curious bald, wrinkled old men (and that included the bearded Master Lan Qi Ren, who seemed to enjoy pinching, twisting, rough-handling and molesting poor Wei Ying's bony, supple figure and his exposed, naughty bits).

Wei Ying had to endure the ordeal in the nude, sometimes by multiple wrinkly smelly old men who surrounded him in bed, and together, they peer, sniffed, listened, touched and tasted his skin (oh, how disgusting those warty tongues felt on his belly, or worse, in the groin - and they inhaled greedily into his pubes too while extolling the invigorating addictive scents of youth!), his orifices (eww, why do these old men keep poking their sharp, knobbled, sinewy fingers into his ears, nostrils or worse, his buttole - and kept stretching, spreading, probing and inserting strange objects into him!), the ugly bandage around his right hand (those old men merely gave a passing glance at the healing wounds, before moving on to his slender throat to pepper icky kisses and licks, his nipples, or worse, his limp, shrivelled penis - he truly disliked the way his genitals were crudely handled, how his foreskin was forcibly pulled back to reveal the glistening pinkish prize within, and had a rude awakening of uncontrolled tasty moans and groans when multiple tips of slimy tongues played, circled and vibrated against his sensitive glans, then slathered their foamy saliva into his pee slit - and he involuntarily cried out, then spurted out jets of crystal clear pee straight into those grandpas' waiting mouths!), and other parts of his body (some claimed to want to listen to his pulse, but how on earth did he end up with dirty old mens' noses and lips in his hair and worse, sliding and sucking from the nape of the neck, along the backbone, until the glutes!).

Wei Ying was a very brave young man at the tender age of twenty-two, to keep a straight face as much as possible, to be still as a mouse without crying out Lan Zhan's name for help, whilst being pinned down by those wizened, panting, strangers and letting them have their violative ways with his shuddering body, in the name of medical science. Ashamedly, he thought he experienced unwanted orgasms after his penis was vigorously stroked, his defenceless testicles were scandalized by unkind but extremely pleasurable touches, vibrations and tugs, and his prostate was massaged with greasy, grimy, unwanted fingers that brazenly penetrated and played inside his ass, and he did not want to cause alarm to the er gongzi who was saddled with the task of bulldozing through mountains of books in search of clues for miracle cures for the poisoning plague. No wonder Wei Ying looked like he had been ravished or worse, raped, each time more groups of old men visited the bedroom, while Lan Zhan and Si Zhui remained fastidiously in the next chamber to finish up their reading on the dining table.

So, when A-Jia announced the return of Master Lan Qi Ren, Wei Ying was too disturbed to want to experience another round of sexual molestation, and quickly went to bathe and wash off the pungent scents and residues from his body - his bodily fluid (and Lan Zhan's - but nobody knows) and the old mens'. Inside a giant wooden tub of heated springwater, Wei Ying finally felt at peace, and his soul was cleansed of any misgivings and ill-feelings from the hours before. Si Zhui gladly helped to dry off Wei Ying, clothe him and comb his hair.

Outside the property, freshened-up Wei Ying and his chaperone strolled along rolling fields of vegetable seedlings and young saplings planted by tireless farmers, and admired the mist-covered mountainous backdrop pockmarked with snowcaps, majestic vertical cliffs and depthless waterfalls. Wei Ying didn't feel the need to wear a mask when there was hardly anyone around, though Si Zhui kept an eye out, nevertheless.

They found Wen Ning hard at work in one of the storerooms adjacent to the community's barns and stables. The duo exchanged some banter with the fierce corpse-now-considered-as-man, checked his progress and lent a helping hand. As servants from various workshops and factories dumped stuff outside the barn, Wen Ning diligently collected and sorted the assortment of surplus inventories, and started filling five cartloads of merchandise as instructed - rolls of textiles (all white and patterned with cloud and mountain motifs - there was a recent glut of fabrics meant to make school uniform robes), minerals mined from the caves around the highland city (a plethora of precious and semi-precious ores picked in excess from the cavernous grounds), crafted tools and goods made from wood and metals (for every one piece of high-quality object made, at least three had been created and tested but did not meet the stringent standards set by Gusu Lan's brand of Perfection - it would be a waste to throw them away, so one might as well try to pass them off as sellable, usable goods at second-rate prices), exotic herbs and curative treatments foraged from the surrounding regions (in which the forests around the Cloud Recesses are famous for, besides prolonging lifespans and energizing one's qi), and the final cart was filled with miscellany, such as used books churned out from the libraries and classrooms, touristy-looking fortune charms and magicless talismans, and some (bland-tasting) traditional snacks and foodstuff (Wei Ying's idea - ask everyone in town to contribute something of value to sell, even stuff destined for the trash bin, for the sake of the Lan's family coffers). At the same time, Wen Ning had to make and modify some fittings to the five horses assigned to pull the carts - four healthy young stallions in the stables, and one Lil' Apple still roaming somewhere in the mist-blanketed hills, waiting to be called back to service - and to ensure that all equine animals were fed well and prepped for the journey.

At one point, when Si Zhui was engrossed with brushing a horse's mane, Wen Ning pulled Wei Ying aside and whispered, “ Gongzi , gongzi , I know you didn't come close to the Death's Door in yesterday's poisoning episode, because I've been there before, and it looks nothing like the way you described. But Wei gongzi is always amazing and marvellous, your storytelling is captivating and exciting, and look at you now - you're walking around with your cane as though nothing remarkable has happened between yesterday and today. You must've been blessed with good luck, your strength is infallible, and miracles must've happened in the bedroom in Jingshi for you to have survived and lived to tell the tale!”

Wei Ying only grinned sheepishly in response, and politely shushed away the adorable smirk on Wen Ning's face - he didn't want his false bravado to be revealed to any of the juniors, though he did give a grateful pat on Wen Ning's shoulder to gesture that he appreciated the man's kind words.

Next, when the morning sun dipped behind gray clouds that threatened to rain hail or freezing icicles from the skies, the two tightened their winter robes and ran - Wei Ying donned his mask, then hobbled with his cane - into a large warehouse made of bamboo and padded with plant material, filled with cages that squeaked, meowed, and barked. People were milling about, inspecting the catches and documenting them accordingly. It seemed that within a few hours, Jin Ling had much to show off - his team of students had caught an impressive number of animals, and more were trickling in, in the form of caged strays or voluntarily surrendered pets. A group of scholars, garbed special kinds of robes that looked more like white (lab) coats, checked each specimen by scrutinizing their fur, fangs and claws, and taking samples of their spit and blood, to be mixed with specific reagents and potions to reveal whether any disease or toxins were found.

“Any luck so far?” Si Zhui asked, while Wei Ying happily cornered a cat that had its limbs tied to the ground with leather straps stolen from someone’s examination table. Luckily for him, animals were segregated by class and species, so he didn’t have to deal with dogs and their frightening growls and barks - he could work in peace with his captive victim.

“Not yet. We’ve hardly covered a tenth of the city’s expanse, so it’s hard to predict if and when we’ll find something. Everything’s still clean at this point,” Jin Ling shook his head in slight disappointment; nobody said it would be easy to tackle the mammoth task of catching, testing and releasing every animal in the Cloud Recesses. Elsewhere, Wei Ying was blissfully ignored, and had grabbed a long brush meant for extracting hair from a pet’s fur, and started brushing the victimized cat’s exposed genitals - fluffy balls included. The cat was understandably distressed and yowled with terror, but its cry for rescue was drowned in the midst of so many other animals’ calls echoing inside the warehouse.

Once Wei Ying has had his fill of sexually abusing a cat to sate his curiosity (he finally learned what happens when one brushes a cat's fluffy testicles and its prickly pink penis a little too much, and a little too hard), and Si Zhui has received an update from the animal-catching frontlines (they were asked to return after lunch for more, hopefully significant news), the two set off with umbrellas loaned from other disciples towards one of the handful of magic workshops in the Cloud Recesses. These inconspicuous rooms look no different than plain white and brown dormitories from the outside, but behind the closed doors are resplendent sceneries of moving things, noisy objects, of random clouds of sparkles and fountains of smoke, surrounded by fully-stocked colourful shelves of ingredients, tools and equipment that emit magic, and in the middle are workbenches for magic-users to create, modify, shape and manufacture a variety of charms, talismans, grimoires, potions, armours, weapons and whatnots - in perfectly lined-up sets of production lines.

There, they managed to catch up with Jing Yi who was about to lead his squad to tie long strings of white-coloured talismans along the borders of the forests. "This is my sixth pick-up, can you believe it?!" he exclaimed, "I think we've underestimated just how much rope and paper we need to cover the perimeter with these things!" and held up a set of talismans woven into a thick piece of rope that had been coiled into a thick stack. It looked heavy and Si Zhui offered to help and carry some - but Jing Yi refused like a gentleman, and reminded the other to focus on Wei Ying's well-being; the errant Wei gongzi, on the other hand, had gone off to explore the workshop and became enamoured at watching how a line of men work on a long piece of rope, on benches arranged next to each other lengthwise, as though they were vying for the title of making the world's longest hot dog (or something to that equivalent).

"Each coil like this," Jing Yi gestured to the stack he was holding, "takes about an hour to make by a group of four to five men, but it can only tie between trees up to thirty paces at most, because we didn't factor in bushes, boulders and other obstacles in-between, and we had to go around those - so we lost some length in doing so! Not to mention the tears, holes and other damages we had to fix on the spot each time the talismans were punctured by thorny bushes or when the ropes were grazed, scratched or scraped too hard against jagged rocks,” he admitted. If they had more time, Jing Yi would have preferred to take a small group to patrol the border and clean it up of those obstacles, before setting up the roped talismans.

While the two boys discussed how to salvage and improve the situation, Wei Ying ooh’d and aah’d at how talismans were sewn into the fibres of the ropes. He quietly taught some of the younger, easily-distracted disciples a secret technique or two, such as adding spells that conferred elastic properties to the ropes so that they could be stretched twice as long and malleable enough to withstand the abrasive nature of the natural world, and dipping the talisman papers in melted wax so that they were waterproof and could resist the freezing weather elements.

With Jing Yi off to the borders with a few more (improved) coils of ropes hanging from the shoulders, Si Zhui thought it was getting a wee bit too cold and Wei Ying shivered in agreement. The two headed off, trudging through a light snowfall in the mountains, towards the nearest inn and teahouse, where Si Zhui offered to pay for a pot of nicely warmed pu’er tea, two steaming bowls of soup noodles, and a plate of toasted mixed nuts, to Wei Ying’s delight (because Wei Ying was the quintessential freeloader and had no money on him anyway); the two would spend some good quality time together by a hearty fireplace in the rather sparsely-populated rustic century-old establishment, and regaled by colourful stories of the past shared by the gracious innkeeper, in the ambient warmth typically found indoors in friendly, hospitable Cloud Recesses one fine Spring morning.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 146

“I’ve thought long and hard about this, Lan Zhan. An eye for an eye, a wank for a wank! Let’s get down to business!”

“Wei Ying...?”

“C’mon, man, strip your pants! I’m returning the favour after how you saved my life last night! You jacked me off, so let me do you too, and-- Hey! Come back here!”

“Wei Ying! No!”

“Oi! We’re both men, there’s nothing to be afraid about! You don’t have to hide it, and believe me, I’ve seen many more dicks in all shapes and sizes during my younger days at school, so trust me, I won’t react badly!”

“... nnngh, Wei Ying!”

“Come, come, come (来, 来, 来), don't be shy... and stop running away! What’s so bad about having another man touch you, anyway? You’ll get to feel really, really good with my awesome 'Grasping Dragon's Claw' technique that I’ve mastered since my teenage days! It doesn’t matter if my right arm is bandaged, I’m such a talented gongzi to be ambidextrous, and can send you to the stars with my left! Now stand still, let me put my hands into your pants, and feel the magic sparkle!”

“... aahhhnnn, Wei Ying!”

.

The afternoon was turning out to be a dreary wind and snow swept day, and freezing blizzards pummeled the Cloud Recesses nestled in its protective ring of towering ice-capped mountain peaks. Throughout the city, most outdoor activities ceased after lunch, which took place in the dorms hosted by Jing Yi as the captain-of-sorts for a number of disciples under his service. After considering Lan Zhan’s unspoken annoyance of having his Jingshi tormented by multiple bouts of overpopulation (two is the maximum he’d like to accommodate in the long run), and Wei Ying’s increasingly incessant whining in front of a fireplace whilst being swaddled by three layers of woolly robes, that his weakened body couldn’t tolerate the sub-zero temperatures, which is further aggravated by the healing wounds from the poisoning episode - kind-hearted Si Zhui obligingly returned the latter to Hanguang Jun’s home, deposited him safely into Lan Zhan’s cuddle-worthy arms, then carried off the remaining unread books from the dining table so that he would singlehandedly complete the task and let the Lan er gongzi take a well-deserved break for the rest of the day. Si Zhui mentioned that he’d talk to Zewu Jun about the new arrangements, and that he’d report his summary from the Library’s books to the Sect Leader on time, so there was no need to worry.

All four servants left the Jingshi with the banquet food to serve the prepared dishes in the dorms, attended by all three juniors, Wen Ning, their teammates, assistants and servants who also worked hard during the morning to prepare the carts of goods for the trip to Caiyi, investigate the poisoning plague in the Cloud Recesses, and secure the city from further threats. A-Jia ordered his fellow comrades to leave the resident couple a table for two of wholesome, steaming warm food for lunch - spicy pork congee for Wei Ying, wheat noodles and vermicelli in meat broth for Lan Zhan, an assortment of stir-fries, omelettes, winter greens, tofu and mushrooms, and sweet desserts laid out neatly on the dining table, accompanied with chilli, sweet-sour and savoury dips. Wei Ying made a couple of critiques about the meal - although the taste was splendid, however he was beginning to feel bored from having liquidy meals that seemed too healthy and lacked fried or oily components; Lan Zhan simply “Mn”s in acknowledgement of his partner’s unavoidable suffering, and did not need to elaborate further; a meal enjoyed together in relative peace and quiet was all the Master of the House wanted, after all.

With nothing else to do when the last plate was cleaned with lip-smacking grunts, Wei Ying wondered loudly, punctuated by satisfied burps and boorish displays of tooth-picking in plain view, about what merriment and chaos were happening across the streets in the dorms filled with young, adventurous and energetic boys; about the proceedings of the meetings held in the Council halls attended by elders, sages, scholars and the apothecary owner; about whether the gloomy weather would worsen, or if Xi Chen da ge and his servants would still drop by the Jingshi; suffice to say, any further action in town - seemingly the main plot of the story book - would occur outside of the Jingshi, where superstars Si Zhui, Jing Yi, Jin Ling and Wen Ning would hunker down at the dorms, workshops and other locations in the heart of the Cloud Recesses, than, say, a picturesque standalone heritage building and its farmlands and lotus pond, tucked in a tranquil corner of the settlement, away from prying eyes.

Boredom quickly set in, and soon, Wei Ying had other bright ideas to keep himself entertained, and his fingers itched for a grope between the unfortunate partner’s legs.

“Lan Zhan, you look too sexy and beautiful, like a man's wet dream come true,” naked Wei Ying exclaimed with a sly chuckle, “We should get married and you can be my lao po !” and laughed obnoxiously at his own joke.

Lan Zhan lay carelessly atop the bed in the nude, and appeared absolutely, brutally scandalized; his long, lush hair was unnaturally messed up and spread like imperfect black tentacles on the bedspread, his cheeks rosy and the skin glimmered with filtered afternoon sunlight reflecting off a sheen of sweat, hooded dilated eyes gazing languidly in the dim light from the aftermath of pinnacles of extremely enjoyable activities, sounds of heavy panting blended with a heady mix of incense and muskiness emanating from streaks of milky white that were shot out accidentally, too excitedly, too soon, that the er gongzi was left breathless, gasping, spread-eagled with the comforting weight of his partner settling down intimately between his legs, not to mention that those smooth but well-muscled legs trembled from delightful fatigue, and the sweaty hips that anchored everything in place jerked involuntarily once, twice, rapidly thrice in succession.

When Wei Ying said that ‘before the Dragon’s Claw can be unclasped, it must be loosened with tender loving care’, Lan Zhan didn’t think it meant having his nearly hairless genitals bared, then having the younger man’s wonderfully chock-full of tickly friction hairy bush, turgid cockmeat and plump baby-Wei Yings knead, slide, slap and slam repeatedly against his in full, toe-curlingly pleasurable force. Lan Zhan’s penis, already steel-hard and twitchy at the prospect of getting loved, was instantly overwhelmed when Wei Ying lay on him, full-body and incredibly intimate, then started to hump. It felt like rubbing against an impressive piece of living, throbbing log and two squeezable pipa fruits, and Lan Zhan’s manly pride swelled twice as much from the deserving compliment about his size, length and girth. Thirty volleys ejected with such climactic force between their bodies, with some fertile gooey ejaculatory missiles propelled straight towards the ceiling and landed on both men, that Wei Ying laughed and squealed as he was lifted into the air each time the older man howled with great pleasure and squeezed his glutes so tightly, back arched so gracefully, raised his hips so sharply as though he was desperately fucking the highest clouds in Heaven.

Wei Ying gazed at the object of his desire affectionately, and gave their crotch-to-crotch kiss a few more heartfelt rubs; it was truly unbecoming - but comical - to watch a man in this mid-thirties become undone in a matter of moments, every time their cocks and balls rubbed together, lavishly encased with the latter's still-heated sticky seed. By wedging Lan Zhan's helplessly defenceless manhood between them - like a floppy, tired piece of overcooked patty sandwiched in the middle of moist, firm buns - he effectively captured the older man to be his play toy on a whim; despite being cognizant of the differences in their body heights, sizes and more obviously, their strengths, Wei Ying dared to act like the sadistic queen of the house and hold the masochistic er gongzi imprisoned, especially with his good left hand gripping a chokehold around the other's, sending tasty whines, erotic moans and delicious pleading for mercy echoing throughout the confines of the locked bedroom.

Lan Zhan begged Wei Ying, in gasping two-syllable phrases, with off-character melodious Yes and more Yes'es in rising pitches - not so much because he wanted to be married off as a wife to someone else (which he loves dearly anyway), but because naughty Wei Ying who had tasted the fun and thrill (and ickiness and fear) of being molested by experienced wrinkled old men, took his sweet revenge by repaying the act in multiples of the pleasure and intensity. He gave Lan Zhan the best Dragon's Claw handjob ever that could purportedly turn a real dragon into a phallic orgasmic monster, and used the spent seed like a lubricant brimming with thrumming energy and warmth; sexually-flushed Lan Zhan gleefully surrendered to the blinding pleasure that wrecked his body in convulsions, although his face remained rather expressionless except for twitches and jerks on his face that mirrored the rhythm in which his body danced every time his impossibly hard spear was stroked, polished and swiped with delicate fingertips.

Another thirty explosive jets would follow soon; the visual, audible and tactile fireworks would be enough to convince Wei Ying that he had gained a new pastime - to play with Lan Zhan's penis as often as possible - because he was truly bewitched in the way the amazing, marvellous and formidable Hanguang Jun crumbled to his expert touch, how the handsome, tight visage morphed into a series of ugly half-yawns, half-screams and half-grimaces, how the body melted into molten volcanic spurts that contracted and relaxed so perfectly fine, always thirty times each, exhibiting the full spectrum of a mortal's true unbridled lust that fascinated Wei Ying to no end, before becoming whole again to become the most gentle, lovable and cuddle-able person in the whole bedroom and Wei Ying could once again be pampered with Lan Zhan's coddling and snuggle against his favourite sleeping spot between body-warmed blankets and a set of firm pecs, six-pack abs and a bouncy, soothing paunch, lulled to sleep with a lullaby of strong heartbeats and sometimes, vague humming reminiscent of an old tune he'd heard sixteen years ago.

"Mmm... who cares if you're a best-buddy or a confidant... Lan Zhan, you really should become mine... my lao po," Wei Ying murmured drowsily as he burrowed onto a nest of Lan Zhan-branded snuggly flesh, pillows and blankets, suddenly feeling a little dizzy and sleepy.

"Mn," came a faraway reply, and Lan Zhan twirled his fingers behind his back, to cast another godly spell that alters reality, time, space and his partner's state of mind. He didn't need expensive wines, luxurious romantic backdrops, or whisper sweet nothings and loving promises, to get both of them into the mood to meet their daily lovemaking quota; sixty ejaculations as foreplay is peanuts for Lan Zhan; he'd make sure to reward Wei Ying's efforts a zillion times in return during that one full ecstatic afternoon.

.

The man named Lan Wang Ji in this timeline is determined to keep both he and his destined soulmate, Wei Wu Xian, away from the troubles that would beset their world, through seemingly innocuous ways that do not differ from the humdrum of daily life, with some exceptions blessed with divine intervention, of course. Playing second fiddle instead of the superstar of the narrative that chronicles the next rise and fall of heroes and legends - is perfectly fine for the man who was already beyond perfection.

The afternoon storm made sure that nobody would interrupt the couple's frisky (alas, fruitless, homosexual) playtime, despite having the Jingshi rocked by explosive sex, incredible acrobatic acts of fertility and fecundity, lightning flashes and thunder signifying god-tiered fornication, mini earthquakes and roars of orgasmic climaxes to accompany the rhythmic creaks of a terribly, terribly abused bed - because there was no one around to brave the snow and pry into the private matters of the Master of the House. Furthermore, having all great minds and the main players gather at the dorms, with all available hands on deck in the form of disciples and servants, meant that Jing Yi managed to secure the parameters of the Cloud Recesses with freeze-proof Wen Ning's help; Si Zhui completed reviewing all reading materials with the aid from his teammates; Jin Ling didn't need to hunt down all stray animals in the city because Zewu Jun and the Council of elders had seen enough data from just a fifth of the population and concluded that none of the animals were disease carriers and needn't be investigated further; Wen Ning filled the five carts in record time when all disciples and servants chipped in, and some even contributed their own stuff to sell, such as family heirlooms that hadn't found practical use to date or treasures excavated from hidden caves beneath the city; the apothecary owner gave his statements which fuelled new directions in research for new cures and ways to detect the poisoning plague before more people fall victim; the Council continued to convene meetings after meetings to deliberate on the current situation, discoveries and the next steps; unbeknownst to the residents of the Jingshi, during the afternoon, more deaths had been recorded in Caiyi and squads were rushed off to several districts within the Cloud Recesses after town guards received unverified reports of people suddenly falling ill in their homes - for once, the Sect Leader of the Gusu Lan was at the forefront to meet with the affected families to ascertain the nature of the sickness, and to determine the extent of the horror that seemed to have grown its roots within the heart of the clan.

.

Wei Ying was resigned to play as a sidekick in an exciting series fraught with epic mystery, murder, adventure and thrilling moments starring his successors of sorts, and Lan Zhan was, to his disappointment, an even more side of a sidekick; he had relinquished all permissions, rights, related information and ideas to his elder brother to spearhead the investigation and the trip to Caiyi.

"Well, at least I'll get to enjoy new sceneries, observe people going about their daily lives in Spring, and have a taste of a freshly different, more vibrant city life since being locked up in this cold, unforgiving, isolated mountaintop for nearly half a year!" the younger man tried to pacify himself with his own justifications for a journey out of town that had suddenly lost its significance. He could make do with people-watching and shopping for touristy oddities and knick knacks using Lan Zhan's hard-earned salary, at the very least.

The younger of the Twin Jades was relieved to have won half the battle after mildly arguing about the matter with his partner for the past half-hour, whilst embracing the now-officiated lover from the back on the bed. Wei Ying, though, didn't think so - about being lovers -, and merely thought he had suffered yet another amnesiac episode (by waking up completely dazed, just in time for a sumptuous dinner served in bed, with pleasant aches, throbs, spasms, and a generally foreboding empty feeling in his loins which counterbalanced the generally full, stretched, satiated sensations emanating from inside his asshole), which can be completely attributed to Lan Zhan's fault because whatever happened in the bedroom stays within the bedroom, and getting back rubs, tummy rubs, comfortably spooned and free handjobs by the er gongzi does not constitute as proof of getting hitched into a relationship, according to Wei Ying's point of view.

"Mn. You get to try out the dishes from teahouses where my elder brother has scheduled appointments with the laoban s that will inspect our goods. You can lead the negotiations with your mask on, but you will not be allowed to participate in the investigations of the poisoning plague. Those are our Sect Leader's words, not mine." Somewhere during the explanation, Wei Ying thrust his ass deeper into the curve of his partner's crotch, and let out a rude fart - because he now knows that he is allowed to - in protest of being denied. Lan Zhan, however, knew how to respond to calm down the man's nerves; he simply reached to the front with both hands and started to, in Wei Ying's childish but endearing vocabulary, "play with the naughty bits" just because the younger man is entitled to it.

"Ehh? Why am I being left out? That's the most exciting part of this trip, isn't it?" the man of smaller stature blurted, or rather, squeaked. He didn't realise that a spell was being weaved into his groin by two twirling fingers, as everything was buried under layers of blankets and cushion.

"Sect Leader has your safety and well-being in his heart, as he considers you as part of the greater family. If anything, Jin Ling, being a distant relative of yours, can represent your interests in such discussions," came the no-nonsense reply that left the other man with little ammunition for a counter-argument. Lower down, Wei Ying's penis magically shrunk in size and in its place, a plump, moist juicy cavern began to carve itself, lined with pretty little bumps filled with nectary slickness, framed with muscular walls and blossoming feminine petal-like folds at the entrance, equipped with functional parts such as a real pee slit on one end, a perfectly tight, hot and squelchy elastic cocksleeve of sorts, and an artificial womb within.

"Auuggh! I wish I wasn't this weak and useless! Can't I just tag along? Just for the sake of harmless curiosity. I promise I won't do anything that might jeopardize the team's efforts to solve the mystery!" Wei Ying shrugged and flailed his limbs in exaggerated disappointment, unaware that he was being gender-switched without permission, that even his breasts started to swell into perky orange-sized mounds filled with soft, squishy but firm body fat, that more layers began build around his waist and hips, and that his thin manly features were beginning to soften up.

"Zewu Jun had interrogated both of us, and you've been personally examined by the Council of elders, so they have all the information they need to pursue the investigation without us. Please, Wei Ying, do not make it more difficult for me than it already is," Lan Zhan rumbled in a pleading tone, although partly due to his increasingly loss of control at the sight, smell and sound - he'd picked up a slight high-pitched squeal from Wei Ying's voice - of a partner being transformed according to his burgeoning loins' wishes; his love for Wei Ying is enduring, goes beyond boundaries and is non gender-specific, however the flesh is weak for some truly feminine qualities, flavours and touches.

"Nnnnh! All right! But you have to promise that I can stay by your side at all times, and you have to keep me amused and entertained!" the younger man-turning-into-woman blabbered on, as he was unknowingly maneuvered into a missionary sex position; he was pinned to the mattress, legs spread and hips raised, and Lan Zhan nnngh'ed with utter satisfaction when his dripping, wanting jerking over-six inch phallus started rubbing and kissing the presented, newly formed rosebud - a virgin, technically, waiting to be deflowered.

"Mn..." Kiss, kiss, down there, excitedly begging to be allowed in for a taste, and the chance to make many babies together all night long. Kiss, kiss, on the puffy nipples in the imagined hopes that sometimes they will be filled with sweet milk to feed the babes. Kiss, kiss, lip to lip, loving how Wei Ying tastes, filled with flavours of the musky, the pungent, the desirable, and the lovely. Lan Zhan was more than ready to mount his partner many times that night.

"Also, your uncle is a creep for molesting me while I was alone in bed. Don't you dare deny that," Wei Ying nnnh'ed in between jostling with their lip-locking, surprisingly unfazed by what was happening to his body, other than a distant annoying feeling due to Lan Zhan's stubborn closeness - why was the older man lying on top of him, anyway? Did he think the man named Wei Wuxian was as soft, pliant and malleable as a pillow? - and certainly didn't wince nor groan when the pussy down there finally parted its lovely lips and was deflowered in a single, vigorous stroke.

"Mn..." Lan Zhan allowed himself to drown into the pleasures of the flesh - Wei Ying's flesh - and joyfully yielded to the sensations of fucking a real female's vagina - Wei Ying's vagina. His body sang praises to the divinely magical spell that turned thin, frail, crippled men into buxom, beautiful and very enticing-looking women, and proceeded to reap the rewards spread out beneath him like a buffet of sexual delicacies. With each pump of the hips, he nnngh'd and felt his cock grow ten times more, filling up with rich, creamy molten pressure for the wonderful act of sowing his wildest seeds inside the womb - Wei Ying's womb -, and he was impatient enough to keep knocking at the door of that womb, demanding for entrance, forcing his way deeper while enjoying the juicy tightness that literally squeezed the living lights out of him. His eyes rolled to the back, his abdomen shuddered, his back bent and bowed out of control, his body clearly becoming too excited for its own good.

"And those groups of old men who kept visiting the bedroom all morning, then took advantage of my body to slake their thirst for boyjuice and sate their hunger for sweet young flesh..." Wei Ying finally felt something in his mind-altered state - a twinge of twisted pleasure - but he did not, could not, perceive the fact that Lan Zhan was already deeply drilling and rutting inside him, with rhythmic pounding and thrusting sounds, naughty fingers grasped and squeezed his now-bouncy breasts, the pace picking up, the juices flowing liberally from both individuals, mixing into sweet honeyed liquids, heavy breaths, trembling thighs and sweaty limbs, that were the prelude of the euphoric act of achieving orgasms in unison, and for Lan Zhan, the opportunity to relive his gleeful delight of bedding his Wei Ying and impregnate many children inside his beloved partner.

"Mn... Wei Ying, do not speak anymore... please... aahhnn..."

Wei Ying acquiesced, thinking that it was another strange Gusu Lan family rule that prohibits one from speaking ill of elders, so he stopped blurting out his complaints.

Lan Zhan breathed a sigh of relief, and continued to enjoy tasting the fruits of his gender-bending magic, and at least until midnight when the spell wore off, he was convinced that Wei Ying had been properly inseminated multiple times with great joy and carried his flesh and blood. He'd continue his painstaking efforts to father twins and triplets inside Wei Ying, long after the clock struck twelve.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 147

The next morning, whatever misgivings or appreciation Wei Ying had for the team that was assembled for the investigation and the outbound carts dissipated upon receiving news from the town crier, replaced by sheer horror and shock.

.

Wei Ying chastised himself for waking up late despite having slept or probably remained in a foggy, dazed state for most of the day before, which was becoming all too common recently and he wouldn't bat an eyelid at the thought of hibernating inside the Jingshi's bedroom all year round; he couldn't quite remember what happened, except that his body felt exceedingly good, but confused, in a sexual way - drained to the last droplet, filled with satisfaction to the brim, then exhausted to the bones, but pulsating with youthful vigour simultaneously, plus, something icky kept dribbling out from his bottom no matter how many times he ran to the loo and wiped his buttocks with leaves and biodegradable rice paper; he kept having flashes of fragments of memories of having real sexual intercourse without ever recalling having his virginity taken in his twenty or so years of early life; he kept peering at his frontal male equipment, though nothing seemed out of the ordinary except for a very limp, de-sexualized and floppy lifeless dangling piece of phallic flesh covered with familiar thick bushy curls - he believed that he'd lost his little junior since becoming a handicapped man and had his meridians severed, but somehow, lingering sensations during wakeful hours told him otherwise.

In any case, the sky was lit up with mid-morning rolling in ruthlessly without wait, and he stepped off the bed (finally, finally) with a full belly, a washed and cleansed body, dressed in a fresh set of robes; he scolded Lan

Zhan for pampering him with so many creature comforts - for instance, sleep-warmed pillows and blankets that smelled like them, intimate cuddles and touches all morning that drew him back to the mattress like a magnet, a wonderful filling breakfast of liquidy foods served with tantalizing side dishes of the fried and oily kind (Wei Ying was overjoyed that his stomach's wishes came true, to say the least), and plenty of opportunity for physical, sexual fun - between best buddies, Wei Ying had to remind himself - because Lan Zhan kept seducing Wei Ying back into the bed by undressing, spread-eagling himself, offering his body as a permanent sanctuary with sensual, calming, familiar whispers of "Come, come and lie on me, Wei Ying, and let's play your favourite game of touch-touch". Wei Ying took the bait like a moth to a flame, giggled and squealed with absolutely delight, because he had full access to a playground spread in front of him like a buffet, so he wasted another five, ten, twenty minutes examining, touching, then playing, plucking, stroking their nipples, navels, penises and balls; never mind that every five, ten, twenty minutes Lan Zhan showed him how a true manly man Perfectly orgasmed with an over-six incher, with bountiful arches of creamy whites landing on his increasingly rounded paunch; whilst Wei Ying double-dared the former and retaliated obnoxiously by masturbating in broad daylight, made Lan Zhan drool with desire and with an inexplicable hunger, then made sure to show the older partner how his less intimidating, less impressive, less than-six incher spasmed, convulsed, how his body and legs shook uncontrollably when he climaxed, how his O-face formed from childish rosy-cheeked glee, which contorted then blossomed into unadulterated sexual joy, and how shades of pink, reds and erotic crimson coloured his complexion, chest then spread upwards to his thin neck and face, when he spurts fifteen crystal-clear oozy pearls for Lan Zhan to admire; the last ten ejaculations went straight into the older man's waiting lips, of course, because Lan Zhan was too tempted for a taste, and he happily but expressionlessly swooped down between Wei Ying's open legs for a vibrantly good, hard, soul-draining suck without asking to be invited.

Wei Ying spent five, ten, twenty minutes watching intensely through sleepy, droopy eyelids, with his gaze threatening to go up the ceiling and roll to the back every time electrical shocks of pleasure spiked in his loins, his scrutiny mixed with unnatural fascination, at how his own penis pulsed and jerked, a series of (very weak, but very delectable) contractions ran up and down his turgid, hyper-sensitive dick then spewed merrily into the older man's throat; how Lan Zhan milked the swollen member with the muscles in his mouth, throat and tongue, how he amazingly deep-throated without hitting a gag reflex and made Wei Ying see stars and nearly fell asleep from the bone-shattering aftermath there and then; however the continuous vacuuming action dragged him back to the land of the living, and Wei Ying nnngh'd, aaahn'd and yowled as his penis was polished behind closed lips and he was forced by inhuman suction strength to piston crazily between those luscious, cum-slicked moist lips, and he ejaculated again and again like an incontinent fool, and oh how Lan Zhan enjoyed suckling the abused glans like a teat from a goat, stroked the length and girth with his textured tongue with such mastery that Wei Ying's toes curled and fingers grappled the crumpled bedsheets with every downstroke, then hummed at such a titillating low frequency when the pair of testicles had been swallowed and held captive inside a moist oral cavern, trapped together with a lashing tongue that pleased and probed enticingly, that the young man thought his balls had melted and melded into pure sexual qi energy globes bursting with super-charged strobing orgasmic sparkles - his testicles orgasmed too many times from the warm, wet assault of tongue and suction, until every single sperm had been squeezed out, then evacuated in rapid volcanic-hot volleys from those lovely, formerly plump hairy balls and soon, only twin wrinkled saggy prunes remained in heated, drained bliss, delicious palpitations continued run along the testicular nerves, causing each emptied testicle to spasm visibly inside their oversized sacs long after the contents had been forcibly expelled; Wei Ying imagined Lan Zhan might as well be drinking the most expensive wine in the Middle Kingdom - his wine - and become drunk from his smelly, musky though diluted essence, and in no time, Wei Ying flew to the next heaven, next nirvana, next impossibly sexual high of orgasms deep into Lan Zhan's incredible blowjob; his cries of "Enough, enough, er gongzi ... mercy, mercy please! You will suck my soul away!" remained unheard, in fact the pleas renewed Lan Zhan's ruthless pace in giving head to his tormented, dying, lightning-shocked lively angry-purple penis; his pelvis shuddered like the beat of the wings of hummingbirds, before stilling, then beautiful, divine pushes, squeezes, molten liquid boiling upwards from his loins, rhythmically rising and rising, culminating to the fifth, tenth maybe twentieth terribly weak but terribly mind-blowing climax, throbbing straight into Lan Zhan's beautiful, divine moustached lips and mouth (with a handsome beard below too, Wei Ying had to add).

Due to this ordeal, Wei Ying added another little note into his naughty book of secrets about the younger of the Twin Jades - that Lan Zhan was confirmed to suffer from an obsessive, debilitating oral fixation, when it came to the sparse list of activities that the great Hanguang Jun would term as 'fun'. All in all, Wei Ying learned a bit more about himself and his best buddy, Lan Zhan, that morning, though they had remained in the Jingshi for too long, and consequently, missed all the action that happened across town before nine o' clock.

(Obviously, the entire morning of 'fun' did not include the fact that the godly Hanguang Jun once again broke the laws of nature, warped space-time to his whims, bent reality and states of mind, and made Wei Ying extremely agreeable to his demands for an undisclosed length of time - possibly hours, days or months, but nobody will ever know. During that period of semi-consciousness, in which Wei Ying would not remember upon waking, Lan Zhan injected miniscule tendrils of hypnotic magic which turned Wei Ying into a person with a sexual appetite as great as the man he was, in one of the previous lifetimes. It goes without saying that the couple degenerated into a mass of writhing, moaning and orgasming copulating flesh that left the bedroom decimated in more ways than one - thank goodness the four servants were around and worked around the clock to keep their love nest from becoming a broken, disfigured, rancid-smelling, soaked, sticky, soggy mess.

Lan Zhan spent an inordinate amount of time inside his lovely Wei Ying, whose mind had soared elsewhere in his hypnosis; he shaped the insides by slamming their hips with wild abandon, drawing circles, stars and other complicated shapes with their conjoined genitals every time their bodies intertwined, each time he'd reached the innermost and most intimate spaces, he'd wiggle and flutter his hips and savoured the sensations of over-stimulated glans kissing, rubbing against something akin to a moist door, teasing it to open more, more, and still, he pushed deeper as much as their bodies would allow using quick, shallow bone-shaking thrusts, until Wei Ying was lovingly stretched and violated to the last fibre of muscles. The older man thoroughly enjoyed the tight, warm passageway that his kneaded, pulsed and caressed his over-excited penis, coaxing it to strike harder, deeper, faster, seducing the throbbing flesh to spill its fertile seed into an artificial womb that was created just in the nick of time - just because the deity surnamed Lan wished for it. They switched many sex positions, but eventually settled into missionary, and Lan Zhan gratefully squeezed his glutes and shoved in until it was no longer possible to drill even deeper through physical means, then allowed his penis to bump, knock and kiss the door to the cradle, where he'd penetrate with unbridled joy repeatedly, then spew his sperm accompanied with thirty pleased roars and gushes of mighty milky fertility, that he would father too many babes inside his beloved man and Wei Ying would be perfectly inseminated each round; he'd fucked Wei Ying so hard in his greedy, lustful state, that he swore in seven Gusu dialects each time he came, and Wei Ying mewled coyly while letting his limbs roam around the older man's, touching erogenous zones, locking his legs around Lan Zhan's buttocks, begging to be made pregnant, to birth many twins and triplets for the Lan family - Lan Zhan lost control of his rational thought then, his eyes rolled back, his back seized, his face turned into an unsightly mix of clenched jaws, half-yawns and half-snarls, then he howled with all his might for thirty times, one for each ejaculation, his body singing with exuberant joy while drowning great pleasures of ejecting seed to where it truly belongs - inside lovely Wei Ying - and remained in the throes of limitless ecstasy and orgasmic peaks - and surrendered to the sweet powerful, rhythmic contractions that wrecked his godly paunched body, and made sure that fist-sized womb inside Wei Ying properly bloated into a football filled with deposited semen, singing frenzied praises for the dastardly act of planting his seeds deep inside the fleshy, convulsing canal that he futilely wished for one, two, three, many babies to pop out from nine months later - that the amused Wei Ying cackled with impudent laughter, because unbeknownst to the Master of the House, Wei Ying enjoyed enslaving the god with his infallible, undefeatable sexual attraction.

“Cum again, Lan Zhan, you know you want to make more babies inside my tunnel of everlasting love! Make me feel good, you hopelessly horny man, hiding behind the face of a proper Young Master! Let go of those useless virtues that you hold so dearly, and enjoy this tasty, warm, virile body to your delight!” the hypnotized, debauched younger man spouted his silly, but surprisingly arousing words and spread his bedraggled body all over the mattress while making demure, coquettish, kissy gestures; steamy spent seed gushed out when Lan Zhan pulled back from the addictive deflowered rosebud, and Wei Ying intentionally nnngh'ed his pelvic floor to squirt out more excess sperm, whilst the said rosebud opened and closed like juicy lips begging for a kiss - the sight was incredibly arousing and thus, once more, Lan Zhan instinctively responded with his still-hard, sex-juice coated dick twitching energetically Yes, Yes and very much Yes, then descended into the spiralling depths of sexual depravity - for another period of indeterminate space-time incongruency.)

.

The first thing a refreshed Wei Ying wanted to do after stepping out of the Jingshi, was to look for his companions and have a go at people-watching in the morning market. Lan Zhan agreed wordlessly, and clutched a small shopping list in one hand, and a bamboo basket in the other - the Jingshi needed some replenishment, and since he'd stopped his teaching job for a while in anticipation of the trip to Caiyi, he was free to spend his morning buying stuff and mingling around, while his four servants stayed back in the House to clean up the sexual carnage left behind.

As soon as they approached the first stall, the town crier at the entrance to the market, like clockwork, began reading out announcements for everyone to hear. After a few pieces of mundane, uninteresting news about latest rules being enacted or the upcoming birthdays of some elite Lan clansmen, came the main headline that caused some alarm for Wei Ying and for many market-goers alike.

The convoy of five carts and their escorts, including the Sect Leader, pulled by Lil' Apple and four horses, had moved out at first light of sunrise, bound for Caiyi Town - without waiting for the residents of the Jingshi, to Wei Ying's consternation. A couple of hours later, messenger pigeons returned with dire messages that avalanches had struck at dawn, landslides were aplenty, and the entire procession was grounded, trapped between ice and fallen boulders. Soldiers and disciples have been dispatched to the site of the accident.

Wei Ying expressed shock that he'd been left behind and started tugging at Lan Zhan's sleeves, childishly calling for the latter's attention, but Lan Zhan remained unfazed and successfully haggled for lower prices for a bundle of spring vegetables. As the older man paid using money he'd earned from his teaching job and safely stowed the fresh purchase inside his basket, Wei Ying pouted and remembered that of course people would leave without him, since he'd stayed in long after the departure time. He felt like a disappointed passenger who had missed his flight.

"But I didn't know they'd leave this morning!" he cried in dismay.

"Mn. You were sleeping and resting for nearly the whole afternoon and evening yesterday, just like any other day - of course you wouldn't know. And I didn't have the heart to wake you up at four this morning for the five o' clock departure, because you never woke up that early anyway," came the no-nonsense, but non-objectionable reply, said with such surety that Wei Ying pursed his lips and stopped complaining - a little win for Lan Zhan, who lied through his teeth because he needed to keep his dirty little secret - and his advantage over his beloved Wei Ying - intact. Lan Zhan quickly moved to the next stall that sold fruits, and Wei Ying tagged along like an obedient pet. His earlier shock easily dissipated, replaced by a bit of worry and curiosity at the revelation from the town crier.

"Based on the news, it must be a crisis over there, if they weren't able to enlist Wen Ning's superhuman strength to dig themselves out, or use the Sect Leader's great powers to blast through the downhill mountain passes! I'd be in trouble too, if I had followed them in this crippled state and got caught in a disaster of that magnitude!" Wei Ying exclaimed while waving his cane (and nearly lost his balance - bless Lan Zhan for quickly catching his beloved man with both arms before poor Wei Ying tumbled head over toes), while the younger man listened intently to a repeated reading of the news, recited by a pimple-faced teenage boy standing close to the bustling morning market. A small crowd formed around the town crier, and started to talk amongst themselves in muffled murmurs.

Lan Zhan remained silent and stoic, and continued to examine a small pile of fruits on a wooden table. Deep down, Lan Zhan clearly remembered the time when, lifetimes ago, the two of them left Yiling on an expedition to Yunmeng, and encountered a similar mishap in the wintry mountain passes of the Middle Kingdom's western highlands, although of greater catastrophic and supernatural proportions back then.

"Well, since messenger pigeons were sent from the site of the accident, we can be sure at least Si Zhui is alive and well, because he always keeps a couple of those well-trained birds in his sleeves, ever since he'd learnt his lesson from running out of signal flares during the Mo village fierce corpses incidences last year,” Wei Ying conjectured and assured himself loudly. He casually snatched a pear from Lan Zhan’s hand - a fruit the older man was inspecting meticulously for signs of bruises or worms - causing the aged fruit seller to gasp at the thievery right in front of his eyes - and bit into the juicy flesh without a second thought.

“Mn. Signal flares do not do particularly well if they’ve been exposed to ice or water too, and tend to be too faint to be noticed during snowy daytimes” Lan Zhan added and sighed, then handed a piece of silver to the surprised seller (because in law-abiding Cloud Recesses, one had never seen a masked man steal a fruit in broad daylight, and then be paid to experience the distressingly shocking act), and looked upward. The skies above the Cloud Recesses were foggy and overcast, with intermittent blizzard gusts tearing through the streets. At times, sunlight reflecting off pristine snowcaps towering above the city were glaring and caused temporary snow blindness to those who inadvertently stared at the beautiful, rugged, untamed landscape. The trails leading out from the entrance gates to other settlements on lower grounds were swallowed by more violent, churning seas of grey fog, frosty winds and in all likelihood, snowstorms that lingered from the day before.

The teenage town crier flipped a poster that hung from his neck to read the next piece of news. Lan Zhan, having bought a selection of imported fruits to be placed in the front-facing visitors’ hall of the Jingshi, moved on to the next stall for some condiments and spices; he planned to do more cooking at home since the kitchenette had been extended, renovated and furnished into a respectable-looking area that he could use to create wonderful dishes on his own, without relying too much on the clan’s communal kitchens. Inside his mind, he’d checked off his shopping list - A-Jia had been tasked to make further expansions to the Jingshi and made sure its pantries and storerooms are well-stocked, A-Yi helped to order and arrange the goods, and A-Bing and A-Ding were the workhorses who continued to toil the household chores and needed home improvement works, including preparing the said sumptuous breakfast and fragrant floral baths in a wooden tub, and providing terribly addictive body massages that kept Wei Ying moaning in bed until nine in the morning. Needless to say, all four also did their part as the clean-up crew every time the couple spent a morning, afternoon, evening or night copulating like animals in heat - without Wei Ying's knowledge.

“Ahh! Lan Zhan, did you hear that?” Wei Ying shouted in-between rude chews of juicy pear, with a worried crease in his brows. He tugged at the older man's sleeves repeatedly, this time with urgency; the sight of two men clothed in thick winter robes, with one pulling at the other like little children in the playground, was quite adorable, and drew a few giggly whispers from passing-by housewives. “Five cases of poisoning were discovered yesterday around the western areas, close to the entrance to the city, and this morning, four had already died with grievous, liquefying wounds; the remaining one is still in intensive care at the hospital! Ten more cases have been reported from the northern and southern districts, pending to be verified by district officials. The medically-educated Council elders, more than twenty individuals in total, seemed to have fled the city at daybreak, right after Zewu Jun's convoy left, and now, doctors and scholars are in a bind on how to handle the poisoning plague that has affected the Gusu Lan!” the younger man gestured wildly with his hands, in exaggerated alarm, to indicate the body counts.

He didn't really need to repeat what the town crier had just announced, but the theatrics had its effect. Lan Zhan seemed to be attuned to the atmosphere around them, and quickly pocketed bottles of sauces, spices and cooking herbs. He was at another stall before Wei Ying could react. Voices around them started to speak, and they spoke clearly above the drone of murmurs and everyday chatter.

“It's true, isn't it? My son told me his classmate's neighbour's uncle was one of the stricken victims! What on earth is the Sect Leader thinking, going out on a Spring morning walk with the horses while his people are suffering! It's unbecoming of the state of our leadership for our clan!"

"I know! I know! To hear the elders have left the city - it's unbelievable! I heard from a grandpa from the coffeeshop, that even the cleaners were surprised at the sight of the Council offices early this morning - it seemed everything of value was ransacked, chests filled with gold ingots and jewels had been taken away, and important thumb-printed documents were found in the trash bin... as ashes!"

"Hold that thought! Those terribly irresponsible elders must've sneaked away because they tried to pass off the cases yesterday as mild food poisoning from eating spoiled foods or toxic mushrooms, and when they saw how the patients' conditions deteriorated overnight, they turned into cowards with tails between their legs!"

"Oh, I'm so glad someone talked about this! My family's been warned not to utter a word by the town guards until the investigations have been completed! One of the dead victims was a relative of mine, who lived on the main streets of the western district. It's horrible, I tell you! I heard how he was infected after bathing in the waters of a backyard pond, and his internal organs started melting into a blackish stew! No doctors can save us, not when we don't even know how this plague spreads - it could even be in the water you have in your noodle soup, sir!"

"'Tis frightening news! Stop eating those noodles! Stop drinking water! Stop getting close to any animals, if what that Jin boy said was true, that even cats, dogs and rats carry the filthy disease and walk the same streets as our clansmen! My... is that Lan er gongzi ? Er gongzi ! What do you have to say, now that we're without our Sect Leader? What should we do?"

“Is that him? I couldn’t really recognize him with that facial hair and weight gain, what more with that strange masked man beside him! Master Lan, I heard the gossips in teahouses that you struck a shady deal with your uncle and older brother, for them to take the reins as our leaders and to do whatever they want, including some dubious pursuits that left our Council elders inept, self-serving, even corrupted, while you took an oath to never return to the cultivation world, despite the amazing achievements, fame and honour you’ve earned from the year before. Why? Why stray from the path of virtue and desert us at the hour of our greatest need?”

Wei Ying was nearly in tears, galvanized by the state of desperate panic and the numerous pleas for help from shopkeepers, vendors, housewives and children at the market, and wanted to leap into the city square to declare his intent to save everyone - but Lan Zhan quickly yanked his good left arm and hurried away from the growing, noisy crowds that, worryingly, started to follow them. He’d completed most of his shopping list during the last few minutes without much bargaining - fortunately his money pouch was fat and he didn’t need to scrimp and save -, and the basket was weighed down with bags of leaf-wrapped minced pork, spare ribs, chicken cuts, farmed fish, and a variety of foodstuff and some household goods such as detergent, soaps, washcloths, a brand new feather duster, a couple of ladles and some shiny new tableware.

In the chaos of their exit, they jostled with other market-goers and rudely ran over people’s feet, even accidentally kicked a child’s leg in the process without muttering an apology. His basket filled with what he’d set out to buy, the younger of the Twin Jades ran back to the Jingshi with a surprised, even confused Wei Ying in tow, and drew the stares of Lan disciples who believed that running in the hallways - or the streets - was a big no-no, according to a particular rule inscribed in textbooks and upon sacred stones, which interestingly added a descriptive about banana peels as consequence.

“What on earth is happening?!” Wei Ying yelled above the din of murmurs and mortifying gossiping.

The dense, swirling clouds beneath the Cloud Recesses rose, bringing with them lightning, thunder, and vicious whistling winds; an unnatural sign since typically, precipitation and weather elements roll off the mountaintop city to the lowlands, and not the other way around.

A storm was brewing.

.

A deluge of hail and icicle shrapnels prevented disgruntled peasants with pitchforks from barging into the compounds of the Jingshi, and instead, sent everyone scurrying from the open market to seek shelter inside the nearest buildings. That gave some time for Wei Ying to catch his breath, massage his slightly bruised wrist after being tugged a little too uncomfortably for his liking, and digest what he'd seen and heard.

The former Yiling Patriarch may have been severely crippled and weakened, but his mind remained as sharp as always, if he wanted to - especially in the current incensed state. He put his hands on his hips and spoke in a condescending tone.

"I had a feeling this has to do with the strange, suspicious things I've been observing since waking up in the Jingshi half a year ago, but I hadn't been able to put a finger on it, nor remember any of it, nor to be able to act on them in a more timely and appropriate manner. For example, I've not really been allowed to comb my own hair--"

He reached behind, and before Lan Zhan could stagger forward and stop that act that would tear away his illusory world of happiness, the deed was done. Wei Ying reached to a spot on the scalp beneath the skull, and to Lan Zhan's horror, pulled out four blood-stained needles in a single swipe. The younger man winced a little from the pain akin in extracting acupuncture needles, then raised the four pieces of irrefutable evidence in front of them, and stared straight at Lan Zhan.

Somewhere far away, lightning struck and thunder boomed dramatically to add to the tense atmosphere within the Jingshi. The older man cringed visibly and shrunk back - he backpedaled his steps and knocked a leg of a teakwood table, then fell unceremoniously on his rump onto the floor. The dull thud was unnerving. Lan Jia, Lan Yi, Lan Bing, and Lan Ding suddenly made some inhuman whines and chittering sounds, and fell to their knees to grovel at the man who, against all odds, fought against Fate and won.

The fall of the four servants startled Wei Ying for a brief moment, but he regained his composure quickly.

"Demons of the Negative Planes, infesting our world with the Inabilities to Perceive, Understand, Remember and to Act - four disabilities that coincidentally inhabit four living human bodies, here in the Jingshi! I suspected something was amiss, that perhaps a curse was planted in this room to render me helpless and useless as a kept man, but to see that these... abominable things had lived, thrived and breathed the same air as me under the same roof for so long... Why, Lan Zhan? Why?" Wei Ying's gaze narrowed into fury, and he took a step to the side and made a grab for the basket filled with purchases from the morning market, on the floor of the front chamber of the Jingshi. The main door had been closed and locked, and outside, tempest winds and blizzard storms tore through the fields. Wei Ying knew that he wouldn't be too far off in his guess that the man-made bad weather surrounded the Cloud Recesses like a perfect spherical bubble, just to keep the environment on the edge, tipping to the favour of the perpetrator, who in most likelihood, at that point of time, sat on the floor with his legs carelessly splayed, and with indescribable guilt written all over his face.

The four servants continued to chitter and started to make strained, growl-like gurgles; their pristine white robes melted away like spider-silk in water, revealing leathery skin and to no surprise of Wei Ying, sets of bat-like wings, reptilian fangs, bestial claws and tails. The man easily broke the fine needles by bending them with his thumb, and threw them away in disdain, and the men-turned-demons squeaked with fear at the exposure of their identities, then scurried on all fours to a corner of the room and hid behind large decorative earthen pots - like rats in a back-alley, really.

"I... I only wanted us... to live the way it should be. To enjoy earthly happiness and pleasures together, here in the heartland of the Gusu Lan. To embrace the simple things in life, forever, as a couple in our youths, 'till the days we grow old together," Lan Zhan nearly stammered his reply to draw back Wei Ying's attention. Wei Ying's facial expression softened at the heartfelt admission, but still, he held the brand-new feather duster bought from the market and waved it dangerously above Lan Zhan.

The hard, flexible rattan handle nudged at the seam between Lan Zhan's pants, and unwillingly, something rose in from beneath the fabric in masochistic desire. Wei Ying tapped the growing bulge with the feather duster, and replied, “Nnnnh. Answer not accepted. You need to be punished, you need to reveal your plans, and...” he licked his lips, for reasons he now clearly understood - because he finally remembered and was convinced that he, Wei Wu Xian, is Lan Wang Ji’s significant other, and therefore, is privileged to toy and play with his darling man in any way his heart desires, “... strip. Off with the pants. Your naughty penis, which I believe has driven you to act so callously and recklessly up to this moment, deserves a good whipping with this feather duster.”

Lan Zhan “Mn”s a little too quickly, blinked his eyes that had started to gleam with a new hunger, and swallowed dryly. He quickly stood up to wriggle off his pants, and even peeled off his top and robes without being ordered, and, whilst fully naked and with growing impatience, strutted towards the bedroom and climbed onto the king-sized bed, with his heavy, engorged hard-on jerking many Yes’es in expecting a dearly-missed session of lewd games played between sexually aroused husbands and wives.

Wei Ying followed from behind, and practised with the feather duster by making a lashing strike in the air; the frightening whoosh! sound blended well with the wicked smile etched on his face in the dim interior light.

.

Barely ten in the morning, and for the first time in many months, Lan Zhan truly enjoyed being a bottom - in some ways -, in having Wei Ying loom over him, threatening to turn the entire engaging play into a sado-masochistic orgy. For now, he sported the hardest of hard-ons, one that sputters and leaked generously with pre-cum, as his sensitive, tender bits were lightly scratched and swatted by the feather duster’s handle, alternating with having his crying penis tickled with the feathery part of the cleaning equipment. He made plenty of tasty growls and moans, and openly begged Wei Ying to indulge in his - their - fantasy while they were still safely hidden behind closed doors within the bedroom.

The older man was subdued with the torturous tool and forced - actually, blabbered, with lots of groans, struggling limbs, shaking hips, More!'s, aaahns and uuunhs spilling out in-between - to narrate what actually happened in the past months. In return, Wei Ying also kept his part of the bargain to explain how he had managed to crack the mystery and the prison that Lan Zhan had initially set out to cage his lover of many lifetimes and timelines before.

"I'm a nice person, so let me reveal my secrets first," he murmured with a husky voice, as repeatedly poked and prodded the shivering, over-six inch penis with the edge of the feather duster. The older man nnnh'd uncontrollably and released a large pearl of crystal-clear nectary slickness, which trickled down the pulsing length, slid down the large network of veins, rolled through fine curly public hair before pooling at the base, warming up twin plump and wrinkled ballsacks filled with enough rich, creamy god-tiered goodness that both men knew all too well.

First, he pointed out, he was fortunate that he'd spent his days after the so-called fall from the mountains during the end of last year's summer with the much forgotten, but in reality, a well-hidden and very powerful, blessed and holy purple pillow.

"This was a gift from the Realm of the Gods, but you rudely cast it aside like throwing away a well-loved family pet; it retaliated and bonded to me instead - and gave me plenty of much-needed backbone support, especially during those space-time bending feats filled with sexual savagery you unthinkingly performed every time you feel horny and have me trapped inside this building. Luckily for me, this wonderful pillow made of Memory Foam continued to provide me fragments of memories and glimpses beyond my muddled mind; thus, negating the effects of the Inability to Remember.”

Lan Zhan turned his head and finally noticed the discarded, allegedly offending pillow, which had been buried under blankets and other cushions, and hardly appeared in full view. Naturally, he shot it with a dirty look. The finely embroidered velvety rectangular fluff shuffled on all four tassels hanging from its corners like a living thing, and scuttled towards Wei Ying’s side. It blew strawberries at Lan Zhan with one tassel swaying teasingly in his direction, which instantly riled up the older man.

Then, Wei Ying pointed generally to the outside beyond closed windows.

“Speaking of family pets... more recently, I spent time outside at the front verandah or in the fields around us. I’d been feeding strays and treating them like our own pets - and you witnessed the pain and suffering I’ve felt after getting bitten and scratched by one. The calico cat is a regular visitor and I’ve been attacked by that hissy ball of fur many times before, so I can tell you the poisoning plague wasn’t caused by that cat. Still... Lan Zhan, do you not remember him? Calico males are so rare, and I was intrigued that you didn’t think twice when I mentioned about it. Don’t ever look down on animals as lesser beings, especially one from our previous lives, who now travels freely between worlds of Dreams and Reality! I count my lucky stars again and thank this cat for causing pain every time I play with it - its bites and scratches give my senses moments of pure clarity after being blunted from the magic of the Demons; thus, the effects of the Inability to Perceive never overwhelmed me; I merely pretended to be oblivious everytime you and your demonic servants do unsavoury things unto me!”

Lan Zhan flinched at a burst of cackling laughter from his beloved man, and from a distance, he heard an ugly, low meow - not too different from how other male cats croak and yowl their terrible tunes during mating seasons. He cursed in seven Gusu dialects at the feline that fooled him.

His cussy words died at the lips when Wei Ying swatted Lan Zhan's inner thighs to call for attention, and the latter simply nnnh'd lovingly at the stinging sensations and faint rising welts of the fair, bouncy skin; Lan Zhan's weight gain included the hips and thighs too, after all.

“Toot-toot, darling. Even children of the Gusu Lan are disciplined to never speak ill of others. And while we're on the topic of children - I've explored the Cloud Recesses occasionally with my mask on, whether to the markets, shops, factories, offices, dorms and such, and always escorted by you, your servants or one of the people who know my true identity. But what puzzles me is that none of you noticed how some kids bump into me, such as the case of this morning's incident at the market. You didn't think too much about running into bratty children, because I'm sometimes seen like an eight-year old clinging onto the great Hanguang Jun, holding onto your sleeves and acting like a whiny, spoiled child.

Ah, eight-year olds... did you realize that the A-Xian and A-Ji from your dreams are living here, somewhere in the Cloud Recesses? I've seen them a few times, particularly in the markets; A-Xian continues to steal from the stalls, and A-Ji is his sidekick by drawing away people's attention. No, probably you didn't notice, since they look like any other kids to you, anyway. Everytime we bump into each other, I feel strange energies flowing inside me, especially from dear little A-Xian, my mirror image from a different space and time. You know, I could break your spell earlier, but I deliberately did not, because I was waiting for the befitting moment, such as today! So, in actual fact, I had negated the effects of the Inability to Act without your knowledge!”

Wei Ying mocked the older man with guffawed laughter, and started slapping the pained angry-purple rod of flesh with the feather duster. Whatever protest Lan Zhan had about children that had bested him died in his throat, and he succumbed into fits of moans, and fluttering muscles in his loins. There was a loud nnngh and a soft spurt; the tremendously excited organ one-two’d in the face of its abuser, and oozed out a dollop of semen. Wei Ying happily swatted it away with his feather duster like striking a golf ball on the tee. The useless ball of slimy seed launched into the air, streaked across the room like a comet of sticky milky goo, and splattered into a sad end on the cold, unforgiving wall.

“And finally, when I heard the ruckus at the market just now, I realized that I wasn’t alone in this strange, twisted world where the weather never turns into Spring; where people act like stubborn, one-track minded fools and become victims of their own, just like yourself; where inept Council elders seem to act like corrupt, cowardly sex-demons themselves - because I’ve experienced their unkind and disgusting touches before; where any brilliant investigations in death or murder cases seem to go into circles or dead-ends due to interferences from those inhuman things; where your elder brother doesn’t seem to be able to make any inroads in his leadership role because, again, possibly due to the tampering by such filthy, vile external forces... and there are so many things unrealistically wrong with this world, that I can’t even begin to fathom what is considered right anymore.”

Lan Zhan gasped and jerked his hips into the air; Wei Ying held the handle of the duster and furiously rubbed the bulging, hyper-sensitive throbbing genitals with the swathe of feathers. The older man bit his lips and tried to hold back a ticking timebomb that was counting down - the torture of tickles was too much, and his entire sweaty body started to shudder maddeningly.

“Those voices... the voices of the people... broke something inside me, and I had a very bright, enlightened moment that I’ve been living in this fallacy since waking up in the Cloud Recesses half a year ago. I’ve negated the effects of the Inability to Understand, and now, I would like to hear straight from you - what on earth is happening, and why, Lan Zhan, why?”

Whatever Lan Zhan wanted to grunt or scream out during the throes of his ecstasy, it was too late. He squeezed his eyes shut, felt those terrifying feathers viciously sending electricity straight into the boiling lava inside his loins, and distantly, he heard himself ramping up a keening wail from his parched throat when the first of a series of delightful, pleasurable, deadly contractions burst into rhythmic living flames that licked their way up, up his quivering, spasming penis, liquid pressure bolting through his body and soul and culminated into one explosive, volcanic climax.

Lan Zhan orgasmed.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 148

Wei Ying found it to be most unflattering to be called the Husband, when his so-called, self-declared Wife is a muscular, buffed-up man in his mid-thirties, has grown a thin moustache and a goatee of a beard, with less body hair than himself but sported a pot-bellied midriff that qualified to be called 'love handles', in which that Wife had bulging nicely-muscled pectorals that didn't qualify as, say, soft plump-y breasts of the female kind, although it was a welcome sight to confirm that the legendary six-pack abs of Gusu's younger but more superior Twin Jades of Lan still remained intact, despite being buried under layers of fat that had invaded, and grown into prominence in certain flabby zones - beneath the upper harms, the abdomen, the increasingly jiggly glutes, an expanding waistline and stocky thighs.

Still, with the Wife named Lan Wang Ji lying sedated on his arms, comfortably curled up against his thin bony and scarred body, he was hard-pressed to call out the older man's sick fetishy fantasy as a 'living in a lie' passe, because truthfully, Wei Ying did love Lan Zhan and would do anything within his power to grant the latter his wishes, no matter how sickening, fetishist or fantastical they may be.

Nevertheless, they cuddled up on the stress-fatigued bed as a mutual gesture of tough-love given, forgiveness received, and to make-up for each others' sins and mistakes. It was tough for the older man, because Wei Ying continued to entertain himself by using his long, untrimmed fingers to run over Lan Zhan's sweat-prickled skin, eliciting tasty noises from the Lan man because he particularly loved to have his inner thighs clawed, swollen abused puffy nipples twisted and squeezed like overripe cherries, pubic hair plucked like guqin strings fuelled with stinging, fiery painful, depressurized and drained testicles kneaded like hard dough and then swatted with gliding fingertips, and the now-defunct semi-hard penis that had been stroked and polished with feather duster and eight-way handjob - including pistoning the slab of spasming phallic meat between the soles of feet, and to Lan Zhan's hidden joy, the textured skin between toes that grasped and choked the organ off sometimes with sadistic glee -, that Lan Zhan's flaming lusts had been sated for the time being, nothing but clear fluids or pee sputtered periodically from the aftershocks of eight incredible mind-blowing consecutive orgasms in a span of less than eight minutes, and the amazing and marvellous Hanguang Jun lay like a boneless mass of twitching, drunkenly smiling foolishness nestled in the embrace of the man formerly known as the fearsome Yiling Patriarch.

In the end, they settled to having cockerel and pheasant feathers, picked off from the duster, stuffed into Lan Zhan's leaky, irritated pee slit, then have Wei Ying's talented fingers stroke the turgid flesh and massage the tube of urethra within, so that both men could watch, amused, at how the ticklish feathers were slowly swallowed with undulating, fluttery penile muscles, and every time Lan Zhan nnnh and aaahns, his pelvis shivered and belly button jiggled in extreme ecstasy and discomfort, the resulting cum-matted, soggy feathers were expelled with droplets of what possibly looked, and smelled, of pee - because there was no semen left by that time, really -, then Wei Ying happily used his forefinger to push those prickly scratchy feathers back inside the angry-purple penis - Lan Zhan moaned and cried in despair until voice was hoarse, his body thrummed with great, unseen masochistic joy - then, with an added thumb, twirled those colourful fouled fowl feathers and left hurricanes of forced mini-orgasms hurtling through the older man's sizzled, electrocuted loins in the wake of the sexually depraved carnage.

"Nnnh, aaah, nnngh, Wei Ying, mmmh, p-p-please, mercy... st-- stop!" the larger man gasped and flailed his legs, even letting out a loud, unwelcomed fart from the rump just as another jet of mild body-warmed yellow pee squirted from the packed cockhead - because Wei Ying also attacked the soles of his feet, his armpits, around the sweaty groin, and generally the ticklish abdomen by running more feathers and his fingers over them, eliciting suffocating hiccupy laughter that sounded more like dying breaths than anything heartwarming at all; his toes were clenched as tightly as how bedsheets balled in his fists, as hips raised off the mattress and arched, jerked erratically to avoid getting tickled while responding to shocks of pleasure and pain tearing through his badly abused genitals, trying to fuck the empty air, but he only fucked those terrifying feathers that plundered and struck his weakest spots ranging from the tired ticklish areas, burnt-out sexual meridians and a rather inflamed, but exceedingly short-circuited prostate gland which happily commanded every muscle inside the body to loosen up and seize into epileptic fits at the same time, and yield to its bodily urges - compounded by more fingers raining upon his sensitive places such as right below the navel and on certain spots on the inner thighs - poor Lan Zhan lost control of his own body into fits of choked laughter, fluttering bladder muscles and a trembling anal sphincter.

Wei Ying giggled at how easy it was to undo everything that defined the eminent Hanguang Jun. “Mmm. I might. Keep talking, my dear,” he said, while adding more feathers into the filled quivering urethra and caressed the jiggling flabby belly - and pressed into the bladder really, really hard. He gave those new set of feathers eight hearty spins out of spite for his sweet, sweet, revenge, and watched a fireworks of colour, flying plumes and unmentionable bodily fluids flung high up towards the ceiling.

.

Lan Zhan was forced to narrate his side of the story, punctuated by uncharacteristic sexy moans and howls, uncontrollable convulsions and eruptions, and plenty of sado-masochistic love of having his erogenous zones abused, wrung out and toyed - from the time Wei Ying was rescued from the mountains during the end of last summer and the Cries of the Red Clouds flares were discharged into the night skies.

Wei Ying was fascinated to learn that the Gusu Lan had a strong affinity towards the dead and departed, and practised a culture of respecting the past and to relive them in the present or future - so much so that the sect became one of the most impressive curators of historical texts, ancient relics and the ilk; it is for this reason that the Gusu Lan inherited, and nurture thousands-year old family rules; that each Gusu Lan child could recite the names of their ancestors and their contributions to the sect, beginning from the Founder himself; and that the sect boasts a vast array of related resources, including an impressive Library Pavillion, and many hidden treasure chambers such as the one beneath the Cold Springs where both Lan Zhan and he had an ephemeral encounter with the spirit of one such ancestor whilst solving the mystery of the Yin Metal.

Spirits are abound in many nooks and crannies within the Cloud Recesses like fairies in mushroom glades in the forests, usually close to the locations where they were last seen, or laid to rest. They emerge from time to time, whether summoned using rituals or during certain naturally opportune events such as Hungry Ghost festivals and All Souls Days. When the crimson-red flares of the Cries of the Red Clouds were released, it not only signalled the living to convene for a state-wide emergency meeting; it also attracted the attention of those from the afterlife.

Wei Ying scrunched his brows and thought for a moment, while his fingers busied themselves upon the new wifely playground spread out beneath him. "Hmm. Let me guess, a number of uninvited guests made themselves apparent during the meeting that night, and having heard the heartbreaking news of the losing a Chief Cultivator and not having a Sect Leader identified at that time, the spirits acted on their own and went after the choicest, easiest prey," he said.

Lan Zhan, through breathless moans, refuted the term ‘prey’ used for the entire congregation of elite but physically weak, elderly Council members.

“But Lan Zhan, you said you were the only one around when the flares were let off, so am I right to assume that you didn’t make adequate preparations to defend everyone’s souls from the onslaught of hungry, even lost spirits? You can’t just gather the most brilliant and the best at the press of a button - or in this case, by lighting up powerful fireworks - which attracts spirits of all kinds, including the unsavoury and unkind ones, and expect to get away in one piece!”

Lan Zhan nodded hesitantly, though the act was hard to differentiate from a useless back-and-forth lolling of his head when he nnnh’d for the nth time - he orgasmed yet again from his newfound Husband’s ministrations.

“Auuugh! How stupid can you be! Even an acolyte of any respectable religious denomination or a beginner in the Dark Arts knows this - you’d be opening the gates for wolves to enter and have their banquet of helpless, defenceless lambs! What’s more, once spirits inhabit their preferred bodies, if no proper rituals are performed within a few days or weeks to purge their presence or their malicious feelings and intent, the transference becomes more or less permanent; the original souls are consumed, and the spirits have a field day with earthly pleasures that they crave - food, money, sinful lifestyles and all that - and become corrupted fools, like those high-ranking Council elders who visited me yesterday and showed me their obscene side of being addicted to the flesh of young defenceless warm living bodies! I cannot imagine what crimes they’ve committed before they found me!”

Lan Zhan squeaked out a reply in rising high pitches - in Wei Ying’s anxiety and excitement, he’d started polishing the dying but impressively hard member with one hand, and made generous gropes on a swollen breast with the other -, that actually, most of those elders who had since escaped that morning, had been caught red-handed with naked little boys and girls in their private offices within the Council halls, but other corrupted, possessed Council members used their influences to silence the victims and killed off all further investigations.

In fact, Lan Zhan groaned, the schools, temples and all institutions of power, resource and influence had their leaders possessed by random, inept and malicious spirits, because they attended the meeting on the night when the Cries of the Red Clouds was signalled. And yes, some of them did develop a taste for tender, young flesh because the people of Gusu Lan are just simply too pure, too delectable and too ignorant - predators now lurked amongst elderly Council members, school teachers and even the pedophile priests and shamans in the temples, amongst many others.

Wei Ying became furious at the revelation of the biggest mistake in the sect's history, and swatted Lan Zhan's arousal very, very hard as deserving punishment.

.

The cat is out of the bag, though in deference to Lan Zhan's dislike towards a calico kind, suffice to say, he'd messed up - big time.

The man intended to announce his resignation as Chief Cultivator and leave the Sect Leader seat vacant, but ended up being saddled with more problems, which he refused to acknowledge because all he wanted was to spend his days living a simple life, filled with simple pleasures, with his beloved Wei Ying. It would be difficult to imagine how, but dark spirits successfully infiltrated the ranks of the Council, especially the elderly ones - those that held the most power and influence over the daily lives of the sect. Six months had transpired since then, those corrupted individuals enjoyed the fruits of their invasion and refused to leave, the damage is tremendous and incalculable, while the residents of the Jingshi remain blissfully oblivious and safe in their little bubble of ignorant paradise.

Lan Xi Chen was, fortunately, not possessed, due to his physically, spiritually and magically superior status. So, when he was nominated as the new Sect Leader, and that Xi Chen - with his chronic inability to judge people's character and intention correctly (Jin Guangyao being one exemplary case) - proposed to prosper the Council and everyone who was in good terms with him - teachers, priests included -, naturally everyone, including the possessed kind, supported his appointment. Poor Xi Chen da ge was blinded by the games played by the corrupt, and found himself in a deep, deep web of deceit, where his Council took the opportunity to raid the treasuries right under the Sect Leader's nose, rape the people's innocence in more ways than one, enjoyed the delicacies of the Gusu Lan and emptied warehouses filled with jars of fine Emperor Smiles wines, while sending their newly-minted fledgeling leader to failed ventures outside of the Cloud Recesses, such as to exchange a cartload of precious minerals for just one measly cart of grain. Every time the Sect Leader was overwhelmed with insignificant, unimportant and trivial matters - frequent, unproductive meetings, inspecting the quality of white silk cloth from the factories that had already been inspected, being tasked to sign off meaningless papers for hours on end, being pushed to spend time outside of the city to fight in small tournaments and battle small fries like Jin Ling - those yaoguai s had free reign over the city filled with the pleasures of the mundane, mortal world that they had missed during their afterlife.

As time wore on, traps were set to catch the unwitting and served into orgies and corruption-filled rendezvous, complex mind-altering machineries were weaved with using dark magic and buried all over the settlement, social structures were altered to suit the whims of the greedy, corrupted leaders and prominent persons within the sect - so many things happened that Wei Ying was unaware of, except that he noticed that people began to degenerate into simplistic-minded people, cardboard cut-outs of realistic personalities, living cheerfully and contentedly in a falsely-labelled happiness that stink of the stench of evil, somewhere in the background.

“What of the four servants outside the bedroom? Are they also part of this scandal, or am I missing anything here?”

Lan Zhan had to catch his breath, and looked like a fish out of the water; thirty streaks of watery white painted across his tired, heaving torso. He shook his head, and for once, Wei Ying was pleased. The torture did not let up, though, and he rested a fisted hand upon Lan Zhan’s trembling groin, where he continued to massage and stroke the limp, soft, spent flesh, hopefully to get it back to life in a few minutes’ time.

The four Demons of the Negative Planes are, in actual fact, specially summoned into service according to Lan Zhan’s original plans, long before the Cloud Recesses was invaded by the corrupted spirits. However, as correctly identified by Wei Ying, they are specialists of Inabilities, and generally, wield diametrically opposing powers to whatever abilities that exist in the current reality. Wei Ying listened intently at Lan Zhan’s latest secret, because he knew from his vast knowledge of the Dark Arts that such demons are any magic-wielding superpowers’ worst nightmare; whatever Wei Ying could dish out from his fingertips, these demons can easily negate and cancel its effects with little effort.

Lan Jia, Lan Yi, Lan Bing, Lan Ding - they're not really physically strong, competent in any arts, nor own any incredible powers like dragons and phoenixes, but their presence and ability to craft basic anti-magic tools out of their own skin and blood - such as those needles of Inabilities that found a home inside Wei Ying's scalp for six months -, is immensely valuable for stealthy operations and warfare; the debilitating aura that they exude contributed to the general ignorance, silliness and buffoonery seen in the juniors and Wen Ning, as well as helped to disguise Wei Ying's identity should an intruder come too close to the Jingshi or the Inability-enhanced mask that Wei Ying always wore whenever he went outside. Wei Ying sighed - no wonder he had such an easy time convincing, lying and tricking people in the Cloud Recesses into not wanting to find out who he, a suspicious-looking outsider, really was. His infamy as the Yiling Patriarch did spread as far to the east as the province of Gusu, after all.

.

Eventually, playtime was over. The smoking fumes emanating from Lan Zhan's red-hot penis with its sexual meridians burnt to crisp, and the man had reached into a blissful, supremely heightened state of being. The four demons, still in their monstrous manifestations lest they draw the ire of the amazing Dark Arts practitioner for disguising as human-kin, worked hard to clean the devastated bed and wash down their master with a basin of freshly heated water and washcloths.

Lan Zhan found solace in his partner's forgiveness, in that Wei Ying wordlessly patted his thin, bony lap and invited the man to lie down and receive a loving ear-cleaning while his body was gently wiped, scrubbed and rinsed by the servants. Somewhere between lying down and having warm, affectionate fingers caress and warm-up his ear-lobes with oiled massages, the couple agreed that Wei Ying should take the helm in their relationship. The first order of the day was to recalibrate the equilibrium of their dynamics - this time with Wei Ying taking a more proactive, dominant husbandly role, while Lan Zhan should just sit back and watch how things are done, like a wife (in those day and age, gender inequality reigned supreme, sad to say). Lan Zhan did not protest, not when Wei Ying blew a couple of times lovingly into each ear (and caused the older man to shiver from frissons), before letting a much-anticipated stick of bamboo descend into one excited red-tinged ear.

While Lan Zhan relished having his ear canals scraped and flaky ear wax excavated with his favourite worn-out bamboo earpick (which, incidentally, was carried over from the previous timeline), Wei Ying commented that the current situation resembled the one from Lan Zhan's dreams - one where demonic Uncle Weis, bandits, criminals and sex offenders run riot and feasted on the riches offered by the dreamy city also known as the Cloud Recesses, where innocent men, women and children were cheated, tricked and coerced into participating in seedy activities involving headmasters, head priests, policemen and the ilk. Lan Zhan couldn't agree more, even as Wei Ying cackled with an off-the-cuff remark that, of all the dreams that should come true, this was certainly not one of them.

“Should you just raze the whole city, build everything from scratch with your awesome godly powers, and start over... say, from the time before we parted ways at the mountains, the year before?”

“Nnnh,” came the delayed, sluggish but non-committal reply. Scratch, scratch, circles and scratch again. Toes curled with delight, body relaxed and sagged into a mass of happiness spread across Wei Ying's laps.

“Or, perhaps turn Jingshi into a flying airship, and we'll transport ourselves back to the Burial Mounds, where life is really much simpler than over here? We could leave our troubles behind us, forever.”

“Ngaahh...” Crawling deeper, deeper, then pull the spoon-like earpick out, drag it bit by bit, wiggle it to the sides, scratching every last itch and crumbly ear-wax in-between.

“Or, how about you make those four servants hiding behind the flower pots work their worth and turn things around in the Cloud Recesses with their amazing anti-magics, so that you can take me shopping in Caiyi Town as promised? We’ll figure out something to pick up the boys and your older brother, along the way.”

“... Mn...!” Wei Ying squealed softly when he made several narrow, quick thrusts to dislodge something inside the cavern, then dug out a flaky piece of yellowish-brown gunk, and placed it on Lan Zhan’s open palm. Lan Zhan’s ears tingled with relief at a sudden flood of indescribable loosening of unnoticeable tension, and of having the deepest itch scratched and properly soothed.

Eight seconds later, Lan Zhan snored.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 149

Lan Zhan is, for the lack of better words, simply astonished at how Wei Ying took the biggest mistake the Gusu Lans have faced throughout their thousands-year history, and tamed it into a mere trivial domestic matter.

“That’s what I’ve been sayin’ all this while - you can’t always aim for Absolute Perfection, regardless of form and circumstances. Whether it’s trying to become the perfect spouse, patriarch or god, or living an irresponsible life of being disassociated from the realities around us, or trying to selfishly mould the environment to your wants, and then ending up breaking everything for everyone else.

Lan Zhan, right now, having you completely disconnected from the troubles besetting your hometown while claiming that you’ve sworn off the cultivation world and all matters related to the sect, then hiring mercenary demons to satisfy your desires and lusts for your kept man, which then adversely affects every citizen around here... it’s counterintuitive and ridiculous! The world isn’t defined in black and whites, you can’t take sides just as you wish and then try living on extremes of do’s and don’ts... it just doesn’t work that way. No sixteen years before, and certainly not sixteen years after!”

Lan Zhan had pleaded for forgiveness for reverting to his old ways, received a gentle lashing from his wife-now-husband, and looked skyward towards Wei Ying’s annoyed frown and pouty lips from where he lay on his beloved’s lap. “Mn. Wang Ji is wrong and will have to repent. What should I do, Wei Ying?” he asked curtly, with a slight crack in his voice in his repentance. He’d consider himself fortuitous, being able to wake up from a hour-long nap after an exceedingly relaxing and satisfying ear-cleaning session, then received a tender, feather-light ‘you’re awake’ (“你醒了”) kiss on the forehead from lovely Wei Ying, in spite of being guilty of sins that has costed his sect peoples' innocence and lives, and possibly the thousands of gold ingots from the ransacked treasuries, and most importantly, his spouse's wrath in having to dig deep to find out what went wrong, and now, to fix his - the almighty Hanguang Jun's - problems.

Wei Ying bared his toothy grin, and from Lan Zhan's point of view, having light shining from the windows behind the younger man made his silhouette look rather demonic - the flash sharp pearly whites set against the shadows didn't help to make the former Yiling Patriarch any less intimidating. Still, he placed his entire trust and well-being into Wei Ying's hands, knowing how Wei Ying managed to solve their mysteries and used his brilliant thinking to get them both out of trouble (almost) every time; if anything, he hoped this blind faith would reinforce their relationship as true, inseparable soulmates, and strengthen their conjugal bonds forever and beyond.

"First, call me Husband. I'm in charge now to remedy the whole situation for you and your kin. So I get dibs on the dynamics between us, and I'm the more superior between the two of us."

Lan Zhan nearly balked at the proposal. He'd resisted the idea of being treated or called as a girlfriend and a wife, but now, he probably will have to live it down for the rest of his life. As daunting as it sounded for his manly pride and to the precarious state of his masculinity, for the sake of compensating for his mistakes--

"Mn. L-- l-- lao gong . Between you and me, you're greater," Lan Zhan sighed in defeat to the newly-minted Queen of the House, and received another kiss on the cheeks, and caresses on the sides of his face. He wondered if he'd done the right thing to put himself beneath Wei Ying - one could probably blame his eager masochistic streak.

“Good boy, good wife (好妻子),” Wei Ying murmured, and massaged the older man's earlobes - Lan Zhan nnnh'd at the warm rubs and slight twinge of pain when the shell of his ear was twisted with love, “You need to start familiarizing with addressing me properly as your spouse - regardless of whether we had secretly engaged in the past or had a private wedding ceremony before - and recognize me by my new, alternate identity as the Masked Hero, Lan Wu Ji.

The world outside the Jingshi must believe that Lan Wang Ji is incapacitated due to his Oath of non-intervention in this Mortal Realm, sworn in public in front of the eyes of Zewu Jun and the rest of the Council, under the watch of the Cries of the Red Clouds; therefore anything that we, as a couple, need to do, must be done under my name and authority. Do I make myself clear?”

Lan Zhan's attention prickled at the sudden U-turn in Wei Ying's line of thinking - it wasn't a competition about statuses within their holy matrimony that he was looking for, it was actually a solution to Lan Zhan's problems that Wei Ying had been pursuing since that morning; for that, Lan Zhan was grateful and he nuzzled into Wei Ying's touch and inadvertently inhaled a dense bush of belly hair when he rolled to the side on the latter's lap.

Noon was approaching, the blizzards outside started to subside; the tempestuous winds and ice that raged around the bubble surrounding the Cloud Recesses matched the moods of the godly Hanguang Jun, and for the time being, the man was in a terribly relaxed and docile state. Wei Ying asked Lan Zhan, between tummy rubs, playing with reddened earlobes, and intimately tracing fingertips all over the older man's facial features, until his Adam's Apple, down to the collarbones and right up to the nipples where stray strands of nipple hair were rolled and tickled, whether the latter had a good hour-long sleep during the ear-cleaning session. It was intentional, the younger man implicated, and he wondered if Lan Zhan completed the task he was set out to do.

“Mn, l-- l-- lao gong,” Lan Zhan answered with a brief stutter; he wasn't yet entirely comfortable with calling Wei Ying a husband, “After several nights of suffering from the lack of high-quality sleep because we kept having sex following the daily quota and schedules, and I spent the ill-used time getting launched into the Heavens from the sex, where I continued to fill my other dayjob as the Emperor in the skies... yes, that hour-long sleep was much needed. I had the rare chance to dream and meet everyone, and everything from the past timeline that had been migrated into the Realm of the Dreams.” He watched as Wei Ying got out from the bed - partly because it was already eleven o' clock, which was the time he usually ‘officially’ wakes up; Wei Ying has a reputation of becoming cranky occasionally if he didn't practise his routine of getting out of bed at eleven, because he wanted everyone to know that he, the kept man secretly named Wei Wu Xian, starts the day from eleven. Wei Ying rummaged through a bedside cupboard, then threw a clean washcloth, a pair of boxers, undergarments and robes at Lan Zhan.

The older man wrinkled his face when he stared at the pair of silky shiny boxers embroidered with pink hearts and yellow flowers. Oh well, he thought and resigned to the fate of wearing such a tacky piece of underwear for the rest of the day, because Wei Ying was the husband, after all.

“Did you remember to send animal control services to track down the calico cat? We can't have that thorny ball of fangs and claws biting anyone tempted to pat its fur or play with its fuzzy balls,” Wei Ying muttered, and pulled out one of Lan Zhan’s older white robes and measured against his torso to check for a good fit - it was made before Lan Zhan’s waistline grew, so it should look presentable on him, although he may need to make some adjustments to the height so that he didn’t look like a lampshade mopping and sliding all over the ground.

“Oh, and make sure to get some responsible adults to pick up the kids. I would be devastated, knowing that the two orphans A-Ji and A-Xian are still wandering the streets without proper care, clothing, food and education,” another whiny complaint, and Wei Ying selected one of Lan Zhan’s silky light blue trousers. He scratched his crotch after putting them on - without any underwear, of course -, and made a remark about whether worn clothes should feel itchy at all. Lan Zhan didn’t know whether to get upset or get hard at the shameless gesture.

“Mn. I’ve made all necessary arrangements while dreaming, Wei Ying... err... Wu Ji. I’ve also learnt my lesson about the dangers of homogeneity, and have engaged the services of your cloned siblings to arrive here by midday and fix everything with... ‘A Touch Of Wei’, as your da ge succinctly puts it,” the man replied politely and with humility, standing by the bedside and dressed only in his pink-hearts boxers. Wei Ying did not miss the chance to dash forward, slide his fingers through the open fly, and make a harsh grab at the silk-clothed pulsing meat beneath, and Lan Zhan bit his lip with an audible, but sexy nnnnh. The mischievous young man would not release his captive until a large, over-six inch snake grew through the fly and poked out of the boxer to full mast.

“I know you’ve also been touched by my siblings during the dreams, and you must’ve had a wonderful time enjoying their fourway, sixteen-combo hand and blowjobs faster than the speed of sound. You were literally leaking and sputtering cum all over the bed while snoring like a fool after the ear-cleaning; I don't know how, but you're like a bottomless tub of heavenly man-cream that deserves to be wrung dry at every opportunity!" Wei Ying cackled as he put on the outermost layer of robes and tied a dainty but edgy dark blue scarf with brilliant gleaming zig-zag lines, around his neck, which made him look fabulously cool against the mostly-white drab the he, and everyone in the Cloud Recesses, usually wore.

While Lan Zhan grappled with an alarming situation of figuring out how to beat down his meat and to put on his pants and robes with a surging arousal between his legs, naughty Wei Ying winked and leaned in, then whispered hotly into the older man's ears, "I didn't wear any underwear today, darling, because I want us to travel on Bichen through the skies to Caiyi, with your hot cock fucking my ass-pussy during the journey, and you'd cum so much inside me to father lots of baby Wei Yings, getting me knocked up and fattened like a hen with lots of fertilized eggs rolling around in the womb, that I'd be carrying healthy rosy-cheeked twins and triplets for you, by the time we touch down."

Wei Ying laughed out loud and strutted out of the bedroom, and started shouting orders to the four, still hiding Demons of the Negative Planes to clean up the mess on the bed, and prepare for their outward journey. Lan Zhan, on the other hand, still pitifully dressed in his increasingly pre-cum wetted boxers and nothing else, throbbed so hard between the legs with a sudden burst of excitement, one-two'd so hard, so thick, and so gracefully, that the clothes on the bed that Wei Ying had selected for him was instantly soiled with a wide vertical arc of splashing milky white, and he nearly sobbed at the hopelessness of his condition.

Lan Zhan made lots of tasty grunts and confused groans of lao gong and lao po 's when they took to air on good ol' trusty Bichen, with Lan Zhan desperately indulging in a rapidfire fucking session while standing and spooning the younger man, who gleefully pulled down his trousers to expose and seduce the other man with a wiggle of bare, hairy ass; fortunately, there were no flying swordsmen in the vicinity when the couple engaged in heated animalistic intercourse in mid-air, and up above in the stratosphere, nobody on the ground could witness the range of obscene carnal acts performed by those two, which could qualify as aerial acrobatics in modern era (for instance, having Lan Zhan to pull on Wei Ying's hands while the latter straddled him, so that Wei Ying could balance himself horizontally, his feet off the sword and spread-eagled with the muscular over six-incher phallus holding up his weight like a pivot or fulcrum, so that he pointed forward; Wei Ying stretched his arms to the front like a Superman and gleefully shouted "I'm flying! I'm flying while being fucked, wheeeee!"; Lan Zhan scrunched his brows and his face was flushed like a rose, because Wei Ying wouldn't stop squirming and struggling, then squeezing and relaxing his buttocks that clenched his tortured, tired rod - so he came and came again like a garden water hose from the mind-blowingly pleasurable sensations that wrecked his poor angry-purple but super-steel hard muscular veiny throbbing penis that could hold the weight of one and many more men.)

In any case, it didn't take long for Lan Zhan to thrust and penetrate his lover in mighty shoves that threatened to derail poor Bichen with turbulent swerves, and they remained stuck that way, crotch to ass, for quite a long while even as soft but chilly breezes continued to blow, sunlight grew stronger amongst parting clouds, the landscape became smaller when they rose in height; Wei Ying caught a glimpse of some intruders making their way to the Jingshi with pitchforks but they stopped midway and lumbered like dazed idiots through the snow and into the surrounding area; he silently thanked the four servants for re-directing their Inabilities to dumb-down their adversaries until the calvary arrives in full force from the Realms of the Dreams.

There were a lot of things that needed to be fixed in the Cloud Recesses - brainwashing people and wiping their memories of being abused or suffered under the rule of the corrupted Council; treating those stricken by the poisoning plague and resurrecting those who had died from the disease; conducting an independent investigation to find the root cause of the epidemic and create a cure for the masses; getting rid of the yaoguai - infested ruling Council and replacing them with suitable men and women leaders; improving the overall governance, economy and health of the city so that the new Sect Leader can rule and prosper; filling the financial deficit left by the theft of incalculable amounts of gold ingots stashed away since the days of the Gusu Lan's founders; and so many more that Wei Ying wasn't aware of, and Lan Zhan claimed total ignorance of, that the couple agreed to let their so-called Kingdom and its subjects take matters in their own hands and patch things up on their own; this bode well for Lan Zhan's policy of non-intervention, since he had no direct involvement in fixing the problems of his hometown, and Wei Ying was more than happy to be credited for spearheading the recovery efforts, at least in the names of his cloned siblings, which were, technically, Wei Yings too.

With the problems of Lan Zhan's home out of the way, and having had enough sex and pampering to quench any flaming thirsts within that man for the time being, the two finally, finally head out of the Cloud Recesses on a sputtering ivory-white sword, in search of their companions and Xi Chen da ge , who were reportedly lost in the snowy mountains, buried under many feet of fallen snow and boulders.

.

“Ho ho ho! The Masked Hero, Lan Wu Ji, is here to save the day! And next to me is my sidekick, my assistant, my... er... confidant, the esteemed Hanguang Jun!” came the daring announcement, with arms crossed and legs standing widely spread in the foot-deep snow; the obnoxious man stole one of Lan Zhan’s outer robes and folded it into a cape hung around the shoulders, and looked even more objectionable with his glitzy dark blue scarf rippling in the gusts of violent mountain winds, and the outline seen on his trousers that indicated to every men in the scene - who dared not point this out, out of sheer embarrassment if they even make a mention of it - that Wei Ying didn’t wear his underwear at all, that the limp thingie could be seen each time his robes flutter about, and if one actually looked around to the back, he would spot an appalling, hastily wiped, congealing splotch between the buttocks.

“Wei qianbei -- ahh... Lan Wu Ji! Hanguang Jun! Thank goodness you’re here! We were about to freeze to death in this weather, after being trapped under huge chunks of snow for hours. It’s incredible that snow can be so thick and heavy, though luckily I could still release my messenger pigeons to call for help! Strangely, the winds have started to subside just a short while ago, it’s as though your arrival signals a blessing for all of us!”

“Wuuu... wuuu... (sniffle, sniffle)... Wei gongzi , Hanguang Jun, Jing Yi is wrong and deserves punishment! I shouldn’t have opened the gates at five in the morning even though I have the keys in my position as the captain of the guards! I should have stopped the whole convoy and asked to wait for the two of you, but Jin Ling was too impatient and foul-mooded at the crack of dawn, and ordered me to get going! He couldn’t wait to crack the mystery of the poisoning plague and make lots of money selling cartloads of goods Caiyi! It’s his fault!”

“W-- w-- what?! How could you! D-- d-- don’t listen to him, Wei gongzi , Hanguang Jun! I mean, Lan Wu Xian--... Wang Wu... Wu Ji! Uhh... aah, why did we even agree to change his name to such a tongue twister!”

“Hush, Jin Ling. Wei qianbei needed a new identity in Caiyi so that he doesn’t arouse suspicion when discussing with the laobans for a fair price for carts... but I don’t see Lil’ Apple and the four horses, and all the carts we’ve worked so hard to pack yesterday--”

“I’m not done talking, Si Zhui! Zewu Jun already told us that it takes hours to get down the mountains and back up, whether on foot or on horses, especially in such bad weather! I wanted an early start so that we can return faster, you saw how terrible the blizzards were towards the latter half of the day, right? Besides, didn’t Hanguang Jun wave at us and told us to go ahead without making any noise, when he tip-toed out of the Jingshi before sunrise? I thought it was fine, and I only took the initiative based on this assumption! It’s-- it’s-- it’s not my fault, and you can’t make me admit a wrongdoing that I’d never done!”

“Si Zhui, Jing Yi, Jin Ling, please stop bickering, and help me to clear away the debris and snow? I may be a fierce corpse impervious to cold, but my limbs are aching, heavy as lead, from being pinned down by boulders the size of houses, and it’s not easy to move the ice away to find our carts trapped somewhere beneath the avalanche’s trail of destruction.”

“I’ll help, Wen Ning! As captain of the guards, I must redeem my dignity by doing the right thing, unlike these two! Furthermore, Zewu Jun hasn’t returned ever since he first dug his way out from the avalanche and chased those running men. Those soldiers that serve the Council exclusively, seemed to have betrayed us and dragged a few scholars, Master Lan Qi Ren, and worst of all, the key witness - the apothecary owner -, into the forests! I hope Zewu Jun is able to track down their footprints in the snow and rescue them, because they’re important for the investigation!”

“Enn! Jing Yi, you push this boulder from here, and I’ll do it from the other side! Once this one’s rolled off the trail, we can work on the smaller debris!”

Wei Ying frowned at having his highly-anticipated debut as the Masked Hero fizzle out with little fanfare from the juniors. He saw how hard the silent, stoic (and if one peers hard enough, dreamy-eyed, rosy-cheeked) Lan Zhan was at work, shovelling snow in huffs using a crudely-fashioned log of pinewood while wearing one less layer of robes. The young man grumbled about being underappreciated for what he’s good at, and gave up on heroics and dramatics; he squatted down and pushed his makeshift cape aside, and used his gloved hands to dig into the freezing expanse of crystal white sparkling in the midday sun. They had carts to locate, a Lil’ Apple and four horses to find, and somewhere in the desolate mountain pass, a lost Zewu Jun chasing after renegade soldiers and their hostages.

It had been rather easy to spot the stricken convoy from the air after the storms had ceased their rampage - a large swathe of tumbled snow along the downhill trail towards Caiyi, and a few heads and limbs sticking out sorely in the sea of white. Fortunately the juniors and Wen Ning were fine, although they suffered from mild frostbites and some muscle sprains from the impact of the avalanche, and from being exposed to the cold for too long. The boys continued to exchange lively banter about the terrifying experience of being swallowed by ice and the panic when their visions were blinded and their lungs pressed under the weight of the disarmingly harmless-looking snow; Wen Ning got them out in the nick of time, only to find that even he, the legendary Ghost General, had one hand and leg pinned down by fallen rocks despite performing powerful cultivation moves to create a barrier of hundred-punching hands and whipping chains to prevent lethal projectiles from colliding into them. They watched Zewu Jun disappear off into the surrounding forests, while shouting at disappearing silhouettes to stop and release the scholars, Master Lan Qi Ren and the apothecary owner.

Everyone agreed that Zewu Jun could probably take care of things on his own, so they focused on the other worrying part of the mishap - the five carts of precious loads have gone missing, and so have the equine animals.

Not too far away, at least from an outsider's perspective, it seemed a huge, ominous, dark cloud hovered over the plateau where the Cloud Recesses resided, although the weather forecast everywhere else was becoming better with more sunshine and windy blue skies. At least for the city perpetually nestled within ethereal mists, remarkable jagged mountain peaks and picturesque waterfalls, it was time for a great purge, starting with the *yaoguai*s who had overstayed their welcome and spent six months feasting the flesh and fruits of tender young Gusu Lan men, women and children, and now they were at the mercy of the greatest, most powerful and most ruthless Kingdom known across the universes and multiverses.

.

Wei Ying didn't want the boys to return to the Cloud Recesses for obvious reasons, and after an hour of searching, they still came up empty handed with no horse or discarded goods in sight, and shivering from the bitter cold in the frosty sub-zero temperatures of the mountain pass. He was wary that the boys' complexions were becoming as blue and pale as Wen Ning's, that it was past lunch time because growling noises betrayed their determination to keep digging snow with bare hands, and that none of them wanted to leave until their leader, Zewu Jun, returned.

He pulled the spouse aside and whispered some instructions; Lan Zhan gave him an incredulous stare before shrugging a hesitant ‘yes’, and went off downhill, then round a bend and disappeared under the pretense of following ‘possibly a wild animal’s pawprints, or maybe just a few rocks that tumbled after the avalanche’. Then, Wei Ying rounded up the man and the three juniors, and told them make haste and journey on towards Caiyi Town.

“It takes a few hours to get there, even longer when trudging through snow. Si Zhui, you said that Zewu Jun had already made reservations at an inn using Fairy Messenger spells, so it’s better that all of you reach there before sundown, lest the innkeeper becomes upset and the Gusu Lan loses even more money,” he said, and reminded the boys of the news that thousands of gold ingots had gone missing, not long after they left earlier that morning. “Hurry there before the four of you become walking ice blocks, get some rest and tend to your injuries, warm up in some hot baths, have some good meals with compliments from the paid reservations, and wait for us,” he instructed.

“Wei qian -- err, Wu Ji shixiong , but what can we do in Caiyi without any goods to barter, nor any information and evidence to present to the town mayor for the investigations into the poisoning plague?” Si Zhui asked, clearly distressed in having to abandon their favourite Wei gongzi in their hour of desperation and loss. He rubbed his hands above a small campfire; they found a small alcove on the sheltered side of the mountain pass to gather their remaining equipment and wits, and Wei Ying’s handy Fire spell made their temporary stay a little more bearable.

Wei Ying smiled reassuringly, and reached for a flower-embroidered satchel he’d carried with him from the Jingshi. He told the boy there were some rice dumplings, fruits, money from Hanguang Jun’s part-time teaching position, some ready-made Fire and other elemental talismans that can be used, and some hastily scribbled maps with names of landmarks, businesses and places of interest in and around Caiyi. “We’ll try not to be too far behind you, but I cannot promise anything. There’s enough in here for a week’s spending, so in case we’re running late, take the time to explore Caiyi and get to know its people. Even if we didn’t turn up for the meetings with the laoban s and the town mayor, you can explain to them about our predicament, and take down messages on our behalf. Learn about the merchandise that the laoban s want to sell or exchange, find out more about what’s going on with the plague in Caiyi. You don’t have to conclude any transactions or sign any contracts - take this entire episode as a study trip abroad, with all expenses paid by the sect!” he exclaimed with glee and radiated with such confidence, that Jing Yi stopped sniffing in his downtrodden mood.

Wen Ning raised his hand excitedly like a nine-year old in class, and announced, “Enn! I’ll keep watch over them, gongzi , so you don’t have to worry! I’ll protect them with my strength!”

Jin Ling chuckled at the display and followed up with his snarky remarks, “You better do that and be our bodyguard! Among the four of us, I have the most money in my pockets, gifted by Zewu Jun last week after he praised me for studying and working hard in the Cloud Recesses during wintertime!” and patted the bulging sides of his robes.

Jing Yi slapped the back of Jin Ling’s head and retorted, “Don’t forget I’m still the captain of the guard, and I know bad behaviour when I see one! The way you’re acting, like a princess of the rich and famous, showing off your fortunes by wiggling your fat ass, you’ll be robbed at knifepoint even in broad daylight!” and everyone laughed, to poor, flustered Jin Ling’s consternation, rubbed his head furiously just as Jing Yi rubbed his from the cold air within the alcove.

Wei Ying rolled his eyes at the boys' little humorous moments, and eventually shushed them with a wave of hands. He gave them one last piece of instruction - to do a fair bit of name-dropping for the man nicknamed Lan Wu Ji, so that when the Masked Hero, or the Masked Merchant, dropped by Caiyi Town, he would be able to get down to business in no time.

“Tell everyone how great and extraordinary this man is, lie about his capabilities, wealth and brilliance in whatever way you can. You can't go wrong even if you tell them that I'm the lost prince of a great King from the Far, Far West, or an immortalized cultivation champion who has solved the most difficult mysteries of the Far, Far North. The more impressive your stories, the more mind-bogged your audience, the more fascinated your recipients, the better - so that I will have a high starting point in making the best bargains for the sake of the Gusu Lan when I deal with the people in Caiyi. All of you know my abilities to spin wild tales, sweeten my tongue, and to charm money pouches off even the greatest laoban s of the Middle Kingdom. Do I make myself clear?”

All four nodded enthusiastically.

Suddenly, they heard the neighs of angry horses from a distance.

.

“Was that a wise thing to do, to send them off on Lil' Jia, Lil' Yi, Lil' Bing and Lil' Ding?” (小甲, 小乙, 小丙, 小丁)

“Hah, my dear wife-y, have trust in your husband’s brilliant schemes! I know those four demons of yours would be left essentially unemployed once we left the Jingshi and when my cloned siblings arrive. I’m a shrewd laoban myself and I make sure to work our servants to the bone; I know they’ve signed a blood contract with you, but I’ve said this before and will say this again - whatever is yours is mine, whatever is mine... is mine! Ordering them to morph into beasts of burden to serve and protect the boys, is the same as telling them to sweep the Jingshi with straw brooms all day.”

“... I do not dispute that claim, Wei Ying. But what of the real Lil’ Apple and the four horses that haven’t been found?”

“Nnngh. Don’t disturb my line of thoughts with such trivial matters, Lan Zhan. We’ll figure out something if and when we find them. I know Lil’ Apple is a hardy survivor, it’ll find its way back to me.”

(there was a roll of eyes, because everyone knows that animals, especially Lil’ Apple, even a calico cat, tend to stay away from Wei Ying unless they are tempted with food, such as a piece of apple hanging off a stick or freshly fried fish stolen from someone’s dinner plate.)

“Mn.”

“Now, my dear wife-y, let’s use your godly powers to locate the carts beneath the snow, and bring back your runaway brother and his merry band of traitors and informants. I can’t withstand the cold in my weakened state even though I’m wearing three layers of clothes and your outer robe as a blanket-y cape, and my legs are shivering from standing too long with this bent cane. Lao po , cook something warm for me to eat, and let me wear your pink boxers because my crotch is turning into frostbite even as we speak! Blast, I should've worn my undies earlier..."

(Slap!)

"Wei Ying, don't hit my buttocks, please. I'll get on it right away."

(Lan Zhan was more than happy to share his soiled boxers with Wei Ying, and enjoyed many tantalizing, erotic fantasies of having Wei Ying's privates soaked in stained patches of his virile cum.)

.

From a distance, a rather apocalyptic scene unfolded, of four horsemen on horses that are white, red, black and pale in colours; Jin Ling drew his bow to practice shooting at passing-by birds while riding on the majestic white horse; Jing Yi took out his state-issued sword to examine its sharpness while barrelling through on his blood-red warhorse through dense undergrowth; Si Zhui's more gentle and intelligent black horse trotted a little slower as the boy took the time to check their equipment such as abacus, food, some money, even a scale in case they needed to measure some medicinal herbs and powders in town; Wen Ning followed from behind on his hulking, deathly pale ride - as men dressed in whites, greys, blues and blacks galloped through the glacial mists and shadows of the forests, had there been people from the Far, Far West observing such a stark display of grandeur, heroics and fearsomeness, one would believe that indeed, they were the harbingers of the cataclysmic apocalypse, and that the end of the world was nigh.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 150

Calico the male calico cat, is just that - a simple cat bearing the marks, patterns and resemblance, and of course the gender-specific features of a male, to be known as a simple calico cat.

He was born somewhere in the West, and by the age of one, he was already prowling the streets of Yiling City, as a stray that commanded decent respect from his kin and those of the hairless, tailless, fangless and clawless bipedal kind that seemed to be related to pesky apes and monkeys (but they do give fabulous scratches behind the ears, beneath the jaw and that oh-so-yummy spot at the base of the tail, and wonderful belly rubs too; and they give out tasty snacks and delicious meals at the sound of a sweet, persuasive Meow) .

His days were carefree back then, spent mostly on daily patrols around his scent-marked territory; taking naps all day in the sunlight or dozing off under an unoccupied horse cart; harassing four-legged neighbours of various species that came too close for comfort; he attempted to court the ladies of his kind that sashayed by, though without much success due to his inexperience and young age; pretending to be the cutest and endearing feline on certain targeted human-infested areas, then exchanging disgustingly addictive belly rubs for hand-fed chicken or fish-flavoured treats; practising his stalk and pounce on the occasional gecko, cockroach or swinging feathery toys that those dastardly humans tempt him with; he had it all, basking in the pinnacle of young adulthood, morphing gloriously into a grumpy and hissy alleycat that he was destined to be, and was looking forward to actually fighting other formidable males and fathering his own offsprings in the next mating season - until he crossed path with the ultimate evil known as Wei Wuxian.

The man, whom he knows by the unwashed smell of body sweat on the clothes and bursting with the pungency of male pheromone-soaked pee and dried semen from the undergarments, and the sound of his crunchy footsteps of well-worn shoes and strange off-tune humming made from lips that cats do not have - frightened Calico to the core. Every time that man appeared from the corner, or if he spied the detestful monkey's shadow from a faraway location, he tried to run away and avoid running into that man. Wei Wuxian was a terrible, terrible cat abuser - poor Calico shivered every time he recalled how he was lured by bits of food, an unassumingly friendly demeanour, and fingers that gingerly touched then gently patted his back - the moment he realized that he'd been tricked and he saw the terrifying flash of bared teeth (the grin, oh the horrible, nightmarish grin!), he'd either have his entire body shaken, rubbed and kneaded viciously from the man that craved for fluff, have his feline genitals molested and thoroughly played, and he'd crawl away with a limp and with bruised, swollen fluffy balls between his hind legs. Brave Calico struggled to defend his dignity, by hissing, scratching and biting at the man's incredibly nimble fingers, but alas, Wei Wuxian had learnt the ways to parry and dodge his angry attacks - he did manage to strike the man occasionally, but not often enough -, and suffered from shameful outrages of his young bachelor's modesty.

Many fantastic things have happened since then, and he went on a journey that no other cats should ever want - he was kidnapped, brought into new worlds, cloned, magically enchanted, then cut up and pieced back together with advanced robotics, travelled through space-time portals, timelines and realities, and was adopted by different men, gods and individuals of strange, fascinating species. He'd been mind-controlled, tortured, lived at the top of a spiralling tower, dwelled in castles in the skies, and continent-wide spaceships, pampered by untold riches one day and became a pariah the next to barely survive in war-torn cities filled with sex-crazed demons; he killed and revived more than the allowable limit of nine times, went to the heavens and to the hells and explored the countless realms in-between and beyond, dined on their foods and drank their wines, gained superpowers and unbelievable intelligence and capabilities, acquired great abilities, technologies and magic, built great armies of cats, men and miscellany, then conquered and ruled more worlds, empires and universes that he could remember; only to lose everything when he found himself in the most recent pitstop of his colourful and wonderful journey in life - a kind of dreamy world where everything looked, well, disappointingly, not so dream-like.

It's a dreary cat's life, to be loved today then thrown and left abandoned tomorrow, he told himself. Fortunately, as cats, he naturally adopted an "I couldn't care less" attitude towards everything. He did things his way, and he didn't need to seek acceptance or permission for anyone or anything. He'd stay in a place with an owner for a while, before disappearing off on his own when things did not go in his favour.

So much had happened in Calico's life, that he had decided not to reminisce the good and bad times that cluttered his memory and soul, lest he becomes an aged grumpy grandpa cat bogged down by his own baggage - in fact, following the chronological sequence of time, Calico wouldn't have been born yet today, so how could he even be a grandpa cat?!

No, no, Calico shook his head and berated himself for thinking too much - and ended up appearing like a lazy cat stretched on someone's window ledge, looking absolutely stoned at the sight of soft, falling snow beyond the glass. He licked his chops and combed his whiskers to freshen his senses and clear his mind, with nary a care anymore to the world around him, because truthfully in cat and human perspectives, he'd been there, done that already. He yawned and rose to his haunches, and leapt to the ground in a single, swift hop. The cottage where he sought shelter from the wintry spring weather was vacant; a single strike from claws that glowed with tremendously powerful but hidden dark magic made sure the resident teenage girl ran out shrieking in pain, then, with her mind clouded with unseen terror haunted by spectres of her past, she knocked into the corner of a table and instantly fractured her hip; her insides had started to melt and liquefy within seconds.

By the time the girl reached the garden, trying to cry for help from the neighbours as her body burned up with a terrible fever and ugly open pus-filled sores appeared on her skin, the vexed Calico thought the human was too noisy for its own good, and with a twirl of paws and a flick of his tail, the girl collapsed into a heap of smoking, foaming, rubbery, gurgling pile of acid-digested flesh and bones.

Minutes later, after having enjoyed his layover in the house, Calico felt his furred belly rumble with a bit of hunger. He could scout the neighbourhood for scraps in the dumpsters, or telepathically control the restaurant workers down the market street to cook a sumptuous five-course meal for him. With the power of dreams pulsing inside him, Calico knew he was the greatest cat ever to exist to date, trapped in a rather dirty, somewhat ungroomed ball of fur on four legs and one marvellous tail.

He continued to wander around, stealthily striking creatures (and men) that offended him, but in most cases, he was fine to be patted by friendly people, to lick and rub them lovingly in return with a couple of sweet mewls - with no spine-chilling flesh-liquefying effects, because the god-tiered cat does not arbitrarily kill living things, and chooses who will live - or not - especially after assessing the quality of their purr-fect belly rubs.

He'd make a trip from a town named Caiyi to another place with a stranger name and colder temperatures called Cloud Recesses using awesome magical teleportation means, because he'd have trouble bypassing the entrance gates that required a key or a Jade Token. There, he would camp out amongst icy drainage pipes, curled up inside bamboo buckets and baskets, near someone's fireplace, somewhere in the morning markets after the crowd has left, and lately, close to a field of vegetable seedlings and a lotus pond where some game such as birds and rodents were easy prey. He recognized one of the occupants of the nice, large building built atop a hill framed with picturesque bamboo groves - his nemesis from the past, judging from the characteristically stinky body odour, but that man seemed oblivious to him and he seemed friendly enough. Perhaps he had a change of heart? he wondered.

After a few free dinners, Calico started to have second thoughts about this man. The messily-dressed human managed to attract a crowd of cats almost everyday during the feeding session, and Calico even made some feline friends himself while having shared meals - one from a nearby house down the street, a couple of tabbies, and others - as he quietly ate his share of rice, chicken, fish, and sometimes a generous chunk of braised pork on the floor. His defenses down, he even welcomed a few strokes on his fur each time he ate, a scratch behind the ear when he's done licking his paws, enjoyed the company of his kin during mealtimes and increasingly, the man who was once his arch-enemy.

That is, until his furry plump balls were molested and harshly grabbed.

.

A-Xian and A-Ji were having the time of their lives - well, they'd always have the time of their lives wherever they went, anyway. So much has happened, yet A-Xian continued to lead A-Ji to safety, and A-Ji trusted his boyfriend with his entirety, that the two were inseparable and charted their path into new lands, new adventures and new treasures no matter which universe, timeline or reality.

For the moment, A-Xian was a ball of untamed energy - he sprinted at full speed, skipped over discarded boxes and baskets, with A-Ji holding onto his arm in tow; they were chased by angry evil men with nets in their hands. Both boys yelled at the top of their lungs and shrieked uncontrollably from excitement and fear, dressed in white-turned-grey rags patched from stolen linen, clothes and blankets, with pilfered goods in their hands - fruits from the market, a paper-wrapped pheasant roast, and a smattering of stuff in pouches, bags, containers and whatnots that their grubby hands could snatch and pocket into their sleeves along the way. A-Ji had learned to pluck a stack of decent sized woven baskets from an unsupervised storefront so that they could carry even more goodies - he was becoming quite a bodybuilder with the strength of many men inside that little child's body -, and A-Xian was full of glee when he started casting spells from his nimble fingers and threw banana peels, slimy toads, ogre's snot, fire-ants and to deter their pursuers.

“A-Xian! Why are we running away from those men? They look just like the adult version of you... are they your relatives? Or that terrible Uncle Wei's?”

“Ha ha ha! My dear lao gong A-Ji, there's only one and only me! I'm the real A-Xian, and as I've learnt from eavesdropping from the teahouses, the real Wei Ying and Wei Wuxian! Everyone else, including that bad Uncle Wei, is a fake! So trust me when I say run, hold me when I say jump!”

Around them, there was chaos and confusion; marauding squads of men in black who looked like Uncle Weis or wore half-masks that resembled that notorious man, rushed from house to house with lethal precision; innocent-looking men and especially sleazy moustached, bearded fat elderly ones were captured and dragged out through kicked-open doors or pushed down the stairs without warning - these were individuals who were either possessed and corrupted by yaoguai spirits, or were indirectly serving them and becoming corrupted themselves, who prey on the weak and the poor, and lining their pockets with the riches looted from the heart of the Gusu Lan. They were quickly tied and bagged into writhing sacks; some put up an admirable struggle and started cursing and kicking like madmen, but they were easily subdued with never-seen-before magic or a simple prick of acupuncture needle straight into the temples. Their family members, servants and guards retaliated with plenty of shouts and fearsome battle stances - however, all was for naught, when more men entered the buildings and lifted up black sticks that looked like Chenqing flutes; the men shouted orders to 'look at the sticks' (and even don on their sunglasses just for a dramatic effect), and because humans are easily fooled into complacency and compliance, a bzzt! and a flash of neon-blue light later, suffice to say - everything was forgotten.

Still, the guerrilla-like invasion caused quite a stir, with brief melee combat and fires breaking out sporadically all over the Cloud Recesses, people running helter-skelter screaming for help, lightning bolts, energy blades and flaming fireballs hurtled left, right and center, and more disorder ensued.

The two boys zig-zagged around then fled the streets in record time, and had no problem running through walls, houses and other obstacles in their Dream-powered state to evade their captors. A-Xian cried out a warning, and A-Ji nodded - both of them leapt up a donkey cart and aimed for the skies. A-Xian twirled his fingers once, twice, then spun in mid-air and winked at his child-husband A-Ji with the happiest, widest grin ever, and A-Ji couldn't resist reciprocating with an awkward smile.

Both children and their booty transformed into blobs of light and shrunk in size but radiated with intense brightness, and then the pair of incandescent firefly-like balls of energy zipped into the air like a shooting star from the mortal earth, with a loud, deafening fwip!

.

“No, no, no, my dear wife-y, you can’t just wave your Bichen like a broom or pluck a guqin string like your everyday practice, then release an enormous amount of qi energy, and expect me to give you a laudable five-star rating for the dismal performance of mundanely shoveling snow? No, no, no, it’s got to be done with more panache, with style, and with a certain swagger,” said the newly-minted husband while gesturing no-no-nos with his forefinger and wiggling his hips. With the boys and their demonic steeds gone, the couple was freer to do whatever they wanted, without the fear of embarrassment casting doubts into their actions.

Lan Zhan sighed tiredly; he’d been ploughing through snow with the trunk of a giant pine tree with one end gouged into a spoon by hand, then, at the behest of the finicky spouse, jogged back to the burning Cloud Recesses to grab the four demons over his shoulders before turning them into four-legged transports, next, cooking a meal of fire-warmed congee, vegetable stew and grilled meats to satisfy the hungry man, then getting interrupted from time to time while wading in the waist-deep snow in search for the carts, because lovely Wei Ying who remained in the comfortably dry alcove, complained his fingers were numb, his toes were frozen, his cheeks were cold, and he wanted a hug from the wife-y almost every five minutes.

In the end, even the venerable Hanguang Jun was defeated by the elements of Nature, and the sun was setting in the highlands; shadows were becoming longer, the temperatures plummeted once again, heavy fog descended into the area, and it started to feel like Winter more than Spring.

With no signs of his older brother, Lan Zhan was desperate to resolve at least one of a number of his worries.

“Wei Ying, if you would let me use my powers to clear the bulk of the avalanche, it would greatly speed up our search for the carts,” he pleaded with reason.

Wei Ying tsk-tsked, “My darling man, I never said you couldn’t use your powers; I said you needed to do it my way .”

Lan Zhan cocked his head in bewilderment and asked to be taught the Way of the Wei in clearing a large expanse of packed snow.

In the end, the couple agreed to have Wei Ying stand at the edge of the tumbled sea of white with his mysterious mask on; now enchanted with amazing god-tiered spells rather than the curse of Inabilities; having returned Lan Zhan’s outer robes, Wei Ying fashioned another, more stylish cape from his scarf, which when unravelled turned out to be like a mini-blanket itself; he stood up with victory painted on his toothy grin and raised a fist, but he wasn’t satisfied, so he made that into a skyward-pointing index finger, then thought that the gesture wasn’t spectacular enough, so he grabbed his walking cane and lift it up like a flag staff, and point up to the blue skies - of course, he’d be Number One forever, at least in front of his one-man spectator. Wei Ying shouted at the top of his lungs, and coughed a bit towards the end, “Announcing Lan Wu Ji, the greatest showman on earth, ready to clear these mountains of Gusu!”

(Then, right on cue, Lan Zhan secretly cast a Sound Amplification spell, and Wei Ying's hoarse, cracked voice echoed throughout the mountain range and valleys, scaring away bears and squirrels alike into hiding, and sending flocks of hilltop pigeons screeching in panic; the icy pine forests stirred, and stilled, as though a deafening shot from a gun rang out in shock.)

Having declared the debut of his performance, next, Wei Ying lowered himself and rudely bent his body into a hunched, half-squat position, as though he was taking a dump from a high perch. He pointed his ass towards the site of disaster.

Lan Zhan heaved a sigh of relief that the monumental task would - finally, finally - be done in a heartbeat; his arms were getting a bit sore from wielding the hulking giant spoon made of fully-grown pine trunk, and stacking and hurling boulders the size of cottage homes. The older wife-y waved his arms in an arc, and the magical guqin was summoned into plain view. It placed itself at waist level, and the master of the instrument performed a series of fancy moves, of swinging arms, swaying legs and even added a couple of wow-inducing shadowless flying kicks just for show, following the script written by the husband. He postured and performed like a maestro mixed with the moves of a top-tiered cultivator, then finally, his hands burst into fiery flames and he gracefully plucked one thick guqin string that instantly vibrated into a series of magnificent sparkle-laden explosions.

The incredible roaring soundwaves were as visible as they were frightening, with jets of serpent-like flames following suit. The tsunami of twang! distorted the air and thundered through wobbly Wei Ying, who grasped his walking cane embedded deep into the frozen ground as hard as he could in order not to be blown away by the aftershocks. At the perfect moment, the flaming serpents whizzed by his sides and Wei Ying gleefully squatted lower, then aimed, grimaced then Hnnngh'd, and fired a salvo of audible wet farts (which again, Lan Zhan secretly Amplified).

To an outsider, it would look like Wei Ying had farted a fantastically devastating fart from his ass - and an entire stretch of the avalanche behind him as vast as fifty rice fields instantly melted and blew away in a thunderous applause to celebrate that said fart, which then continued its supersonic journey into the stratosphere and the cosmic beyond. The canopies of the surrounding pine forests were singed and smoked beyond recognition, leaving behind a storm of falling ashes and wet, melted ice.

Wei Ying laughed, fell into the snow, rolled around obnoxiously until he made multiple snow-angels on the ground, until he couldn't breathe, and admitted that he had the best time of his life.

Unsurprisingly, what was left of the bulldozed mountain pass were barren soil and rocks, flattened outcrops, bits of ice, and yes, five rather damaged and twisted carts and their broken wheels, four frozen horses, and one shivering, barely alive, but angrily honking Lil' Apple.

(Not long after, the Sun experienced a massive impact of guqin soundwaves of a mighty twang! , accompanied by the vestiges of an extraterrestrial smelly fart (which fuelled the burn anyway) - the glowing star flared in response to being rattled to its core, before calming down to its usual shine, moments thereafter.)

Five stars, Wei Ying declared triumphantly, and rated their performance with a chef's kiss. Lan Zhan sighed - the rather humiliating act completed, he quickly erased the magical guqin out of sight, then crouched and lifted lovely, giggling Wei Ying from the cold ground, and carried him, bridal-style, back to the alcove where a warm snuggle and another steaming hot snack was in order. He still had to check and unpack the broken carts and figure out how to deal with the horses (and one angry, honking donkey).

.

Wei Ying's double-edged plan worked. The man had heard faint thudding sounds whilst flying over the site of the avalanche earlier - woodsmen who worked hard in the chilly weather to chop down firewood and to carry them down to fuel-hungry settlements near the foot of the mountains, including the Cai district. He correctly guessed that there would be a number of faraway curious onlookers watching the site of the disaster, probably missing out of the juniors and Wen Ning's exit (because they'd look like insignificant little white and black dots to observers), but definitely did not miss marvelling at how Lan Zhan fashioned a giant spoon to dig their way out - and with the hours gone by, they'd have a sizable crowd hiding amongst the cliffs and treelines, to witness Wei Ying's ass-spectacular performance.

Some would run through dense bush trails, rightfully panickedly, even faster than the four riders and their four demonic apocalyptic horses, and ramble wild tales about a crazy but exceptionally powerful Masked man with a walking cane and a shimmering dark blue cape, with an even crazier man in pure white swinging a pine trunk as long as ten horse carts lined up on a straight line; and that Masked man was named Lan Wu Ji, whose strength was so great that he farted a monstrous fart of flaming string music that levelled mountains, crushed rocks and destroyed an entire mountain pass - in a single passing of bad wind.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 151

Cup noodles were the couple's favourite Middle Kingdom fast food, especially during chilly weather and when the craving strikes for springy wheat noodles cooked insalty, savoury, artificial flavour-rich broth; alas, in this ancient day and age, primitive technology reigned, that Wei Ying had to contend with Lan Zhan's home-cooked noodles in a small claypot over a campfire of dried, frozen pine branches. He knew he should be grateful to the wife-y who had thought of everything in advance, including packing a mind-boggling amount of household stuff - like a claypot, noodles and condiments - into a Bag of Holding disguised as a plain, worn gunny sack tied to Bichen's hilt for its flight; however much the gratitude, Wei Ying remained a devil in a greater disguise as that said Bag of Holding, posing as a heroic and unconventional husband, and a chronic sex offender to the poor wife-y who had worked so hard to make their lives bearable.

"Nnngh... Wei Ying... please... let go... I need-- I need to check... aaahn... on the carts, and... mmmph... Lil' Apple...!"

Wei Ying placed a finger on his self-declared wife's lips and clicked his tongue. "No, I'm the husband here, so you have to do what I say. Now sit still and let me play with the noodles," Wei Ying chuckled and wiggled the said finger, which then slipped between those luscious, moany lips - because he also wiggled his other hand that lovely grasped an angry-red twitching, leaking penis. A few more heartfelt, firm strokes, and Lan Zhan cried out Wei Ying's name again and again in warning - those struggling hips shook, the pelvis quivered, plump balls tightened for a powerful, heavenly-hellish countdown--

Lan Zhan was grateful to be allowed to cum from a terribly arousing handjob, and he ejaculated cummy chicken-flavoured brothy noodles that had been forcibly inserted into the furiously red penis earlier. Fat oily squirts of white and noodly yellows shot out thirty times, arched above their heads, some splattering to the low ceiling of the alcove, some landing on the couple's heads.

(To Lan Zhan's doomed fate, Wei Ying found a reed-like straw in the bag while curiously rummaging through the Bag of Holding; the flustered, red-cheeked wife-y said it was something used to drink from a cup and should be left alone, but Wei Ying knew better - it was one of P-Cool's latest sex-glorifying gadget of sexual depravity - a sounding stick with endless possibilities.

"You wanton slut! Are you really a woman who cannot bear to pass the day without masturbating, that you have to carry this in your travelling luggage?" Wei Ying yelled and choked with laughter at the same time, shaming the wife-y man until he felt so sexually inferior and insecure, overwhelmed and subjugated, and strangely, excited and horny at the same time, that by the time Wei Ying finished giving him a short lecture about the sexual appropriateness of a wife, coupled with knocking the sounding stick on Lan Zhan's temples and swatting the tent in his pants with it, until droplets of crystal-clear pearls formed at the top, oozed out and soiled the man's pants - Lan Zhan was truly, deep within, fantasizing being sexually tortured by Wei Ying riding him from sunrise to sunset while he was tied, spread-eagled, tenderly, lovingly whipped by that sounding stick, and inappropriately pleased by that that tool of terrifying love - and he one-two'd in front of his spouse without being touch, to Wei Ying's maddening squeals of surprise.

Two minutes later, groaning Lan Zhan was ordered to sit on the ground, pull off his soiled, cum-slicked pants, and spread his legs like a whore that he was labelled as, and the inserted straw did its detestful job of penetrating to the deepest, most intimate regions within the groin, wriggled like a living worm, then expanding and contracting in size and length, with an add-on option of mind-blowing vibrations, growing out ticklish protrusions and feathers, and cause heart-attack-inducting spins that either ruined or sexually razed one's urethra. Wei Ying tried all the options, and left the wife-y dying of pleasure without the possibility of releasing the burgeoning liquid pressure soaring from the base of his again, dying but incredibly hard and stimulated penis.

Wei Ying gave Lan Zhan a marvellous hand and blow job on the outside, while the earth-shattering and hurricane-like spinning straw did its horrible deed on the inside; Lan Zhan grunted, hiccuped and cried out tears of desperation, but his hands were pinned to the ground; his body waist-down shuddered crazily to squeeze, shake and tried to hard to spurt, to abort the foreign sex toy from his genitals, but to no avail. The assault was relentless, the excitement sky-rocketed, the desire to climax became so tangible that far, far away, universes were split and torn apart because the god-tiered Lan Zhan couldn't release his sexual frustration unto anything, not when lovely husband Wei Ying continued to kiss, suck and caress his meatstick so vigorously with passion in his cheeky eyes.

Then, with a push of a tiny button at the side of the straw, it opened up a little more until the shape and size of a funnel. Wei Ying cackled like a witch with such mirth, when he slowly poured some cooled chicken broth from the claypot and the accompanying springy cooked noodles into it. With some exotic techniques that only the couple knew, Wei Ying massaged everything in (even the gods cannot imagine how that could be done, but it was done anyway, because simply because it was Lan Zhan the god-tiered sex god, after all), then returned the straw to its original state, pulled it out - by then, Lan Zhan was already lost in a crazy, sex-fuelled trance, a mad beast in heat, drowning in lust and pain, eyes rolled back to the extent that only whites showed, his jaws slacked and drool started to pool on the floor, his limbs flailed and trembled, his back arched.

Wei Ying leaned forward to kiss his dear wife-y on the cheeks as a thank-you for becoming a toy for entertainment, then bent down to swallow the dying man's member in a single swoop. He sucked and spitted into the terribly engorged rod and bloated opening, loving the taste of chicken-flavoured noodly Lan Zhan, then blew lots of bubbles through and made sure to have long intact strings of springy, firm, al dente noodles slid up and down the unbelievably irritated and sensitive urethra, worming their way, twisting like real squiggly worms, coiling and curling up then stimulating and spasming penis from the inside every time the man Hnnngh'd from exceedingly exciting flashes of lightning zipping up and down the thunder rod of turgid flesh, causing indescribably nice and gross sensations simultaneously, swimming up and down in salty chicken broth increasingly diluted with pre-cum and other nasty bodily fluids, and sending surges of pleasure, pain and everything else in-between to short-circuit poor wife-y's sexual nerves in the loins; soon, Wei Ying could taste, and feel, drizzles of prostatic fluids, the first hints of semen, and yes, when the bladder sphincters stopped working, so did the pee start spewing; he didn't want his noodles to be soaked into soggiess with a man's sticky juices and pungent ammonia flavours, so he made sure a majestic and massage-like handjob would do the trick to get the dying man (oh how many times Lan Zhan would've died during that hour, except that he was actually an immortal) to orgasm with noodles churning inside his pitifully tortured penis and ejaculated in thirty mighty contractions, convulsing out into volleys of sperm cells bathed in chicken soup and seed-covered noodles, leaving the dead man (no, no, Lan Zhan can never die) finally twitching on the ground, spasming like a drunken fool, continually leaking cum, broth and noodles befitting Wei Ying's favourite brand of cup noodles - Lan Zhan brand, that is.

Only the gods knew how Lan Zhan felt, later, when Wei Ying repeated the act, and noisily sucked inserted noodles and its foamy broth from his dying-dead-deader-too-dead penis; it would twitch and jerk randomly, in despair from start to end, but Wei Ying thought it was one of the most fun way to eat his noodles.)

.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan.”

“Mn?”

“Looking at the pieces of noodles on your hair... what do you think? Should you change your hairstyle and go for a perm? Maybe wavy suits you better than straight.”

“...”

“Or how about me? Should I keep my long hair combed back? But that would mean having to comb it everyday, because my hair is stubborn and sometimes sticks out in all direction.”

“Mn.”

“Ah, the Spring Festival will be here soon, I really should go for a new look. You know, new clothes, new accessories, new make-up, new hairstyle and all that. Should I leave a couple of bangs at the front? Or cut the front piece and fashion it into a fancy fringe? Or trim everything short so that I wouldn't complain about the heat when daytime grows longer.”

“... Mn.”

“Eeeh, Lan Zhan, you always Mn at everything, how do I know what you’re really thinking? You need to be more vocal. Here, let me play with your wee-wee a bit more, maybe you’ll start humming and singing for me, like in an opera show! Ha ha ha!”

Lan Zhan did sing, in praise, in pain, but mostly in pleasure, for the fifth going onward to the sixth climax, as he resigned to his fate as an enslaved wife-y to a horny, naughty husband who used sex to conclude their conversations, particularly with one hairy hand lodged between his muscular thighs with vigorous movements that left him imprisoned, drained but exceedingly satisfied. Lan Zhan was lovingly grabbed, molested, stroked and massaged at every opportune moment spent together with his beloved Wei Ying in a cocoon of intimacy and with a steaming pot of noodles on a campfire, inside that alcove.

.

With sex finally out of the way, Lan Zhan was once again calmed down and more than just Buddha-lyzed. He’d orgasmed ten times in a row by the time the claypot of Wei Ying’s afternoon snack was done - all consumed from his fleetingly alive-then-dead penis and, or, wasted on the floor or the alcove’s ceilings. With testicles that had been emptied into the said snack for the husband, he no longer had any desire fanning the lust in the loins - since everything had been sipped, sucked, drunk, gargled, and swallowed with many burps from the husband later on -, freshened up Lan Zhan proceeded to get to the horse carts that lay in tatters and splinters on the grounds formerly occupied by the avalanche snow.

Wei Ying had been brilliant to take the time to tease (and then, destroy) Lan Zhan's sexual appetite - he knew that Lil' Apple was too angry for having lost its four companions - those normal horses from the communal stables - that it'd bite and kick anyone that dared to walk near the bodies of its now-dead friends and desecrate their dignities. Lan Zhan deliberately approached with a solemn mood, careful not to raise its hackles and trigger its guard, then methodically picked up and stacked the carcasses like plates on a tray, dug a giant hole with a single powerful kick into the hard, frozen earth, and gave them a respectable burial ritual, while Lil' Apple, who had lost its steam from honking, kicking into empty air and braying non-stop for nearly an hour, finally found peace in quietly munching on grass shoots at the fringes of the bushes in the proximity. When the burial was concluded, four sombre piles of stones remained as a reminder of the animals that had been sacrificed for the good of the Gusu Lan.

The couple meandered around the rugged crash site of sorts, like survivors of a horrific wreckage - pieces of board, broken wood, splintered wheels littered the ground, with trails of merchandise both perishable and not, spread all over the sloped grounds like a free-for-all buffet spilled to the floor. Upon closer inspection, to their dismay, a significant amount of stuff had been irreparably damaged - rolls of dirtied textiles showed signs of tears from the impact and their fine embroideries were grazed beyond recognition, crafted metal tools left twisted and wooden ones crushed, buckets splits rammed into pieces and porcelain jars cracked with their contents gone, books and scrolls rendered unreadable, perishable herbs and foodstuffs contaminated then spoiled from being drenched in ice melt - the list went on.

“Well, at least we can salvage the minerals, since the stones can still be sold at fair prices even if they’ve been shattered into smaller fragments,” Wei Ying remarked dryly as he used his cane to poke at a fist-sized chunk of shiny ore with cracks on its surface, and it promptly split into two, to the man’s faint surprise. For what it’s worth, Zewu Jun’s original proposal of trading mostly with sturdy minerals held true, and Wei Ying credited the Sect Leader for his foresight and wisdom. Slowly, rather annoyingly and inefficiently, Wei Ying used the edge of his walking cane to gather a variety of rocks, rubble, mineral chunks and cracked ores into a small, but growing pile, fragment by fragment.

Lan Zhan crouched on the ground at a stone’s throw away, dutifully collecting anything of use besides the abundant and cheap minerals - heirloom magical talismans, relics and charms that still functioned, legendary enchanted weapons, armours and equipment that withstood the accident (including the set found by the juniors and Wen Ning not too long ago), timeless treasures excavated from beneath the Cloud Recesses and peoples’ dusty attics, and other stuff that he had his eyes on but never vocally questioned if they should even be put up for sale in the first place. The Bag of Holding in his arm remained as large as a standard satchel, even as the man literally vacuumed up the valuables at top speed and efficiency, and had picked up enough to fill the entire Jingshi.

By the time the sun had set shortly before five, and the dusky skies turned from fiery orange into blazing reds, magenta and hues of darkening blues, it was really cold especially for those lingering out in the open and exposed to the elements. Wei Ying whined constantly at his aching, fatigued limbs, wobbly legs, bluish extremities, and of frost building up on his eyelashes and lips. Lan Zhan exhaled yet another tired sigh; the young man who now commanded their fates as a husband-wife couple, insisted on waiting for the return of Zewu Jun rather than making haste to reach the inn in Caiyi Town by the end of the day.

“Aiya~~,” Wei Ying squeaked between chattering teeth, “Lan Zhan, your brother is my brother-in-law, and who knows if he also rescued your uncle, who is now my relative too - we should respect the elders and wait for them here, then together, escort them down the trail to Caiyi. The juniors can have fun in town and take care of themselves and Wen Ning is competent enough to babysit them on his own.” Wei Ying stabilized his stance, spread his feet a little wider, and played short-putts using his cane and roly-poly pieces of ore on the ground, as though he was practising in a game of golf. One by one, pieces were pushed, tapped and rolled into a basket tipped over to its side, and when a sizable mound was formed, Wei Ying would heave and unload that basket into a creaky makeshift cart without wheels - the only surviving and usable transport left, since the rest sported large cracks, holes and tears.

Lan Zhan couldn't argue with Wei Ying's line of thought - which ticked the right boxes, when measured against the Lan family's over-four thousand rules -, so he continued to fix the said cart with tools he fortunately remembered to stow into his Bag of Holding. Lil' Apple, whom nobody really paid attention unless it was irritated and kicked dangerously from the back, let out a bored neigh, snorted out a cloud of ass-breath, then picked up an intact wooden plank with its teeth and passed it to Hanguang Jun, so that the latter could hammer it to the cart to either strengthen its rocky frame or patch a hole.

(The whole world for the couple revolved around Wei Ying, to the extent that they did not realize Lil' Apple wasn't really the same donkey that Wei Ying had picked up from the Mo village aeons ago and left it to wander and survive in Gusu on its own; Lil' Apple was, in fact, like Calico the Cat, one of the very few creatures that survived the passing of timelines and realities, and had gained immense capabilities and powers during the transition of worlds and universes. Smarter than a man or even a god, Lil' Apple remained humble and staunch to its ass-roots, and lived a relatively peaceful equine life in solitude, eating grass and fruits when it was hungry, and sleeping and running whenever the mood strikes.

Like the cat, Lil' Apple had learned how to handle the detestful humans in its own equine ways, and maneuvered his lifestyle and motivations to suit his long-term plans to dwell in the rather resource-rich human-infested lands. By acting in non-violent ways, whilst contributing a bit back to the owners of the lands - such as non-verbally agreeing to pull a cart or plough a field - Lil' Apple knew it'd stand to gain more, with free baskets of fruits and vegetables given every day, being allowed to graze in peace, and sometimes, it gets to enjoy a nice dust-bath or a scratch on the back or the belly.

Lil's Apple had done more than its share by helping Wei Ying to pick up the scattered minerals using its teeth and hooves, and now, aiding Hanguang Jun with the reconstruction of a cart to carry the salvaged materials. It knew that it was not in debt to either man from being saved from getting buried by the avalanche, because it was already an immortal and a super-powerful entity anyway, however it appreciated Hanguang Jun's kind gesture of holding a burial ritual for its newfound - then lost - friends, so that it could spend an hour mourning noisily over them, and later, reconcile with its loss and now, rekindle its friendship with the men, especially the one named Hanguang Jun.)

"Nnnh. Hold this while I nail this piece over here," Lan Zhan murmured, not really realizing that he was talking to a donkey. Lil' Apple acquiesced, pushed its snout against one side of the cart so that Lan Zhan had enough traction to complete another bit of repair work. Wei Ying continued to mutter a string of curses when he missed hitting a round piece of mineral - because it was becoming dark, and he couldn't see well, when tears even start to chill and freeze in his eyes -, then clumsily lost his footing and slid to his rump unceremoniously on the ground.

Not long after, against the flickering lights of torches, the sounds of crickets Lil' Apple sniffed the air and started to bray. Wei Ying yelped in surprise and fell to his rump again, this time landing on a small puddle of ice melt and his backside experienced very uncomfortable signs of frostbite. Lan Zhan had the 'finally!' look on his face, pursed his lips in disappointment at the lateness of the hour, and rose from his seat where he had worked on the rickety cart nearly the latter half of the afternoon.

“Aiya~~ Lan Zhan! Do you see what I see? That's your older brother walking out of the forest's edge! Hurry, let's pack everything up and be on our way, I'm freezing my ass off here!”

.

Wei Ying's attitude changed - rather, improved - when a wounded, hobbling and bandaged Zewu Jun arrived with just one rescued survivor from the chase in tow, who was, expectedly, also equally injured, tumbling and herb-and-gauze wrapped Master Lan Qi Ren. Lan Zhan became a little more alarmed than his partner when he laid his eyes upon the state of his blood relatives - he silently chastised himself for tolerating the long wait and then getting impatient in the end - which was really, unbecoming of the man named Hanguang Jun - and quickly went to work by checking on the two new arrivals' conditions and casting quick-fix healing spells on them.

(Unbeknownst to everyone, Lil' Apple who was confirmed to emit a very powerful kind of Inability magic, or something to that equivalent, and started to cook dinner for the guests. It easily used its wide teeth to take off Lan Zhan's precious satchel without the owner's knowledge, then rummaged the contents with its snout until it got what it needed - the claypot used to cook the cursed noodles earlier that day, a few packets of 31st-century hydratable foodstuff meant for deep interstellar travel - because it had been on some spaceships in its previous life, and knew what was lip-smackingly delicious during such long journeys in isolation -, a modern portable stove, and a pair of Fire and Water magic talismans.

It swayed its large head as though it was dancing to an inaudible tune, and Invisible Hands appeared to prepare a decent meal for the so-called circus troupe of four. The packets were easily opened and the dried, dessicated contents were dropped into the pot. By stepping on a Water talisman, Lil' Apple conjured a stream of fresh springwater to shoot out of it and fill the pot. It wasted no time; next, it carefully used its mouth to lift the full pot and placed it onto the stove, and with another clatter of hooves, the Fire talisman was activated and it sent forth sparkling flames to light the said stove.

As the food started to warm up into a hearty, bubbling cauldron of mouth-watering goodness fit for 31st-century consumption, Lil' Apple sniffed the air and detected a few more uninvited guests. It sighed, and trotted back to the Bag of Holding, and picked out a can of sardines, and a bag of fresh produce. As the four adult men chatted and made annoying human sounds in the distance, Lil' Apple brought the items a little further from the ad hoc campsite, and placed them on the frozen dirt ground.

Calico mewled in gratitude, and stood up on its hind legs; like a proper gentleman of the animal kingdom, it bowed with folded paws at the front, before settling back to its primitive four-legged pose, went to grab the can of sardines with its fangs, and dashed off into the shadows where it would use powerful mechanical and magical means to open the said can. A pair of white and black rabbits appeared out of nowhere as well, a little wet from some residual snow, shivering from the cold, but every bit cute and adorable - at least the white one, because the red-eyed black rabbit looked a little slimy and evil -, gingerly hopped and bowed as well. They dined quietly on the offered lettuce, carrots and fruits that Lil' Apple prepared on the ground.

The animals exchanged a few unspoken messages, by stares, blinks and rolls of eyes, and collectively, stayed in the dark, at a far corner, away from those dumb, rude humans and their monkey-like chatter, to wait for what unfolds next.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 152

There used to be a fairy tale from the Far, Far West called ‘The Town Musicians of Bremen’, which featured farm animals, once abandoned by their owners, decided to band together and do the impossible, to journey to a fabled town in search of fame and riches, and to chart their own destinies - however, through their wits and teamwork, they managed to find something better, by tricking, stealing and taking advantage of Men’s fears and foolishness, closer to home.

A congregation of such animals took place right in front of the mens’ eyes, shrouded by the dwindling dusk light and dense prickly undergrowth, bolstered by the magic of Ignorance; it helped that everyone kept their individual vocalizations to the minimum, did not make any unnecessary movements that may attract unwanted attention, and quietly dined on the offered meals stolen from Hanguang Jun’s Bag of Holding. They communicated like gentle-beasts, with strict etiquettes, use of honorifics, and through telepathy where even the smallest voice gets an equal say on the table of giants, so to speak.

“I say, this lump of cane sugar lacks a distinctive savouriness typically found in my natural diet. Can you pass the salt, please?” said the fire-ant using gestures with its antennae.

The hen, one of the latecomers, pecked at her husband, a rooster, to respond. He clucked with irritation at his disturbed meal of space-age poultry feed, genetically-modified grains and exotic tropical fruits not found elsewhere; with his claw, reached into the Bag to pick out a salt shaker filled with crystals fortified with vitamins and minerals. “It’s only right that we help each other, dear,” the hen gave a sweet peck at the rooster’s wattles, “After all, we’re all fugitives from the previous timelines and realities, and we've learned the hard way not to take our food for granted." The rooster grunted a hoarse chirp, and tipped the salt shaker a little, and the fire-ant received a miniscule pinch of the much-needed salt.

She is right, Lil' Apple announced telepathically with nod of its head and huffed out a cloud of dust, while munching on another off-season apple; they were a band of abandoned animals who had enjoyed the wealth and richness of their previous lives, that when they found themselves in a new world without the comforts and conveniences of the nth centuries - such as the said Bag of Holding that contained their favourite foods from across the eras -, they became desperate and searched for opportunities to retake control of their lives - or at least a part thereof.

"I myself realized belatedly the enormous deadly powers I have sealed within my paws, that when wielded uncouthly in such an innocent and frail world, causes untold damages with unforeseen consequences. I cannot remember how many lives of four-legged creatures I've taken with a swipe of these glimmering shards in my limbs, and worse still, I am wracked with guilt over how many humans' I have murdered even in my sleep," Calico mourned his cursed fate, and promptly bit into a sardines' head with a loud crunch; oh how he missed having canned, processed food laden with excellent artificial flavourings, appetite-inducing colourings and more importantly, the nutrition that sustained its divinely body.

"You don't say, old friend," Lil' Apple made a soft whinnying sound, careful not to break the spell of Ignorance that it emitted perpetually, "I managed to befriend four of my kin, two stallions and two mares during the past winter, but alas, everything was taken away from me, blown away like a candle in the wind. 'Tis are fleeting times we are experiencing, my fellow comrades. Treasure what connections you have, the love you nurture, the homes you've found, and food you enjoy that nourishes even your weary souls - you do not know what comes in the 'morrow, whether we can continue to meet and care for each other like this, and share the meagre spoils of our expeditions, if any others, and if any more.”

All animals agreed unanimously with silent “Aye!”s - even the squirrel, who held special regard by the rest due to its history of crossing paths with the great Emperor of their former Kingdom, when it and its devastated family raided the Emperor’s former home and bit into baskets of fruits, and later, captured and sold off as exotic bushmeats in a night market by the same Emperor’s spouse. “Such tragedy, such misery! Are there no other ways that we can forge our own futures and rise against this bleakness?! Must we always depend on those two stinky humans for our needs? Must we pray every day that the one in White will someday bring out his Bag of Holding - just like this historic day today -, or whip out any magical and technological resource unrelated to this timeline, just to sate our hungers?! Must we always live hiding in fear from the one in Black, lest we are abused because history repeats itself and that horrid human never remembers his crimes against the Animal Kingdom?!” the gung-ho, fiery, full of bravado but with less than admirable brains squirrel squeaked while swinging a fist in the air with a mouthful of special nuts grown only in the Andromedan galaxy, thumping its brown bushy tail in fury - everyone shushed the noisy rodent with hisses in unison, and even the fire-ant had to chitter a shocked “Excuse me, you barbaric rat !” when its pile of perfectly arranged sugar pyramid toppled from the lashing tail.

The greasy-coated black rabbit stepped up with a half-eaten lettuce leaf in its paws; it looked as though someone had dunked it into a bucket of slime, but its glowing red-eyes said otherwise. “Cease your impudent speech, and do not hold grudges against my creators, you fool!” and he whacked the squirrel with a fur-coated punch, “I may be born later than many of you, but I’m the strongest and most capable amongst us, a descendent of the greatest, most powerful mortals and gods! I shall teach you how to grovel beneath my hindquarters if you say anything distasteful about my parents! Why, I’ll turn you into... into... into squirrel mulch!” it squealed (or roared, in rabbit terms), and started to fluff out its hackles to become a bigger ball of oily fur than it already was.

A jet-black crow, one who had hid amongst the canopy of dead and dried branches, swooped in to snatch a morsel left unattended on the ground, out of habit, and also because it was still a little hungry after swallowing two plates of fried rice, roasts and stir-fries. “Just because you think you are the er zi (儿子; son) of the royal couple and therefore termed yourself as Ernie, doesn’t mean anything in my vocabulary! Don’t forget, I alone served the greatest Dark Arts practitioner, the Yiling Patriarch himself, and without His incredible intervention, none of this would have been possible! Now that he’s nothing but a cripple, without his call for us to service, our powers remain dormant, restricted and limited only enough to sustain us! I mourn the day that I cannot create mountains of green-hued skeletons and dancing fierce corpses with my hellish cries!” In a brief struggle to establish dominance, the crow nipped the black rabbit’s ears, and the latter nearly emitted a squeal of pain; but it struck back by bravely twisting its nimble body to bite back with its two front teeth.

“Stop fighting, all of you!” the hen tried her best to stifle her screech and kicked up a cloud of dirt, vexed at having to handle adults acting like juveniles, “I may not like those couple of humans either, because the they trapped my ancestors from the forest in the Far West, and forced my family serve their needs with egg-laying and slaughter for meat, and the Black one is known for his abusive treatment of farm animals - why, once, I witness how he outraged the modesty of my babies by flashing at them and teaching them how to play with his privates, and I taught that good-for-nothing monkey a good lesson by pecking his cock - pardon my pun -, only to be playfully thrown into the air and squawking like a dying bird almost every other day - the nerve! But still, I respect those two for who they were, and how they continue to co-exist with us in this dreadful place. We have to find middle grounds in our behaviours, and not divide ourselves from petty arguments! We’ve nothing else but each other, you know!” Her voice, telepathically at least, rose to alarming pitches, and she started to hyperventilate in her teary, emotional outburst. Her husband remained stoic and placed a wing over her back, patting her and whispering, “There, there.”

Several pairs of slitted and round, dilated eyes turned to Calico, who mewled faintly at the unwanted attention, and the anxiety of being stared down. If there was talk of terrorizing animals and sexual abuse of the bestial kind, he would be a prime suspect too; every animal in that tight circle knew, through gossips around waterholes, of how the unfortunate cat had been a target for rough manhandling and loathsome molestation. It licked the emptied can of sardines clean and proceeded to lick its mouth and whiskers too.

Lil’ Apple, being the biggest individual with the biggest mouth, thus relegated to the role of the workhorse of the family of misfits, continued to patiently rummage the Bag of Holding with his snout and pull out goodies for everyone - there’s everything to suit each animal’s palate, ranging from candied snacks, nourishing soups and congees, all-you-can-eat buffet of organic greens, fruits from all over the world and across the galaxies, pre-heated microwavable foods from the future, canned and packaged goodies that lasted forever, fast and junk foods that should never had been introduced - Calico especially loved KFC fried chicken wings, and even the fowls didn’t mind - everyone ate with politeness and without prejudice based on creed, gender, race, species and denomination.

The animals faced a dire predicament simply based on their varied, but common circumstances - they were the last of their kinds, carried over from timeline to timeline by incidents of grand cosmic magnitudes and cruel twists of Fate, forgotten and neglected, forced to eke out a living with whatever, wherever they landed; in this case, one - a world bereft of the comforts and conveniences they’d been spoiled with since the glorious golden age of Wangxian Co. Ltd.; two - a great imbalance of powers within them, consisting of abilities that they can no longer wield, and those that they cannot control, such as how a cat could liquefy people with its normal bites and scratches.

“Hush, children, let’s quickly eat our fill, and stuff our bellies whilst we still can, and while the precious Bag of Holding is still opened and availed to us,” the sage fire-ant chittered and lapped up the 51st century cane sugar it craved, thus rejuvenating its aged, creaky carapace-lined body with fresh new qi ; in terms of age and familiarity with the Kingdom’s ins and outs, the ant was probably standing at extremes of the proverbial fence; it was already around when little orphaned Wei Ying crawled the streets looking for scraps and fruit peels, its family suffered the most in having their anthills destroyed and wiped out in mass extinction events caused by that human, and later, was sprayed with insecticides or squashed by hands from either of the two men that ruled their Kingdom. It was insignificant in size and social standing in the hierarchy of the evolutionary ladder, but it was likely the greatest and longest-living survivor amongst them. Fate taught it to be patient, to be resilient in the face of insurmountable challenges, and to work hard and to save for rainy days at all times; the ant started to pocket extra cubes of glowing neon-purple sugars and crystalline gleaming blue salts into hidden pouches that it sewed using used insect moult.

Everyone watched the ant, and again, agreed that its way was the right way forward; the din calmed down, and all individuals from the trees to the grounds and the underground, continued their cherished feast. “You over there, black rabbit, you imply that you can do anything with your great powers and I can vouch from what I’d seen in the past, o’ shape-shifter originating from vile, tentacular cold black things... Can you do anything with your limited powers? Say, clone this Bag of Holding, create an underground empire filled with food and treasures, control the minds of all humans in the vicinity to do our bidding, and the like?” Calico asked as it used its paws to deftly twist open a child-proof lid of a glass jar, and shared the contents of steaming-hot grilled salmon, braised pork knuckles, seafood pasta, pizzas with cheese, bacon, tuna, pepperoni and other toppings, and a slew of other unearthly meat-based cuisines seemingly growing out of the vessel - typical 41st century food processing technology that transforms stuff into synthetic gaseous molecules and packed into a jar, which when re-opened, moisture from the atmosphere reconstitutes the molecules back to their original forms, at perfect temperatures and taste.

The black rabbit, having calmed down and resumed finishing the leaf of lettuce, shook its head. “Nay, fellow four-legger. I’m now but a sad example of brains with no brawns, of all talk but of no substance,” it shrugged in defeat and its forelegs sagged downwards, “Like many of you, most of my greatest magics, technological computing and incredible powers have been shackled by strange, unseen forces in this world, left pockmarked with Inabilities and Imbalances, and can only be properly called upon by the words of the two First Fathers. However, my Father refuses to acknowledge or even want such phenomenal possibilities offered by my services, and he goes off to every day to work in his realms, by performing his marital duties with my Mother. And speak not of my Mother, he... he...” a burst of whines and it rubbed its eyes furiously. The crow shook its head too, having reconciled their differences with the outpouring of the rabbit’s remorse, and placed a wing over the rabbit’s head, empathizing with its, now their, fates. “There, there,” it said with a soft caw, “I rue the days when I could fly free, raise the foul dead from the graves, and cause mischief and mindless destruction at my master’s and at my behest too, or even sneakily steal red underwear and be let off with a mere slap on the beak. Now, I think twice before taking any flight, lest I do not find my way back, if you know what I mean.” Those animals that had directly or indirectly served Wei Wuxian and Lan Wang Ji - there were dozens hiding behind the bushes, quietly eating without any complaints, such as ducks, goats, wild pigeons, foxes, wolves, and many more - blinked in understanding, like eerie yellow and dark red pairs of fireflies waiting in the midst of graveyard mists.

“However,” the black rabbit said and turned to his counterpart, the fluffy and cuddly smaller white rabbit, “My meimei is the most fortunate of all, as everyone already knows, in that her golden core and the entire repertoire of magics and abilities are intact. Still, however..." the black rabbit nudged at his little sister with his cute pink nose; the white rabbit, who was busily chewing on a piece of broccoli, paid no heed. The black one persisted, and continued to nose-bump her whiskered cheeks, quietly asking her to release the invisible strings that bound their powers. Sadly, she barely responded, and simply licked her brother's lips in curiosity - finding no lettuce or any greens to nibble on, she then hopped off to the Bag of Holding and sniffed at the bulging satchel for anything else she could munch on. That gesture caused the Bag to magically activate and open, and streams of tiny bits of food started to roll out on their own like an astonishing magical parade of good eats - fresh strawberries, chicken nuggets, fish fingers, french fries, beans, asparagus, leafy vegetables, rice balls and the ilk. Some of the denizens hiding in the forests emerged and chased after the escaped food, literally. A meteor shower appeared above them - wonders of wonders - as though to light up and to celebrate the amazing magical show she had conjured with an instinctive wiggle of her nose.

Lil' Apple sighed and bopped its snout on the white rabbit's head. She looked up, rubbed her whiskers with her tiny paws from the ticklish sensations, and licked the donkey in return - absolutely unaware, unintelligent, and innocent of everything that had gone wrong with their lives.

The council of surviving animals gathered solemnly around little Ni-er and shed a tear to bemoan her, now their, loss, while partaking in the newest loot from the Bag, which was even more than what Lil' Apple could excavate with its large snout. She was blissfully oblivious, of course, with insentient dark eyes staring into the deep of the night, eternally searching for something to nibble on.

In a story where the heroes had been consigned to mere sidekicks, Wei Ying had done everything right - to Lan Zhan's belated realization. Like proud parents sending their kids off to a new adventure on horsebacks, the camera pans out after the said parents waved good-bye so that the story continues with a focus on the young 'uns bravely making their first trip to the outside world - Si Zhui, Jing Yi, Jin Ling -, with the assuring knowledge that they're in good hands - Wen Ning, in particular. The parents, now with empty nests and left behind, and no longer relevant to the plot until, perhaps, at a later stage, would turn back and return to their tiny cottage, and, in all likelihood, simply wait, and wait, until the next major twist in the said plot.

From a different angle, Lan Zhan understood belatedly - he was trying to catch up and learn how to fit in this new reality of sorts -, the nascent new hero, Zewu Jun, was said to have been ambushed by mountain bandits setting off explosions at the top of cliffs, sending a torrent of snow tumbling down to his convoy of merchant carts, guards and disciples. The situation took for a worse, when traitors in their midst revealed their atrocious intentions to steal valuables, and kidnap wise men that would fetch a handsome ransom. He pursued them with all his heart and might, determined to save his people from an untimely end, and ended up at the base camp of the bandits.

"Wow! That's intriguing! A deep cave in the middle of the mountains, where greedy brigands gather - and they even hired mercenaries to disguise and infiltrate our ranks! Such cold, calculated planning and execution! Surely they must have a brilliant leader and an army of capable warriors in there!" Wei Ying exclaimed, excited to be regaled with a tale of fantasy, adventure, mystery and of spectacular fights of competing cultivation powers, fit for novels for young adults. He slurped on his nth cup of vermicelli and wheat noodles stewed in meat broth, slices of fatty pork, root vegetables and a smattering of condiments and garnishing. Lan Zhan noticed the claypot bubbling on the portable stove (never mind that the stove was not of their time era), and quickly chopped up large bamboo segments to fashion elongated cups that can contain as much food as a serving of cup noodles each. Bichen made quick work of the smaller stalks, turning them into fine chopsticks and spoons for everyone.

Qi Ren shifu had finished his cup and extended a bruised, bandaged arm to silently demand for another; he had never tasted such flavourful broth in his life, what more with added MSG that seemed to explode with umami and other exotic savouriness with each chew and swallow. “Huh! Xi Chen is the darling hero of the day! The two of us stood our ground at the locked gates to the fortress carved into the mountainside, and made sure the villains’ bosses couldn’t find peace from sunrise till sunset!” he interjected with pride, and puffed out his chest - and promptly fell into a fit of coughs.

Lan Zhan felt a longing for hot-blooded fights from his youthful days, when his uncle narrated how the bandits unleashed rains of arrows, boulders and spears, lightning bolts and fireballs, poisoned smoke and swarms of stinging insects, then with no other options, released their champions and their summons to fight off the two greatest practitioners of the Gusu Lan cultivation arts.

“Trolls! Ogres! Giant goblins! The Four Villainous Horrors of the Northern Mountains! The Six Witches of the Southern Lakes! Mystical black flying horses, silver serpents and legendary firebirds! Zombie snakes and spectral bears! Wow! No wonder the two of you spent nearly ten hours fighting non-stop!” Wei Ying jumped in his seat like an eight-year old on steroid-laced candies.

The younger of the Twin Jades quietly served dinner to the men, listening intently, and deep inside, lamenting the missed opportunity to have a slice of the action for himself. Zewu Jun provided some details over the enjoyable simple hot meal - he'd missed lunch, after all - of the enemies they encountered, and how they finally broke through the fortress-like structure when the last adversarial champion fell to its knees - however, as with any dramatic cliffhangers of great novels, they found out that the bandits had vacated their stronghold by then, and left clues that they intended to take the hostages further north, bordering the province of Lanling. "Here," the Sect Leader said, and unveiled a scroll from his sleeve pocket - an ancient, dog-eared map! -, "Amongst the discarded relics and broken furniture left by the thieves, we found many such maps, some seem to be leading to hidden treasures, and some, to other hideouts in other districts and provinces."

Wei Ying's eyes sparkled as much as he burped from downing three cups of noodles, "Really! That means we're dealing with a network of criminals and evil-doers larger than a just bunch of robbers! Oh wow! Oh wow! This must be linked to the scandal that was reported earlier today, of defecting Council members, their servants and bodyguards fleeing the scene with gold ingots stored in the sect's treasury! Oh, oh, what if these terrible outlaws are also responsible for the poisoning plague?"

Qi Ren shifu sighed and stroked his beard, still holding a freshly refilled serving of food with the other hand, "It's disheartening and disturbing to know that evil has infested within our sect's Council, but given what we've learnt today, I am not surprised. On one hand, I'm tempted to rush back home to check on things - however, on the other hand, we must reach Caiyi as soon as possible and get in touch with the sect that the apothecary owner belonged to. That man, a peer of mine in terms of age, may have been carried far, far away from here, but through deliberations yesterday, I got to know he is from a sister sect of ours with a branch in Caiyi. I may be able to find old friends there to learn more about the plague."

The Master then, unexpectedly, handed the cup of noodles to Lan Zhan. “Wang Ji,” he said and cocked his head towards the nephew’s direction, “You haven’t eaten anything since we reunited. Is anything troubling you? You look anxious; speak your mind so that perhaps your appetite may return. Is it because of the injuries your elder brother and I sustained during the fights with the monsters? Or is it because of the many problems and puzzles that beleaguer us right now?”

Lan Zhan lowered his gaze in respect, and Wei Ying watched him closely. The younger of the Twin Jades hesitated, but eventually accepted the noodles. From afar, Lil’ Apple quietly carried a tray with a steaming pot of pu’er tea and approached the campfire; as usual, none of the men noticed its excellent butler service.

“Mn. Wang Ji is fine. There’s just... too many things happening at once, and I feel helpless, and do not know what to do next,” he sighed, truly clueless. He did not say why he avoided having the noodles - besides the fact that he was traumatized by the sight of the innocuous strings of wheat flour, he also thought of cutting down on his diet, lest his paunch grew larger day by day.

Wei Ying seized the moment, “Well, well! For one, we should head to Caiyi anyway since there are appointments scheduled and deadlines to meet; there’s no telling how well the juniors will be able to keep those laoban s entertained until they figure out that we’ve got less than promised to sell. We worked hard to salvage a cart of minerals, and now that the Gusu Lans are poorer than paupers, we need to make the best of what we have. The corrupt thieves have done their evil deed in the Cloud Recesses and fled the scene, so there’s no point in going back to inspect and mourn the losses. What do you say, Zewu Jun?”

The older of the Twin Jades placed his cup on the ground, and didn't realize the donkey had filled it with tea - so he took a sip and enjoyed the beverage that warmed his bones, after a long day of traversing wintry weather and enduring long, tedious fights. "Hmm. I concur with your point, Wei gongzi," he replied, and looked to the horizon at the direction of mist-covered mountain peaks where his hometown was safely nestled in, now merely dotted with tiny specks of torches, watch tower fires, and hardly discernible from the twinkling stars of the night sky above. Another breeze blew, the howl of wolves echoed from somewhere in the distance, and all men tightened their thick outer robes - it was going to be a cold night, indeed. "We'll stick to our original plan of trading the goods and earn enough for our expedition and for the sect, investigate the poisoning plague, then return to rest and stock up, before pursuing the bandits to the north. If there's a ransom note for our captured men, I'll be the first to hear about it," he added resolutely, eyes gleaming with the flicker of the campfire stove, and he downed his cup in a single gulp.

Wei Ying made a little victory jig, as evidenced by a twirl of his walking cane from where he sat on a rocky outcropping - he had at least diverted the two older Gusu Lans from checking in on the Cloud Recesses, where an intensive decontamination and reconstruction operation was underway. "Yes, yes!" he chipped in merrily, and pointed to himself like an aloof fool, "Don't forget, call me by my alternate persona starting tomorrow! I'm Lan Wu Ji, the greatest Masked Hero and Mysterious Merchant Extraordinaire to have walked on this earth!" In which, Master Lan Qi Ren rolled his eyes and wanted to spit out any half-chewed noodles, but he settled down to his own cup of tea; the old man understood that if they were to pull this through, they would have to set aside their differences and work together, Lan surname be damned.

Lan Zhan started to feel the weight of self-inflicted stress upon himself; he knew both he and his spouse were playing second fiddle to the protagonists of the story, and Wei Ying had figured out a way to elevate himself to a nearly equal playing field - as the mysterious man named Lan Wu Ji who would at least take care of the trade negotiations - which would probably take place off-screen, due to the lack of action in these kind of acts -, and leave the exciting, intriguing investigation of the plague to the said protagonists. That meant Lan Zhan was relegated to the litter of the runt, with no plans on how to contribute to the resolution of the problems they faced, with no particular roles he could play, and in all likelihood, he would have to continue acting as an embarrassing wife-y to his significant other and simply play a supportive role to the supporter.

Lil' Apple nudged from behind and Lan Zhan blinked. Its snout went below an arm and lifted, prompting the man to look up towards where his arm was being forced to point.

A beautiful meteor shower passed by, quietly with grace, brief enough to be missed by the other three men who had descended into more serious discussions of what to do, where to go, and what to shop for, for the next day. Lan Zhan contemplated at his situation, and hoped the heavens were giving him the strength and courage need to survive the coming expedition - he expected his subjects in the Realms of the Gods to do their best and chart a plausible route for him to take, to keep up his dignity and reputation, and to keep any dangers and further humiliation at bay. He started listing down the things he needed to do the next couple of hours - packing up, harnessing the donkey to pull the cart of minerals, improvise another cart for his uncle and older brother to rest in during the overnight trip, and a tough question of whether his beloved Wei Ying would prefer to ride the burdened donkey or, as a hopeful wish, ask for a piggyback ride that reminisced better days in their lives.

Wei Ying did read Lan Zhan's mind - because he still could, unbeknownst to all -, and sensed a bit of discontent from the donkey that made whining noises even while being harnessed. Lil' Apple would be tasked to pull two carts - one for the minerals, one for two Gusu Lan men - with a fishing rod tied to an apple dangling in front of it. Wei Ying happily clung onto his wife-y and settled in for a nice spooning snuggle for the night upon the said wife-y's back, whilst whispering sweet and naughty things into one reddened ear, and giving shy, intimate nibbles on the other, throughout the journey, and out of earshot from the two prim and proper Lan family members.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 153

Giving Wei Ying a piggyback on a long haul journey on foot turned out to be more therapeutic, cathartic and insightful than Lan Zhan initially believed. With both arms gripping around Wei Ying's thighs, Bichen and qiankun pouch filled with his remaining life savings swaying lazily from his sash with each heavy thudding step, his Bag of Holding satchel hung cross the front of the torso like a fashionable man bag, and he was dressed in two layers of thick robes with the third outermost draped over Wei Ying like a shared cozy blanket for two - Lan Zhan felt like he had all the comforts in his life weighing on him, and that made him pleased and feeling at ease; the Bag of Holding did feel strangely lighter after dinner, and he attributed it to how many packets of instant noodles inhaled by Wei Ying's bottomless appetite - there was nary a thing to worry about, though, since a quick Fairy Messenger call to his Kingdom in the Heavens made sure everything was magically replenished in time, and checked off in tip top condition.

"Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, aren't you tired? You've been carrying all this...stuff, and me, and pulling the reins for Lil' Apple for nearly half an hour in this dreadfully cold night, don't you feel aching all over?"

It had only been a short time since they left their campsite (and the conveniently forgotten portable stove - the fugitive Dream-animals scored another item for their survival), the gradual downhill gradient was easy to navigate with little effort, and the donkey had been surprisingly cooperative - Lil' Apple naturally displayed its best behaviours for the Hanguang Jun, as opposed to the physically, emotionally and sexually abusive Wei Wuxian -, so really, Lan Zhan had nothing to complain about. If anything, Lan Zhan felt unsettled at Wei Ying's perpetually feather-light weight - all those noodles, snacks and extra servings did nothing to fatten up his beloved man; though, Lan Zhan could feel his own sash bursting its seams with just one measly portion of food, and he cursed his increasingly rotund appearance.

“Mn. It is fine. Rest for now, and talk less, Wei Ying.”

That advice went unheeded, as expected. Wei Ying nnngh’d and fidgeted, apparently getting bored from the rather peaceful, windy descent down the mountains, step by step, and through featureless fog-blanketed landscapes. There was nothing interesting to see in the dark, everything was covered in shades of monotonous blacks and dark greys, there were no particular threatening sounds of rustling in the grasses or growls of predators, the air was crisp and clean, and the chill in the air was a bit refreshing, as well as sleep-inducing. Lan Zhan knew the trail and its surroundings like the back of his hand, so there was no need to be overly cautious about walking off cliffs or tripping over rocks.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, until we reach the next waypoint, can I play with you?”

Lan Zhan sighed. He was Wei Ying’s playground after all, and he hoped the younger man wouldn’t do anything that would raise more than eyebrows from the two accompanying protagonists of their story.

“Mn. With restraint, Wei Ying.”

Wei Ying squealed softly in joy and giggled into Lan Zhan’s reddened ears. He nuzzled into the long lush hair, nibbled and licked into both ears, blew hot air and chuckle-y whispers of naughty things into the shell of those victimized ears, and if he tried hard enough, he could use the tip of his tongue to lick the edges of the older man’s growing beard and moustache too. His legs crossed, uncrossed and locked themselves repeatedly around Lan Zhan's waist, like a slut trying to straddle a man to sexual death - the latter could feel a growing hard-on stiff against his back -, the balls of his feet annoyingly jiggled the love handles around Lan Zhan's fleshy midriff, and toes creep and down the navel, causing ticklish seizures to run along the poor man's abdomen; his hands were busy as well, groping Lan Zhan's breasts, squeezing the nipples, massaging them in generous circles until they swelled, and fingertips ghosted across the ribs just to hear a few extra tasty nnnngh-Wei Ying-stop-please grunts coming out from the throat. Eventually, Wei Ying settled for giving Lan Zhan a nice massage on the shoulders and biceps, adorably chirping "Like you!" (喜欢你!) into each ear alternately, as a reasonable thank-you for the day's hard work.

Not too far behind, Qi Ren shifu rolled his eyes and hmmph-ed in scorn at the brazen, lascivious acts in plain sight, while Zewu Jun kept trying to restrain his smile - and managed a polite upturn of lips for most of the time. The older men sat cross-legged in a makeshift wagon of sorts - a simple flat base made from salvaged boardwood attached to an axle and two creaky wheels -, where they meditated, cast healing spells on themselves, and cultivated qi energy to refill their depleted reserves. Zewu Jun glowed with golden hues in the dark, and that helped to light up their way, enough for Lan Zhan to safely take them to the next stop, which was a Lan family favourite picnic spot located adjacent to natural hot springwater pools.

Zewu Jun's seat faced to the back so that he could keep an eye on the last mineral-laden cart; as soon as they descended quite a bit, the entire view of the site of the avalanche became quite apparent - and shocking, to some extent.

"That's strange. Now that I remembered how things looked in the morning when the landslide and the sea of ice struck, and compared to this magnificent but puzzling imagery... it looks like the remnants of the avalanche seemed to cut off close to the bottom to reveal the barren, exposed brown dirt. It's as though someone cleaved the snowed grounds and scooped up all the ice... I didn't realize during dinnertime how snow-free that place was, as though Spring had reached those pristine grounds before its time. How is this possible?" Zewu Jun remarked with wide-eyed curiosity, and even Master Lan Qi Ren turned around to have a better glance despite his aging eyesight.

At that precise moment, Lil' Apple snorted and bucked its hindquarters - and let off a loud, windy fart straight into the direction of the two Gusu Lan men.

Master Lan Qi Ren fell into another fit of hacking coughs - one could always blame the cold weather and respiratory problems typical of old men; Zewu Jun was startled by the rude sound, wrinkled his nose and turned around to face the offending ass, literally. Then, suddenly, he perked up.

"Ah, what were we talking about just now? The picnic spot, right?"

Qi Ren shifu scratched his head in a brief flash of confusion, and nodded once, uncertainly.

"Yes, yes," Zewu Jun clapped his hands once, as though a fog had cleared from his mind - in some strange ways - and started to reminisce about his childhood days of having communal picnics at the hot springs. Qi Ren shifu settled down and added about how children were so innocent back then, running in the nude and diving, playing with the curative waters all day under the watchful eyes of parents.

At the front of the downsized convoy, Wei Ying shot a dirty look at Lil' Apple. The donkey turned its bad-assery face towards him and gave him a very, very unnerving toothy grin with both gums and teeth showing, wordlessly saying "Nya, nya, you owe me one!", in which the man retorted by sticking out his tongue at the animal. Lan Zhan, on the other hand, started to turn into more shades of shameful reds when his uncle started narrating about how a boy named Wang Ji once lost his swimming pants in the hot springs, and had to run back home with only a few leaves tied around his privates, only to be caught red-handed by a passing-by discipline teacher - because it was forbidden to run in the hallways - and was forced to stand, in his naked glory, on a pedestal located at the entrance to the crowded school for an entire morning.

Wei Ying giggled, and forgot about his grudges against animals that bested him in the game of wits and magic.

.

With two heroic, elder Lans in tow, the group was more inclined to act more politely, reserved and with decorum in the presence of each other, until, of course, they were out of earshot. When they reached their destination, Wei Ying loudly marvelled at the picturesque countryside hot springs resort suitable for families and children, with bubbling pools and steaming puddles everywhere, a few simple huts and pavilions near the center with sparse furnishings, and the property was nicely flanked with bamboo groves along its edges for added privacy.

“It’s a pity that the juniors are in a hurry to Caiyi and have missed this beautiful place... well, it would be more beautiful, if we’re here during the daytime to admire the cherry blossoms and sprouting greens, under the shade of these minimalistic but functional buildings over here, and watch the rugged nature of colourful mineral-rich ponds bursting into geysers periodically,” Zewu Jun tried his best to show Wei Ying with a sweeping arc of hands, but of course, they could hardly make out any details in the darkness, save for a few flickering torches that Lan Zhan lit, and the tell-tale gurgling whoosh of fountains of boiling hot waters from certain underwater vents.

Wei Ying ran to Lan Zhan and grabbed his hands. “Lan Zhan! Lan Zhan! Can we? Can we stay overnight and wake up to sunrise in this place that you brother described as beautiful? I really want to see it!” he pleaded cutely with a pout.

Lan Zhan looked up to his older brother, clearly in a bit of distraught since he had no say to the group’s matters. Zewu Jun clamped his mouth, perhaps regretting for over-advertising their family’s favourite tourist spot in the midst of their sect’s crisis. He turned to their uncle and Qi Ren shifu’s gaze quickly alternated between puppy-eyed Wei Ying, distressed Wang Ji and a guilt-wrecked Xi Chen. He sighed tiredly, and waved an arm. “Prepare a bath for me, my woollen pyjamas, and make sure we eat well for tomorrow’s breakfast, before leaving this place,” he grunted.

Xi Chen da ge nodded, and made a few late-night Fairy Messenger calls to postpone some meetings in town, Wei Ying immediately slid a hand into Lan Zhan’s robes and groped about - Lan Zhan made a girly squeal when cold fingernails grazed his erect pink nipples -, then pulled out a stowed Paperman talisman and an ink-brush. He hissed at the older man to cast an Energy spell, while quickly penning down a short message to the juniors to be patient and wait a day more, and with a twirl of Lan Zhan's fingers, the primitive walking, floating and flying SMS message was promptly sent off.

Later, the group of four found a network of steaming hot ponds and bubbling brooks, where they could soak up and wash down, before adjourning to their choice of private pools. The oldest made it clear that he was fine for Wei Ying to crawl all over Lan Zhan in the comfort of their private corner, as long as the deplorable act wasn't done in his line of sight; in fact, ever since Wei Ying awoke in the Jingshi, he noticed that the old man had become much more tolerance of his presence and his relationship with Lan Zhan, and Wei Ying thought it could be due to Lan Zhan relinquishing his special and promising role as leader and heir to the elder brother - thus, all eyes and attention shifted to Xi Chen da ge , and Lan Zhan was, in some ways, free to do what he wanted in life. It was a heavy reputational price to pay for Lan Zhan, Wei Ying imagined with a twinge of guilt in his heart, and he endeavoured to make that price worth the sacrifice for the sake of their love for one another.

Everyone was courteous and had a washcloth wrapped below the waists. They enjoyed having natural volcanic warmth seep into their bones, relished in the healing powers of the waters over scars, bandaged wounds, bruises and muscle aches, and benefited from having their complexion improved and skin moistened and turned supple from the ever-present steamy air. Lan Zhan thought that Wei Ying looked exceptionally sensual in the dim light, with wet hair sticking to the nape of his neck, a demure pouty face, glittering droplets hanging from the nubs on the thin chest and beading everywhere else like jewels on the surface of crystalline rocks, waters lapping the small of his back, camouflaging alluring curves of flesh beneath the swirling veils. When he stared for too long, Wei Ying would sneak a hand to Lan Zhan's bell pepper-shaped buttocks and give him a nasty pinch - in which Lan Zhan nnnh's softly with his eyes closed, because they wife-y has a masochistic streak in him -, before his uncle or older brother noticed the said rude, lecherous staring that probably breaks at least three Lan family rules.

Some serious discussions took place, mostly between the three eldest men, about their plans for the next day and of some mundane Gusu Lan family topics, and Wei Ying listened intently without rudely barging in - except when they touched on the subject of the mysterious personality named Lan Wu Ji, and everyone received a lecture on what an amazing, marvellous fictional character he was. Qi Ren shifu was skeptical to say the least, Ze Wu Jun simply shook his head with a resigned, but accepting smile - they agreed to play Wei Ying's game of pretend and let him have his fun to try and bankrupt shrewd laoban s and dodgy merchants, with Lan Zhan guarding his side - and probably his back, in case anyone wanted to seek revenge.

By ten at night, it was way beyond every Lan's bedtime. The two eldest men took leave and bid good-night - perhaps out of familial habits, or in their yawning, stretching, drowsy state, they climbed out of the pool without their washcloths on, and Wei Ying got an eyeful of very muscular, body-licious glistening sinewy biceps, pecs, eight pack abs and glutes, even on the shifu rumoured to be in his late fifties. The youngest man gawked at how perfect Xi Chen da ge 's body appeared, the tasty bulges and veins bronzed against the soft amber light of dying torches.

Lan Zhan cleared his throat and tightened his grip around Wei Ying's waist - they had been cuddling and groping each other, to the detriment of Master Lan Qi Ren's blood-sputtering and skyrocketing blood pressure, nearly all night in the pools - the Twin Jade fastened his hands around Wei Ying, lest the man was tempted to leave as well, follow the newfound wizened, mature and daddy-like sex-gods to their respective rooms and commit unspeakable thefts of male virginites and incestuous crimes against them.

"Wei Ying, no."

He whipped around and flashed a grin, followed by an obvious lick of lips. "Why do you say that, er gongzi ? Are you perhaps... jealous?" he asked, and started to pull away.

Lan Zhan gave a vague, non-discerning, petulant Hnnnh!, but refused to release his chokehold around his beloved's midriff. He looked away, avoiding eye contact in a silent agreement to the accusation that yes, he was jealous because he sported one flabby pack instead of the legendary six or eight, and that provoked a burst of rude guffaws from Wei Ying.

When Wei Ying regained his breath and composure, he held up the flushed spouse's hands, then in a shockingly inappropriate move, thrust their entwined fingers straight into the rippling waters and at their crotches.

"My dear wife-y, you are really jealous and want to punish me, and yet there's no one else around in these pools. Don't you know? You don't have to follow your family's strict rules if there's no one watching..."

This time, Lan Zhan did look up. There was an unnatural hunger gleaming in Wei Ying's dark brown eyes, and the stillness of the cold night, the quickening puffs of breathes and pulses accentuated the sudden heat in the atmosphere. When Wei Ying bit his lower lip while waiting for a drawn-out answer, the Twin Jade cursed his body for responding at that minute, coy gesture with extraordinary flair - his arousal stood up to full mast almost instantly; nothing can ever quench that fire in his loins, really.

"Lan Zhan, you are so dense and slow sometimes," Wei Ying finally broke the brief spell of awkwardness and silence, and disengaged from their cuddle; Lan Zhan gasped not in alarm but from the twinge of pain from having his swollen, hard penis pulled upward like the nose of a farm bull put to work; Wei Ying was every bit intent in dragging the oblivious man to a more private part of the hot springs, preferably behind some rocks so that nobody could see nor hear their obscene antics.

"Come, Lan Zhan, you bad-ass fucking machine, let's have you make lots of love with this horny husband of yours, knock him up, and make lots of babies inside your lao gong !" Wei Ying cackled lewdly and began to use Lan Zhan's hand to masturbate his own darkening, engorged hairy genitals.

Two minutes later, as prophesied by Wei Ying, two washcloths drifted on the poolside waters uselessly, and the background was filled with tasty aaahns and ooohs of a husband getting drilled and impregnated by a virile, chubby, moustached bearded but otherwise body-hairless, and very excited, very happy (house)wife-y - in particular, the over-six inch turgid meatstick that kept jerking Yes, Yes, Deeper And Faster Yes'es, schlicking and plundering the husband's incredibly hot and tight love canal, until more volleys of fertile wife-sperms ready themselves for the ultimate delight of breeding, bedding and fathering many healthy fat babies inside the husband.

Lan Zhan reckoned he had orgasmed and emptied his barren testicles - man-eggs - at least another twenty times before the stroke of midnight, leaving him a writhing mess of shuddering limbs, shaking pelvises, cramping glutes, his face ensnared in a perpetual grimace of ugly half-snarls, half-growls, half-yawns and half-sneezes, of oily sweat mixing with violently splashing springwaters, of roaring " Lao gong, I can't hold back, I'm... I'm cumming!", in which the naughty husband squeezed his ass fondly around the tirelessly pistoning molten fecund rod, clenching muscles undulated against an incredibly excited one-two'ing penis, coaxing it to unleash its pressurized, creamy load, then finally, followed by thirty sweet, sweet grunts of wife-ly inseminating convulsions, spasming man-eggs, back seizing and locking into a painful concave arch, waves after waves of muscular penile muscles sweeping up the dying member, ejaculating seed and other heated bodily fluids that had accumulated since the afternoon, of the wife's chest and cheeks flushing into blossoming sexy reds and hot pinks as the desperate man spilled repeatedly, wanting nothing more than to have his beautiful baby Lan Zhans kiss and bump into baby Wei Yings to nonsensically conceive millions, billions of new babes who will have their mother's pretty eyes and father's handsome face; of masculine toes curling, fingers grasping madly in the frothy, increasingly milky waters, his overheated soul burning, burning in the fires of pleasurable lusts, launching high into the night sky, a spectacular comet that propelled its way through space, galaxies and the ends of cosmos, spinning madly as it crashed and burned its way through realities--

The Emperor of the Kingdom in the Realms of the Gods clocked in for work that night, while his body continued to be tenderly serviced and loved by his husband on the Mortal Realm, long after the clock struck twelve.

.

Wei Ying woke up to a marvellous buffet breakfast in bed on a messy sex-scented nest made of Lan Zhan's thick outer robes on the floor; the hut they stayed overnight was a plain, empty room with four walls, table and chairs, and nothing else. To the young man, the journey thus far, serviced by the exceptionally talented and multi-tasking wife-y, formerly a forcibly-taken bride, felt no different from his days of lazing all day in the Jingshi, interspersed with bits of adventures and short-range explorations. To Lan Zhan, however, he felt the revival of a long-lost flame of wanderlust that had been extinguished since he took an oath of non-intervention on the matters of the mundane, and of the cultivation world; he was already up at five - notwithstanding the numerous time-travels between the hours of sleep, because he simply couldn't bear to part from bedding his lovely Wei Ying even after days, weeks or months of non-stop crazy explosive sex - and fortunately, had the chance to spend quality time with Xi Chen to make breakfast for the family of four, and prepare their onward journey. Lan Zhan thought it was weird that his Bag of Holding deflated once again like a punctured tyre - no biggie, another Fairy Messenger call, and it was refilled, as usual.

Wei Ying remained in a sleep-hazed state for a while, yawning frequently and stretching his aching back and hips, and remarked that he had a wonderful night dreaming of things he couldn't remember - but those dreams were pornographic, he claimed. Lan Zhan was relieved, because he couldn't fathom how the husband could digest information related to space-time fluxes and breaking of time-fate barriers; due to Wei Ying's weakened condition and Lan Zhan's generous tampering of the man's memories - the use of Inabilities were just one of the many tactics used to control Wei Ying's sad, sad, life -, Wei Ying would suffer from moments of clarity - when he remembered bits of his past -, and enjoy the rest of his days in blissful ignorance and dumbed-down, sexual fun - when he acted like an adorable, romantic fool who wanted Lan Zhan's complete attention and love, and nothing else.

“Lan Zhan, my lovely lao po ,” he grinned while scratching his hairy groin, and the other man nnngh'd at the constant use of the offending honorific, because damn the Heavens he was just as manly as Wei Ying too, “You made so many tasty baked breads, bowls of spicy pork congee, perfectly cut salads and fruits, and even steak omelettes for me, but I'm missing my favourite grilled sausage and twin hard boiled eggs.”

Lan Zhan sighed, and put down the tray with a cup of warm soymilk on a table. Then, he closed the sole door of the hut, and loosened his trouser's drawstrings. The flimsy material fell to the floor, and to Wei Ying's gleeful delight, the wife-y did not put on any underwear that morning.

"Mmm. I want my two buns of steel too. Shaken, not stirred."

Lan Zhan obediently spun around, went on a lowered, half-squat stance, and flirtatiously twerked his buttocks, to the amusement of the cackling man. The laughter eventually died when Wei Ying watched how a hand reached to the front between those flexing thighs and started to masturbate furiously until the said veiny sausage thickened, spasmed and grew to impressive lengths, and those eggs started to twitch to life, rising and quivering in their protective sacks.

"Yum yum! Lao po , you naughty temptress, you made me hungry again! Feed me!" Wei Ying squealed and opened his mouth wide with an endearing "Aaahhhh". Lan Zhan grabbed his meatstick with one pumping fist, and his other hand jiggled and rolled his balls excitedly, and he aimed his increasingly sweaty pelvis straight at the younger man's waiting jaws - it was time to feed lovely Wei Ying with the wife-y's morning man-milk.

Wei Ying naughtily whipped out a straw from one of the pyjama's pockets and made his lips pucker. Lan Zhan's terribly self-centered erect penis one-two'ed with excessive excitement.

.

Xi Chen da ge arrived at the couple's hut to check whether everyone had eaten their fill and ready for a guided tour around the hot springs resort as promised, at eight.

“Wang Ji? I’ve washed our clothes and dried them with magic,” he said while giving the closed, heavy wooden door a few knocks. The huts were meant as shelters from bad weather or for families to enjoy vacations in that area, and so, they were equipped with proper doors, windows and sparse furniture for public use. “Do you or Wei gongzi need a change of clothes before we move out?” he asked.

After a moment of silence, then of something hitting a wooden chair or table, followed by a string of curses in Gusu dialect, and “Aaah, not so hard!”, a pitter-patter of footsteps later, the door was unlocked clumsily with plenty of knocks and bangs in-between, and Lan Zhan’s red-flushed, rosy-cheeked face peered out from between a crack in the opening. He breathed heavily - gasping for air, like a fish out of the water -, and his gaze was dreamy, even glazed.

“Nnnh... c-- can you leave it... on the floor?” his eyes darted between behind the door and his elder brother, who was taken aback by the sight of the dishevelled (and sexually ravaged) didi. “Massage... Wei Ying, needs it...” and suddenly, Lan Zhan’s eyes rolled to the back and he aaahn’ed like a woman in the midst of touching herself, then seizures wriggled up and down his body - which was fortunately hidden from view by the sturdy door. He turned around and hissed a plea to “Let go!”.

Xi Chen smiled with a sigh. He understood that his little brother gave daily massages to strengthen Wei Ying’s body, and sometimes, the two would tumble around the bedroom in, what he thought as, a game of friendly wrestling between best buddies. “Alright, ge will leave it on the porch. Don’t forget to freshen up and pack your things before you go. Uncle’s planning to take a walk in half-hour’s time, Wang Ji,” he calmly instructed, and left soon after while humming an old Gusu folk tune.

The clothes were grabbed by a sweaty hand, and the door closed instantly with a resounding click!

“Tee hee hee! That was your tenth loss, versus my three! Lan Zhan, you’re shooting faster than a master archer, and you’re leaking more impressively than a garden hose turned on! Ha ha ha!” Wei Ying laughed. The two men returned to their passionate sixty-nine love-making on the floor, rolling around, bumping into furniture and walls like entwined aroused male snakes trying to rape each other to death; at some point, Lan Zhan was in tears and sobs, his body reddened from multitude waves of multiple orgasms running through his short-circuited sexual meridians; he’d crawled on the floor on all fours, with giggling Wei Ying tailing from behind, lips, fingers and tongue relentlessly suckling, licking and polishing-rubbing the burnt-out naughty bits until they smoked; Lan Zhan tried to escape, but in the small hut of four walls and the key in Wei Ying’s possession, there was nowhere to run - he resigned to his fate as the helpless wife-y to be sexually abused by the husband, to the latter’s wishes and whims; so Lan Zhan eventually gave up and sat against one wall, and spread his naked legs wantonly like a true male slut - a welcomed gesture, and an invitation for husband-Wei Ying to attack his genitals until Lan Zhan’s privates overflowed and dried up to become a husk of its former self, and devilish Wei Ying became fully satiated, even burped rudely to show his satisfaction, in more ways than one.

Lan Zhan would lose again and again to Wei Ying’s expert hand and oral blowjobs for the next half-hour, until the said engorged, jerking over-six inch sausage exploded and split from having its tip played too hard, too fast, too much, then flopped and wilted like a dead seedling, and until the twin hard-boiled eggs overcook in their boiling vibrating sacks, then cracked and spilled everything into the throat of the greedy, eager lover, leaving only two wrinkly pitifully drained prunes dangling uselessly between the legs, to the victorious delight of the younger, more enthusiastic man.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 154

“Wang Ji, our family rules say that you shouldn’t run around, but as custodian of the sacred Rules, I will decree that tip-toeing like an exotic dancer will also be prohibited, if you do not stop doing that,” Qi Ren shifu exclaimed with disdain, as he watched with utter contempt and disappointment at his younger nephew’s behaviour. The man in question walking in front and leading the way for the quartet, however, didn’t seem to hear his words.

“No, no, shushu. Didi isn’t tip-toeing, in fact, he’s literally floating off the ground. Can you not see how the soles of his shoes do not touch the ground?” Xi Chen explained, and pointed to the direction of his little brother’s feet with the tip of his xiao flute.

“What mad sorcery is this?! Only ghosts hover over the ground like that, and I’m sure Wang Ji hasn’t gone to the afterlife and bought a home in the Heavens!” the aging uncle shook his head in disbelief; he squinted his eyes into creased slits but it was difficult to confirm the state of his nephew’s anti-gravity-lessness due to the long robes. The shifu was correct on both accounts, though, since the man named Lan Wang Ji is, in fact, the Emperor residing in the Heavens, and his loins has pretty much signed out in life and died many times, from climaxing in torrential bursts, for a total of not less than a twenty-four thousand times times in the past twenty-four hours.

Xi Chen shrugged, and pointed his xiao flute towards a clump of bamboo. “Who’s to say what happened to my dear brother? This morning he was perfectly fine, albeit a little out of breath and sweating from giving relaxing massages to the Wei gongzi as usual,” he murmured, then perked up and shouted, “Wei Ying, over there, at the pond near the bamboo bush. Frogs and fishes tend to hide in there, in the mud and in the shade, and many young Lan boys crowd that area to catch them, especially during my childhood.” A second later, Wei Ying, who was perpetually hanging at the back of the group because of his onerous curiosity for all things moving, twitching and living, zipped by in leaps and bounds, and promptly crashed into the said bamboo grove with a squeal and a splash of shallow waters, soon, peppered by a shower of fallen cherry blossom petals from a nearby tree. Xi Chen smiled at the man’s antics; he probably scared away the frogs, stepped on the fishes, and appeared with a crown full of pale pink flowers, as a result.

Lan Zhan, on the other hand, raised his arms as though he was welcoming the skies and the morning sunlight; his freshly cleaned white robes shimmered in translucent golden hues as though he was painted in godly, angelic light, and gusts of crisp, chilled breezes sent blossoms swirling around him like an invisible, muted hurricane of newfound enlightenment, spiritual energy and rising consciousness beyond the mortal and the mundane; he tilted his chin upwards in a rather meditative state, and starting humming “Omm... Omm...”. Both older men swore Lan Zhan rose nearly a feet off the ground in his giddy light-headed state.

“Huh. That good-for-nothing probably got the message from Wei Ying, and not the other way round, judging from the way he is right now. He looks so relaxed and uncaring of the world around him, his qi is brimming to the tip, and his material weight is non-existent, from what my senses are telling me; it’s as though he’s transcended across worlds or something as ridiculous as that,” the shushu wasn’t amused at all at what had befallen the sexually traumatized, victimized man named Lan Wang Ji.

Xi Chen barked out a polite laugh, and gestured to the grumpy uncle to continue their walk through the parks, lakes and picturesque cherry blossoms and bamboo trees surrounding the Lans’ favourite hot springs resort.

Later, Wei Ying ran to the front of the pack, stuck a tongue into Lan Zhan's ear to shock him into submission - sort of -, and in a moment of lapsed judgement, the latter left his pants unguarded - so, Wei Ying naughtily pulled open Lan Zhan's drawstrings to reveal the nether regions - he slid a fist into the unknowing man's loincloth (the boxers were soiled, and he, or Wei Ying, didn't bring that many extra pairs of undies for their trip - so a box of ten-pack loincloths was put to good use), then he shrieked like an eight-year old who had committed a juvenile crime and bounded for the bushes like a monkey. Qi Ren shifu shook his head and rather than worry about what the two men were up to, he stood for a bit to admire the cherry blossom trees, the invigorating freshness of sweet floral scents and misty mountain air, the sensations of tendrils of wind tickling one's skin, and the sounds of nature playing its orchestra in the background of morning chirps and tweets and the rustling of hundred-year old trees. Xi Chen, who was becoming a little too familiar with Wei Ying's random slapstick and vulgar comedy, decided to walk off the trail for a moment and observe some native birds feeding on the grass seedlings and bathing in some puddles fed by morning dewdrops and drizzles from the night before.

Lan Zhan continued on the path of the walking trail, Omm-ing peacefully to the rhythm of a fistful of wet, sticky, slimy little fishes and frogs and their younglings wiggling vigorously inside his loincloth, though his rising pitch and hitched breathing seemed to indicate otherwise. His soul had already left the Mortal Realm, working overtime in his alternate job as the King of a vast empire, and the extreme weightlessness in his pelvic region evidenced his transcendent state - the body lives, but barely conscious, just enough to sustain its existence in that world and nothing more. Thus, when little fishies nibbled and caressed the once-again-dying-penis glans furiously and with such eagerness, and a couple of fish fingerlings and panicking tadpoles violently wiggled then swam their way into the pee slit, Lan Zhan Omm'd a bit louder and rose another few inches off the ground, and started to shake his hips in mid-air uncontrollably, to no one's attention. Eventually, his prostate was assaulted by a growing population those invading worm-y anchovy-like creatures, that nibbled and curled and coiled inside the dying, swollen prostate, vacuuming up the man's meagre bodily fluids he managed to generate in the past hour and creating a foamy slurry inside the fluttering gland - but still, Lan Zhan felt his bladder muscles spasm in sparks of pain and pleasure, of aching fullness within the loins that could find no release, legs turning into weightless jelly as ripples of yet another laborious orgasm tore through sexual meridians that had long turned into cinders from the constant burn, and those convulsions in the pelvic region grew in throbbing waves of discomfort and tightness, the stuffed meatstick jerking wildly inside a loincloth packed with fishies, froggies and tadpoles.

It didn't take for a semi-conscious, spiritually-elevated and transcended Lan Zhan to wet his pants, in thirty hearty spurts of watery pee, interspersed with extremely pleasurable ejaculation of fishies and tadpoles from the tormented organ, soaking itself in a bulging bubble of loincloth-wrapped sexual fluids, pee and other nasty pungent - but nutritious - fluids, thriving with writhing living beings that continued to invade through the wrecked, cramped urethra, then penetrating deep into the convulsing prostate desperately fighting off to abort whatever foul things that tried to grow roots inside the itchy inflamed gland, purged back out to the loincloth poolside of living jiggling slime, and swim back in, like the eternal cycle of parasitic life trapped within Lan Zhan's loincloth.

Far away, Wei Ying laughed like a madman, not so much at the expense of Lan Zhan's suffering, but because he found something else to play with.

.

The weather was unseasonably warmer, at least when compared to the highlands the day before. Spring had, in fact, arrived at the lower reaches of the Middle Kingdom, and everywhere, there were signs of things bursting into life - insects swarmed budding flowers, birds sang and flew between layers of pine and bamboo canopies, other kinds of trees began to flower and fruit besides the cherry blossoms, and there were also hints of awakening land animals - of mountain hares darting behind prickly bushes, squirrels scurrying around, and the odd cry of deer in the distance. The world around the four men were coloured in pastel blues, pinks, yellows and greens, made dreamy by a light coat of mysterious misty greys, with bright sunshine filtering through periodically to cast what looks like the glow of forest fairies to the beautiful landscape laid out before their eyes. Their shoes crunched on shrinking patches of snow lying amongst seas of lively sprouting greens and dew-moistened earthy browns, the well-laid path directed them to walk a circle around the hot springs, and they listened either to the sounds of nature or the calming bubbling of brooks flowing out from steaming pools. Spring was in the air; if one lapped the air, one can actually taste an immense underlying sweetness of new life in the cold mountain air, and the fragrance of pine oils and the subtle warm aromas of evergreen bamboo.

“You...! And you...!” Wei Ying yelled and pointed an angry, accusing finger at two runaways - Lil’ Apple with the Bag of Holding in its mouth, and the calico cat he’d been looking for since the first poisoning episode. He yelled and swung his arms in alarm, like a really vicious monkey, when Lil’ Apple trotted off with its prize, and the cat hissed and snarled ferociously to prevent the man from giving chase.

Wei Ying nearly cried tears of despair when the bag disappeared into the bushes with the four-legged fiends - Lan Zhan's life savings, their extra clothes, food, and all the comforts Wei Ying hoped to enjoy beyond the walls of the Jingshi - all stolen by animals of lesser intelligence than humans!

"No, no, no, you can't take away my everything! Assholes! Come back here! Thieves!" he screamed, although his voice was dampened by the many dense layers of bush and leaves around them, so no one came to Wei Ying's aid.

Just when all hope was lost, the man screeched like an animal with its balls yanked, when he tripped over a rock, then tumbled unceremoniously onto a ground and slammed into a face full of liquid. A warm stream continued to trickle on the sides of his face, even into his ears and hair, and he inhaled deeply to feed his oxygen-starved lungs--

The man retched and nearly choked to death when he realized the horrible ammonia-like pungent smell and taste was too overpowering, thus overwhelming his senses until he had look up to beg his tormenter to stop, bleary-eyed from the stinging in his eyes, and found himself staring at a little boy's naked, hairless wee-wee.

A thousand and one things barrelled through his mind when he recognized he had the rare privilege of watching not just any eight-year old urinating at his face - but, of course, oh god, of course, it was little A-Ji whom he cherished so much from the days and nights of spying Lan Zhan's dirty pornographic dreams. He also watched, briefly, how the prickly and loud-mouthed miniaturized mirror image of his, the insufferable gremlin A-Xian - dear gods and goddesses, little A-Xian was trying his best to suck A-Ji's trembling pinkie-length penis from the sides even as the stick of turgid flesh jerked wildly to spray pee and tingle powerfully at the same time - A-Ji's face was beet-red, he sported a sexual flush that an eight-year old boy shouldn't have, and he hiccuped and moaned in a terribly mature, adult way - A-Xian alternated massaging the boy's member with swallowing the smooth, hairless plump balls, with one hand busily prodding a finger into the A-Ji's anus, and the other hand, covered and stained with virgin prepubescent boy's pee, vigorously played with the exposed pea-sized pink glans - because A-Xian probably coerced the innocent boy to pull back his foreskin through trickery and lies that doing so made peeing much more comfortable - the pee-slit enlarged and sputtered uncontrollably of sweet, crystal-clear fluids that only little virginal boys like A-Ji can produce.

Wei Ying had heard lots of old wives' tales on the health benefits of a little boy's virginal pee - ranging from being used to exorcise evil spirits, cleansing a place of misfortune, touted as a miracle cure when brewed into a tonic drink, an exotic liquor to prolong one's age and wisdom, and the ilk. As he swallowed another gulp of the salty liquid, he noticed that A-Ji's dirty brown pants were piled messily upon the grass, the thin, smooth and supple legs shivered in the chilly air, and he remembered the sleazy, obscene stories he'd watched through Lan Zhan's slumber, of how the boy was raped, bedded, and forced to service an older man with the same surname as he. A flash of vile, evil intent sent shivers into Wei Ying - what if, oh what if, right now, he pretended to be that dirty Uncle Wei and forcibly take his pleasure from the unwilling boy? What if right now, he grabbed A-Ji by those hairless twig-like legs and dragged him into the bush, then spread the boys' bubble buttocks and tasted the ambrosia that was a virgin little boy's innocence, then dipped his head between those smooth thighs again and again, at varying angles, speeds and strength of suction, and then hummed and blew bubbles of saliva into the unnaturally engorged wee-wee until it shivered, blossomed and bloomed into orgasmic fireworks that little eight-year old boys shouldn't experience? What if he drank the nectary juice so vigorously and sucked out so powerfully like a modern day vacuum, until every last drop of sweet, decadent sexual honey from the boy's taut testicles until nothing but husks and shrivelled skin are left? What if little A-Ji experiences his real first orgasm in this Mortal Realm in fabulously spectacular explosions of good feelings, until his innocence was stolen, torn away, snatched and was no more, and he willingly begged to be raped and abused by this realm's Uncle Wei in that he would happily lie on the bed and spread his legs and anus to whet the man's terribly lewd appetite? Oh, oh, and what if little A-Ji went on all fours and perked up his shiny-smooth bubble buttocks, spread his butt cheeks, to reveal the ultimate prize of taking a male's virginity, and squealed like a pig being raped to death when an adult's exceedingly testosterone-laden hardness and hairiness plunged and plundered the boy's treasured love tunnel, until the rosebud bloomed and soon, became filled with torrential waves of hot semen, billions of wriggly sperms propelling their way deep into the child's male-womb to impregnate and make many babies inside Wei Ying's imaginary, not-so-distant-in-the-future child bride-- “Oi! Stop staring! He's my husband, and he's mine!” A-Xian screeched this time, with teeth and canines bared, fingers bent like claws, a true child-lover defending his child-spouse.

Wei Ying shook his head to clear away those incredibly smutty thoughts, and crawled away from the increasingly weakening trickle of boy-pee. He gathered himself, wiped away the wetness from his face and stood up with a very, very evil grin - he loomed over the two boys, who meep'ed in fright.

“Well, well, what do we have here... this little guy will be mine too! He's my wife once he grows up in a decade or so,” Wei Ying snarled at the brat and then sent a teasing flying kiss towards A-Ji's direction. He licked his lips - A-Ji's pee tasted about the same as Lan Zhan's, after all, and Wei Ying loved his man and his fluids in any form, and in any age, really.

“A-Xian... wuuu... wuuu... I know him! H-- He's the fearsome man-eater Yiling Patriarch... from the books you stole from the Library Pavillion before!” sexually flushed A-Ji squeaked, and started to cry, then promptly lost more control of his bladder from utter, paralyzing fear - however, as the last few streams were instinctively shot out like hot, thick ejaculations when the boy experienced waves after waves of intense pleasure rocking his hips, because A-Xian was ruthless in his handjob and never ceased playing with the inflamed spewing cockslit. It was quite an amazing sight to observe how an eight-year old orgasmed from inappropriate climaxes and devolved into terrified and hysterical hiccupy cries at the same time.

A-Xian gasped in shock and wetted his pants, then cried like a baby - a totally unexpected reaction in the face of the biggest crisis and danger in the eight-year old's life. Wei Ying face-palmed internally, because he thought A-Xian's behaviour was totally unbecoming of the true Yiling Patriarch's legendary cockiness and fearlessness, at least in a decade's time or so.

Later, Wei Ying found himself rinsing everyone's soiled clothes beside a bubbling brook, trying to console two boys who begged to be let off and not be eaten (How could he? He would never be able to lay his hands on such cute chubby-faced, rosy-cheeked boys with big brown eyes and long messy hair), and later, after revealing that he was a "Nice" derivative clone (actually, the original) of the cruel, abusive Uncle Wei, and that he was only playing a prank with no other ill intentions - the two boys seemed to gain his trust, tentative at first, and soon, cuddled up to him, while learning how to rinse pee from their pants and robes.

"So, you see, you just need to scrub this part like this, against a hard surface such as a flat riverbed stone, like this. Do you understand, boys?"

"Enn! Wei gege is so kind to teach us how to wash our clothes! We've not really taken care of our bodies and our hygiene ever since we left our neighbourhood in search of food!" A-Xian shrieked like a baby monkey on steroids - he kept bouncing around, pantless, not caring whether insects bit his naked legs or if he attracted hungry stares from the man; Wei Ying also thought, for a brief moment, what if he preyed on little boys who looked and behaved like him, in that he could understand their thought processes and other bodily mechanics, so that he could easily trick and get them to undress, to lie on the bed and to touch their erogenous zones because he'd known them all, until the time such boys cry out in pure orgasmic bliss because their sensitive naughty bits were attacked with full force, with such zest, that baby Wei Yings would instantly ejaculate out by themselves without being asked, or that he could effortlessly peel off the boy's defenses layer by layer like an onion's, then tell the boy how good it feels to have an adult's seed sown into a garden of love, then groom and teach the boy about the joys of having sex with a grown man, and in the next minute, be mounted repeatedly by that said man with roaring satisfaction, until the boy was properly inseminated with ravenous grunts and boy-giggles, the rosebud ravaged from unceasing sexual attacks, the child's belly bulging from multiple virile injections of hot stinky semen into the boy-pussy, and the man becomes a true culprit as the luckiest sex predator, sex offender and child rapist ever.

He blinked and shook away those very lewd thoughts. Wei Ying thought he was truly an irredeemable criminal, if there were thought police around, and if bad, naughty thoughts were considered as crimes.

“Enn! Wei gege also gave us some yummy snacks, and promised to give us a whole lot more when we track down the donkey with a special magical Bag and return it to you!” A-Ji was more prim and proper; he smiled a bit, rather awkwardly, and then bowed with hands folded at the front with full respect, and his bubble buttocks exposed in full nudity too since he was pantless as well.

Wei Ying nodded. Fortunately, he carried some leftovers from the sumptuous breakfast - fruits and candies that he couldn't finish when he and Lan Zhan were deeply engaged in baby-making sexual intercourse. Plus, he carried a few talismans stolen from Lan Zhan's sleeves while they rolled around on the floor with the older man deeply rutting inside his asshole; he complained to Lan Zhan that he might suffer from diarrhea, stomach cramps or even a fever because the lao po was an insatiable pig when it came to sex, and had orgasmed dozens of times straight into Wei Ying's rectum - the so-called man-womb, really -, so Lan Zhan moaned in-between hoarse, broken-voiced aaahns and nnnghs, that Wei Ying was free to rummage his Gusu Lan robes for anything of curative value, and found a stash of talismans that could be put to better use, such as to strike a bargain with two pantless boys in the bush.

Wei Ying proposed an exchange - for washing the boy's pants, the boys would then set out on a mission to follow Lil' Apple's trails - it was easy, once the boys were taught how to read animal footprints and other relevant jungle signs and tracks -, snatch the distinctive Bag of Holding, then use some talismans to find their way back to Wei Ying. The former Yiling Patriarch couldn't cast any magic, but he could sense a mystical aura around A-Xian, at least, and knew, from their shared histories, that A-Xian possessed nascent spellcasting abilities and could utilize the talismans. The man promised rewards of endless bowls of lotus root pork rib soup, spicy congee, and hundred-course banquets for A-Xian, and plates of boiled fish, egg-tofu and plenty of books to read, guqin music scripts to trym and free education to other scholarly pursuits - all lies, really - that both boys' eyes shone with such sparkliness that they simply said Yes to everything that Wei Ying asked for.

Less than half an hour later, in record time, the two Dream-kin boys were sent on their way, squealing with new excitement for new adventures, pantless with their wet pants hung around their shoulders like a cape of sorts. Wei Ying realized that he'd been away from the rest of his in-laws, and they may start suspecting that he'd gone missing. He hurried off in the other direction to rejoin the group.

Elsewhere, angelic, rosy-cheeked Lan Zhan had floated off track, and careened straight into a bush like a train wreck gone horribly wrong, with a loincloth stuffed full of fishies, froggies and tadpoles. Xi Chen thought his younger brother's behaviour was rather strange and was about to run after him, when his uncle grabbed his wrist.

“If a man going for a walk in the park, rushes into the bushes with a distinctive limp or tilt in their gait, what does that mean?” Qi Ren shifu asked sagely, and stroked his beard in wise-man manner.

Xi Chen recognized the question as a serious intellectual examination that delved into the borders of unique human behaviours and universal habits of all things living. He put a hand below his chin and gave a slightly amused look. “Hmm,” he murmured thoughtfully, “That is indeed a very keen insight, shushu . The thought itself triggers a similar but absolutely natural reaction in my body too. Do you feel the same, shushu ?”

Qi Ren shifu released his nephew's wrist, and walked to another direction, towards another set of bushes adorned with springtime blossoms for aesthetics and scents, birdsongs from the trees above for hiding the less savoury sounds, and thicker, more luxurious grass growth for personal privacy; Master Lan Qi Ren was known for having better, more extravagant tastes than others, after all. Xi Chen didn't need to wait for an answer, and he hurried from behind, his bladder tingling with a certain tightness since they had quite a lot of liquidy dishes cooked for Wei Ying at breakfast, including meat congee, herbal soups, oat porridge, and blended fruit cocktails. He distantly wondered how was the Wei gongzi doing, since the young man seemed to enjoy the outing on his own and didn't need to be hand held; it didn't matter much to Xi Chen, though, and he knew that Wei Ying would also make sure to pee on time, when Nature calls.

“ Shushu , what do you think of Wei gongzi ? Especially his relationship with Wang Ji. They’re both so close ever since Wang Ji took him in from the end of last summer, and cared for him until he regained some of his health today.”

“Hmph, that hopeless goblin fiend! I don’t really care about that brat anymore since Wang Ji is no longer an heir to the sect, and has no ties with the cultivation world. Don’t talk too much about that worthless man, Xi Chen, because our future rests in your hands! Make sure you don’t find anyone who resembles that goblin and your future will be secured!”

“Ah... yes, Xi Chen will do his best, as promised. I was just wondering how my brother feels about Wei Ying, and vice versa, that’s all. They seem to be the best of buddies, but something tells me there’s a deeper kind of relationship than that.”

“Huh! Don’t sway into that direction, Xi Chen! You should focus on your current roles and responsibilities as the Sect Leader, your strength and cultivation skills, and consider yourself as the prime candidate for the Chief Cultivator’s seat! I expect good news from the secret tournament to be held in Caihong Town in the next few days. Let that goblin and the good-for-nothing Wang Ji handle the talks and even the poisoning plague, you have bigger fish to fry - once we acquire the crown of the cultivation world, everything else that bothers you today, will be nothing in comparison!”

“Oh, shushu , you’re so single-track minded in the matters of the cultivation world... but alright, Xi Chen will do what he can. After all, no one has been able to compete against my xiao flute and sword fighting abilities. I pray for the day that I can stand tall with pride, and with Wang Ji applauding my achievements too. Maybe Wei Ying will also call for a grand celebration party after that - he's pretty good at making things livelier."

"Speak no more of that man who doesn't share the Lan surname. And don't forget, Wang Ji is just like any other lower-caste members of our family - he's an outcast, really. He's more than welcomed to partake in our sect's success and riches when times are good, and anyone in the ruling family is also welcomed to kick him out at a moment's notice."

Qi Ren shifu coughed, cursed under his breath, and grimaced when he thought he either tore an old man's hernia, or suffered from a blockage from kidney stones.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 155

With so much peeing going on at the hot springs resort, even Wei Ying felt the invisible disconcerting vibes coursing through his spine, and the man quickly hobbled to the nearest bush with his walking cane, thighs squeezed tightly to each other and bladder tingling with alarming urges, and he was absolutely in heaven (figuratively speaking), goosebumps sprouting all over the limbs when he finally, finally relieved himself at an unfortunate shrub.

As the steaming yellow liquid dribbled, along with liberal amounts of rude gassy sounds emitted from the jiggly rump, accompanied with aaahs of satisfaction and of pressurized organs being delightfully loosened and spilled over, the man thought back about his fateful encounters in the forests surrounding the resort. He had witnessed the heist of the precious Bag of Holding, though unfortunately he couldn't do anything by himself to salvage the situation. On the flipside, he managed to engage the services of child labourers to retrieve the loot - however, that would mean that for the foreseeable future, they were without a beast of burden to carry their transport.

It should be fine, he told himself, because the multi-talented lao po knows what to do.

So, when the man returned to the huts to locate his missing companions (actually, he was the one gone a.w.o.l.), he was anxious to learn that the said reliable and sole breadwinner for the group had gotten himself injured.

"Wei gongzi , where have you been? Wang Ji seemed to be unlike himself today, and he tripped on the sidewalk of the trail. My dear little brother hit his head against a cherry blossom tree! I've bandaged his forehead as best as I could, given him some painkillers, and applied some medicinal paste that I carried with me," Xi Chen da ge exclaimed hurriedly when Wei Ying emerged from the soiled shrubbery.

"Wei Ying... nnnh... fishies... froggies... cherry blossom trees... nnnh... Wei Ying..." poor Lan Zhan rambled in syllabic grunts, and grimaced drowsily from the painkiller medicines, as he gripped his bandaged forehead with one hand and his crotch with the other, while sitting on the ground with his two relatives by the side. The younger of the Twin Jades slumped against the wall of their hut; his hips twitched, seemed to yawn constantly or looked as though he was screaming in silence, lolled his head uselessly from side to side, then jerked his whole body powerfully, and something lively wriggled beneath a patch of wetness on his pants.

Qi Ren shifu , who panted heavily from exertion of shouldering half the effort to carry Lan Zhan back to the huts, wasted no time in giving the young Wei gongzi a sarcastic tongue-lashing about deserting his companions in their hour of need. "If you even consider yourself as a member of, or even as one serving faithfully, for the Lan family, you would do what's best for the sect and its leaders right now!" he grumbled, obviously disappointed at Wei Ying's lack of respect and servitude towards his gracious hosts from the Cloud Recesses.

Wei Ying became as meek as a mouse and as docile as an obedient servant; he bowed so many times in apology until his back ached. He quickly picked up groggy Lan Zhan by the arms - Bichen dangling from the sash was an impressive piece of sword art that weighed twice a man's, probably -, and half-dragged the semi-conscious man back to their designated hut. His handicapped legs were shaky at best, even with a walking cane, and the two fell clumsily to the ground a couple of times. Xi Chen sighed and lent a helping hand - once they were safely in the shaded hut, the Sect Leader handed over a long piece of white ribbon to Wei Ying, before letting go of Lan Zhan, “With the large bandage around his head covering the bruises and scratches, my little brother can’t wear his forehead ribbon, nor can he see well anymore. Please keep this safe with you until the time he can put this back on.”

The young man grasped the ribbon with a look of surprise on his face - to be entrusted unto a sacred item of utmost personal value by the Sect Leader and his family...!

“Both my uncle and I must resume our journey as it is already late in the morning. We need to check-in at the Sunshine Inn by sundown so that I can pay the innkeeper the remaining portion of the room and board fees for everyone’s stay in Caiyi,” he added, referring to the accommodation arrangements for the junior disciples too. He marched out of the hut, as though he had been called to duty in a sudden rush, his brows scrunched in inexplicable stress and worry. The morning was turning out to be a clear, sunny day with higher temperatures than the mountain peaks of the Cloud Recesses; even Wei Ying felt sweat beading on his face and limbs from the workout of hauling his incapacitated spouse.

Qi Ren shifu cursed in seven Gusu dialects not too far away in the courtyards of the circle of straw and wooden huts - the donkey had, of course, gone missing and there was nothing to pull the carts; also, since the old man knew that Lan Zhan kept tasty food and an impressive collection of stuff inside his satchel which was last seen lying atop the second empty cart, which had sadly gone missing too - it didn’t take long for the astute shifu to piece together the puzzle -, he cursed again in seven dialects that he wished he had eaten another serving of exotic tropical mango fruits, or the strangely addictive overly-seasoned salty fried chicken that had three foreign letters printed on its box packaging (“KFC”, no doubt); alas, it was too late to lament what could never be found again, so Master Lan Qi Ren decisively announced that Xi Chen - the legendary Zewu Jun blessed with the strength of hundreds of men in one finger, let alone an arm -, would carry the cart of minerals and be on their merry way.

Xi Chen easily lifted and balanced the tremendously heavy creaky cart atop a shoulder, then waved back at Wei Ying who hunkered down within the hut. “Wei gongzi ! We’re taking leave now with the minerals, and will leave it at the inn’s outer shed, so that you and the juniors can start trading the cargo for grains and other useful goods for our sect. I have another appointment in Caihong Town in my capacity as Sect Leader, so you may not be able to find me immediately once you’ve reached the lowlands; proceed with the investigations to the poisoning plague if you have the chance, and wait for my return at the inn at the end of every day, if you need to!” he shouted.

“Troublemaker, the least you can do from now on is to take care of Wang Ji and don’t cause anymore problems to jinx this trip further! If anything happens to my nephew, or if I don’t see you on your knees at the inn at sundown, I will make sure to kick your buttocks if you dare to show up your face ever again!” the flustered shifu swung a fist in fury, and promptly, accidentally, kicked one of the tall unlit torches built around the courtyard, and he swore and yelped in pain on the shins in seven different dialects.

Wei Ying bowed again repeatedly through the open window inside the hut, and he was noticeably stressed the more the older two bid their good-byes with plenty of instructions, threats and being labelled as ill omen to the family.

Finally, at eleven o’ clock, the hour when Wei Ying usually wakes up to face the challenges of a new day - once again, peace reigned around him, and the young man heaved a sigh - not of relief, but of helplessness, hopelessness, and unsure of where fate wants to take him to next - whilst holding his darling man who continued to groan unintelligibly, drifting in and out of consciousness.

And, once again, the life of Wei Wuxian was thrown into not just a sea of Inabilities, but also Imbalances and Inexistences - he teetered at the precipice of the three unluckiest curses for Man; firstly, he was a cripple with no special physical abilities other than his usual gift of gab; secondly, his life had been left in a lurch, having been pampered and even moulded to suit his spouse's wants and needs, that he regretfully considered himself a good-for-nothing if he didn't have his significant other half by his side; thirdly, he lived and still lives a life full of faults and deficiencies - he had no money, no fame, no real family to turn to or fall back on, except for the soulmate he'd engraved the name into his soul, that is, the man named Lan Wang Ji. Worst of all, it was solely the consequences from his actions; how can he blame others when he was the root cause, or the one who had the hand to shape the lives of his own and others? - he'd fallen off the cliff on his own out of his self-inflicted despair, he'd been seduced by the comforts and conveniences offered by Lan Zhan, and the flawed him was never the perfect man to find his place in the Lan family, or anywhere else.

Would things have been different, if Wei Ying took a different path, at any point in his life?

“No. I have personally examined countless different roads and their iterations in your, and our lives - no matter which you take, it always ends up like this. You meet, you fall in love, you suffer, you reconcile and reunite, then you part. Through reincarnations, through lifetimes, through multiples of universes and realities. The circle returns to where it begins.”

“That’s too big of a big picture, da ge . I may not be as smart as you, but I know true love when I see one. Ge is head over heels for him, and the same can be said the other way round. Right now, he needs support, solutions and a good dose of sense to make the relationship work. The head is full of logical conundrums without clarity of what is black or white; the heart, on the other hand, is full of complexities, uncertainties and shades of grey. What constitutes the arrow that points us to the right direction - our sense of logic, or our sense of intuition?”

“Eh? Ehh? I can’t understand what you two are bickering nonsensically about, maybe that’s because I’m just a hormone-powered teenager who wants to rush everything so that I can get back to my MMORPG game! So the Grand Patriarch has knocked himself senseless, and lost his ability to Dream, thus sundering the entire Dream-verse and all of its components. Everything’s gone, and that’s crap, really...! It’s been a while since I didn’t fly on a spaceship and had to walk on foot to travel from one place to another! So, when can we reconnect to ErNet and I can log into my game account?”

“Umm... um... san ge , there’s no more ErNet and your game account has probably been wiped out. We’ve lost everything, even our homes and our hard-earned riches. I think I’m affected the most - all my warehouses, inventories, armies of robots and servants, and huge planets of goodies... they’ve disappeared in an instant! I’ve been a good boy and I haven’t cried a single tear, because da ge said I’ll be rewarded with candies as long as we stick together and successfully face this crisis with our bravery, strength and wits... umm... umm... what do those words mean, anyway?”

Wei Ying rolled his eyes; misery comes in multiples, for better or worse, especially in the form of those who escaped the exceedingly silent, undetected and missed mass extinction, total annihilation, complete death and destruction of his, their, Kingdom and company - simply because of Wei Ying's juvenile prank that led to Lan Zhan to crash into a tree and gain a bump on the forehead - and the loss of many lifetimes' worth of work. At that point, Wei san ge meep'ed in terror and imagined that sounded like someone pulling the cables off the wi-fi router while people were absorbed in playing the best game they've ever had, online, and without a save option.

"Well, technically, your wi-fi and his bluetooth have completely gone offline because of that head-bump; all interdimensional communications, travels and movement of goods, energy, life and resources are rendered inoperative, since there's no input nor output anyway. If you think that we're living in peril at this point in time, then yes, you are absolutely correct. Homeless, penniless and all that," the da ge 's voice boomed from the corner of the hut, close to the window.

"Stop talking behind my back, will you? You're overreacting like a drama queen from behind the curtains," Wei Ying snarled in retaliation, before returning to his affectionate care for his beloved spouse. He cradled a softly-snoring Lan Zhan in his arms, running fingers through the older man's long lush hair, fixing his topknot, caressing his cheeks, placing tender kisses on the bandaged forehead in a silent prayer that Lan Zhan would heal and wake up soon.

Nine-year old Wei didi emerged from the shadows, then squatted between Lan Zhan's legs and went to work, like a good boy. He pulled off the man's pants, unravelled the soiled loincloth, and did the dirty job of getting rid of the clumps of semen and urine-stained dead fishies, froggies and tadpoles that had stewed in the heat for a bit too long. The boy gagged and coughed, and took it like a responsible adult forced to wash someone's smelly toilet - he wrapped the whole ruined loincloth and the stinky, rotting stuff within into a crumpled ball, and threw it outside the window; then, he rummaged the man's sleeves and found a spare loincloth (who knew that he kept an extra underwear in there!), and began the laborious process of maneuvering the man's hips and thighs, wiping down the icky goo and sweat on the man's genitals and buttocks, and fixing a fresh set of loincloth onto him - it was akin to changing a baby's nappies, after all.

"I have a signal! I have a signal on Matriarch's feisty alter ego running through the woods and after those beastial escapees!" the teenage Wei san ge woot'ed with glee and hopped into plain sight out of a hi-tech camouflaging cloak that he wore (he play-pretended to be an assassin or a secret agent, apparently), and bounced around the hut like an excited kid with a treasure map. He had a ultra-futuristic plastic and metal gadget in his hands, and it projected a small grid-like chart depicting their surroundings with lines, circles and alien symbols; a red dot blinked in one of the quadrants of the chart.

Wei er ge appeared out of nowhere using magical teleportation - his spell-casting ability and reservoir of mana had grown tremendously over time, and is probably second only to the eldest of the Wei siblings. "You lead the way, san di , using your incredible robotics, artificial intelligence and energy-saving technology. We need to conserve our qi since there's no telling when we will get to replenish our physical and magical energies without the Kingdom or its charging stations around here. I'll start taking inventory of what we have, and work with didi to see where we can scrimp and save, without sacrificing efficiency and our chances of success... for surviving in this harsh, prehistoric world," the boy in his late teens encouraged his younger sibling, and he looked every bit as a respectable young adult for his age. He was garbed in some strange, eclectic mix of clothes with edgy designs, spiky metal armour, broad shoulders with laser turrets, belts with huge jewels and lethal-looking gun barrels, slim lycra leggings and giant furred boots, but with a twirl of fingers, everyone's attires changed from a smattering of otherworldly, futuristic and rainbow-colourful trash to respectable light and dark-coloured robes that wouldn't look to out of place in that day and age of the Middle Kingdom.

Wei da ge huffed in annoyance at their predicament and the room vibrated with quaking metaphysical frequencies and raw qi ; even the heavy curtains that drape from the ceiling rumbled and fell to the floor, then dissipated into ashes that melted away like gossamer in the wind, revealing the imposing figure whose voice reverberated everywhere. In the last few months, chronologically speaking, the man in his forties had transformed from being the undisputed great grandmaster of Dark Arts and all matters related to magic, a champion conqueror of multiverses and a god of sorts, to becoming the one and only most awesome divine perfection being to ever grace the Mortal Realm, or any realm in existence, for that matter. Fortunately he wore mere mundane jet-black robes - a splitting image of a wizened Yiling Patriarch, if one dared to make that extrapolation of identities; Wei Ying couldn't imagine what horrors the eldest sibling could've chose as a fashion statement, though he suspected that whatever this incredible person (more like, a phenomenally mind-boggling entity made of indescribable raw energy and life, that creates universes in every breath he takes, and destroys multitudes in every step he takes, and changes realities with a snap of fingers or a click of the tongue) chose to wear or display, would render any mortal or even god catatonic, brain-dead and blind with 'cannot unsee'-ness.

The da ge stroked his beard - it had been a while since he'd grown one -, and said with a low voice that seemed louder than it should be, "It feels like the first weeks of our birth when we started with barely anything to our names, and lived as a tightly-knit family in poverty, but with much familial love. This time, however, we're well prepared to safeguard our future. I will personally eliminate anything that stands in our way that may jeopardize our mission to capture that bratty runt named A-Xian. We must extract that child's spiritual energies and conduct a transference, soonest possible, so that Matriarch--," he gestured and bowed at Wei Ying with a polite nod, "--may regain his full breadth of powers and capabilities, as so shall we."

Wei Ying allowed the three younger siblings to crowd around Lan Zhan to fuss over and clean him up - and didn't miss the indecent sight of two men and a boy touching his spouse inappropriately, because all manifestations of Wei Wuxians are, directly or indirectly, sexually attracted to Lan Wang Jis in all forms, shapes and sizes. He stood up, stretched and yawned recklessly with a cane holding his balance - it's been a while since he felt at home - in some ways - with four of his clones, technically speaking - it is deeply therapeutic to be able to vocalize and speak to oneself, from different aspects and perspectives, after all - and openly asked, pushing aside vulnerabilities, "This may be a silly question, but you know I'm no longer as brilliant as any of you... why not capture that A-Ji and do a transference with my husband... ehh, I mean, wife... eh... lao gong ... err... lao po ..." he started to stammer in confusion.

Wei san ge stopped the innocent, kind-hearted youngest didi from wrapping up their prize supposed to be tucked inside the new, clean red loincloth - the naughty bits between helpless and incapacitated Lan Zhan's legs -, and taught the boy how to give the man a proper adult-ish blowjob with his boyish pre-pubescent lips and tongue, while the teenager ravished the man's nipples, neck, between fingers and toes and all other erogenous zones. " Ge , we all agree that he's our patriarch and our husband, but given that you've decreed him to be a wife in this timeline, let's stick to that," Wei san ge grunted between slurps and tasty licks, "Because it's so much fun to treat this man as a wife, after all!" and slid fingers down, down from child-molested thinly-hairy testicles, down, down across the swollen perineum, further, further behind until he found the man's puckered anus; it didn't take long for one, two, then three fingers to slip through and give Lan Zhan a toe-curlingly wonderful prostate massage and a rectal examination.

"In the grand scheme of things, all Lan-kin are irrelevant to our cause. Thanks to our generous and loving Patriarch, he signed off his everything to us... what was that clause..." Wei er ge broke his soul-draining kisses filled with sexy lewd moans with the unconscious man, to lick his lips and to get a better taste of the man's palate, "Whatever is Lan Wang Ji's, is Wei Wuxian's, and whatever is Wei Wuxian's, stays with him, for sure'. That was one of the earliest pre-nuptial pledges to you, wasn't it?" the er ge added, and continued to fully undress Lan Zhan on the floor of the hut; the air felt heavier with the sounds of kisses, sucks and nibbles, and soon, even the victim started to emit delicious, soft moans from his throat, and patches of pinks and reds start to blossom on his chest in a brazen display of reaching sexual arousal and excitement - the penis, serviced by a nine-year old boy, was revived with such terribly criminal skills and services provided by the boy's nimble hands and oral pleasures; it looked like the Lan man was being sexually ravaged and unwillingly molested by hungry males of all ages and sizes.

"That's correct, er di . What the Patriarch had lost in the accident that probably leads to a concussion - can still be saved, because according to the natural laws of the universes, they've been transferred to you, our Matriarch. However, since your meridians are inactivated and your body is broken, we need to transfer A-Xian's spirit into you and make you whole once again; so that you can finally access those lost magics and powers - my liege, you shall become perfect, even better, and the greatest amongst us, once again!" the da ge raised his hands with an evil laughter, as though he was preaching a satanic sermon, and somewhere far away, lightning struck and thunder boomed in a flashy, dramatic display of an epic reveal.

Wei Ying chuckled as well - he started imaging the four siblings going on a wild goose chase after the two boys, who ran after Lil' Apple and his band of forsaken farm animals - and in some probability, the two boys might return to find him, so the whimsical circles of fate continues to turn and unwind, and that everything may fall back onto him, the former fearsome Yiling Patriarch, after all. He sat on a chair and watched with interest how his four siblings defied all family teachings and, for the lack of better word, raped their - the correct term should be - wife. He also guessed that he should be thankful that his siblings were sent to the Cloud Recesses earlier to rid the city of yaoguai s and their corruption, in that when the Kingdom was vaporized elsewhere, they and other survivors in this Mortal Realm remained intact. Later, he also learned that the captured yaoguai s ended up as food for the survivors, because food from the mundane world contained too little nutritional value for such great people, as a distinguished, superior and amazing species - their people of the Kingdom of Lan, followers of the Wangxian movement, the mega-corporation that once spanned across universes and timelines.

“My dear didi , is my meal ready?” the eldest asked and swallowed hard.

Wei didi “Enn!”s dutifully and lowered his head - he had learned the cherished skill of attacking each hairy testicle alternatively, like swallowing, humming and vibrating large, swollen pipa fruits inside his little child-mouth, and he made sure to use his wet tongue to coax every last sperm cell out, as taught by the naughty teenage san ge . Both second and third siblings busied themselves elsewhere on the buffet spread out before them, and they feasted on every nub, crevice, hole and moist caverns they could find upon the distraught sleeping man.

Wei didi carefully peeled back the foreskin to reveal the siblings’ favourite cherry on the cake - all of them paused to admire the pinkish bulbous flesh that jerked, spasmed and sputtered clear pre-cum excitedly from the intense love it, and its host body, had warmly and passionately received. Wei da ge could wait no more, and opened his mouth wide - then swooped down like a hawk and captured Lan Zhan’s iron-hard penis with such a soul-crushing grip and suction, and performed miraculous feats inside the oral cavity that left the organ more than dead within seconds, and propelled it straight to its heaven, its nirvana, its explosions of big bangs of twenty-four thousand orgasms of thirty ejaculations each, for each second the deader-than-dear convulsing stick of flesh remained inside Wei da ge ’s incredibly talented mouth rife with Dark Arts-powered magic.

Every last droplet was pumped out with indescribable joy, every last vacuum space was sucked out, his hips vibrated like an engine gone horribly, horribly wrong, his pelvic muscles fluttered until they seized and cramped up, his inner plumbing went into overdrive and shut down immediately, his sexual meridians, nerve-ends and musculatures instantly jerked and twist wildly unto themselves, that Lan Zhan nnngh'd in a sleep mired in nightmares of being dipped into honey filled with octopus tentacles and suckers, of being suffocated by a lively, slimy sea-cucumber that locked onto his lips, of having a vacuum cleaner stuck to his already-dead penis with the switches flicked between Maximum and Super Maximum cleaning modes, and his balls sizzled and burn with such passion and pleasure, that the wonderfully emptied twin man-eggs literally shot out to interstellar space and struck all twelve Zodiacs in the night sky like a game of pinball gone wild.

.

He blinked.

The world was fuzzy, so he blinked again, and swallowed dry. His vision eventually found its focus, and immediately, he was hit by the scent of something that burnt - the bitter aftertaste of smoke. He quickly sat up with a gasp - strangely, his first instinct was to check his groin and the state of his precious manhood and the family jewels; he was clothed in his white robes, and after a bit of rummaging and self-examination, he found that someone had helped him into new loincloth - this time, without any wiggly creatures hiding underneath. A couple of turns to the sides, and Lan Zhan recognized that they were back in their hut. Sunlight filtered through the curtainless window at a high angle - it was close to mid day, and it was getting a little warm inside the not-so-well ventilated dwelling.

“You’re awake,” Wei Ying stated, neither a question nor a poison-laced accusation. Lan Zhan turned towards him, and winced at a twinge of pain throbbing from his forehead - he couldn’t remember much, other than he had been in a daze from having too much sex in the morning, and somehow, fallen down sometime during the foggy walk around the hot spring resort, and ended up with a bandaged head. His beloved, the lovely Wei Ying, squatted on the floor and used a bamboo fan to fan the fire in a clay stove; atop of which, a small claypot with its lid on, steaming out herbal aromas, mixed with the cough-inducing smoke from the said stove. The young man fed some twigs to the stove periodically to keep the fire alive, and the pot bubbling.

“I’m sorry, Lan Zhan, I was playing around like a fool in this beautiful, peaceful place when you met an accident, hit your head against a tree, and fell. Your brother and uncle brought you here, but they had to leave first to settle some official businesses in Caiyi Town, together with the cart of minerals; Zewu Jun also mentioned about having some official business to attend to in Caihong. Oh--,” Wei Ying scooted closer to Lan Zhan, then leaned over to give a sweet peck to Lan Zhan’s bandaged forehead, then to his cheek, “-- by the way, the donkey disappeared and ran away, and your bag’s gone too. It’s nearly lunchtime but I couldn’t find anything substantial to eat, not in my current state anyway. So I foraged a bit for some herbs and made this for you. It’ll help to ease the swelling, I hope.”

Lan Zhan inhaled into Wei Ying’s hair and body scent - calming, comforting, against the tide of bad news shared by the beloved man. He closed his eyes, pursed his lips and tightened his hands into fists - he could already feel there was a huge, yawning gap inside his mind, body and soul; a quick internal scan using qi told him that he had lost something greater than he would like to believe.

“Wei Ying...” he started with a pained gritting of teeth, torn between telling the truth or to hide and cast away his doubts and fears for a little while longer.

The other man grinned - and Lan Zhan’s heart melted at the face of a jovial Wei Ying, because what could be more precious than that? - and with one hand, lifted the lid a little. Something medicinal but soothing filled the room, and his nostrils.

“Hush, my dear wife. You should rest and let that wound on your head heal. I’m glad I was able to find the communal kitchen next door and get what I need to prepare this herbal tea,” a bamboo fan pressed against the chest, and Lan Zhan obediently returned to his resting position. A nice pillow under the back of the head helped him to settle down once again, and so were his troubled feelings.

Then, Wei Ying lifted his walking cane and Lan Zhan’s line of sight followed suit - on the floor were also some meagre amounts of food, though not of the best quality that he was used to - off-season cherries, a mix of unripe and barely ripe citrus fruits, loquats, some washed edible roots and leaves, and a few nuts left over from winter. “The walking cane is quite useful, darling. Since you made it for me, I made sure to use it well - it’s great for whacking fruits off the trees, or digging up the earth for something to munch on. We should finish our meal as soon as possible and be on our way too. Uncle won’t be happy if we’re not at the Sunshine Inn by sunset,” Wei Ying explained cheerfully and even giggled at the last bit, because annoying the uncle was Wei Ying’s seemingly second day-job.

Lan Zhan’s heart filled up with unspoken emotions and he reached across to grasp Wei Ying’s. Gratitude, apology, love - these needn’t be verbalized, not between the lifelong couple whose minds and souls had intertwined long, long before. Wei Ying laughed a bit at Lan Zhan's awkward antics, and lowered himself to give the spouse another sweet kiss, this time on the lips. Then, he made a grab for a few slightly bruised but juicy loquats - probably whacked by that said walking cane - and started to peel off the thin, slightly leathery and rubbery skin, and feed them to Lan Zhan lying on a straw mat, bite by bite.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 156

The couple decided to descend the mountains as fast as their wobbly legs could carry their weight, while the sun still shone brightly in sunny though increasingly overcast skies, and while the temperatures were within comfortable ranges and there were no risks of suffering from hypothermia. However, they acknowledged that they weren't in a rat race, so, while both took turns to push a handcart - improvised from the second wagon they had before -, the lucky one who sat in it had the chance to rest and enjoy the sun-warmed, crisp winds blowing on his face, listen to birdsongs and deer calls, and reinvigorate his mood with alpine scents and spring greens.

Wei Ying worked double-hard since Lan Zhan turned out to be like a sick old man - he could still move around just fine, however, any exertion could cause him to curl up into a defenceless (testicular) ball from migraine and flashes of pain radiating from inside the skull; Wei Ying remarked that they should try to find a doctor once in Caiyi and get a prescription for stronger medicines, but Lan Zhan was adamant that he was perfectly healthy - also, because they had no money left. Coupled with their increasingly dire situation of having empty stomachs, being left alone in the woods, exposed to the dangers in the wild and from the fickle but fairly chilly weather - the first headaches of the afternoon began to show themselves in the form of throbbing white stars in his vision.

Lan Zhan caught himself and chastised his inner voice that he wasn't a stinge, he wasn't a scrooge, he wasn't an undignified hobo with nothing in his possession, but he was acting accordingly for the sake of their survival, he had to stay strong and calm for the both of them, and not to think or speak about food despite a growing, gnawing hunger in their bellies, until they reached Sunshine Inn with paid hot meals and beds with thick blankets to stave off the cold from the night--

“Lan Zhan! Quick! Use Bichen to cut a few bamboo cups from that clump over there! Weave a small Fire spell to heat up the leftover herbal tea in the pot from lunch! And for goodness’ sake, cover yourself with pine needles and whatever foliage you can find - we can’t have a injured and sick-looking man here in this makeshift teashop!”

Lan Zhan was utterly confused - teashop? - but he reacted straight away without asking twice. By the time he had complied to Wei Ying’s orders, he was dizzy from wielding his sword, and for once, he was grateful to be the one sitting inside the cart, with leaves, grass cuttings and all sorts of natural debris piled atop him until he was buried under. It was dark, cozy, and smelled earthy, but it was fine, as long as witty Wei Ying was in charge; he would bet his whole life on Wei Ying’s simplistic, sometimes ridiculous instructions.

Minutes later, he heard the crunch of boots, rustle of metal against cloth, of wooden baggage and heavy breaths - multiple individuals’ - and they stopped in front of the cart. Lan Zhan’s heart pounded and nearly burst out of its ribcage, as absurd thoughts ran unchecked inside his mind - were there bandits? Peasants? Guardsmen looking to solicit bribes from passers-by?

“Weary travellers! I see you’ve hiked all the ways up here, not even a quarter of the mountain ranges but your feet are already aching, your lungs are screaming for air, your head is spinning and oh look at the distant horizon over there! The skies will only darken in a matter of hours, blizzardy cold shall seep deep into your bones, your lips will crack and your skin will blister from Nature’s icy wrath, and you will regret for not absorbing more sun warmth from fine days like today... and today, I have just the thing you need! Here, this marvellous brew made from the purest springwaters in Gusu, and a secret blend of fourteen - yes, you heard me right - fourteen amazing herbs simmered to perfection following thousand-year old recipes straight from the heart of the famous Gusu Lans!

Did you see how a man in his thirties, and another in his fifties just rushed downhill? By the road? By flying from tree to tree? With a huge cartload of stones that must've weighed a tonne? Just a silhouette and a blazing shadow? Yes? Why of course, they drank this brew, and that's why they're so fit and healthy! It's amazing, it's spectacular, it cures your pains and rids your body of bothersome ailments, even for a day and a night! It cures your mother's cancer, and prolongs your grandfather's life! You over there, you have a child or two? Yes? Take one of these tonics, and in ten years' time, you will have a scholar fit for working in the castle walls of Chang'an, bearing your family's surname and your great honour! Get it while it's hot, because only magical fires can be used to keep it warm and drinkable! It'll cost more to reheat this pot, so right now, you're paying nothing - absolutely nothing - for heating this miracle brew for your consumption, otherwise, I will have to charge one extra gold piece for it! Yes, you're getting a discount of one huge gold piece if you buy this brew right now! Affordable prices for cups of this wonderful herbal drink for accomplished and successful gentlemen like you and I! Come 'ere! Come 'ere!"

Lan Zhan had to smile in his solitude buried under layers of natural detritus, and nearly inhaled a fistful of soil into his nostrils. He listened to the overly melodious and persuasive voice of his beloved man, a beautiful song that praises and gifts listeners with such gusto and enthusiasm, even his tucked feet itched to scramble out of the cart to sample a cup of the said leftover herbal tea. Best of all, it was attributed to Wei Ying's formidable, undisputable A wesome S elling S kill, which meant that he too, had his heart bought by the younger man at that very moment, and in reality, long, long ago in a dance they called 'fated love'.

Ten minutes later, Wei Ying tapped on Lan Zhan's topknot - which had to remain out in the open air like a sore thumb - and signalled the latter that it was safe to come out and clean himself up. Lan Zhan did that, and he wasn't surprised, but still very thankful and grateful for such a talented spouse, when he watched Wei Ying hold up a small pouch that tinkled with coins when shaken. They'd just earned ten silver pieces from selling stale, reheated tea, and Wei Ying even convinced one lady to buy the emptied claypot after extolling the virtues of reusing preloved kitchen earthenwares that had been handed down from generations after generations, and contained immaculate properties that are both tangible and flavourful, yet intangible and rich in history and supernatural powers - in exchange for a shiny piece of gold.

"Wei Ying... that's..." Lan Zhan's headache started to chew his mental calculator, but he knew he'd get this right, "... two gold pieces in total, for selling the tea and the pot."

"A bit more than a day's worth of pocket money that you used to give to me, back in our ol' lovely days stayin' at the Burial Mounds, eh?" Wei Ying winked at his man, and leaned forward to kiss the cheek, only to 'bleargh' and stick out his tongue when he realized that he'd kissed a face covered with dirt.

Lan Zhan nodded and blushed, still startled at how amazing Wei Ying's skills of breadwinning and providing their family of two were.

"... and when you're done washing up by the stream over there, it's your turn to push the cart, okay?" Wei Ying beamed the most charming smile ever.

.

They were getting close to the foot of the mountains, and the sun started its early descent as well. By then, Lan Zhan's bleak prediction that the two men - particularly Wei Ying - would be crawling on all fours, weak from cold and hunger, were fortunately dashed by Wei Ying's outstanding quick-thinking and survival skills.

The young man toyed with a Paperman crafted from a piece of smudged rag cloth found at the bottom of the cart - remnants of the rolls of Gusu Lan-famous white fabrics the group intended to sell early on in their seemingly failed expedition - and hit on a bright idea. "In times of conflict, Papermen are great when used for spying, although in times of peace, they hadn't been really put into service for their masters other than for mere entertainment value. What if I challenge all of us to think beyond - can Papermen be engaged to help us find, locate and obtain food?" he asked loudly to himself.

Not long after that question was posed, Wei Ying happily sat by a breathtakingly pretty sparkling pool by a waterfall, his walking cane improvised into a fishing rod with a Binding Spell as his thread and a wiggling twisted piece of worm-like cloth as his bait, and he'd caught two medium-sized riverfish for their afternoon snack - which was turning out to a full course meal. It didn't take much strength to reel in those tasty swimmers, not when the bait was also booby-trapped with a mini Lightning spell that Lan Zhan could easily embed without causing any discomfort to his health. Stunned fishes were easy game for a crippled man like Wei Ying.

Wei Ying also tried out remote-controlling; by sitting quietly in the cart, the two were able to observe wild pigeons that flew by and discover their nests, the occasional wild boar that strutted past, and generally the abundant wildlife at the base of the mountains that housed the Cloud Recesses. Wei Ying asked Lan Zhan to power-up Papermen pieces of cloth no bigger than a fingertip, and with whispered instructions to a reddened ear, the pieces were directed - blindly, because Lan Zhan couldn't really turn his injured head too much, otherwise he'd curl back up into a testicular ball of aches and groans - to slowly, sneakily lodge themselves into the feathers of tasty-looking birds or four-legged mammals on land. Then, Lan Zhan instructed Bichen to fly at incredible speeds through the dense undergrowth and tree foliage, to lock onto those Papermen pieces that acted like beacons, and deliver merciful, single-slice blows that either beheaded its victim or cleaved bodies into two. In case there were witnesses, Lan Zhan sent Silence spells to keep animals from alerting each other.

Bichen is an intelligent blade, and by utilizing this capability, the two soon had a meal of grilled fishes of varying sizes, a handwoven basket of crayfish and an assortment of crustaceans and shellfish, barbequed pigeons and hard-boiled bird eggs, wild boar meat, venison, a young bear, and some locally foraged plants that made awesome salads. Adding on to run of luck, a hunter passed by them, and Wei Ying gladly shared some of the spoils with him - and ended up selling highly-prized bear fur and parts, the deer meat, and the entire wild boar for a fatter pouch of money than the first one from the tea; the couple agreed not to have the latter two animals because they weren't sure if they were wild game, and whether Lan Zhan might suffer from a stroke or a heart attack from consuming such risky qi - deviating foods in his current wounded state.

When Lan Zhan burped politely from a full paunchy belly, Wei Ying again, treated the man with such tenderness and love, by kissing on the cheek, and asked, "My dear beloved wife, are you eating well? It's my duty to keep you fed and happy, after all." Lan Zhan slowly turned to his side and wanted to say that Yes, he was contented in a life provided by Wei Ying - and his eyes widened in amazement, then his cheeks blushed, when Wei Ying captured his grease-covered lips into a heart-stirring, touching kiss in the middle of the jungle, and embraced him in a strange, but comforting hug of a smaller man over a larger sized one; in that moment, Lan Zhan didn't mind about their height or size difference, or whether one boasted magics or swordplay abilities or carried a highly-esteemed lineage - it didn't matter, as long as Wei Ying was with him, by his side, caring and loving him in every step of their journey together. The sounds of insects around them rose in volume and intensity, drowning out Lan Zhan's screaming joy inside his wildly-beating heart.

Later, energized and lighter in mood, Lan Zhan directed Bichen to hover above the ground and pull their cart along the trail with the help of Binding spells as its reins. He felt confident in breaking a couple of laws of magic-usage written by the finest sages of the Grand Cultivation Council, especially since, as Wei Ying rightly pointed out, there was nobody around anyway to observe the historic creative use of qi -powered spells - and he had a full tank of that, thanks to Wei Ying's efforts to keep his belly full of good, wholesome and totally organic food.

Soon, the couple were on their way to Caiyi, cuddling warmly inside their cozy little creaky cart lined with fluffy pine needles, straw bedding and leaves, led by a floating majestic sword.

.

Or not.

Invariably, at such close proximity inside the creaky, moving cart, Lan Zhan shouldn't expect to be let off easily, and should know that he'd be sexually harassed at least once, forced to engage in tasty sexual intercourse at least twice, and indulge in his spouse's naughty lovemaking games thrice or more.

Wei Ying easily made short work of getting both of them into the mood, and Lan Zhan's pants mysteriously disappeared alongside with his.

"Lan Zhan and Wei Ying sitting in the tree, k-i-s-s-i-n-g...!" Wei Ying giggled as he grabbed his mediocally erect dick with one hand, and Lan Zhan's leaky, over six-incher giant snake between the legs with the other sweaty hairy arm, and thrust and slammed both turgid angry-red penises against each other, akin to a game of playing phallic-shaped Barbie dollies to kiss each other, pee-slit to pee-slit. Lan Zhan moaned tastefully with plenty of nnnnh and uuuhns and jerked his hips off the base of the cart with each penis-kiss. He couldn't fend away the sexual assault though, because Wei Ying rubbed the two cockheads with such finesse, that Lan Zhan's testicles tightened delightfully at the electricity coursing through his pelvis and he one-two'ed straight into Wei Ying's equally engorged-open pee-hole, when foreskins meshed and melded with one another to create a seamless connecting tube of cockmeat between their crotches.

"Ah, Lan Zhan! How could you do that, you incontinent slut! We're supposed to be kissing, not exchanging sperms!" the younger man laughed madly - and shivered at the goosebump-inducing sensations of penis-swallowing another man's dollop of creamy white semen -, but Lan Zhan wasn't listening, really. He had his hands full, literally, at the order of his lao gong ; Wei Ying instructed Lan Zhan to use one hand to play with his own nipple, and the other to grope, molest, pinch and twist Wei Ying's swelling man-areolae. The blazing fires of vigorously rubbing his, and his partner's nipples, were insane, sending flamethrowers into their hearts with each circle, each kneading, each poking and prodding of the soft, increasingly hardening nub of pink flesh; Wei Ying's had more hair around his nipples, but that didn't deter Lan Zhan's sexual hunger to keep running fingernails over the sensitive coin-sized mounds upon their chests.

(Had Qi Ren shifu been there to witness the men playing with their erogenous zones, one having fun with penises, the other happily groping breasts, he'd choked and spit out at least a cup of blood by then.)

The foreplay had reach titillating levels when both men were covered with sweat, when Lan Zhan's bandaged head threatened to burst into explosions of migraines in tandem with his exceedingly excited penis that kept jerking wildly Yes and Yes'es, so Wei Ying announced, "Like many rituals of the Lan family, the one that involves men fruitlessly copulating with one another in the pursuit of fathering make-believe offsprings in non-existent but enticingly imagined wombs, must be done in Perfection and in relative peace and quiet, the hallmarks of a true Lan virtue. Has it ever come across your mind, dear darling wife, that we can enjoy each other's companies without to run a gauntlet of sex marathons? Have you tried the kind of sex that actually cures headaches? Do you want to? Mmm?" Wei Ying cocked his head and gave the wife-y a very, very convincing million-dollar smile. Rosy-cheeked and hood-lidded Lan Zhan had to swallow down his pride and agree, as he unnh'd like a woman from Wei Ying's incessant lewd touches.

Lan Zhan knew that as the powerless wife-y, he'd signed up for more than he bargained for, and probably tricked, when he perceived that he was making love with not one, but up to five husbands. He found himself maneuvered and manhandled with such strength, grace, dexterity and precision to a quiet glade within the forest, laid and spread atop a bed of leaves and grass, surrounded by romantic aromatic candles that burn and cast a soft amber glow on their joined bodies, and a sweet, disarmingly fragrant scent that made him giddy, numbed and pleasantly relaxed - his worries melted away, the irate throbbing inside his skull dissipated -, that when Wei Ying straddled and rode him with such gentleness and fervour, of hips that shook and moved in circles, of tight, moist muscles grasping his overjoyed penis inside the lao gong then massaged exquisitely until he one-two'ed nearly constantly - he sensed that he wasn't just making love with lovely Wei Ying, but multitudes of others; each time he pumped his hips up, deep, deep into Wei Ying, he felt - remembered, recognized - the fleshy bumpy sucking sensations that reminisced of Wei san ge 's teenage sweet clenching virginal vagina, in his female form; then, when he withdrew completely, he can hear, smell the hot, heavy panting of Wei da ge 's breaths behind his reddened ears, and inexplicably, an ethereal rod of flesh penetrating his closed anus, stretching his rump and rectum from within, filling him up like an inflating sausage, kneading his poor, dying, quivering prostate gland with each ghostly fuck from behind; Wei Ying giggled and panted with each thrust from Lan Zhan, even farted when his butthole loosened from the ceaseless drilling, but Lan Zhan couldn't reciprocate and chuckle - because Invisible Hands pinned his limbs and Wei er ge 's lovely lips locked onto his, and phantom kisses with intertwined tongues swirling inside Lan Zhan's mouth left him more than breathless; and finally, the icing on the cake, really, he knew, based on the small size and delicateness, that Wei didi was somewhere below, etherealizing through his blood-engorged pelvic region, and the naughty nine-year old boy suckled and licked every single organ, blood vessel, vesicle and shuddering tube and pipes inside his bodily plumbing - the boy was greedy when he made love with the dead-deader-deadest prostate gland with a talented tongue like a child ravenously sucking off a tanghulu fruit from its stick, then lick that said syrup-coated stick like he'd lick Lan Zhan's convulsing urethra, sending waves after waves of muscular contraction until the man aaahn and oooh'd so many times, drops of pre-cum mixed with escaped opaque viscous semen, oozed out when his hips trembled because he got too excited, and couldn't stop his seed from spilling from a filled-to-the-brim cup that was swirled over and over in circles, and tasty liquids spurted, sputtered and dribbled out again and again - sex with Wei Ying, or multiple Wei Yings, became a visceral reflex to celebrate their mutual love, and he wholeheartedly surrendered his body, mind and soul to his beloved husband-wife-mother of all his future children, swirling within the warm cavern-womb that contained his spilled essence, to the delight of his emptied, incarcerated loins that belonged to that one and only man, his lovely, lovely Wei Ying.

(Had Lan Zhan kept his godly powers, he would be able to see through the veil and magical barriers, and detect the outlines of his other four wives - now husbands - who work in lethal synchrony with Wei Ying to please the man trapped on the ground, whose sexual desires were inflamed and fanned out in such great pleasurable rhythmic waves from making love with multiple partners, be it ghostly or real, and orgasmed many, many times without breaking too much sweat. He floated in a seemingly unending spiral of climaxes, cresting his peaks repeatedly, remained in an indefinite, restful, boneless and deliriously happy state of fluttering heartbeats, testosterone-fuelled boiling blood and smoking-hot volatile prostatic fluids - the only visible signs were the contorted facial expressions of pleasure, the occasional spasm of muscles in his limbs, the tell-tale shuddering of hips, and ripples of penile muscles when orgasm strikes, and strikes so gently like smashing Guanyin statues into a wall of pillows, bursting into colourful feathers and balloons, accompanied by the music of Wei Ying singing praises for Lan Zhan's virility, the mixed heady scents of making love in the middle of wild forests and smelly masculine sweat, the taste of many lips and tongues that love not just on the lips but everywhere else including five tongues upon his incredibly overjoyed fountaining penis, and finally, the touch of five hands upon his loins to give him the legendary, unstoppable and skyrocketing Fiveway combo that sent Lan Zhan's soul soaring beyond the skies, beyond their Mortal Realm, deep, deep into space and slingshot around the Milky Way, his penis dribbling man-milk to paint his universe in shades of intimate and fated love, of molten volcanic seed, and of naughty whispers of making many babies with all Wei Yings in his world to father twins, triplets each.)

Eventually, Lan Zhan settled down for their favourite sex position, missionary. He allowed himself to be buoyed by invisible hands, entirely gave up his bodily controls to those manifestations of phantom Wei Yings, and he floated in dream-like world where his hips were gently swayed in an in-and-out manner, in a languid tempo until he drifted between sleep, wakefulness, whimpering Wei Ying's name when his sleeping penis had been massaged too many times inside his lovely, lovely man-husband, of ghostly fingers and tongues gently assaulting, vibrating and stretching his rectum then his swollen prostate into sparkling fireworks, every time he felt an over-nine incher monster serpent invade his anus he wasn't sure if he was being fucked or milked anymore, then having those same incorporeal hands slapping his penis even while he pumped deeply into the spouse's undulating canal, of teeth grazing the scrotum and long fingernails raking scorching lines on his bulbous cockhead, having his nipples tweaked left him gasping for air as he yielded to the abuse and to his masochistic streak; all these head-spinning sensations led him into a state of fever, worship and howling like an animal in heat that wanted to breed with its mate despite the fact that there was nothing left inside him; nevertheless, billions of unborn sperms cells - the seedless fluids that hadn't mature into their exquisite wines - had been forcibly extracted from testicles to glans, happily squeezed themselves out of the tube and trickled like useless hot pee and plopped into a pool of spent brethren within the sex-fiend named Wei Ying, and Lan Zhan was left writhing atop the husband moaning incomprehensibly like a wanton male prostitute wanting to sow his seeds everywhere and in every direction.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, you're such an obedient, docile wife, look at you. You look like you've downed three bowls of mala spicy congee, then struck by lightning the same number of times with your yawning, sneezing and ugly grimacing - and yet you continue to fuck your tasty wife-penis into your husband-asspussy despite how tortured you appear to be!”

“Ah, ah, lao po , not so fast, you're not a carpenter sawing a piece of wood, stop moving so fast, otherwise my asshole will overheat and catch fire!”

“We’re husband and wife, my honey darling, we’re made for each other, so you must perform as hard as much as I’m trying my best to please you... here, your husband is spreading his legs so that you can plunge deeper, and make lots of babies inside here... Ah, you terrible wife-y, how dare you mock me! Why are you orgasming before I finished my sentence? Stop slamming your hips into mine so forcefully, why are you crushing me with your pregnant weight? I’ll become a jianbing pancake in no time with you hammering me so hard and deep! I’ll be bow-legged for the rest of my life! Ha ha ha!”

“You just peed inside me again! What are you, an incontinent idiot? Your precious wife-sperm is soiled with your wife-pee inside your loving husband! Now clench your ass and start fucking me like a real wo-man! You must get hard, and fuck me faithfully and with vigour, so that your bladder doesn’t loosen itself like just now - exercise builds muscles both inside and out! Do I hear a ‘Yes’? Hmm... ‘nnngh’ is not an acceptable reply! Do I hear a ‘Yes, Sir’, soldier? Mm. Good boy.”

“Oh, Lan Zhan, you’re tired, aren’t you? Poor baby, my poor, poor baby. Slide inside your husband’s pussy and rest a bit until the count of five, alright? Yes, good boy, all the way to the hilt... and stay there, catch your breath. One... Two... Three... I’m working my inner muscles around you to please your tired arousal too, so that you’re happy from head to toe... ah, ah, Lan Zhan! You’re a bad boy! Why did you squirt your semen again! Rest, you fool, stop spraying your seed and waste your chance to properly breed your husband! ... Four... Five... now, slowly pull out completely. Yes... ah-ha ha ha... I just farted, because my anus is too stretched and couldn’t close up properly when it isn’t filed with your meat. Now, slide in again, imagine there’s our baby inside your husband’s belly, and you’re here to greet it as its parent... deeper, can you knock the door, and gently say hello to our fat, healthy twin, triplet, be careful not to wake them up? AH STOP RUTTING SO HARD INSIDE ME, YOU ANIMAL! IT’S TOO EARLY TO FEED THEM WITH THIRTY SERVINGS OF YOUR MAN-MILK, YOU USELESS BASTARD!”

Their lovemaking was punctuated with lots of laughter and evil cackling, and Lan Zhan was thoroughly drained, happily spent, and soon, he fell into slumber when his quaking body couldn't hold itself up anymore, dreaming of fat babies with Wei Ying's sparkling grinning brown eyes and his own serious pouty face, swimming in buckets of man-milk and of Wei Ying cooing at him to love him always, to stay by his side, and to stay together forever and beyond in a home of five husbands and one very fortunate wife.

Lan Zhan didn't suffer any other headaches that afternoon.

.

The next time Lan Zhan woke up, he was sitting on a bench with his back against the wall. He made rude half-snore, half-snorting sound with his nose, then licked away a trail of drool that found its way to the edge of his lips.

“Yes, gongzi , please open your eyes a bit wider like that, because they keep drooping down mid-way, so I wasn't able to paint them nicely. Can you smile a bit too? Otherwise you'd look like you're half sleeping with your slackened jaws. And Lan xianshen (Mister Lan), please straighten the back of your groom... er, bride... so that he doesn't slump at an odd angle.”

Wei Ying squealed with delight, “Ah, Lan Zha-- err, lao po , you're awake!” and grabbed Lan Zhan by the shoulders to sit him up properly. The hapless man blinked his eyes in a lamp-lit room with a few chairs and other worn-out furniture, and wanted to stretch his limbs from an very, very nice sleep without rushing back-and-forth to the Heavens (since his office has been dismantled and he was no longer an Emperor), then pop those tired joints (he remembered bits of the wild sex drowned in semi-consciousness, and his body still thrummed with remnant sweetness of orgasmic joys), and yawn loudly (in a world of Wei Ying and he, he was free to be himself and express his needs, as rudely and as crass as he wanted), also wipe away that drool that was about to slip down his chin - when Wei Ying caught his wrists and gently shook him.

Then, realizing that there was another man in the room - an aged artist with brushes in his hands and a canvas in front - and then realizing that he was garbed in embarrassing red robes rather than his pure whites - he turned around to Wei Ying almost so fast that he thought his neck might have cracked in the process, and stared at the latter with wild eyes asking ‘what the f--- is this’. Wei Ying too, wore reds and a familiar traditional headdress for bridegrooms, and had his face done up in shades of pinks and reds - his face paled at the sudden frightening thought that he, the highly-esteemed man named Lan Wang Ji, may have been dolled up with the same humiliating palette of make-up too - and gods forbid, Wei Ying wore his forehead ribbon around his head, so the original owner wanted to reach up to his head and feel for his stolen ribbon, or perhaps there was a bandage over it--

“ Lao po , sit straight, pose and smile! We’re having our couple portrait drawn in this little studio room at the Cai district council office... I’m applying for our marriage certificate right now!” Wei Ying merrily said while keeping a firm grip on Lan Zhan's wrists.

Wei Ying beamed his brightest smile of a husband taking the formally-engaged wife's hand in marriage. Deep down, an utterly confused Lan Zhan felt a tendril of headache roaring its way like a hurtling horse carriage without its coachman.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 157

“Did... did I pose for all... of these?” Lan Zhan was gobsmacked at the sheer number of couple pictures drawn by the professional artist, who had since packed up his canvas, paints and other equipment, and left the studio; no less than ten palm-sized pieces of high-quality rice paper blended with animal skins, littered a tabletop, each filled with details and portraits of the two, in various romantic poses - holding hands, doing heart-shaped gestures by arms or fingers, ballroom-dance style, cuddling side by side, husband embracing the wife from the back and looking adorably over the said wife’s broad shoulders, and so on - however, all of them had Lan Zhan’s face drawn in a very unappealing way, as he looked dull, sleeping, eyes half-closed, mouth agape, drunken, and the like, whilst Wei Ying’s was cheerful and grinning, to the point that his eyes became mere slits in some pieces.

“Enn! Your body was very pliant and malleable, and you were very obedient even while snoring. Lao po, you’re really good at lucid dreaming, and followed the artist’s instructions very well!” Wei Ying laughed and slid off the rented red robes provided by the studio, and handed over Lan Zhan’s original white Gusu Lan robes hung from the wardrobe, then nudged the older man to change and not to stare too hard at the pictures. However, he could not peel his eyes off the last picture - still fresh with glistening wetness, and even the ink smelled damp on the parchment - and Lan Zhan admired the quality and realism depicted in that single snapshot of their blissful matrimonial lives - every strand of hair was painted, every wrinkle on the skin was touched up, the shape of eyes and lips were immaculate, and unique features on their appearances and clothes were captured in near perfection -, of the husband and wife sitting side by side, albeit a little stiffly, but certainly fit for official registration uses, of Wei Ying smiling brightly in auspicious red with a white forehead ribbon, and Lan Zhan’s facial expression was actually quite acceptable for his standards, stoic, serious with a faint upturn of lips at the edges, also dressed in lucky reds; his bandage was taken off and the artist had kindly altered some areas so that he looked more handsome, had an ethereal airbrushed complexion, and didn't sport the ugly swollen bruise at the front of his head - the precursor of photoshopping, indeed.

Then, Wei Ying gently snatched the picture from Lan Zhan's hands and piled up the white robes upon his open arms. "You can admire the rest of the pictures and my real face later - all night, if you want. Change back to your white robes, and take our belongings from the table, dear, then meet me at the registrar's office, down the hallway to the right. I'll get the paperwork done and pay the fees," he smugly addressed his just-married wife with a cheerful business-like tone, and waved the older man off, before disappearing out of the studio.

Alone, no longer groggy, Lan Zhan experienced a faint unsettling feeling weighing inside the heart; on one hand, he was overwhelmed with the fact that he was getting married in the Cai district which, through political and administrative means, meant that the matrimonial union was recognizable and considered valid by his sect based in the Cloud Recesses; on the other, the rush in putting things on paper and valuing the entire process of getting hitched in numbers - one gold piece for the certificates, and another gold piece for the artist's exceptional handiwork in creating extra pieces of portraits -, the lack of sincerity, wedding vows, and I-do's and I-love-you's that typically embody a true marriage of body, mind, heart and soul, which didn't materialize - at least not to his awareness and appreciation - the entire procession felt like forced farce, a shotgun wedding, and a quick-and-dirty way for eloping couples to legitimize their relationship and thus, have no fear to sleep together for enjoyable, procreative purposes - or not - in the face of their families and communities.

He told himself that perhaps, this was how Wei Wuxian, the just-married husband, operated. Everything was done directly and with overconfidence, with such eagerness and enthusiasm, without subtlety or humility, disconcertingly efficient and even ruthless in some cases, greased by his suave charms and his seemingly grand, influential connections, and of course, money. So, by the time he met up with Wei Ying, he had already sweet-talked his way through a number of clerks and officials, convinced that his fictional identity was real and his true circumstances were mere fairy tales, and seemingly turned everything to his favour. It helped that it was near closing time, and everyone was raring to clock-out, thus, forms were read by impatient passing glances, waxed seals of approvals were stamped without second thoughts, and final certificates with red-thumbprints were issued recklessly without needed background and security checks.

At six o' clock in the evening, when the last rays of Springtime sunlight melted into the dusky void in the skies, frosty chill reigned over the expanse of the town, and the crowds in the streets started to thin and gather around bustling restaurants and residential buildings - Lan Zhan found himself outside the gates of the darkened, closed offices of the town council, still giddy with a few scrolls of parchments and certificates - including the prized marriage certificate - in his right arm, and Wei Ying warmly clasped his left - because they didn't wear their gloves, so hand-holding especially in a particularly less populous street appeared to be their choice of keeping shaking fingers snugly heated.

"Phew!" Wei Ying exclaimed with a huff, and a cloud appeared from his mouth then disappeared just as quickly into the air, "I literally ran downhill and even forgone the use of the walking cane in certain steep stretches," in which, he held up his favourite assistive tool, "But I'm so glad we made it in time and everything went according to plan!"

"Plan?" Lan Zhan raised an eyebrow, still not really catching up to Wei Ying - that man was light-years ahead of Lan Zhan's more down-to-earth senses, in terms of looking ahead and anticipating their next moves.

Wei Ying stabbed his cane to the ground to keep it upright, then used his free hand to pick each document off Lan Zhan's finger, and clumsily inserted them into pockets beneath Lan Zhan's robes - like a husband that dictating the wife to keep their precious possessions safe -, "Of course! Have you already forgotten what I told you during-- ah, you were asleep back then... nevermind. You're now Mister Wei Wang Xian, and I'm your husband, Mister Lan Wu Ji. I've registered our new identities and our relationship, they're all in the paperwork, if you bothered to read them," he patted Lan Zhan's chest that seemed to grow a few centimeters from the documents stowed beneath the layers of robes.

Lan Zhan was speechless - he opened and closed his mouth, then pointed a finger at himself -, and Wei Ying barked out a laughter and cut him off, "Stop acting like a confused fool, dear!" and quickly stole a glance around them - fortunately, there were no passers-by around the mostly deserted administrative area of the town -, before leaning forward to give the surprised older man a quick peck on the rosy cheeks, "Good thing the civil registrar was an impressionable person, easy to manipulate with my colourful stories, and he didn't ask twice when I suggested to him that we're simply orphaned men who were born under incredibly coincidental circumstances with the same names of the legendary characters of the cultivation world - one famous, the other notorious -, but by star-crossed fates and all that rubbish, we met then fell in love as a homosexual couple, and needed to change our names to wed, and to wed as soonest as possible!" he whispered excitedly, before pulling back with a chuckle.

The older man couldn't find the humour in what he'd just heard - in fact, he was mired in more baffling thoughts, and was stumped at what was done. His gaze hardened and his free hand balled into a fist of worry - an ache sparked inside his skull, and he struggled to remain calm.

“Guess what? Here’s the best part - the official took a good look at each of us, and believed everything I said! That you were pregnant,” Wei Ying sneaked a hand to cup and jiggle a love handle around Lan Zhan’s midriff, and the latter was absolutely aghast at the shameless behaviour and swatted the offending hand with an indignant snort, “That we needed to get married, otherwise the kid would be born without legal parents; that despite you and I bear striking resemblances to the said legendary characters, however because I was so thin, scarred and hobbled with a walking cane, and you were pudgy and your facial hair rendered you unrecognizable to some extent, and because I was the one wearing the Lan forehead ribbon instead of you - he took the bait like a fish in the lotus pond! Ha ha ha!” he guffawed even more obnoxiously than before, and Lan Zhan had to turn away with his cheeks beet-red, along with his earlobes, and he gritted his teeth to hold back a rising wave of annoyance. “How dare the husband do this to me...! Shameless!” his heart petulantly protested, without a word, of course.

It was Wei Ying’s plan, indeed. Soon, the cold set in and Wei Ying hurried across the streets, dragging Lan Zhan by keeping a firm, possessive grip on a wrist, with the intention to locate a medicine shop to buy a new bandage for Lan Zhan’s head and more medicinal pastes. Lan Zhan allowed himself to be toyed and pulled along for the ride, literally, and in between stopping at sidewalks to catch a breath, or waiting for Wei Ying to scout every storefront in sight, he had the chance to check his paperwork - Wei Ying was, for better or worse, true to his words; he had an identity certificate issued by the Cai district town council headquartered in Caiyi, which stated his new name as Wei Wang Xian, preceding name and alias, Lan Wang Ji born of ‘somewhere around the Cloud Recesses, near Cai district’, and an ugly half-asleep double-chinned mugshot of him was pasted on the parchment then sealed with bright red wax on the corners; and for sure, the marriage certificate too - he received a copy of the original, which bore an imprinted mirror-image version of the original couple-picture he’d seen at the studio (he thought it was rather creative, for an artist to paint one picture, then stamp-pressed it onto another document while the ink was still wet, to create a mirror-image version of that picture), and the loud, brash words proclaiming the union between the two fictitiously named persons that, if traced back to other official documents, would legitimize the marriage of Lan Wang Ji to Wei Wu Xian, theoretically, he would, from now on, carry the Wei surname--

“Darling, come here! This store is still open and after enquiring, they have some medicines for your swollen forehead. Come, come, lao po , let’s ask the healer inside to take a look at you, then patch you up. I still have money from selling the wild meats to the hunter this afternoon, so don’t worry about choosing a good medicine. You must look more presentable and respectable when we have dinner at the Sunshine Inn with the rest of the group,” Wei Ying interrupted his spiralling thoughts and called out from the entrance of a dimly lit store that sold sundry goods, traditional foods and herbs; many shops have closed after sundown, with business owners returning to their families after a hard day’s work.

Lan Zhan’s feet moved quicker than he would like, and he blamed the plummeting temperatures, and a sudden urge to hide his embarrassment from public view. The streets were becoming quieter, and the scenery of empty cobbled paths and dirt roads, of few piles of garbage left on the curbs by store owners and pedestrians alike, of cheers of " ganbei !" and boisterous conversations echoing from opened windows of nearby family restaurants, of the occasional stray animals and rodents scurrying into dark alleyways - it didn't look too different from his days living in Yiling province; distantly, he wondered how much Wei Ying remembered about their actual shared pasts and relationships, though truthfully, he was guilty of muddling up the man's memories for selfish reasons, and now he was regretting his actions very much.

"There, I spread the paste on the bruise and wrapped it with curative herbal leaves. I hope it sticks, this time - you know, I wished the healer would do it for us professionally, but she was in a rush to close the shutters and return home... that's too bad!" Wei Ying exclaimed as he applied the finishing touches to Lan Zhan's ribbonless, reddened forehead.

The men sat on an outdoor bench at a small park to tend to the wife-y's injury; Lan Zhan knew he should feel either flattered at best, or downright humiliated at worse, but he was neither; the lovely husband peppered generous amounts of kisses and caresses, and endearing 'does it hurt?'s and 'here, let me put a smooch to make it feel better', as he worked with the gauze and the purchased medicines using his hard-earned money - Lan Zhan blushed a deeper shade of red, his heart raced and swelled with indescribable feelings of love and gratitude, that he was content to remain sitting motionless, expressionless, with eyes averted from his saviour - the husband -, with one hand holding tightly onto the hem of Wei Ying's robes, clinging for his dear life, because if he didn't, he may be swept away by such warm, loving feelings that a man like him would experience only once in a lifetime, with the spouse destined to be his soulmate forever and beyond.

(If time could stand still, just for a longer moment, this would be it, Lan Zhan's irritatingly conflicted heart screamed, without making a sound, of course.)

"Wei Ying," he blurted, finally relented, unsure of how to open up a conversation he'd buried inside him for too long; he knew that inevitably, they needed to talk and get the cat out of the bag, draw out the elephant in the room, and just admit his greatest weakness - pride and ego be damned - because it concerned the future of their blessed marital harmony and co-existence. "I must say this," he spoke hesitantly, and Wei Ying stopped whatever he was doing to wordlessly respond, "Go on, I'm listening, dear."

Lan Zhan explained that somehow, he felt vastly different after the crash, and that he'd lost all access to his Godhood, that he couldn't teleport to the Heavens to find his way to Palace, that he couldn't contact any of his servants in other Realms, that he felt absolutely normal with no extra special powers, no ability to warp space, time and people's fates, and that--

-- You're no longer an Emperor, the owner of a mega corporation, and the Grand Patriarch of zillions of species and an infinite number of subjects? A little birdie told me about it, and don't ask me how. Losing one's job and prestige is part and parcel of life's ups and downs, isn't it? I'm still here with you, and I'm not going anywhere," Wei Ying interrupted with such smoothness, finesse and charm, exuding such great hope and promise for their future happiness no matter what challenges are thrown in their way, that Lan Zhan swore he could burst into a spectacular explosion of lovey-dovey mush at that instant, similar to the time when he renounced his position as Chief Cultivator in the past timeline. Wei Ying made his biggest problems seem like just another measly chapter in their journey in life.

(Thump, thump, the heart quivers with such delight at the love showered upon the intoxicated-with-love, infatuated Lan Zhan.)

“Whatever happens to both of us, you just have to call my name, and I will always reply to you, ‘I’m here’ (我在), lao po ,” the younger man added, and at that point, Lan Zhan’s thrilled heart squealed and went into an imaginary cardiac arrest - without a squeak, as well.

(Three strikes of Cupid’s Arrows to the overjoyed heart, and Lan Zhan was absolutely, convincingly, head over heels for Wei Ying.)

The couple remained on the bench for some time, by holding hands and gazing lovingly into each other's eyes, until Wei Ying sneezed, and it was Lan Zhan's turn to fuss over the husband, by draping his warmest outer robe over the smaller man.

.

A sliver of conversation, as the two men made their way through thinning crowds to the Sunshine Inn; fortunately there were ample signages to show them the way, and there were street lamps lighting the streets and enough curious glances thrown at their direction, that the two did not inadvertently get caught up in holding hands like besotted, drunken fools and wander off into some alleyway for some tasty lovers' trysts.

“You know, I thought you were about to drop a bombshell about the whole marriage process, like complaining how it looks like a sham because we didn't properly agree on a bride-price, ask a priest to bless us with prayers at the temple, perform the auspicious tea ceremony for newlyweds or even have a wedding dinner with guests from both families. But fear not, my wife, I will do what I can, starting with this--”

(in which, Wei Ying dragged Lan Zhan off the main road when they spotted a small altar built outside a temple dedicated to local gods; Wei Ying purposely chose to pray at the gods of happiness, fertility and prosperity, and Lan Zhan followed suit without any questions - three incense sticks were lit, they bowed three times, and they were off again towards their destination.)

“Mn. I’m a little dissatisfied, but I understand your decision to rush such a sacred ceremony. You need to adopt a new identity from tomorrow sunrise, and I must be disguised and remain inconspicuous, for the sake of the success of the trade negotiations, and for the survival of the sect.”

(in which, Wei Ying skips in his steps from utter happiness that everything has gone according to plan, and he reached behind to give Lan Zhan’s buttocks a light swat, followed by an apologetic circular knead; the latter nnnh’d in masochistic pleasure and secretly relished having his glutes molested like a piece of hand-pressed dough, in public view.)

“My darling, do not be depressed by such seriousness although you are absolutely, factually correct; there is still fun to be had in this game of play-pretend! I want our first night together, for I, the husband, and for you, the wife, to be blessed with the joys of a sexy red wedding night!”

(in which, after looking around to make sure there was nobody staring at them, he reached even lower and groped Lan Zhan’s balls, then tested their weight; the older man lost his underwear again after his afternoon nap-cum-orgy. Lan Zhan nngaah’d and his back straightened as a result, like a cat that had its tail twisted with fetishy glee; Wei Ying determined, through counting the number of wrinkles upon the sagging, heavy ballsacks, extrapolation of gravimetric analysis, and second-guessing the volume, texture and viscosity of its honeyed nectary contents, that Lan Zhan would have enough man-milk to satisfy not just one, but five Wei Yings in total, for that night.)

(the sounds of a man clearing his throat, after having his balls richly stimulated.) “One question continues to trouble me, lao gong .”

“Speak, so that I may put to rest your concerns, lao po !”

“How did you manage to convince the civil registrar about my male pregnancy? Was the officer ever suspicious about your far-fetched tales about the Lan family traditions? Surely any person of Lan descent in Gusu would smell a rat and probe into the lineage and caste level of the person named Lan Wu Ji.”

“Eh... ehh... err... that’s-- that’s two, no three questions! You cheat! I shall not indulge in your overzealousness. Let’s just say that... err... err... the officer wasn’t of Lan surname. Yeah, that’s it. He’s a Wei. No, a Huang. Err, I mean, Hong.”

(in which, in the background, a violin’s screeching squeak plays, and Lan Zhan’s eyebrows rose a notch. Busted.)

“Wei.” (the stare hardens.)

“Is that a question? Or are you addressing me... err... I mean, that officer?”
(he looks away, whistles innocently in pretense.)

“Do I know him?” (the stare becomes blazing lasers, figuratively speaking. Wei Ying shriveled from the unwanted attention, tried to continue his whistle, but faltered into blowing hot air.)

“... nevermind.”

(in which, several shadowed figures emerged from the closed gates of Caiyi Town’s council office complex, and in their hands were treasure chests from the treasury, piles of secret and valuable documents, bags of equipment from the armoury, and lots of other goodies looted from the councillors’ desks and storage rooms. Four Wei siblings, aged from a mere child to a man in his mid-life, sneaked away, cackling like robbers in the night, and with a twirl of fingers from the amazing eldest man, they fwip! ’ed out of sight into the dark, tranquil night.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 158

Wei Ying's enviable interpersonal skills were used to their utmost best, when the couple reached Sunshine Inn; they were immediately greeted by a delightful ambush by three overjoyed juniors and one teary-eyed Wen Ning, in the best way a man-cum-guardian could ever possibly dream of; even crowd-shy and hug-allergic Lan Zhan had to take a step back, to stare incredulously at how three laughing-crying boys clung to Wei Ying's legs and bawling Wen Ning gave a tight, heartwarming, brotherly embrace from the side; the reception was shockingly touching even though it had just been a little more than a day since they parted at that site of the avalanche.

The man started to pacify everyone and told them that everything was fine, soothed their anxieties with his bright, confident presence, and even acted as a gracious host to all their troubles - first, by waving at the innkeeper to order a banquet in a private room, and handed an undisclosed amount of gold pieces in an unnoticeable pass of clasped fists - then, skillfully drew everyone's attention away from high-flying emotions and to focus on the task at hand, that is, to have a good meal, to share good stories, and to reunite and enjoy the evening as a family.

It turned out that the boys had an adventure of a lifetime in their absence, ranging from getting lost and found, getting chased by predatory animals, gangs of bandits and magical denizens, losing their belongings, stealing to stave off hunger and to pay the innkeeper an extra deposit because they looked more like dirty vagrants ala Wen Ning than respectable customers, and so much more. They also had the chance to go sightseeing, window-shop (because money was tight), try out new skills in fun fairs and local tournaments, and sample new foods (with the little money they had and, against all odds and Lan virtues, those stolen from someone's money pouch that was carelessly left on a teahouse table). The breadth and extent of novel experiences of venturing out on their own and facing the dangers and life challenges they'd not encountered before, was probably too much for the juniors (such as being forced to steal), and Wen Ning was overwhelmed in babysitting those three adorable tearful boys.

“It... it was a terribly guilty feeling, yet exhilarating at the same time, Wei qianbei , to take someone else’s money and spend it all on snacks, clothes, souvenirs and accessories!”

“I-- I’m the captain of the guards in the Cloud Recesses, not in this town, so-- so this is out of my jurisdiction! I... err... Yeah, I applied for a paid leave so I’m enjoying myself as a commoner! A fully grown-up man! Why, we even strolled past the red light district at the western edge of the town--”

“Jing Yi, you fool! Why must you spill everything out, especially in front of Hanguang Jun? You may not be in service, but he’s still your employer, you know! Next, you’re going to tell him what we saw in the brothels, and what we did with the bratty street kids at the funfair... You’ll be cursed by the cooties!”

“Boys...! Let’s focus on telling them about our survey at the markets, the prices that traders are willing to buy and sell, then what we learned about the poisoning plagues from the chief at the police station, new leads from the latest victims about the suspects, and the final results from the investigators that will be announced tomorr--”

“Wen shushu , should we refrain from jumping to conclusions based on hearsay from the police and the people we interviewed? I really think the clues are strange, and could even be red herrings left by the perpetrators, if indeed the disease was man-made! I mean, why the mention of fierce corpses that seemingly crawled out of the graves of the deceased, the use of curses and ancient magics, and why are other sects now being implicated...”

“Si Zhui, you should hide your relative. I fear he may jeopardize the investigations if the police officers find out that he’s the real Ghost General of the extinct Qishan Wen, and they may throw us into jail out of fear, then capture and experiment with him to examine the nature of fierce corpses! I mean... did you see the amount of collected evidence of fierce corpse sightings from this morning?”

“Hey, Jin gongzi , don’t talk about Wen Ning like that! He’s as much as a part of this just like any of us. He fought and protected us from those bad guys we met in the mountains and when we were attacked by kidnappers and thieves last night. I couldn’t protect you even with my sword and my skills as the captain, yet Wen Ning saved all of us from being sold off as slaves in a foreign land!”

“Boys, boys...! Please don’t argue anymore. We did everything we could, and I’m not perfect either. If it weren’t for me losing the money pouch in the first place, we wouldn’t have to endure such a financially disastrous situation, that led us to sneaking out at night to look for something to eat and steal from someone’s orchards, only to be chased by smugglers looking for a quick sale! We didn’t know that this inn served only modest, bland vegetarian meals with Zewu Jun’s economy-class reservations, after all! Just looking at the list of meats on the menu that Wei gongzi ordered for us... I’ve so overjoyed to be able to have a filling meal tonight, I’m crying undead manly tears... wuuu... wuuu...”

Wei Ying sighed and welcomed the confusing, intriguing, excited chatter that seemed to steer itself in all directions; the pains of being a sidekick in a story reared its ugly head once more, and Wei Ying knew he had a whole lot more to ask, listen, digest and analyze than what he initially thought. It wasn't the first time he and Lan Zhan were saddled by such mysteries of the supernatural in nature. He continued to cheerfully maneuver between conflicting lines of information and opinions, patting them on the backs and giving hugs when necessary, which allowed the boys to unload their piled-up need to share their latest commentaries and feelings, and that made them feel better. He also encouraged them to take in new insights and lessons learnt with an open mind and an open heart - such as the fact that walking past a brothel doesn't mean one catches the cooties -, and Lan Zhan couldn't agree more with a deep, sagely nod.

The couple was about to share their side of the story in the private banquet room, when the waiters arrived with a wonderful sumptuous twelve-course dinner - and two burly-looking guards escorted Master Lan Qi Ren and Sect Leader Zewu Jun through heavy doors into the room.

.

“... Wei... err, Lan Wu Ji, must you do this? There is only us, the family, and we're already so familiar with one another, there's no need for such... extravagant displays of politeness and decorum!” Zewu Jun stammered in his seat, as he quickly took the presented teacup off Wei Ying's hands, for wanting to avoid any further embarrassment in front of the entire group .

“Huh! This bountiful meal is paid by the brat - so we must savour every moment, because there's no telling when we'll have good food like this, after tonight,” Qi Ren shifu grumbled on the biggest plush chair in the room, and picked up Lan Zhan's presented teacup, then took a swig out of it, before placing it back to the raised tray; he was thirsty anyway after a long day in Caihong and now, in Caiyi. Another filled cup remained on the tray, in which Lan Zhan shuffled on his knees towards his older brother and gestured with a slight tilt of chin and a hard stare, to plead the Sect Leader to already do the deed and be done with the rushed, but disguised and incredibly important ritual - at least to the couple's eyes.

"Sect Leader Zewu Jun," Wei Ying addressed the man he knelt in front of, "I promised to bring my partner here by sundown, but I think I arrived at the inn just after the last rays of the sun sunk below the horizon. I'm trying to make up for disrespecting your honour by having this banquet to satisfy everyone's hunger and tiredness, and with this cup of tea, to seek your forgiveness." The words were so eloquent and impactful, and Xi Chen da ge wasted no time and downed the cups served by the couple - at last, four empty cups lay on the trays, and Wei Ying beamed his brightest smile.

The juniors and Wen Ning were a bit perplexed but they watched as witnesses anyway - and guessed that Wei Ying made a boo-boo and therefore behaved such obsequiously; Qi Ren shifu 's scorn was proof that Wei Ying landed himself in hot water and was guilty as charged, compounded by the fact that Lan Zhan didn't say anything in his defense, because he was a man of undisputable virtue, after all.

"Oh... Wu Ji," Xi Chen kept glancing around at the waiters who were busily setting the tables and arranging the twelve-course dishes on the large circular table that could seat up to fifteen persons, - everyone had agreed to use Wei Ying's pseudonym unless the coast was clear -, "Please, rise up, there is no need to kneel before us. Whatever wrongdoing you claim has actually not harmed any of us or our future prospects. I've drank your tea in thanks for your hard work and for that forgiveness that you seek - so please, let's put this behind us, enjoy the dinner as one family, and talk to our heart's content since our last meeting!". Xi Chen was a little flustered at being addressed so formally, so he quickly diverted everyone's attention and gestured towards Lan Zhan, "For example, Wu Ji, you took care of my younger brother so well, and even changed his bandage so that he looks and feels better - I mean, just look at him, he is basically smiling and glowing with positive qi even as we speak! -, and for that, I'm also grateful to you too, gongzi ," he said; of course, Lan Zhan looked no different than the silent, expressionless person that Wei Ying knew too well, whose eyes were perpetually downcast and lips always a tight straight line.

A couple of formal pleasantries exchanged later, Wei Ying sent a wink at Lan Zhan - some telepathy occurred, but nobody would ever know what was exchanged -, and the couple bowed three times before rising to their feet. Qi Ren shifu looked every bit pleased, with a contemptuous "I told you so" look on his bearded face, probably in his vindication that he did, after all, predicted the troublemaker to be a source of bad omens and inconveniences for their family.

Later, Wei Ying also presented some cheap souvenirs he managed to grab from the sundry shop where Lan Zhan received his new forehead bandage, which the two oldest men accepted - one with awkward thanks for a tacky, gaudy rabbit-themed charm that probably only children would hang from their school bags, and the other with snarky comments about cheapskateness because he kept scrutinizing and criticizing the poor workmanship of the rabbit charm that had large-eyed cartoonish designs ala a modern Bugs Bunny, that wouldn't look good on the sash for a grumpy man in his late fifties.

Wei Ying giggled at the back - the tea ceremony was done, the dowry had been paid, and there was a wedding dinner to be had. He wiggled his eyebrows at Lan Zhan as a sign of a downscaled victory dance, and the latter blushed, then looked away coyly with reddened ears. The wedding night, of course. Wei Ying laughed and called everyone to take their seats and enjoy the mouth-watering food since the waiters had left, and he specially ordered one large jar of Emperor Smiles, to celebrate the wonderfully memorable occasion of a lifetime.

.

“Wei Ying,” Xi Chen da ge reverted to the man’s birth name, since the waiters have left the group to enjoy their meal in privacy, “It seems the ruse of using your notorious alter ego brought more benefits than I thought.”

Wei Ying raised an eyebrow and nearly believed they were back to the olden days of mocking the infamy and misfortunes of the Yiling Patriarch. Everyone stilled and one could hear a spoon clang against a bowl; Jing Yi paused in mid-chew of a chicken wing; Si Zhui was stunned while ladling a piping hot serving of herbal soup with old cucumber, lotus root, mushrooms and meaty pork; Jin Ling didn’t quite catch what was going on - but he stopped gnawing on a spare rib nevertheless; shifu continued his meal modestly and unperturbed, because he was getting old and ate only a choice selection of softer, easier-to-munch and less greasy dishes in smaller portions; and Lan Zhan simply sat up straight.

“Your meaning...?”

Xi Chen realized belatedly what he’d just said, and quickly followed up with a reasonable justification, “Ah, I mean, your pseudonym. When both my uncle and I walked past the entrance gates to Caiyi just an hour or two before, we already heard children singing a modified version of a classic song, officials hurrying out of offices with plenty of light banter and gossips, even customers shopping for ingredients for dinner at the stores - and even when we dropped by the town mayor's residence for a late evening meeting, he asked us about it too, out of a little fear and concern for his family's security - that there is a powerful devil that had disguised itself as a man with the name of Lan to blend into the society in Gusu, with a cursed name originating from the Far, Far West that translates roughly to 'Wu Ji' in the local tongue, and that this man has incredible intellect, unsurpassed strengths, amazing inhuman abilities, and has a knack for cheating any great man of his gold in a game of barter and negotiation."

Jing Yi's chicken wing dropped with a perfect splat into his bowl of rice drizzled with plenty of sweet-sour sauce.

"And... what was it..." the Sect Leader mused and was lost in his train of thought, but his uncle interjected after downing a cup of tea, because he bit into a slice of roasted chicken breast and it was a little dry for his throat, "Hmph! More nonsensical stuff, of course! Lan Wu Ji, a legendary forgotten king of the East, prince from the West, demigods of the Northern and sometimes Southern continents, and heir to the Underworld, all in one! He eats little children and kidnaps maidens and housewives! His tongue is coated with poison and he speaks the devil's language that men are seduced to part with their purses, and women, their virginities. I haven't had a good laugh for a while! This kind of trash is suitable for fantasies played inside seedy brothels and the rotten underbelly of civilization!"

Si Zhui choked at his chunk of perfectly cooked, softened steaming-hot old cucumber, and probably burned something while swallowing.

“Ehh? Didn’t you hear anything about Lan Wu Ji, the invincible alien from another world, who crash landed into the deserts to the West in a metal ship that was shaped as round as an egg, as flat as a jianbing and covered with beautiful lights made from sunshine, rainbows and stardust from adjacent realms?” Jin Ling blurted out in dismay while rudely chewing on his spare rib; he hadn’t quite grasped the Lan rule that prohibited one from talking while eating. Wen Ning gasped in shock and quickly shut the boy’s mouth by stuffing a lettuce into the latter’s face.

Wei Ying laughed rudely and flailed his limbs, which made a mess of rice grains raining down from his open mouth onto the table; Lan Zhan snorted into a tofu he was trying to spoon into his mouth, and the two eldest men gaped at the insufferable, shameless couple.

Regardless of the topic of mealtime conversation, everyone had a pleasant time catching up with one another; dinner with the Lans has always been a relatively quiet and peaceful affair, and that night was no different. While the boys lamented the loss of Lil’ Apple, their precious cargo, and were upset at the band of mountain bandits that dared to kidnap and steal, their mood changed when the great Zewu Jun regaled everyone with his story - the heroics of chasing down the bandits, spending a night at the famed family hot springs resort (Jin Ling mewled with disappointment at the missed opportunity, but Jing Yi and Si Zhui promised him that they’d take him there as soon as possible), Lan Zhan’s little accident that resulted in a bandaged forehead (everyone ooh’d and aah’d at the man who panicked at the sudden crowding, attention and concern, suffered from an acute claustrophobia attack, then quickly excused himself for want of relieving a bursting bladder), and then - the main course -, his own adventures in running a gauntlet of monsters at the mountains, more fantastic adventures in Caihong that included an encounter with the leader of the kidnapper bandits and a surprise tournament of cultivators vying for the still-vacant Chief Cultivator post, of the aging Qi Ren shifu getting a bit of spotlight when he fought off local yaoguai s which included a few succubus-class monsters too, and a string of many other exciting events fit for fantasy graphic novels for young adult readers.

Wei Ying listened intently and encouraged the conversation with his lively brand of Wow's, Really's and What Happened Next's, and Lan Zhan reached from beneath the tablecloth to touch the man's hand reassuringly, and the two settled in for a long dinner.

Once again, Wei Ying was a little disheartened, but not as much as earlier, that he was no longer the main protagonist of the story. At one point, when the juniors talked very lively with the Sect Leader and the shifu to compare and contrast their time well spent outside of the Cloud Recesses, Wei Ying became quiet, leaned back and almost appeared to slink into the shadows - perhaps, a bit tired as well, after an exhausting day of being with, and caring for his spouse. His five minutes of fame telling an abbreviated and downplayed version of his story was easily forgotten, and by the time they were working on dessert, nobody really remembered what the couple did for the two days they'd spent in the outdoors, away from the comforts of the Jingshi; even the shifu didn't bother to question where Wei Ying got his grubby hands on the gold pieces that paid for their dinner banquet, because it was easy to presume the worst, that it was either from the man's personal stash that nobody cared, or stolen from somewhere, which again, didn't really matter as long as everybody's bellies were full and their virtues were left intact and unscathed.

By nine, the couple bid the group an early good night, though their exit hardly dented the boisterous discussions taking place in the room because there was so much to share, to plan for the next day, of places to go and of sights to see, of missions to accomplish and challenges to tackle head-on - but Wei Ying shook his head when Lan Zhan looked over in concern; it wasn't their place and reason, he said wordlessly. Wei Ying walked off in a depressed daze, as though he was in the doldrums and with nothing much to look forward to.

The inn's front desk was empty since the workers had left, and the owner had gone off to buy supper for himself. Interestingly, one of the cleaner ladies threw a dirty look at Wei Ying's direction when they walked past her, and heard hissy whispers about devils and shameless rapists - that lightened up Wei Ying's mood, and he giggled and instantly cheered up with a renewed sense of mischief - then sneakily swatted the lao po's buttocks on the way upstairs -, Lan Zhan brightened up noticeably, his blush deepened and his ears were red on fire, and the two quickly returned to their designated exclusive suite room with a king-sized bed - the upgrade was paid by Wei Ying, without the knowledge of the rest of the group, of course - and made sure to lock the door with a resounding click!

Another four figures cloaked in shadow would climb in from an open window just under an hour later. The truly gay wedding night called for an unholy, breedworthy fest of orgies; a celebration of all things matrimonial and baby-making, and a proclamation of love that devolved into mindless, depraved lustful fornication sessions - of five delighted husbands intent on getting creampie'd and impregnated repeatedly like playing a game of roulette and musical chairs, and one very, very, happy and satisfied wife with his probably, a very, very lifeless limp penis and its two vacuumed-flat testicles, by the stroke of midnight. The poor king-sized bed would be rendered unusable for days - probably.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 159

"Now that we've consummated our marital relationship, we're really husband and wife, darling. May we have blessed eternal happiness living together as a loving couple!" Wei Ying gave an affectionate kiss on Lan Zhan's forehead, brushed away some sweaty strands of long hair, before leaving the bedside.

Immediately, the sea of male and female, human and non-human Wei Yings rushed in to continue their ravenous sexual feast upon their sole married wife - it didn't matter if gender-switched lesbianism or tasty heterosexual sex was offered and taken - the infinitely patient and overjoyed man on the soaked, soiled bed spread his legs, allowed his stretched, distended penis to be played and engaged in tasty endless rounds of sexual intercourse and hardcore baby-making fucking, until only a wrinkly burnt bent twig was left; his twin husks of cracked and hard-boiled pruny vacuumed man-eggs dangled uselessly from the crotch; his entire pubic area was constantly covered with lips, fingers and orifices from both male and female kinds, tight young ones and loosened, saggy old ones, drowning in massive amounts of spilled seed, sexual juices and saliva; and his anus swollen like an ugly overripe rose flower, puffed up and blossomed from non-stop vigorous acts of fertile procreation displays that put any more mortal passions to shame; but he continued to let Wei Yings ride him to kingdom come, his hips jerked erratically and furiously fast, because he was too excited to bed each lovely Wei Ying and father more twins, triplets into each husband, and was secretly grateful to the purple pillow that appeared out of nowhere to give ample support to his exhausted hips - Lan Zhan welcomed all Wei Yings in all manners that swarmed out of the accursed floor mat that one of the Wei siblings sneaked into the room.

Wei Ying sauntered across the room to fetch a jug of water and pour himself a drink. His supersized jar of Emperor Smiles had been emptied countless times - thanks to the life-saving magic of automatic refills of the best liquors in the world - that twenty four thousand Wei Yings that arrived and departed from the bedroom could get drunk in twenty four minutes each, and have twenty four million times of tasty hardcore sex in all kinds of creative positions with their mutually shared wife-y, and every Wei Ying thoroughly enjoyed Lan Zhan's increasingly flabby and slothful body until a shuddering, writhing mass of masculine croaky moans and feeble fertile squirts was left upon the destroyed bed. Naturally, Wei Ying also fed his manly wife some of the exquisite alcoholic brew, so that the latter would not remember anything when morning comes, other than sores and body aches all over, and very, very happy genitals down there that would've slumbered and shut down for much-needed maintenance for quite some time.

Meanwhile, Lan Zhan continued to exist in a dream-like daze, with Wei Yings crawling all over him; jabbing their forked tongues into his ears, through and into the brain, and nibbling on his reddened earlobe; his mouth busied with multiples of Wei Yings, and he didn't mind servicing virginal nubile young teens who served their sex organs straight to the lips; his nipples turned into puffy, bloated nubs from the constant abuse any baby-suckles; his navel swirled and overflowed with husbands' seeds, his penis flew to heaven and to the ends of the universe before ricocheting back and forth, because Wei Yings alternated between drilling butt-fucks and deliriously tasty deflowering sexual intercourse with individuals both genders, especially of the younger ages below sixteen; his limbs, fingers, toes - everything that encompassed his senses became overloaded with Wei Ying, grabbing, massaging clutching Wei Ying's cock, pussy, plump milk-laden breasts, for his dear, dear life spiralling into the abyss of sexual depravity and rainbow-coloured raw bareback fucking and impressive waterfall ejaculations. When a handful of those sex-demons opened their mouths and their forked tongues weaved their way into the irritated, engorged pre-set with hisses and growls; many Wei Yings each took their turn to worship, kiss, stroke and nuzzle, at varying pressures and speeds, at their favourite meatstick, until the twig of flesh shivered and oozed out pearlets of sweetness as rewards; Lan Zhan could only nnnnh loudly to express his joy at having his prostate wonderfully filled with and attacked by numerous tentacle-like appendages, and soon, his dessicated, dried up man-eggs were swarmed with those worm-like things from within, voraciously plundered with such fervour, unborn sperm forcefully torn from their dehydrated cradles; at the outside, the over exerted testicles were pulled at different directions as each rabid Wei Ying vied for a juicy bite of the tortured swollen flesh, and sucked, licked and vibrated each yummy ball in alternating speeds, until the man Hnngh'd with such desperate passion and experienced the greatest testicular orgasms ever, thirty feverish spurts of diluted seedless nectar each; and everything in the man, his mind and his soul was eaten, sucked out, consumed to the last delicious morsel, the last droplet, and nothing was left behind.

.

In the whimsical spirit of Wei Ying-ness, the royal wedding night ritual of the Grand Patriarch and his Matriarch, now gender and role-switched maritally, lasts for a year, a day and a night; time was obviously stopped except for those allied with Wei Ying - because Wei da ge is just that awesome -, in order to carry out their dirty terrible deeds unto the frozen Mortal Realm; that extra day at the end was required to clean everything up, rebuild the destroyed splintered, ruined bed and the sex-smashed Sunshine Inn; to herd away the endless streams of Wei Yings that kept climbing out of the accursed floor mat to have sex with the hapless man-wife imprisoned by his harem of husbands, and to return faraway realms with bellies filled, pleasures sated, and babies planted for new generations of a new sub-species, Homo sapiens wangxianensis that numbered in the millions - all descended from the man named Lan Wang Ji and his mate, Wei Wuxian; also, that extra night was meant for Wei Ying to read his diary so that he'd remember how things were, a year, a day and an unforgettable night ago.

It goes without saying that eventually, over the span of that year, the fugitive intelligent animals from the Dreams were located then shepherded back to their appropriate habitats, the two eight-year old lost boys were found and returned to their angelic and devilish guardians, the Bag of Holding was discovered hidden as a buried treasure, Wei Ying became the greatest man-cum-god-cum-Creator ever, numerous cats were sexually abused as well, realms were reconstructed in improved versions, castles in the skies and continent-wide spaceships popped out of thin air, worlds, galaxies, a whole ecosystem of species, civilizations, unlimited broadband successor of ErNet, and inter-universe connectivity were re-established, the Wangxian company and empire fwip! -ped back to existence in supreme glory, thanks to the powers of Wei Ying-ness and all its progenitors, descendants and the almighty siblings that ruled over everything - all was well again.

It didn't matter though. Wei Ying made sure to go back to the inn every day to wish his lao po a wonderful blessed day ahead while the latter drowned in endless orgies.

.

Lan Zhan knew he'd been rendered impotent, when Wei Ying gently picked up the floppy organ, blew on it a few times, then slid a hot moist tongue into the foreskin-covered cockhead to kiss the shrivelled juicy pink glans a hearty good morning. The tongue circled and grazed every corner of the loose, overstretched foreskin, dipped repeatedly to prod the sleeping pee-slit and rubbed its surface with the vigour of a morning wake-up call, and allowed fingers to roam up and down the dismally short length of soft flesh, while holding a brush with the other hand to comb the curls on his pubes - and there was no sexual reaction whatsoever; except for an increasing urge to pee, in which Lan Zhan nnnh'd faintly, he felt his bladder sphincter spasm and his hips shivered in a natural frisson-rich electrical buzz running down the spine, through the inner thighs, made the prostate gland convulse, the urethral tube contract, and finally, a pearl of crystal-clear golden-tinged spluttered out before easing into a dribbly weak flow down the sad, sad-looking penis. Wei Ying spat out whatever he accidentally drank, in fits of giggles, first thing in the morning.

With that, the man also learned that he was incontinent, when he had nothing to ejaculate, or rather, he couldn't ejaculate anymore since his unresponsive, electrocuted sexual meridians needed an engine overhaul; however, instinct dictated that he was still a male, physically, and therefore, any pleasure running through his numbed genitals would have nowhere to go, except to cause the poor man to squeeze whatever he could from the lower frontal half of his body, and that was good ol' plain urine instead of his trademark creamy rich semen; those sex-fiends he dreamt of in his nightmare had stolen everything and ruined his seed-producing factories, after all; as if to add salt to the humiliating wound, Lan Zhan's rump loosened considerably, because pleasure did loosen things up and caused tingling sensations to turn his quivering pelvis into a pool of relaxing, good vibes, and he bit his lips to stave off the inevitable - a series of mini-explosive farts of increasing volumes and pitches.

Wei Ying giggled when he was done sexually assaulting the man into completions on both ends, then moved on towards the navel. "Good morning, my impossibly pregnant darling man-wife," he murmured into what was clearly an overturned wok of jiggly fat on the man's belly - the vibrations from the low voice against the plump supple skin was obnoxiously ticklish; Lan Zhan didn't know how, or if any strange space-time magic had a hand in causing his condition, because he woke up with a considerable weight gain - obesity wasn't too far off by then -, the hair on his head and face had grown longer, his limbs were thicker with a layer of flab, his breasts sagged as though they'd been manipulated and overused, and his buttocks were rotund tubs of lard-coated glutes. He nnngh'd indignantly and wondered, very briefly, if he'd spent nine months on the bed, fattened up by his insatiable husband (or husbands, if his dreams were to be counted) who wanted nothing more than to keep him safe and sound in body-warmed cuddles (or continuously impregnated with buns that keep baking in the man womb-cum-oven, as though he kept conceiving multitudes of babies that shared Wei Ying's pretty brown eyes and his own handsome fair-skinned face and complexion, and they kept growing inside his factory-belly, popping out every few minutes or so like a wonderfully industrious production line - if, again, his dreams were to be believed; no wonder his lower bits felt loose, saggy, floppy and overstretched.)

Lan Zhan rolled to his side and realized it was just a few minutes past five in the morning, his internal body clock announced. The room was already well-lit with lamps and Wei Ying got off the mattress to look for something in the bedside drawers. After rummaging a bit, he found what he needed and made some lip-smacking sounds.

“ Lao po , lao po , I know you're hungry early in the morning. I'll call for room service and order a pre-dawn, extra-large triple breakfast set for you, so that our chubby and healthy baby will be fed very well even before sunrise,” Wei Ying snickered as he flipped through a in-room dining menu and snaked a hand around Lan Zhan's naked and spilling belly; fingers caressed the springy fat and mischievously jiggled the expanded love handles.

The man swatted the naughty hand away, and made an annoyed grunt - his stomach rumbled just from hearing the word 'breakfast'. Wei Ying cackled.

While waiting for the food, the couple engaged in a rather intimate kind of conversation, with Wei Ying spooning against his wife-y and he couldn't keep his hands off the latter's visibly ballooning belly of fat, and occasionally, he'd reached lower to play touch-touch with the bent twig of penis and massaged the drained twin raisins, in a silent prayer that they would fill up soon for the next round of crazy sex. Lan Zhan didn't even squirm, and that made the two men felt very comfortable, skin rubbing against skin, with lots of ear and nape-nibbles, and kisses peppered all over, and it didn't even stir the larger man when Wei Ying sneakily slid his own erect arousal through the stretched and loosened entrance at the back-end, then pumped a few times from the side, and let off his own fifteen-spurt steamy rich goodness inside the wife-y with a few tasty moans and a side dish of heavenly husbandly roars of pleasure, thrusting and slamming of hips against jiggling buttocks.

They talked about all sorts of things, trying to reconcile what they went through personally and a formidable couple, versus what they'd heard from the juniors and from Lan Zhan's elder brother and uncle. Wei Ying thought their brand images had been thrown into the discount bin, since no one really talked about his snazzy dark blue robes, or Lan Zhan's bruised forehead any more than a cursory glance or a couple of disinterested questions. The older man touched his head and realized that the skin was no longer scratched or lumpy, and he was elated that he could finally wear his ribbon--

-- What do you think, honey? Do I look good with this ribbon and the mask? I want my debut tomorrow to be as eye-opening and full of surprises as possible. The world shall witness the appearance of the great Lan Wu Ji!" Wei Ying grinned when Lan Zhan turned around in their lying-cum-sex position, and he nearly yelped in disgust at that dreadful half-face mask, now adorned with his precious sacred forehead ribbon above the brows. The older man opened his mouth to say something, but Wei Ying captured his lips first in a deep tongue-playing kiss.

"I steal men's purses, wives' lips, everyone's hearts and even Hanguang Jun's forehead ribbon!" Wei Ying laughed at the flustered Lan Zhan, who had just discreetly agreed to forego his sacred symbolic treasure of the Lan family's might and purity with that one single kiss.

There was a gentle knock on the door, and Wei Ying gave the wife-y a quick belly rub, before taking off the awful combination of ribbon and mask, donned a night robe to cover his shameless nudity, and rushed to the next room in their suite to collect their ordered food; there were three extra-large servings of youtiao , congee, noodle soups, jianbing , a premium selection grilled meats, pork ribs in herbal broth, baked and fried breads, soymilk, salads and fruits - all for Lan Zhan. Wei Ying preferred to watch his wife-y enjoy a meal for him and their imaginary baby in the belly - he even dared to caress the naked bulging stomach as though greeting their child a good morning -, because he knew that everyone promised to gather at eight in the morning for their real breakfast. Lan Zhan merely grunted with annoyance and slurped down the tasty meal that was cooked to perfection and probably cost a bomb - at the husband's expense, of course.

Their morning ritual was a very comfortable one - where the two lounged around in full nakedness, taking a shower, freshening up and preparing to start the day together. Wei Ying took full advantage and access to Lan Zhan's body in their newly minted marital status - he would saunter across the room, peel off the periodical that Lan Zhan tried to read while sitting on a large chair, that said periodical was politely folded and returned to a reading shelf, and Wei Ying easily straddled the hapless Lan Zhan on that dangerously creaking chair and the two would copulate for a few minutes without needing much foreplay; after a fair bit of huffing and puffing and morning aerobic workouts, Wei Ying dislodged himself and skipped over to the bathroom for a quick rinse in the ass, and Lan Zhan lay boneless on the pee-soiled chair with an orgasmic half-lidded look etched on his flushed face, the intent to read the periodical was forgotten by then.

When Lan Zhan finally decided not to waste anymore time pandering to Wei Ying's sexual games, he went to the bathroom to spend a bit of time fussing over his appearance in front of a large man-sized silver mirror provided by the inn - it would seem like months, or even a year may have passed during his sleep (and he wasn't too far off in his guess). He trimmed his hair, elongated moustache and unruly beard, even checked his receding hairlines and figured out where the hair had gone - to the nostrils, the armpits, the pubes and his treasure trail, probably. Wei Ying helped out in grooming with a comb, and snipped anything that stuck out of place; playing with pubic hair became another of the younger man's naughty pastimes, as he made little braids to keep the strands properly twirled and coiled, and without permission, played with the dangling testicles until they turned into a darker shade of tanned browns and tightened then swelled up considerably from the constant erotic kneading, to Lan Zhan's consternation.

Preparing to go out was a bit of a challenge - Lan Zhan was vexed that he couldn't fit into his clothes anymore due to his weight gain, but Wei Ying laughed at his misery and took out a bag containing a set of extra-large Gusu Lan robes. "Don't you remember? Si Zhui and the boys went shopping for clothes and bought some for you. Oh, you were probably busy talking at that time, that you didn't notice. Here," Wei Ying snickered and handed a red-coloured bag to him; Lan Zhan raised his eyebrows at that, because he clearly remembered not talking a lot during dinnertime, and he knew the boys shouldn't be able to buy robes bearing the family's sacred cloud symbols in Caiyi; however, there was no benefit in arguing, since Lan Zhan couldn't possibly walk out of the room in his birthday suit - so he accepted the bag with grace and without question.

"Wei Ying, this bag..." Lan Zhan peered at the emptied bag, and realized it was actually a satchel - a very, very familiar looking satchel - with added red embroidery to make it look posh, more glamorous and expensive.

“If you like that bag, you should keep it too, lao po ,” Wei Ying grinned and went on his business of preparing his own appearance for the day. He was trying to choose between his old snazzy dark blue robes or a Gusu Lan white one, and he looked absolutely flamboyant yet terrifying in front of the silver mirror, especially when paired with the horrid-looking ribbon-mask combo on his head.

All in all, by seven, the couple was ready to leave their suite that served its purpose of celebrating their wedded bliss, and they took their equipment - including a rather dusty Bichen, a well-worn aged walking cane, and Lan Zhan’s newly-improved Bag of Holding 2.0.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 160

Sunshine Inn is a typical middle-class boutique hotel - in a loose, 2000 B.C. era sense - which resembles a large mansion many rooms, a quaint fancy and well-maintained garden with man-made ponds and miniature pavilions, faux mini-pagodas, rustic-looking bamboo bridges and rivers converted from farm trenches, to cater to the tastes of travellers who would find such features nostalgic or that which feeds one's wanderlust. Beyond its manicured compounds, a tall brick wall surrounds the property to keep away uninvited guests and prying eyes, and a handful of hired guards patrol the grounds to safeguard the establishment's safety and possessions (Wei Ying already took note that the inn had been destroyed previously by Lan Zhan's wild sexcapades with the harem of infinite husbands, so when the place was built from scratch, other favourable features had been included - including hidden laser turrets that turned two assassin-wannabes who wanted to murder the mighty Sect Leader of the Gusu Lan in his sleep, into instant piles of smoking cinder).

At just seven at sunrise, there was no one taking a stroll in the gardens, so the couple took the opportunity to be the first to smell the Spring flowers, and admire the tranquil scenery of bubbling fountains and carp fishes swimming in the waterways. They realize that the inn was probably empty because they didn't see any other guests milling around the front desk the evening before. Lan Zhan theorized that people were staying away from public spaces for fear of catching the poisoning plague, and Wei Ying couldn't agree more (in actual fact, when the Mortal Realm was remodeled, there was consensus to wipe out all potentially threatening human presence from the inn except for the few butlers, cleaners, chefs and general workers to keep the business running at minimal levels; Wei Ying did ask whether he could experience what life could be, if he 'owned' an entire inn to himself - just for fun).

Just five minutes into their walk amongst bamboo groves and budding flower bushes, Lan Zhan winced. His wobbly legs suffered from cramps and he was having trouble moving in his usual graceful, steady-paced gait (because truthfully, he'd been lying on the bed, or humping against living bodies, for a year, a day and a night), and his aching back started to protest like an old man's (because really, Lan Zhan had spent a year, a day and a night moving his pelvis like a industrious drilling machine, so naturally, something wore off, got twisted but fortunately didn't snap). Wei Ying became concerned and held his wife's hand, and slowly, carefully led them to one of the pavilions set up in the garden for couples to relax and enjoy the greenery surrounding the inn. Lan Zhan kept kneading his calves, and pressed the small of his back, while grunting from the unnatural, uncharacteristic sores that men in their mid-thirties shouldn't experience (unless they were pregnant or weighed too much).

The wife made an off-the-cuff remark that he didn't remember Wei Ying walking so quickly, with such youthful zest, and without using the walking cane that now hung unused from the younger man's sash - more like a decorative staff than a walking aid, really. The husband, on the other hand, diverted the focus of the conversation to the wife himself, and said that the wife must be getting a little cranky, maybe jealous, because (s)he is pregnant, carries the weight of more than two, and that of course, a foot massage is in order, and maybe, if the wife consents, a ear-cleaning session too, just to sooth her/his moods. Wei Ying pulled out their favourite worn-out bamboo earpick and a bottle of massage oil from his sleeves, and Lan Zhan snorted indignantly. The older man looked away in feigned annoyance - mixed with thinly veiled shame and delight, simultaneously - and pointed at a bench in the pavilion. Get to work, slave, he wordlessly gestured.

Wei Ying quickly sat down and used his sleeves to brush away dried leaves and dust from the surface of the bench. He even fished out a towel taken from their room and placed it near him - that was to be the wife's throne, of course.

“Come, come, darling wife. Let me make you very, very comfortable after that tiring five-minute stroll, and to make our previous baobei happy,” he giggled, and reached out to pat Lan Zhan’s clothed fat belly. The older man swatted the naughty hand away, and when Wei Ying commented that he thought he felt the baby kick, Lan Zhan nnngh’d in distaste of being treated like a pampered rich man’s wife - and secretly loved it.

Wei Ying is truly the perfect loving husband when he puts his heart into it - and he does, when it comes to Lan Zhan. Everything was done for Lan Zhan’s sake - a 10/10, five-star ear-cleaning that left the overweight older man snoring on the husband’s lap, and when he did wake up with a rude grumble - he dreamt of floating apple pies, babies with cherubic wings and tasty snacks from children’s candy stores -, he groaned with unbridled pleasure at expert, oiled fingers massaging the soles of his feet - aaah, higher, higher, at the center of the arch, unnh yes -, kneading precisely the right spots, and then rhythmically tapped on the pained tendons and ligaments from ankle to calves - uunh, do that again, he murmured -, then back down to the balls of each tenderly loved feet - rub it across please, unnh, harder, ah... yes - in which Wei Ying then scooted lower to press with the right pressures on the heels - ooh, circles, circles, deeper, yes - and followed up to perform the best foot reflexology techniques known in any medical texts, that left Lan Zhan’s five-minute tormented feet to enjoy, with utter wiggling-toes delight, a speedy fifteen-minute journey heaven and back, that Lan Zhan believed all his pains had melted away, and his relaxed, puffy-paralyzed feet walked on clouds.

“If the wife wishes so, I can massage your back and hips too. You just need to turn around, and if you want, we can return to cleaning your other ear after that, and maybe have your nails trimmed too before you start using your hands to eat, my piggy wife. You did make a mess of demolishing your triple pre-breakfast in our room because you didn’t find the cutlery useful enough for the speed of devouring delicious gourmet food,” the hubby said sweetly, accompanied by the tantalizing sounds of more massage oil being poured and warmed into two husbandly palms. Ten kisses rained on Lan Zhan's indulgent toes, one for each thoroughly massaged appendage.

Sleepy and spoiled (also pregnant and wife-y) Lan Zhan complied without hesitation, despite just being called a slothful eater. He simply curled his toes in a displeased manner and tried to flick Wei Ying's kissy lips away. Then, he rolled around like the fat tub he'd become, and happily enjoyed the rest of his first-class royal spa treatment from none other than the multi-talented husband.

.

Eight 'o clock came and went, and rolled into nine. Wei Ying was far more upbeat than the day before, according to Lan Zhan's sleep-bleary observation, although the couple was clearly sidelined at the breakfast table in terms of conversation and focus; nobody remarked about Lan Zhan's ghastly transformation from a tall, young, handsome Gusu Lan champion to a fat, overweight man facing his mid-life crisis looking like he'd lived through his seven sins and carried a babe in his belly; everyone gathered at the dining hall of the inn on time, and immediately went about the business of ordering meals, polishing them off from the table, and discussed their plans for the day - which, surprisingly, no longer included the two. The juniors and Wen Ning briefly greeted the couple and didn't say anything else to them, other than complaining among themselves about how they woke up feeling stiff, and covered with dust and grit - then Zewu Jun and Qi Ren shifu exclaimed that they experienced the same - and the entire breakfast banter headed into that direction.

The two sat at a corner of the table and remained quite invisible throughout the meal; even when Wei Ying asked a waiter to bring some extra napkins, or when Lan Zhan asked someone to pass the salt, they were rather ignored. It didn't matter, though, since there was enough food, and waiters kept coming back with seconds and thirds, since they were the only dining customers around inside the inn.

Si Zhui mapped out their route for the day - a marathon of negotiating with shrewd *laoban*s and cunning suppliers, who had seen their sales nosedive since merchants and visitors started fleeing the town upon hearing rumours of fierce corpses rising from the graves; of tailing the finest police investigators in their quest to unravel the mystery of the poisoning plague that had, as of that morning, taken down a larger number of victims, if the urgent Fairy Messenger to Zewu Jun an hour earlier was to be believed; and a few more places they'd like to visit, based on the map that Wei Ying had scrawled for them earlier, but they have forgotten who gave it to them in the first place.

Jing Yi rehearsed their sales tactics and haggling skills, and the lively boys role-played splendidly, with advertising jingles and impressive closing lines included; the two eldest men applauded the boys' performance and congratulated them for making an impactful impression, then wished them success for that day's transactions. Wen Ning interjected to inform them that he'd checked their inventory at dawn - a full cart of minerals that Zewu Jun safely brought with him the evening before, safely tied and secured at the inn's so-called parking bay, which was really a sturdy outer shed made of brick and mortar. He added that based on the intel gathered from the day before, he reckoned they could barter for up to three, if not five carts of grains in exchange, based on the current situation - people were panicking and stocking up on things, including weapons for self-defense against the outbreak and a possibly zombie apocalypse - so metals could be used for crafting amulets, charms, swords, arrows, and all sorts of useful tools.

“I’ll carry the cart, since I’m strong and I don’t really feel fatigue as a fierce corpse myself,” Wen Ning smiled proudly at himself, but he was hushed by the trio of boys at the last bit because surely, nobody in the inn would like to know that danger lurked amongst them in the form of the dreaded fierce corpse, friendly or not. Lan Zhan turned to Wei Ying in askance, though he received a lukewarm chuckling response in return. “Those four horses, Lil’ Jia, Yi, Bing and Ding seemed to have winked out of existence, haven’t they? Or are they merely hiding somewhere... such as in your pretty red bag?” he said and started to hum a folk tune, while watching the energetic discussions taking place right in front of them. Wei Ying seemed to be amused by the situation - of being out of the picture, and of things, even persons or living beings, going missing.

Lan Zhan quickly wiped his fingers with the napkins that Wei Ying had to pick up by himself - because the waiters didn’t seem to notice them at all - because he had gorged himself with another triple serving of three-Michelin-stars grilled meats, towering baskets of dim sum, whole chicken and duck roasts, deep-fried fatty pork belly, a pot of rice and stir-fries, piles of breads and pancakes, a mountain of salads and fruits (out of guilt, he knew that eating too much protein and carbs would accelerate his obesity), and a plate of sweet, diabetes-inducing pastries and candied snacks (Lan Zhan’s self-guided health advisories no longer worked, apparently) - amazingly, Wei Ying only ate modestly, that is, a bowl of chicken noodle soup and a selection of breakfast side dishes that consisted of spicy-sweet fish, tofu and vegetable fritters, and a cup of warm soymilk. Nevertheless, Lan Zhan fished out the Bag of Holding 2.0, and opened it - and was ambushed by a kiss on the cheeks by Wei Ying, and of two adorable rabbits - one greasy black and one pure fluffy white - leaping out to greet their new parent / owner / master.

“Surprise, my pregnant lao po ! Our fur-kids are here!” Wei Ying shouted with glee, and embraced the shocked, horrified, paled older man because suddenly it felt too real, too claustrophobic, too attention-grabbing, too close for comfort; his breathing hitched, his heart raced, his senses pricked up - the real presence of everyone around them at the same big round table - especially the Sect Leader and the fearsomely strict uncle - could be staring at him, and he'd have to bury his head into the ground forever and shrivel into an earthworm of dishonour, disgrace and disgust.

Still, the whole dining hall continued as though nothing had happened. The world continued to spin, everyone remained in their seats and dined and chattered; Jin Ling stammered nervously about what he'd like to do, since he was the youngest and most inexperienced and didn't have much to contribute other than wild ideas; Qi Ren shifu talked not in-between chews about how he planned to locate Gusu Lan's sister sect for clues about a cure for the flesh-eating poisoning plague; Xi Chen da ge remained calm and content with a bland selection of food from different cuisines from eastern Middle Kingdom and a steaming cup of pu'er tea, and mostly nodded, agreed and encouraged the conversation, although he added that he had some official businesses as the Sect Leader and needed to meet with the town mayor at the council office at ten - more troubling signs, more breaking news, and in all likelihood, more adventures await for the group that excluded Lan Zhan and Wei Ying, because their names were never mentioned again after the first bite at breakfast.

Lan Zhan exhaled loudly and finally understood. He reached for the cart at the side, and lifted another three baskets of shrimp steamed dumplings, pan-fried meat dumplings, and spring rolls, and placed them in front of him. Sunshine Inn's chefs are known to be one of the best in town, and Lan Zhan's insatiable palate agreed wholeheartedly. Wei Ying squealed with delight at the wife's non-stop chewing, and placed another kiss on the man's cheek; almost immediately, he licked his lips because there was fragrant pork lard and all sorts of flavourful food bits there, and from a distance, it looked as though Wei Ying found Lan Zhan to be particularly appetizing.

Eventually, the table was cleaned, the group left their separate ways except the loving couple, who cuddled and exchanged romantic kisses in broad daylight amidst heavy eating (and petting), who enjoyed a plate of stir-fry noodles together ala Disney's Lady And The Tramp's spaghetti scene (because greedy gluttonous wife-y said he still had space for one more in the belly), who enjoyed playing with a furry white rabbit that kept burrowing into Lan Zhan's robes and kept the chubby man warm (it wanted to breastfeed, and squealed in delight when it found a plump fatty breast and its meaty, chewy nipple), and a black rabbit that stomped on Wei Ying's belly and left oily paw prints every time Wei Ying pinched its tail out of mischief. The wife burped rather impolitely after downing enough food to feed five grown-ups, the husband hiccuped because he kept laughing until the herbal tea he tried to drink went into his lungs instead.

When the waiters left with the dirty tablecloth, cutlery, bowls and plates, the dining hall fell silent; there were no other guests around.

A-Jia, A-Yi, A-Bing and A-Ding emerged from the shadows beyond the darkened, deserted doorway to the hall, dressed in their traditional Gusu Lan white robes. They walked hurriedly to greet their former and new masters with a respectful bow. Amazingly, Lil' Apple brayed and made his grand entrance too - but of course, nobody noticed - not even the petite lady at the front desk of Sunshine Inn -, when the Inabilities of the Demons of the Negative Planes were activated and utilized for the right purpose to benefit the royal couple, according to the will and decree of the Most Amazing, Most Venerable, Most Godly, The Lord and King of All And Everything, Wei Wuxian (at this point, Lan Zhan silently rolled his eyes at the flamboyant and unnecessary use of rank and status). Next, Calico the Molested Cat made his way across the dining hall, followed by a parade of colourful and varied animals trailing behind him, each wearing their finest furs, scales and feathers. Then finally, to Lan Zhan's delight and very real worry, real humans appeared to fill the now-crowded hall - the four legendary Wei siblings strutted in with great pride and fanfare (even with added disembodied cheers and fireworks were set off in the background), the much adored and much-cherished A-Xian and A-Ji scurried past the animals (they couldn't resist to pat and hug some of the smaller, cuter creatures), closely followed by their guardians, the incredibly divine Uncle Lan and his much-maligned wife, the master criminal Uncle Wei. Behind them were other forgettable, detested or minor characters that Lan Zhan wished to erase from his memories, or declutter from his mind - the people from Yiling City and Huang Village, Mian Mian and her family, the many gods and people that used to reside in the realms of the past timelines, the eight Heavenly Tian sisters and the great Tian dalaoye and his wife, representatives of species and kins, and so many more - until the dining hall was filled but more individuals, both humans and non-humans, kept streaming in and even filled the garden around Sunshine Inn - through doors, trapdoors, floor mats and other magical means, intra-realm portals, beamed down from motherships, and from whence everyone originated from, Dream or not.

Lan Zhan couldn't help but to stand up, with tears in his eyes - partially because his knees screamed from the hefty body weight -, and bowed back in reciprocated respect to the men, women and children, individuals of other kinds and species, to apologize for everything that had gone wrong or were unfulfilled during their brief, episodic lives in their narration of the Journey of Life, and to thank them for being who they are, and how they'd coloured the lives of Wei Wuxian and Lan Wang Ji from the past, present, and the future.

He raised a cup of pu'er tea for the grandest toast ever, one with a note of reconciliation and goodwill throughout his Kingdom, his company, his people. Wei Ying twirled his fingers and everyone in the hall brought out their summoned magical cups to fore. All hailed the great king and queen and wished the royal couple eternal blessed happiness and prosperity.

万岁, 万岁, 万万岁 !

.

The man named Lan Wang Ji, now reinstated as the rightful godly ruler of all things living and not, had learnt another lesson after a series of trials and tribulations in his ongoing Journey in Life; the prolific Book of Judgement by his side was testament to the man's great achievements and sufferings, joys and misery.

When Life threw lemons at them, Lan Zhan was the first to make a perfect cup of lemonade for himself and his loved one (and only); Wei Ying, on the other hand, didn't mind taking truckloads of those lemons and make a swimming pool of juice for everyone to dive in and have a party. The man, now in his mid-thirties, had been a victim of his innate need for Perfection; in the earlier timeline, he perfected himself to become the Almighty, albeit a rather dissatisfied one; in the next timeline, he tried to make the perfect lifestyle by controlling all variables surrounding his soulmate, including wiping everything else away to start anew with a clean slate, then keeping the soulmate disabled and shackled; understandably, that made Wei Ying unhappy and the entire plan backfired unto the perfectionist man, resulting in the loss of his godhood, temporarily.

With such an opportune audience, Lan Zhan, with Wei Ying by his side and their two rabbits snuggling in their arms, conducted an impromptu meeting of the highest level and of the widest reaches known to his empire. He gave a heartfelt speech about his inner thoughts, feelings, guilt and hopes - the act of accepting his mistakes and vulnerabilities, that he really wanted just the simple things in Life and he still did, that he asked for everyone's forgiveness for the past wrongdoings and wished for peace, harmony and unity in the future, to make sure that they stay on the right, enlightened path, always. Everyone agreed that they would live their lives freely and without fear of being prejudiced, of being turned into a cloud of dreams and imprisoned into someone's slumber, just because of one or a few individuals' selfishness. With that, Lan Zhan received a standing ovation from his subjects, and Wei Ying was all smiles because he was very proud of what the wife had achieved thus far in their lives.

At eleven o' clock, the meeting adjourned and everyone left, whether physically, magically, by teleportation, faster-than-light flying ships, via space-time travel or otherwise. That is usually the time Wei Ying wakes up, and the couple starts their day. Lan Zhan held Bichen with one hand, and patted his Bag of Holding 2.0 hanging off his sash, where their two precious rabbits had burrowed and made a nest for themselves. Wei Ying decided that he had enough of the burdensome and unwieldy walking cane, and with a snap of his fingers, it shrunk down to reveal its true form - the legendary golden flute made from the Pillar of the World -, and tucked it into his belt. He thought Suibian crowded his waist-space, and although he appreciated that his cloned siblings returned the enchanted sword to him the night before - one year ago -, he simply tapped its hilt and it disappeared from sight.

Wei Ying looked out from the dining hall to the gardens outside, and he heaved a sigh of relief. From the sleeves, he produced the magic-imbued mask and Lan Zhan's forehead ribbon, then cocked his head to the side, and asked, "Lan Zhan, what do you think? Do you want to start over, or shall we continue?".

Lan Zhan thought hard, and waited for his own answer, with bated breath.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 161

(Epilogue of the arc)

“Ai-yooo~~~nnnn~~~gggh!” Wei Ying mumbled lazily while stretching his arms, and took a deep breath of pleasantly warm Spring air. The couple walked through the deserted streets of Caiyi Town in a last ditch bid to stock up before continuing their journey. Businesses were shuttering down, panic buying ensued in several remaining grocery stores and market stalls, people were grabbing whatever they could before locking themselves in their boarded-up homes or fleeing their beloved town. Schools and offices had been sealed, families were seen either hurrying onto horse carts, and scurrying into buildings with bags of food, buckets of water, firewood, textiles, even weapons and farming tools - whatever that would protect them from the predicted onslaught of the fierce corpses.

“Look at you now, darling, you’re able to focus on taking care of the two of us, without being affected by your virtuous, megalomaniac and micro-managing tendencies towards perfection. See? You don’t have to put everything under your wing; everybody’s lives go on perfectly fine with or without you; you don’t have to make those two-minute trips to your castle in the sky or to that sex-infested underground kingdom beneath the floor mat all the time!” the younger man mocked his spouse with little bubbly laughs, while seated atop an uncharacteristically docile Lil’ Apple. Lan Zhan appeared from behind a closed prehistoric supermarket, through a broken door, with burgled goodies in his hands, including outdoor camping gear, food rations and preserved edibles, nuts and fruits, and a host of miscellany. The four demons of the Negative Planes followed suit, each with armfuls of stolen provisions.

Wei Ying had reasoned with Lan Zhan, that what took the older man six months to create - a stifling, crippling, broken narrative of sorts, akin to a storybook with texts censored, pages torn off, or scrawled with an editor's notes until the original texts and ideas were rendered unreadable -, was easily unraveled, fixed and restored with free-flowing, abundance of free-form, organic Wei Ying-ness, that is, to let nature take its course in whatever good or bad things that had been created by the hands of the couple. It took a year, a day and a night, so Wei Ying actually sat on the throne twice as long as Lan Zhan, at least in this timeline, and he had altered many realities, woven objects in and out of existence, set the chronological chain of events straight with many curve balls thrown in, and made sure Fate had a dice to roll to make destinies a game of chance with many wide open fields, unlimited road junctions and borderless pathways to a perceived happy or sad ending, rather than a maze with many obstacles and just one twisty, convoluted way to a conclusion that would satisfy neither of the two men.

With that in mind, Wei Ying decreed that he was still the reigning greatest grandmaster of the Dark Arts and magics, and the superior one between the two, that Lan Zhan was the most perfect soulmate (and bed partner) and should stay by the younger man's side as a sidekick - although Lan Zhan was free to do whatever he wished, including the times if he wished to wield his godly powers as the Grand Patriarch of their vast expanded family, the Emperor of the Kingdom of Lan, or the Founder and President of the Wangxian company, the new Jade Emperor of the Heavens, amongst many other significant roles and rank held by that middle aged man. And, the couple was free to bring along any companions deemed fit to aid their adventures and add some spice to their everyday, then kick them out when they no longer have any use - which was fine, because every character could survive and thrive independently, with or without either of the men.

The lengthy exposition was cut short, when Lan Zhan ignored whatever degrading or offending remarks that spewed out of the spouse's lips, proceeded to pile the supplies into a cart tied to Big Apple, who made a brief comeback since Wei Ying insisted that the older man should have his own fancy ride too. “Wei Ying, there’s enough here for up to a week, but we’ll still need to find watering holes during the trip,” he called out, seriously and with no nonsense, and placed another sack of rice into the cart. The demons, disguised as plain Gusu Lan men, quickly filled up bags and satchels that hung from the saddles of both donkeys.

The younger man teased his partner about how stealing cuts across at least fifty of the over-4000 family rules; Lan Zhan grunted something unintelligible in-between heavy panting - because he was really not as physically fit as before in his overweight state with a ring of blubber around his midriff -, and added something about how virtues need to be adjusted based on societal acceptance, and that if people were looting the markets, then it should be okay for him to do the same. Wei Ying laughed and commended the partner for seeing things in a new, more realistic light, and squinted towards the far distance - several buildings were on fire and sent smoke columns into the air, police and security forces were non-existent, and the less-virtuous ones of Caiyi’s population rampaged through the abandoned streets and shops, breaking locks, doors and windows, to raid and take whatever that was left unguarded by their former owners.

Little Ni-er peeked out from between the folds of Lan Zhan’s robes, out of curiosity of the jarring pervading silence and her parent’s vigorous heaving movements; she was in the form of a caterpillar of pristine white fur, with the size of a small cat. She mewled, having sniffed out something tasty in the air, and she was a little hungry because she missed breakfast since her gege forgot to make one. The only facial feature on her furred tapered face was a mouth that was all gums and no teeth - not even eyes or a nose -, and Lan Zhan found her gestures so surreally endearing that he had to slip a hand back into the cart of stolen goods, pick out the juiciest off-season peach imported from lands far, far away, and fed it to her in a few giant bites into the ravenous gummy mouth.

Seeing that the teasing didn't work on the hapless partner, Wei Ying went on to pick his nose nonchalantly - the warmer, increasingly dust and pollen-laden Springtime breeze tend to clog up his nostrils -, and admired the view from his royal pedestal on an ass (literally). The juniors and Wen Ning fought hard against powerful fierce corpses raised from some dead army - they bore metal-plated armours, wielded weapons held by infantry and generals, and a few even threw magical fireballs and lightning bolts. Little stickmen silhouettes flew from one rooftop to another, trading blows, exorcism and elemental magics and pure brawn firepower alike. In another part of town, Master Lan Qi Ren led a group of disciples from a newfound sister branch of the Gusu Lan, pursuing men in dark cloaks - assassins from unknown external sects responsible for the poisoning plague, perhaps -, from roofs down to chimneys, blasting through windows and tearing up wooden walls; and the Sect Leader Zewu Jun was nowhere to be seen, at least from Wei Ying's vantage point.

He rolled the slimy booger in his fingers and wiped on the prickly mane of Lil' Apple. The donkey brayed once and shook its neck, upset and disgusted as any respectable intelligent four-legged creature would be. Wei Ying sighed, used his index finger to scoop up the said booger and flicked it down towards his pants, where it landed squarely atop the head of a greasy-looking piece of chopped-off cold, black glistening tentacle, the size of a small dog. Ernie wiggled in amusement at getting splattered with the booger of its parent, then easily moulded his surface to many rows of serrated teeth and horrid-looking open slimy mouths, and the said booger was effortlessly consumed, for the sake of the environment and their hygiene. Then, he retreated into the flute and morphed into a shiny black sheen of paint over the instrument, thus masking it to look just like good ol' Chenqing, and remained dormant once again (plus, if Wei Ying blew on the flute, Ernie would get indirect kisses, which fuels his secret Oedipus complex anyhow) - the same as his meimei once she had her fill of a whole fruit, she crawled back into Lan Zhan's sleeve, and everything looked as if the two hellish creatures had never peeped out.

Elsewhere, the Great Gathering that had dispersed began to make their way back to whence they came from, such as the inhabitants of Yiling City and Huang village setting off on their arduous journey to the West, whilst those with more convenient and immediate means of transportation - individuals from other realms or those with supernatural powers -, quickly returned to their designated dwellings, bases and homeworlds to resume their roles, and to write their own stories in their ever-progressing journey of life. Ernie made sure to take a snapshot and download the data of the once-in-a-lifetime Perfect collection of extraordinary and representative figures, because he wanted to analyze the event and absorb their powers; as usual, his meimei who secretly shared an incomprehensibly intangible bond with her brother, duplicated that dataset in a single heartbeat, and uploaded it to their family drive for everyone to use.

In addition, tucked in a quiet corner in town, one teahouse was being ravaged by a tripartite war of words - four all-powerful Wei cloned siblings versus the heavenly Tian family versus the destructive duo Uncle Lan and Uncle Wei - all vied for the best slices of the pie in ruling the known multiverse, because they've all been there, done that, tasted what it was like to be gods, and were addicted, even obsessed, to want more. Wei Ying decided not to interfere and allowed them to bicker and wage wars if necessary, as he believed that nature should dictate the outcome; Lan Zhan, secretly fearing the collapse of his near-Perfection state of being, prepared his trump cards in case chaos did break out, so that he could storm in, break out the fights and re-establish order - with Wei Ying's permission, of course. Fortunately, that teahouse had been abandoned after the laoban couldn't tolerate the unbridled use of lethal Dark, corruptive wisps, Poisonous sexual magic laced with divinity and religion, and the raw might of unimaginable powers that only men can Dream of, so no matter the conclusion, the teahouse would be left in smoking, disintegrating ruins anyway with no further loss of lives.

"Everything is set," Lan Zhan declared, and the four demons bowed with folded hands at the front to signal that their duties were completed - they glowed brightly into hues of light blues, then transformed into amorphous-looking pure twisted, negative qi energy with dark, black cores, and fused into the surroundings; probably another Inability was used to turn them into undetectable beings. The man climbed up Big Apple and made final preparatory checks on the ropes that tied the donkey to the filled cart. “Where to?” he asked and turned expectantly to the spouse.

Wei Ying, who once prided himself to be able to find his way in this world and make it big, was no longer sure of where to head to next. He scanned the horizon to the north, and thought that would be where they should go; he wasn’t ready to travel west to meet his foster brother, and there was nothing of interest to the eastern coasts or the southern mountains; he would also love to stay and see how the juniors and Wen Ning grow, celebrate the coming Spring Festival with them - though, he knew that everyone charted their own destinies which, in this instance, didn’t include the couple.

“There,” Wei Ying replied and rightly so, pointed to the direction that they hadn’t yet explored together. The sun was at its highest point in the sky, the skies were blue and dotted with pretty white fluffy clouds, the air was nice and not too chilly, filled with the fragrant scents of Springtime grass and budding flowers, and although there were fire, smoke, dusty battles and murderous screams raging everywhere in town, he truly believed that it was going to be a wonderful day to start a new journey, a new chapter in his life.

Lan Zhan nodded, gathered the reins and gave it a tug. Wei Ying heartily slapped Lil’ Apple’s fleshy hindquarters, and off they went, towards the exit gates of Caiyi Town and to the north.

“Do you regret... not being able to bring Lan Wu Ji, the Masked Hero, to life?”

Wei Ying chuckled, and steered Lil' Apple carefully through fallen peasants who tried, but failed, to escape the wave of undead that rose from the graves. The donkey was smart, though, and didn't want to dirty its hooves from stepping on the liquefying remains of ordinary humans that it detested so much; whatever that attacked the men struck fast and sharp, and within a day or two, the mutilated bodies rose up as fierce corpses, based on observations from witnesses.

“Who knows,” he said with a light shrug, “If I ever feel the itch to wear the Husband's pants and want the wife-y to scratch my back, I might adopt the identity again.” He laughed again and recalled the wonderful moments when he, although disabled and weakened, had the time of his life topping the great Hanguang Jun in bed and outside of the Jingshi, and even had the marriage certificates to show off.

Lan Zhan hmp'h'd in mild annoyance, because his masculinity and status as the head of the household were already threatened once too many times. Unconsciously, he touched his precious forehead ribbon that had since been returned to his possession, because Wei Ying remarked that he'd look like a funeral attendee, and his cheerful disposition was absolutely unsuitable for that ugly strip of boring white cloud-patterned cloth.

“Besides, what could Lan Wu Ji do without stirring up suspicions from the locals that this man could be related to the greatest Dark Arts master the world has ever known, that is, the Yiling Patriarch?” Wei Ying snickered,

“We didn’t expect Yin Metal-powered fierce corpses to find their way here, which is roughly in line with what happened in the previous timeline. Whatever that is causing this wave of deaths,” he swept his arms to indicate the sea of dead people that littered the roads that linked to nearby cemeteries - fresh kills of fierce corpses, and the lethal wounds on the victims seemed to bubble, froth, grow black veins and melt the flesh and bones into a heap of bloody rancid mess, “... seems to be a constant in every timeline; there is an evil entity behind all of this that transcends space, time and fates, and we may be mere string-puppets in its theatrical show for an audience waiting to see who would finally surpass the climactic scene, so that the story of our lives can finally move beyond the terribly legacy of Yin Metal, the emergence of the defiant fierce corpses, and the scourge of recurring deaths to Mankind.”

Wei Ying became serious in his narration, and Lan Zhan had to pause to digest the amazing insights his partner had gained over the past months, revealed in a span of a couple of minutes. The cart pulled by Big Apple creaked and swerved to the sides, each time its wheels undignifiedly trampled over the human remains strewn on the cobbled path.

The younger man barked out a tension-releasing, frustrated “Ahhhhh!” as if to yell at the injustice and suffering happening around him. Sure, Lan Wu Ji could make its debut and, say, wipe out the disease of the walking dead, maybe even have a hand in finding an antidote to the corpses’ poison, and gain respect and reputation from becoming a champion of the Gusu Lans - but then, what? Would he remain as the Masked Hero that will be called upon to rescue every burning town in the lands, or will - as Wei Ying suspected due to his skepticism and real-life experience in how such things are handled - will the world of cultivation scrutinize the meteoric rise of the hero saviour, then start to question his abilities out of jealousy, and even sabotage his fame out of greed, by accusing the Masked Hero of everything distasteful and dishonorable until that same Hero will be forced to cross certain lines and walk the dark path? Wei Ying had been there, done that, and he didn’t want to live through that ever again.

Lan Zhan looked at his spouse and tried to decipher the motivations driving the young man, based on the revelations.

“My initial hunch stays, Lan Zhan,” Wei Ying stared straight ahead - beyond the gates and to sunny northward direction, “Something is definitely brewing up there, maybe in or around the capital city of Chang’an. We tried to solve the mystery in the West from Yiling, even tried to remain low in Gusu - both strategies didn’t work. It’s time to get to the root of things, don’t you think so?” he turned around and almost magically grinned his million-dollar smile that brimmed with such obnoxious confidence, that Lan Zhan felt attracted to the younger man’s cause immediately, married or not.

“Mn,” the older man said and wondered again how he fell in love with Wei Ying - the man that exudes such positivity, such resilience, and such brilliance in their eternal search for answers to the biggest mysteries that tormented the mundane, the weak and the general populace, all in the name of helping those in need, and saving as many as they can, without the need for fame and riches, and certainly, without really needing masked heroes.

Not long after the juniors and Wen Ning found help from Caiyi’s decimated, but still-functioning police and security forces, they managed to hold back a wave of fierce corpses at bay; Qi Ren shifu with the sister sect caught a few spies and investigated the insidious tools used to turn living people into seeded dead bodies that were precursors to the birth of fierce corpses - and started to work on antidotes that could potentially reverse the process of death and decay, with messengers sent back to the Cloud Recesses to call for reinforcements. Sect Leader Zewu Jun was said to have left after meeting the town mayor and in the heat of battles, because the Grand Cultivation Council called for an emergency meeting that could involve its very survival - the Imperial forces have made their first move against the world of cultivation.

By then, Lan Zhan and Wei Ying had left Caiyi's gates, and travelled through several smaller towns in the district of Cai, located in the heart of Gusu.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 162

Travelling through remote, rustic and sparsely populated seaside villages along the Grand Eastern Coast, Wei Ying gained a better appreciation of the lives of fisherfolk and those that depend on the seas for a living. Big and Lil' Apple trotted together, side by side, for most of the time since the trail was wide enough and there was hardly any incoming traffic from the opposite direction; the couple chose to steer their steeds and cart through windy lowland unpaved roads along the coastal line, enjoying brisk drive-throughs on white sandy beaches, picturesque seaside cliffs, and meandering on the edges of saltwater marshes rich in native plants and shellfish.

"Ah, your Big Apple is seducing my Lil' Apple again, Lan Zhan!" Wei Ying cried out in mock upset, as they watched the larger donkey reach over to the side and nibble on the flustered smaller one's flicking ears and prickly mane.

"Do you prefer to ride ahead? I can shift my seat and watch our backs from atop the cart," Lan Zhan replied with logic and reason. He struggled to redirect Big Apple's amorous advances by pulling away the reins and clicking his tongue, and kept an eye on their surroundings. However, the passionate ash-coloured equine, as large and unnaturally muscular as a huge workhorse - hence its name - continued to harass its partner at work, by nuzzling a very, very reluctant Lil' Apple's cheeks and by licking its snout - ass-kissing, literally. Lil' Apple brayed unhappily at the unwanted sexual advances, but fortunately, did not walk off-track and send its master careening into thorny seaside shrubs lining the path.

Wei Ying was unfazed and even laughed at the spouse's suggestion. "What? Your big stallion behind my small ass?" he cackled at the intentional pun,

"The last time we did that, your ride kept smelling Lil' Apple's rump like a wild animal trying to find a mate in heat, and the constant butt nudges totally ruined our slow and steady travelling pace. You don't want my ass to fart out those Gases of Amnesia out of spite right at your face again, don't you?" he asked, referring to Lil' Apple's special ability, not his.

Lan Zhan clamped his mouth upon hearing the spouse's salient counter-arguments. Admittedly, it was one of the most nauseating experiences he had to endure, and his lungs would protest to cause a massive shut down if he had to take another whiff of that toxic yellow-green cloud that rivalled even a city's raw sewage. With that, he allowed the blatantly homosexual Big Apple to happily nibble, kiss and molest the smaller donkey to its heart's content, and he focused on keeping the heavy cart moving in straight lines.

The couple made a few stops to admire beautiful Springtime scenery along the beachside, spruced up by cherry blossom topped cliffs and more refreshing, lively shades of greens and little yellows sprouting from mostly still-barren grounds. The waters were too cold for skinny-dipping, but Lan Zhan maintained his vigilance while scouting ahead with his superhuman vision for any signs of steaming hot springs - the last time they enjoyed a nice hit soak in the nude, Lan Zhan couldn't quite grasp the concept of being a mere divine-human hybrid but gifted with the full extent of a god's lust, and suffered tremendously from sex overdrives; fortunately, Wei Ying reminded Lan Zhan that they brought along their favourite floor mat, so the younger man didn't need to suffer from post-copulation semen-induced diarrhea and traumatic haemorrhoids - two minutes of visiting the sleazy underground dungeons filled with breedworthy Wei Yings, and Lan Zhan was relieved of all unbearable heat raging inside his body, loin aches and horniness, for the time being - consequently, the population of Homo sapiens wangxianesis rose by a significant notch, again.

Some things remain unchanged, and that brought a sense of comfort to Lan Zhan.

They mapped out their journey with care, constantly keeping to remote, idyllic towns, careful to avoid encounters both friend and foe - thus, putting themselves out of reach of the radars of those responsible for causing the rise of fierce corpse attacks, and those in search of heroes to take sides and defeat pre-determined enemies; in Wei Ying's wise words - they hoped to avoid becoming pawns to greater political forces working behind the scenes that were causing unrest throughout country. Wei Ying reasoned that the Gusu Lan sect should be able to hold their ground with the renewed Cloud Recesses - free of yaoguai and all manners of ill and evil - and defend their vassal states, such as the many farming and trading towns that dot the Cai district; so the couple need not interfere further in the matters that could cross, and cause ire to neighbouring, jealous or scheming sects which were generally rife within the world of cultivation.

“Waahh... this noodle soup is tasty! The laoban made this spicy sweet broth from stewing a variety of local fishes, shrimp, cockles and mussels, then added six kinds of spices including my favourite, chilli paste, before putting in slices of larger sea bass, chopped seasonal vegetables and freshly harvested bean sprouts, and rice noodles made from rice flour from the paddy fields and hard-boiled egg from the chicken coop just next door!” Wei Ying exclaimed and verbalized the delights of his palate upon consuming a spoonful of the wholesome, flavourful savoury meal in a little roadside hut located in one of the fishing villages they had planned to stop by. The smell of sea salt in the air was strong, the breezy winds were invigorating for outdoor dining, the sight of local fishermen in their small wooden boats, hauled up their daily catch in nets and buckets, gently buoyed by the tides of an open, calm sea - further added a unique spin to the local delicacies that the couple ordered at the humble seafront cafe.

“Dear customer, here’s another two bowls of rice and four plates... eh? Where is your companion, gongzi ?” the unassuming shopkeeper-cum-chef emerged from a fabric divider that hung from the open doorway to the century-old confined kitchen; the crockery and cutlery were well-used, some bearing chips and cracks that lent an even more ageless, homemade, bucolic air around the dim, cozy eatery. The old man placed the tray on the table - there were only two in the tiny establishment, and the other table was vacant -, then arranged the newly ordered food of more rice, seafood and side dishes on the unpainted, run down surface covered with a threadbare tablecloth that had seen better days. He wiped his oily hands with a smudged tea towel draped over his neck, and looked around the building no larger than a shed.

“Oh,” Wei Ying said as he picked up a chicken feet from a steaming pile of tasty chicken and pork innards, tails and ears braised in spices and mushrooms - stuff that city folks were less like to eat, therefore harder to find, in which Wei Ying delighted to have found this appetizing treasure served in the countryside and ordered every dish from the menu -, “Err, he went outside to take a leak for a couple of minutes. He’s had quite a few bowls and a whole pot of herbal tea, you know,” and licked his lips at the sight of the banquet laid out before him, that covered nearly every inch of the tabletop.

(In actual fact, Wei Ying enjoyed spending time dining with his oblivious, dense spouse and play pranks on that helpless, powerless man; while the shopkeeper was busy in the kitchen, Wei Ying sneaked a hand deftly into Lan Zhan’s pants and played with his balls like how one played with a rooster’s wattles. Lan Zhan couldn’t cry for help or yell at the naughty man to stop the lewd, unbecoming act, lest he drew unwanted attention to themselves, so he sat still and squeezed his thighs in the futile hopes wordlessly telling the younger man off - and of course, Wei Ying didn’t hear any protests, so he proceeded to stroke the man’s hardening arousal, playing their familiar game of touch-touch, of fingers running up and down the veins that lined the turgid length, of fingertips circling the throbbing reddened tip, swelling and oozing crystal-clear sticky liquids, while Lan Zhan tried his best to politely chew on a piece of fried tofu and swallow spoonfuls of seaweed soup - in the end, it was too much, and Lan Zhan didn't want to make a scene of soiling his pants and the seat, so he quickly excused himself and took the rolled-up floor mat, then rushed out of the rickety roadside cafe.)

“By the way, laoban , can I order this turtle soup, raw oysters (for the libido, of course), clams, abalone and nine types of shellfish with soy sauce dips, the fried squid rings with plum sauce, these two large fishes - one steamed and the other sweet-sour, one pork knuckle, a chicken roast, grilled mutton ribs, the four types of fresh seafood dumplings shown here, and another pot of pu'er tea please?” Wei Ying said and pointed at the menu in his hands. The laoban was obviously very pleased though a little concerned too; he kept rubbing his greasy hands together expectantly.

“It's for my companion. You saw how big he is, he eats a lot. Don't worry, we'll pay for everything we ordered,” Wei Ying grinned his million-dollar smile and jiggled his money pouch. “Yes, yes! Coming right up!” the old man called back and hurried to the kitchen. Lan Zhan would return in two minutes' time, flushed from making love with twenty four thousand nubile teenage Wei Yings, fathering another generation of tens of thousands of new babes, absolutely calmed down from having his loins emptied too rapidly and in too many times in the span of twenty-four years in the space-time bubble beneath the floor mat, and with a ginormous appetite to replenish his depleted reserves - right on time.

Life in the remote coastal areas reminded Wei Ying about the earlier times he had in the Burial Mounds, sans the hard work and lack of access to modern comforts and conveniences. The few people they met were generally friendly although a bit shy and wary of outsiders - though they easily opened up once Wei Ying flashed his million-dollar smile and utilized his A.S.S. skills to barter basic supplies with whatever they managed to forage during the roadtrip, or whatever surplus stocks they'd carried with them from the city, or sometimes, exchange some valuable services such as fixing a fishing net or a boat (which is Wei Ying's forte from his early childhood in lakeside Yunmeng) or teaching some children reading and writing (which is an extension of Lan Zhan's part-time job) for enough silver pieces for meal and board. There were more boats moored to wooden piers than persons who dared to greet and talk to them; the couple received sparing news from the urban inlands, and did not know if the situation in Gusu worsened or spread to neighbouring provinces. They simply spent their peaceful days travelling northward, enjoying the delights of local sightseeing and cuisines, looking out for homestays and camping outdoors when there was none; they bought a large tent and several pieces of tarp that made excellent, yet simple living arrangements for two, and their rides always had enough to eat during daytime and shelter for the night.

Wouldn't it be great, Wei Ying had remarked, if the two of them adopted such a carefree lifestyle, with nary a care about the matters of the world. Lan Zhan contemplated the idea for quite a bit, during this so-called 'honeymoon' of sorts after their (forced) marriage - the thought of waking up with Wei Ying in his arms to watch the sunrise with each other, of spending the days on the road with Wei Ying (and with many more fertile, lovely and sexy clones beneath the floor mat), and then settling down for the night with that same man, his soulmate, cuddling beneath blankets and watching the tapestry of the night sky cosmos until both fall asleep with dreams of being together, entwined, making love, or simply holding hands, as one loving couple; Lan Zhan had learnt long ago that he would never be bored of Wei Ying's companionship, during laughter and shedding tears, for being teased, pranked, sexually harassed or otherwise. He was about to answer Yes, Yes and Yes'es to all of Wei Ying's questions, but the younger man was already busy setting up a tent on the beach, with the dying rays of sunset scorching the infinite horizons with orange, amber and reds upon the dark oceanic expanse that stretched forever in view, and Wei Ying interrupted Lan Zhan's thought by handing the latter a prehistoric bug spray made of an incense burner tied to a chain, filled with aromatic herbs and oils. “There’s no inn around, and the tent is small, so make sure there are no sandflies and bed bugs that bite,” he instructed, and Lan Zhan obliged without a word.

Lan Zhan weaved some powerful Fire-based spells reminiscent of what he used in their former cave-home in the Burial Mounds - to add a smoky element to the atmosphere surrounding their campsite so that pesky insects stayed far, far away. “Lan Zhan,” Wei Ying called out from inside the tent that was being set up - Wei Ying always struggled with the poles, but he was getting the hang of it -, “I know you’ve done it countless times today, did you save any for me?” A pair of winky glimmering eyes peeped out of the tent, accompanied by a tell tale grin.

Lan Zhan knew what his spouse meant, and he stared back with an unspoken question. The incense burner pot was blazing magically with fire at that point, in tandem with his rising hopes, emotions and unfulfilled lusts boiling from within his stoic, expressionless self. Smoke choked the air around the tent, and immediately, flying insects fled for their puny lives.

“I’ll play the wife today, lao gong ,” Wei Ying giggled, and with a fwip! , the tent was perfectly standing up as it should be. Wei Ying patted the bedded base and fluffed up the pillows, including the gaudy purple one. He started to peel off his pants - no underwear, again! - and started to spread and stretch his hairy legs sensuously, in a silent bid to coax the now-labelled husband to hurry up and get in for the night.

The incense burner pot nearly cracked from a surge of incredibly fiery heat.

(Just a stone's throw away, two donkeys had been set free to allow them to wander and rest on their own, although the bigger one kept attempting to mount the smaller one, and together, the two donkeys made a helluva lot kick-ass noises in the bushes.)

.

Wei Ying absolutely loved the way they celebrated their traditional new year, the Spring Festival - food, fireworks, and funfairs in a larger village, and later, floating on a rented, fully furnished holiday boat along the coast, hopping from one island to another through thriving river deltas and temperate wetlands. Truthfully, he wanted to welcome midnight with a wet sloppy but passionate smooch beneath starlight, enjoy faraway flowers bursting into bright blossoms in the night sky and the lively sounds of firecrackers that chased away any bad luck, and rolled the red carpet for gods of fortune and prosperity to walk the earth, while having a romantic meal of the freshest seafood caught by Lan Zhan, on board their pleasant and homely holiday cruise; it was still memorable though, since they found a nice location off the shore to anchor the boat, and enjoy the audiovisual extravaganza when the clock struck twelve - with thirty lustful ejaculations timed perfectly at one each passing second upon the arrival New Year's day, deep inside Wei Ying, rutting like animals in Spring atop a creaky king-sized straw bed in the wildly swaying boat, causing violent outward ripples, and nearly frightening away merfolk servants of the Dragon King of the Seas who had kindly brought baskets of marine goodies (with lots of oysters to bless the couple's libidos) to wish the royal couple well and herald a new beginning for everyone.

(In which, Wei Ying had earlier mischievously stolen and hid the floor mat on New Year's Eve, causing tremendous distress to the incumbent and a certain restlessness, fullness and unfulfilled desire that grew explosively throughout the day without release - until Lan Zhan gratefully and with an overjoyed grimace, half-yawns and half-sneezy snarky face, dipped between the younger man's legs again and again, drilling too fast, slamming too hard, spearing too deep, aimed to thrust all night to vent out his sexual frustrations until he happily, dreamily orgasmed a record of three hundred and sixty five times overnight, which joyfully deflated his pressurized, overwhelmed loins until tiny twin dried wrinkly raisins were left, and the boat threatened to sink from an overflow of thick, virile seed inside its hull.

Later, after a pre-dawn wash in stinging salty seawater, Wei Ying had to use a pair of chopsticks to pick up the bent, smoking cun-slicked twig and it's two cracked, marvellously drained man-raisins for breakfast, of sorts. As he slowly, leisurely, polished the tortured angry-pink swollen organ to life, causing the older man to melt again into a writhing mess of tasty moans, shuddering hips and plenty of of Hnnghs with aaahs on the side, and the boat started to turn around to head back to port, Wei Ying allowed the exhausted, sex-drunken and thoroughly spent older man to lie on his lap and enjoy a warm still-orgasmic cuddle, a nice oiled massage to electrocute all remaining intact sexual meridians, and plenty of sweet kisses to thank Lan Zhan for a wonderful year, and to pray that they would have many more sexy times together in the coming days.)

.

With so much sex performed with perfect 10/10s, it was no wonder that the couple staggered out of their love nest-cum-boat with sweaty bodies, rosy cheeks and lopsided smiles, and nearly crashed with weak, wobbly thighs at their waiting steeds. The pier was quiet, as people were busy enjoying the New Year festivities at their homes and with their families. After mooring the rental boat, the couple made sure to scrub the boat clean with fresh water from the wells and freshen up their appearances, then left a nice Thank-You note to its owner and commended him for the unforgettable water ride that cost less than a piece of gold per night.

They started to adjust the saddles on the donkeys, and check their cart that was parked overnight by the sea - fortunately, nothing was taken, thanks to the few guards that patrolled the area to keep drunken revellers in check. Before resuming their wonderful journey made in paradise, they heard a familiar voice from a distance.

"Wei gongzi ! Lan er gongzi ! Thank goodness I've found you!" accompanied by a flutter of flapping fans.

Director Nie ran downhill across empty portside streets, wide grey and ashen blue sleeves billowing to the sides like wings of a clumsy crane - rightly so, when he tripped on a stone, and tumbled down like a boulder with flailing hands and legs, rolled down the slope until he ended up a groaning, bruised curled up figure at the bottom of Lan Zhan's legs.

Nie Huaisang, covered with dust, soot and smudges, smiled sheepishly and nearly fainted from the ordeal.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 163

After exchanging necessary polite pleasantries, high-etiquette bows and bountiful wishes for a prosperous new year, it didn't take long for the director to launch into a calculated approach to measure and size up his chance encounter.

“Wei gongzi ... how much do you actually remember, after the fall off the cliff?” The fan fluttered back and forth nervously. Grey shoes shuffled restlessly, ready to take flight at the first sign of danger.

Two pairs of eyes glared, and immediately the man in question went on the defensive and admitted with his palms raised up in submissiveness, "Ah! I didn't mean to pry into personal matters, but after a chance meeting with Zewu Jun last year in a tournament to determine candidacy for the still-vacant position of Chief Cultivator - the one where Jin Ling was publicly humiliated with a xiao flute and then graciously taken in by the Gusu Lans -, that great Lan sect leader shared some general details about your circumstances and your condition... Wei gongzi , surely you can't expect an ol' buddy like me to not care and worry? I had no chance to visit you since the end of last summer, because I was saddled with problems of my sect in Qinghe!" The explanation made sense, and Wei Ying relaxed his guard.

"So... how are you feeling now? How much do you remember?" the man in grey pressed, toeing carefully the lines between concern and intrusive ness.

A sigh, in acceptance that one's murkiest and undiscussable topic was already exposed to a wider circle than he originally thought. “I'm feeling alright now. Though, about the extent of how much I can recall... err... not much? My memory's spotty, sometimes. You can feel the bumps and dents on my scalp, if you touch it. I don't really hold any grudges against anyone, or desire to retain bad memories. So, if you ask me about those terrible, tumultuous times before my first death or from the period when I woke up in Mo village until we last saw each other during the end of last summer - I might just say, I don't remember, nor care to," the youngest man replied. He rubbed his chin thoughtfully and even touched the back of his topknot to invite for a feel - but nobody was interested in sinking their fingernails into Wei Ying's greasy and unwashed hair. His words were pure gold in weight, and his charming, reassuring smile wiped away all last vestiges of decades-old pains, regrets, guilt and worries.

"R... Really? No hard feelings? We're still good friends? Despite what happened?" The fan fluttered even faster and its owner leaned forward interestedly with a grateful sparkles in his eyes. One hand draped over Wei Ying's shoulder - too close, too intimate, if perceived by a superbly jealous outsider standing just right by his side -, and the latter had to pretend to lose his grip on the walking cane, which fell and slapped one of the offender's legs - like a bamboo cane whipping a child's limbs, literally - don't touch me, that said. The shortest man yelped and performed a quaint, brief raindance of sorts, before picking up and then handing back the walking cane to an apologetic Wei Ying. The plan backfired - the man gripped on Wei Ying's wrist to steady his balance, as he lifted up a grey-shoed foot to rub the pain away from the shins.

(Next to Wei Ying, yellow jade-tinged eyes blazed with laser-like fires and stared at the infuriating sight of another man molesting his spouse with an wrist grip.)

"I don't really remember what happened , Huaisang. After so many years, you still owe me that high quality Myna that I can use to compete in bird-singing competitions, after I taught you where to catch the biggest, fattest fishes in the whole of Yunmeng. Our bet's still on, and I'll show you who can train caged singing birds better with my undisputed intellect!" sing-song carefree laughter followed. The man garbed in shades of grey laughed along until his eyes were mere slits, clearly trying a little too hard to rebuild the camaraderie they had between them that had been lost for more than sixteen years.

The hand on Wei Ying's wrist was rudely pushed aside by the third wheel in the conversation, and a curt remark that the short man's shove was really too heavy for Wei Ying's weakened legs to bear - then, in a moment of drunken euphoria, the said incessantly-grinning man casually joked about someone looking far too big to fit his robes, and whether that someone was supposedly too heavy for Wei Ying, presumably after staying inactive in the mountains of Gusu during the preceding winter and fattening up with good meals with little exercise - for a former Chief Cultivator. Regardless of dirty looks shot at the dangerously oblivious Nie gentleman, he still laughed like a happy clumsy clown that he portrayed himself to be.

(White-garbed hands balled into fists, but Wei Ying silently raised his and blocked any untoward advance; this was not a time for picking childish fights.)

Nie Huaisang maintained his politically-friendly grin and stumbled backwards back, when he realized he probably overstepped certain unseen boundaries. His darting eyes told the other two men that he was keenly observing, the microsecond pauses and hesitations confirmed their suspicions. Nevertheless, Huaisang bowed a little and immediately proceeded to apologize profusely in a humbling stuttering manner, and used his sleeves to dust off non-existent particles off Wei Ying's wrists and forearms - nothing dirtied, nothing harmed, after all.

When he had recomposed his seemingly youthful behaviour, he made a few quick, almost unnoticeable pats and kneads on Wei Ying's arms, shoulder, torso and even a disguised swipe on the abdomen under the pretense of sweeping away most dust from the sash, like good ol' comrades they used to be. "W-- Wei gongzi , is it as bad as they say, that you can't cast any spells, perform any martial arts or cultivation, and that your meridians don't function anymore? That you're a normal person without any special abilities and skills?" he asked.

Wei Ying acted as though he's had enough of the unsolicited pat-downs and interrogations, like a petulant young master who had been buttered up too much. "Wah! I thought people no longer talked about me outside of the Cloud Recesses! Where did you learn so much about me? I know I'm incapacitated, you don't have to rub more salt on the wound, Director Nie! I can still hold a bow and shoot arrows at your buttocks, or slice off your itchy eavesdropping ears with a kitchen knife; do you want to test the skills that I've learnt while resting at Lan Zhan's home?" he exclaimed playfully and used an index finger to make slashing motions, in which Huaisang swallowed hard, shook his head, eyes wide and visibly frightened - and took a step back.

Wei Ying sighed heavily and gestured with a shrug that he was only kidding. Huaisang ventured gingerly, his eyes roaming all over Wei Ying's figure to try and locate hidden secrets from the young man just by deciphering any visual clues. "W-- W-- Wei gongzi , did you really stay more than half a year at Lan er gongzi 's hometown? I found it too hard to stomach the bland food and breathe in that stifling place, sixteen years ago. It was so boring and sterile! How on earth did you pass your time recovering there and survive? Did you manage to become better than best buddies after being cooped up in the same building as that Ice Prince during winter? Hmm?" The paper fan poked at Wei Ying's chest light-heartedly, and the two devolved into polite giggles again.

This time, third-wheeling Lan Zhan stepped in between the two younger men and stared down at a shrivelled Director Nie. The fan was immediately retracted and concealed behind its owner's back for fear of imminent destruction.

Wei Ying pretended not to notice Lan Zhan's rising jealousy and fury of having one's possession touched without consent, and to have his private space (also, property) intruded once too often. He simply, gently stopped Lan Zhan by placing a hand on the other's forearm, sending the older man a wordless order of "No, you can't do that".

“Oh ho ho ho...Don't say it like that in front of my host and saviour! He does not say much, but you should already know, his blade is faster than his tongue. Do you want to die so soon, Director Nie?” Wei Ying sounded absolutely unfazed, undeterred, and very natural in their banter.

Nie Huaisang has gathered enough evidence to ascertain what he needed to confirm. He took two steps back and gave the couple a very hard look - of Wei Ying appearing to hold Lan Zhan's forearm to restrain the latter from unleashing whatever fury that a rotund Lan man was capable of - then broke into another round of giggly boyish laughter.

“Of course not, my old friends!”

.

By the powers bestowed upon the couple, Wei Ying managed to transform himself into his pre-Gusu departure appearance - slightly haggard and unkempt, thin and bony, scarred and enfeebled from presumably falling off a cliff and as a result, becoming a cripple for life. His flute extended and morphed into a walking cane to complete his facade - before Director Nie stood in front of him.

Lan Zhan, due to his straightforward and no-nonsense nature, preferred to remain in his original form - an unrecognizable version of an overweight Lan Wang Ji with facial hair, except for his close acquaintances, notably when he walks with Wei Wuxian, dressed in their iconic contrasting-cum-matching couples' attire and accessories - of one in red-blacks, the other in blue-whites, standing side by side.

When Nie Huaisang invited the two to a nearby portside teahouse that opened on New Year's day, they accepted his offer - it was also a great opportunity to blend into the crowds they'd missed quite a bit ever since they started on their rather solitary journey (also honeymoon) more than two weeks ago, and engage in a bit of merry making without looking too out of place - for Wei Ying, a time to reconnect with civilization, fine wines and expensive food; for Lan Zhan, to take a break from all manners of physical exertions (be it from long hikes or sexually frenzied matings in every nook and cranny of that accursed floor mat), and enjoy the pleasures of a simple pot of pu'er tea, a plate of toasted mixed nuts and a banquet of people-watching.

The festivities were in full swing in the town that was located by a rivermouth roughly sandwiched between the provinces of Qinghe and Lanling. With plenty of waterways, dragon boat races were held to the delight of cheering crowds, and on land, the air was filled with merry firecracker explosions, drum beats and vibrant music, lanterns decorated the streets filled with high-spirited revellers, families and young children, buskers, street performers, lion dances and many more to keep everyone entertained and busy with the festivities. Many businesses were closed though eateries, amusement parks, and shops selling auspicious, red coloured festive goods stayed open to do brisk sales that morning.

After the Nie Sect Leader placed orders for a wonderful brunch - because flashing his Saber Jade Token meant he had unlimited credit to spend at all establishments run by descendants of Qinghe that populated nearly half the town, such as the Qing Qing Teahouse where they gathered for a morning feast - the trio settled down for much catching up from the outside world.

Little has happened during the Fall and Winter of last year, from the perspective of the world of cultivation. Without a fearsome leader to lead scores of cultivation warriors and wizards to build new sects, locate legendary treasures, defeat monster bosses or seek out new lands to colonize, people focused on the smaller things that matter in their lives, and in fact, things became more peaceful and for better or worse, a sense of complacency and contentedness set in. Fierce fighters settled down to start families and ploughed the fields to feed their communities; brilliant sorcerers turned to healers, herbalists and other professions that made society more productive, despite record winter snowstorms that lashed throughout the greater part of the Middle Kingdom; craftsmen who used to wield their tools to mass produce metal and magical weapons, armours, battle equipment, talismans and such, to feed the machinery that drives the cultivation industry, converted their skills to produce agricultural tools and domestic technology, inventions for household use, and even book-printing for schools.

"Still, the cultivators continue to spar and build their competitive strengths, such as organizing tournaments and competitions, periodically, even during the dead of winter, because no one knew when the Grand Council would hold a sitting to vote and elect the new chief based on a man's qualities and skills," Huaisang said, after confessing that he had flunked miserably in the preliminaries when he couldn't wield his saber, a custom-made reduced version of his late brother's, in proper when a Jin contestant chased after him with flying swords and summoned qi -powered familiars armed with nasty fangs and claws.

"Then, why are you here, Director?" Lan Zhan asked, after having calmed down from the fact that the man ceased being too buddy-buddy or touchy-feely with his soulmate; Wei Ying had to play footsie with Lan Zhan beneath the tablecloth, even extending one leg to the crotch and massage the rising, swelling flaming lust in the loins, to wordlessly tell him that yes, he still wants and adores his Hanguang Jun, even in the company of old acquaintances, so for goodness' sake, stop staring daggers at the poor Nie gongzi - cuckolding only worked if all players were Wei Yings, or his derivatives.

"Ah, er gongzi ," Huaisang poured another cup of cooling herbal tea for the other man, "You look a little flushed and sweaty, are you perhaps anxious to know the results of today's night hunt competition? I didn't catch a single yaoguai from nine at the night of New Year's Eve to five at dawn today, so I'm definitely no longer in the running for the championship, not when we're up against His Excellency Grandmaster Gao and his God-Killing Gloves!"

Wei Ying and Lan Zhan turned to look at each other in surprise, just when the waiter arrived to serve a platter of full roast duck between them.

Through hearty chews of colourful sticky rice, painted eggs, twelve kinds of grilled meats, mountains of vegetable dishes, tofu and vegetarian options, and abundant festive sweets, fried snacks, auspicious-sounding fruits, and mouth-watering traditional pastries served on New Year's day - Wei Ying's smart and disarmingly friendly lines of questioning managed to help the couple collect information without landing themselves in awkward situations. They knew that Lan Zhan's brother sometimes made trips out of town during winter, and returned with very slight bruises, smudges on the clothes, and an appearance that looked worse for wear for such a tall, handsome, strong and attractive man; Xi Chen da ge continued to participate in fights, competitions and tournaments - probably a long-standing championship of sorts -, and didn't seem to lose his winning streak just yet.

The latest contest of wits, bravery, strength and skills took on a more alarming twist ever since the Imperial Court formally stepped into the race to vie for the crown of the world of cultivation, at about the same time when Wei Ying and Lan Zhan departed from Gusu two weeks ago, along with the inexplicable disappearance of Zewu Jun from the man-versus-undead battles that raged in Caiyi Town. Sect Leaders were summoned for meetings at the Carp Tower - the only meeting venue that was so grand in scale, opulent in style and lavished with the riches and luxuries that only the biggest, most powerful sect in the Middle Kingdom could afford - fit for of kings and certainly, Imperial-sponsored grandmasters and their vast troops of cultivators and soldiers. Both Wei Ying and Lan Zhan were already familiar with the antics and intentions of the Imperial forces from their previous timelines, so they weren't surprised when Director Nie explained that the Imperial's champion and contender for the coveted title of Chief Cultivator, Grandmaster Gao, declared that the Chief's seat had been vacated for too long, and he proposed to cut the chase and run the finale of all final tournaments - a nationwide night hunt for yaoguai s and supernatural creatures above certain classes for a period of two weeks starting from New Year's day--

-- and the winner, that is, the Chief Cultivator, would be declared as the one who ends up with the highest score on the leaderboard. I thought you already knew this, but I guess the two of you were really out of town when these announcements took place in the last couple of weeks!" Huaisang exclaimed, then scratched his head in frustration.

"Still, it bothers me that you've been so fortunate not to have encountered any unsavoury characters during your vacation around the east coast. Swarms of yaoguai s had been released by Imperial monster trainers, since the first meetings took place at the Carp Tower tower two weeks ago, which became the impetus to setting up this hunt because every sect had to get rid of the monsters in their backyards," the man sighed and patted Wei Ying's back in what seemed to be a gesture of despair in the face of shared burdens. A quick stab of chopsticks from the er gongzi , and Huaisang quickly withdrew his rather promiscuous hand.

Wei Ying's mind started to wander frantically far and wide, because of the temptingly obvious, though not verified, connections between the yaoguai release and what happened in Caiyi. He even stopped in mid-chew while gorging himself on dumplings, and unknowingly threatened to suffer from a choking episode.

"Thank you for sharing the news that we've missed, Director Nie. Still, I would like to know, why are you here, in this town so far south of Qinghe and close to your mortal enemies in Lanling?" Lan Zhan asked again after downing the cup of tea that had been refilled. The implication that the Nie family continues to bear a grudge against the Jin family was clear as day, though unspoken.

Nie Huaisang stammered as he grasped around for a plausible answer to the keen Lan man, "Er... er... I am a s-- sponsor, so my job... is to look for sects that can f-- fight for my cause."

The short, fidgety man whipped out his fan in distress and fanned himself vigorously, turning into shades of beet-reds and shrinking in size and presence by the minute. Wei Ying's train of thought interrupted, he did a double take and nearly lost a half-chewed prawn dumpling from his gaping mouth; his toenail grazed Lan Zhan's sensitive clothed erection when he retracted them from across the underside of the table.

"Sponsor?" both men asked in unison; Lan Zhan hnngh'd and curled up for a moment, before returning to his calm, upright sitting posture in a heartbeat.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 164

Nie Huaisang rolled his eyes, sighed then scratched his head at the increasingly awkward and oppressive conversation; it felt as though he was being interrogated and forced to tell all - and he probably blurted something he shouldn't have. Huaisang hadn't touched his plate of food, even if he was paying for their meal with his awesome Saber Jade Token the size of a man's palm.

Wei Ying was the first to break the iceberg between them - there was certainly more than meets the eyes, buried beneath the deep ocean of unknowns -, and poured another cup of Qinghe's famous rice wine for his gracious host.

"Director Nie," Wei Ying addressed the man formally, which meant that the situation was beginning to take on beguiling hints, and that man fanned himself even faster from a deep-seated anxiety, "A sponsor means you're paying someone else to do something for you," which caused that man to flinch, "and you say that you're looking for sects to fight for your cause - I assume for the competition, for the sake of the pride and glory of Qinghe Nie clan?"

The cup filled to the brim, Wei Ying lifted away the jar and bowed his head politely to gesture the man to drink up. His discerning eyes never left Huaisang, and he thought the man shrunk from the overpowering attention. Inside, Wei Ying did his little victory jig for delivering an ingenious line of questioning to corner the Nie man.

Lan Zhan picked up a steamed chicken wing and stuck it into the man's bowl of white rice, wingette side in, so that the tip jutted out horizontally, proudly, like the length of a flag. "Director Nie," this time it was Lan Zhan's turn to tag-team with his spouse to checkmate the unassuming but cunning man, "Just now, you asked a number of questions, and it seems you already know our conditions - Wei Ying is not fit to be sent to the battle field versus humans and yaoguai alike, and I am, ostensibly, unfit as well from my recent sedentary civilian lifestyle. Why did you come all the way to the south, to look for us?" Again, that question, and Huaisang visibly cringed into his chair.

Nie Huaisang sighed again with regret, and stared at the chicken wing tip, like a white flag of surrender.

.

Over a few cups of wine that Wei Ying knew would bolster the smaller man's fragile confidence, and the untouched chicken wing-cum-flag to remind him that he could not evade the truth - Director Nie broke down in dismay, tearless sobs and long tirades of complaints - whether overdramatized or not, nobody knew - of the actual, and more disconcerting nature of the yaoguai hunt.

Grandmaster Gao had, in some way, seized control of the leadership mantle by commanding, forcibly, the headless Grand Cultivation Council to sign off a few provisions to the competition before it was launched in a modest ceremony attended by unhappy sect leaders a week ago, so that everyone had just another week to prepare themselves for the fight of their lives. It was, Huaisang pointed out and with energetic nods coming from Wei Ying, like the time when the firstborn sons of sects were sent to the Nightless

City, sixteen years ago, to receive lectures and deviated teachings of the Qishan Wen. One of the provisions was that every sect had to participate, otherwise they forfeit their operating licenses and would either cease to exist, or more appropriate, subsumed into the larger Imperial Cultivator group. The rationale was absolutely reasonable and did not warrant any objections from the council - the Imperial forces were serious in testing its might against the world of cultivation, and had thrown its gauntlet to issue a challenge; any sects who weren't in to defend their pride, would not qualify to remain, after all.

“Wei gongzi , Lan er gongzi ,” Huaisang was half-sobbing, and half-hiccuping from the effects of the strong liquor, “I can win bird-singing competitions and catch the biggest fish from the rivers with my bare hands; I inherited my late brother's great wealth from agricultural, terrestrial and seafaring legacy of the Nie people, amazing armories of mythical sabres, scores of metalworking industries and technology, and enough rice fields to feed one third of the country at any time, straight from the fertile, productive and heavily populated plains of the Grand Dongbeifang Gulf - and yet, I'm a sect leader who cannot, and is too scared, to wield a sword in proper to defend my land and my men in times of dire need.”

Wei Ying was about to say something about holding a one-off class to teach the sect leader about the merits of memorizing Sun Tzu's Art of War, and get himself employed as the sect's brilliant advisor to reorganize the legendary armies of Qinghe, and take on the entire Imperial Court head-on with blazing cannons to lay waste on tens of thousands of troops at once, then send intelligent flying magical sabres like projectile missiles to annihilate their anti-personnel bowmen, catapults, and even pummel the Great Wall into rubble, before wrapping up the party with the might of thousands of Qinghe horsemen and foot soldiers descending from the hills, performing heroic pincer movements and other amazing military tactics ahead of their era, to make sure that the Emperor in Chang'an would be left without any defense, shaking like a leaf with his useless aristocratic elites inside the Imperial Palace - Wei Ying had wonderful plans even if he decided not to wield any magic or blade, but Lan Zhan cut his aspirations short.

“Director Nie,” the older man stated calmly, “Released yaoguai s are finite in their numbers, so it would make sense to theorize that eventually, all sects will be at one another’s throats to capture and snatch each other’s spoils. Forming alliances upfront, like yourself, is an admirable strategy. If you’ve come this far to search for two men who have left the cultivation world to aid your cause, then you’re a desperate man. Second, from my brief stint as Chief Cultivator... last year..., am I right to believe that many of the weaker, less virtuous sects have decided to take the easy way out, and serve under the Imperial banner against the world of cultivation? What are the consequences of losing this competition, and what has happened to the renowned valiant Nie clan, that you would go to great lengths, alone in this town, to look for the two of us?” It was a mouthful, but Lan Zhan articulated his thoughts eloquently this time, and he rounded his line of questioning with a gulp of pu’er tea. A passing-by waiter picked up his three empty plates, and replaced them with three baskets of steaming dim sum - to Lan Zhan’s hidden ravenous appetite’s delight. He wasted no time to shift in his stuffy seat, loosen his sash because his tummy was, really, spilling out, then used his chopsticks to start picking off the colourful flavourful freshly-made dumplings off the baskets piece by piece.

Wei Ying gazed between the two with his jaws agape - he didn’t think of finding out more before jumping the gun to propose his crazy kamikaze strategy to defeat the aggravating Imperial forces with a single crushing blow. Nie Huaisang was getting drunk, and his words were slurred - however, his tongue waggled a whole lot more as his cheeks brightened into bright pinks. He revealed the mechanics of the yaoguai competition, such as how the day’s catch was calculated based on the number of yaoguai caught, dead or alive, and submitted to officials stationed in every major city for a cumulative count at five o’ clock; living yaoguai fetched more value, of course, since it was harder to keep a rabid and violent supernatural monster in check and alive, than to slaughter it on the spot; also, obviously, larger, and more powerful creatures scored for more points than their lesser brethren. Huaisang rued over the fact that he came up empty handed on the first day, thus he lagged behind everyone else, particularly the almighty Imperial cultivators who had their numbers boosted with nearly half the Middle Kingdom's sects under their rule; the Jins were not far behind with their sophisticated and very expensive equipment to catch more than an average sect.

“Lan er gongzi , your brother surprised everyone with a pre-emptive strike! He joined the competition with a bag full of yaoguai cores already in their cages, and those were considered valid for the final count. Apparently, yesterday, the night before the starting New Year's fireworks were lit, a group of Lan disciples arrived with yaoguai s caught from Caiyi and other towns in the vicinity - such admirable foresight, indeed! I asked Zewu Jun if he could spare a couple of those creatures to me, a pitiful beggar amongst the world of heroic, capable cultivators, but he refused for respectable reasons - in a fair competition like this, he would like to see to its end as virtuously as possible, and beat the Jins, the Imperial Court, and everyone else with his diligent efforts; if the Heavens will it, he will secure the top places and prosper the honour of the Gusu Lans.

Wei gongzi , Jiang Cheng is also in the running for a place in the winner's league, but he hasn't been doing well. He might be in the top twenty, but certainly not the top ten. The Yunmeng Jiang sect is not rich like the Jins, nor clever and skilled as the Gusu Lans. They managed to bag a few last night, I heard, but quite a number of disciples were hurt and exhausted, and there are still thirteen nights to go!

Last night, I tried to muster the Nie troops to run to the hills and start hunting for the creatures, living and undead, but they deserted me out of fear! They say that I didn't know where to hunt or how to catch one, and that they would prefer to stay alive under the rule of others than to be sent to their deaths without knowing what hit them. Aieeee... the shame, the shame! They dropped their gear and ran away like cowards - but I cannot fault them, because I was one too!

Gongzi , one of the provisions of the competition is that the judges, that is, elites of the Grand Cultivation Council, will decide how many sects will be considered worthy to continue their existence into a new era under the new leader, when elected - and how many from the bottom rung will be eliminated, possibly cast into the waiting jaws of the Imperial Court with no help from the world of cultivation, because the Council will no longer vouch for the weakest amongst them! It's a survival situation of the strong feasting upon the weak, gongzi! It's cruel, cruel, I tell you!" Director Nie cried out his long story, then burped, and started to slouch on his seat and drool on the table. His half-lidded eyes were unsexy to say the least, but at least he still smiled in his intoxicated state despite the impending doom of his very strong, very rich, but very incompetent clan.

Several of the teahouse patrons peeked into their private dining room to see what was the uproar about, but Wei Ying quickly rose from his chair and shushed away the outsiders, then quickly closed all doors and locked the windows. He was interested in the intense discussion which now involved his foster brother, and wanted no interference from prying eyes and ears from irrelevant parties beyond the four walls of their dining room. When he returned to his seat, he noticed Lan Zhan looked stressed and anxious as well - tightened jaws, balled fists, a hunched bristling posture. Wei Ying blindly reached for a hand, or a thigh, beneath the tablecloth to sooth the older man's feelings; but the hand slipped and accidentally grabbed Lan Zhan's clothed erection; there was a lewd, manly nnnnh groan; fortunately Huaisang was too out of it to notice, and Wei Ying gestured with his other hand to the drunken man to go on, go on, please continue.

Wei Ying had a brief respite when Lan Zhan winced and said that he needed to use the gents, for drinking too much tea in-between large helpings of food, then eating too much until his tummy was bloated and he didn't want to stink up the closed dining room with farts - he said it seriously with rumbling sounds from his belly to evidence his claim, but Wei Ying mocked and laughed at the spouse anyway and waved him off. The man rushed out, but not before grabbing the floor mat they'd brought along with them for the sumptuous banquet sponsored by the Nie sect leader; Wei Ying had given a marvellous handjob through the latter half of Director Nie's inebriated, heartfelt confession about his miserable state, and it took Lan Zhan his entire repertoire of self-control techniques to not climax at the dining table and straight into the hotpot.

With Huaisang snoring deeply and incapacitated from too many cups of Qinghe's famous rice wines, Wei Ying reached for his satchel - his very own Bag of Holding - from the floor and rummaged its contents. He found his good ol' 51st-century holo-phone, flicked it to life with a swipe of fingers, and made a few much-needed calls.

.

Another twist in the story, another problem that needs to be navigated like a rickety boat through whitewater rapids, Wei Ying thought.

There were plenty of informative tidbits revealed by a tipsied Director Nie - including one about him running into a bunch of men and boys dressed in red-blacks and blue-whites; Huaisang thought his eyes were bleary, and his memory fuzzy from the lack of sleep after running around blindly throughout New Year's night; and perhaps, the atmosphere was cursed by the thickness of malaise and resentful energy emitted by panicking yaoguai s, because long after midnight, he remembered calling four men clad in varying shades of blacks from a distance as 'Wei gongzi ', and they responded by stopping in their tracks, but ran away straight after that; then in another instance, when the moon was high in the inky black night sky, he thought he saw apparitions of older versions of the two men, and beside them, younger versions running around giggling like school children, always black and whites, black and whites, never in shades of grey, before those individuals disappeared mysteriously into the pre-dawn mists; he kept calling them out, sometimes the figures turned around but they never replied back or approached him - until morning came and the thoroughly confused and spooked Nie Huaisang finally found the real Wei Wuxian and Lan Wang Ji in the flesh, stepping off a boat on the morn of New Year's day.

The holo-phone call connected with a disembodied click - the device was ethereal in nature, hands-off in function, weightless and camouflaged from non-users. Wei Ying launched into a series of excited chatter, peppered with unrestrained emotion of all spectrums, angry expletives accompanied with rude gestures in mid-air, trading crude barbs with da ge s, er ge s, san di s and didi s, then in another call, had in-depth discussions and intensely demanding negotiations - with plenty of enthusiastic arm movements - with two or more Uncles, delved deep into creative brainstorming on the go while pacing madly around the dining room, and even made polite bows occasionally in apology - for the waiters that rush in and out of the dining room strictly to clear away used plates and top up the table with new dishes and even the broth for a large hotpot in the middle - ordered by Nie Huaisang in his drunken state, but would otherwise go to waste if not for Wei Ying and especially Lan Zhan's efforts to polish off all the ingredients stewing inside -, the waiters thought they were dealing with a crazy, demented customer, so they did what was needed, kept their heads low, and quietly left Wei Ying seemingly talking to himself, while Director Nie slept away soundly; after all, the short man had endured an out-of-this-world experience that nobody from 2000 B.C. should have experienced, for an entire night without sleeping a wink.

Two minutes and a bit more later, Lan Zhan staggered back, fully flushed from head to toe, panting but with a slight lopsided upward curve on his lips. He closed the door before putting the well-used floor mat back into his cherry-red Bag of Holding 2.0; fortunately, the other patrons in teahouse thought Lan Zhan looked like a man who ate too many spicy foods, hot dumplings, hotpots and drank expensive wines, and treading unassumingly between the dining halls inside the building and the outdoor latrines, so nobody paid attention to the godly immortal who had just fathered another generation of babes.

“Darling,” Wei Ying drawled out with a mouth full of newly-cooked hotpot ingredients - slices of meats, tofu and mushrooms -, and Lan Zhan’s eyes widened with thinly-veiled fear because the dozing Director Nie was just beside him - now that he had a chance to look closer, he realized Huaisang had dark circles under the eyes -, “Feeling better now?”

Lan Zhan took a deep breath, then reached behind to smoothen his long, luscious locks of shiny hair - then realized with ire that the girth of his stomach was greater than his sash, and threatened to cause a wardrobe malfunction if he stretched his limbs any more. So, he merely grunted like the fat slob he’d become - two weeks of zero-stress honeymoon, good food and non-stop sex had done this much to his body -, then took his seat and returned to vacuum up more edibles off the table; he avoided the spicy hotpot broth, but couldn’t resist dipping fatty five-layered pork belly slices into the pot, then dipped into creamy sauces, before shoving them into his mouth.

Wei Ying grinned and took a napkin to gently dab the man's busy face - with every bite, his moustache and part of his beard were smeared with more greasy stuff. His other hand crawled to Lan Zhan's bulging belly and drew circles, stars and rabbit ears on the overturned wok - in a very intimate and affectionate way; when it came to the imaginary rabbit's eye, Wei Ying impaled an index finger to tickle the insides of the navel, and Lan Zhan swore, without a word, that he would suffer from either indigestion or stomach cramps later. (It didn't help that the crass Wei gongzi then pulled out that offending finger to give it a whiff, just like any other ape-caveman who grooms and fusses over his or her spouse, picks off dandruffs, dead skins, grime and icky stuff, then for some instinctive but terrifyingly disgusting and unhygienic reasons, puts 'em into the mouth.)

“You were really great for asking the right questions, and getting the director to open up, Lan Zhan,” he cocked his head at the snoring man across the fully populated table, even poking Huaisang's nostrils from afar with a used chopstick, “I have a mediocre, friendly relationship with him from our younger days, so I can only laugh and be a peer, but never as straight, commanding and deceitfully sly as you.” Wei Ying leaned forward and gave a sweet peck on Lan Zhan's rosy cheeks; the latter simply continued to eat and didn't feel like responding, thus not fuelling, the naughty gremlin's appetite for lovely bullying between husband and wife.

Nie Huaisang sneezed in his sleep with a trail of saliva on his chin sliding down to his collar, then nom-noms like a bratty child. Lan Zhan ignored his partner's unflattering comments, and went straight for a chicken drumstick.

.

Despite his hefty weight and piled-up kilos from eating enough to feed a family for a week, Lan Zhan had no problems slinging the smallest man over his shoulders, then trudging ahead to the stables where their donkeys were waiting. Wei Ying used his boyish charms to assure the Qing Qing teahouse laoban that everything was fine, that they were close acquaintances who met up the leader of the Nie sect to celebrate the New Year, and that the sect leader got a little too tipsy from unspecified fortuitous news, so they promised to take him back to rest and recover.

Director Nie was bundled up in a warm blanket and draped over Lil' Apple's back like an extra piece of carry-on baggage. The couple's cart, hooked up to Big Apple's harness, was relatively empty after two weeks of travel and became their new temporary love-nest of sorts. The four invisible and undetectable demons of the Negative Plane led the horse by the reins and made sure that in their wake, everyone in the port town including those in the teahouse would not remember their encounter - the couple continued their journey along the coast without leaving a single trace, after all.

Wei Ying knew, and Lan Zhan didn't need to verbalize, that they had been careful throughout their two-week post-wedding odyssey from Gusu and northward along the Grand Eastern Coastline; thus, any news about them would not arise from their journey itself, and in most likelihood, Director Nie learnt about them through his own observations, or from mingling with others of his kind - notable Zewu Jun and Jiang Cheng.

Soon, they left the bustling festive town and entered the fringes of dense bushes.

“What do you think, honey? How much does a sect leader spill the secrets of its people, or fugitives like us, to others?” Wei Ying asked, in between hot kisses and sensual fondling of each other's naughty bits; the younger man gently rode Lan Zhan inside the shoebox-shaped cart, hidden partly from the outside world by its rather high walls, and Lan Zhan nnnh'd because his nipples were tweaked each time his hips slammed deep into the love canal of his beloved man, squishy, lubricated and plenty of residual drying cum.

The younger of the Twin Jades croaked something about Xi Chen keeping to his word as a virtuous man - that is, the Gusu Lan Sect Leader might narrate the civilian couple as taking a short Springtime vacation to ward off the cabin fever that had built up over Winter, and of having no recollection about the two's involvement in the political and trade-related matters from the Cloud Recesses to Caiyi Town after the decontamination and memory wipe-out operations powered by Inabilities; thus, the two would be seen in a rather light-hearted and favourable light, probably relegated to the ranks of curious touristy spectators who wanted to watch the action unfold close to Lanling's Carp Tower.

Wei Ying hummed in understanding, and picked up his pace in appreciation - a penny for the older man's thoughts, though that pretty penny was paid in the form of a loving couple's sexual intercourse. He reached down to play with the tender balls that had been forcibly emptied all night to herald the New Year, and now, squeezed to the last drop from those wrinkly, sagging overworked, depleted testicles; it didn't help that Wei Ying could shapeshift himself from male to female forms, and back again including other titillating varieties that left Lan Zhan more than breathless and half-dead from overspending the lusts in his satiated loins. Lan Zhan instinctively sped up the tempo of raw, bareback fucking each time he felt his happy penis tugged to the front by magical forces, and his cockhead started to bump into something very, very intriguing, very tasty, and very desirable - lewd pictures of his elated penis knocking on the door to his favourite womb, nudging deeper to say hello to their conceived baby within its cradle made of love, caused the man to tremble in the throes of sexual ecstasy and he Hnngh'd audible, shoved his pelvis so hard against Wei Ying's crotch, and that extra friction sent electricity frying every last nerve-bundles along his supremely iron-hard and impressive monstrous erection nearly hidden beneath layers of belly fat, that Lan Zhan felt a pleasurable spike running through his spinal chord; for a brief moment, he became too excited at the believable thought of planting more fat cherubs inside his spouse, and his penis was resuscitated instantly, and one-two'ed with such eagerness, that he'd fill his lovely Wei Ying with more of his bodily fluids.

“Ahhh... look at your unforgivably stupid face and your shuddering sweaty body, how you're straining against me where we're joined, and I feel something warm pooling inside my lower half - are you ejaculating again? You insufferable swine!” Wei Ying laughed casually and slapped the older man's broad back and scratched the layer of blubber on the arms and midriff in a mock-protest. Poor Lan Zhan aaahn'd again from the masochistic pleasures of mating his beloved spouse while getting tormented and shamed - another one-two of diluted pee mixed with prostatic fluids involuntarily ejected straight into Wei Ying's now-male undulating rectum, before the younger man giggled with great juvenile joy, mischievously switched his groin area back to his now-female vagina, and Lan Zhan howled like a man who had achieved the pinnacle of his existence, that is, to procreate and multiply; Wei Ying, in his so-called inferior gender, was an expert in working the inner muscles so that any imprisoned meaty phallus would be milked until nothing remained except a dried, bent twig with two raisins dangling uselessly from the base.

While sexually assaulting and draining Lan Zhan's flaming lusts far better than an incubus or succubus could, Wei Ying wondered aloud about Jiang Cheng's perspective. That man hadn't visited Gusu after the end of summer the year before, so it was likely that his knowledge was no better than any other sect leaders or Council members privy to the matters of the former Yiling Patriarch.

“I kind of missed Jiang Cheng, and I’d like to talk to him again, after all this while,” he declared his intention to no one in particular - because their little convoy of two asses was already plodding the trails deep in the uninhabited forests that lead to Lanling province. He swatted away Lan Zhan’s hand that was blindly grappling for the floor mat inside the cart.

“You’re a bad boy, your partner is trying his best to make love with you, and yet all you can think is to run away through the floor mat? You coward, and you deserve to be punished!” he yelled with glee and spanked Lan Zhan’s buttocks each time the latter raised his hips in a desperate, fertile act to thrust higher, lift their bodies off the base of the cart, and fuck lovely Wei Ying to kingdom come. Another one-two spattered out of his dick straight inside the cackling young man, since Lan Zhan deliriously loved having his jiggling fat glutes abused.

“Did you know that the floor mat is temporarily out of service after you used it at the teahouse? You pig, how can you deflower and impregnate twenty four thousand new clones of me in a span of two minutes, ha ha ha! Let the service crew clean up and replenish the underground dungeons first - until then, my dear two-in-one husband and wife, let’s continue our naughty games while Director Nie is unconscious, and before we reach the next civilization!”

Lan Zhan couldn’t agree more.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 165

(A bit of an interlude...)

In a different world and timeline, and allowed to explore on their own, the family of four enjoyed the delights, delicacies and destinations offered wherever the lands in which they set their foot upon. There were only a few conditions to live their free lives, though, including that they have to follow the head of the family, and that the head of the family is considered gainfully employed as a Regent, therefore, the family is consigned to be in active service of the Kingdom and Company that rule over their existence.

Much closer to home, or rather, the heart of the family, the dynamic are slightly screwed up. The Master, an impressive descendant - actually, a purebred clone - of the Lan-kin, usually spends his time herding two eight-year old boys from bed to breakfast, from a bathhouse to classes in the woods (in which the Master is both the teacher and daytime babysitter), in which meals are provided, the children are cared and kept safe, and they maintain non-intrusive, low profiles all day no matter which village, town or cities they travelled to, thanks to the Inabilities that had been gifted to all subjects of their empire. In most cases, his favourite child, A-Xian, takes up a disproportionate amount of his attention because that child is indeed a feral beast on two legs, who can never sit still and always needed to be cherished, fussed over and bedded amongst the bushes; over time, feisty and precocious A-Xian had learnt to get along with his wicked stepmother, the terrible master criminal and appallingly hairy Uncle Wei, and learnt a few tricks when they weren't fighting like cats and dogs over Lan-derived men - such as the ability to shapeshift and cast powerful Dark Arts spells bend the minds and wills of (im)mortals to do his childish bidding.

For the time being, like any child of his age, he was fascinated by the twisted sex education lessons given by the Master - his adoptive father, really. Upon learning the mechanics of human copulation for the purpose of reproduction, A-Xian gleefully transformed himself into his female form, which caused untold joys to the Master, and for several days in a row, the two had been terribly occupied with making babies in the bushes from sunrise to sunset, stopping only to rest, eat, and sleep, still joined at the crotches, semen still pumping deep into a fecund tight juicy womb through strong, virile blasts, and eventually tired, weak penile contractions, until the eight-year old child sported a pregnant belly that the two were sure twins or triplets started to grow within.

Uncle Wei wasn't all that disappointed to lose his place as the so-called wife and mother of the family, since he didn't like to be raped by the almighty Master - who can be a frightening disciplinarian armed with feather dusters, if he wanted to -, each time he made a boo-boo. The criminal continued his dastardly activities, always seeking out opportunities to make a quick buck out of everything, then buy jars of wines for his own consumption and give the rest to the household as spending money. His dues paid regularly, Uncle Wei was allowed to remain in relative peace, and his plans were often left undisturbed - he'd worked hard in partnership with the four great Wei siblings and his expanded friendship with merry bands of evil men, to set up his own empire of sleazy networks and businesses in the underbelly of society - wherever the family went, in their wake would be streets filled with brothels, gambling dens and gangs dealing in contraband such as illegal weapons and illicit drugs, and many mafia-like groups were set up to start and manage businesses that involved human trafficking, moneylending and scams, assassination, spying, robbery, and the ilk.

So, while the Master whittled their idle year-end holidays in village homesteads by joyfully impregnating his beloved eight-year old 'wife' and getting the household chores done, Uncle Wei worked hard to earn his keep as the family's sole breadwinner of sorts, and indirectly, put food on their table. Uncle Wei received plenty of kickbacks and bribes in the form of Caiyi's stolen treasures from the coffers of that town's treasury - about two weeks before New Year's, to be exact -, and that made sure the whole family lived in reasonably luxurious countryside chalets and beachside resorts, could do plenty of shopping and fill up their Bags of Holding, and everyone was fed with buffets all day.

Watching the Master - an imposingly tall clone of the venerable Lan Wang Ji - cuddle and crouch over a child just a third of his size - the squealing and hyper-excitabile A-Xian - in a doggie-style sexual intercourse, filled with tasty grunts and howls, that would last for an hour or two by an exclusive creekside cottage - the two preferred outdoor sex, now that the weather is warmer and fresh air does invigorate one's senses -, Uncle Wei tip-toed off to the nearest town in search of new ways to earn money and buy himself crates of liquor. He would buy a box of aphrodisiac-laced lollipops from an unassuming underground vendor, then lure little boys and girls by waving the sweet candies in their direction; when he had the children cornered in a dark, dingy back alley, he would bag them up and sell them for nuggets of gold to prostitution houses or smugglers - he wasn't too keen in girls because he'd already raped too many in his lifetime, knocked up enough to make harem-masters jealous, and had gotten jaded with the varied sweet tastes of maidens deflowered by his hairy cock; however, he still held some interest in the boys, because they remind him so much of the cocktease A-Ji. A-Ji, the other eight-year old 'son' of his, is kind-of off-limits when A-Xian is around in the house, so the dirty rapist Uncle had to take his lustful loins elsewhere for some tension-releasing fun.

Uncle Wei would spend hours sucking on crying little boys' soft, hairless penises together with the candies, then violently play with their grape-sized balls until they bruised purples and swelled, then enjoy the sputtering sweet nectars of clear seedless ejaculate that only pre-pubescent boys could make inside their immature testicles, blended with sugary melted lollipop syrup and his smelly foamy saliva, and he would do it many times until the boys' bodies were trained to tingle and reach their pre-teen orgasmic peaks that they shouldn't experience before their time. After that, the boys would be handed over to morbidly obese, wart-faced stinking filthy old men for a handsome price of a gold nugget each, where the boys' virginities would be forcibly taken, thoroughly ravaged, and ruined for the rest of their lives, upon velvety beds lined with chains, feathers and other sex-torture equipment, their fates sealed once they are sold as sex slaves to ugly old men.

With three members of the family having found new activities to engage in, or new purpose in life come Springtime, little A-Ji felt a bit lost being left behind, alone in a house, or in the forests. Being cooped up in Gusu for nearly six months was rather comforting for the child, since he ate foods that suited his bland palate, slept on hard, sterile white beds in natural tranquility, and mingled with people that were generally nice, harmonious, studious, peaceful and friendly - his type of people, after all. Plus, his relationship with the Master, whom he felt inexplicably drawn to, had blossomed into a mentor-student one, and he was taught Perfect techniques and skills that boasts god-tiered scale and powers that utilizes their Dream-powered technologies and living engines - however, he was also taught humility, that is, he would not use such knowledge and capabilities recklessly; such great powers must only be used to help those in need. Springtime meant that life was beginning to grow and thrive, and along with that, the Master's roving eyes and boiling lusts upon his child-wife, A-Xian. A-Ji wasn't emotionally hurt or scarred to see his best pal (and saviour) squealing on a bed with an incestuous huffing, puffing, groaning adult man pumping repeatedly between the legs - he had already gotten used to getting surprise-rapes from his stepmother, Uncle Wei, from the moment he opened his eyes at five in the morning, followed by an all-day orgy-buffet every time Uncle Wei put his greasy hands on his child-thin hips, and until at night, when everyone was soundly asleep, Uncle Wei didn't hesitate to slip into their king-sized bed, spooned against him to forcibly penetrate the child's swollen anus, and inseminate his baby buttocks for hours on end, while dirty, oily fingers fiddled with his inflamed, angry-red bruised wilted wee-wee, smelly alcoholic breathes panting down his neck then whispering very pornographic stories about men raping naughty, disobedient little boys like A-Ji; animal-like grunts echoed the walls of his single bedroom with each pleasurable pound of hips, crushing poor A-Ji against pillows and rabbit-themed bedsheets beneath the weight of a man enjoying fornicating with little underaged boys, that he could only whimper softly for help, then hours after the moon crossed the sky, he finally fell asleep, exhausted, his cheeks reddened and streaked with drying tears, with Uncle Wei grunting in satisfaction at successfully taking his pleasures from a helpless eight-year old, and sowed his demonic seeds very excitedly, in a series of twenty spurts each, deep, deep inside the battered child.

With Spring in the air and everyone else had discovered new toys to play with, A-Ji found himself wandering around the towns, alone, where they stopped by for rest. At one time, whether he was by himself or with his family, he'd hear a ghostly cry of "Wei gongzi ! Lan er gongzi !", which stopped him in his tracks - because Lan was his surname, after all - but the two Uncles tugged at his hand and hurried off to hide away from view. A-Ji was told again and again, that he had to remain inconspicuous, and to keep to the quieter, less populated areas whenever possible. He obeyed without question, even if it meant that sometimes he was taken against his will by other Wei-kin that he didn't know their names, and then pushed up against a mossy, damp wall, and have his pants torn, before his genitals were vigorously attacked by snake-like tongues and greasy lips, and fingers played with his ass until he couldn't hold back his farts - when he did let go of the gas eventually, those terrible men worked in tandem to stick unwashed fingers into his loosened anus, and untrimmed fingernails started to knead and graze the special spot within until his immature prostate gland convulsed excitingly - he was too young to understand or even experience such heavenly sensations that made his toes curl and adult-like moans escaped from his throat, that he one-two'd involuntarily into the waiting jaws of the Wei rapists - an exotic, delicious colourless honeyed liquid that only eight-year old boys can squirt from bouncy boy-eggs trapped in a vibrating vacuum of adult men's greedy, hungry mouths.

It didn't help that the prankster Wei-kins sometimes stole the accursed floor mat while it was undergoing maintenance, then threw little A-Ji into the spiralling depthless portal, before letting him out, two minutes later. Inside the horrible paradise for acts of fertility unsuitable for children, little pantless A-Ji found himself at the mercy of many, many Wei jiejie who swarmed the screaming, sobbing boy, greedily dip their heads between the boy's trembling legs rapidly, for hours, days, weeks, even months, then taught him the joys of copulating for the sole purpose of propagating their kind - the evil, succubi-like jiejie s would grab his hips and force the unwilling boy to pump energetically between their spread legs, coo-ing him to shoot his immature, undeveloped seed before its time, coaxing the boy to perform the timeless, ageless act of adult sexual intercourse and deep, hard fucks; the sisters crowded behind A-Ji's buttocks and used their tongues to lap and jiggle the child's shrivelled testicles even while the penis rutted vigorously into an orifice, and each time A-Ji pulled out the females tugged at his foreskin until the glistening pinkish prize beneath was fully revealed, then more tongues tickled the special spot beneath that glans - A-Ji's hips quivered at the wonderful electricity running from cock to spinal chord -, and gently pushed those hips back against the Wei-female that happily squeezed her pussy, so that A-Ji slid in with maximum friction and wetness to his child-penis glans, and A-Ji sobbed from the mind-blowing sensations that devastated his rationale mind, until it was too much, his eyes rolled to the back, his back seized and his child-pelvis shuddered again and again because it couldn't stop shaking, because it was too pleasurable, too hot, too tight, very wet, too exciting, that little A-Ji cried out each time thirty ejaculations of useless, seedless sticky fluids were forcefully extracted from his tortured pinkie-length penis.

Later, A-Ji found himself on a soaked bed, with many Wei jiejie s cramming between his legs, kissing, making love using lips, tongues and fingers with his lower body. He cried again and again pitifully from the dread of being eaten alive, so he reached to the side - a purple pillow - and fluffed it over his head, covering his eyes, so that he didn't need to watch what the demonic jiejie s were doing to his wee-wee, his child-eggs and his anus. The jiejie s would scold him sometimes, for not reciprocating their brand of twisted love, so A-Ji placated them by squeezing his eyes shut, then reaching down to masturbate in full view of the demonic succubi females, then, with a sigh of defeat, pulled his foreskin to expose his shiny pinky glans, and the female cackled and roared with victorious laughter, and went on to attack the boy's genitals with such zest and hunger, until sexually flushed A-Ji knew that nothing would remain except a bent wilted twig, two cracked eggs, and a ruined butthole.

At one point, the pillow was torn from his grasp and he was forced to observe, in full horror, the sexual assault happening between his spread legs and raised hips - one Wei jiejie opened her fanged mouth, and a serpentine tentacle-y tongue poked out - it swayed up and down so close to his quivering child-erection that his penis jerked in fear; then it extended a bit more to become a forked tongue, and the forked edges vibrated with hisses and wiggly movements, and A-Ji's drained testicles silently cried in terror and quickly spasmed to tighten against the penis-base and hide themselves there - but to no avail, because soon, not one, but three forked tongues found their way through the irritated, swollen pee-slit, stuffed themselves through the boy's fragile urethra and became to invade his insides. A-Ji whimpered as his penis seemed to move on its own, being yanked in a clockwise circle then made to draw stars and squares by the tongue that had penetrated deep into his pelvis through the phallic, abused tube that stuck out conveniently like an inviting entrance to plunder and rape his innermost sacred sanctuaries. The Wei jiejie s grinned deviously and immediately, A-Ji knew that his last barriers and secret gardens were pillaged and their innocence destroyed - the forked tongues lashed out from within, striking hard with aphrodisiac poison-laced micro-barbs inside the child's reproductive organs, tunnelling their way through tubes and cords, until they reached their desired prize. A-Ji shivered as he experienced retrograde ejaculations with so many stars in his vision and waves of pleasure and pain running through his hips - child-sexual liquids were milked out, then pushed back and forth until they sloshed all over the pulverized, swollen prostate, but the relentless attacks surged forth, until A-Ji's child-testicles were filled with living, moving tongues - his balls flung up and down violently on their own, like having piranhas disembowelling the insides of his precious family jewels from within, then they quake and shudder, as the eggs were cracked and its contents were ravaged and sucked up like fruit juice; the Wei jiejies squealed with delight at the exquisite mild taste of unborn primordial eight-year old's sperm cells, since their extendible forked tongues were hollow and could be used as straws; like any Wei rapists both male and female, the jiejie s spitted their foamy saliva and then blew bubbles; A-Ji cried at the foreign invasive sensations of having his cock melted, filled, then boiling from the inside out, then tingling so hard that he experienced an adult's orgasm - thirty spurts - in the opposite direction because everything was filled and blocked by those tongues; then, his bladder sphincter was tickled and toyed that A-Ji had to grunt from being unable to control his urge to pee - the jiejie s naughtily pressed below his navel and A-Ji had to release everything; he urinated uncontrollably but the pee flowed everywhere else inside his broken plumbing system except out of his engorged, blocked pee-slit; and yet, the jiejie s blew more gassy bubbles everywhere like shaking cans of fizzy orange soda inside the boy's pelvic region - until A-Ji finally gave up and surrendered to the convulsions wrecking his orgasming body, that he squirted out jets of pee from whatever orifices his body could find, of seedless cum, then from behind, lots of gassy farts and an explosive stream of diarrhea because his anal sphincters stopped working and defecating ensued - and gratefully, gratefully, A-Ji blacked out.

The next time he woke up, he found himself making sweet love to a long queue of Wei jiejie s, who wanted to play the game of 'Tunnel of Love'; there was a long line of female Wei-kin lying on the floor with their hips raised, legs spread and their blossoming rosebuds stretched open in eager anticipation to welcome an eight-year old's penis. His child-penis was unnaturally swollen, overworked and squirting, oozing stuff involuntarily, his balls had been thoroughly consumed and only an empty, stretched, sagging bag of skin was left, but his hips kept pumping from one jiejie to another, forced to create triplets in each jiejie by orgasming three times in a row into each - and he had twenty four thousands more jiejie s to service. The jiejie s, having acquainted themselves with their new boy-toy, treated A-Ji much better and fed him with plenty of plump breast milk, sweet kisses and tender loving care. The younger females helped out by doing delicious things to his rump, vibrating his already-dead balls and kneading the non-functioning prostate with plenty of lip, tongue and finger action, until A-Ji cried out again and again, shuddering and jerking in all directions while deliriously soaring high, high into multiple orgasms that his tiny underaged body was unprepared for.

He shivered and pumped his thin child-hips faster, sexual excitement rearing its ugly head once more and he nnnh'd like a grown-up that his eight-year old penis one-two'd very, very weakly inside the snug vaginal cocksleeve that lovingly massaged and milked wee-wee until one precious droplet spurted out; he prayed that he could make enough sweet boy-juice to satisfy these demonic jiejie s, so that he could escape and return to his world and be with A-Xian - two minutes later.

.

“Financially independent, retired early. Old men cruising around the world, enjoying the fruits of labour from their younger days, living an easy life with no commitments and no obligations to conform to the pressures from external forces. That’s what the two of you are,” Nie Huaisang jokingly accused the couple, while patting his ride’s rump because he didn’t have his own human company besides a donkey. The man didn’t mind riding a smaller animal, since it did reflect his height and stature, and he was quite an accomplished horse rider, being a sect leader and all that. He started to bond with Lil’ Apple by feeding it a fruit of its namesake, taken from a different Bag of Holding - an ordinary one typically carried by most cultivators to keep their baggage load manageable especially when travelling using lightweight flying swords.

“Well, Lan Zhan carries his sect’s Jade Token, so that broadly secures our finances. He also worked as a part-time teacher during Winter and managed to save some, while I’ve been taking on odd-jobs on our way trekking northwards. We’ve had enough of the world of cultivation and its dirty politics; it’s better that we’re mundane civilians living mundane lives, and you know that, my friend,” Wei Ying grinned while crouching by the riverside, then threw a freshly-filled flask made of animal skin at the man. Huaisang caught it gratefully and started drinking it greedily to stave off a hangover after a half-day drunken snooze, while his other hand kept an apple unsteadily against Lil’ Apple’s snout so that it could happily munch on an afternoon snack.

“Ah, look at you two, living such a lovely couple’s life. You don’t have to think about how to feed five hundred men at the battlefield, or make sure their equipment is in top notch condition so that you won’t be caught unprepared in an ambush. You don’t have to sit in meetings with other sect leaders to draw territorial lines, agree with your ministers on how to conduct a population census to report statistics to the central governments, or work with scores of brainy sages to draw up socio-economic policies to make balance farm productivity against people’s health and well-being, while getting headaches from undue political interferences from outside and within your center of command,” Huaisang mourned his busy decades-old lifestyle and wished for the happier, simpler days of his youth; he looked as though he’d aged with more creases on his face, and even the first signs of greying hair, especially when the first rays of sunset shone at an angle and illuminated everything as clear as day - including his receding crowning glory. He threw back the emptied flask at Wei Ying, an unspoken request to an old friend for a refill - and in all likelihood, for help.

Wei Ying didn’t miss Huaisang’s astute observation and what was insinuated; immediately, he hooked his hands around Lan Zhan’s - the latter was busy putting together a campfire by a river in the forest, and used his free hand to cast a Fire spell to light it up. Temperatures could plummet quickly in chilled forested lowlands, and daylight quickly disappeared beneath the layers of canopy, so having a light and heat source was paramount. Lan Zhan remained quiet and bowed his head a little; the tips of his ears reddened.

“You know us, Huaisang. Both Lan Zhan and I have been through so much together over the span of lifetimes, particularly for me. We’re indebted to each other, we can’t be separated due to our shared pains and scars. We have common goals in life, we want to live out our remaining years with one another, and help those in need as long as it’s within our means,” Wei Ying looked over Lan Zhan’s shoulder with a soft, tender gaze, and nearly wanted to give a sweet smooch to those adorable blushing earlobes, but he held himself back out of respect for a venerable sect leader in their midst. Lan Zhan turned away, blushing, and quickly sent Binding spells from his fingertips to hook in fishes for a grill later, and barricaded their perimeters with an enhanced version of his trademark Silence spell to make sure they can catch enough without making a ruckus among the native wildlife. His hand tightened with Wei Ying’s and entwined closer than ever, symbolically inseparable just as the latter had explained.

Director Nie looked forlornly at the crouched couple just a stone’s throw away, and felt a strange, fleeting ache in his heart. One could draw little hearts floating above and between them, and they would look absolutely natural against the beautiful sunset backdrop in a picturesque plains and waterways of Dongbeifang. Still, he could grasp at straws if he needed to, without feeling ashamed; he was a desperate man, after all - a sect leader abandoned by his troops with only thirteen nights left to hunt enough yaoguai to keep him afloat from the jaws of the predatory Imperialists.

“So, you can help me?” It wasn’t really a question or a reaffirmation of their loose relationship based on a chance encounter on an auspicious New Year’s day.

This time, Lan Zhan spoke, as he reeled in a glowing blue string of small fishes, that would make a crispy snack if deep-fried or grilled over high temperatures. “Director Nie, both of us are unfit for night hunts, but we’ll escort you to the Carp Tower with our transports. Once there, we’ll see what we can do; I can try to talk to my older brother and put to rest any ill feelings he has against you for what happened to the late Jin Guangyao, so that you’ve less one opponent in the hunt; Wei Ying will speak to Jiang Cheng and see if the two of you can form an alliance, or at least a pledge of not slaying each other when going after yaoguai s,” he said.

Wei Ying nodded, “Yeah, that’s as far as we can do to help. I can’t use magic anymore but I still have my brains. Lan Zhan has limited magic and sword fighting skills with his current body build, but he can’t run for the hills in time if those monsters chased after him.” A naughty hand sneaked around Lan Zhan’s midriff and caressed the so-called spare tyre on the waistline, and Lan Zhan simply “Mn” in vague agreement. Their synchronicity and smooth transition between lines of thoughts between two different individuals, was astounding - it was akin to talking to one person made of two equal halves.

Suddenly, Big Apple brayed once and caused Huaisang to leap away from where he stood, leaning against Lil’ Apple’s hindquarters. The bigger equine snorted at the man in a veiled warning to keep away his hands from the steed, and demanded a whole apple as payment for its annoyance - in which, Huaisang gladly pulled out one red fruit from the satchel and flung it straight into the donkey’s mouth, and the apple was pulverized with a snap of its steel-hard muscled jaws; another warning indeed. Then, it nuzzled at Lil’ Apple’s cheeks and started nibbling the unhappy smaller animal’s mane. Huaisang watched with amazement at how two male donkeys groomed each other, or rather, how a one-sided affection worked between individuals of the same sex. He looked back and forth between the donkey pair and his lovey-dovey hand-holding clingy human couple friend, and sighed when realization hit him like a brick of nostalgia and more alarmingly, the loss of the usual tight sense of security, camaraderie and comfort he has with childhood friends.

“Whatever happened to our olden days and our relationships?” he wondered aloud at the fiery orange skies lined with occasional darkening grey clouds. Wei Ying stole a quick kiss at the shell of Lan Zhan’s embarrassed ear and rested his chin on the significant other’s shoulder, just for the sake of teasing the latter.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 166

“What a good boy you are, A-Ji, already hard at work, planting little babies inside your mama’s dick even before your first real manly orgasm,” frisky Uncle Wei cackled evilly, as he gently guided the eight-year old’s twitching angry-red penis in and out of his own engorged, bloated cockslit, tightly wrapped in its own thick veiny hairy adult’s foreskin. Docking had never really been fun for the twenty-something mastermind of underground criminal activities, but Uncle Wei would do anything to indulge that sweetie-pie’s deepest, darkest desires - including piercing and disfiguring his babymaker so that it could ensnare and accommodate a pinkie-sized boner sliding deep into his urethra, though not quite reaching the base because Uncle Wei’s erection covered in sweaty grimy curls was a good six inch in length and rather impressive in girth. (In any case, being a Dream-kin meant that he could remodel his body as he please, depending on his mood and wishes whenever he sleeps at night.)

Little A-Ji whimpered desperately and thrust his hips even faster; he tried his best to father babies inside Uncle Wei’s cock, because he was told that he could only have sex with a Wei-kin. In the latest twist of their depraved family’s all-you-can-fuck saga, he was told that A-Xian was appointed the husband and he, A-Ji, the wife.

“Ah, A-Ji, A-Ji, you feel so good, you’re really my lao po,” child-hubby A-Xian moaned uncharacteristically for an eight-year old, with his pinkie-sized wee-wee happily plunging in and out of A-Ji’s anus, jabbing recklessly in all directions, and at a rather clumsy and messed-up tempo, because A-Xian never really followed the etiquettes of a gentleman’s lovemaking. Uncle Wei made clockwise circular, erotically swaying movements with his crotch, pinned below the sobbing Lan boy, while A-Xian mounted his lover from behind and moved his hips in a lewd, anti-clockwise direction; each male took control of one of A-Ji’s grape-sized

testicle each and played with their fingers to their hearts' content, and A-Ji shivered from the double whammy of skyrocketing sexual pleasures burning his meridians and nerve-ends. His genitals were thoroughly rubbed, kneaded, and molested as his body was sandwiched between the duo.

Then, Master Lan loomed from above the three fornicating males; having watched his lovely A-Xian fucking a smaller version of himself was very exciting, and he masturbated so much until his over-six inch monstrous snake hanging between his muscular thighs and heavy balls jerked powerfully in anticipation for another round of family orgies. He leaned over A-Xian and spread the cute boy's adorable bubble buttocks, spanked them a couple of times - A-Xian aaahn'd and pressed against a moaning A-Ji, who in turn screwed deep, deep into a Wei-vagina made of a man's urethra; Uncle Wei squealed like a pig in heat and laughed at their antics, then he urinated and forced wonderfully warm liquids to flood the love canal that bound A-Ji, and A-Ji shivered at the disgusting feelings of having an adult's smelly pungent pee invade his tired, pumping, convulsing child-penis - he could've sworn that all that enthusiastic drilling action caused a few loose curly hair to drop out of Uncle Wei's bushy pubes, and some eventually got stuck into the foreskin and were drawn into A-Ji's penis; the boy nnngh'd loudly when curly strands of hair tickled his insides, and he too, peed into the ballooning foreskin pouch and connected cockslits that held both their pee and started to splatter out in yellow stinky streams.

The Master was unfazed at the discomfort of his family members, and started to perfectly piston his own giant snake into his squirming child-lover. It didn't take long for Uncle Wei to experience a typical adult's orgasm and send torrents of rich creamy semen straight into A-Ji's tortured wee-wee, and for A-Xian to spurt out seedless boyjuice that contained no viable sperms; the act of being fertilized both ways sent the boy to new heights of sexual debauchery, and he finally yielded - losing a bit more of his sanity day by day, of fucking men and being fucked, being used like a ragdoll sex toy for family to have fun with, a marvellously tight and young cocksleeve for all Wei jiejie s and gege s and uncles, a useless sperm bag when Uncle Wei and his merry band of evil men stuck a funnel into his child-penis and masturbated cheerfully, then came very, very hard with roaring laughter, and with more than enough time in this world to sexually abuse the child, had dirty smelly old men's semen massaged into his genitals until his testicles bloated into lumpy but firm chicken-egg sized globes filled with hardening cum, in which pitiful A-Ji would be forced to walk around with his gargantuan scrotum swollen to three times the original size, then thrown into the accursed floor mat to amuse and entertain another twenty four thousand Wei jiejie s .

Within the confines of the world that existed only below the floor mat, the little eight-year boy could, at the very least, find himself turning into a writhing mess of sweaty shades of red sexual flushes, howls and shouts of Yes, Yes More Please, Yes'es, when he engages in tasty sexual intercourse with teenage girls twice his height, hips shaking harder than a leaf in a tempest of sordid sexual dystopian fantasies, fluttering his scorching hot peeled penis between the jiejie s' tight lips and juicy vaginas, crying out in a very child-inappropriate way when he is about to hit his climax, and then, the first waves of delicious muscular contractions welled up from within his pelvis, like a dragon snaking out then breathing out impossibly hot fire from his ruined loins, he jerks his hips again and again, trying his best to be the good little boy and orgasm like a real adult, ejaculating profusely the stored real adult's semen of congealing, smelly, yellow-stained thick white milk, teeming with wriggly babymakers not of his own, of thirty healthy spurts each, to make twins and triplets inside the wombs of those lovely, sadistic, laughing jiejie s, inside their dark, dank lairs filled with divine pleasures of the flesh, of groping red-fingernailed claws and sexual poison-laced fangs grazing his back and buttocks again and again, of being brainwashed and drawn into the hazy universe of solely his spasming cock into many, many tasty pussies waiting for him with gnashing saliva-coated serrated teeth, of strange alien eyes watching from above and from within at how a boy was enslaved by demonic powers to become a pleasure factory, whose sole function is to grow roots and be imprisoned in the underground kingdom beneath the floor mat, his lungs becoming like leaves choked with dust and toxins and struggled to breathe, his destroyed rosebud a blossoming climax of petals, with a stamen in the center that keeps squirting watery bodily fluids, straight into waiting monstrous vaginal lips that made kissy come-hither gestures at his dying penis-stamen, and octopi tentacles from the shadowy depths of the dungeons crawled all over him, wrapping, wriggling, pulling and sucking his ruined wee-wee, his plant-like body along with its leaves and roots, dragging his screaming soul deeper into a demented cavern, filled with living and moving female body parts and diabolical hellish creatures including succubi and all manners of the grotesque, inviting the boy - or whatever that remained of his rational mind - to fuck deeper and be eaten alive, letting his boy-eggs bloat and mature into fruits in which the demonic females loved to feast upon, and they licked, smooched, suckled and coaxed his corrupted testicles fill up even more with foreign seed, to discolour into bruising purples and blacks, to distend and disfigure into horrible cancerous rotten carcasses made of the unliving, the pair of useless eggs then severed from its roots like plucking ripe loquats off a tree, sliced and diced on a chopping board, then pan-fried with garlic, ginger and greasy lard, and finally served on a silver platter for the demons as their wholesome ambrosia; A-Ji would become that fabled little boy to lose every last shred of his virginity to predatory demonic Wei females in their underworld of depravity and insanity, his innocence ripped apart many times, and his tiny body forced to grow up into adulthood before he was ready, then disintegrate into orgasmic explosions of impotent sperm cells, only to wither away inside the stomachs of those delighted monstrous females, at a tender young age of eight.

As always, after a good night's sleep, everyone returned to their original state of body, self and mind, and a quick twirl of Inabilities made sure nobody remembered what happened.

In fact, the Inabilities were such a godsend, that Uncle Wei made good use of it for his own morally corrupt benefit; the next morning, ignorant and forgetful A-Ji woke up with a wonderfully short-circuiting orgasm into the dirty rapist's mouth, and having drunk enough of jiejie s' breastmilk the night before, he whimpered when his penis was polished by the uncle's slimy unbrushed tongue, trapped inside the moist, warm oral cavity, and he couldn't hold back a stream of hot pungent morning pee; Uncle Wei then commanded the boy to remain pantless in the bedroom while breakfast was being prepared by his beloved A-Xian and their stepfather Master Lan; A-Ji struggled to escape Uncle Wei's smelly mouth and greasy fingers whilst trapped within the four walls of their homestay cottage bedroom, but Uncle Wei kept following the boy wherever the latter ran or tried to climb above furnitures or under the bed in a futile bid to escape the clutches of the sinister habitual sex offender, the man's hands kept busying themselves between A-Ji's legs, making tight O-rings to stroke the boy, then vibrating fingertips excessively against the hypersensitive underaged frenulum, until the boy experienced multiple sexual climactic completions even as he sobbed, exhausted and shuddering erratically, between twisted bedsheets; little A-Ji held on desperately to the legs of tables and chairs for his dear life, but laughing Uncle Wei easily flipped the boy against the floor and forced his child-thighs apart, then swooped down greedily at the tasty prize ala 'the early bird catches the worm' - in this case, the hawk dived repeatedly and snatched baby xiao ji ji s from their soft hairless pubic nest; A-Ji broke down into tears at the terror of having his genitals assaulted too generously until his plumbing was destroyed, he was inappropriately ejaculating urine and peeing seedless boyjuice like an incontinent fool, first thing in the morning, but it felt too good to jerk his hips and instinctively fuck deep into Uncle Wei's fetid mouth filled with gummy fermenting stuff.

Then, Uncle Wei said that A-Ji was penalized a piece of silver for not wishing an elder in the family a happy 'good morning'; A-Ji was alarmed, because he'd broken a family rule and begged for forgiveness, also because he forgot his manners when he woke up drowning in pleasurable tingles running up and down and inside his wildly-twitching penis first thing at daybreak; thus, Uncle Wei punished the boy by demanding that he properly present his naked genitals without protest, and the boy whimpered, sniffled, hiccuped and obeyed without a word, on the cold, hard, unforgiving floor; he pulled his foreskin to expose his irritated, inflamed and engorged boy-glans, and Uncle Wei gleefully lunged forward, to savage the glistening pink bulb with so much manly rough love, with hideous barbed tongues, gruesome poison-laced teeth and sickening-looking lips covered with diseased warts, wiggly folds and demonic tentacles and suckers, rubbed harshly with abrasive beard-stubs and the reddened urethra was abused with prickly unwashed moustache ends inserted then twirled inside the boy's wildly-jerking penis like merry-go-rounds, for hours on end because the vile man had stopped time without A-Ji's knowledge, but the boy lost the passage of time when his entire body continued to bend and bow, convulsed like a rodeo bull, moaning terribly like an adult, back muscles seized and painful half-grimace and half-snarls etched on his adorably young face, his body cycling through shades of sexy reds and sweaty flushed pinks from unending exploding orgasms wrecking the tiny child's body that it was totally unprepared for, and should not have experienced at such a tender, innocent-ruined age.

When A-Ji finally had a break to catch his breath, Uncle Wei moved like a shark homing in on new prey, gently tugged a grape-sized child-testicle from its hiding place beneath the ruined, twisted, leaky penis, and made sweet, sweet love to that boy-egg with plenty of circular licks and tasty prodding and hnngh-inducing massages, until every last unborn sperm cell was forced out of its spasming cradle; A-Ji experienced extreme testicular orgasms in that one testicle, which throbbed, contracted and quivered from terrifyingly good feelings electrifying its surface and the swirling contents within, the egg literally hatched and spilled its seed out, ballooning its size to three times the original in its lopsided taut scrotal sac, and the continual throbbing orgasmic waves pushed dollops of sweet nectar filled with immature eight-year old's sperm through the pelvic tubes, until they pump out like thick, crystal-clear ice cream through an urethral pipe, in which Uncle Wei happily sucked them up; the boy shivered uncontrollably at the alien sensations of having his essence vacuumed out before he was ready, robbed of his first true ejaculation by the heinous vile rapist. Expectedly, A-Ji then cried at the appalling injustice of having one testicle swollen like a giant against its twin, and mewled at the dirty horny uncle to attack his other helpless, defenceless boy-egg - he even reached down with child-fingers and jiggled the unabused testicle alluringly, to tempt the Uncle to please, please molest and rape my testicle; but Uncle Wei thought better - he grinned at A-Ji with a demonic smile and lo and behold, a forked tongue appeared from behind his pearly white fanged, yellow-stained teeth.

A-Ji shivered and stifled his cries, when he spread his legs wider and allowed the terrible genital-mutilating uncle to insert his terrible forked tongue into his damaged broken penis, his immature and underdevelopd prostate gland consumed from the inside out, lovingly licked so many times until prostate orgasms further sent the boy into a delirium and feverish hip-bucks, because A-Ji had lost control of his rational mind that had fizzled out when animalistic pleasures and heavenly sensations annihilated his senses and left him a writhing moaning mess, hips shaking non-stop and delicious golden liquids squirting randomly like a shower gone horribly, horribly wrong; the elongated forks worked further in, stuffing themselves merrily into every nook and cranny of the boy's most sacred inner sanctums, then pierced and penetrated his testicles like crushing feeble eggshells with brutal stabs - one ball was swollen beyond recognition, the other swelling rapidly from the cruel attack - the uncle would spend many tasty hours raping the boy's testicles, assaulting it so vigorously until only lifeless, liquefied goo remained, in which the uncle happily drank up the resulting exotic nectary but lumpy oatmeal-like liquor of a boy's destroyed innocence, then gargled with his poisonous saliva and spit it back into the over-expanded scrotal sac, and blew many, many horrible greenish-grey bubbles until everything foamed like filthy vulgar suds from someone's used laundry water, repeat and rinse, until a familiar sound called from downstairs - breakfast was ready - because the Master's voice breaks through all space and time barriers - and pantless A-Ji staggered out of the unlocked bedroom with ruined, dripping genitals to start the day, the first thing in the morning, with Uncle Wei hurrying not too far behind, intent on sexually assaulting A-Ji one more time at the staircase and fill the boy up with a rapist's semen inside the cute boy-anus, before having his breakfast of burnt sausages and cracked hard-boiled eggs with runny yolks, made with love by the lovely A-Xian and Master Lan.

Wei Ying still has many gaps in his memory of his early days, but he distinctively remembered the time when he scurried around with his face covered and hidden whenever Jin guards were around, like a rat darting about a market's dumpster. That time, he was filled with fear for being discovered and then plunged into the spotlight as one of the arch-enemies of the Jins, thus endangering his family simultaneously.

This time, though, he strutted through gilded gates as tall as three horse carts lined up vertically, with chin held high and his proud marching gait mimicked that of a grandmaster (which he really was, unknown to the outside world). The sun was setting, and the colourful reds, yellows and oranges further blinded the crowds who had to stare in awe and suspicion at the golden spectacle of a man dressed in jarring red-blacks in a sea of gold, platinum, ivory and sparkling diamonds. People from the upper echelon of Jin society murmured and made thinly-veiled critique comments, as the procession of welcoming sect leaders in the gardens surrounding the Carp Tower proceeded, for the second night of the great yaoguai hunt; heavily armed guards pointed their spears at the approaching foreign sects; elite landowners, overlords, famous craftspersons and business owners, and highly-esteemed cultivation champions, sagely scholars and aristocrats milled about in a huge banquet and series of meetings that would last for about two weeks post New Year's day; the vast compounds that spanned the length and width of many cities were complete with festive lanterns and decorations, with servants rushing everywhere to make sure that everyone that gathered experienced a grand reception fit for kings and queens.

Lan Zhan remained stoic, expressionless and trailed quietly from behind; he remarked that the younger man should don his mask, but Wei Ying refused, citing that he's had enough of playing hide-and-seek with the Jins.

“Besides,” Wei Ying said with an air of arrogance fit for a sect’s firstborn that he once was, “Director Nie registered us as nameless contractual workers providing services to his clan, which is quite a common occurrence among the more secretive mercenaries and cultivation fighters. We are quite safe here, as long as we declare our allegiances correctly and do not spoil the dinner party organized by our gracious and very flamboyant hosts. Is that right, Huaisang?” and he turned to the front where the Nie sect leader bowed his head and tried to pick up their pace to escape the increasingly uncomfortable, glaring, attention from the Jin partygoers. Already, several Jin elite onlookers were heard whispering, both in shock and unease, of how the men appeared to resemble their nemesis named Wei Wuxian and Lan Wang Ji - because Wei Ying was too thin and bony with scars visible on his face, neck and limbs, and Lan Zhan was too fat with facial hair and walked a bit like an overweight duck and nothing of the graceful lithe catwalk that the Gusu Lans were famous for, compared to their old ill-matching portraits of handsome but fearsome warriors drawn on the Jins’ Most Wanted list. With their bloody history against the Jins immortalized in children’s school textbooks, the guests asked among themselves how the two were allowed to step into their sacred palatial grounds. Fortunately, behind them was a procession of other sect leaders and their key representatives, just as the same for those in front; and it seemed the sect behind them suffered major defeats - a tall, broad-shouldered man in broken, dented armour limped across the red-carpet reception, and five cultivation warriors followed suit, sporting as many bandages on their limbs as the cracks on the swords and shields; the non-fighting spectators cheered and booed, gossiping more awful rumours about the worsening state of each attending sect that made it to the Carp Tower, and soon, the story about one measly Nie man with two unnamed helpers that looked a bit like the province’s most wanted criminals - were duly forgotten.

Nie Huaisang took out his fan and started waving the instrument of comfort; both Wei Ying and Lan Zhan followed suit, using fans given by their new so-called employer. The fans stated words of pledging loyalty to the people of Qinghe, and described the beauty of the province’s lands in poems, accompanied with ink-brush art of rice fields, mountains and desert plateaus. The guards waved them through with the spears, and the trio finally arrived at the foot of the thousand-steps leading up to the beautiful ivory and silvery-gold multi-level tower that commanded the powers and respect of the greatest men in the Middle Kingdom.

“We will not escort you further (不送了),” Lan Zhan curtly stated, and bowed politely at Director Nie. They had safely accompanied the Nie sect leader to his destination; Wei Ying would have loved to enlist Lan Zhan’s strength to capture a yaoguai or two along the way, however, the creatures were stubbornly nowhere to be seen during the day time - but at least they caught some small fishes in a river, and picked some edible wild fruits along the jungle trail that led to the city, and the trio had a tasty snack and overall, a nice afternoon outing for men who were reluctant to wield their swords and return to the dog-eat-dog cultivation world.

Wei Ying handed Huaisang a Bag of Holding - a gift from the Gusu Lans, technically, since the Lans are famed for sewing apparels and accessories made of high-quality woven fabrics, then enchanted by ordinary magic to make their handicrafts more cherished and valued by people from all walks of life. It contained the Director’s personal stash of sabers which he could never effectively wield nor take to the skies as a medium for speedy transport, and some provisions donated from the couple’s inventory - it was mind-boggling how much they’d taken from Caiyi’s supermarkets the month before New Year, and how long they lasted inside the magically sealed and sterilized confines within the folds of softly-glowing cloth. “Here, take this with you. Since non-important guests are barred from the meeting halls in the tower, we’ll wait around here,” he gestured at the packed grassy grounds overlaid with buffet tables, thronging crowds of elite men and women, armed cultivators from other sects, and servants rushing around with jars of wines and pots of tea, “... to have our dinner, mingle around and get our secondary missions done.” He winked at the director and buddy-slapped the man's rump. Huaisang yelped and started to climb up the exhaustive stairs, and he bowed repeatedly at the couple in thanks for their kindness to bring him back to the tower.

Wei Ying waved energetically with his newfound fan and eventually his hands ache, tire and drooped, his facial expression changed into a wistful, sad smile; a lifetime ago, he would be running excitedly up those same set of stairs with gongzi s from other clans in a playful match of speed and endurance of surviving a thousand-steps climb, but now he was a cripple, a nobody, a-- “Wei Ying,” the soft, calming voice besides him muttered, and drew him back from those dark, foreboding suffocating whispers of guilt and regret. A warm, larger hand clasped his, comforting, familiar, more importantly loving, gentle, both husbandly and wife-y.

Wei Ying shook his head to clear away those wispy darkness that encroached his soul, and beamed a bright smile once again at the beloved man standing by his side.

“C’mon, Lan Zhan! I want to see who else survived last night’s hunt and will sign up for today’s. I want to eat fatty pork belly, whole chicken roasts, mountains of Shandong’s famous peanuts and all the sweetest loquats this place has to offer! I want to look for my brother and bully him for losing so badly on his first night out with the Yunmeng boys, and I want to say hello and thanks to Zewu Jun once more for taking care of me during the last few months,” he laughed, albeit rather forced, and swung their intertwined hands like little boy-friends strolling in a playground, and they started to walk away from the stairs leading up to the tower’s main entrance.

“Mn.”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 167

“Wei--” followed by a muffled mmmph noise, because that man in question put a forefinger on his lips to shush the mention of the cursed name in the heart of Lanling Jin, “You! Y-- You’re not dead yet!” Jiang Cheng cried out with a constipated, unreadable expression on his face that spoke of anger, dismay, desperation and homecoming joy, simultaneously, including a short burst of unmanly tears that the Jiang sect leader quickly blinked away. They were outside at the tower’s vast compounds and milling around its manicured gardens when the men bumped into one another, each holding an entire roasted goose leg - a classic favourite of lakeside Lotus Pier.

The older brother had to use his intricate knowledge about his younger foster sibling to locate the downtrodden man - knowing that Jiang Cheng’s suffered massive losses on the night of the first hunt, that he was injured too so he wouldn’t be able to walk too far away from the dinner party, that he had no shoulder to lean on to de-stress and weep his heart out since he had to be strong in front of his wounded boys, and that his trademark arrogance has a penchant to keep the man in places where he could be noticed - curt, polite hellos from elite members of society would do wonders to his wounded pride -, but hardly approached for conversations - Jiang Cheng would find it troublesome to reveal his disappointing achievements in life, especially to rich, famous men of the cultivation world. So, after a fair bit of searching, such as around the corners of packed dining halls, and near beautiful golden statues or expensive paintings that take up an entire wall which are centerpieces of attractions and therefore, instant crowd magnets - Wei Ying finally found his little teary-eyed brother close to the toilets, where nobles and prominent cultivation figures walked past in a rush and acknowledged the latter’s presence, but never questioned about his bandaged hand or that embarrassing bruise between the brows.

Wei Ying knew they'd create a rowdy a scene, so he quickly grabbed Jiang Cheng's hand - roast grease, marinade and all - then deliberately took the path of least resistance, that is, behind the bushes, then dashed past some majestic ivory pillars and far, far away from the stuffy crowds of elegant aristocrats, eminent sages and scholars, warriors in full regalia and pinned with more medals than can be counted with two hands, more dinner guests garbed in exotic and expensive clothes, and others of that ilk. Jiang Cheng embraced his younger brother like an lovesick teenage fool even while still holding dearly at his goose leg, buried his face into Wei Ying's shoulder and refused to move; he had to be dragged to a quieter corner of the tower's grounds, while mumbling "I-- I'm not crying, there's just something in my eyes... no, it's the sauce for the goose leg, it's-- it's too spicy, okay! B-- but I'm not crying, okay, you hear me?!"

Wei Ying patted the man's back and replied, "Yes, yes, there's sand in Shandong's wind, and the Jins used mala hot sauce, it's their fault, it's entirely their fault, so let's get going before they see you... us," while moving quickly to secure both of them a nice place for private conversation. His walking cane, while not used at the dinner party for the fear of being ridiculed or accused to be impolite, was whipped out from his sash like a quarterstaff, and turned out to be a great crowd-disperser - Wei Ying swung the stick wildly in front, and sent guests and servants scrambling to the curbside, thus clearing up the path for their quick getaway. Jiang Cheng's oily grip on Wei Ying's hand tightened gratefully, and he lowered his head in shame and embarrassment, direly hoping not to be recognized to be in association with a seemingly angry blind man terrorizing the public with a cane, or worse, looking like a maiden boy being taken out for a date by an older person, simply because he clung to Wei Ying's hands in a rather unmanly way.

They found a nice picnic table in a secluded corner of the tower's expansive gardens, surrounded by tall pine trees and dense shrubs. There, Wei Ying gleefully took out his superior Bag of Holding, and he took out the plates of salads, meat nuggets, fritters, baked sweet potatoes, fruit cuts, even dipping bowls of gravy for the runaway roast goose legs and other carefully balanced tableware filled to the brim with enough food to start a mini-buffet on the table - plus a pot of herbal tea. Jiang Cheng watched with fascination how each dish was fished out, one by one, from the bottomless bag, and remarked crudely that his brother was a thieving scoundrel to have stolen so much food from the dinner party - while unconsciously picking off finger-licking good bite-sized dumplings and swiping a wet napkin to wipe his hands. Unperturbed, Wei Ying replied that the Jins had taken enough from everyone, so what is a mere little revenge in a form of an unscrupulous and unaccounted-for doggie-bagged dinner from a forgotten nemesis who could no longer harm anyone with a blade, let alone cast his notorious brand of Dark magics.

Jiang Cheng stopped chewing his fatty goose leg and swallowed uncomfortably; the meat became a bit too tough, his throat constricted from a foreboding feeling of sorts. Wei Ying sighed and prepared his mind and heart for an onslaught of questions that he'd face with every person he was close to - how is he feeling? Why does he look so thin and bony? Is he eating well? Do the scars from the cliff fall still hurt? Can he walk properly? Is it true that he couldn't wield any sword or magic? Are his memory and skills intact? Did Lan er gongzi gift him that awesome Bag of Holding? How has it been, living in the Cloud Recesses, for the past six months? Did the two have a great road trip holiday just before New Year's, as Zewu Jun said? Et cetera ad nauseum - Wei Ying fielded the questions expertly, satisfactorily, to the point, and with plenty of white lies and colourful side stories made up on the spot, to assure Jiang Cheng that Wei Ying was back to normal, minus the superpowers, plus better relations with the Lans, multiplied by an interesting encounter with the unlucky Director Nie that brought him and Lan Zhan to the Carp Tower, and that they were once again, putting themselves into hot water, by dabbling into the world of cultivation that had banished them once, and now, its night hunt championship.

“But more importantly, Jiang Cheng, how have you been, and how are you feeling? Those bandaged wounds don’t look too good around the forearms, and that bump between your brows doesn’t seem to subside; if anything, it looks a bit gangrenous,” Wei Ying said and made an ‘eww’ face. Jiang Cheng instinctively scrunched up his eyebrows and winced in pain - indeed, that bruised circle of protruding flesh looked more like a growing greenish-black lump from an untimely hit on the head - by a yaoguai .

A very different kind, or kinds, of yaoguai , the sect leader added, and started to narrate his side of the story.

The Yunmeng Jiangs have had a relatively peaceful time after the defeat of Jin Guangyao by nursing their wounds, building their strengths and trying to live a modest, flourishing countryside life by the Great Lakes of central Middle Kingdom. Jiang Cheng returned to his old ways of ineffective ironfisted command-and-control, alienating his people in some ways but gaining cult-like following from impressionable youths; fortunately, without any external political pressures from pesky and stronger neighbouring sects, or economic troubles in the valleys of plenty surrounding the Lotus Pier, in general, the Jiang sect leader did reasonably well and checked all boxes for ruling and managing his sect’s affairs.

Jiang Cheng had been invited to participate in several tournaments to determine the next Chief Cultivator. “Obviously, after learning the hard way and from trial and errors, I know that our sect’s cultivation techniques aren’t up to par when it comes to one-on-one combat,” he sighed, then exclaimed, “I’d been kicked out quite early on. Those warrior chieftains and cunning, powerful shamans from the Far, Far West vying for a spot in the ruling hierarchy of the Grand Cultivation Council were really tough!” Wei Ying listened intently and processed every bit of new information from his foster brother, and showed empathy at the latter’s pains by gesturing in his direction. Jiang Cheng shrugged, citing that he was fine after having his limbs sprained when he was wrestled to the ground by a triumphant twelve-foot giantess decked out in fancy, shiny chains, leather and furskins; he even made a joke that when his back was sat upon by the female's heavy thick ass, his backbone made an awful cracking sound, and he thought his meridians were shattered and he'd been rendered handicapped for life-- "but miraculously, after I woke up at the losers' camp from having my lungs flattened out in record time, my back pains were gone! I got her mythical contact symbol, and thought that if I need a chiropractor in the future, I could give her a Fairy Messenger call." Wei Ying laughed at that, and spewed out half-chewed chicken nuggets all over the floor.

Jiang Cheng continued to bide his time by joining a handful of meetings for sect and cultivation leaders, even as a non-important contributor. He kept a lookout for tournaments that involved other ways besides fighting hand-to-hand combats. Sandu was, in all intents and purposes, an ordinary blade labelled with a deceptively dangerous name. Zidian was great at keeping opponents at a safe distance, but he learnt quickly that many legendary cultivation champions were able to withstand its electrocuting effects, "--and some even had the ability to absorb and take advantage of its electrical energies. I'm now wiser in wielding the whip, because I know how weak and disadvantaged elemental magics and weapons can be," he admitted sagely, and Wei Ying nodded in agreement, after collecting a few still-edible chunks of half-chewed nuggets from the grass, he gave them a few good puffs, and popped them into his mouth - Wei Ying practises the five-second rule like a devout.

"Now that you mention it... I heard Zewu Jun used Liebing as his primary weapon in tournament battles, rather than Shuoyue," Wei Ying wondered aloud, and scratched his stubbly chin with the breaded crumbly edge of a deep-fried fritter he plucked from one of the plates on the picnic table.

“Yeah, I can tell you that the giantess I fought had scaly skin as tough as steel, and from my firsthand experience, no sword can puncture that kind of skin! So, using something else, whether magical, incorporeal, intangible and metaphysical, could actually work better!” Jiang Cheng replied and pumped a fist in excitement in having unravelled a winning strategy; the cleaned bone of the goose leg flew off his oily grasp and landed somewhere in the bushes.

The men continued to eat and share their stories, and soon, touched upon what happened on New Year’s Eve night. Yunmeng Jiang was considered a small entrant with just a couple of hundred of men, compared to the fifty-thousand strong Jins, or the dreaded Imperial cultivators boasting a combined force of nearly a quarter of a million, with numerous smaller sects declaring allegiance and servitude to Grandmaster Gao and ultimately, the Emperor of the Imperial Court of Chang’an. The first night had been disastrous, and understandably so, to weed out the weakest in the Middle Kingdom, using the greatest creations from the Imperial forces - magically-enhanced and battle-trained yaoguai s that the royal family had captured, bred and nurtured over generations inside the infamous dungeons beneath the Imperial Palace.

“In fact, one hundred and fifty men out of the two hundred loyal disciples sent out last night were hurt, though not grievously. I’d trained them well enough from last autumn and invested a lot of money in buying better protective gear, so that they wouldn’t end up like some of the smaller sects - all wiped out in bloody gruesome manners. Most of them suffered scratches and slashes like these,” Jiang Cheng unwrapped part of one bandage on the arm, and Wei Ying retreated to the far side of the picnic bench - the festering laceration appeared absolutely disgusting, swollen, bruised and discoloured terribly in shades of pale complexions, clotted dead blood and greenish toxic hues, not unlike the flesh of the undead with what looked like black pus and whatever abominable poisoned bodily fluids that seemed to slosh within and around the disfigured cut, with black veins extending from the edges. “It’s strange that these wounds refuse to heal even with the strongest medicines given by the doctors here. Many of the fallen are down with fevers, unexplained aches and worsening abscesses like these. I've taken a strong painkiller pill myself so that I can still walk around like this," Jiang Cheng stood up suddenly and spun on his heel like a robed ballerina - and nearly lost his balance, but not before he clutched the edges of the table to steady his stance.

Wei Ying covered his nose and nearly retched at the assault to his senses - astringent herbs and floral-smelling medicinal pastes had been swabbed to the inner surface of the bandages, and there was nothing offensive about it; however, being the grandmaster of the Dark Arts, Wei Ying could sniff out the minute stench of the rotting and the unliving - it was too close, too horribly familiar, and he could hear shrill resentful and evil screams echoing off the dripping black slimy substance residing inside the laceration; Wei Ying recognized the nature of the unholy, foul thing, with frightening alarm, but he kept his cool because he didn't want to ruin their reunion dinner of two long-lost brothers.

"Where are these one hundred and fifty disciples? Did you house them in the military hospitals here or..." Wei Ying asked and rummaged his Bag of Holding for - surprise, surprise - two large jars of wines. The clinking sounds made by the ceramic vessels sounded almost like a godsend to the other man who was fatigued to the bones from a night's fight with novel and vicious monsters not seen in classic cultivation textbooks, and there were thirteen nights to go. Jiang Cheng hastily re-wrapped his ugly infected wound, then grabbed one of the jars and didn't hesitate to uncork the cloth lid with anticipation gleaming in his eyes.

"Huh? Oh no, I can't leave them with those untrustworthy Jins. I've sent them back to the Pier since dawn this morning. Those good enough to ride flying swords should reach there by midnight, and the rest will fill in over the next couple of days. I've ordered our own Jiang healers to be on standby to receive and treat their wounds using our family's ancient healing recipes. You know our home's lotus roots have superb curative powers when made into powders and mixed with native herbs... they're much better than those yucky pills that the Jins mass-produced from their wasteful factories!" Jiang Cheng exclaimed, then, like a true leader of men, he raised his jar. Wei Ying followed suit.

"I feel so much better that you're around and that the worst is behind me. I've got a good feeling, maybe a confidence streak, that tonight will be a better hunt for the Yunmeng Jiang sect. Come, brother, let's toast for the New Year and a wonderful second attempt to victory! Happy New Year!" he shouted almost too loud in the far, far corner of the compounds around the Carp Tower, then clinked jars with Wei Ying's, and took the first swig. One impressive gulp, he praised its exquisite, sweet and strong taste - such exotice, rare wines go very well with expensive food that Wei Ying had prepared on the picnic table, after all.

Then, Jiang Cheng burped, and rudely asked, "Well, that's enough about me, Wei Wuxian! Our lives are no beds of roses, and we've talked so much about my harrowing experiences and turbulent ups and downs, that I'm afraid I'll have depressing nightmares later. My brother, tell me more about your recovery in the Cloud Recesses! Or, the holiday outside of Gusu - I'd love to relinquish my role someday and go on a well-deserved vacation someday too! Or, what brings you here and why did you look for me here, at the Carp Tower?" He went for a meat dumpling and took a large bite out of it - delish - and another drink from his everflowing jar.

Wei Ying heaved a sigh - there was plenty to catch up between brothers, and he needed to find out in more detail about these special yaoguai s. He started counting down the time silently, and hoped the spiked Laozu Smiles teleported from another world would do its deed soon, and leave the Jiang sect leader unconscious. That man needed to be wheeled into a 31st-century operating theatre for emergency surgical procedures, pronto, to remove that first-degree infection of the deadly liquefying poisoning plague that had killed so many in Caiyi, not too long ago.

Wei Ying sent a secret holo-phone telepathic message to his clone siblings - an aerial bombardment of decontamination magic required in a south-westerly direction towards Yunmeng to save the dying disciples making their way back home, not knowing that they would turn into fearsome killer zombies in a few hours' time after sundown; and another strafe of powerful magical cures in northern direction for those Qinghe soldiers that ran to the hills the night before, got infected in all likelihood, and had returned to Director Nie's hometown to start a super-spreader epidemic event of terrible, viral proportions.

.

Lan Zhan had better luck in locating his older brother - Lan Xi Chen had inexplicably sensed a faint aura of distress from their unbreakable brotherly bond, and went ahead to home in like a missile to its target.

“Wang-- err, A-Ji, many happy returns for the prosperous New Year! I thought I heard you calling for me from a distance, and I was right,” Xi Chen greeted with a serene smile after tapping the younger sibling on the shoulder, and when he turned around, he was greeted by a bouquet of flowers. Lan Zhan instinctively bowed to reciprocate the brother's gesture, and blushed - he did not know why, but having a man shove a bunch of nice smelling and colourful blossoms did that to him. Several dinner guests around them began to send curious glances and murmur about the brazen bromantic display between two supposedly virtuous Gusu Lan men dressed in their trademark pristine white robes; it would seem rather embarrassing that the man receiving the flowers was shorter and squat in stature, chubbier than the other taller one.

“Oh, this?” Xi Chen did not hesitate to answer his brother’s unspoken question - they shared a near telepathic connection in that Xi Chen could always, somehow, read the younger sibling’s thoughts with admirable precision, “The meeting adjourned after Grandmaster Gao, on behalf of the Grand Cultivation Council and the biggest sponsor of this event, presented these bouquets to the top contenders, and our sect was one of the winners.” Xi Chen beamed a cheerful smile, and one could almost be blinded solely by his brilliance even the torch-lit darkness of an outdoor evening party filled with hosts of people from all walks of life. Lan Zhan took the bouquet and the older brother immediately tugged his sleeves, wordlessly signalling him that they should find somewhere more conducive for a chat.

As they passed by several guests, they bowed slightly to acknowledge Zewu Jun, and some even congratulated him after the list of sects that succeeded the first night hunt was hung on various strategic locations around the tower. Lan Zhan blushed into pinks and lifted the bouquet to cover his face - partly because he didn’t want to be identified by party attendees that may harbour a grudge against his real self, and partly because of the fact that he held flowers . He didn’t have time to mull over his feelings, though, because Xi Chen started talking to him while walking, in a businessman-like manner - polite, respectful, but candid and shixiong-shidi -esque at the same time. They kept their voices low, though in most cases, the incessant murmurs and chatters around them drowned out most other noises.

“Where’s your buddy-- err-- partner? Oh, don’t tell me, he left you alone and went around like a social butterfly looking for blooms and rosebuds to talk to? No? Ah, I see, he went to find Jiang sect leader. The Yunmeng Jiangs barely made it to the top list, so maybe your partner's there to console him. I heard they suffered a huge defeat."

"Ah, look at you, you've grown more... prosperous since the last time we met! You've been eating well, haven't you? Ah, don't be, and please, don't try to hold in your breath and tuck your tummy like that, it's silly! A man easily grows in weight and girth when he's happy, relaxed and contented in life. Is that what you are, right now? Mm-hmm, I'm sure too."

"Wang Ji, how was your vacation in the last two weeks? I didn't manage to say good-bye since I was on a mission to Caiyi the morning you left. Do you want me to brief you what happened? It was a really successful mission, you know. We caught many yaoguai s, fierce corpses and other forms of the undead after an outbreak of evil qi energies was discovered, which solved part of the mystery of the poisoning plague with the cooperation of the town police, and we returned with lots of grains and foodstuff to last us an entire season, because the mayor was exhilarated to be freed from the scourge of those abominable things and rewarded us well!"

"I'm so glad to hear that you spent a wonderful holiday travelling along the Grand Eastern Coast. You haven't been going out since taking care of your partner throughout the last half-year or so. Did you say that you met Director Nie earlier today? How is he? I heard he fled but he must've picked up his courage after meeting the two of you and returned! Good for you, Wang Ji, you're always inspiring others to be their best!"

"There's a strain on your face and your lips are thinned - do tell, Wang Ji. Speak, what is in your heart that has kept you from saying that much? I can guess that you'd like to ask something important about me, or to request for help from our sect. Come, this way, to the camps and dormitories allocated to our three-hundred strong group that I've managed to muster in just a brief two-week stint. We can talk more over there. I sense that the three juniors I've brought along would be more than excited to meet you, and hear what you have to say."

"Uncle? Oh, he's here too, but not for the competition. He's staying over for just a few days to oversee camp operations and uphold our family rules at all times, and he makes sure everyone is well fed, has their blades well-oiled, and gets at least eight hours of sleep each day now that our body clocks must be reversed during this crucial period. Wen Ning is around too, though not on an official basis. He's been helpful, striking yaoguai s with such sharp and powerful blows, he's better than any sword we have against those monsters!"

"Oh, no, no, everyone's fine, Wang Ji. A few younger disciples were injured, though, because some of the Imperial-bred yaoguai s were very cunning and strong enough to break through our cultivation and spellcasting techniques. Were you informed about the full details of last night's monster count? Unlike the others, our sect didn't dive head-first into the swarms of yaoguai s around these plains. That would be suicidal, really. The senior disciples detected too many low-level ones lurking in the forests when the first fireworks were launched, which would immediately overwhelm any group that tried to be the first to reach their dens. Instead, the Gusu Lans held back and picked on the remnants after a number of sects had set off their journeys for the hunt. Pickings were rather slim, but adding those that we caught from Caiyi Town two weeks ago, which the Council had declared to be valid because we worked so hard to bring those dark creatures to their knees - and save people's lives; that puts us as forerunners in the competition and Uncle is very pleased. "

“Rest assured, many survived through last night unscathed, and I’m sure we will do fine tonight. We won’t have anymore extra caught and caged dark creatures to fall back on, this time. However, with three hundred healthy and fully-motivated, engaged men, we can surely push ahead of the race. Oh? Your face tells me that you’re worried or you’re not convinced. Fret not, dear brother. Trusty Liebing is a nemesis of all things dark, unholy and unliving. Plus, we have natural defenses against them - see? One of those creatures barely made a scratch on my shins last night - I’ve sewed it up and patched my trousers to repair the holy sutra barrier lining the fabrics. There’s a bit of swelling but thanks to our uncle’s medicine, it doesn’t feel painful anymore.”

Lan Zhan struggled to maintain the fast walking pace set by his older brother (admit it, one could hear him chastise himself, Xi Chen da ge has very long legs, and he, the great Hanguang Jun, has become an overweight buffoon; he could feel layers of fat jiggling when he moved his limbs excessively - the shame, the shame!); however, he was relieved when they left behind the dinner party, those stifling crowds, the roaring din of people talking and ho-ho-ho laughing non-stop, and speckles of lights appeared on the horizon. They were approaching Camp Gusu Lan, which sounded pretty much like home to him.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 168

“Wang Ji, there you go again. You keep rubbing your belly with one hand and you keep touching your topknot with the other. Is something wrong, can this gege do anything to help? Does your tummy feel unwell after eating that goose breastmeat and fried tofu? Did you grow dandruff again after your two week holiday? Perhaps the homestays you stayed at didn't provide good quality shampoos that you're used to for washing your long hair.”

Lan Xi Chen was the perfect, caring and loving older brother that all (sisters) would love to have; he reached out to touch Lan Zhan's hair, running fingers through those long locks in search of split ends, painful-to-comb knots and offending white flakes. The younger of the Twin Jades protested with an annoyed nnngh - but without words -, and tried to fend off those gentle fingertips from his scalp - however, that only served to fuel Xi Chen da ge 's oniichan-powered dedication to search and locate the source of his little brother's discomforts. Xi Chen kept murmuring, “It's okay, it's okay, put your hands down and let gege find out what's wrong.” Of course, there was nothing terribly wrong to warrant those roaming long hands with perfect manicured nails - but Lan Zhan's penchant to keep his mouth shut as though they weighed in gold, left him helpless and lovingly examined by the overzealous gege .

Xi Chen proceeded to study Lan Zhan's belly, and used his authority as the older brother to tap on Lan Zhan's defensive hands, and silently commanded the younger Lan man to release their hold on the sash. Unhappily, Lan Zhan loosened his grip, and Xi Chen merrily unbuckle the cloth belt, then unwound the knot-buttons and folds that kept Lan Zhan's pristine white robes in check, in a deserted area behind a building, and away from prying eyes. Like the caring older brother he was, Xi Chen peeled away layers of robes and opened them, then unzipped Lan Zhan's pants to let the stuffy abdomen spill out in great relief.

"Ah, didi, maybe this is causing your unease - I've watched you from afar, you were eating quite a lot during the dinner party before I approached you. And now, you may be suffering from cramps and indigestion because your pants are too tight. Come, sit and lie on that rock over there, and let gege rub your tummy," Xi Chen coo'ed at his distressed younger brother. Lan Zhan nnngh'ed again in embarrassment, but Xi Chen ignored that completely - the little brother's well-being was more important than a few disgraceful, humiliating but perfectly natural acts that one may find insulting, for a virtuous Gusu Lan.

In the end, Lan Zhan obeyed without question although the downward curve of lips and blushing cheeks indicated he was rather ashamed of indulging his weight gain recklessly. He reclined on a sloping rock surface that resembled a lounging chair - another one of those strange, meaningless stone architecture and sculptures that dot the gardens surrounding the Carp Tower -, and with his robes hung loosely open and his fly unzipped, he allowed his gege to touch his belly, jiggle the fatty layer around the midriff, and knead wonderful, nnngh-inducing circles around the deep, bouncy navel. Xi Chen da ge fished out a vial that smelled of mint, ginger and other medicinal qualities typical for stomach ailments, and poured out some oil to warm his hands; then, Xi Chen rubbed his hands along the imagined meridians of a man's digestive tract from beneath the Lan Zhan's chest, generous deep nnngh rolling circles around the perimeter of the wide mound of the abdomen, then, increasingly smaller and tight circles, more kneads along the stomach cavity and intestines, and the gege couldn't suppress a chuckle when he, out of a juvenile moment of an older brother lovingly bullying his younger sibling, inserted an oiled forefinger into Lan Zhan's deep, fat-lined belly button and started to curl that said finger inside and tickle the hapless man. Lan Zhan frowned and nnngh'd again and again, his whole body squirmed at the strange sensations that sent electricity straight into his intestines - Xi Chen da ge was actually shooting little quivering bolts of qi energy into his tummy to tickle them to work! Unable to resist the older brother's advances - because Xi Chen was, admittedly, the more renowned healer between the two siblings -, Lan Zhan gripped the edge of the bed-like rock and bit his lower lips and the first of many tingling waves of discomfort - also relieve - started to make their way through inside his burgeoning obese belly. There were disgusting rumbles and squelches from within, of muscular contractions and relaxations, of squeezing aches running from up to down, from right to left and back to the right across his tummy.

Then, without warning, a radiant, warm - actually stinging hot - sensation of growing fullness attacked his rump, and Lan Zhan had to raise his hips in desperation. Xi Chen smiled, and released his belly-assaulting forefinger, still glowing blue from firing many salvos of pure qi bullets into his younger brother's body. He stepped back, Lan Zhan squeezed his eyes shut and gritted his teeth, then his thighs shivered when all strength was lost, because those terribly, terribly pressurized feelings welled up from the rectum, to the anus, the sphincter, every last muscle unravelled instinctively, allowing passage and instant, much-needed tension-releasing relief--

A loud string of rude farts followed.

Then, an 'ahhhh'.

The understanding gege held his breath, and explained that by wearing pants that were too tight - especially with large, hearty meals eaten regularly -, Lan Zhan's tummy had built up a lot from the inside without an outlet, such as for certain bodily gases. He continued to massage Lan Zhan's tummy and pressed out more unsavoury sounds from the little brother's butt, and gave him a lecture about appropriate wardrobe sizes, dietary advice and lifestyle changes - the man should exercise more and cultivate three times a day, and keep to lighter, less oily foods.

“See? This will only grow in size if you don’t take active preventive measures, and soon, your weight problems will lead to other issues, such as injuries to your weight-bearing joints, and you’ll experience labored breathing even with brisk walks, and soon, even snoring at nights that will keep everyone up,” the naggy but good-intentioned gege sagely advised, while pinching then jiggling the tyre of blubber that had sprouted around Lan Zhan’s waist, a slap on the soon-to-be-thundering thighs, a swat on the sides of the buttocks, then moving up to wiggle the rounded upper arms - precursors of ‘chicken wing’ flabs -, and finally, caressing the smooth, bulging layer below the man’s chin where a double chin was imminent. Lan Zhan had to bite his tongue to avoid nnnh’ing in front of his well-meaning brother, because he was a masochistic addict to loving pain from pinches and slaps.

Lan Zhan bowed his head in a mix of apprehension, frustration and shame and tightened his fat thighs uncomfortably on the rocky pedestal. Xi Chen reached out to pat the younger man’s head to try and soothe the latter’s deep-seated fears - but the latter actually flinched in masked horror.

“As your brother, you know that I’ll only say what’s right for you, and have your best interests at heart. This too,” fingers touched the man’s hairline along the temples and the top of the forehead, “... we should have a conversation about it. I’ve seen you stealing glances at mirrors and adjusting your front locks and bangs sometimes in the Jingshi, and I know very well what causes you sleepless nights. From one man to another, dear little brother, let’s talk about it, and what worries you so much about such a perfectly harmless, natural condition that accompanies with age, which affects all of us and our ancestors,” Xi Chen da ge calmly broke the last straw on the camel’s back, literally, when he delved into Lan Zhan’s deepest, darkest secrets of irreversibly damaged masculinity, and that filled the younger of the Twin Jades with trepidation - his imaginary receding hairline.

Then, Xi Chen did the unspeakable - he used his fingernails and lightly raked the vicinity of that said offending disappearing hairline, and a few frighteningly Gusu Lan-white and snow-like flakes began to drift past Lan Zhan's sight; plus, an inexplicable itch and tightness on that spot, comfortingly relieved.

Surely, he should stick to his favourite regiment of anti-dandruff herbal shampoo and hair tonic oils, Lan Zhan thought when misery doubled instantaneously. He curled up into a testicular ball of shame upon the rock-bed, though Xi Chen continued to find endearing, familial ways to pacify the wounded man's pride, such as pat-patting the rounded rump and whispering, “Didi , don't hide your face from gege , come, turn over and let gege pick out those dandruffs from your scalp, and massage the wind from your tummy.”

(It didn't help that Lan Zhan sported a hard-on, horrors of all horrors - a purely physiological reaction to the older brother's sweet, comforting touch, of course.)

.

There were awkward moments, but Xi Chen da ge saved Lan Zhan's day despite his busy schedule and the constant calls for his leadership during times of urgency and great crisis at Camp Gusu Lan. They arrived at the dorms with a bit of time to spare in relative privacy - all three hundred or so went to the bathhouses en masse after having a filling dinner to clean up, then marched to their armoury to don their best Gusu Lan battle regalia, swords and enchanted armored robes, and prepare for another night of long battles with yaoguai s and their ilk.

Xi Chen fussed over Lan Zhan's dreadful situation, and hastily rummaged the closets for suitable, larger robes and a pair of pants with a wider waistline, and found one from a big-boned disciple's possessions. He insisted on making adjustments to the cut to suit Lan Zhan's figure, so the poor man - already shirtless, now pantless and left with thin loincloth covering the last shreds of his dignity - had measuring tapes circling, tightening around his sensitive and rather erogenous areas. Tickling armpit hair, grazing puffy-pink man-nipples, sliding around the embarrassingly widest circumference of his ballooning body, light swats of measuring tape on his exposed buttocks, then down, down, past the crotch and the clothed, stubbornly twitching arousal, the hypersensitive inner thighs that trembled from light kneading and gentle man-handling - it was too much for Lan Zhan, a man of unlimited libido, to bear. He couldn't suppress a whining moan and quickly clamped his mouth but it was too late - the unmanly sound echoed the walls of a small dorm room, and everything fell silent.

Xi Chen stared at the flushing didi in bewilderment, and wondered if Lan Zhan was suffering from an acute case of food poisoning, because he could feel through pulse points that Lan Zhan's heart was racing, the skin was clammy with sweat, and there were minute excited qi dancing around his pressure points, causing him to fidget restlessly. Lan Zhan looked away while standing in front of the crouching Xi Chen, who was dutifully measuring the little brother's thighs for perfectly logical, asexual reasons of getting him a good fit into the pants later.

“Wang Ji, is everything alright? You’ve not said a word, so it’s difficult for me to tell. Is your tummy making strange noises again? Are you feeling unwell with a fever? Or... ah. I see now.”

Lan Zhan paled and pinked simultaneously. He squeezed his thighs and trapped the measuring tape between them out of sheer horror mixed with apprehension.

“ Didi , do not worry. Gege is also a man, and gege understands. Gege will ease your discomforts, but we don’t have much time, because the juniors will return soon to these dorms. Come, xiao didi , you don’t have to feel ashamed. You were only eleven or twelve, when you started coming to my bedroom in the morning, worried about the wood between your legs that refused to go down, and do you remember how we solved your problems?”

The loincloth was easily unwrapped - a flimsy piece of translucent material that offered no defence or cover for the well-endowed, easily bought from any markets in any town. It fluttered down to the floor.

“Yes, didi , it’s perfectly normal for older brothers to relieve their sibling’s unease, and this is no exception. We did it every morning in the past before going to Uncle’s house for breakfast, and you came to like it, even begged for it because without doing it, you couldn’t properly put on your pants. Oh, Wang Ji, those were the good ol’ days when you were so innocent. Come, come, stand properly and spread your legs a little. Squeezing your thighs won’t help, we’re not women, you know.”

Some light shuffling on the floor. The younger man was, of course, obedient to the older sibling's orders. Xi Chen reached for a washcloth to wipe his hands, and then he leaned closer until his face was close, oh so close - stray strands of fine masculine pubes tickled the older man's cheeks, and Xi Chen chuckled - the puff of warm air made Lan Zhan tremble, because the skin around his crotch goosebumped, and he fell deeper into shades of embarrassing reds when little Wang Ji jerked up and down uncontrollably from the greeting by Zewu Jun.

“We really have no time, but gege doesn't want to rush. It has to feel good, right? So gege will be gentle but firm, steady but fast. You don't look happy, but down there, you look like you really want it, and very impatiently too. It's always been like this, since you were eleven years old, and I've watched you grow from the length of a pinkie to such an impressive state today. Really, there's nothing to be ashamed or worried of, gege has seen everything. It's perfectly normal for me to touch you, okay? It's to relieve the tension and to make you feel good. It's something brothers like us do, so cheer up!”

Lan Zhan moaned again and started to pump his hips, his head lolled from side to side because electricity ran up and down his spine and his sexual meridians; he struggled to remain still because his hips shuddered, his toes curled, and his back kept on threatening to bend and bow like a fucking machine but oh dear god, it wasn't Wei Ying his excited and pent-up arousal was making love to. He had to persevere and maintain a serious, non-sexy visage at all times. Soon, his vision started to roll backward and his mouth slacked. While one hand busied itself on the prized genitals, the other roamed around, pressing on sensitive, lewdly tickling places around the groin and thighs.

“Heh... gege remembered, when you were small, gege was already a late teenager and had big hands. I had to make a tight O-ring with my thumb and forefinger so that we could stroke that discomfort out of you. But now, look, Wang Ji, gege has to make a fist to properly hold and stroke it. Time flies, doesn't it?"

"Ah, wait, not so fast. Control your breathing, Wang Ji - remember the Swimming Dragon breathing technique? Yes... inhale, one, two three and hold... five seconds, then release. Gege will time it with your tempo. Three tight, shallow and powerful strokes, then non-stop rapid rubs on the tip while you hold your breath. You liked it so much when you were younger, we created this technique together to make you happy, do you remember? Gege knows you like to edge, that's a sign of a real man, and it's perfectly normal for gege to pleasure you and keep you teetering so that when you finally release, it will be a perfect storm of endorphins, very good feelings, and a night of pleasant dreams. Gege has watched you grow up, gege loves you like the best little brother ever, gege has seen you become happy during times like this, gege knows what feels very, very nice because we're both men. So, Wang Ji, relax and leave it to gege."

"Ooh, you're feeling good now, look at what's coming out from the slit. That's pre-cum, and gege knows what to do next. You remember too, don't you? What excites your xiao ji ji and makes it all better? Yes... hold it up like that, and show them to gege, what a good boy you are, Wang Ji! Gege will use his fingers to massage it, it helps to circulate the built-up qi and improves your digestion too, so it's good for your tummy, you know. Come, let gege knead it harder and faster, we're running out of time. Oh, it's rising fast and tucked underneath your penis now... how adorable! Gege wants to fondle them and then kiss them goodnight... ha ha, I was just kidding, but really, yours aren't as hairy as mine. Yours look rather smooth and plump, did you exercise them daily and eat enough fruits and vegetables to keep up such a nice complexion on your scrotum?"

“Mmm... you’re getting close, very close, your hips are shuddering wildly like a leaf in a tempest, and your legs are barely holding up; your body’s all tomato-red and covered with sweat! Make sure you go to the bathhouse for a quick dip, gege will make a new set of robes and big-sized pants for you when you’re done, okay? O-- Oh, gege better speed up - I can hear footsteps coming through the hallways outside and some chattering. Gege is sorry for pumping his hand so roughly, and making these intricate vibrating hand-motions with all five fingers... it must be too much, judging from your reaction... breathe, Wang Ji, don’t forget to breathe! Next time, gege will be kinder to you, okay? Now close your eyes, it’s coming out soon, gege will use your most favourite technique - two finger rubbing vigorously on that really, really nice spot beneath the glans, and the quivering pee slit, while the other hand stroking at full speed with enhanced tightness. Mmmh! What a strong, healthy pulse you have, and so many drops of pre-cum are spilling out! It’s twitching like crazy, jerking up and down, like an angry stallion trying to kick off its rider! I can feel the first contractions welling up from your balls and the veins are bulging on the underside of your penis...”

“Oh! Did you hear that? Someone’s forgotten to pick up their bathrobe, and the whole group has turned back to the bathhouse to retrieve it. Such good disciples, always staying united and together. Oh... was that your... err, twenty-fifth? Or thirtieth spurt? Gege lost count, sorry. But that was really impressive... and... it’s still hard. (ahem) Not to worry, my beloved didi, gege always knows what to do to make you feel better. I shall work harder now, maybe twice the force and speed, and ramp up my techniques. Stand straighter, my boy, gege will start again and get a few more out before the juniors return. Don’t worry, you’re in good hands now, and you’ll be in excellent shape once we release your surging qi that’s been locked inside your pelvis all this time!”

Lan Zhan was a brave man that night. He kept mum about his harrowing (but very pleasurable) experience in the hands of the fearsome Zewu Jun, and bit his tongue so that he would not grunt and howl that ‘Hnnngh’ for the world to see and hear. Incest was a terrible crime, at least in his books, but that didn't stop his sex-addicted body to respond (inappropriately) to Xi Chen's touch, and when 'Hnnngh' could not be uttered, he allowed himself some tasty moans, nnnhs and the occasional choked and rather desperate "ge ...!" before spilling again and again, straight into the waiting slender, perfectly pedicured, but slightly calloused fingers of his loving older brother.

.

Elsewhere, Wei Ying quietly tended to a snoring Jiang Cheng in Camp Yunmeng Jiang - another set of dorms and quarters in a different location on the vast space around the Carp Tower, relatively unoccupied since three-quarters of its residents had left after a day of service. He chuckled, then laughed, then groaned sexily and squeezed his own thighs, then dabbed tears out of his eyes, turned quiet, and went back to sniggering - a myriad of interesting but random expressions cycled through his face. Wei Ying got more than he bargained for when the couple suggested that they split up to help Director Nie - he got a free telepathy show with full sensory experience, as a pervy voyeur, and delighted in observing how Lan Zhan was seduced by bromantic love, lewdly molested, and forced to ejaculate multiple times using exquisite tactile assaults, from his own flesh-and-blood brother.

Scores of the remaining fifty-strong Jiang disciples mulled outside their closed sect leader's quarters to watch a strange man, who seemed to talk so fondly with the so-called tyrant of Lotus Pier, carried him to bed, cleaned him up with a washcloth, and then administer an antidote to the alcohols was consumed. They weren't acquainted with Wei Ying, but the man barged through the camp gates with such persuasive charm and confidence, and spouted sect-specific vernacular, varied Yunmeng dialects, and short stories from the past with such familiarity, that the disciples timidly let him in - the man's A.S.S. skills triumphed once again. Wei Ying snorted - the fifty that left were the tender young 'uns, barely fifteen years of age; the older ones had been wounded - more like, slaughtered - when sent to the frontlines, leaving behind the frail, inexperienced and coddled boys to fend for themselves by hiding away to survive most of the night.

Wei Ying performed Dark Arts magics behind closed doors and locked windows. Dark wisps rose from Jiang Cheng's immobile body and wound their way straight into Wei Ying's open mouth and nostrils. The former Yiling Patriarch's eyes blazed crimson for a brief moment, as he inhaled and swallowed - his body lifted off the ground, his hair drifted from unseen winds in all directions, his limbs splayed in a display of an ancient, revived malevolent presence. Wei Ying felt his entire being supercharged with extremely powerful, cursed and resentful energies, and his body glowed black from head to toe. Hurricanes of abominable evil spirits, screeching souls and all manners of the foul, the vile and the fetid surged around his fluttering robes, but they remain in close proximity to the greatest grandmaster of the Dark Arts, thus safeguarding the quarters from total obliteration by pure, raw evil power.

The man licked his lips - he tasted the essence of the great unknown evil that besieged the lands, and thought that it was absolutely, devilishly, and delectably good.

.

It was ten o' clock. An aging timekeeper rang his hand-held gong to announce the time, and walked across the relatively deserted compounds surrounding the Carp Tower.

Wei Ying had to keep in mind that he was not the protagonist of the story, and therefore, he'd miss out on a lot, physically - that is, if he didn't maintain a sacred telepathic soul-binding communication line with Lan Zhan, or even send out pseudo-feelers to others in the vicinity; mind-reading would be one way to describe it, however since that ability spans across continents and even worlds, and for a couple, it becomes a two-way channel of sharing one's thoughts and senses, thus it becomes a kind of a in-built multimedia streaming pathway that has unlimited bandwidth and sensory richness.

By the time the former Yiling Patriarch made his way through dispersing crowds who'd called in for the night, and banquet tables that were being cleaned and wrapped up by tired servants, he found Lan Zhan sitting on the bottommost steps of the Carp Tower, alone, depressed, watched by a couple of grim-faced guards standing on a higher platform who constantly surveyed the Tower's gardens to prevent troublemakers from approaching Lanling's most famous landmark, and for the time being, the headquarters of the Grand Cultivation Council.

“Wah, Lan Zhan, your pants look good!” the man teased, and Lan Zhan, for some unexplained reason, bowed his head and squeezed his thighs together and tucked them under the new set of airy, supersized robes. He settled down next to Lan Zhan and waved his hand; the guards behind them suddenly flinched, then looked around, confused; they stared at one another questioningly, suddenly not remember who they were, why they were garbed in splendid gold-plated armours, or what they were doing at the steps to the Tower. Seconds later, the two guards stumbled away while scratching their heads - one of the couple's Demons of Inabilities had been commanded to use its amazing powers to confuse and remove the enemy's presence, and cause the masses to not recognize the godly couple in public space.

“Oh ge~~~ge , ge~~~ge , your silky smooth hands feel so good, they’re so sexy, squeeze it, squeeze, rub it more, move it up and down, I can’t hold on...!” Wei Ying’s obnoxiously melodious and shrill voice mocked Lan Zhan’s core, and the younger man had to wiggle his bum on the steps to emphasize just how much Lan Zhan couldn’t hold on while being relieved of an unintended efflux of sexual qi , by his own brother, no less.

Lan Zhan snorted in disdain. “Wei Ying, I did not give you permission to read and paraphrase my thoughts,” he stated, and the tips of his ears turned beet red.

“Eh? Eh? Why the cold response? Give me a break, darling, I was out there performing a 31st-century magic-enabled surgery to save my little brother’s life, while you-- you went to goof off with your gege with belly rubs, dandruff-picking and later, got yourself sexually assaulted, then you were gifted a wonderful set of pristine and shiny new clothes by your molester gege , and finally, you had a good time reuniting with our juniors and everyone else, given a hero’s reception, before the second night hunt ceremony!” Wei Ying complained, and for each accusation, he slapped Lan Zhan’s thighs, stole a couple of swats on the buttocks, and even made a swipe between the older man’s legs - because Wei Ying had gotten so used to touch-touches that grabbing Lan Zhan’s penis had become as normal as scratching one’s itch on the body.

Lan Zhan nnnh’ed audibly, and he allowed himself that privilege because there wasn’t a single soul around; everyone had been chased away by the Demons of Inabilities so the couple had the Carp Tower all to themselves, really. The man was dense and slow - he was still ruminating on what Wei Ying said, item by item, and started to form a long sequence of defensive arguments particularly the last point - Si Zhui, Jing Yi, Jin Ling and Wen

Ning barely said hellos but they exchanged some pleasantries, before getting swamped by attention from the other younger disciples, because everyone was energized and looking forward to a successful night hunt - Lan Zhan barely got a glimpse of what happened to the juniors in the preceding two weeks other than they had plenty more adventures and interesting encounters with yaoguai and fierce corpses alike, bonded closer than ever, and became celebrated new heroes of the sect - Lan Zhan was relegated to the backdrop quicker than how one downed a cup of high quality tea, and after being greeted formally as 'Hanguang Jun' by the rest, he stood in a corner, alone, forgotten in a sea of very eager young men waiting to test their skills against monsters and to secure the future of their clan - so, there was no 'hero's reception' at all, unlike what Wei Ying claimed, and-- “Oii. You talk too much even while not doing so, and I’m not even soliciting your feedback about what I joked just now,” Wei Ying opened his Bag of Holding satchel and took out a couple of loquats he’d stolen from the dinner party earlier. He went ahead to peel one and threw the other at Lan Zhan - the latter caught it perfectly in his palm, this time. “So, what do you think of the whole dinner meeting and events, and the departure ceremony for our brothers’ sects?” Wei Ying asked after the first juicy munch. Lan Zhan sighed, and took a bite on his given fruit.

(flashback)

The meetings had adjourned by eight, during which groups of sect leaders, champions and hired mercenaries were called in to be given their results by the Grand Cultivation Council’s elite circle - much like what happens after an academic examination -, and a chance to discuss their options should they bow out of the competition from disqualification or due to other reasons. The final decisions were announced by putting up paper posters on notification walls located throughout the compounds surrounding the Tower, so that everyone including the dinner guests, noblemen and people with interests in the progress of the night hunts - pundits, betting agents and non-combative sponsors, usually - would receive the news fairly on time. Obvious winners - the top handful of sects who scored enough yaoguai s and other supernatural evils - who had made it through the first night, received their results early and were able to leave at an earlier time point before sunset, enjoy their Jin-sponsored dinner, and rest up to prepare for another long, arduous night starting at nine.

The Gusu Lan, one of the top contenders, were off to a good start at nine. There were rumours that their sect leader spent the last hour checking and making sure everyone was properly equipped and psyched up with victorious chants before leaving the starting line; and there were whispers that he even sewed garments for one Lan member before charging into the battlefield swarming with fresh waves of yaoguai that bred overnight and multiplied like a disease. The Yunmeng Jiang, tethering precariously at the bottom rung, were less confident of their success, and their tyrant leader had to whip his boys to shape with Zidian to get them running, far, far behind the horde of cultivators that had gone on ahead. With a small number of surviving disciples in tow and with slim pickings expected after such an intensive first night, the second night was speculated to be the Jiang's final appearance of the now-termed New Year's Hunt.

It goes without saying that the largest and most powerful contestant, the Imperial cultivator group and the massive numbers of enslaved sects - their numbers had whittled down dramatically down to about a hundred thousand because the weakest ones had been easily mauled and annihilated. Distasteful gossips during the dinner party spoke of plans by the Imperial army to burn up their cannon fodder for the next few days, before sending in their greatest, most talented cultivators to the fore to clinch the final victory on behalf of the Emperor's name. The Jin sect was regarded with widespread fear, admiration and detest because they had everything when the rest of the Middle Kingdom struggled; they had enough money to hire endless waiting lines of mercenaries and champions, and stocked up on the best magical weapons, armour and equipment that Magics 'R Us had to offer - the Lanling Jin was on its way to become a candidate for the top three positions of the hunt, and its existence was more or less assured at that point.

Director Nie was seen rushing from one freelancing champion to another even after the majestic two-storey teakwood doors were closed at the Carp Tower. He had stayed back and requested the old sages of the Council to reconsider his sect's failed candidacy - having scored no kills meant that he was automatically booted out - and according to the final written announcement pasted on the walls, he was given another chance since his men had deserted him - instead of being defeated in a fair combat of men and foes -; therefore, the disqualification wasn't really due to a lack of performance or a sign of weakness and failure of the Qinghe Nie, thus, an appeal was considered and granted in the end. Nie Huaisang still had to find individuals he could sponsor and form a group to fight under his sect's banner, and bring back some yaoguai s if he hoped to be spared from the wrath of the Council.

The couple caught hold of Huaisang in his panicked bid to sign up anyone who would be willing to sell their lives for mere gold pieces that that man could offer at that time; the best cultivation fighters for hire advertised their services for hundreds of gold pieces per hour , and that price was slated to skyrocket in the coming days when competition becomes stiffer than a stone cold day-old dumpling. Wei Ying happily reported that Jiang Cheng remained steadfast to lead his own people to catch and kill the monsters; at least he agreed not to antagonize the Nies, although he also did not rule out the possibility of forming a future alliance should his situation change. Lan Zhan was a bit awkward when he talked about Zewu Jun - nothing out of the ordinary for a man who spoke with brevity - and said that the Gusu Lan promised not to deliberately sabotage their friends, but in the spirit of fairness and equality, of an eye for an eye, should one sect interfere and harm the Lans, Zewu Jun would not hesitate to strike hard with a Shuoyue and Liebing combo to turn sword and sound into divine punishment unto the enemies.

Nie Huaisang gulped, afraid of what Zewu Jun was truly capable of. “But... Wei gongzi , Lan er gongzi , would you not consider working for me, even for just tonight? Wei Wuxian can share the secrets of trapping and killing the dark creatures, and Lan Wang Ji can use Bichen to slay those that dare to close in, strike the guqin to eliminate those from afar, and even wield magic spells to keep us all safe and sound,” the man persisted with sweet offers of two gold pieces for each person for the second night of the hunt - what a cheapskate! - and the couple duly turned him down.

“Director Nie, your offer is kind, but I must stay vigilant tonight here, in the heart of fierce battles between men and inhuman evil during the unholy hours, to protect the one I love,” he stated in a clear, neutral tone. Wei Ying rolled his eyes at how textbook-like the declaration of loyalty sounded, though Huaisang was smitten and had sparkles in his eyes because he was so touched by what was said. “Oh, of course, Hanguang Jun! Your loved one... err, ones... need you more!” the shortest man paused a bit to reconsider his words, looked back and forth between the two, and gave them a warm, welcoming smile of old childhood friends that once fought together and tried to save the world, sort of.

(end of flashback)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 169

A private conversation using ErNet-powered telepathy took place between the two men, as they climbed up the stairs of the unguarded Carp Tower, only to find the doors to the meeting halls securely locked and most likely booby-trapped, then begrudgingly, slowly made their way to the base of the stairs - because Wei Ying remarked that the last time they cutely tip-toed and scurried downstairs with tiny steps during the exposé of his real identity, then tried to escape from the Jins about half a year ago, the man nearly tripped and would've been sent hurtling down like a rolling boulder off a steep cliff and crack his skull.

“Lan Zhan, you look a bit distracted and listless after meeting your brother. Stop brooding. Talk to me, what’s going on?”

Is it about your brother? Your past? The disturbing stuff that I saw through our shared telepathic connections?”

“Guilty.”

“What... why?”

“Guilty. Not perfect. The dark past... it still haunts me, sometimes.”

(In a telepathic connection, one can catch glimpses of visuals inside the other’s mind. A dark cloud hung over Lan Zhan’s lonely, miserable form.

He seemed to walk through a night-time desert that stretched forever, dust devils blew by, he blinked but couldn't see past the haze in front of him; he was lost, so very lost.)

“How? How does the dark past make you feel... imperfect? You're talking in words and brief phrases here. C'mon, spill out the beans.”

“Wei Ying, at present, you may see me as a perfect soulmate, but long before this... when I was a child, I wasn't. I was... am... dirty. Contaminated.”

“From how you were touched by your older brother?”

“It is a... bad touch.”

“Lan Zhan, wait, wait... let me get this straight. You're feeling guilty for being imperfect, because you had been touched by Xi Chen da ge during your pre-teen years?”

“Mn.”

“Oh for goodness' sake, you were still innocent and unaware at that time! Having no one else to teach you the ropes while growing up as an orphan, and having to experience your first wet dream or your first morning wood, then forced to approach your older brother - your only other living family member - for help, because there was no one else... that's perfectly natural! Why, I jacked off with Jiang Cheng too when we were in our teens because sometimes we had nothing to do on rainy days, kept indoors by our parents, and so, we ended up wrestling each other on the bed until we got pent up, and played dick-fencing behind closed doors!"

"R-- Really?"

(The desert scene came to a standstill, stopped moving when Lan Zhan stopped trying to fight against it, to try and cross the sea of dry sands in a world that lacked light. A single pinpoint, a North Star of sorts, sparkled above.)

"Lan Zhan, listen to me, as your partner, soulmate, husband and wife. Stop thinking that you were sexually abused when you showed up at your brother's bedroom every morning as a child, begging to be touched in a bad, naughty way, therefore indirectly forcing him to be an accomplice of sorts, and you feeling regret, responsible and guilty of all this, two decades later. He's not an unwilling pedophile, you're not a victim. It's not grooming, it's not trauma, one way or the other, and it's not about being sexually deviant, intentional or not. It's something wonderful you experienced with your older brother, of shared memories and growing up to manhood together!"

"B-- But, my older brother... he..."

"Spit it out, say what you remember and feel. I can read minds, but I can't read what's not vocalized even without being spoken."

“He... he was allowed, no, made to play with my penis and balls... made to watch me cum... we did it daily and sometimes even more frequent during holidays... he was casually coerced by my consistent begging, and became so used to it, until he found it absolutely natural... to touch his little brother that way, and for me... to offer sex, and a hidden desire for selfish, indulgent, self-gratification. It’s shameful, it’s moral corruption at its worst, by an eleven-year old child - that was me.”

(The desert scene glows out until it fades into white screen, and is replaced by amore vibrant memory from the man’s past. A little boy in fluffy white pyjama robes runs through the hallways excitedly, even smiling a bit as though sunshine toed right behind him. The cute pitter-patter of rushing little feet left a few female servants and minders chuckling - their young master was so energetic first thing in the morning, despite his perennial stoic, expressionless and anti-social behaviour that would dominate the rest of the day. A door swung open and closed quickly, then the boy appeared by the bedside of his older brother.

“ Gege , gege ! A-Ji greets senior brother a good morning!” he squeaks; his voice hadn’t cracked from puberty yet. He bowed rather too quickly, and with a single practised smooth movement, pulled his trousers and underwear, and left them discarded as a messy pile of clothes on the floor. “ Gege , gege , please touch didi ? I cannot wear my school uniform with it. Gege , please wake up and help A-Ji to start the day,” the boy begged in such a polite, respectable way, that Xi Chen da ge was jolted at five in the morning, then the older teenager stretched and yawned. The little boy felt a tingle in his aroused loins, and an unfamiliar bolt of desire struck like lightning, sending dirty and forbidden sweet voices to comment that boy to try, to indulge to enjoy, sticking his pinkie-length penis into the older brother’s mouth - surely, it would be warm, moist, and if the older brother hollowed his cheeks and sucked very, very eagerly, with perfectly tight friction and suction, that his wee-wee would experience ten times the usual pleasure that he gets at daybreak, every day.

In the end, the boy managed to rein in his boiling lusts using their family's virtuous techniques - pouring cold water to the flames by chanting sutras inside the mind -, and straddled his older brother for a usual, perfectly normal session to 'calm down' his morning wood so that he could properly wear his school uniform. The older brother nonchalantly sat up and swatted the boy's buttocks, to gesture him to go on his knees so that his groin was at eye level - the perfect height for the teenage boy to easily reach the prized child's genitals before the first crow of roosters, then played with them with tender loving care.

The two brothers talked about very normal things - Did you sleep well last night? Did you dream something good? Did you complete your homework and have you studied for today's exams? What should they do after school hours? How are their studies and sports activities? What do they hope their uncle cooked for them for breakfast, and the ilk - while engaging in tasty pedophilic handjobs and sometimes, blowjobs - the older brother found it perfectly normal to indulge in his little brother's incessant, but hardly worded requests, because the little boy only needed to make a sad face and all his wishes were granted by the loving gege. The pre-pubescent and very unwary, vulnerable and gullible child raised his hips, pulled back his foreskin to expose his delightfully lovable pink penis-glans, and let the gege stroke his cute little penis until it tingled and throbbed with such lovely feelings coursing through the wildly-twitching stick of turgid flesh, then the older brother sat up higher and kissed each of the boy's very lightly fuzzed testicles, and greeted them "Good morning to you too, my beloved didi."

Little Lan Zhan would be stroked to completion at least thrice in a row - after the first series of thirty ejaculations that accompanied a mind-blowing climax, he would grab Xi Chen da ge's hand and keep it around his jerking virile flesh - another silent Please, Please gege , Touch Me More, It's Still Itchy. He'd have his penis lovingly molested and massaged inside his brother's mouth by a swirling and heavenly, expert muscular tongue, then, popped out of those wet lips and given the wonderful pistoning O-ring of thumb and forefinger unto his helpless and very excited youthful penis, balls rising and falling like a person's breath after running a marathon, that left the eleven-year old a trembling, shuddering sweaty mess of tasty moans and breathless grunts, of quivering hips and a violently quaking pelvis, before he was calmed down enough to put on his pants. Oddly, Xi Chen da ge never swallowed the boy's freshly-pubescent honeyed semen, because the entire ritual of waking up with sensual tactile and oral pleasures was considered as a norm among young males - as the two were told -, and didn't need to venture into the more depraved abyss of morally-questionable practices of swallowing, consuming and enjoying a boy's fresh sperm, produced first thing in the morning. The gege simply washed his hands in a bucket of water placed in the bedroom, then threw the water out of the window, so that the servants would never find out of the brothers' indecent waking-up routines every single day.)

Back to reality, the words "It's shameful, it's moral corruption at its worst, by an eleven-year old child - that was me" echoed in the younger man's mind, and he was quite flabbergasted at what his partner was thinking.

"Ai-yaaa! Lan Zhan, but it felt good, didn't it? That's all that matters! You felt good, Xi Chen da ge enjoyed pampering you and keeping you happy. How can that be shameful and corrupting? Today, that man is an exemplary, prominent, virtuous practitioner of Gusu Lan culture and rules - not the other way around, right? What you've been suppressing underneath those layers inside you, has resulted in what you are today. It's natural, it's normal, it's the cycle of life! Stop deluding and vehemently denying yourself the realities, and the pleasures of the flesh!

I don't care if you're perfect, not perfect, perfect with a dark past - that's bullshit! - and that's the crux of the issue. Stop measuring yourself and let things go. Stop blaming yourself. A-Ji and A-Xian's twisted pedophilic paradise dreams stemmed from your stubbornness to accept things as they are or have happened, and believe me, I'm perfectly fine with that. It's okay if you learned to love little children and want to have sex with them, just because you experienced good feelings out of such relationships from your younger days. I'm cool with that, really."

"Wei Ying...! T-- Thank you and s-- sorr--"

"We talked about this before. Between the two of us, those two words are prohibited. Banned. Stop kowtowing in front of me, at the back of your mind. That visual picture is terribly tasteless, dated, like something that came out of a caveman's head. I'm your husband and wife, so respect me like one, damn it."

"M... Mn."

"Come here, love, and let's hug."

"Wei Ying... (mmmph!)"

"I'm here."

“Wei Ying.”

(A few microseconds of psychic mushy and romantic moments passed.)

“Mm-hmm. No wonder the yaoguai inside your older brother sniffed out those memories and brought them back to the grave, so that it could rear its ugly head, seduce you, and for that brief period of time, snacked your tasty qi -flavoured seed in such a ravenous, bestial way, that I immediately knew something was wrong. A normal healthy heterosexual man like Xi Chen da ge would never lick, chew and swallow a man’s semen like that . Not even homosexuals like us too, unless one of us was infested with demon-fuelled sex drive, and believe you me, I’ve been there before. Xi Chen da ge is possessed after those mere scratches he received last night, so tonight, the demon inside him has grown to maturity, nourished by your godly qi , and will burst out of the man’s rib cage like an otherworldly alien... maybe a fierce corpse will appear, or maybe something else, I don’t know. I didn’t analyze that far.”

“Is it that bad? What can we do, Wei Ying?”

“Nothing. We took an oath not to be involved in cultivation and worldly matters. Period. We can’t fight their battles, and we can only remain as sidekicks. Tonight’s going to be one of the darkest nights for the Gusu Lans, and god help us if something crazy’s going to happen in this hellhole. Oh wait, you’re God... don’t help them, please, darling. You’ll ruin this timeline and I swear I don’t want to re-live another timeline again because it’ll make my hair grey.”

“But... you helped your foster brother. Shouldn't I be entitled to my fair share to aid my flesh-and-blood relative too?”

“Toot-toot, you think too shallowly. Jiang Cheng only has fifty men tonight, and the Gusu Lan has hundreds, all fully equipped, mind you. You know everything will somehow turn out all right, now that the stakes are balanced with little or no intervention from our side.”

“Mn. I can see into the future. Another type of supremely-enhanced yaoguai will make its debut and complicate my sect's chances of survival. More mortalities will follow for the cultivation world and all those involved in the night hunts. I don't like it... but I don't disagree the way it is going. It is the way things should be. Fate, Creation and Time, the holy trinity of elements that make this universe works - is doing its job.”

“Now you're getting it, darling. It doesn't matter if you were sexually abused by a sibling in the past, or if you're going to watch in horror at how the Gusu Lans, or this land, transform into a haven for evil corruption. Even the Yunmeng Jiang sect will suffer tremendous losses tonight, partly because of the infected returnees, and partly because I know Jiang Cheng's incompetence to lead a troop of young, inexperienced boys up against great evil - but I acted as though I wouldn't do anything else besides giving them immaterial moral support. Go with the flow as observers, that's what we are.”

“Mn. I'm a bit disappointed that evil is very sinister, strong and here. We are champions for the good and the weak, after all. The menacing darkness is unquenchable, indefatigable, unbreakable, adaptable - it looms over us in so many diverse ways that we cannot see it nor feel it before it strikes, and that would be too late.”

“Yeah. You’ve not even seen a fraction of what the Dark Arts can do in ways you can never imagine. You have cats and farm animals wielding dark magic that kill people; you have curses and plagues that turn flesh to liquid to walking dead bodies rising from the tombstones; you have unidentifiable entities that possess people through deliberate wounds or even from inhaling their sickening miasma, infest and grow out like chicken eggs inside the victims, and later before midnight, hatch explosively like xiao ji s placed in a microwave.”

“I resent that term. But otherwise, your argument makes sense. I see that I need to delve deeper and learn more about these Dark Arts from my partner, the greatest grandmaster of all, even for God himself.”

“... did you just smile? Did you just crack a joke or are you praising me?”

“Wei Ying. I love you. You make my world sensible and promising.”

“Oh, for fuck’s sake, I’m turning red without reason, and there are patrolling guards up ahead...”

.

Wei Ying reminisced a bit, when they ducked away from approaching gold-plated armoured guards and skirted around busy servants with arms filled with dirty dishes and tableware, about his own sexual awakening during his childhood years.

Wei Wuxian is, was, a normal hot-blooded boy even at eleven. Like any young healthy males, puberty was a tumultuous time filled with hormonal rages and an inexplicable curiosity and supersititious fear blended with fascination about the secondary sexual characteristics in both genders of his peers. He secretly joined juvenile and delinquent gangs made of sons from the more elite members of the Yunmeng Jiang society, that is, his peers - those who preferred to catch jungle fowls and fishes from the river, talk back at their parents, and run riot in the streets, rather than to sit still and read thick textbooks or practise writing poetry calligraphy for hours on end. Jiang Cheng tagged along whenever he could, away from screeching, nagging nannies and servants, because clueless little runts who hold very high prestige and rank in the hierarchy, like him, are warmly welcomed into the fold and taken advantage of by the bigger boys.

Wei Ying did it all - circle-jerking with a bunch of boys behind the school building, comparing penis sizes when they ate together during recess in the playground, playing with their foreskins because they were all uncircumcised and trying to match with each other's volume of body hair, reading dirty comics and badly-written fiction together when they were supposed to be studying together in a friend's house, exploring their sexuality by sharing skinships with both males and females, teasing the girls in the neighbourhood, peeping into their bathrooms [because Jiang Cheng was tricked into chasing any adult guards away by showing his Young Master Jiang's Jade Token, and the boys had free access to barge into rooms full of screaming girls], spying on them when they undress or when they use the outdoor open toilets behind the bushes [Jiang Cheng was unknowingly roped into accompanying the friendly jiejie s' toilet breaks, and once inside, he would be instructed to unlock every door or disarm any female guards with his incredibly adorable puppy-like stares, and again, the boys easily invaded and got VIP front seats to watch how girls pee and poo, and admire their slender sexy figures while slipping off panties and bras, masturbating furiously until several girls left the scene without knowing that their robes, skirts or even panties had been stained by many boys' hot stinky jizz], stealing panties from laundry lines, and surprise breast-groping their female classroom friends - they were all hallmarks of a feisty and sexually charged youths, and made for a colourful and fascinating time to grow up in the era of 2000 B.C. The Yunmeng Jiangs practised sex-segregation and primitive gender-discriminatory practices compared to the more egalitarian society of the 'virtuous' Gusu Lans, so it was no wonder that Wei Ying had been so fascinated with sex and the pleasures of the flesh, particularly with the inferior gender (in the Jiang's lingo); but with so much friendships and bromance going on among shixiong s and best-buddies, going bisexual seemed to be quite a compelling choice as well.

Wei Ying was caught in more than one occasion masturbating in his home when his step-parents were away. He enlisted Jiang Cheng as a lookout in return for a handful of candies, but Jiang Yan Li was adamant that something was wrong when her little brother refused to let her in to her bedroom; Wei Ying was terrified when faced by a very angry pouty shijie who caught him red-handed stroking his pre-teen penis with the jiejie 's panties, and he also had a basket stuffed with her other cleaned and folded bras and underwear, with the intention to sneak them out of the house and give them to the other naughty horny boys in the neighbourhood. Poor Jiang Cheng was confused and oblivious as to why the two elder siblings broke out into a huge argument, Wei Ying was given a stern lecture until his eyes and cheeks were red with shame; at that point, shijie held her tongue and sweetly apologized for her unbecoming behaviour. Something seemed off in the shijie , when she witnessed, entranced at how a growing pre-teen looked like on her bed with his genitals fully exposed and on the verge of a climax, caused by her scent on the pillows and bedsheets, and the silky material of her underwear wrapped around the dripping, throbbing, majestic-looking turgid flesh that begged for a kind, warm touch to be relieved from its molten liquid pressure. Jiang Yan Li fidgeted at the bedside, staring at her foster younger brother and her gaze was locked on his naked torso, slim waist and of course, that nest of curls matted with sweat and a boy's virile, wanting juices.

Wei Ying nicely apologized with a kowtow on the floor, and acted like a real gentleman by holding her hands and serving her tea, without putting back on his pants because he was not explicitly asked to. Jiang Cheng was sent away to the gardens to play outside, and the boy thought no more of it, because playing with a ball with candies in his mouth seemed more appealing than standing by the main doorways. The door to Jiang Yan Li's bedroom closed and locked with a resounding 'click', servants passed by and knocked to enquire if any room service was necessary, but there was no response other than some rustling and rhythmic creaking sounds - and the servants believed that the eldest daughter of the Jiang family was busy studying in the bed. Nobody knew what happened within, until the two reappeared at dinnertime with the rest of the family, pink on the shiny rosy complexion, freshly showered and smelling fragrant, a little shy and timid at each other - many hours later that day.

(It may be worth noting that in an agrarian society of the 2000 B.C. era, families tend to be large with girls being married off at a very young age to be sold off for a hefty price, or to start producing more helping hands to work at the farms needed to generate enough food to feed their families. It was not uncommon for Middle Kingdom children to discover about sex at a very early, and rather inappropriate age, and lose their virginities before they finished their basic education. Girls from the lower scales of society were, unfortunately, at an disadvantage since they lived and shared beds with brothers, fathers and uncles, thus teenage pregnancies were rampant, even normalized because that happened everywhere and old-fashioned patriarchal traditions demanded that girls transitioned to motherhood even before they were good enough to cook meals in the kitchen, rather than the other way around, particularly to satisfy perverted but filthy rich husbands or male-dominated families. Jiang Yan Li had been extremely fortunate to be borned into the family of a sect leader and given the freedom to choose the many aspects of her life; even if she had been prematurely engaged with a man from another clan since birth, she could enjoy frolicking with other boys of her age as long as she did not break any rules or cross certain lines - some her friends were already mothers of boisterous toddlers by the time she went to study at the Cloud Recesses, and many would live to see their grandchildren by their thirties.

Whether or not Wei Wuxian engaged in any romantic or sexual relationship with his foster sister was questionable but never verified. He harboured very deep respect and strong feelings for his sister that sometimes bordered love and want, and always appeared to be the sweet, cherished A-Xian, the golden apple in her eyes - at least to the outside world. Jiang Cheng would've been too young to notice anything, if any, and he would remember playing with his ball alone in the gardens on some afternoons, with candies and snacks gifted by his foster elder siblings to keep him out of the bedrooms of their home, and to keep him silent on what really went on inside the Jiang house, while servants buzzed around, ignorant and not daring to raise eyebrows even when suspicious behaviours occurred right inside the Jiang gu niang 's room.)

.

With the Tower grounds devoid of guests a little past ten at night, and with few servants milling about to pack everything up until the next dinner party scheduled at sundown the following day, the couple found themselves a little playground in pockets of manicured springflower lawns complemented with little man-made fountains and cascading waterfalls, cherry blossom groves or unoccupied and unlit buildings unattended by patrolling guards; Wei Ying could've sent them stumbling away in amnesia and confusion, but with the atmosphere winding down for the placid, restful night, he could stroll around while holding Lan Zhan's hand, like lovers going for a relaxed date in the dark and under the starless moonlight, without attracting any unwanted attention from Jin soldiers that prowled around the Carp Tower.

They were invariably spotted and stopped a couple of times by passing-by patrols, but without any swords on them, they were let off after giving stern warning for civilians not to trespass the area at such a late hour. Wei Ying didn't carry any dangerous-looking equipment other than a harmless walking cane which concealed the Ernie-enhanced Chenqing, and Lan Zhan's Bichen was easily nom-nom'ed by the adorable fluffy Ni-er in a single gulp, who then hid inside the man's sleeves and continued to gurgle like a babe and nibble on his arms with droolly toothless pink gums. It wasn't a threatening sight at all - a thin bony man who walked with a limp to suggest that he was handicapped, and his partner, a tubby man who struggled with his weight and burgeoning waistline to tread the path without losing his breath after every ten paces.

Wei Ying lamented the loss of a chance to sneak into the Carp Tower to conduct a thorough search for any evidence that may implicate Grand Cultivation Council or the entire farce of a massacre masqueraded as a competitive night hunt event.

"Your animosity against the Council, and the world of cultivation, in general, is well established," Lan Zhan commented, once they were out of sight of the patrols - and he quickly held the other man's hand like a shy, timid boyfriend (girlfriend, husband, or wife, even) who was caught by people giving less-than-favourable stares, but couldn't resist going back to bad hand-holding habits after the drama had passed. The Lan man's behaviour could be rather debilitating, sometimes, to the point that he relied on Wei Ying as a source of physical, physiological and emotional comfort, or a walking crutch during harder times.

"True, lao gong . But I've not given up on trying to turn things around in my own special manner so that people eventually ditch the old and stifling, and embrace the new and exciting. Those old sods need to be more open-minded in accepting new ways of doing things, more courageous to stand the test of time, and more capable in dealing with external threats, such as the Imperial forces,” Wei Ying muttered, while gazing up into the sky with a thoughtful look. The moon was bright, nearly full, partially covered with drifting clouds and cast a silver shine upon everything in the landscape. Springtime breeze blew and the air turned crisp and fresh, albeit a little frosty. Somewhere far away, owls and other birds of the night called, joining an orchestra of crescendoing crickets and other insect chittering.

Lan Zhan stopped in his steps. He opened his mouth and wanted to ask if Wei Ying had mis-said and mis-spelled anything.

Wei Ying giggled and released his entwined fingers, then briskly jogged to an empty building - an empty dormitory building vacated after its originally assigned sect had been obliterated on New Year’s day, and their camp dismantled.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, it’s boring to talk about serious political matters when the night is so young,” Wei Ying called back once he stood at the door - and easily opened it, because nobody lived there, there were no valuable belongings, so the guards left it unlocked. The young man gripped the doorframe and lay flat against it while standing. Then, not shockingly, he started to hump the vertical wood.

“ Gege , gege , my didi is so itchy... please play touch-touch with my penis?” he said out loud, and Lan Zhan nearly had a heart attack. The older man hissed at the partner to keep it down, and he scanned around in alarm for any approaching footsteps or eavesdroppers.

“Oh don’t be embarrassed. I’m willing to take the role as your lao po tonight. Sex’s on me, knock me up and rape me, big boy! You had your incestuous bro-con moment during dinnertime, while I was working my ass off to decontaminate an infected man. Give me some hot lovin’... gege !” Wei Ying kept rattling off to incite and incense the other man further. He started to masturbate himself furiously by sliding the thin doorframe between his legs. His hips swayed, he made little sexy mewling noises, and his facial expression was insufferable - a combination of acting in the throes of an orgasm, ridiculing the older man, and mocking his suffering, all at the same time.

Wei Ying dumped the unsexy worn-out doorframe after a minute of crude rubbing that probably left stains on his pants and on the wood, then merrily skipped into the building with Lan Zhan rushing from behind, calling out his name again and again - voices that echoed the surrounding woods and with nary a soul in the proximity to witness their little game of cat and mouse. Although it was a small building meant to house a small group of people, there were several rooms that spiralled around a staircase; Lan Zhan had to listen to Wei Ying’s echoing laughter and running footsteps, peek into various bedrooms, common rooms and lounging areas, raid cupboards and closets, before he was greeted by the obscene view of Wei Ying humping against a table’s edge, pantless. The pants and loincloth were discarded somewhere in a vacant bedroom, and Wei Ying perfectly leaned on the table, face down, so that his naked bubble buttocks faced Lan Zhan’s line of sight, and his cute plump twin eggs were sandwiched between hairy pubes and the hard teakwood surface.

“ Gege , didi is a bad boy, please punish this naughty didi ? Please make didi feel good” then two hands reach to the back to spread his ass to reveal the dark, tanned and slightly hairy anus. Wei Ying exercised his anal sphincter muscles and made that opening kiss the air like juicy puffy lips - and farted, consequently.

“Ah, you incestuous gege ! You know that incest is the best, but why aren’t you laying your hands on this didi ? Don’t you want to re-live your fantasies of being the bad gege raping his little didi ’s ass? Mmmh! Spank me, gege , this didi has been very naughty!” Wei Ying cried out and cackled in the end. Lan Zhan gritted his teeth and balled his fists - he was getting provoked, and for very good reasons. He raced to the scene where Wei Ying straddled that table’s edge and started to make sweet love with that hapless furniture until rhythmic creaks could be heard; his hips bounced up and down, back and forth, in the timeless act of riding a lover. Lan Zhan’s horniness skyrocketed and he started to pant because his blood pressure shot up, his loins were on fire and poked out nearly vertically from his tented pants.

Then, Wei Ying flipped over, back resting on the table’s surface, and Lan Zhan’s eyes widened. He watched, bewitched and captivated, how the laws limits of sex-infused shapeshifting were blatantly bulldozed, right in front of his crumbling hold on sanity and traditional Lan family virtues. The younger man laughed merrily and reached down to his nude but very hairy crotch and started to stroke himself with strong, rapid fist-pumps. The other hand snaked down a little further, lifted the balls, and lo and behold - reached into the perfect moist, plump pussy lips that appeared where the man’s twitching perineum should be. That offending hand spread out its fingers, and one, then two slid in so sexily, emerging only to be coated with shiny, slick sexual juices, before dipping in again and again, scissoring and spreading those inviting pink lips, drawing the older man in deep into the oh-so-wonderful tunnel within.

“ Gege , if you don’t find this didi that appealing... then, how about meimei ? Ah, gege , please make love with meimei ’s pussy and spray all your hot seed inside! You want to make lots of twins, triplet babies inside meimei ’s tight young womb, don’t you?” the man-turned-dickgirl guffawed so rudely in a cracked, manly voice, that it almost made the whole atmosphere un-

erotic. Lan Zhan looked up and wanted to chastised the man for breaking sexual barriers that were meant to keep the order of nature, but he was aghast - and strangely, shockingly, very sexually stimulated - to see that Wei Ying had sported two large milkjugs on his chest. Wei Ying winked at him and pouted his kissy lips, then the hand that had furiously masturbated his hairy penis before, reached back up to jiggle those milky-white breasts. "Suck 'em, gege , suck meimei 's boobs while fucking your little sister and impregnate her lots and lots!" he shouted and Lan Zhan wanted to fall dead from the dread of being associated with such madness and vile gender corruptive behaviours.

Wei Ying cheerfully noticed that the older man was rooted to the spot with a tornado of incomprehension running through his mind until he was literally paralyzed from not know what to do next - indecision was Wei Ying's favourite flaw about his darling man, after all -, and so, he spread his legs and hooked them behind Lan Zhan's rear, and drew him in, like a deadly black widow spider pulling in its prey into its jaws of sexual depravity, ready to devour the man in many tasty sexual intercourses of the male and female kinds, and wring him dry once again.

When the younger man, who appeared with breasts and a vagina, twirled a finger and shrunk, then de-aged to his pre-teen form - now a nubile maiden sporting a dick - Lan Zhan's rational mind finally broke with a tsunami of pedophilic lusts bursting out from within like a volcano gone wild, and he gratefully shut down his thinking processes, to bed the child-Wei Ying with the flaming desires of a grown up man wanting nothing but to fuck the boy-girl so hard, so deep and so fast with such titillating rapidfire thrusts, hips pounding crazily because it was unthinkable to be drinking milk lactating from sweet fatty breasts, hands squeezing and gleefully playing a boy's abused penis - all at the same time; everything didn't add up inside his mind, but he wasn't able to think and function properly, while his own adult hairy penis drilled a prepubescent nubile young girl's deliciously hot pussy and pounded his-her uterus with such joy, relishing the unbelievable exhilaration of fulfilling one's sexual needs of both genders at once, until he can, in his irrational mind, father another generation of boy-girl Wei Yings inside the man-woman-boy-girl's lovely elastic and tight womb that continued to knead and massage his exceedingly excited penis, thirty, fifty, hundreds of times after many, many wonderful orgasms, ejaculating endlessly, flooding the child's womb while feeling that said child's teaspoonful of semen painting his adult pubic hair and extra squirts of a pregnant underaged girl's milk in his mouth, moaning, crying and howling with animalistic pleasures, his body seized and convulsed with such terrifying new sexual heights, transcending his peaks with fluttering, erratic fucking undulating hip motions, eyes rolled back, drool hanging from his lips and toes curled with pleasure, crushing the child-Wei Ying with his obese weight and rolling tummy fat because he lusted to penetrate deeper, shoving, cramming his penis inside the stretched freshly deflowered birth canal, fat penis destroying that child's vagina effortlessly then inseminating like a bull cumming inside a fragile warm plate of creampie, later, pummeling greedily inside a boy's shuddering rectum, playing with those adorable little testicles until they swell and orgasmed like jiggling sweet little grapes that he wanted to lick, suck and consume in their entirety, he loved Wei Ying so much for the crazy sex that was gifted and offered to him on a daily basis, that he wished only to melt and mold his body, mind and soul with the cackling Wei Ying-ness beneath him, inside an empty bedroom of a deserted building, somewhere nestled in the heart of Lanling.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

EDIT: Added more yummy descriptions!

Chapter 170

In the dimness of a dormitory bedroom, one could hardly make out the outlines of the sparse furniture that decorated the room through a very small window with a beam of silvery moonlight flooding through it. Most of the objects were broken, flipped over or cracked - cum-stained rumpled bedsheets, destroyed chairs and tables that had splintered from the force of two men mating like animals, footsteps and handprints made of sweat and other unspeakable bodily fluids all over the place; because at some point, one very horny and excited man spooned the other whilst the couple walked all over the room, like a man-train of sorts, and kept drilling in and out, begging the younger man to stop moving around and be properly fucked, and of course, the insufferable one wouldn't listen, and continued to pace around like a fucking trainwreck, dripping seed all over the place until the carpets were dirtied beyond salvageable condition - the room was definitely condemned to ruin.

Enough semen had been blasted into a child's young tight womb to rape and fertilize all baby eggs housed inside the ovaries and conceive plenty of twins and triplets for generations to come - although the opening eventually disappeared beneath the ballsacks and the fate of the deposited seed remained unknown; the anus had been thoroughly inseminated to impregnate a male, by another male - even the belly bulged because so much gooey goodness had been planted into the receptacle of a man's lustful passion; those lovely plump milk jugs had been squeezed dry repeatedly from a man's hunger for breastmilk and in the throes of climax, there were plenty of nipple-biting, crazed suckling and finger-kneading until every last drop was gleefully emptied out; in moments of homosexual frenzy, men exchanged their sperms with such eagerness when a hollow straw was stuck and shared between excited, swelling and spasming pee-slits, and they fucked and rubbed each other using that unfortunate straw until the point of simultaneous powerful ejaculations - it was such a romantic display of male-male love, that both knew that they were truly, two individuals joined to become one.

Thus, in the aftermath of an apocalyptic scene of sexual carnage, the two men lay on the soiled floor, trying hard to catch their breaths and let their loins rest, because they knew too well that round two wasn't too far away. There was time for a bit of chit chat between lovers; in the tranquil, almost too quiet inky darkness where all senses seemed numbed and unresponsive besides sound, a private conversation between husband and wife ensued.

“Ah, Lan Zhan, you were a beast! Now I know you love shemales or dickgirls as much as I love to twist my perversions to test your patience, and your limits!”

(An indignant snort to futilely refute the claim. Swishing sounds of bare feet rubbing against one another. Wei Ying likes to slide his shins against the other man's and use his toes to graze the skin wherever he could reach. Lan Zhan nnnh'd when a particularly sharp toenail struck the sensitive arch of his foot.)

“Ha ha, I was delighted when I transformed myself into your favourite meimei and bared my privates to you, and said that it felt itchy inside... oh my goodness, the look on your flushed face was priceless! You went wild between my legs and even said that ‘gege will scratch the itch with his penis’! How bold of you to say that, Mister virtuous and holy Hanguang Jun!

And that ‘how does that feel, meimei , is gege scratching your itch? Does it feel good to have that itch scratched by gege 's penis? Gege will try harder and faster to make you feel better’... oh heavens, when did you learn to talk dirty like that! ”

(Another annoyed nnngh. The incessant mocking wasn't doing much to help the older man rest and recover, not when his testicles were happily drained but his ever-aroused boner refused to go to sleep, not when Wei Ying was by his side, perverting the atmosphere with vulgar chatter.)

(Wei Ying seemed to cross his arms behind his head and he laughed at the irony and the reality of their relationship.)

“Lan Wang Ji made Wei Wuxian gay, because that brilliant young man with a bright, promising future had been as straight as an arrow before he met him, sixteen years ago.

And after resurrection and barely more than a year later, Wei Wuxian turned Lan Wang Ji into a man suffering from a debilitating triple combo of god, hero and perfection complexes, who is addicted to being cuckolded and shows a masochistic streak, and is now a fat, balding gay rapist pedophile who preys on little boys and girls and all things Wei Ying-flavoured. Oh, how far he hath fallen from grace as a once virtuous man that defined perfection during this age and time! Shameful, truly shameful!”

(A bark of dramatic laughter, a sense of accomplishment to have truly defeated, conquered and perverted the man who would've become a legendary hero, a Chief Cultivator and the greatest Sect Leader in the history of Man, were it not for Wei Ying's terrible sexual corruptions that led that man to revert to a mundane civilian blessed with a very active, lively sex life.)

(A pregnant pause.)

“Wei Ying?”

“Mmm?”

“Did... you fall in love with me, sixteen years ago?”

(Another heart-stopping wait that lasted for fifteen seconds.)

“I... I can't really say so. I had feelings for you, but I couldn't identify that feeling at that time - that's the truth. So many terrible things happened in-between, and our relationship had soured, turned rocky and then bitter towards the end. I thought you hated me, which we know isn't true, but that stopped me from expressing those feelings in words and developing them towards you. If anything, Lan Zhan, we were robbed of our youths and a chance to prosper and flourish in our clans due to the Yin Metal fiasco and the inevitable war with the Qishan Wen.”

“Mn.” (The unsaid was, and Wei Ying totally heard it even though it wasn't verbalized - “It's alright, I understand. Neither of us are to be blamed for what happened.”)

(One vocalized word, and Wei Ying thought they were done. He reached down his naked crotch to start masturbating and prepping for round two, but Lan Zhan's pensive mood cut his fun short.)

"Wei Ying."

"... what?" (An impatient huff.)

"Do... you ever think about how different things could've been, if that disaster didn't happen sixteen years ago? If everyone was still around. If we continued our lives in peace."

(The younger man reached up to scratch his head, and belatedly realized he probably just smeared someone's cum and pubes into his hair. He could feel a disgusting ticklish tug on his fingers, there was definitely pubic hair sticking out somewhere, coiled and wrapped around his fingertips.)

"Eh... let's see... Jiang Cheng and I would eventually grow up to become the quintessential half of the fabled Twin Heroes of Yunmeng, that's for sure. My brother would take over the helm for the clan from our parents, I'd be fighting by his side and never go near the Dark Arts. Heck, I might've even sparred with Jin Zixuan to get that engagement with my shijie cancelled using my wits, because he was my number one enemy back then. You might not know this - when I hit puberty, I was so determined to protect my shijie and to love her, that I swore to kick every other boys' ass to make sure they wouldn't dare to court her without my permission.

After that, to make sure no other incompetent and disrespectful foolish men get their hands on her and potentially hurt her heart, I'd convince everyone to support me in getting hitched and married to her, to kill the competition once and for all. It's selfish for various reasons, I know. That kind of plot twist is written in almost every male-fantasy novel featuring how a man, an outsider of a family, marries into that family so that he could finally gain social and political acceptance - and I'm no different.

“Lan Zhan... Secretly, I'd planned to impress my foster parents with my awesome abilities and skills to cement my position to remain in the Jiang family, and use my loyalty and promises to the family members as a bargaining chip to get Jiang Cheng to endorse the relationship between shijie and I. That would surely persuade even Madam Yu to agree for me to have Jiang Yanli's hand in marriage. With the three siblings united, the Yunmeng Jiang would've prospered and become one of the most influential, glorious sects in the Middle Kingdom, that's for sure!” (the voice broke, a wistful smile hidden from view.) ”

(A rustle of clothes, and Wei Ying knew that blazing laser eyes were drilling holes at him in bewilderment, upset, shock and all sorts of emotions running through the other man's face - behind the curtain of darkness, fortunately.)

“... where would I be, in that picture?”

(A scratching on the chin.)

“You? Oh, Lan Zhan, it's hard to say. Maybe we'll still be good friends. Comrades. Brothers-in-arms that fight battles against evil, side by side, when our greater purpose is called for. I reckoned even Nie Huaisang will be roped into our unholy triumvirate, because you can't ignore the Qinghe Nies - not when your older brother swore a brotherhood across three sects with Nie Mingjue and Jin Guangyao - no, Mengyao. You'll probably still stay single though. You wouldn't even go near a flowery brothel, let alone try your hand in pursuing girls. You're asexual, if it weren't for me."

(Lan Zhan didn't like how atrociously accurate he was described.)

"Asexual." (It was neither a question nor a statement.)

"Yeah... you know, unsexy, not interested in pursuing deeper relationships with either genders, not interested in romance or to settle down and start a family. As cold as an ice prince on a cold dead fish, a dead-end on a family tree's branches. All that stuff. You were not cut out for it, until I changed you. Or, until the events changed us... you know? You'd still be alone, mourning your past, playing your guqin, reading your healers' tomes, studying the four Heavenly arts and all that boring stuff, probably for the rest of your life."

(Yet another pause. Why does conversations with Lan Zhan have to be awkward, sometimes - Wei Ying asked himself.)

"... Then, I'm glad to have met you in this life. You've changed me, even if it meant losing your own family, and you stuck with me. Thank you."

(There was a choked cough, and a sputter of stutters. Wei Ying was suddenly overcome with very, very passionate and grateful, joyful feelings, until he sniffled because he was in tears. He embraced his overweight spouse with all his might to convey those feelings viscerally, and tried to squeeze him so hard that probably fingerprints were imprinted on the fat man's back. It was hard to make out what the two were doing in the dark, other than lots of murmurs of either names again and again, full of want and warmth, bodies entwined and rolling on the floor in synchrony, of lovers declaring their I-love-yous and forever to one another.

Unsurprisingly, Wei Ying felt the heated urge from his swelling heart, this time not so much of wanting to wrung the older man to the last drop, but from feeling such great depths of eternal, universal love for the man he'd called husband and wife in single breath, forever and beyond. He deftly maneuvered himself to straddle Lan Zhan and made sure that the man was very, very well rewarded for being such a sweetie, and that he was made love to very, very nicely, until the latter degenerated into another hour-long mess of very, very excited one-tuos in snug cocksleeves made from Wei Ying's tenderness and hot lovin', penis-in-ass and penis-in-vagina creampie, spectacular spurting ejaculations, squirting fluids when all muscles lost their control along with rational thought, howls of absolute nirvanic pleasures, and of orgasming souls soaring together to greater heights of higher orders than the grand cosmos itself.)

At some point, Lan Zhan asked at a rather inopportune moment, because he still wasn't satisfied with lingering questions running inside his mind, and while engaging in tasty male-male homosexual intercourse, drilling his penis into Wei Ying's stretched and cum-flooded ass doggie style, of whether the younger man had experienced sex with the opposite gender before they met, and if so, how would Wei Ying rate sex with him versus the individuals of the supposedly better choice of gender when it came to quick romps behind the bushes or romantic couples' lovemaking beneath blankets.

“Hah? You’re asking me that while we’re fucking like rabbits! Lan Zhan, do you still feel insecure and fear infidelity?” Wei Ying laughed but deliberately avoided the question of whether he had ever engaged in sex with a woman, or even lost his male virginity to one - and grind his buttocks so sensually hard against Lan Zhan’s crotch, then drew circles and squares with those muscular glutes until that hapless, imprisoned man moaned terribly loudly and saw stars in his vision. Lan Zhan nnnh’d partly from being insulted and from the delicious extra friction and tightness around his leaking, overexcited didi .

“Here’s my answer. You’re as handsome as any nobleman would be after his mid-life crisis, you’re soft like a woman with all that layers of fat on your body, you’re emotionally insecure like a balding man that you already are and that’s why I love you, you moan like a shy maiden in heat every time I seduce you, you smell like fragrant sandalwood mixed with a man’s smelly cum left to dry on armpit hair overnight, and yes, you taste like one too - delicious in every nook and cranny, inexplicably appealing to my senses, very attractive to my eyes, and the one and only that my heart wants. Does that answer your question?”

Lan Zhan paused in mid-fuck to digest those lovely descriptions about their mutual love. When he finally comprehended, he flipped Wei Ying over like a pancake on a skewer, then kissed him so, so deeply and with such fervent passion - no more words were needed -, that Wei Ying giggled and spread his legs wider to welcome that man of his life into his innermost, deepest intimate sanctum and lovely, lovely secret garden filled with fertile flowers and cute baby Wei Yings waiting in anticipation for the next glorious orgasmic shower of baby Wang Jis, inside his ass.

The moon had reached a high point in the night sky, and its light illuminated the couple through the small window, with Lan Zhan’s quivering and pistoning sweaty, muscled pale buttocks mooning back with renewed vigour.

.

It was shortly before midnight when the couple was done with their perennial mating behaviours, and decided to find a spot to spend the night. It was too late to locate an inn in the city outside of the Tower's outer walls, so they opted to find an empty dorm in active camps around the Carp Tower and sleep in. An active camp would have the necessities for a decent temporary stay, including room service, hot meals upon request, clean water and security.

As the two scouted around the various emptied camps, inspecting room amenities, furniture, quality and comfort, and the views outside the windows, like looking for a house to rent and buy, they debated whether to stay in Camp Yunmeng Jiang or Camp Gusu Lan - the two camps which they at least know the owners, and had visited the premises before - but probably patrolled by nosy guards and disciples, and the best quarters would've been off-limits anyway. However, inspiration struck and Wei Ying rejected both easy choices. They sneaked into Director Nie's camp - one of the smallest ones, flashed their artsy fans at the guards to show that they were somehow allied with the Qinghe Nies, and the door to the director's private quarters was opened to them.

“Well, you caught a glimpse of us when Director Nie went to receive the results of his first night hunt, didn't you? We're his personal assistants, and we're here to... err... prepare for his return after the second night hunt. Right?” Wei Ying cheerfully explained to the confused Jin-employed guard, and he elbowed the other man, in which Lan Zhan nodded resolutely. The guard didn't recognize the two, but the fans bore the weight of the Director's authority, so they were allowed to saunter in like nobles.

It was a lonely building with just a handful of smaller rooms inside - it looked more like a rustic homestead in the farthest corner of the Carp Tower grounds, which seemed more fitting for a family than a military operations base camp. The couple were tired after a long sex marathon, so they used the bathing pools behind the building, changed into silky pyjama robes freely available in the quarters of sect leaders and certain Very Important Persons, then cuddled up beneath rich satin woolly blankets and luxurious pre-heated bedspreads upon a high, expensive king-sized mattress, in an opulent apartment suite equipped with indoor bathrooms and wide living spaces with cushioned seats and a comforting crackling fireplace, basins of water for freshening up, gilded spittoons, bedside desks filled with toiletries, a kitchenette to let guests prepare simple but wholesome meals, warmed beverages on the table, cupboards loaded with five-star hotel amenities, a cabinet-style pantry filled with tasty local fruits and delicacies, chef-prepared food and lots of packaged snacks, and so much more. It was such a wonderful place to spend the nights and indulge in five-star orgies, that Lan Zhan set his time-controlling alarm clock he fished out of his sleeves (Ni-er coughed it out from her bottomless tummy) to wake them up at 5 o' clock dawn in a few hours' time, three days later.

(Wei Ying also insisted, very generously and with benevolent intentions, for his man to take out the favourite floor mat, and lay it on the floor beside the bed. Lan Zhan nnngh'd in embarrassment and with hidden glee, because that meant he could always slip off the bed anytime and take a quick two-minute 'break' from spending romantic and quality time with his lovely soulmate, and indulge in tasting, breeding and impregnating twenty four thousand orgasmic Wei Ying clones joyfully to add spice into his, their, love life.)

.

Dawn passed and a new day began. The second night hunt had ended and all participants were, by default, supposed to return to their camps to rest and patch up, until dinnertime at the Carp Tower to receive their next hunt's instructions. However, the ceremony to welcome the returnees was cancelled when disaster broke out, and not a single soul reached the Carp Tower or its surrounding grounds.

It was an absolute nightmare, a tragedy of catastrophic proportions, to say the least. The yaoguai s released by the Imperial Court, originally bred and trained to fight at least like respectable mortal warriors and wizards rather than mindless beasts and undeads, were armed with some decent capabilities such as the ability to perform strategic thinking, espionage and multiply so that they wouldn't be wiped out in just a few days - the original plan was derailed without warning, and by the time the officials had noticed the body count, it was too late.

Written on a periodical's editorial whose slightly singed pages were pasted on the notification walls; however, there were no readers:

“From the thousands of sects that joined the Great New Year's Hunt with such pride and enthusiasm in the glory of their clans, only a handful are left as of the third day of the year. Scholars have received pieces of clues and information from returning survivors and the doctors treating them at the field hospitals, to gain an insight on what had gone wrong.

By giving the monsters the ability to think intelligently, and according to anecdotal comments from non-authorized sources, they have found ways to not only withstand the hunt, but to resist their captors and thrive in their new freedom. One glaring example, as seen in more than eighty percent of casualties, was the fact that the monsters evolved their abilities to possess people - a typical ability of yaoguai s -, but at a higher rate and to a deeper extent inside a person's body, to infiltrate the ranks of the sects and the officials working at the Carp Tower since the first night hunt.

After the launch of the second night hunt by sending out celebratory fireworks, the entire Grand Cultivation Council had gone missing from their seats. Investigations point out that the group, along with a handful of guards, had fled the scene along with unimaginable treasures they took with them from the Council's greatest armouries, war chests, and the Jins' own warehouses of golden, enchanted equipment and untold riches inherited by elite noblemen and noblewomen, amongst many other fortunes amassed at the garden compounds of the Carp Tower.

By the dawn of the third day, it was evident that the yaoguai s had gone beyond simple body possession. Numerous reports of disemboweled corpses surfaced as early as midnight onwards, primarily from the expanded Imperial forces led by the mighty Grandmaster Gao, and many witnessed their comrades suddenly bloating up and exploding like 'entrails filled with too much water', resulting in the births of multiple, stronger, more powerful dark creatures that had inhabited inside those possessed bodies. Such possessions had, surprisingly, escaped detection from numerous standard holy talismans and demon-sensing apparatus built into a network within and around the Carp Tower, thus demonstrating the adaptability of the yaoguai to evolve and elude their enemies.

Closer to home, field hospitals became the latest hotbeds of infestation. Doctors and experts in yaoguai bestiary did not expect so many warded, wounded patients from the first night were infested, and the Tower guards were immediately overwhelmed when they hatched en masse . Officials are still trying to locate missing living and dead bodies, including civilians that were last seen near the Carp Tower.

The subsequent waves of advanced yaoguai s spelled doom for many sects, who are ill-equipped to deal with such powerful creatures that used physical, magical and spiritual means to control and defeat their adversaries. One example cited by the sole representative from Qinghe Nie, while on his way back home after officially pulling out of the competition, described how an esteemed, unnamed Gusu Lan man was found outraging the modesty of a boy of Jin origin behind some bushes, which incensed the Yunmeng Jiang sect leader for unclear reasons and declared civil war among the sects. Witnesses confirmed that the Lan man, amongst many other victims from that sect, had been mind-controlled by yaoguai demonic possession, and acted out of line. The perpetrator was last seen taking flight on a sword, chasing after another yaoguai that was quoted to bear resemblance of an old friend or lover. Officials continue to investigate the accusations from the Jiang sect leader, as well as widespread rumours that the yaoguai had gained another ability of shapeshifting; however at present, with many of the people around the Tower's headquarter grounds have disappeared, kidnapped or taken control by yaoguai s, there is little clarity on how and when a conclusion can be reached for final judgement by the now-missing Council."

The grounds around the Carp Tower had been razed during the wee hours of the morning of the third day, with multitudes of deteriorating bodies lying haphazardly on the grass and cobbled pathways. The high-rise column of gold and precious metals was relatively untouched as the main doors remained magically sealed; however, its base floor was splattered with blood, bits of human flesh and torn limbs of those brave men who sacrificed themselves to defend the sacred heart of Lanling. Dead guards littered the gardens and inside burning buildings and collapsed rubble; the freshly killed ones eventually disappeared, dragged into the nearest shrubs or pile of junk; those that had been left overnight turned into desiccated husks, skeletons with their stomachs gouged out. Further away, battalions of Jin soldiers continued to pour into the Tower's compounds and camping grounds with swords, shields and blazing spells, faced with a growing swarm of inhuman darkness. It looked like a war zone in progress, though thanks to the Inabilities that protect a particular solitary house bearing the Qinghe Nie banner, in a far corner of the area, Wei Ying and Lan Zhan were rendered invisible to the hordes of monsters, and enjoyed an uninterrupted night together.

The sun eventually rose, its light smeared bloody red by the billowing smoke, choking the skies against a burning, warring horizon that stretched deep into Lanling province.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 171

The world of cultivation is in complete disarray, and Mankind's societal, political and technological progress has been blasted at least a few centuries back in time. The borders of counties, districts, provinces and states have been redrawn, with new daily battlegrounds between quarrelling clans and warring sects shifting lines in the maps with impunity. Existing cities are increasingly isolated, weakened from the prolonged disunity among men of the same shared legacies and even family names. Frequent attacks from yaoguai and bandits forced the closure of main supply and trade routes, plagues are spreading fast without healers to stem the flow, thus threatening the survival of the citizens of the Middle Kingdom with famine and disease nationwide. Disasters, confusion and misinformation wreaked chaos and havoc everywhere, and without a Chief Cultivator to steer the Grand Cultivation Council, which itself had theoretically been abolished since the New Year, the Imperial Court easily subjugated many sects and wrest control of large swathes of states, provinces and land, and altered people's loyalties through sheer numbers of soldiers sent to force chieftains, mayors and local overlords to hand over their governance and powers using questionable, often corrupted means, in the name and glory of the Emperor of Chang'an - the new center of the Middle Kingdom's universe. However, although the map of the Middle Kingdom looks rather lop-sided with largest slice belonging to the Imperial Court, civil wars continued to rage between families and clans within the Imperial forces. Increasingly, pockets of wilderness and 'no man's lands' at the fringes of civilization and in abandoned, devastated settlements, are growing in numbers and size at an alarming pace, inhabited by evolved yaoguai s who have banded together to form their own society, and pitted themselves against their mortal enemies, Mankind, in an all-out interspecies war to determine who will dominate the lands.

"Men fighting against themselves, men fighting against their neighbours, and men fighting against an alliance of yaoguai , demons, monsters, the undead and all manner of supernatural evil originating from the Dark Arts. I should be proud, being the grandmaster practitioner of the Dark Arts, because this signals the beginning of the fall of Men, and the rise of the Dark ones... you know, my kind of people made by my own brand of magic,” Wei Ying whistled an old Yunmeng folk tune nonchalantly while riding an uncharacteristically obedient Lil’ Apple. The single apple that dangled from a stick in front of the donkey’s face was largely ignored, because Wei Ying has a bad habit of seducing the animal with a juicy fruit, which it had learnt that it wouldn’t get a bite until the next pitstop anyway.

They’ve been on the road for weeks, since deciding on a strategic retreat from the unsalvageable situation at the Carp Tower, which had been seized by Grandmaster Gao and his troops. Wei Ying remembered the distant sight of thousands-strong, predominantly black-brown garbed army rushing in belatedly after the end of the second night hunt and at mid-morning of the third day after New Year. With little resistance from the Jin sect, the Imperial Court easily seized the tower, broke open its doors with their awesome Imperial magic, and took the throne. Lanling fell that day into the hands of the Emperor of Chang’an, and many Jin leaders, champions and elite family members fled into the unknown. By then, Wei Ying and Lan Zhan, the perpetually travelling couple, were at least miles away and headed northwards to safer grounds, away from burning cities, ruined farmlands or decimated villages from the once-proud golden heart of the nation.

“Wei Ying, do not steal credit from others, it is against our family’s rules. The yaoguai aren’t your people, and they weren’t made by you,” Lan Zhan calmly corrected, and pulled his reins to slow down Big Apple. The larger donkey neighed in annoyance, since it had to pander to its overweight master’s whims and pull a cart at the same time, through gradually rolling hills.

The younger man simply “oh” (哦) in acknowledgement and acquiescence, then suddenly he steered Lil’ Apple closer to the other donkey, whispered the other man’s name, and beckoned Lan Zhan with a come-hither motion with his forefinger. Curious, Lan Zhan bowed a little - because he was nearly a foot higher from Big Apple’s bulk and size - to see to his beloved’s request. Wei Ying lunged up from his saddle and stole a sweet lover’s kiss from Lan Zhan’s lips, before giggling and nudging Lil’ Apple with his lower legs and trotting ahead.

“I know, I know! Everything in this world listens to you and is owned by you, oh Almighty God. But don’t forget, everything that belongs to you, my beloved husband and wife, is mine, too!” he called out and waved back. Lan Zhan paused to touch his lips and his ears reddened. He sighed in defeat and nnngh’d in slight annoyance at his partner’s antics, then followed suit to get Big Apple to move forward and catch up with its newfound love - the couple had long ago recognized that their donkeys were homosexual for each other.

The couple travelled by daytime at a snail’s pace with plenty of off-road mini adventures, and rested at night, because the yaoguai were by and large nocturnal creatures except for a few very powerful ones. They were cautious and always kept an eye on anyone - or anything - that approached them, after discovering that a branch of yaoguai had evolved into precursors of incubi and succubi, which the two men feared and hated after they’ve had enough brushes with those kind of monsters in deadly situations, just a few lifetimes ago. Shapeshifters and advanced demonic possessions were a danger to them too; to normal men with little or no magical training, it was impossible distinguish between a real person from a mimic, so it was hard to guess when they would be served poisoned foods in a teahouse, led to a demon’s den by a false innkeeper, or stopped by yaoguai s equipped with their victims’ armour and weapons while posing as sentries.

The younger, more lively man had expressed his dislike for intervening with mundane matters of the Mortal Realm, such as war between champions, states, clans, and kings, which to him felt like outsiders trying to take matters into their own hands and mess everything up, because such interference is abhorred by nature, and thus, the outcome would be unbalanced, unsatisfying, and in all likelihood, causes more unforeseeable problems than intended. Thus, they tried to avoid getting dragged into sect wars, especially since the Gusu Lans were formally declared as arch-nemesis by the Yunmeng Jiang, and the Lanling Jin have sworn to wipe out both for causing their joint miseries in the first place.

At the foot of some picturesque hills covered with springtime grass and dotted with thriving shrubs, Wei Ying climbed out of the saddle to lead Lil' Apple on a slow, reluctant uphill trek, made a little easier with nibbles of a juicy apple to encourage the animal to take one step ahead at a time. "I still can't believe we didn't predict that your brother was possessed by the same kind of lustful demons that consumed the souls of the Lan elder councillors, last winter. If I'd known, I would have ripped those horrible spirits of rapists from the afterlife out of your brother's corrupted golden core. I remembered vividly what those wrinkly dirty smelly old men did to me while I was incapacitated inside the Jingshi by the poisoning plague.. they violated me and scandalized my male dignity in unspeakable ways, and I can only imagine that my poor nephew Jin Ling is traumatized for life after how he suffered in the hands of a demonized Zewu Jun. It's not your brother's fault, but I can empathize why Jiang Cheng went after the throats of those in support of the fallen sect leader of the Lan clan," he mused, while keeping an eye on the apple he was feeding to Lil' Apple, and to make sure that the donkey didn't gobble up the whole fruit in a single bite; fresh produce were becoming harder to come by, since remaining towns and villages were cordoned off and refused to let the couple in to buy any provisions; the amount of stuff they can loot from abandoned settlements dwindled day by day, after all.

(The option to call for an instant intergalactic delivery via the extra-dimensional Bags of Holding was an option, but the couple decided not to use their powers recklessly as before.)

“Mn. I’m very concerned and almost wished to join the rebelling cultivators’ pursuit to catch my gege, exorcise the *yaoguai*s to the Nine Hells, and clear his name for the sake of my former sect. However, I’m mindful that by taking sides, that could endanger our well-being by putting ourselves in the line of fire between those who seek to right what is wrong, and those who are blindly loyal in serving the Imperial’s agendas without care of virtues, righteousness and the true noble spirit of cultivator-dom,” Lan Zhan shared his thoughts. Wei Ying knew that when the man spoke at length, it meant he was stressed, sought to analyse the situation to the last dot to explain himself, and would be restless and disturbed about the issue for a long while. The younger man held out his free hand, and Lan Zhan quietly, but gratefully grabbed it. Frequent hand-holding during their roadtrip had become the couple’s refuge for intimacy and connection when they were busy travelling in a world that had pretty much gone south. Big Apple snorted in envy at the back as it lagged behind on the gradual slope, because the cart was quite heavy with camping gear and knick knacks the couple had collected over the course of their journey.

The sun was high in the sky, a chilly breeze blew and there were hardly any clouds at all. The weather was mild and pleasant, the air crisp and very fresh, perfect as springtime alpine minus the thick layers of frost and snow that usually blanketed the region for much of the year, add in extra carpets of dew-covered short grass pockmarked with cute white and yellow blooms upon moist shallow soil after early morning drizzles. One could see as far as the shores of the Great Northeastern coastlines on one side, and more mountain peaks and rolling hills on the other, criss-crossed with well-trodden dirt trails, faraway villages in the pine forest clearings, and dense tree canopies in remote areas. The couple was mesmerized by nature’s beauty and the freshness that greeted their senses, that they fell silent and slowly made their way up, their conversation paused in between moments of admiring the pretty scenery.

“I just hope when this blows over, everyone will make peace with each other and forget this entire episode. My poor juniors... surely they’ll be divided by factions and ideologies, and it’ll be tough to reconcile once someone draws blood, or worse, take a life, due to these disputes,” Wei Ying said after a while, and popped the whole fruit in his hand into the donkey’s mouth, because he was getting tired (and lazy) of holding a fruit and acting like a responsible owner for an animal. Then he barked out that they were taking a break, despite just taking less than fifty steps up the hill, and Lan Zhan grunted wordlessly, visibly out of breath; one could either blame the thinner air at higher elevations at fifty paces above sea level, or simply that his body wasn’t cut out for holding up his hefty weight and bulk.

Both beasts of burden had their harnesses taken off, and were allowed to roam around freely. Wei Ying started to unpack some items tied in bundles under the tarp covering the cart, while Lan Zhan sat on the ground in the shadow of the said cart, a little dazed and light-headed from the mountain-climbing expedition that had hardly begun. “Here,” Wei Ying said, and handed a bamboo container containing some pine needle-flavoured water made earlier that day, “Drink this, lao po, it’ll help to cool your overheated body and give you an extra boost of energy.” The wife-y took the offered drink and gulped it down quickly.

“Wei Ying,” Lan Zhan rued without really showing dismay on his face, when his lungs weren’t bursting for oxygen anymore, “Will I always be the wife?” It wasn’t really a question, Wei Ying could tell.

He crouched down and sneaked his hands around Lan Zhan's waist from the side. The man mmm'd and hugged his older spouse, then rocked the two of them gently, intimately. "Why? Aren't you happy to have a husband like me? Aren't I providing for the both of us, and leading us to where we want to go? Aren't I good enough in bed?" he asked teasingly.

Lan Zhan nnngh'd and refused to answer; he realized that Wei Ying had taken on a bullying persona and he didn't want to be degraded further, as inferior already as he already was.

A couple of light puffs into the man's ear, and beet-red Lan Zhan squirmed inside Wei Ying's embrace. "Hmm? No response? Are you afraid to answer back? Or... are you..." the younger man murmured, then started peppering kisses and sweet licks to sexually assault one shell of the ear, as one hand started to grope the fatty midriff to jiggle a sensuously soft layer, and the other hand busied itself to reach down, capture the special package between the man's legs with lewd grasping fingers - no matter how often Lan Zhan desperately tightened and closed his thighs, his genitals kept poking out of the pants anyway simply because he is a man -, and started to massage the vulnerable, defenceless but generously ballooning organs until a wet patch formed on the tip of the tented pants.

"... Trying to provoke me? Start a fight to see who tops? Demand a reversal in our relationship? Why on earth would you stop wanting to be my wife, when you have all these marvellous things given to you, at your fingertips?" Each question was punctuated with an affectionate pinch on the nipple, a demanding fingernail-graze on the navel, a nnngh-inducing swat on the buttocks, a aaahn-ing grip around those sensitive fragile man-eggs that would be rolled between calloused fingers in oooh-ing kneading motions, and most tantalizing of all, a said fingertip that kept circling and scratching maddeningly at Lan Zhan's purple-red cockslit at the edge of his bursting erection, twitching angrily that Yes Yes Please Give Me More Yes and sputtering pre-cum excitedly all over the inside of his pants.

Lan Zhan's hasty, foolhardy question triggered the sadistic side inside his spouse, and although his mind yelled at him to run, his body relished in being tormented, scolded, and each time pain coursed through his nerve-ends from a tweaked nipple, soreness from being pinched on the skin, or throbbing from being spanked on his erogenous zones; Lan Zhan nnnh'd and aaahn'd like a desperate fool by the horse cart, trapped on the ground by his own desire to be manipulated, to be enslaved and be put into servitude, to be toyed and roughly manhandled to his beloved's whims. His body flushed into sexy reds, beads of sweat began to pool on his abdomen dribbling to the pockets between his pectorals because his belly was a quivering mountain with each passing moan, his hips rose and jerked uncontrollably, because Wei Ying had inserted one hand into his pants, yanked out the flimsy defenceless loincloth, and violently stroke the man that his cock twitched like the hands of a clock gone circles and speared up and down wildly into thin air.

“Don't you dare apologize and retract your question! You asked for it, you deserve it, you naughty boy!” Wei Ying hissed with glee, and pressed the man against the wall of the cart. Cornered, crushed and imprisoned by his thin bony spouse looming above him, Lan Zhan closed his eyes and stopped struggling; he reached down to peel his pants off willingly, then unbuttoned his robes and undershirt, and begged his spouse with just one word in a hoarse, shuddering voice, “Please.”

Wei Ying licked his lips at the banquet served to him on mid-morning break, hidden in the shadows behind a large horse cart. He proceeded to straddle the helpless man and fucked himself without much preparation, onto Lan Zhan's magnificent over-six inch arousal sticking proudly between his shivering chubby thundering thighs. Hands continued to roughly yank at puffy, inflamed nipples upon jiggly, sagging man-breasts, and scratched and slapped without care at the jelly-like vast playground that was Lan Zhan's rounded mound of portly belly fat. Lan Zhan grunted like a beast, because his penis was exceedingly lustful with so much pain, bruises, stifled screams, and shame coursing through his voicebox and veins, and he pumped his hips crazily up and down until his legs cramped and the small of his back ached from overwork, but his penis wanted to plunge and plunder into his sweet, sweet love tunnel that was Wei Ying's rosebud anus, and desperately craved for more moistness, tightness and heat that only Wei Ying's rectum could lovingly squeeze him and offer depraved masochistic juicy fucks that sent the Lan man to heaven and hell simultaneously, in pleasurable waves of muscular contractions from deep inside his pelvis like a pregnant slut, and he allowed himself to orgasm from the inside, prostate trembling and squirting honeyed milky nectar in the rhythm of one-twos, his jaws slacked and eyes rolled back, fluttering involuntarily against the sunlight and Wei Ying's face in his vision, stars sparkle around the image of his God, his Wei Ying, smiling evilly with fangs bared, his fingers grasped blindly at the grass around him, clawing the dirt just as his heels dug deep from the imminent climax, the scratches and slapmarks throbbed to hard, bite marks and hickeys all over his rosy sweaty skin seduced his soul and marked it with Wei Ying's name like a glowing-hot branding iron, his nipples were volcanoes spouting bruising aches, and then finally, finally, succumbing to the wonderful sensations of losing control of his orgasm reflex and bladder, that he drunkenly urinated and ejaculated into Wei Ying in an inebriated state of clusterfucked Wei Ying-owned brand of sadistic sex.

Wei Ying, however, cackled and continued to ride the writhing obese mess of jiggling flesh, throaty moans and excited shudders, well after milky-white semen started to trickle out from where their bodies joined and pooled unto the unfortunate hillside grass beneath the copulating men. Every time Lan Zhan tire and begged for mercy for respite, because he'd been emptied too many times and had nothing left to spill, Wei Ying simply leaned back, which sent jolts of unwanted pleasure to the dying penis and rocking hips that had burnt out from fatigue and exertion, and yet forcibly received more mind-blowing friction that it could no longer handle, and the man reached behind, pointed his index finger to somewhere between the sobbing man's hefty thighs, and sent bolts of life-giving Energy straight into the two pruny, dangling testicles. The man-eggs revived magically with renewed zest and eagerness, sending another surge of unwelcomed lust straight into the man's loins and his pelvis bucked like an excited rabbit's, drilling lovingly, enslaved, mating inside Wei Ying's deep, dark prison of homosexual carnal pleasures.

The couple continued to make love during their mid-morning break, and Wei Ying had a marvellous time reverse-raping his man and turned him into a docile, obedient, moaning and lovingly timid fucking machine wife-y.

.

“Eh? Where have the two asses gone? My own ass is bent out of shape, and I need those animals if I'm to continue my journey!” Wei Ying cried out while straightening his back and trying to adjust his bow-legged stance; he'd been fucked so much by Lan Zhan that his hips looked nearly permanently split. He looked around for a bit and even squinted to see as far as the horizon stretched before giving up, because running up and down a hill wasn't all that fun especially with the late morning sun bearing down on them.

After considering his options, he shouted, “I'm taking out our important possessions from the cart first, because we may need to hike a bit to locate the animals, and I don't want any of these to be ruined by a freak thunderstorm or stolen while we're away! Can you guys finish up soon, so that our husband can get to work like he's supposed to?” and started rummaging the cart. There were plenty of heavy camping gear taken from the Carp Tower's camping grounds, clothes that didn't belong to them, bags of provisions salvaged from abandoned towns, twisted metal ripped from broken swords, and charred wood that would make great fuel for their dinner campfires - even a soiled mattress - which he ignored, and he went for magical items they'd reclaimed from fallen soldiers, their clothes and equipment, and Bags of Holding.

Four "Enn!"s replied in unison and dutifully went back to their wifely duties. Wei Ying had telepathically sought advice from a conference with his, their, kingdom's top rules, officials, and lawyers, after receiving a formal complaint from the man named Lan Wang Ji. After serious deliberations over tasty reverse-rape fucks and violating the unwilling older man's deflowered penis too many times in a row, despite many other pressing matters besieging the empire surnamed Lan, the entire court conceded that on legal and technical grounds, the marriage certificate issued in Cai district of the Gusu province was deemed invalid outside the lands where it was issued. Thus, Wei Ying reluctantly agreed to relinquish his role and revert to becoming the wife to the man named Lan Wang Ji. No sooner after the declaration was made, four additional wives made landfall and gleefully serviced their oft-missed husband; a man in his forties locked his lips with Lan Zhan in deep, passionate tongue-playing kiss; a young but not very bright man in his late teens proceeded to strip then ride him in glorious fertile pelvic-humps without thinking twice; when more than three orgasms had been forcibly extracted from the dying, oversexed man and the anus had to be emptied for round number four, another boy, this time a young teenager, dove straight between the legs to do what he's best known for - deep throating -, causing the victimized husband to cry out in soaring pleasure and loss of rational thought; way, way beneath the harem orgy of many men, a child no older than nine focused intently on pleasing the man's family jewels, giving sensuous circular kneading licks on one particularly traumatized swollen and spasming testicle, while another of his brothers performed rapidfire vacuum-like vibrating suction on the other defenceless hairy testicle, the testes were dual attacked with such eagerness for endless minutes on end, then both individuals switched sides and each testicle received alternative mind-blowing pleasurable treatments, that Lan Zhan hnnngh'd loudly and his hips tremble uncontrollably, loins destroyed by lightning bolts of testicular orgasms cresting one after another, and his penis finally shivered, sputtered like a dying engine, then convulsed thirty times slowly because it was overworked, oozing out diluted semen full of a real husband's milky goodness, spewing weakly in pulses like squeezing a punctured balloon of gooey cream, twitching energetically despite penile muscles cramping up in a desperate cry for a break, straight into the waiting jaws of four Wei Yings who are formally wedded to the lucky man.

Lan Zhan wasn't thinking straight anymore, and he lolled his head from side to side in a feeble attempt to cry out No, Enough, Please, but his hands flailed without control to grab molest every tasty Wei Ying within reach, his hips couldn't stop shaking when he was deliciously breeding one Wei Ying after another, whether doggie style or missionary, his back ached from pumping his lower rear so diligently, plundering the rosebuds and blossoming flowers presented to him on the hillside lawn on one beautiful springtime morning, a buck rutting into his harem mates crazily in a holy, godly mission to father imaginary babies inside fertile fat healthy wombs; he roared like a beast in heat when very, very good feelings coursed through his nerves and meridians, penis snugly held and massaged deep inside his lovely Wei Yings, he wanted to stay inside Wei Ying eternally, a red-hot iron rod lovingly rubbed and polished until it became a great, fearsome blade of sexual carnage; his eyes rolled up again and again, he drooled without even noticing his jaws were slacked, because every Wei Ying kissed and locked their lips with him at every opportunity, nibbled at his puffy nipples, peppering sweet kisses all over his shuddering body, whispering words of love and lust, coaxing the man to vocalize, without clearly thinking, many I Love Yous to his Wei Yings, his wives, his cocksleeves, switching excitedly between a tight tender fifteen-year old rosebud and an warm loving eighteen year old's, before a quick dip into the forty year old's and regretting the hairy loosened experience immediately, but before he lost his erection, he lodged himself between the legs of that nine-year old and felt like the alpha masculine man he should've been, and drilled all four Wei Yings like a machine across multiple thirty-ejaculations and countless orgasms.

The ritual for re-husband-ing Lan Zhan was completed, and the man was left feeling very invigorated spiritually, charged with a new sense of power and respect, his pride swelled back in its place as the alpha family man and the patriarch of sexy horny Wei Ying-kittens, but he was technically nearly dead, physically, from emptying his loins into his wives too frequently and nearly left the Mortal Realm after a spate of heart attacks in-between penis polishings and unending multiple orgasms in a single row, and his pelvis felt like being in the clouds - numbed, drained, floating, weightless, but pleasant. The subtle change from being labelled from a mere, inferior lao po into the wondrous, majestic lao gong was theoretically a change in formality, but the servants of the couple's kingdom would bear the brunt of realigning their culture, edicts, family rules and the ilk.

“ Lao gong , lao gong , when you're up and awake, we really should get going and look for our asses. In the meantime, please lift your ass, because I want to put on the pants for you,” Wei Ying leaned down and gave the newly-minted husband a sweet kiss on the rosy cheeks. Lan Zhan simply “Mn” in a low voice, raised his hips one last time, and watched through lidded eyes at how his beloved wife drew up the pants and tied the drawstrings, then patted at his crotch gently to wish his husbandly genitals a good night - because technically, his bent, well-spent, floppy and limp penis had malfunctioned, undergoing maintenance, and was fast asleep with no chance to wake up in the near future.

His royal attire of pristine-white Gusu Lan robes set, the four other wives helped to carry him up to let him stand, albeit shakily, on his two boneless legs. Four demons of Inabilities materialized around them, and lowered their hands; they had worked hard too, shielding their masters' orgies from the outside world, and they needed a rest.

Wei Ying strapped some bags and whatnots on an unmoving, clearly disorientated and quite unresponsive sleepy-faced Lan Zhan. He sheathed Bichen into its scabbard and tucked the blade to the belt, and dusted off sand and bits of dirt of the husband's robes, like a servile wife. Then, he checked his own gear and made sure they'd taken what they needed, and turned around. Wei da ge , er ge , san ge , and didi grinned back and nodded - mission accomplished. With a snap of fingers, they disappeared from sight along with the demons, and peace reigned on the couple's temporary pitstop next to the rather abandoned-looking horse cart.

“Dear husband, shall we?” Wei Ying winked at the other man and smiled his million-dollar smile. He reached behind and gave Lan Zhan's fatty buttocks a quick pinch.

Lan Zhan jolted from the pain and made a sexy nnnh sound. It was time to move on.

“Mn.”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 172

“Hey, Lan Zhan,” Wei Ying exclaimed, “Look at this! Every dead soldier is stabbed right in the stomach and through the tree, hanging a few feet off the ground. They’re like straw dolls pinned to the tree trunks!” He poked and prodded a few armoured bodies, lifted and released lifeless limbs, just to demonstrate just how pitiful their deaths were. Blood congealed into dried splatters and puddles on wood and torn armour, suggesting that the massacre took place a few days ago. The young man leaned in, took a whiff at another pale, battered and decomposing body - this time, a spellcaster, judging from the corpse’s flowy patterned robes and a few magical potions and talismans left on the belt -, hung up to dry like laundry on a lovely spring day, and wrinkled his nose.

Lan Zhan, however, was more interested in salvaging usable items off the dead men; one by one, potions, talismans, unused daggers, bows and arrows, even satchels containing dried fruits and meat jerky were pickpocketed off like shopping for groceries in a supermarket aisle, then inserted into his sleeves, where his furry little daughter (of sorts) waited in the shadows with her mouth wide open, pink drooly toothless gums nom-nom-ing each object down for safekeeping in her bottomless fuzzy soft tummy. “Wei Ying,” he said, as he wrestled with one pierced mutilated body to pull out a particularly attractive gold-coated sword with shiny dragon motifs sculptured to its hilt and phoenixes carves into the metal - it was covered with dried blood, but Ni-er would make sure to clean it up and sterilize the contaminated surfaces as it travels through her digestive tract -, “Less playing. Check the surroundings for clues. How was this army of twenty elite Imperial soldiers defeated in a single encounter?”

Wei Ying whipped out his walking cane, and immediately, a large glob of cold black slime flew out in all directions, breaking itself into numerous droplets, each precisely landing on every corpse. The young man was left with a shiny golden flute in his hands, and he raised it to his lips gracefully, then played an eerie, shrilly but sad song.

A chilled breeze blew, taking away the sour odours and daytime heat, and the vacuum left behind was quickly filled up by another kind of presence - the lingering feelings of those sent to war without saying goodbye to their loved ones, unfulfilled wishes at the time of death, tormented cries and resentful energies of people struggling with their dying breaths and opened, disemboweled bellies, final memories and images from those whose hearts finally stopped beating. It took about a minute or two, and like a video played in reverse, the black spots gurgled then launched themselves back to Wei Ying's flute and the entire contraption elongated back to its original walking cane form.

Lan Zhan had speedily pocketed everything he found useful, and appeared quite accomplished when he pulled down his sleeves to smooth out any creases, like a wife (now husband) fresh out from a successful trip from the said supermarket. He gave an expectant look to the spouse, one hand on the bulging hip to steady himself, because his back ached from bending a lot to pick up discarded but useful equipment.

“Well, I’ve tried to listen to the deceased’s voices, and that cold black thing performed micro-biopsies and analyzed the samples swabbed from every body,” Wei Ying explained and referenced Ernie’s supercomputing powers, then proceeded to narrate their findings. He paced about the clearing in the forest, and disturbed the remains by using an unfortunate stick to prod the desiccated flesh on dead soldiers’ faces, flipping and twisting fly-infested innards that spilled out from the gaping wounds like twirling spaghetti off a bowl, or for the sake of satisfying one’s revolting curiosity, used that soiled stick to tug the trousers and check if there was a death erection between purple-splotched thighs - if he did find one, he’d diddle it with the wooden tool and then stabbed the swollen, rotten scrotum like piercing cooked, juicy meatballs, hoping that something might squirt and deflate the rude-looking angel lust.

“The first clue is that every soldier was killed by his own, or his comrade’s sword. Those Imperial-style blades are unmistakable even when drenched in blood. Next, nothing of value was taken, so it couldn’t have been mountain bandits or other persons seeking to rob the soldiers’ belongings. Thus, the appropriate follow-up question is, who and why?” he asked himself. After having his fun of examining a few specimens of dead soldiers and mages pinned to the trees, he twirled the blood-stained stick just like how he’d twirl Chenqing long ago, before pointing it to the sky, akin to a mechanical sensor. Lan Zhan wasn’t impressed, and his passive, disinterested demeanour showed. The older man crossed his arms, but then realized that his stomach was protruding, so he shifted his limbs higher to grab the sides of his boobs.

“The air is heavy with residual energies from very powerful Dark creatures. Yaoguai s have been here, and they stink pretty badly to those who can detect their smells. I find the scent quite appealing, though. It has a kind of acidic, nutty quality to it, like a cut of an raw, exotic gamey steak that’s been marinated long enough in the tart citrus juices, strong-flavoured oils and fragrant spices, right before being put into the oven,” Wei Ying continued his self-gratifying explanation, and inexplicably, sniffed the slimy end of the stick, before violently spinning around to heave and retch. Lan Zhan snorted wordlessly, wondering why his spouse has such an extremely morbid fascination to all things undead and vile - perhaps such behaviours elucidated his penchant for the Dark Arts, drawn like iron to magnet.

When Wei Ying regained his composure, he concluded with a huff, “Anyway, that means the yaoguai are behind the massacre. I can think of mind-controlling and soul-possession - both are savage, cruel killing techniques which we’ve witnessed since our trip out of the Carp Tower aeons ago. The soldiers were forced to draw their swords and kill each other. Game over, end of story.” He leaned against a tree and raised an eyebrow smugly.

Lan Zhan wasn’t convinced, though. He patted his sleeves that concealed countless stuff they’d picked up on their way there, at the areas that bordered Lanling and Qinghe provinces - they were clearly thick, high-quality Gusu Lan fabrics, however the cloth was noticeably heavier than it appeared. “Wei Ying,” he said, and deftly pulled out the end of a salvaged, saliva-coated Magics R’ Us dragonhead sceptre to illustrate his point, “This group of soldiers consisted of high ranking champions. Look at the quality of their equipment, some are warrior-generals, some are arch-wizards. Yaoguai with those abilities you mentioned are common these days, and I am hard-pressed to believe that these skilled men did not see through their disguises before the mishap. Something else must be at play... what about those three victims on the ground with their abdomen split open? The radial patterns on the ground that look like shifting sands in a desert? The persistent tremors between the leaves and blades of grass?”

Wei Ying’s expression changed from one of a braggart’s, to a wide-eyed dismayed pout. How could you, he blamed Lan Zhan wordlessly, for tearing his precisely-worded verdict with minute observations. Lan Zhan was unfazed, now being the husband in charge of their relationship, and he simply stared daggers back. ‘Don’t underestimate me. I married you with the smarts to solve our woes, and not to turn around and outsmart me,’ that powerful, glare-oozing stare said. Wei Ying countered without speaking, ‘If you’re so bloody clever, you shouldn’t have asked me to do this first!’ then swatted his dirty stick against the sceptre in Lan Zhan’s hand in a mock-play of sword-fencing. ‘Bastard!’, ‘Asshole!’, ‘Show-off!’ - three unverbilized swats said it all, the clink of wood against metal was unmistakable.

Lan Zhan sighed and wished his spouse to take things a bit more seriously. Half-hearted guesses weren't part of his books, and as Patriarch, he enacted a law against that practice, though Wei Ying continued to break one family rule after another with impunity.

“Wei Ying.” Strike one.

The younger man rolled his eyes and grunted. “You won't like what I'm about to say,” he retorted.

“Wei Ying.” Strike two.

With an ‘Ahh!’ shout in exasperation, Wei Ying flung that broken, abused stick away when he raised his arms in a gesture of surrender. Then he marched to the spot where three bodies were partially hidden in shrubs, and pointed at them, bad smells and swarming flies be damned, “You're right, dear husband, that these three eviscerated individuals were eaten alive by yaoguai after they've been skewered by swords. The carved flesh, half chewed internal organs, and blood stains explains that. Three golden cores are missing too, proof that the yaoguai ate to sate its hunger, and not for the sake of killing or in defense of itself. According to my vast knowledge of the Dark Arts, one yaoguai can feast on three cores at a time, just like a man with his three important meals to last the day.”

Lan Zhan retraced the sceptre back into his sleeves (with nom-nom-ing sounds beneath the rustling cloth), then rubbed his chin. “It makes sense. While I went around rummaging the bodies for their abandoned equipment, I noticed all footprints that had caked in mud and hardened into the dirt had the same Imperial dragonhead marks, and two without. One of those were imprints left by standard cloth and metal-reinforced shoes that cultivators usually wear, the other barefoot. The barefoot one could be a yaoguai, because yaoguai do not conform to human dressing etiquettes, and it had a full meal here,” he mused, and stared at the said patterns on the soil and flattened tender young shoots.

Wei Ying followed his gaze and trudged to near the center of the circular patch of clearing where they stood. It looked like someone had detonated a bomb made of wind or energy waves - not hot enough to burn anything, but powerful enough to steamroll the grass and shrubs flat against the floor, break tree branches in the vicinity (hence plenty of sticks that Wei Ying could use to poke and prod around), and trample smaller trees and turned them into splintered wood. Wei Ying used one foot to tap on the so-called ground zero.

“Right. From the way the victims are plastered to the trees, I can imagine everything was done in a single, sudden blow. There would’ve been not enough time for the soldiers to react, and a swift strike made sure everyone was murdered instantly. The swords in each victim were accurately angled at the moment of impact, so that vital organs were sliced with no mercy, no hesitance, no remorse - be it the heart, the lungs or some major arteries, from one end through to the other and even piercing the hardwood behind the struggling, dying body, with such enviable strength! The force was so great, so clean, that all victims spewed out blood gloriously in showers on the ground in front and beneath them, can’t you see? Such agility, such grace, such precision, such ruthlessness, resulting in blossoms of crimson red both big and small, of splattering fireworks and wavy, circular designs, like painting a masterpiece in mid-Spring, everywhere! Truly a fellow practitioner of the Dark Arts and the way of cruel mass killings!” he exclaimed, and skipped around jovially where the murderers would have stood, perhaps a day or two ago.

Lan Zhan hmph'd and ignored the younger man's ghastly extolling of the beauty of the foul, the diabolical and the wretched, because he was used to the latter's atrocious antics.

“What of Ernie's complete analysis?”

Wei Ying stopped in mid-skip and glared at the husband. ‘How dare you ask about our son's opinion even while I'm celebrating my own discoveries? You insensitive jerk!’ that glare said, eschewing the full truth. Lan Zhan kept his serious gaze, and a battle of unblinking eyes ensued.

Wei Ying finally relented, a couple of seconds later. He shrugged, “Ahhh... this sucks! My conversation with the lingering resentful feelings and residual spiritual energies can only tell so much, about the yaoguai 's wicked attacks, and the mens' last living moments,” then he patted the black walking cane strapped to his belt like a scabbard, and it wiggled its glistening surface delightfully, “This cold black-- err... his scanners finally put the pieces together when the slime traversed on those leaves and blades of grass. There's surplus thrumming vibrations on the surfaces, and an in-depth acoustics and quantum particulate analytics was performed. There's evidence that a powerful song from a xiao flute was played, that captured and manipulated the movements of objects. Dried leaves could be lifted, and rocks could be catapulted at will.” His arms swung and fingers danced energetically to illustrate what telekinesis could do.

Lan Zhan put his hands down. He had the information he needed, but still lacked conviction as to who to pinpoint as the cause of the murders. Something gleamed in his eyes when he remembered one particular sight while he went around rummaging dead bodies for their belongings. He shifted his stance a bit to the left. Wei Ying, who stood right in front of him, followed. Then, Lan Zhan shuffled to the right to try and peek behind the younger man, and Wei Ying fidgeted, then blocked his view by moving in the same direction.

“Wei Ying, you’ve been avoiding one particular corpse since we arrived, and now you won’t let me take a closer look.” Are you hiding something again, he wordlessly asked.

A petulant shake of head.

“I won’t get angry. I won’t scold.”

Another desperate shake of the head until his hair was quite messed up, and he stretched his arms to block the older man from trying to stride across to reach that worryingly obvious body half-buried by bush and had caked blood near the neck. Lan Zhan strained and tip-toed to try and look over the stubborn man at the reason that the particular victim looked so tantalizingly interesting - it was the manner in which the soldier died. He sighed, when the efforts were futile, with Wei Ying being the obstacle to the final piece of the puzzle.

“We’ll play touch-touch after we bathe in the river. I promise. I’m yours for the rest of the day.”

Wei Ying gave pause to the offered bounty that sweetened the deal tremendously. His hands lowered gingerly.

“You... you won’t pull my hair for sticking a finger into your dick?” Just to be sure.

“Mn. I won’t. My dick’s all yours.” All clear.

Wei Ying’s demeanour changed completely the next moment, brightened up by a beaming smile that could blind any million-dollar salesman out there. He acted coquettish, fluttered his eyelashes and embraced one of Lan Zhan’s hands like a coy, shy but mischievous girlfriend. “All mine, all mine,” the man chanted cheerfully and licked his lips in anticipation of a reward before it was awarded.

He tugged at Lan Zhan’s right hand excitedly like a child wanting to impress its parents, and led him to the grisly site of murder of the soldier that expired the last amongst the group of twenty. His body seemed untouched, uncut and did not bear any injuries or stab wounds, and his leather armour decorated with dragon emblems looked rather polished and unused. A phoenix-adorned helmet prevented the couple from identifying his face - however that was not the crux of the issue. Wei Ying grabbed a broken branch from the grass and used it to tilt the dead man’s neck. A thick blood-caked line circled the skin, cascaded like a dried waterfall that had gushed to the pool behind the corpse’s head. One could see how deep the cut was, as though it was made by a very thin but amazingly sharp meat cleaver, that penetrated through the skin, flesh and blood vessels, severed the windpipe and even bracket the vertebrae; in fact, the dead soldier’s head remained attached to the body by mere muscle fibres and loose, lacerated skin. The air smelled especially stale, reeked of torturous cries that had long gone unheard, and heavy with the dank, acrid scent of antagonizing hatred.

“This unnamed person,” Wei Ying nudged the lifeless hand of the corpse with his shoe, “... had his head nearly severed by a metallic string, but the heinous act wasn’t completed, because the perpetrator was elated to be served the still-living, throbbing golden cores of those three deceased men, by his accomplice - the other murderer in this terrible scene,” he gestured at the bodies that lay nearby that he’d discussed before, “... that this dying man was forgotten. Left on the ground to watch the slaughter of his comrades, with tears and outrage in his eyes, while bleeding to death and his limbs immobilized, because his spinal cord was ruined. Ernie cannot determine what went on inside the man’s mind while his heart eventually stopped beating, but I can,” he whispered and leaned so closely to the older man until the latter could feel warm, seductive breaths against the cheeks.

Lan Zhan took a step back away from the horrible scene of carnage, because he didn’t scrutinize the wound on the neck closely the first time, and now, it was too detailed, too clear, that every bit of him was appalled and his stomach threatened to churn in disgust. Wei Ying latched on to his spouse by the arm, intent on winning his prize of touch-touch once they solved this particularly easy-peasy mystery.

“Lan Zhan, I saw remnant glimpses from this corpse’s visions and tasted his screeching thoughts, because this man managed to stare very, very hard at his killers until the final cusp of death. One, dressed in pristine white robes who has the ability to play a magical ivory xiao flute with such finesse, that swords and sceptres unsheathed on their own to the calling of a deadly dance, and slayed their owners in a blink of an eye. Second, truly a bent, hunched grotesque figure in tattered browns and greys, without sleeves and certainly without shoes, but it bore a human face atop an appendage above its meaty, hairy mass. It was greedy and lustful, gorging itself like a rabid beast on the golden cores of three victims at once, and it went after the fourth with an assassin’s ability to string up and slice the neck off from a human torso. Through my Darkness-enhanced senses, I could even feel that horrendous pain of having a neck strangled by a wire, because I’ve experienced it once at the Guanyin Temple, done by the same person whose face is now glued to a demonic body, no less.”

Lan Zhan held his breath. The conversation suddenly felt repulsive, and he experienced a surge of nausea, a punch in the gut, literally by what he had heard. Wei Ying gripped his hand tighter to steady the man, and even swayed it front and back playfully to remind him that there was a promise to keep, a price to pay, for demanding the truth, no matter how terrible that was - in the flesh, or blood, or both.

“My brother... and Jin Guangyao...!”

.

Just then, there was a rush of hooves and shouts, followed by clouds of dust and strong winds that temporarily blinded the couple, causing them to stagger unsteadily on their feet. Before Wei Ying and Lan Zhan could react, they were surrounded by heavily-armed burly men on horseback, garbed in similar dark-coloured metal and leather closed helmets, armour and shields as those victims pinned to the trees; all bore the insignias of dragonheads, phoenix wings and other mythical creatures that glowed with magic, the hallmark coat-of-arms of the Imperial army.

“Wei Wuxian!” one thunderous voice called out from behind the frontlines of spears and swords pointing at the aforementioned man’s throat. Wei Ying gulped visible and his eyes widened in alarm, and dropped the half-mask he was about to put on; he couldn’t take it out quicker from his sleeves, and whoever was behind the ambush knew his identity.

“... and Lan Wang Ji!” This time, Lan Zhan stiffened and reached for his sword, then realized belatedly that he’d fed it to the bottomless furry worm hiding in his clothes for safekeeping, though, not necessarily for safeguarding their well-being.

“Do not make any unnecessary moves! By the royal authority vested within the Imperial Seal of His Majesty, the Emperor of Chang’an, the Almighty Guardian of the Mandate from the Heavens, bow to the ground or risk the wrath of the Imperial Guard and be beheaded at once!”

Wei Ying squeaked and made some incomprehensible hissy sounds when he immediately fell to his knees, and he yanked his significant other’s arm to drag him along too, to grovel and pray that sniper archers that trained their arrows at them from the treelines didn’t release their grip too quickly.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 173

“This is travesty! We came here looking for men bearing the physical descriptions that befits you, and what do we find?”

“A killing field! Two suspects! Three pieces of evidence!”

“For one, that man who weaves dark, forbidden magic, like the yaoguai ! Did you witness how he played with corpses hanging off the trees as though he is among playmates? He said he can see and hear the dead talk! He must be one that speaks the devil’s tongue, and is allied to those monsters!”

“No, it is a yaoguai , hiding beneath a human’s skin! One that is bonded to the man garbed in white over there. Did you spy how that man stole all our fallen brothers’ equipment and pocketed them into his sleeves without so much as an ounce of pity or sadness on his face? Such evil, such greed, such cruelty - and did you not hear what he said last? He knows the murderers, one of which is his brother!”

“Lastly, everyone, look at your Compasses of Evil. Are they not pointing at these two men? They’re both wicked, a bloodthirsty yaoguai disguised a man, and his partner, a man that harbours sin, working hand in hand!”

Wei Ying cursed his bad luck for being caught doing and saying things he shouldn’t have - but silently chuckled at the fact that his Compass of Evil turned out to be quite popular -, Lan Zhan wished he didn’t display the worst of his hoarding side or mention his gege , and together, they knew they had a lot to explain to the Imperial army - if given they chance.

.

It happened too quickly.

Burly, stocky armed men dismounted from their horses and pinned the two men down, with plenty of threats of ‘Do not resist!’ and ‘If you move, you will find an arrow in the base of your skull the next second!’. Wei Ying and Lan Zhan had no ulterior motive, had no reason to fight back, and didn’t dare to provoke the wrath of the almighty Imperial army, so they remained steadfast on the ground, struggling half-heartedly against their restraints until they could understand the situation unfolding before them.

Lan Zhan mustered some courage to ask a one-worded question, “Why?”, before someone’s knee pressed into his neck and he was forced down on all fours, gasping for air - he couldn’t breathe. A senior guard, who was adorned with slightly better armour and wore a fancier helmet with dragonwings carved on the sides, pushed that overzealous soldier away just in time before Lan Zhan turned blue, and barked back some angry commands to ‘stand down’ and not to treat their captives like convicts. By that time, Wei Ying was in a state of frenzied fury after witnessing how Lan Zhan was treated although they’d been unresisting for the most part.

“Why?” the guard countered in disbelief, “You’re being detained for having a hand in the murder of these twenty soldiers,” he waved his arm around to indicate the gruesome massacre of men stabbed into pine trunks, “-- and on suspicion that you are, or collude with the yaoguai that has threatened these lands since New Year.”

“But that doesn’t mean you should treat us like this! We’re innocent unless proven guilty, have no ill intention, and were simply caught at the wrong place and at the wrong time! You haven’t even investigated the case!” Wei Ying yelled rashly, before a soldier muzzled him with a greasy palm.

The younger man showed his crude, uncouth side when he bit the man that tried to cover his mouth, and started throwing punches at the soldiers around him. Lan Zhan struggled to get up and joined the fray, purportedly holding back his spouse but at the same time, that meant he was also pushing away the aggressors. Unfortunately, that only incensed the people around them, and terrible accusations were flung about.

“He bites and claws! What monstrous behaviour!”

“See? That’s evidence that he’s a yaoguai masquerading as a human in broad daylight. No wonder he walks during daytime instead of crawling in the dark like his predecessors!”

“It’s true, it’s true! The yaoguai has bonded to the unfortunate human partner and turned his heart black! It’s the yaoguai ’s fault that this has happened!”

The senior guard pointed a finger at Wei Ying to demand that the couple stopped fighting back; something triggered inside the younger man. Wei Ying snarled and shook like a feral beast, then lunged to try and bite off that offending pointy finger, before he was held back by three well-muscled brawny soldiers.

“I’m NOT a yaoguai !” Wei Ying roared angrily, his bloodshot eyes blazed thinly veiled crimson hues - signs of murderous intent - and canines poking out with dripping saliva, tendons and veins nearly popping out everywhere on his temples and neck, literally. Apparently, old memories surfaced back from the time he was accused of being one by mobs of nobodies, sixteen or more years ago. The difference, this time though, was that Lan Zhan touched his wrist; a silent plea to the young man not to get overboard, and he caught himself before losing control of his flaring temper.

The guard backed off slowly and raised his palms; that gesture surprised the soldiers and shushed them up immediately, some feeling uneasy at the sudden truce. “Regardless of your claims, you’ve just demonstrated yourselves to be potentially dangerous. Look, if you’ll cooperate and let us put you in chains for our safety and for following the Imperial protocol on investigating suspects, then take you back to our camp for verification, we’ll sort this out properly against the list, and send you on your way. If there’s been a mistake, we’ll get it rectified on that list, and you’ll no longer be disturbed by the Imperial soldiers and cultivators currently patrolling these dangerous lands for the rest of the season,” the senior officer reasoned, trying to pacify the couple and at the same time, uphold the duties of the Imperial guard. Apparently, in 2000 B.C., concepts such as personal rights and freedom of expression were unheard of, especially in the face of the domineering Imperial might - so, Wei Ying reluctantly cooled off his head and sunk back to his knees to show that he was willing to play nice, with the promise that they may be let off the hook after their names were erased from that so-called list.

One by one, the soldiers fell into murmurs and eventually silence, when they realized that they weren't allowed to mock the couple any further. "The rest of you, give them space and don't you dare put your hands on them. If I find any more insubordination amongst you, you'll be on toilet cleaning duties for a week, do you hear me? You're hired horsemen from the grassland clans in the vicinity, but that doesn't mean you can misuse the authority of the Imperial Court as you wish!" the senior guard barked, and everyone acquiesced, some looking down and away in shame. Wei Ying brightened up at the revelation - no wonder he was having such a tough time, because he was dealing with grown-up brats spoiled with the privileges of the rich and powerful! - and smiled smugly.

"What is this list? Why are our names written there?" Lan Zhan finally asked when he finally understood that they were not in harm's way, when he knelt on the ground, side by side with his beloved spouse.

The guard shrugged. "I cannot reveal too much but our War General bought it from a sect leader who lives nearby, after an... amicable handover of powers, to... let's say, support the growth of the Imperial army. That list was originally availed to all sect leaders that served under the now-defunct Grand Cultivation Council. The list owner pleaded the Imperial troops investigating his fortress home to redirect their efforts to locate the surviving cultivators from the ill-fated New Year's hunt, and he gave some pretty grisly details of how he knew a former cultivator and his bonded yaoguai who behaved worse than a true-blooded man and a thousand times deadlier," he said and crossed his arms, gazing at the bewildered couple.

"Did he say anything else... about us?" Lan Zhan ventured carefully and craned his neck, which still throbbed from the brutal force earlier.

The man in his forties and graying moustache looked up and down, then rubbed his chin. “Hmm... just a physical description of the two of you, a bit of recent history that both of you accompanied him from a coastal village to the Carp Tower in Lanling, and that was how he observed enough to convince him, and our general, that you were damn well worth investigating, amongst the thousands of names written in the list, of which we’ve crossed off many after confirming those that have been killed by the yaoguai during the first few days after New Year. He kept saying ‘I don’t know, I don’t know’ when we tried to dig deeper into your histories, which further mystified our general and puzzled us, which is a lethal combination to raise enough red flags to issue a warrant for your capture,” he admitted.

“It’s... Huaisang, isn’t it? That traitor!” Wei Ying spat on the ground with disgust almost immediately. One soldier shrieked in high-pitch and in terror while twirling to the side like a ballerina, to avoid getting splattered from a demon’s saliva, and that drew uncomfortable looks from his comrades.

“... Worth investigating? What is it about us that’s special to your general?” Lan Zhan pressed on with his inquiry, trying to determine the scheming two-faced’s motives.

“Didn’t you hear? The Imperial army is running a massive recruitment drive for cultivators, soldiers and mercenaries alike in the war waged against the yaoguai that had escaped and replicated since the New Year’s Hunt. Including these incompetent buffoons,” he sent a burning glare at his men, and they shrank in unison under the heated gaze, “So, when that sect leader suddenly said something about a creative new way to control and weaponize demons, that is, to use man-controlled yaoguai to fight against other wild-type yaoguai, I think our general was sold to the idea, because it gelled so well with his beliefs to fight fire against fire, and fitted perfectly with the Emperor’s decree to wipe out all evil from the Middle Kingdom with minimal losses of lives...” the guard rambled and he too, started to dive deeply into such an intriguing concept.

Lan Zhan rolled his eyes using his imagination, while Wei Ying facepalmed internally and balked at the absurdity. It was certainly not worth investigating the couple, based solely on hearsays from an unreliable source that didn’t know what he was talking about; the couple started to look for ways to escape and avoid capture altogether.

.

“Stop squeezing his neck to fit the metal collar! He’ll choke from his double chin! Have you no respect for a man who looks as fortunate and esteemed as the God of Prosperity?”

“Loosen the chains to his wrists, you bastards! He can’t walk properly if his hands are forced to press on his bulging stomach! That length of that chain is meant for thin people like me, not a pregnant sow like him!”

“Stop stuffing him into a prison uniform, it’s too small! Can’t you see his boobs are squashed like melons in a bamboo basket, and his lungs can’t breathe?”

“Please, give the chain some slack! My darling balding man has supersized thighs! If you tighten the ankle cuffs like that, he’ll only tumble everywhere down the hill and roll over you until you’re flatter than a jianbing !”

Wei Ying made plenty of embarrassing jibes that not only turned Lan Zhan into shades of bright cherry-reds, but also left scores of Imperial soldiers around them sniggering and guffawing on the grassy floor like incompetent jokers - more like, country bumpkins who find such juvenile jokes amusing, though armed to the teeth. The younger man continued to spew insulting, demeaning but terribly unfunny taunts about mid-life crisis, weight problems, gender-specific harassment and one's tattered dignity, illustrated with plenty of lively hand motions to draw shapes of the said melons and pregnant pig bellies on the canvas of thin air, that even the senior guard who was supposed to fit the chains around Lan Zhan's neck, wrists and ankles fell into a laughing fit and accidentally dropped the keys.

In a heated moment of frenzied body movements mixed with confusion and silliness, and when everyone wasn't looking, Wei Ying performed an ad-hoc, hips-swaying melon dance with high kicks, that sent forth a hurricane of sticks, stones and dried leaves into the air along with a well-timed passing-by breeze - his 'papermen'. Lan Zhan continued to jostle against the chains and collars with his hefty bulk and weight, and it took nearly four fully grown-up men to steady him enough to be tied up.

On the other end of the forest clearing, another kind of riot had to be dealt with and subdued. The soldiers had been smart enough to demand the couple to strip down to their undergarments and leave their belongings on the ground before being tied up - bandits and surely yaoguai were known to hide weapons and nasty surprises inside their clothes and sometimes, beneath their skins. However, they did not expect Lan Zhan's robes to come alive and start snarling, spitting and hissing like a rabid beast. The sleeves charged and abruptly backed away at any man that dared to approach it, thumped aggressively at the ground with folds of cloth and swirling clouds of dust, and growled with an unpleasant but somewhat adorable, high-pitched squeal reminiscent of an angry baby bunny. One junior swordsman bravely reached into the sleeves in the futile hopes of grabbing whatever that resided inside the accursed garment, only to howl in fright and pain when his fingers were nom-nom'ed by sticky, icky toothless gums covered with slimy saliva; he retracted his traumatized hand, filled with bites and bruises, and a residual fear that he may have been poisoned from the nauseatingly gooey webs left in the aftermath - those were probably digestive juices, and soon, the fine hair on the man's arms dissolved, and stinging burning red patches formed on the skin where he was attacked. The braver swordsmen started beating the wriggling robes with broken branches and quarterstaves.

Elsewhere, Wei Ying's walking cane transformed into a ghastly shiny black viper with red eyes and impossibly long venom-laced fangs, that hissed and struck viciously at any incoming objects. It lashed out wildly at fleeing soldiers, and where its fangs grazed the leather and metal ornaments on boots, the materials melted immediately into acrid, frothy smoke and the smell of burnt flesh, thus sending the serpent's would-be assailants running helter-skelter in panic.

Just when the tide seemed to turn to favour the couple, and Wei Ying glanced up with hope at the swirling, flying debris in the sky - because he could send microscopic radar antennae into the stratosphere and radio for back-up -, suddenly the entire floor of the forest clearing glowed with dark energy outlined with dazzling electric blues and magentas, and there was a low rumble. Nearly half the soldiers - the spellcasters and mages - stumbled where they stood and clutched at their heads, and Lan Zhan groaned too and scrunched up his face from unexplained pain, causing Wei Ying alarm, and fell to the floor like an overweight boulder with a dull thud; the senior guard that had been crawling on the ground to look for the key to the chains was unwittingly crushed by the Lan man's weight, and something in the guard's backbone snapped.

The atmosphere changed surprisingly fast, from a boisterous, animated drunken party of clumsiness, boorish laughter and boyish screams, to one of grave silence and seriousness. Sticks, stones and dried leaves fell like shot dead pigeons from the tree canopies when the breeze ceased blowing; the vile black viper hissed furiously in agony before shrivelling up to a motionless, rigid bamboo flute of the same colour; Lan Zhan's clothes, a living and savage piece of garment that bit and nipped ferociously at people, shrieked like a skewered trapped animal, struggled to flutter out of the circle of dark energy before collapsing into its own to become a set of quiet, quite inorganic, rumpled plain old white robes.

Wei Ying was left with a gaping mouth and eyes wide with shock at the carnage of his own family, and the fact that he was the last one standing; one could hear a pin drop when all soldiers at present stopped what they were doing, and gazed up in awe at two new arrivals standing on a rocky outcrop overlooking the forest clearing.

A bald, sagely, wizened old man in flowy golden-white robes, probably more than a century in age, bowed politely to the other with palms up. He waved his horsetail whisk in a lemniscate loop, and stroked his beard gracefully with knobbly fingers, then cleared his throat.

“Grandmaster Gao, pardon the intrusion. This would not have happened if a priest was assigned to each and every group within the army, as the great Emperor of Chang'an decreed. We're dealing with the supernatural and the extraordinary, after all. The world we live in is in the state of Imbalance between the Yin and the Yang. With the authority bestowed by the Taoist Gods and the eternally-living grandmasters for over thirteen generations, the unnatural will be exorcised, and normalcy restored,” the tranquil voice said with such clarity, nobleness, determination and pure-hearted intention, that Wei Ying knew he was faced with a holy priest of legendary powers and reputation; however, like many sects from the poorer southside of the country, he did not study in depth about greater religions and philosophy and their iconic figures, and instead, focused on his and his neighbouring sects' beliefs; so he had shallow knowledge about priests, religion, and the many denominations that exist in the Middle Kingdom. There was no time, however, and he quickly crouched to shake Lan Zhan awake; the older man seemed to be in a delirious state - feverish, incoherent, and wrecked with lightning flashes of pain throbbing beneath the skull.

“The dead good shall be reborn as evil, the living evil shall be banished back to its good side. Faced with swords, we shall temper the violent might with grace and softness until it is but a blunt piece of scrap metal; faced with fearsome magics, we shall invoke the gods' wrath and extinguish all forms of spellcasting to reduce even the greatest arch-wizards into helpless, crying babes, such as this Anti-Magic Circle that you see, my lord. This is the way of the Tao,” the priest continued calmly.

Wei Ying was beyond angry when Lan Zhan remained unresponsive - the whole situation turned from bad to worse. He swivelled to the side to yell at the two masterminds to stop whatever they were doing and release him and Lan Zhan - but the moment he opened his mouth, a grimacing Lan Zhan grabbed his wrist and shook his head with a groan - ‘Wei Ying, no’, the gesture said. The younger man was very vexed and exasperated at the helplessness of their situation, and could only make some rude nnnghnnngh sounds akin to a man suffering from constipation; his facial expressions wild and tortured yet suppressed, vividly disappointed and enraged, he even slammed his fists to the dark-energized dirt repeatedly until his knuckles were scuffed, but to no avail.

Grandmaster Gao, an impressive man over seven feet tall with a well-built figure framed by an even more magnificent set of Imperial War General full-body armour, with a majestic top-facing dragonhead sculpted to the steel chest plate, and a billowing red mantle hanging off his broad shoulders, stared down at the couple briefly with cold, disdainful eyes. His thick and long moustache and beard were akin to a dragon's, his face bore savage battle scars, and the creases on his forehead and at the edge of his eyes spoke of decades of war experience and of fighting off the country's greatest enemies; if looks could kill, he could murder a village of ordinary farmers with a single cruel, unforgiving stare. He crossed his arms and scanned the horizon from the vantage point where he stood, ignoring Wei Ying altogether.

"Carry on, priest," he ordered, and for a brief second, Wei Ying actually shivered from the low, bellowing voice that echoed throughout the forest. Grandmaster Gao turned to the side and barked his next order, "Lieutenant, take them in and scour the entire hill. Round up as many cultivators and yaoguai monsters as you can find by sundown."

Wei Ying meeped audibly as he watched, with sheer horror, hundreds of fully-equipped Imperial soldiers - probably Grandmaster Gao's main army - rose from the mountain ridge to surround them. He shook Lan Zhan's agonizing trembling form more violently - they had to run, they had to escape, there was no time to lose.

The one that was addressed as Lieutenant appeared behind the priest, and cocked his head at Wei Ying with a perplexed look. "That magicless person too? Is he really a yaoguai on the list, or a mundane human wearing the skin of such dark creatures? He seems... rather quiet, docile and weak," Wei Ying could hear him say, and he seethed with unspoken fury; he really wanted to leap up and show his true strengths as the greatest Dark Arts practitioner known in the universe. However, Grandmaster Gao paid no further attention and marched off the scene, while the priest smiled - a crooked smile with ugly teeth, now that Wei Ying has had a good look -, and addressed a cryptic response to the Lieutenant, "Just as there is Yin, there is the Yang complementing the opposing force, so does Man paired with another supernatural or mythical element, such as a yaoguai . The synergized balance is often stronger than either part, and can negate even the greatest magic. That is the path of truth, young man. Take those two in, as your master commanded, an examination is in order at the temples, and all shall be revealed. That is the way of the Tao, the religion of all-seeing, all-knowing.” The priest bowed slowly in a single smooth motion that belied his age and wisdom, apparently. The Lieutenant nodded and disappeared from the rocky outcropping, to descend some steps and reach the forest clearing where everyone gathered.

“Wei Ying,” Lan Zhan croaked softly through gritted teeth, and the man quickly turned to his attention, desperate to hear what the spouse needed to say, “Don’t... fight back... for now. Not against the Emperor’s will... please...” then Lan Zhan squeezed his eyes shut, curled up like a meatball shivering in tormented agony. Wei Ying blinked through tears - he realized how much energy the man must’ve spent to repress the spouse’s impulse; it would be akin to slicing one’s flesh with a knife while being forced to run a marathon. Wei Ying also knew that being a hot-blooded youth, if it wasn’t for Lan Zhan’s shaky grip on the wrist, he’d rush forward and start doing something impossibly foolish, like going after the War General’s throat with a sharp object, and then get shot down by archers by the hundreds, ready to release their volleys from the mountain ridge; thus, it was clear as day that Lan Zhan sacrificed his well-being for Wei Ying’s sake, even though it hurt like hell, just to shut the spouse up and avoid any unnecessary confrontation and worse, more loss of lives. Wei Ying nodded energetically while holding Lan Zhan’s hands, and no longer harboured a killing intent. He pressed their hands closer, tighter, in a desperate prayer that everything would turn out alright, now that they were captured by the menacing Imperial army.

The Taoist priest waved his magical whisk, and the circle of dark energy fizzled out just as quickly as it appeared - to everyone’s relief. Afflicted soldiers began to recover from their ordeal, and Lan Zhan ceased to suffer from the searing pain of having one’s golden core and magic-infused meridians torched from within. Wei Ying gingerly picked up his overweight lover and embraced him in a soothing, quiet cuddle, and blissfully ignored the swords, spears and magical weapons aimed at them.

.

The senior guard overseeing the couple's capture couldn't find a prisoner's clothing suitable for Lan Zhan's size, so upon some careful deliberation helped along by Wei Ying's surprisingly gentle, but heart-rendering begging for decent clothing to keep him warm on a chilly springtime day, he was given a few large pieces of thick, rough fabrics and straws that the soldiers used as covers to sit on or to shelter from rain. Wei Ying was garbed in the rather dirty, smudgy brownish-orange prison uniform - a plain long-sleeved shirt and a pair of loose pants tied using drawstrings, really - and had chains attached to collars and cuffs on his neck, wrists and ankles - like a convicted man. The guard, whose waist was bandaged, shrugged in apology, and remarked that since their case had been noted by the superiors, he couldn't soften his approach anymore, and a one-way trip to the Imperial camp was in order.

While the soldiers carefully dismantled the corpses of their comrades from the trees one by one, and others collected the couple's belongings into large sacks, Wei Ying helped to fashion primitive robes for Lan Zhan with the given materials, and the latter ended up looking Buddhist monk swaddled with excess cloth. "Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, can you lift your shoulders a bit? I'm draping this softest piece of fabric over you like a blanket, and I'm going to tie the edges around your neck with another strip of cloth. I know you're uncomfortable, but it's going to rain and it'll be freezing cold. You need this, otherwise your fever will worsen... please?" Wei Ying asked tenderly, while nudging the older man with his elbows because his hands were essentially tied; Lan Zhan wasn't chained, luckily for him. Lan Zhan grunted and acquiesced, with some effort that left him dizzy. Wei Ying did what he could, then placed a chaste kiss on the man's sweaty forehead, before wiping it off with the back of his hand. He ignored the rude stares around him.

Dark clouds had begun to gather in the far horizon, to the man's dismay, and he blamed the arrival of Grandmaster Gao and their unfortunate encounter with the Imperial army for it. The priest wasn't as kind as expected of a holy man - Wei Ying wondered what kind of crap religion did the War General worshipped that harboured such vile priests and practitioners -, and with another whisk from the frighteningly omnipotent brush tool, a mystical imprint appeared on their necks not unlike the mark of branding irons. It was a temporary tattoo that radiated a strong anti-magic aura; Wei Ying felt nothing, but Lan Zhan was once again incapacitated by a crushing headache and a debilitating fever, though to a lesser extent this time. The couple knew that they couldn't argue or fight their way out, not when they were surrounded by hundreds of soldiers, each armed to the teeth with Imperial gear and Magics R' Us equipment for great priests, sorcerers and shamans. Wei Ying spied on Grandmaster Gao's right arm before the eminent general left, and recognized that he had the exceedingly rare golden Infinity gauntlet fitted with five colourful jewels - an apocalyptic sign of things to come, surely -, and so, Wei Ying kept as quiet as a mouse, for fear of repercussions worse than multiple lifetimes of deaths.

Shortly after the last of the twenty bodies had been loaded onto hand carts, the Lieutenant announced that part of the group were headed for a small village not far away to take shelter. "Fifty of you will follow Senior Guard Liu to Jinshan at the next hill, out of which forty shall accompany the wagons at two each on foot, in respect of our fallen brothers. The remaining ten will escort the prisoners and their confiscated belongings, and help out in menial tasks and paperwork once in Jinshan. The rest of you, hundreds-strong, take the horses and march forth southwards with the venerable Tao priest and I, and hunt down any cultivator or yaoguai that you can find! Victory shall be ours!" he commanded. The soldiers saluted in unison with fiery concerted shouts of “Hail the King!” and went to work with incredible efficiency and speed.

Wei Ying placed one of Lan Zhan’s unsteady arms around his shoulder, and began the slow, torturous trek down the hill, among queues of creaky carts heavy with their deadweight loads. He focused on Lan Zhan’s health and tried his best to support the heavier older man with his scrawny body and weight - it was truly a labour of loyalty and love. Although he could speak freely, he decided to be nice, un-cheeky, less argumentative, and compliant to the soldiers’ orders; in return, when he asked for water to quench Lan Zhan’s thirst, he was given some by the senior guard surnamed Liu, who felt a little pity for a struggling, ill, fat man. Around them, some of the younger ones in rank started to gossip again, though they always kept themselves out of earshot from their seniors who toiled to pull the carts filled with dead bodies.

“ Shixiong , are we really going to visit that Tao temple in Jinshan? I’ve heard rumours that it’s rundown and filled with ticks, fleas and cobwebs, even haunted with stories of ghosts and of terrible things from the past, because people have long abandoned it in favour of worshipping more famous and powerful gods, like Guan Yin and Buddha!”

“Yeah, qianbei ! Hardly anyone in neighbouring provinces of Lanling and Qinghe worships these paganistic gods! Even I didn’t pray in those dusty, sinister-looking altars until recently when I signed up for the army.”

“Shhh, comrades, not so loud! Priests and shamans from all over the country have acceded to our Emperor’s royal decree to fully utilize the strengths and capabilities of local religions and deities, such as the Tao.

We're supposed to be working with them with respect, not against. Did you not attend the special classes before joining this campaign?"

"Yee---sss---! The priest that came to give a talk to our battalion said: What's the use of praying desperately for one or a handful of gods when those gods hardly ever respond in times of need? Our nation can arm itself, using its own spiritual guidance and free will, to combat the spread of this yaoguai disease and triumph over evil! Those who rebel and keep to their old ways will learn, painfully, what it truly means to put all your prayers in one basket!"

Wei Ying listened intently, while feeding an exhausted, half-conscious, feverish Lan Zhan a small bowl of river water, when the group of soldiers took a short break beneath the shade of trees. He managed to pocket some edible berries during their downhill descent, and crushed them before mixing the juicy pulp into the bowl. Wei Ying fervently hoped the fruit-flavoured water would somehow help stave off further deterioration of his spouse's condition; they didn't stop for lunch, and both were feeling quite dehydrated by the time afternoon rolled by. The kinder senior guard gave Wei Ying a slightly cracked bowl and told him to make do with it until they reached their destination, where priests at the Tao temple can finally remove the terrible tattoo from their necks and set Lan Zhan free from suffering, but not from imprisonment; Wei Ying was more than hopeful, and he was determined to see through to the end of the arduous journey. The serious, fierce look on his face when he made that decision, however, had some unintended consequences to the younger soldiers milling around the couple.

"Ah, shixiong , you're such a wise person, but who are these two men? Are they really famous, or are they just convenient targets that the army wishes to enlist as battle slaves like the hundreds that we've captured so far? Eeh... the yaoguai is glaring at me... eek!"

“Stop staring back, that yaoguai might eat you when you sleep tonight... ha ha ha!”

“T-- T-- That’s not funny! I don’t have protective talismans to scare away the blood-sucking, flesh-eating yaoguai ... or to protect my delicate virginity! Ha ha ha!”

“Comrades, quiet, and stop being such cowardly naysayers! We’re just following the Lieutenant's orders to take them to the nearest camp to be evaluated by officers from our forces and holy men of Tao. If that stout cultivator is deemed fit and suitable, he’ll be persuaded to fight alongside us against the tide of evil, and we could use his yaoguai to our benefit, if the two are indeed bonded and united in body, mind and soul. Such rare pairing of demon and man are the ultimate living weapons that our Highness wishes to collect and enlist into service for the greater glory of the empire! It’s an honor to fight for the country, you know!”

Wei Ying’s brows twitched, and he gazed at the spineless senior guard - who couldn’t mete out disciplinary action for insubordination and instead, joined the gossipy chatter while flouting all rules and flaunting his employer’s propaganda - and the two followers, with interest. Meanwhile, Senior Guard Liu tried his best to keep the conversations civil without causing anymore ruckus, especially with many others lounging around, massaging and cricking their necks and cramping limbs, complaining incessantly about carrying decomposing, smelly dead bodies that were formerly their brethren. Wei Ying made sure that Lan Zhan gulped down the bowl of water before squatting down by a bubbling stream to fill another serving of the much-cherished though plain refreshment on a sunny day. He even dabbed gently at the spouse’s sweat-beaded forehead, with a clean, moistened washcloth handed by the senior guard.

“Ah... but I don’t even know who these two are, and if they’re really cut out to fight against the monsters! I mean... a black viper summoned out of a walking cane, and a set of man-eating robes that doesn’t bite? It’s a joke, right? What does that yaoguai do anyway? He doesn’t seem to be affected by the Anti-Magic tattoos, so does that mean he’s magicless?”

“Hush! He’s staring daggers at you now! Look away, look away! Only the priests can ascertain the nature of yaoguai - perhaps this one’s hiding something splendid beneath his skin or worse, his grotesque true form when he ambushes you tonight, in your bed, to feast on your... dick!”

“Aiiiee... you terrorize all of us with your sick humour! And for what? Just to make fun of an unknown man named Lan.. err.. Ji Wang? And his pet demon, Wei... Xian... err...”

“Silence, brats! We don’t question our leader’s orders! If they tell us to hunt down persons named in a list bought from a fearful sect leader swayed by our War General’s condescending words, then we do it without asking twice,” Senior Guard Liu shouted impatiently, “Now go! You’re not being productive! Check the rest of our men if they’ve enough water and food! I will not ask twice!” and waved his hands, causing the younger ‘uns to scramble away in laughter and rude shrieks.

Wei Ying took in a deep breath to digest what he’d heard, and cringed when a hand reached out towards him, like a trapped wild animal. Wei Ying’s eyes went wide with amazement when instead of a cold, grimy touch on his face, two bread rolls appeared in front of his eyes.

“Sorry, these are days-old and stale, but I promise we’ll get you better meals and comfortable straw beds once we’re there by sundown,” Senior Guard Liu said, before rushing off to round up his rowdy men and their stinking cargo.

Wei Ying managed to return a strained smile, and quickly made sure those bread were softened with water and fed bite by bite to Lan Zhan. They still had a few more hours of sunlight to go.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 174

The supposedly peaceful downhill descent from the peak to the foot of the hill turned out to be running the gauntlet made of a series of combative challenges that tested Wei Ying's strength, endurance, marksmanship, agility and strategic thinking. Due to his good behaviour, the chains were taken off Wei Ying so that he could better care for, and lead Lan Zhan down the unmarked trail, under the careful watch of the soldiers - and not a moment too soon.

First, when the first lightning struck from brewing storm clouds, the entire group was chased by fierce grey wolves. The appearance of the menacing arch-nemesis caused Wei Ying to sweep the overly heavy Lan Zhan off his feet and he was carried bridal-style; then Wei Ying sprinted and skidded past everyone like a screeching madman with his pants on fire, for reasons only the couple knew too well. Then, once out of harm's way and from the predator's scent radar - because the other fifty or so soldiers seemed more appetizing and not as fleet-footed -, Wei Ying realized he was lost and the skies promptly opened up to dump a day's load of rainwater upon that hill. It was gruelling to make sure that they stayed beneath the tree canopies and kept Lan Zhan as dry as possible, while trudging across slippery slopes and large puddles filled with mud. By the time the hour of thunderstorms passed, Wei Ying had strapped tubby Lan Zhan to his back like a heavyweight backpack and he was absolutely exhausted to the bone - his hands and shoulders were quivering like jello because he wasn't used to carrying fat men more than twice his weight, and his legs were sluggish as lead from taxing his physical limits.

When he reunited with the Imperial soldiers and Senior Guard Liu a short while later, just as he placed the feverish, near-comatose Lan Zhan on a patch of drier ground, a huge black bear crashed through the bush and roared like the starving beast that it was - it had woken up from hibernation and wanted nothing more than to devour a few humans that, by chance, passed by its cave. Wei Ying knew he couldn't lift his overweight spouse any more, so he had to think on his feet - feet that couldn't run more than a few paces without protesting to break down altogether.

While fleeing soldiers (country bumpkins, really) screamed and ran for their lives, Wei Ying started to pick up and throw stones at the furry, snarling and drooling animal. Some hit its head and left bloody grazes, and that angered the bear so much that it bore down on the hapless, thin and bony man like a boulder with four legs. Wei Ying cried like a girl and literally ran up a tall tree like a talented monkey, where the bear continued to growl and snap while trying its best, but without success, to follow its new prey. Furious that the free meal on two legs outran it with remarkable speed, it started to chomp and claw at the tree's trunk, intent on bringing the whole century-old hardwood tree to the forest floor along with its highly prized catch.

Wei Ying panicked because he had nothing else to defend himself other than a few breadcrumbs in the prisoner uniform's pockets, and he was sure that an animal of that size wouldn't be satisfied by such paltry offerings. Thus, in a moment of unthinking desperation, he started to recklessly break some branches and twigs, at the risk of tearing apart his last bastion of a flimsy leafy perch, and hurled at the bear like projectiles. Abundant tears and snot streamed down his eyes and nostrils and reddened cheeks, and he bawled like a frightened baby, because he imagined that with each passing second, with each swipe of bear paws and snapping fanged jaws, he was getting closer to being eaten alive by the carnivore he swore to hate (and fear) as much as canines.

Then, like a cathartic retribution to the divine slapstick comedy that had thrived on Wei Ying's suffering for nearly the whole day, one of the splintered branches hurtling down from five-storeys' height pierced the bear's eye and straight into its skull, and the animal instantly collapsed in a raspy howl - with that, silence pervaded the darkening sunset-lit forest canopies once again.

Wei Ying wasn't sure what to expect after shakily climbing down the tree and picking up his beloved spouse; he was completely fatigued and couldn't really think straight any more at that point in time, and he was awfully hungry; he hadn't had a bite to eat since mid-morning, and the retreating dusk threatened to prolong his misery of surviving alone against insurmountable odds, with a man to care and journey to a prison camp and its temple that never seemed to materialize to sight.

Suddenly, Wei Ying's arms felt lighter; Senior Guard Liu and a few other soldiers lifted the moaning, delirious man like an overdue, stressful burden finally taken off the younger man's shoulders, and they started to walk with a renewed sense of purpose and with livelier speed. Another few with free hands packed up the bear's carcass with a large piece of tarp, and followed behind without a word. The forty or so men complained about the terrible, daunting journey across muddy grounds, and were tired from running away from the animals while making sure their precious cargo of dead corpses remained intact than half-chewed, but they too continued their long march into the night.

"You've passed the test, yaoguai !" Senior Guard Liu waved his hands when the troops were a few steps ahead; the guard didn't even look back.

Wei Ying stared in bewilderment and stammered a litany of confused 'What' and 'Why's, before going down into a string of curses. Then, when he realized that he was getting left behind, he picked himself up from the ground and tried his best to catch up with the crowd.

.

Jinshan was as generic as any remote village in the mountains, hence its name; and an identifier that the mountain belonged to the province of Lanling, though barely, due to its location on the fringes of the uninhabited region. It reminded Wei Ying a bit of Da Shan closer to Yunmeng from a previous lifetime, as it was a small rural agricultural settlement with plenty of farmlands, vast virgin forests and snow-capped mountains as stunning backdrops - and not a single living soul in sight.

There were a few houses and huts at the edges of the village, which looked abandoned and truthfully, a bit creepy to sleep in at night, since dirt, weeds and probably snakes made their homes in those structures - and boy, if it weren't for the torches carried by the soldiers, the entire village would've looked pitch black after sundown. After walking past the buildings, when Wei Ying was on his last legs because his stomach was growling incessantly and he had no physical energy left, he was greeted by a spectacular sight, made more mysterious because he was blinking blearily from exhaustion and some chilly nighttime fog was drifting by.

At the heart of Jinshan was a large tract of cleared land, surrounded by a circular fence teeming with the faint glow of magic, talismans tied into knots, and various parchments sewn into the rope and wooden posts inscribed with mystical symbols. The area was well-lit with torches and lanterns, and within the large circle was a sprawling military camp that consisted of rows of dormitories and buildings of various shapes and sizes were built around in an organized spiralling geometrical pattern around a temple in the center - a rather impressive five-storey pagoda that looked a little rundown with its wooden walls and beams needing a fresh coat of paint and worn out with age, but there were a number of odd bamboo constructions attached to it, such as platforms, scaffolding and ladders, suggesting that renovations were in the works.

On the campgrounds, Wei Ying noticed that some men in smaller groups were performing what looked like martial arts and cultivation drills in a central courtyard - there were even disciplined shouts of ‘One! Two! One! Two!’ -, a few uniformed ones scurrying back and forth with documents and other objects in their hands that was impossible to identify from where he was, at a distance, and yet a few others strategically placed on watch towers and near entrance gates as armed swordsmen and bowmen patrols. Wei Ying was surprised because he thought they were going to be caged like prisoners in a jail or an underground dungeon in some godforsaken place, and instead, he was brought to what he believed to be a secret military training academy or sorts - the place actually looked quite presentable, and just as good as the camps he used to run back in the day as Yunmeng Jiang’s premiere young master, in a previous lifetime. A quick inhale, and Wei Ying detected scents of cooked food - which made his stomach protest again -, of drying paint and mortar, of cut grass and freshly swept brick floors, of fragrant floral detergent from drying laundry and soaps of pots being washed, and the light sourness of the sweat of men that had worked hard to build up the place and populate it only very recently. There were no dank dirty buildings with vertical bars, or grimy cobwebbed caves with thick locked doors, nary a sound of a weeping man or screams of those being tortured by chains and whips, and he didn’t see slaves working on farms or dusty quarries, or any of such equipment - it wasn’t a prison camp at all.

“Welcome to your new home, recruits!” someone announced from a watch tower with a grin, and it took Wei Ying a few seconds to digest the entire scenery and the new sights, sounds and smells. He’d passed by the main gates unknowingly, and the next thing he knew, Lan Zhan groaned with relief and stood up properly in front of him, amongst the soldiers that had accompanied them during the long, laborious journey - the Gusu Lan man was truly awake, though still rubbing his temples from dissipating headaches.

Wei Ying cried out Lan Zhan's name, then threw caution into the wind and ran towards his dearly missed darling man, with arms wide open for a welcoming embrace; never mind that he was hugging the spouse dressed awkwardly only in messy pieces of muddied cloth and wrinkled straw.

.

Being new to the surroundings and disorientated after struggling through a long day - one whose body was too tired to even climb another step, the other too weak after a prolonged spell of migraine and fever -, the two men were thoughtfully herded through the motions by Senior Guard Liu. After taking them to an unoccupied mess hall at nine o' clock to have simple army-style lukewarm meals of reheated leftover rice, soy sauce chicken and stir-fried seasonal greens and mushrooms - under the watchful eyes of patrol guards -, they were shuffled to newly-built bathhouse situated next to a river source; cold baths were a norm, to Wei Ying's chagrin, but his sticky and sweaty body and its aching joints were too tired to complain. Lan Zhan remained a man of a few words while he struggled to get to grips with the confusing situation he'd found himself in - because he wasn't sure if he was with friend or foe in a village he'd never heard before, trapped and manhandled like a prisoner -, but having an intimate moment of being naked with Wei Ying inside a rectangular pool while being observed by clothed men, was at least still comforting to some extent; he found it therapeutic to grab a soaped washcloth to scrub whiny Wei Ying's back in the rippling but freezing waters, and Wei Ying returned the favour half-heartedly in less than half the time, before grumbling that it was too cold, and that they should get out before someone caught a flu.

Senior Guard Liu took away their dirtied garments and handed them fresh new ones - white cotton pyjama robes that looked fit for lesser servants or people of lower classes, though neither men complained when they simply put them on. Then, there were some paperwork to be done, and they were, once again, escorted to a different building in the fenced camps and made to sit on back-breaking stools inside a sterile, sparsely furnished room lit by lamps, faced with a senior officer at the desk that poured through stacks of documents even so late into the night. Wei Ying was nodding off when he rummaged his satchel - which was returned to him under close scrutiny by the guards - to present his identification papers. Lan Zhan, who fared better than Wei Ying in terms of wakefulness, merely took a look at a sack that contained their belongings, and shrugged when the guards asked if he wanted to wear his ill-fitting Gusu Lan robes or test the spouse's walking cane. He just reached into his own bag and fished out his papers, and took note that magic did work in the camp grounds, but under very tight control by a greater power - the robes and cane remained unanimated, but the Bag of Holding still functioned, after all.

The officer peered at the couple, held up their marriage certificates issued by the registrar of the Cai district during the last season, and squinted at them; it was hard to tell if the pictures drawn on the certificates matched the actual portraits sitting in front of the table right then; Lan Zhan had grown so much in weight and looked worse for wear, while Wei Ying remained thin and bony - but the convoluted backstory behind the use of different names and pseudonyms made the document processing procedure a muddled mess.

“Lan... Wu Ji? Masked Hero? Yiling Patriarch? Wei Wuxian? Which is it, then?”

“The last one, your honour. There's another piece of document attached to the certificate that proves my original identity, Your Honor,” Wei Ying yawned disinterestedly and rubbed his eyes adorably; his body was winding down for the day and after a meal and bath, he was ready to curl up on the floor to snore the night away.

“... Married? Husband and husband? That’s... peculiar.”

“Currently, I’m the husband, and he is my wife, Your Honor. It’s... complicated,” Lan Zhan’s apprehension was obvious, his voice terse, anxious and sheepish at the same time. His hand snaked under the table to entwine with Wei Ying’s and his thumb rubbed warm circles into the latter’s palm, to seek and give reassurance to one another. Wei Ying nnngh’d and shifted the chair closer so that their shoulders touched, and Wei Ying mmmh’d lazily before leaning in and resting his head on the spouse’s crook of the neck - brazenly right in front of the officer. Not unsurprisingly, the officer’s face soured with disdain and he cleared his throat from the discomfort that heterosexual males feel when faced with such situations.

“You... Both of you are now within the lands governed by the Imperial Court, and according to immigration and residential laws issued by the capital state of Chang’an, you will be issued new identification certificates tomorrow so that you may lawfully remain in this land, with certain conditions imposed,” the officer concluded, after examining their papers and returning them to the couple. The escort guards took away Wei Ying and Lan Zhan’s possessions once again - they seemed to understand that those discreet Bag of Holdings will only open upon their rightful owner’s commands, so those bags were confiscated when there was no further use -, and led the couple out of the administration office of the military camp.

It was already eleven by the time they were shoved into their designated room in one of the dormitories. They’d passed by interesting-looking characters along the way, which made quite an impression since they were men training their muscles and fighting skills in the outdoor courtyard, performing cultivation moves, sparring against one another, and wielding deadly weapons and spells at such ungodly hours. Most of them were burly-looking men - some of them were shirtless and sported nasty scars and an air of masculine arrogance -, though a handful were women warriors who demonstrated combat skills comparable to the opposite gender. Both men took mental notes but didn't say much, since the guards accompanying them seemed to have a tight rein on them, and kicked their shins each time they stopped to watch. Once they entered indoors, it was quiet and dark - strict discipline was enforced and no one was out and about; Lan Zhan thought the stifling but tranquil atmosphere reminisced his former home in the Cloud Recesses, where lights were out at the stipulated time and the town was deserted after that.

“It may be confusing to find yourselves living in a strange, foreign place all of the sudden, but the officers will explain your circumstances and the ground rules tomorrow. Get some rest, wake-up call's at six,” Senior Guard Liu informed before closing the door and locked it with a resounding ‘click!’. For the first time, the couple realized that they were truly imprisoned - in their bedroom. It was a mediocre chamber with one partially-opened window, two tables and chairs, cupboards and cabinets containing standard-issue uniforms, other clothing articles, some basic necessities, a jug of drinking water, a few light fixtures and very minimal decor. In one corner was a spittoon, some washcloths and a pail of water. There was a wooden bunk bed for two with creaky mattresses, some clean but pitifully thin-looking pillows, and blankets that looked more appropriate to be used as bath towels instead.

A hatch opened on the door at eye level, and the couple was a little surprised to see the upper half of the senior guard's face. “If you need anything, you'll have to call out for a patrolling guard's attention. There's always a few in the dorms, and they're fully armed. Your belongings are in the sack over there,” his eyes gestured to another corner of the bedroom, “-- but I'm sure by now you've come to understand that this entire place is under very tight security and that we've magical Eyes and Senses observing you from every angle. Basic, limited magic use is permitted, but anything more will trigger alarms and powerful golems will be summoned to neutralize any threats - even inside your bedroom." A pause, and Wei Ying actually squeaked in fear, and he quickly grabbed Lan Zhan's wrist for comfort.

With that final instruction, Senior Guard Liu bid the bedroom-prisoners good night, and closed the hatch. Wei Ying's eyes roamed around the room, and as expected, he sniffed out many activated Eye spells - on the walls, on every surface and all nooks and crannies possible, on the bedspreads, and even at the bottom of the spittoon.

"What was that all about? First we went through a harrowing jungle survival trek to reach this place that was masked as a test, then we were sent to this hell hole with cold food and showers, after that, we were examined like rats and illegal immigrants, and now, house arrest? Ah, I can't..." Wei Ying yawned, despite the cause for annoyance and alarm, but Lan Zhan simply ran his fingers through Wei Ying's slightly damp hair, and murmured that they should just follow the instructions and call it a night. A sweet kiss on Wei Ying's forehead sealed the deal; they'd figure out their situation once they've gotten their heads together - somehow, in this ultra-restricted environment.

Moments later, Wei Ying snuggled up with Lan Zhan in the narrow lower bunk, and sighed gratefully into the latter's extra layers of soft belly fat when the older man placed both hands around Wei Ying's back and give it a light, intimate squeeze, like hugging a pillow. The couple used both blankets together as one, just so that they can keep themselves a little toasty for the rest of the chilly, long night.

.

Lan Zhan? Laaaaan Zhaaaaan?

“I’m here.”

Ah, I finally found you! I was so worried because I couldn’t contact you using normal telepathy means, because they’ve pretty much blocked all forms of magic. This whole place stinks, even the pillow smells unnaturally synthetic, y’know, like the chemical dyes used for fabrics. Oh, I’m so glad now that at least I can rant to my heart’s content through ErNet’s first-class VPN encrypted connection. It’s a bit slower than our usual soul-to-soul communication, but it’s better than nothing! Ah, laogong, can you scratch my back? I think I scraped somewhere around the middle while giving you a piggyback ride at the hills earlier today, and it’s starting to itch. A bit lower... mmm... yes, yes, circles please, nnngh...

“Mn.”

Laogong! I’m actually messaging like crazy with Ernie and Ni-er right now, they’re still alive! Oh, I’m gonna burst out in tears, but I don’t want those Eyeballs to see me crying like a baby in your arms. Ernie’s just sent an update - my four cloned siblings, your four servants from the Negative Plane, even the lovely model family of A-Ji and A-Xian, as well as a few more individuals from our Kingdom - they’ve been captured by a magical gourd by the Tao priest along with scores of yaoguai during today’s hunt! Many of the lesser demons have melted into demonic blood inside the gourd to be served to the Tao Masters, while our subjects survived because they're just that awesome, protected by Wei da ge 's incredible powers that transcends magic! Oh, Lan Zhan, I'm just so glad the people we know are still alive... it's a terrible witch hunt, I tell you!

“Do not be afraid. I know.”

Y-- You do? Eh??!! Not fair! You should've told me earlier, you pig!”

(in which, Wei Ying reached down to pinch Lan Zhan's tummy and jiggled the fat a bit, and Lan Zhan nnnh happily - though cleverly masqueraded as an insignificant grunt of someone about to fall asleep. To the voyeuristic Eyeball onlookers, it would seem the couple in bed was engaged in a rather mushy, lovey-dovey ritual of comforting and consoling one another before going to sleep, with plenty of sweet, meaningless whispers of nothings, of exchanging backrubs and of fingertips touching rather inappropriately here and there between men.)

“Your lower belly. My hair.”

Ah, you spoke so softly, I could hardly hear you. It's a secret, right. Let me see... I'm touching my stomach... lower, lower... is it the belly button? No? Mm... oh, I feel something around my pubes! It's a strange lump... is it a wart? When did I grow a wart around my pubic hair? That's disgusting! It wiggles! It's... Ernie?! Ernie is hiding as a wart in my pubes? Oh, laogong, that's so clever of our son!

And your hair... hold on, let me reach across and slide my fingers into your hair. Wow, it's lush and silky smooth. Eh? Ehh? Something is moving inside! Are those fleas... ha ha ha! Of course not, it's fuzzy and squishy! It's our little girl Ni-er, hiding in her papa's hair! Ah, I hope she camouflaged herself well and dyed her fur black, so that she doesn't stand out! Laogong, you're such a brilliant man and our furry children are safe and sound! I love you so much!

“Mn. I love you from the bottom of my heart too, Wei Ying.”

It didn't take long for Wei Ying to start dry-humping his spouse while settling between the latter's broad thighs, then continuing to rub each other inappropriately, whether on the generously pliant, jiggly abdomen, the ample large-breasted chest, or locked in deep kisses while brushing each other's hair. It looked like the men were masturbating each other and having quickies in bed, so those who were observing the couple through magical Eyeballs decided to look away for the sake of their sexuality, send a conclusive report to the camp's administrator that they had witnessed and have proof of a full-blown homosexual couple in their midst, and retch into their own spittoons promptly thereafter.

.

“The precepts of Tao are ensconced in the principles of balance and relativity, which is faithful to the philosophy of the Yin and the Yang that everyone knows and finds comfort in. Do not fear the Tao, it is the way of the truth.

The truth is: there is always, to an extent, goodness and evil, though neither is absolute nor deemed dominant. Balance is peaceful, harmonious, productive, and there is a continuous flow between both ends of the spectrum. Imbalance, on the other hand, is chaotic, skewed and stagnant, doomed to cripple itself and self-destruct in many ways, until the next state of balance is achieved.

Tao espouses fairness, justice, nature and normalcy, in which everyone achieves a certain level of satisfaction while compromising certain aspects to satisfy others. Therefore, the way of the Tao is inclusive and diverse, and an amalgamation of the numerous local paganistic beliefs, philosophies and religions under single unifying system, and yet, individual sects and members of unique fraternities are allowed to exist and practise independently, as long as the way of the Tao is lived, respected and demonstrated through one's behaviours, thinking and feelings.

In times of need and when confrontation is unavoidable, the Tao philosophy for fighting is to use opposing forces to extinguish the aggressor, thus achieving a state of balance and harmony. This creates a chasm of opportunity to use creative ways to triumph the enemy:

To fight fire, one can pour water to wet the flammables, that there is no longer heat to generate flames;

Or, one can fan the flames with great winds until the fire burns itself out to ashes, or better yet, control the flow of air that the fire starves itself back to cinder.

Lastly, one can consider to fight using fire against fire, the most powerful and advantageous form of attack and defense; a seemingly sacrilegious and counterintuitive move that can only be performed under the strict supervision of qualified Tao Masters, who have the final say in such critical interpretations of the Tao faith and philosophy.”

Wei Ying read aloud a page from a book he’d found on the tables in their bedroom; it was a sort of holy bible of the unheard-of religion and it was one of the very few reading materials available inside the minimalistic room. Right then, he let off a loud fart to signify the kind of bullshit he was being fed by the Imperialistic dogs and their new Tao masters, and unloaded some of the discomforts that his body had been holding in since the night before.

The large, bucket-like spittoon which nicely cupped Wei Ying’s rump, and doubled as a portable squat toilet inside their jail-cum-bedroom, filled up quickly, and with a quick wipe using cloth and disposable paper, then a quick close of a lid, while fingers pinching the nose, Wei Ying promptly shoved the vessel containing bodily wastes and used washcloths through another bigger hatch built into the wall below the window, where buckets of clean water were waiting in exchange since dawn to refill the pail in their room, used for rinsing, wipes and for drinking as well.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, I think I see some vegetable gardens at the back, from the flickering torch lights,” he grunted, as he dragged a few buckets of water through the hole in the wall with a hinged wooden panel attached to it - too small for a man to crawl through and escape, but large enough to transfer certain household items -, one by one into their room to refill their pail.

Lan Zhan continued to sweep the floor with a straw broom he found in the closet, and started unpacking their stuff in the sack that was carelessly dumped against the wall the night before by the guards. He had woken up a little before five and felt refreshed after a torturous day, and went ahead to complete his morning routines - particularly because he needed to keep up his hygiene and self-discipline, and because he knew that Wei Ying would hog the precious spittoon once that man woke. He opened his Bag of Holding using the limited magic that was permitted, and realized in dismay that his powerful belongings could not be accessed - without weaving higher levels of magical qi, those compartments that contained his worldly treasures would not open. Fortunately, he'd stored enough mundane and ordinary items of comfort and convenience at the bottom-most storage spaces, and he could take those out - but he didn't, because he knew too well that Eye and Sense spells surrounding their room were watching.

“Remember, I’m magicless and cannot fight since my qi meridians have been severed since last year,” Wei Ying deliberately revealed to his unseen audience, while acting nonchalantly and working hard to fill up their water supply, “So later, when you’re interrogated by officers, please tell them that I’d prefer cleaning, cooking and menial duties. I don’t care if they insist that I’m a yaoguai, but the facts speak for themselves - I can not and will not be forced to fight.”

“Mn,” Lan Zhan nodded ever so slightly, as he placed some plain stationery, tableware and a small incense burner with packs of sandalwood resin, on the tables - souvenirs from his hometown to make living in their new sterile room a bit more palatable. “There is still time before six, so I will write a short report about our investigation into the murder of twenty men that we came across yesterday, and about our circumstances, in the hopes that the officers do not accuse us, and possibly, be persuaded help to locate my missing brother,” he said, and started to empty the sack’s remaining contents onto the floor - including a set of thoroughly whacked white robes, and a badly beaten-up walking cane, some old clothes and useless knick knacks Wei Ying had grabbed from their abandoned cart the day before. He found an empty notebook with most of its pages torn off, then slowly peeled off another page and took his seat at the table. Lan Zhan had some prior experience communicating and dealing with the bureaucratic ilk of the domineering Imperial Court, and he knew that the way to their civil servants' hearts and minds was probably through civil and scholarly ways, compared to, say, wielding swords and spells.

Right on the dot, at six o' clock when the first slivers of daybreak broke through the dark skies, and birdsongs began to colour the woods surrounding the military camp, there was a curt knock and the sounds of the door being unlocked. Moments later, the couple, now garbed in their new provided outfits of contrasting black and whites with chequered patterns and a diagonal strip running across the chest, were ushered out by guards to meet with an attending camp officer.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 175

Seen on an old, dog-eared poster that had seen better days besides frost, rain, mould and a fair bit of sun, hanging from a wooden post near the entrance to the mysterious secret military camp in Jinshan:

Located in the heart of the hinterlands between two of the most prestigious and affluent provinces in the country, yet deeply hidden and secretive that no foreign presence could ever hope to penetrate, the new and highly undisclosed Imperial Military Research and Development Centre #xxx is now operational and ready to receive test subjects for training!

By the Joint Decree No. XXX announced by the Ministries of Religion and Philosophy, the Imperial Armed Forces, and the Council of the Mystical Arcane Arts and Paranormal Science, this centre adds another spectacular star to the network of many allied establishments under the Imperial rule, for the pursuit in the advancement of the political influence and military capabilities of our great nation, and for the glory of our King.

Military generals and commanders have been ordered to scout for potential candidates to be enlisted into the Centre, where superhuman and supernatural individuals are tested to determine their unique abilities, and are incorporated into the Army as future great leaders and living weapons for the glory of our King. New research data shall be translated into new knowledge for the benefit of our war machines and for our civilization, thus leveraging the skills and prominence of such gifted individuals to benefit the greater society.

Centre #xxx is uniquely positioned to synergize the might of the Imperial Armed Forces and the lesser-known nascent powers of mystical religions. An impressive magic-imbued five-storey temple pagoda ensures complete control of qi and other forms of magical energies around the area, bolstered by a large, sprawling military camp that can house up to ten thousand men and a full suite of advanced infrastructures, research and testing facilities, scientific and military equipment, religious and other mystical structures and paraphernalia.

The religion of Tao has been identified to partner with Centre #xxx with the added advantage to spread its wings and outreach to the people of the Middle Kingdom with its noble principles and values. All generals and commanders are hereby instructed to take note and support the program, particularly in the efforts to form human-demon bonded pairs as a new, potentially ground-breaking addition to our beloved nation's almighty arsenal.

All Hail the King!

.

The new couple, amongst a handful of others, were lined up in the central courtyard with nosy spectators that consisted of seasoned veteran comrades from the sidelines, under the watchful eyes of guards both on the ground and from the balconies of watch towers in the perimeter. Wei Ying realized that both he and Lan Zhan constituted just one of the twelve other couples - rather, bonded pairs - that had been rounded up the day before by numerous witch-hunting squads sent out by the Imperial army, and now subjected to a formal induction course.

There were human warriors, wizards, and cultivation practitioners dressed in the same black-white uniforms although they sported more exotic and stylized hairstyles, clan-specific accessories and tattoo marks, or sometimes, strange skin colours and patterns, fit for fantasy novel book covers. Beside each person was a kind of non-human entity - the so-called yaoguai -, which looked perfectly normal - until they started to growl, hiss and spit, and all sorts of ghastly inhuman appendages started to grow from their bodies that identified their true nature - be it a mythical beast, a demon or a devil, an undead such as fierce corpses and phantoms, or something else that was as nightmarish as the former Yiling Patriarch could tolerate. Wei Ying knew that for such creatures, demons and spirits to have gained enough qi through cultivation or other means, and maintain a human-like appearance even under Anti-Magic influences, meant that he was standing amongst the strongest, and most enviable of inhuman characters known through the legends of that day and age.

The two men were mesmerized by the sheer audacity of some of the more violent couples who roared and threatened everyone in sight, and the colourful variety in which they appeared; they admired the surreal scene from a safe distance since every couple was instructed to maintain a respectful, non-aggressive presence in a rather sinister, hostile atmosphere filled with resentment, hatred, anger and bitterness.

Despite that, it seemed the situation was under control; each couple remained in their assigned space, and the crowd around them wasn't too intrusive - people either pointed fingers or gestured at them, stared rudely, or whispered to each other in murmurs, but nothing more than that. Wei Ying reciprocated expectedly due to his curious nature, and whispered into Lan Zhan's ear, "Look around! Everyone who isn't an Imperial soldier has the same tattoo on their necks like us... including those men at the sides who look like they've been here for weeks! That sleazy senior guard, he lied! They're not going to give us a fair trial nor remove the tattoo, and certainly, they're not letting us go after listening to our explanations, because I'm sure every detainee probably tried to talk his way out too! As long as we're in this strange anti-magic field, we're trapped! The moment you step out of the fences, you'll be knocked down immediately, just like yesterday!"

Lan Zhan tightened his fists and pursed his lips, but remained calm. He acknowledged Wei Ying's observations with a curt 'Mn', before someone cried out, "Atten---tion! The masters of this military centre shall give their speeches and important information about your stay in this place!"

One of the couples - a fearsome-looking tall and broad-shouldered swordsman and next to him, a transformed seven-foot humanoid demonness with the face of a tiger and whip-like furred tail sprouting from the sexy rump stuffed inside a bikini, emanating faint dark wisps and subdued magical aura - yelled back in defiance, "Hey! Your guards said that we're brought here for questioning and that we'll be released soon after that, but didn't mention anything about staying over! What the hell is going on?! Why are we kept in this stinking anti-magic cage? When are we going to eat?" The female yaoguai licked her lips with a growl, and some men beside her shivered in fear.

"That brother is correct!" someone concurred angrily, and Wei Ying spun to the back; he didn't notice a bunch of brawny men in similar uniforms - and medals and other awards decorating their attire - had assembled behind them. They were rather dignified-looking Imperial soldiers sans demonic partners, and Lan Zhan correctly guessed that those were cultivators with high potential to be heroes, gifted with incredible talents and abilities, and were sent to the camp for special training purposes. Through their shared secret communication pathway, Wei Ying agreed with plenty of nodding smug emojis. "These xiongdi s and I were informed that we've been selected by the highest levels of leadership to participate in a top-secret interview that will secure our future prospects, but all I see is an ill-maintained, hardly used facility with non-Imperial foreigners and stranger bedfellows. Where's the interview and why are we being held here against our will?" the man added brashly.

Silence pervaded the courtyard when birdsongs and insect chirpings ceased from the clamour of shouting dissent, against the backdrop of a rising sun during the crisp spring morning filled with light mountain breezes and the scents of freshly cut grass and tilled soil heavy in the air.

To the men's chagrin, their verbalized dissatisfactions were ignored, and instead, the Lieutenant that Wei Ying met before appeared on a slightly raised platform - a stage of sorts -, followed by a line of what looked like senior officers of the so-called military centre, dressed in smart-looking robes with dragonhead designs, mystical imprints and whatnots, their golden embroidered threads gleaming in sunlight. Despite his young age, his strong, confident gaze and upright posture seemed to command everyone's attention and respect; there was an appealing, vibrant youthful aura about him, charismatic yet disquieting at the same time because of the overwhelming presence radiating from just one man in front of an audience of hundreds; neither Wei Ying nor Lan Zhan could put a finger on it, and both agreed, through their shared invisible connections, that the man was probably enchanted by underlying mind-altering spells.

The din of murmurs and whispers died down almost immediately; Lan Zhan surmised that their comrades were also traumatized, or at least impressed, by their unique experiences and encounters with the higher-ups of the Imperial army, including the said Lieutenant.

“Arrivals to the great nation of the Middle Kingdom, and citizens of our countries, I bid you welcome to this military centre! You are the chosen ones, because we’ve known, and we’ve tested, that you have the potential to be greater than who you are, and you have someone important to protect with that greatness! You will be equipped with that training, here in these beautiful, secluded lands, and you will face challenges that will only grow you towards that goal...”

Wei Ying wasn’t really affected by the sudden change in the mood, though he could appreciate when the Lieutenant spoke about protecting someone that he loved; he did spend half a day and more breaking his back just for his spouse, after all, and his body was still sore even after a restful night. He crossed his arms and took an interest to the rather well-presented, captivating and persuasive opening speech, which, in his opinion, netted the Lieutenant a few more stars in his books. Lan Zhan remained passive and expressionless, and took a step closer to his partner. For the older man, there was more information to gather and analyze about their new surroundings.

.

Speeches, briefings, handing out of brochures, standard military-issue gear and other stuff that made living in the camp more pleasant - it sounded way nicer than, say, a ‘military research and development centre’, because that made them victims of crazy lab experiments -, the couple had gone through the motions plenty of times before in their previous lifetimes and careers, so they took it all in stride. It felt as though they were sent to study in another sect’s boarding school, and they weren’t too far off, really.

Let's see... wake up at six, an hour to clean up the room, wash down and personal hygiene, restock room supplies, laundry, ya da da... breakfast at seven, be ready to start the day at eight. Hours of classes, lots o' brainwashing by reciting the rules, religion and philosophy of the Imperial Court and the Way of the Tao, cultivation practice and outdoor activities... lunch... repeat and rinse... breaks in between... earn merits by helping out in the vegetable gardens, general cleaning and cooking... dinner by sundown, then night time meditation and other more relaxing forms of scholarly or physical activities, and lights out by ten, latest before midnight for some special circumstances.

“It’s just like studying in the Cloud Recesses,” Lan Zhan seemed to talk to himself, as he browsed through several booklets filled with instructions and religious and philosophical texts packed neatly in bags and given to each so-called bonded pair. There were complaints from those pairs who didn’t like to read, and Wei Ying thought he was too old to go back to school - he yawned each time an official took the stage and introduced a booklet or two, according to the topic being presented, including daily routines, how-to’s, rules and principles, overview of the camp and its operations, rules about seniority, hierarchies and clan-clan interactions, general descriptions about the Imperial Court and the Tao religion, and the ilk.

Eh... I’m not going back to study, because I’m a very busy, married man! You read those things and tell me the answers, okay? We’re lucky because classes start this afternoon, so you better familiarize yourself - and us - with the whole setup. I just want to freely explore this place later and get acquainted with what could be my new home for the next few weeks or months. You better convince the officers why I’m on the missing list of trainees... or should I say, detainees!

Lan Zhan simply “Mn” as he finished reading a couple of booklets and memorized a map printed on parchment, while standing and listening to a series of lectures delivered under the rising sun by each officer waiting in line. The Lieutenant had marched off shortly after giving his welcoming speech, leaving the increasingly fidgety, uneasy and restless men in the courtyard, while the rest of the camp's residents went about with their morning routines and having breakfast at the common dining halls.

Later, armed with bags issued by the camp officials, the crowd of twelve bonded pairs and ten Imperial cultivators were taken to a separate dining hall to pick up ordinary military rations of breakfast breads and dumplings filled with meat and sweet fillings; some of the yaoguai -kin who didn't take well to man-made foods as sustenance decided to pass, and that meant there were more than enough for everyone. Wei Ying acted like a true lover for Lan Zhan; he showed off his seduction skills by fluttering his eyelashes, chin on hand, while gazing as his spouse munching loudly on a rice ball - as sexy as that may (not) sound -, then cutely stealing nibbles from the said food or from the edges of his man's lips, in which Lan Zhan returned the younger man's feelings by ripping a big bite out of a sugar-coated bun, then grabbing the latter's wrists to reel him in for a deep french-kiss; even their feet played footsies with one another under the canteen-like bench in broad daylight. Wei Ying ended up breathless, giddy, stars in his eyes and syrupy sweetness on his moist, strawberry-pinked lips. It was a daring display and a declaration of their relationship in front of their new classmates, that both men belonged only to their significant other. The rest of the group simply rolled their eyes and either huffed in envy, complained about the lack of privacy and sensitivities, and a couple even wolf-whistled and cheered them on; Wei Ying deduced that some of the bonded pairs had already 'bonded' well in physical and spiritual senses, based on their reactions, and he was satisfied with his puzzle-solving performance to gain a better understanding about the people that he'd be living with in the near future. Lan Zhan simply blushed to the tips of his ears and finished off his meal in relative silence.

Next, after breakfast, a senior guard, who introduced himself by the surname of Zhen, appeared and brought a couple of junior guards with him to take the group to tour the camp grounds. Wei Ying's distrust for senior guards grew - because he believed that all guards in Jinshan were sly, deceitful foxes. His mind wandered off and continued to chatter non-stop, in haphazard directions, and criticized nearly everything he sensed, plus, he had no qualms to add his own opinions to boot.

Ah, our new classmates are such snobs! They didn't even want to shake my hands or say 'hello' when I greeted them. Maybe they've not heard of us? I mean, we were famous at some point in time, but our names are pretty much forgotten by now, and as far out to the northern inland regions of the country. See? I just introduced myself to that Brother Niu and his partner Niu Mo Wang (牛魔王; Ox Demon King), and what did they say? 'There is no such person in today's list of cultivation heroes, and the only ones I've heard sells fake talismans, useless tonic water and fraudulent cosmetics in nearly every major city in the country'... wuuu... it's so frustrating! Oh, and that couple over there, with a serpent-like yaoguai whose skin is full of shiny scales and speaks with a forked tongue, they teased me about being gay and refused to get to know me beyond skin-deep. Hmph! Fools! I ought to show them...

Wei Ying didn't really pay much attention to Senior Guard Zhen or whatever he said (which could be untrustworthy and even more lies, in Wei Ying's perspective). For the most part, though, he avoided eye contact with the guards to make himself as inconspicuous as possible, while the latter busily kept the group in line and made sure they visited key facilities frequently used during their stay at the military centre a.k.a. prison camp. Wei Ying was curious as a monkey, literally, and stealthily turned every knob, opened cabinets, and pressed buttons he came across - quietly, without raising anyone's attention -, while trying to befriend his new circle of bonded pairs as the guards have their hands full in minding more than thirty individuals at any time. He didn't know what to expect from the heroes and legends that walked among them, but he was satisfied in at least getting the names of the bonded pairs and some Imperial cultivators that kept a close eye on the more apparent and prominent yaoguai.

How am I doing, Lan Zhan? I got to know everyone's names... well, at least the yaoguai ones. The yaoguai-kin turned up their noses when I approached, can you believe that! I guess they couldn't smell or taste any magic in me and they see this friendly unassuming lad as a useless, insignificant non-combative civilian. Do you think that would make a good excuse? You could persuade the administrators that I'm a 'civilian' yaoguai, so I can't fight nor use magic. Hey, why don't you opt to be a civilian too, living and working here, instead of running off to fight and risk your life? You can't run far with that oversized body of yours, you know. What do you think?

The reality that they were hunkering down for a longer term than originally believed at the military centre eventually sunk in - amazingly, with little objection from the group. Wei Ying credited the strange bitter flavour in the air that's imperceptible to everyone but himself that conditioned people and yaoguai 's minds to accept their loathsome situation. Those who complained of being held against their will during early morning, began to show strange interest in living in the dorms and to be trained for the glory of the Imperial army and to advance the Way of the Tao (such a mouthful, Wei Ying thought). When one instructor showed them the training halls, martial arts equipment, and a library for meditation and for practising music and other scholarly pursuits, the group applauded after particularly motivating speech about how one's sacrifice to take the journey of personal growth could lead to divine rewards, such as protecting their loved ones and defending their people. At that point, Wei Ying simply gawked stupidly at the reception, but he clapped nevertheless so that he didn't look suspiciously out of place from a classroom of brainwashed-by-propaganda idiots, to say the least. Lan Zhan was, as usual, unreadable in his expressions, and he too, followed suit by moving his hands clumsily against one another.

Oh, that's the common laundry facilities, and look, it's supplied by a stream that flows from a waterfall! I could take our old clothes and the other soiled stuff from the sack, and get them cleaned up here. Hmm, maybe I should explore the waterfall... I'd love to swim in there and maybe catch a fish or two. I'm sure the cooks wouldn't mind letting me use the kitchens. Those bread were dry and the dumplings tasted like they've been stored in a humid, mouldy warehouse for days! I'll do a spicy grilled fish for you, because I think I saw some chilli plants in the vegetable patches near the dorms just now. Over there in that warehouse, I peeked in and some nice stacks of chopped firewood, paper for making books, unprocessed clay and other stuffs... I could spend my idle time carving charms and building mini-gadgets, writing good fortune talismans, or start some handicraft projects. We'll probably need extra chairs for our room, and maybe a few potted plants at the window sill to keep the air fresh. Wouldn't that be great?

By mid-tour, Wei Ying had given up hope of understanding why the whole back-to-school experience was needed; he'd rather spare himself the theatrics and get to the crux of the issue, which, at that moment, was to find out how to make the best of his prison stay. He aimed to make this jail term as comfy as possible, with good food, clean beds and clothes, and reasonable amenities for a five-star glamping-style living, at the minimum.

Wow, look at those doing morning drills in the fields! I guess they've started their classes. The way they practise as pairs look as uncomfortable as hell. Holding hands while doing twin shadow-kick formations? Grabbing each others' waist while doing a corkscrew flips? What's with that frog-legs and flying-crane combo, with the yaoguai grasping his human partner with his clawed toes soaring into the skies? Ugh, those look as stupid as they're as deadly if anyone breaks their partner's spinal cord while doing acrobatics in mid-air! Right? You can tell the instructors that you're too fat to perform any martial arts moves, and look at me, I'm as thin and bony as a piece of dried anchovy, I'll break if you accidentally sit on me! And over there! That demonic half just blew fire at a clay pigeon, and his partner stood too close and was splattered by flaming spit. See, it's dangerous! Oh, the other one seemed to be casting a lightning spell, let's get away before it hits this place...!

Eventually, the group completed a tour of the military centre, learnt about the do's and don'ts, and which areas were restricted for authorized personnel only, and which areas they could freely traverse. They filed out of the cobbled paths and back to the courtyard, where a senior group that had arrived weeks earlier demonstrated the kinds of gruelling training that was expected. Instead of whispers of discontentment or suspicion, the new batch of classmates seemed enthusiastic and cheered on their 'new' seniors; some even took a leaf from the booklets, and shouted 'Fight harder and stronger, dear comrades! Hail the King!' (which made Wei Ying cringed six ways to heaven and hell). Wei Ying remarked again that everyone was astonishingly accepting, docile and obedient after the initial outburst that morning, and he took a whiff of the air - again, there was more magic at play; he could feel pulsing vibrations that suppressed negative feelings and thoughts, though he wasn't affected at all, and Lan Zhan continued to remain steadfastly expressionless, as usual.

It's unfair, isn't it? We can't use magic except for the most basic elemental ones, and yet the masters of the camp are permitted to do whatever they please, such as controlling people's thoughts, emotions and will - they're truly high-level champion cultivators! I suspect the pagoda has something to do with this phenomenon, because every time I look at that derelict building that's being given a fresh coat of paint while its insides continue to rot and fester with the stench of Dark corruption, I feel shivers running down my spine, and unseen eyes glaring back at me!

Lan Zhan looked up at the pagoda; a tall five-storey featureless silhouette set against drifting morning mists, it looked like a haunted temple and whenever winds blew, strange creaking noises and creepy howls emanated from that direction.

“That building is off limits, and is heavily guarded, by the way,” the keenly observant Senior Guard Zhen stated, while leading the group to their next and final destination, “Access is strictly on an invitation-only basis by the priests that reside in there, because the entire complex is being renovated and it’s dangerous to remain in the vicinity during this time.” Wei Ying clicked his tongue in annoyance, partly from his dismay that it would be harder break into what he believed to be the heart of the mystery, and partly because the rest of the men and yaoguai simply ooh-aah’ed and stared idiotically like ogling tourists taken for a ride in an exotic faraway historical and cultural site. Clearly there was nothing fanciful to admire about a dilapidated structure that exuded pure evil, yet the irksome mind-bending magical effects continued to alter perceptions and create such demeaning behaviour amongst respectable champions and heroes. However, from the exterior, the escorting guard wasn’t wrong - there seemed to be workers already hard at work in painting, hammering and sawing wood to fix the centuries-old structure from a state of sad disrepair. Wei Ying observed how strange and bent figures - mysterious silhouettes shuffling in the fog - carried various construction material, stone statues and other religious artifacts in and out of the temple’s grounds, and sometimes up, the five-story building.

Wei Ying kicked the dirt and sent a few dried leaves and gravel fluttering into the air when an opportune breeze blew by, and against all odds, his little brigade of papermen-infused debris began its perilous journey to the core of religious corruption.

.

“How’re you feeling?” Wei Ying asked, and waved a hand in front of Lan Zhan’s eyes a few times. When there was hardly a response, the hand naughtily landed on Lan Zhan's bulging tummy - Wei Ying mourned the loss of tightness that heralded the olden days when his darling man wore undersized outfits until the seams nearly burst, because back then, he could happily pinch, jiggle and play with the single overturned wok of fat upon the darling's abdomen and feel the complex harmony of firmness and softness beneath a layer of infinitely delicate Gusu Lan silk. Their uniforms were one thing that Wei Ying commended out of the hundreds that he'd complained since that morning - they were sewed meticulously with nary a stitch out of place, and the cutting was perfect to comfortable fit; even Lan Zhan's protruding front, enlarged chest and upper arms, bloated thighs, and expanded buttocks slid nicely into the uniform with extra room to spare. The warm hand on Lan Zhan's tummy soon transformed into two walking fingers, and Wei Ying walked them like the first man on the vast, rounded featureless moon, save for an obvious dip that was Lan Zhan's belly button.

The older man nnngh'd in a dull manner and swatted the intrusive tip-toeing hand from his tummy sluggishly, like a half-hearted effort to chase away an irksome speck of fly. He was awake, definitely, though rather muted in his actions, radiated contentment and all-encompassing love and acceptance for all worldly matters, and sported a slightly drunken smile. The two men relaxed in some plush cushioned chairs while awaiting their turn to receive their paperwork for formal admission into the centre after the so-called induction session, inside the camp's main administration office. Their briefing and tour ended around mid-morning, where all participants (detainees, in Wei Ying's vocabulary) were allowed to return to their rooms, sort out their bags and belongings, and familiarize with their new home (prison, again, in Wei Ying's words) until lunch time. Senior Guard Zhen informed that during the time they did the walkabout, their papers were processed by the administrators so that they could be issued on time. Each bonded pair and Imperial cultivator received a particular time and location for collection.

Further away, a large, bronze bell as tall as a man and just as wide, sitting at the top of the cordoned-off pagoda, tolled at every hour to remind everyone about the time, and in some indescribable ways, instilled a sense of reverence for their new lifestyle and an urgency to keep up one's tight grip on discipline and purity of thought, in line with the way of the Tao; already, every participant had received a short lecture about the religion by spokesperson priest towards the end of the tour, and for unknown reasons, the sermon had a deep, profound effect on everyone - except the perennially obnoxious, god-unfearing Wei Ying, of course.

Lan Zhan! Stop acting as though you're walking on air and have had a spiritual awakening of some sort! You've not in nirvana and this is not your monastic paradise! You, like everyone else, have been drugged! My little paperboys have reached the pagoda's external scaffolding, and guess what? Each time the bell tolls, zillions of dust-like particles are sent surging into the air and they fall like polluted raindrops upon this village - they're spores, I tell you, they're brain-washing spores! You can't see them, and you might think they're just construction waste dusts from the renovation works... but you've breathed in the contaminated air, so you've been affected.

Lan Zhan turned around to face the spouse, and he was heavy-lidded and slurring in his speech, "W-- Whadd... What should I d.. do?"

Before Wei Ying could figure out a solution, a junior Tao priest appeared - a bald boy dressed in simple grey robes and no more than sixteen years of age, who looked very polite and mild-mannered -, and bowed. "Thank you, kind sirs, for waiting at your appointed time and in front of the Ninth Office," he said, then swung his horsetail whisk as though to clear the air; the hallway was heavy with the smells of sweaty men and undesirable pungency from the more bestial yaoguai, who were also sitting on rows of chairs, half-dozing and languishing lazily while awaiting their turn to be called. Senior Guard Liu emerged from the said Ninth Office and kept the door open. Wei Ying narrowed his gleaming eyes when he sensed a sudden change in the atmosphere.

Lan Zhan! That whisk... the Taoist's weapon of choice, of course! The quality of the continuous flow of qi changed with its movements, like a gentle leaf guiding the flow of water - it's flimsy, rather unnoticeable, but it serves its purpose well... a perfect assassin's tool, if it was imbued with spiritual disturbances and poisons! Look at you, you're suddenly wide awake! Be careful, do not fall for their traps or yield to their pleas, because the air in which you breathe, and the flow of energy through your skin and meridians, control your thinking and state of mind as well! Also, I don't trust that greasy guard. If that man surnamed Liu tells you something good, it's definitely not!

Like clockwork, Lan Zhan stood up and appeared instantly invigorated, as though he just had a caffeine shot and was about to attend an important interview. He reciprocated the priest's bow with folded hands at the front, and Wei Ying reluctantly followed suit, while keeping a sharp eye on the guard. Regardless of the misgivings the couple had towards their captors - now masters, guardians and minders in a farce that they rather not play a part of -, they still had to behave for the sake of their survival.

The two walked behind the priest and Senior Guard Liu into the Ninth Office, and the door closed with a resounding 'click!'.

.

The Ninth Office was actually a meeting room, with a table, stacks of documents on its surface, and a few chairs; the walls were white and clean, and there was a potted plant in a corner, just for decorative purposes. Here, an extensive discussion took place about the future of the couple's stay in the military centre.

Lan Zhan did most of the listening, and surprisingly, the talking. He openly informed Senior Guard Liu and the unnamed Tao priest that as husband, he was representing both of them in their enrollment in the military centre.

“Senior Guard Liu, you found us yesterday in the woods then brought us in, and today, you're already hard at work helping out with the centre's administration office. You're certainly multi-tasking and multi-talented,” Lan Zhan politely stated with a bow of head. The cunning guard grinned at being praised, and immediately became irritatingly friendly, “Oh, Wang Ji, you speak so well about me! Come, come, have another cup of tea. I go hunting for new recruits with a squad whenever there is a need to replenish the numbers in the centre. Not everyone stays and some go missing... for certain reasons. Yaoguai s making off on their own is a common occurrence... human cultivators like you and I can surely relate to that, no? The numbers are pretty much stabilized these days, so I only need to make a trip once a week, according to the Lieutenant's orders.”

Lan Zhan ‘Mn’ and took the offer to sip a cup of freshly-brewed pu'er tea. He knew that as long as he kept the duo's attention to him and not Wei Ying, he'd have plenty of opportunities to covertly gather more information. “Of course, of course. Wei Ying is my wife, and my bonded soulmate. We've registered our marriage only last winter, so I shall take your advice and take good care of my beloved man - to keep him with me, and hide him from the perils of the outside world. Which brings me to my next subject: we would like to seek civilian duties rather than...” Lan Zhan brilliantly secured enough credibility and respect to maneuver the topic of discussion.

Wei Ying sat cross-legged on a chair and rummaged yet another bag of stuff handed to them inside the Ninth Office, and didn't really need to say much more than 'Enn's for confirmation. He was secretly elated to find that they'd been issued marriage and identification certificates from the Bureau of Civil Registries of the Middle Kingdom, headquartered in Chang'an and with branches in most provinces, counties and districts under their rule. The details somewhat mirror that which was printed on the same papers issued by the Cai district in Gusu. In Wei Ying's eyes, now both he and Lan Zhan were recognized citizens of the country in general, with certain restrictions and limitations due to their origins, and their relationship was sealed by the authority bestowed by the subjects of the Emperor of Chang'an.

During the meeting-cum-interview, the Tao priest took the role of the attending camp medical officer, and performed medical check-ups on both men. Wei Ying expected that they'd be stripped and molested, but fortunately, Senior Guard Liu insisted that out of such a good relationship built between them, they didn't need a full body search.

"After all, Wei Wuxian, let bygones be bygones, correct? That is the way of the Tao, which I'm sure you'll come to love and worship - there's no absolute enmity and hostility needed in this world. I may have acted rashly and out of place in bringing you in, and testing the strength of the bond between the two of you on the way to this centre - but you're both pretty comfortable and decisive in staying with us, yes? It's a win-win for all of us," the man in his forties smiled so widely that Wei Ying's jaw muscles hurt from the sight of it. He had to nod with a reciprocating fake grin - the grudges will remain, because that was simply the nature of a Dark Arts practitioner not to let go of one's sweet, sweet revenges. His fingers twitched when some final consent forms were placed on the table for Lan Zhan to sign - how dare the man kidnap both he and Lan Zhan, and pretended that it was alright to force them to stay, and in all likelihood, taken advantage of, in this prison camp.

“They’re both in relatively good health and are certified fit to stay, Master Liu,” the Tao priest announced when he completed a series of pulse checks on certain acupuncture points, and waving strange gadgets - including a Compass of Evil - around them. Wei Ying had asked if that Compass could be trusted, because he sniffed something off about that wooden and jade stone gadget, but the priest brushed aside his concern, saying that it was bought from Magics R’ Us’ finest selection of high-quality demon-detection products. Wei Ying immediately seized on that to ask if the priest knew who invented such a device, in which the priest innocently answered that the question should be directed to the sales representative of that magic supply company; Wei Ying knew, at that point, that any Tao knowledge about spellcasting was a sham, because they didn’t even recognize, let alone spell the name of, the greatest grandmaster of the Dark Arts that the world had ever known.

“Lan xiansheng is, as he says, quite overweight and should be prescribed lifestyle changes, dietary restrictions and exercise. His golden core, which is surprisingly not as high-level as expected from an ex-sect leader, is covered with cholesterol, and is at risk of suffering blockage of qi flow if he were to engage in stressful physical activities - the damage inflicted from such qi -strokes can be severe and irreparable. Thus, I would concur with the suggestion to let him start with mild to moderate exercise, such as household work, civilian and non-combative duties, and participation in non-strenuous class activities such as low-level cultivation formations, meditation, tai chi and qi gong classes,” the young teenager-doctor diagnosed with remarkable confidence. Wei Ying gaped at the accuracy of the descriptions and he began to wonder just how complex the Tao priests and masters were; he sensed a strange anomaly in the teenager’s soul and suspected that he was being possessed by a superior individual.

Lan Zhan! These Taoists are adept at mind-controlling and soul possession! They're definitely yaoguai in nature, but have evolved to become incredibly well-suited to blend in with humankind. Fortunately, I've placed a Darkening sheath around your golden core so that the monster inside the teenager couldn't detect the mouth-watering scent. You're a walking grilled chicken drumstick amongst a pack of wolves, do you know that? Every priest and half of the elite soldiers and instructors we've met so far are alike - demons in disguise, in all shapes and sizes!

Even the tour this morning too... some of the restricted-access buildings and offices are actually huge house-sized colossal creatures camouflaged as harmless-looking inanimate structures - just like those old wives' tales of haunted buildings! I could see them with my Darkness-enhanced vision, it's frighteningly grotesque, covered with icky miasmic slime and multiple eyeballs, serrated teeth and numerous tentacles! When we were taken for the walkabout, they were actually parading us in front of those salivating predators with discerning tastes, so that when the time comes, those massive yaoguais will know when to snap their jaws shut once their oblivious targets knock on the door, walk in and straight into deep, mortifying monstrous guts filled with walls of strength-sapping curse inscriptions, digestive acids and soul-draining fangs and forked tongues! Senior Guard Liu wasn't lying when he said that people do go missing from this camp quite often!

Lan Zhan swallowed hard when he held the ink brush and his hand hovered above the form where he needed to sign off to start their living arrangements in the military centre - and serving their souls straight into the demonic Tao's hands.

The priest placed the Compass of Evil back into his sleeves and shrugged. He said, “It’s strange, Wei xiansheng , that you’re a yaoguai based on the presence of demonic energy vibrations detected by the Tao’s trained senses and the compass - and yet, you’re magicless, as well as slightly crippled. You cannot wield spells and you have difficulty in performing acrobatic or strenuous physical activities, thus you befit a mundane civilian’s existence.”

“Ah, Wang Ji did write in the submitted report that this man fell off a cliff last year and broke his bones, nerves and meridians. The administrators have examined that report and concurred to the facts as stated by a venerable renowned figure of the cultivation world, so there’s no question about it. It’s a miracle that the Gusu Lan sect was able to repair what they could and keep him alive. We should cherish that fact, isn’t that right, Wang Ji?” Senior Guard Liu interjected with a nervous laughter, and Lan Zhan was, for once, relieved that the guard was on his side, liar or not.

“Still, it’s remarkable that Wei xiansheng has formed such a close-knitted physical and spiritual bond with Lan xiansheng , as evidenced in the report about yesterday’s test, and from my diagnosis of your supremely high shared tri-prismic soul frequencies and the fluctuations of karmic balance-duality,” the priest agreed with a smattering of metaphysical concepts that neither the men understood, “So, we would insist that you remain in the military centre for further observations, and our senior priests shall arrange separate tests with more advanced equipment at the temple to further evaluate this phenomenon. Ultimately, we would like to discover ways to spread such happiness and joy to other bonded pairs in this place, regardless of their body shape, size, type and sexuality.”

Senior Guard Liu tapped his fingers a little impatiently on the tabletop, but not before wiggling his eyebrows at Lan Zhan, “Like husband and wife, eh?”.

Wei Ying grabbed an ink brush to sign on his form, not wanting to sit through further embarrassment from the guard and the priest. Lan Zhan sighed, and placed his signature too.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 176

“Excellent, and thank you for your friendly cooperation!” Senior Guard Liu exclaimed with a wide smile after shaking both men’s hands in a final wrap-up of their deal, and started to pack the signed documents away. The senior officer reiterated what was promised in exchange for a trouble-free arrangement from the Lan-Wei bonded pair to remain in the military centre - he would submit Lan Zhan’s written report to the higher-ups, and request for Imperial military support to investigate the sighting of Lan Zhan’s brother, who is suspected of harboring a yaoguai as well.

“As you know from the tour earlier today, we have morgues in the restricted areas of this place. The twenty corpses will be stored there for about a week, pending examinations from the Tao Masters and our Imperial forensic experts. They’ll report the findings, and hopefully, they’ll find something to back-up your claims about another powerful bonded pair on the prowl. We need more of those,” the guard remarked. Lan Zhan raised his eyebrows.

“We’re stretched pretty thin right now, with so many of our men sent out to chase after those nefarious yaoguai with a thirst for blood,” he added and leaned into his chair with arms behind his head, and was mindful to emphasize the differentiation, thus implying that Wei Ying was, overall, written off as a ‘good guy’. “With the Tao priests added to the frontlines”, he added, and nodded in acknowledgement to the junior Taoist standing calmly next to him, almost in a meditative state, “It should be easier to identify and isolate bonded pairs from the battlefields and bring them in. Powerful ones included, of course.”

“What about the list? The one where our names were circled. That will clear our names from any wrongdoing and special interests from the Imperial army,” Lan Zhan asked, careful not to sound too hopeful or overzealous about it.

Senior Guard Liu shrugged and cleared his throat nervously. “I showed you a copy of a page just now, and that’s all I have. The full list is with Grandmaster Gao, who is currently on an extensive campaign to recruit former cultivators from the Grand Cultivation Council, and at the same time, bulldoze a trail of yaoguai -infested lands between cities so that trade and critical supply lanes can re-open soonest. You already said that the list looked authentic, Mister ex-Chief Cultivator,” he lowered his voice and winked at Lan Zhan, and that incensed Wei Ying a little, “Furthermore, you’ve experienced firsthand our reasonable hospitality to the point that you’ve willingly signed the consent forms to extend your stay here,” and he shook the pack of documents right in front of them to indicate that he’d won over them, by hook or by crook, “So all’s well, ends well, thanks to the list, no? Let’s leave it as is, and... oh, oh, look at the time!” The entire topic was closed as quickly as it started, and the guard was already gesturing hastily at the couple to exit the Ninth Office, because there were other bonded pairs waiting to have their applications processed.

There was never the intention to investigate into the owner and origin of the list, which had been paid for and now, duly used for maximum benefit of the cultivator-hunting Imperial armies. In that sense, Lan Zhan’s efforts to secure their freedom, whether through the long written report to explain their circumstances, or any recorded observations on site to evidence their good behaviour, was for naught; if anything, they’d just bared their past secrets, highly personal information, and opened Pandora’s Boxes for the Imperial army to help themselves to.

Wei Ying once again bristled at the cheekiness of that guard who’d outsmarted them - and a silent curse to Nie Huaisang in the hopes that the cunning fox would suffer from excruciatingly painful blisters and boils on his body for weeks -, and was about to counter with something snarky, when the junior priest stepped in to put a ceasefire to all growing hostilities.

“Remember, sirs, your appointed time to enter the temple and to meet with our senior priests for further interviews and tests will be informed in due course. Please,” the bald boy bowed and stretched his hand towards the door, indicating that he was seeing the couple out.

Wei Ying huffed, and Lan Zhan simply folded his hands at the front to end the fruitless conversation.

.

Elsewhere, a smorgasbord of heroic debris and urban waste have assembled at the top of the five-storey pagoda, buoyed upward by passing breeze that kept the morning mists spiralling around the mystical, creepy-looking tower of darkness and ruin. A bunch of freshly-plucked bamboo leaves wiggled and knotted themselves, forming functional five-fingered hands that could grasp and pull on things, and in pairs, spread out like wings of a graceful crane to flutter, spin and dive undetected into a hidden enclosure. Something seemed strange, said the shards of broken glass - because they could magnify and zoom in on the sights that catch their interests; there seemed to be an outdoor rack of orange melon-like gourds being sun-dried like what villagers do with surplus peppers, tomatoes and corn cobs.

At the other end of the rooftop, little organized squadrons of stone chips, wood splinters, crinkled waste paper, frayed strips of cloth, food scraps and kitchen waste, and even leftover fruit peels hung from the edges of roof tiles, tethered by tangled hay and human hair, and slowly descended between the narrow spaces between the spore-covered bronze bell and the cracks in the walls, like an army of ants, deep into the heart of the Tao temple.

.

“Was that the right thing to do?” Lan Zhan asked. Again. Every single time they were about to have a breakthrough moment with their adventures, and chose the path less treaded, Lan Zhan sought his spouse’s affirmation. It was becoming a bad habit, but Wei Ying didn’t complain - he loved a subservient Lan Zhan anytime.

There’s no right or wrong answer, and I’m not a Tao faithful for saying that, by the way. I don’t like the whole setup but I’m just going to try and enjoy the ride while it lasts. By choosing to be sidekicks and lesser characters of a major plot in the story, we’re essentially dooming the entire ensemble to an apocalyptic end and probably a re-start, somehow. That’s how awesome gods like you like to play, right? So let me play along too!

Wei Ying snickered and slapped Lan Zhan’s thicc bouncy buttocks on their way out of the administration office, and the god supposedly disguising as a mundane cultivator with mediocre skills and power, nnnh’d because he’s just such a masochism-loving freak.

“Such a strange, twisted relationship. Usually man bests the yaoguai to control the demonic powers running rampant between the two, but this time, it’s the yaoguai controlling his human husband,” Senior Guard Liu remarked when he returned to Ninth Office, putting away the used teapot and cups for the janitors to clean up. He cleared the table for the next bonded pair to be interviewed and to be presented their final admission papers.

“Hm. The world is as vast as your imagination, senior guard, and therefore the possibilities. There will come a time when demons rule the realms, and it would be as natural as the sun rising from the east,” the junior priest muttered, and suddenly let out a loud hiccup. His soul-possession was interrupted, or rather, he finally woke up from a sleep-walking nightmare of having demonic creatures filled with eyeballs, salivating teeth and tentacles invade his bodily orifices, and the boy squeaked in terror before dashing out of the Ninth Office.

Senior Guard Liu scratched his head in wonder.

Not too far away, at around Fifth or Sixth Office, a bonded pair of a cultivator monk with his beloved fierce corpse ran out of their meeting room. They’d just signed their papers and realized that the Anti-Magic Tattoo on their necks had miraculously sizzled away like water on a hot pan. The fierce corpse shouted with joy and fled the scene in great leaps and bounds, punched gigantic holes through walls better than a jackhammer, and sprinted out in a blaze of billowing dust across the courtyard. The undead with a rare crooked look of joy on its face knocked down a few practising comrades in its bid to escape the prison facility with a false, summer camp-like facade - only to find that two minutes later, past the entrance gate, the creature’s flesh melted off its bones like gnawing succulent meat off a well-cooked spare ribs, resulting in a gooey pile of bristly hair, twitching liquefying muscles, steaming-hot remnants of hardened fingernails falling off tumbling fingers, and a mess of bloody, gummy skin smoking on the grass, until it caught fire.

Instructors yelled and warned curious onlookers not to approach or pay attention to the failed candidate, also because anything outside of the military centre was off-limits anyway. Everyone eventually returned to what they were doing without sparing a glance; the monk that wasn't able to run fast enough was easily apprehended by Imperial guards. After some heated exchange of words and curses, the monk was dragged kicking and screaming towards the pagoda temple for detention, with new Anti-Magic chains strapped to his body.

Lan Zhan had watched the spectacle from afar from a window, and tilted his head to the back. Wei Ying immediately understood and started peering and touching the spot where the migraine-inducing tattoo was (like a curious, grooming monkey), and found nothing. "It seems that after we've signed off our souls on the forms, there's no need for the tattoos," he said, using his vast knowledge about magics and anti-magics, "We're essentially trapped in this hell anyway! Welcome to Camp Paradise!" he remarked with ironic glee, before tip-toeing and gently nibbling that spot so that Lan Zhan would sport a lonely pink hickey for the rest of the day.

Senior Guard Liu stared at the brazen couple and shook his head from the Ninth Office, where a fresh new junior priest had been summoned to co-preside the interview with the next bonded pair. He made a mental note of just how wonderfully close the man named Lan Wang Ji and his bonded yaoguai Wei Wuxian were, and he hoped the replacement bonded pairs from subsequent hunts would be just as easy to handle and tricked into signing off the acceptance forms.

.

Unshackled from the packed schedules of a typical student-cum-fighter at the (prison) camp, both Wei Ying and Lan Zhan were free to roam around the unrestricted areas of their fenced stockade, under the watchful eyes of the ever-present guards and concealed Eye spells that functioned as modern-day security CCTVs. Determined to remain the good books of their captors, and therefore ensure their limited freedom remain intact, the two decided to split and look for menial jobs to pass the time, and blend into the ranks of non-combat officers, administrators and civilians serving the military centre.

Wei Ying lingered around the main administration office to befriend the officers he met, and even found some potential drinking pals after casually dropping names of a few renowned branded liquors in his conversations. When he told his new acquaintances that he was living in the military centre as a magicless, harmless civilian - his identification papers clearly stated so, and he cleverly dodged any questions about his origins, yaoguai or not -, busybody people flocked around him out of curiosity and were drawn to his friendly, cheerful genteel nature. It wouldn't so bad, the low-ranking officers thought, to have such a Mr. Nice Guy of the supernatural kind to hang around in the neighbourhood; thus, when the team of artisans and labourers commissioned to repair the large hole left by the fierce corpse arrived, they politely asked the man if he'd like to help out and earn some wages; of course, not knowing that Wei Ying was actually marked as a yaoguai and acted unlike one.

Wei Ying got a glimpse of just how heartless the entire operation of the military centre was, full of impunity and disrespect towards persons of great supernatural abilities, given that they had no qualms eliminating someone who could've surpassed the legendary Ghost General and secured the victory for the Imperial forces, just because of a small disciplinary measure. He put those depressing thoughts aside, and worked hard to put his Handyman Of The House skills to good use, and patched up the man-sized hole in less than an hour. His endeavour was made easier by the fact that nobody recognized who the Yiling Patriarch was, nor any semblance of knowledge, even memory, of that notorious figure; which made sense, because people who worked there were generally from the northernmost regions of the Middle Kingdom, furthest away from the tragedies that struck the southern plains and mountains sixteen years ago.

The aspiring young man began to earn the respect of fellow handymen, sculptors, carpenters, plumbers and men of crafting professions, when he incorporated modern (actually, 21st-century) designs to strengthen the wall against future damages; the supervisor immediately hired Wei Ying as a part-time workman and technician on-call, and the accomplished young man was given the keys to the warehouses and storerooms to access the tools and materials needed for future work.

Lan Zhan has a penchant for household chores and cooking, so it wasn't surprising that he found himself loitering near the kitchens, sending wordless puppy-eye looks to the chefs and kitchen assistants. As usual, his tactic worked - within the large multi-storey and sprawling complex that included food storage, kitchen preparation, cleaning and maintenance, and dining services, there were many who were like him - silent, hardworking workers who do not speak much but understood the needs of fellow quiet, introverted men when they arise. The man was first handed some odd jobs to chop up vegetables and marinate the meats, and within seconds, his awesome five-Michelin stars skills were demonstrated. During the lunch service, Lan Zhan, armed with a ladle in one hand and a washcloth in the other, helped fellow humble cooks to improve their recipes with sage advices in words fewer than can be counted with hands, significantly reorganized the kitchen's workflow so that they could make and send out dishes to their hungry patrons in record time, and in between, made sure the utensils and surfaces were spotless at all times. His professionalism in keeping the kitchen running was top-notch, and the manager was impressed enough to reward him with a small bonus along with the day's meagre pay.

By the time Wei Ying made his way to the deserted dining halls at two, there were only workers sweeping the floors and they pointed out a bench at a cleaned corner that was available for seating; apparently Lan Zhan had taught them a few modern techniques for easier cleaning, so they were indebted and befriended the Gusu Lan easily; so, as soon as Wei Ying asked about his darling man and described his tubby, charming looks, one of the men gladly dashed off to the kitchens to get him. When Wei Ying gingerly took his seat, he wondered if there was still hot food served from the kitchens, because he was so distracted by his newfound love for fixing and making things using wood, clay, mortar and stones, that he'd lost track of time. His stomach rumbled in distress, and he thought, sourly, that perhaps packed cold dumplings from the morning were the only things left to eat, because the kitchen was dark and looked like it was closed.

Then, lo and behold, a wooden tray appeared from behind. In it were Wei Ying's - no, their - favourites, including a large pot of lotus root pork rib soup filled with perfectly-stewed ingredients, a plate of fried tofu served with plum sauce dips, stir-fried seasonal greens and mushrooms, and a platter of cut fruits for dessert later. In the middle was a special circular dish with a central curved divider in the form of a taijitu dualism symbol that Wei Ying guessed was only available in places with Tao specialties; one half contained a boiled fish garnished with vegetables, the other half was spicy grilled fish topped with extra chilli paste - mmm, delish!

“Wei Ying, please eat (吃饭),” Lan Zhan gently told the spouse; there was no need for welcome-hugs, whistles and bells, and the depth of their relationship does not necessitate time-wasting banter or asking needless questions such as ‘How was your day?’; the only gesture that mattered was watching Lan Zhan place a steaming bowl of white rice on either side of the small circular table, then methodically arranging the chopsticks and spoons with care, before settling down on a seat opposite him.

Wei Ying picked up his chopsticks and the well-deserved bowl of fragrant soft, white rice, and his face brightened up with largest grin he could muster, his cheeks pinked considerably and his sparkly eyes crinkled in a smile that spoke volumes for his closeness, gratefulness and profound love for the man that specially waited that long after the kitchen had closed, and specially prepared their late lunch despite everything else that had happened.

“Enn! Let’s eat! (吃饭!)”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 177

Their new beginning as civilian prisoners wasn't a bed of roses as Wei Ying thought. Periodically, they received rather intrusive messages about the state of the military centre's operations, calls for jobseekers to areas in need of routine maintenance, the weather forecast, Tao Talks of the day, even general public announcements - straight into their minds.

"Ahhh...," Wei Ying mourned his interrupted romantic lunch, "Did you hear that? The loading bay at the edge of the camp's calling out your name. You're famous among ordinary citizens working in this place, because somebody retrieved our missing horse cart with your name and sect printed on it!" and gave an unfeeling, forced laughter. He stirred the remaining soup in the bowl listlessly and sighed. A synthetic but pretty, perfect-pitched female's voice announced that some classrooms, where religious reading classes had just taken place, were in need of some cleaning and the furniture rearranged, for a few silver pieces per volunteer. Another disembodied, chirpy voice informed that the on-site trading post was going to have a sale that weekend; during the tour, the couple had a chance to visit the military centre's base exchange that doubled as the only major supermarket within half a day's travel radius. It was filled with a cornucopia of not just fresh foods and beverages, groceries, snacks, reading materials, scholarly and musical manuscripts, and toiletries, but also toys for the big boys, such as useful gadgets, sculpting and construction tools, spellbooks and talismans, and potions and enchanted accessories that packed an extra punch for winning tournament bouts and duels - and Wei Ying already made a wishlist by the time they stepped out of the store.

Ahhh... how is this different from our early days as lovebirds in Yiling, aeons ago? I now have to work to earn a living, and I have to use my money to buy what I want. I'd never imagined that boring potions would catch my interest, but the kinds on display were mind-blowing! A potion that makes one a god for an hour? An elixir that duplicates things including living matter? Imperial technology is crazy! Lan Zhan, where's your Jade Token, I want to use it!

“It’s... probably in the horse cart,” Lan Zhan murmured, and started to collect the used bowls and plates from the table. At that hour, there was no one left working in the kitchens, so he would have to do the washing. “But it cannot be used here, in the lands governed by the Imperial Palace. The many privileges, amenities and conveniences mutually shared by the sects of the former Grand Cultivation Council do not apply beyond the borders, unfortunately,” he added. Wei Ying didn’t bother to clean up, and instead, picked off a couple more spare ribs and one succulent, al dente piece of perfectly stewed lotus root, before rising up from the bench and dusting himself off from food scraps.

Hnn... I wonder what our classmates are doing? They don't seem to receive the same announcements as us, since beefy Ox Guy and fearsome Tiger Woman are headed in opposite directions to different classes, and slithery Snake Man's still training hard at the center courtyard. Oh, by the way, my paperboys found a stash of magical gourds being sun-baked out in the yard behind the temple. I wonder why? Lan Zhan, do you think the priests are making tasty treats out of those gourds? Or is there something else? Oh dear, what if there are captured yaoguai still swimming in their brethren's blood in there? Maybe I should-- “Wei Ying, don’t,” Lan Zhan grabbed his beloved’s wrist while balancing a stack of used tableware precariously with his other hand; he’d forbid Wei Ying to go near that cursed, corrupted temple, no matter how tempting that sounded to the man of the Dark Arts. Wei Ying broke into a sweet smile and leaned in, then gave a sweet peck on Lan Zhan’s cheek.

Mmm. I know.

Murmurs could be heard echoing from the other side of the dining halls, where several workers caught a glimpse of their smoochy tryst and started whispering furiously, before breaking into stifled giggles. Apparently, homosexual couples were rare among Imperial cultivators, but not non-existent; such pairs were ridiculed and mocked, but otherwise, left relatively unharmed besides resulting bruised pride and uncomfortable annoyances from the constant harassment in a patriarchal, alpha-male society. And, the Emperor of Chang'an was said to have ninety nine concubines, and ninety nine male lovers too.

Lan Zhan realized he'd read Wei Ying's thoughts, or rather, his mind has just been fed with a tidbit about the sociocultural norms of the Imperial Court, that neither had expressively known before. He raised an eyebrow, face turning red from the brazen display of love, although the yellow-hued eyes gleamed in askance. 'How did you know?' he asked wordlessly, hand still grasping Wei Ying's; a couple having their little negotiations and arguments in their personal bubble of space, connecting through deep, riveting gazes and meaningful, but delicate physical touches.

Of course, darling! I'm still a mind-reader despite not emitting any magical aura. Don't you know? I'm the god of gods, the dreamer of dreams, and everything around me, us, are figments of my imagination. I wear the pants in our relationship, and everything you have belongs to me, and is beneath me.

On that note, Lan Zhan nnngh'd indignantly

Well, flamboyance, lies and exaggerations aside, and on a more serious note, I've shut off my meridians and sealed off my golden core, so that I'm as mundane as a man made of Nü Wa's clay or mites from Pan Gu's body for a while, because I've foreseen this extended imprisonment in a place filled with anti-magics. Rather than using qi, I can tap into the power of Dreams, and its daytime counterparts, imaginations and daydreaming, to wield spells and supernatural abilities. That's how my eldest cloned sibling is able to keep our people alive despite being ensnared by those evil magical Tao gourds that turn enemies into pools of blood-wine. Or, using sound, such as mystical singing, shamanistic chanting, and whistling to summon creatures and bend their life forces to one's own will. Such rarely used mediums are practically undetectable by anti-magics, so why not use them to our benefit?

Lan Zhan stiffened and his breath hitched. Of course, he had not thought about using alternative sources of magical powers, because he'd been schooled to use qi to cast spells, which was as natural as using a sword to cut down a man - Wei Ying had already come up with a plethora of different ways to do the same thing even without unsheathing his much-cherished Suibian that had been left in the horse cart the day before.

Wei Ying left the gawking man standing in the dining hall, drowning in his own spiralling thoughts into a new, complicated enlightenment, and a fresh new twist in the ancient art of spellcasting. The younger man gleefully mouthed 'Call me' and gestured with Y-shape phone headset with a hand shaking next to his ear - an symbolic act of modern antiquity not recognized in the era of 2000 B.C., but it was well understood between men who had travelled far and wide and through time, and experienced everything their wonderful universe has to offer.

Wei Ying was assigned to sweep the floors, wipe the blackboards and rearrange the furniture on the second and third floors of a classroom building, while his seniors snatched cleaning duties on the ground floor, because nobody wanted to climb up the stairs with no added pay. It was a fairly standard-sized establishment reminiscent of those found in more prestigious sect homelands - large, multi-storey rectangular-shaped buildings made of wood and adorned with pretty and delicate animal and flower-themed sculptures, equipped with minimal but functional decor and fixtures and furnishings, and there were adequate number of chairs, desks, cupboards and other amenities typical of a Middle Kingdom-era educational facility. There were about five classrooms per floor, with added storerooms and other kinds of spaces at both ends and near the wooden stairwells, and surrounded by an ordinary but well-maintained garden around it.

Unsurprisingly, everyone left right after cleaning and receiving their wages - Wei Ying received his little handful of silver pieces too, and discovered that the Imperial trainee (more like, detainee) uniform sleeves had rather conveniently deep pockets. The supervisor noted that the young man was still hard at work, because he was tasked to clean double the amount of floorspace; thus, he left the keys to the building with the latter, and asked him to lock everything up and hand them to the guards once he was done. For Wei Ying, it was a great way to find solitude, and soon, he was steadily wiping the surfaces of classroom desks in a building that was fully deserted. Insect chirps were overwhelmingly loud in a bright, slightly orange-hued springtime afternoon, and it felt a little warm with sunlight filtering through opened windows with few curtains and hardly any breeze.

It took a little longer than expected for the mystery to be unravelled by a man that held steadfastly to centuries-old practices and tradition, however Wei Ying is, surprisingly, a very patient man when it comes to his beloved darling husband.

Wei Ying. Can you... burp.

Ying... brrrrp... Hear me?

Wei Ying. Can you hear... brrp.

Me? Can you... buuuurp. Wei.

Wei Ying threw the washcloth aside into a bucket of water, and barked out a laughter at the sudden transmission directly into his mind - not of a sultry female voice, finally! After attempting to decipher the vague, incomprehensible message fragments, he tapped his forehead to magnify the receivers inside his head to get a clearer signal. “Lan Zhan, your message is looping and keeps getting cut off part way as a jumble of words. Slow down, breathe, let it out in a single, long breath. As you do that, focus your concentration on releasing the strain, and with it, a puff of physical depressurizing, emotional catharsis, and a relaxed meditative state in the mind - seize that moment to convert that sensation into raw, unrefined energy to power your spell,” he gently guided his husband with perfectly enough details, because Wei Ying’s been there, don’t that.

Mn. Much better. Wei Ying, can you hear me?

“Loud and clear, honey. Your voice sounds a bit muffled, like you’re being choked or something,” the younger man mocked his partner’s struggles.

Wei Ying bent down to retrieve the soaked washcloth from the bucket, and wrung it dry. He was down to the last row of tables in the last classroom, so he decided to talk on the go while finishing off his duties. It was amazing how many ink-brush scribbles and food or bodily fluid stains were left on the desks after each day, and he briefly wondered what went on during religious classes attended by supposedly well-disciplined and pious men.

Is... is it a good time to talk?

“I’ve been expecting you, and there’s no one around,” Wei Ying muttered as he scrubbed dried, crusty pool of milky stuff off a tabletop and he noted sourly that it smelled like day-old fish or cheese, “Did you know? I’ve been pinging my radar antennae all day, and noticed that those Eyeballs and Senses aren’t found in areas where people are unlikely to be present, such as in the alleyways and by the dumpsters. Also, those spells are powered down when an area is devoid of people, such as these classrooms in the late afternoons. So yeah, I can chat.” Which was true; Wei Ying was free to run naked and sing operatic songs if he wanted to, along the hallways that connect the classrooms, and nobody would notice. The entire building wasn’t monitored after the cleaners and the supervisor left, because according to the schedule, it was closed for the day - except that Wei Ying volunteered to remain and clean the remaining floorspaces.

Mn. I tried different ways. To create magic without using magic. This one works. But it’s a bit difficult to sustain. Long conversations. I have to swallow some air, then burp it out. Slowly, like a drunken man does. Each burp is enough to power. A few seconds of talk.

The spouse nodded, his thin bony chest puffing up with pride at teaching an old dog new tricks, and the said old dog actually improvised and found something that suited him. Burping, of course! Enough force to generate a microburst of energy, yet such an everyday act that would rouse no one's suspicion. "It'll do," Wei Ying said to no one in the classroom - from an outsider's perspective, he'd be talking to himself, just as how some modern people are mistaken for doing the same when wearing wireless earbuds connected to their mobiles. "Over time, you'll master how to control the flow of your breath and the strength in it. Be careful, since you're using air movement to power the spell, you need to finely tune the speed and pressure in order not to cause chaos in the resulting stream of pseudo- qi ionic particles. If you fart, for example, which is an extra push of air too, you might cause an imbalance and something may explode unintentionally," he added seriously. Really, it was akin to deciding to use combustible gases to light up a fire and generate electricity, so any inadvertently added flammable material could topple the whole well-intentioned idea and transform it into something worse a crashing, flaming Hindenburg airship, literally (and across time travel, for the sake of this story).

I heed your advice, Wei Ying. I shall not fart, sneeze. Cough or yawn. When talking with you. The people at the loading bay. Are staring strangely at me. Because I keep burping. Like a man with gastric problems. I told them that I had. A late lunch, so. My stomach is quite. Queasy. They understood, fortunately. One of them. Even gave me. A bottle of digestive liquid.

"Yes! Just as I can whistle to cast spells, or my cloned Dream-kin siblings simply daydream what they need and pluck 'em out from their imagination, so can a snap of fingers of one wearing the Infinity Gauntlet create infinite goodness, or endless devastation. This arcane knowledge of using magic without magic itself is sacred, a lost art, and certainly a taboo amongst cultivators. Be wary, and never reveal to others how this works!" he said to himself, while drying the milk-stained (or rather, semen-stained?) table with another cloth. Eventually, the ill-fated piece of furniture was sparkling and shiny once again, almost brand new - Wei Ying realized that most of the furniture and equipment in the classrooms were actually in pretty good condition, which meant that the entire facility was set up quite recently, and infrastructure brought in or built up only in the last few weeks.

Mn. Thank you for sharing. This gift. We can talk even when. Separated. I'm grateful. Oh, the horse cart is in good. Shape, and all our belongings are. Intact, shall I bring them back to our. Room?

“Ha ha! Lan Zhan, you’re talking funny now! Calm down, breathe in deeply then hold it down, and burp. I had the same problems when I first used Chenqing to summon Dark creatures, because I was too nervous with a new musical instrument, but practice makes perfect,” he laughed, and went back to work on the next soiled table. The couple continued to communicate and share their daily ups and downs without the need for the rather clunky, restrictive and energy-draining ErNet’s VPN, and their minds melded, bonded, and exchanged information seamlessly as one.

.

Lan Zhan scaled up three storeys in a single bound, hurtled through the hallways like a bloodhound missile, and leapt headlong into the classroom distinctively marked 3A-2 at its entrance, which signified the second classroom from the stairs on the third floor. Impatience and impulsiveness was never part of his nature, but he’d break it because he had no choice; his body was crying desperately for relief, craving for the drug he’d become addicted, and lusting the scorching-hot love that his soul despaired over. The moment his body propelled through the doors, his legs kicked the air and the resulting short burst of hurricane-like winds forced the doors to slam shut behind him.

He'd heard it inside his mind - Wei Ying's trademark triple combo Aahhn!-Ooooh!-Uuuuh!, with lots of little pink hearts spinning above that high-pitched moan-y sound. For a moment, he panicked because he thought someone had broken into the classrooms to kidnap his delicate and luscious (sadly, thin and bony - but Lan Zhan's blind to the negatives about his spouse) lao po and did terribly lewd and obscene things upon the hapless man, defiling his wife's purity.

Upon a creaking table, Wei Ying lounged in the nude, swaying hips buoyed by bunched-up washcloths, his legs splayed wide open, with one hand running on the soft alabaster chest marred with scars from the past. Scrawny but nimble fingers rest on one nipple, erotically tugging and kneading the puffy pink nub until it blossomed into a juicy mound, and those fingers moved to its cousin at the other side of thin torso, dancing across skin that pinked with heat, beads of sweat forming and dripping from the bottom tip of unshaven chin to the sternum, rolling down like pearls to pool into the quivering navel. His other hand deliciously crawled its way down, down, past the yielding treasure trail, parting across the bush of pubic curls where milky white skin had been hidden from sight, untouched by rain nor sunshine, and now, increasingly taut, throbbing, darkening with a rising tide of blood and lust as excitement mounted higher with each passing second.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan,” the man moaned wantonly and stroked himself at a relentless pace. He grabbed, twisted and polished his own swollen flesh, then grazed fingernails upon the turgid member and gripped with such ferocity before pistoning the wildly-jerking, pre-cum oozing organ so passionately, eliciting hungry gasps of profound desire to be touched. His hips pumped into the empty air, and the table creaked dangerously from the sudden force; thighs opened and closed, inviting the hypnotized spectator with a lethal-looking tent in the pants to satisfy their martial urges in many ways that both had explored, loved, enjoyed and now, craved for repeat performances.

Oh, honey darling, I got bored after completing my tasks and I haven't done it for more than a day, that my mind wandered everywhere seeking distraction from this yearning for release. I'm masturbating while thinking of you, does that make me a sinner? Or a lover? Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, please love this depraved, sinful man, for touching himself while at work! Oh....!

Lan Zhan quickly peeled off his pants and disrobed in record time inside the closed classroom. His loins surged into full attention; a spear that pointed upward and fore, threatening to erupt into primal volcanic explosions inside his beloved and most favourite fertile garden nestled inside the temple of Wei Ying's sexual desires and endless begging to make fat, healthy babies. Wei Ying mewled like a cat in heat, and arched his back again and again with unrestrained, lecherous movements, mimicking a man wracked by waves of intense, orgasmic pleasures that hadn't detonated yet, a glimpse of the mutual physical satisfaction and sexual delights that Lan Zhan was welcomed to partake and taste, deep inside his lovely, lovely sexy Wei Ying.

Lan Zhan wasted no time to rid himself of his remaining garments, and thanked the local gods and deities for offering such a sumptuous buffet upon a table at the perfect height to lock himself between the vulgar young man's legs, then bend over while pushing the latter's hips up, and finally, shove his very, very excited, fully engorged and twitching penis, straight into the puckered rosebud that seemingly coo'ed and called his name again and again. It would be a marathon of highly anticipated and engaging sexual intercourses, plenty of creampie's and going wild between the younger man's legs, generous amounts of pumps and hard, deep and fast fucks, of biting and scratching like beasts wrestling each other for sexual dominance, of viciously suckling sparse breasts, licking belly buttons, jiggling belly fat that rolled over the younger man's buttocks and groin each time Lan Zhan howled like a delirious madman and grunted thirty times with shivering thunder thighs, vibrating fatty glutes, pulsing sweet-red orgasmic testicles, and convulsing torrents of baby Wang Jis swimming forth to make sweet, sweet, love with baby Wei Yings deep inside the warm, tight and moist cavern that the two called home sweet home - inside classroom 3A-2 on one sunny afternoon.

Wei Ying squealed with glee and locked his legs around Lan Zhan's I-can't-stop-shaking-my-hips backside, trapping his darling man against his split ass and caught in a vice man-vagina grip inside him. They would go for at least five rounds before and destroyed one table, before the younger man flipped himself and they'd breed doggie-style another five times until the floor was coated with their bodily fluids and excess spillage from the incredibly satisfied older man in his sexual highs and throes of ecstasy.

By the time the sun started to set, Lan Zhan was pleasantly drained to the last drop, and had nothing to offer besides seedless, crystal clear droplets that his prostate tried its hardest to pump, and the testicles had shrunk visibly into happy prunes. Wei Ying's sexually flushed smile curved upwards higher into a sly fox's, and he reached for the teacher's desk to pull out a bamboo cane. He lay with his back on the floor, and demurely crossed his legs in front of a kneeling, panting and exhausted man; he made sure that Lan Zhan could see, with heated, heavy-lidded gaze, of his own seed flowing out of the younger man's wrecked, stretched anus - proof of their naughty bedroom activities performed impromptu in a classroom meant for holy, religious study; certainly, a sacrilege of unspeakable proportions.¹

Whack!, and dust flew off the floor. The flexible bamboo cane quivered from the speed of the impact.

“Student Wang Ji, Teacher Wei is very, very disappointed at your performance. You need to be punished,” Wei Ying remarked with malicious intent in his drippy voice, and he whipped the yelping older man on the limp, tired loins. Lan Zhan nnngh’d and yelped at the stinging fiery pain, and ironically, the sizzling white-hot sensations on his genitals and from the rising welts on his inner thighs caused his penis to come alive with each cruel strike.

“Student Wang Ji, you’re hopeless! You fail in so many aspects of practical life, and here you are, mindlessly and stupidly trying to father babies inside your beloved Teacher Wei. You don’t deserve such privileges, because you’re not worthy of Teacher Wei’s godly love, no matter how hard you study and work to improve yourself - because you’re always so old-fashioned, unchanging, a slave to your own ideas of perfection! What on earth are you thinking about? You’re a useless man, you should be kicked to the dirt and rolled into mud, then baked in a kiln and served as food to the dogs!”

Words that served to undermine the older man’s sexual prowess and confidence had the opposite effect - they fanned the flames of sadomasochism between the indecent, copulating couple. Lan Zhan’s masochistic side shone, and he started to beg, “Teacher Wei, Teacher Wei, please punish this useless man more,” for no logical reason; because rational thought had flew off the window when he was forced by a pair of thin legs, drawn and pulled in like a spider reeling in its helpless but delectably prey; with the Teacher’s firm but gentle tapping on his buttocks, Lan Zhan crawled on his knees, and unthinkingly, guided his crotch back to where it truly belongs - his penis locked inside Wei Ying’s greedy man-pussy; watching his slick, seed-covered member being swallowed into Teacher Wei’s anal lips was gratifying, because he was such a useless man and didn’t deserve such love -, to engage in another five rounds of tasty breedworthy sex. Wei Ying cackled then, and kept whipping, rather clumsily, at Lan Zhan’s increasingly reddened criss-crossed buttocks, while he was drilled into the floor by a grunting, crying and sobbing man, begging for mercy from the non-stop sex, because the penis was rubbed raw and the testicles and shrivelled even further into raisin, because the legs had turned to jelly and couldn't hold up the older man's weight, that Lan Zhan started to lose his strength and crushed Wei Ying's frail form, and simultaneously, that strength was sapped further when thirty exceedingly arousing squirts of clear fluids ejected like weak, diluted ejaculations, massaged and milked by a muscular rectal canal until the dying penis died and gone to heaven many times, that Lan Zhan aaahn'ed in his depraved, miserable yet very excited state, to be continuously whipped and bullied by the man he loved, to be coaxed to surrender everything until not even his soul was spared in a total of fifteen orgasms that afternoon.

In the end, Teacher Wei graded his student and gave him a passing C for his peak sexual performance. Not too bad, although it left red-cheeked, perpetually-emptied Lan Zhan lying motionless on the floor, snoring and leaking pee, cum and other bodily fluids from his genitals and other unspeakable orifices.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 178

Barely a day since they arrived at the military centre (still, a detention camp for Wei Ying), the couple has found a relatively comfortable rhythm in balancing their personal needs and work demanded by their new employers, which in turn, is rewarded by wages to further fuel the material desires and wants in the first place. It remains to be seen if this vicious cycle would spiral out of control, or if either man would finally realize the fallacy of this lifestyle and put an end to the insanity of a modern rat-race living.

Wei Ying berated himself while furiously scrubbing the last vestiges of their passionate lovemaking from their bodies and the not-quite ruined classroom, using a bucket of water and a washcloth taken from the school's compounds; they were goofing off during precious daytime when they could be gainfully employed and earning money to make their lives in the centre (no, really, a prison camp) more bearable. The steady stream of female announcers reading out one job vacancy after another was driving the two men crazy, that tuning out those money-spinning missions proved nearly impossible when one wasn't lost in the heat of the moment in the midst of orgasms.

Unhappy that they could only enjoy about an hour in each other's arms after almost a full busy day of toiling hard labour, eating quick, frugal meals, and rushing between assignments, they agreed to keep in touch using newfound non-magical means to escape detection, and chart their next moves stealthily, while trying their best to act as, and earn decent wages, as civilian workers in a military base. Wei Ying trotted off to the administration offices after catching wind of menial tasks required from lowly messenger boys, document carriers, and secretary-like scribes. Lan Zhan decided to explore the farms at the outskirts of the base perimeter, since there was an opening for persons to harvest vegetables, milk the goats, collect chicken eggs and slaughter some animals for meat, to be brought to the kitchens, where more duties as assistants to chefs and waiters were available.

Ahhh, Lan Zhan, it's only been minutes since we parted, but my body already misses the musky scent between your soft man-boobs, and the taste of your penis, which I'm sure would delight in having another round of blowjob from Old Master Wei 'ere! If only there were more spots where we could make sweet love without being seen, if only I could have you thrusting wildly between my legs and let you savour the sweetness and tightness of my warmth, deep inside the crack between my buttocks...

Lan Zhan scrunched his face and tried to concentrate on his tasks, even if it meant tuning out his spouse's endless lewd chatter. He picked the freshest spring vegetables in patches of greens, amongst a number of general workers who were fortunately, or unfortunately, not as enthusiastic as he was in making a garden great. Without being told, he watered the rows of seedlings and even took upon himself, with a cloth tied around his nose, to scoop out human wastes gathered and fermented since morning from everyone's spittoons, waste-buckets and from the sewers behind the bath houses, to fertilize the plants; he'd done that before, more than sixteen years ago under similar circumstances by the orders of oppressive forces, and had no qualms in doing it again. The supervisor was impressed, and gave Lan Zhan the keys to the sheds and storehouses where farming equipment and other agricultural tools were kept - Lan Zhan promised to work on the farms early in the morning with equal energy and zeal. In return for his diligence and attentiveness, he was paid a few silver pieces - now recognized as special coins stamped with the Imperial mark, and used exclusively as the medium of exchange in the military centre -, and he also pocketed some seeds, bulbs, and sproutlings found during his work, straight into the deep sleeves of his smudged uniform.

Wei Ying, who has special ways to charm people of either gender with his flattering words, met up with Senior Guard Zhen who asked for help in delivering rolls of bamboo scrolls; it was something akin to a medieval evening paper, sent to the quarters of certain higher-ups and buildings that ran night shifts. Wei Ying cleverly fished out the site map that was distributed to the new recruits earlier that day from his sleeve pockets, and the guard knew that the smart, resourceful man would not fail. He was given a jade pass that permitted him to enter certain restricted areas of the military centre - at least up to the entrance gates without being shot down by volleys of arrows by watchtower guards. While he didn't manage to meet any of the elite officers or glimpse into the camp's dark secrets hidden behind tall, imposing walls, he made a few more friends, built his credibility and network, and curried additional favours from those who had access to people of higher ranks and greater influence; the man named Wei Wuxian became a bit more infamous, as greasy as bacon on a pan, and to his benefit, with no strings attached to his terrible past as a patriarch of a defunct, forbidden sect - simply because no one in the far North of the Middle Kingdom knew who he was.

Wei Ying chanced upon a high-ranking civilian who worked as a Head of janitorial services. Seeing such a vibrant and hardworking young man delivering the evening periodicals, yet sporting an unseen marker typical of captive cultivators and their bonded yaoguai inside the body, intrigued the wizened man dressed in gold-threaded obsidian black-pearl white robes, living in an opulent, richly decorated chamber in a multi-storey building close to the temple. After exchanging polite pleasantries, the old peered at Wei Ying and stroked his beard in interest, and asked about the latter. Wei Ying stuck to his tried and tested story of a much-modified, much-redacted and skewed account of what he and Lan Zhan went through, and even pointed to the direction of his dormitories, which were derelict in comparison to the old man's posh home. Wei Ying wondered aloud if working hard in the military centre, as a lifelong prisoner, could reap such grand fortunes and housing rewards, and if so, how long that would take.

“My dear boy,” the man said, and placed an arm on Wei Ying’s shoulder while picking up his evening periodical, “The world is such a huge continent of vast, endless opportunities - only if you know where to invest your efforts, which basket to put your bargaining chips in, and which battles to fight.” The old man explained that his life wasn’t an easy one - he wasn’t born with a silver spoon -, and yet he didn’t have to slave throughout his first fifty years in life to attain the life envied by countless others - he was still in active service and earning decent salaries for a non-combatant, yet he didn’t need to suffer from back-breaking work or from sacrificing his pride. His family and grandchildren were living well in state-sponsored mansions located around the suburbs of Chang’an, with many members also working with the government in various well-to-do positions and helping each other in the traditional spirit of guanxi .

“The Emperor cares for his people, not always in the ways you’d imagine. Every citizen is entitled to a decent home, enough food, a good job, adequate security, and for families, education for the children, medical care for the old, and many more benefits to those faithful to His Majesty and the government,” he added, and folded his hands towards his front to worship an imaginary statue depicting the Emperor himself. Such elegant displays of loyalty, akin to religious zealots, unnerved Wei Ying, and he cringed internally while thanking the elderly man for the sage advice - play by the rules, show undying devotion and servitude to the Emperor, be part of the well-oiled machineries that run the Imperial government; so far, Wei Ying knew he had demonstrated such values to some extent, given that he’d worked hard, and to his surprise - and now, understanding dawned upon him - easy access to resources that would otherwise be off-limits to brand new migrant residents to the military centre. There was a very fine line that separated trust and corruption in these lands; he could do personal favours for this very friendly old man and find himself living in upscale elite quarters and flush with cash, if he wanted to; but alas, Wei Ying wasn’t that kind of feral beast that could turn its back on his roots, sell itself short to those who were richer and more famous, and then, find itself tamed and caged with a golden leash tied around its neck, wagging its tail to the new masters that toyed with its body and soul to pander to their whims.

Wei Ying, remember our oath. To protect the weak, to help the unfortunate. We do not take sides and twist our promises and our life goals for selfish reasons; what may seem white right in front of us, is often grey from a distance. That Senior Guard Liu is an example; he may be a successful soldier with great prospects in life with the Imperial army, but looking back, his soul is as empty, his life is as meaningless, his entirety revolves around his Imperial masters; like a beautiful jar of wine left on the ground, bought for a pretty gold coin, consumed and dried up, it lies as a memento of something that was once noble, magnificent and precious, now waiting in dust to be broken and sent to the trash.

The younger man was impressed by how Lan Zhan's ability to un-magically communicate with him had leap-frogged over the span of a few hours, and he was more in awe of such a stirring speech that galvanized him to re-orientate his moral compass.

For the sake of their safety whilst imprisoned in the camp, he'd play nice, but he would bend as many rules as he could to make sure that he didn't turn into a man who ended up serving decades of his life to a great king that would never see or acknowledge his services, and those years of service would, in all likelihood, never enrich the lives of anyone outside his circle of increasingly selfish, corrupted family. The couple had seen this before - it happened to the Lanling Jin, and sixteen years earlier, the Qishan Wen; the sects' endings had been well written in the annals of human history, and Wei Ying was determined not to let the same string of events happen to both him and his spouse.

Lan Zhan, I've made up my mind - I don't want to remain in this place for too long. The more we are involved in life within this prison camp, the more transactions of favours and whatnots we're putting ourselves into - soon, we'll be indebted to others, assimilated into their way of doing things; just as others will do questionable things for us to the detriment of the greater good. I refuse to be part of this vicious cycle and this depraved, self-serving society that thinks nothing but its own fragmented circles of power and influence. No wonder the Tao demon-monks easily broke in and cemented their influence within the higher ranks of the army, because men are easily swayed by a few sweet promises in exchange of the many souls and lives of others not connected to them, served to the priests on a silver platter. The Imperial army is selling out its people, and that's an utmost act of betrayal to Mankind!

.

“Lan Zhan, Senior Guard Zhen talked to me about our living arrangements when I returned the jade pass. He said he may have some good news for us tomorrow, and that might include enlarging our accommodation. We’ve been told to meet him at the office at nine, tomorrow,” Wei Ying murmured nonchalantly in-between hearty chews of grilled chicken with mushrooms, and lifted up one sleeve to show what glimmered inside - it was a oval-shaped piece of green jade with patches of milky white, and it was ornately sculptured with dragonhead motifs.

Senior Guard Zhen handed me this copy of a Class-C Jade Pass to ‘ease my future assignments’, after I agreed to deliver another batch of bamboo scrolls to certain rooms in the dormitories before coming here for dinner. I daydreamed a bit on my way to the dorms and powered up my All-Seeing ability - they’re confidential, personalized invitations for certain human members of our classmates from the Tao temple! There is a schedule to it - one person is instructed to pass through the temple’s rear gates at preordained dates and times, once a day at meal times, totalling three persons a day! If my tingling senses are to be believed, what must’ve happened to the unfortunate monk this morning, will happen again to our batch of classmates - they'll be sent to the slaughterhouse filled with waiting, hungry demon-possessed priests!

Lan Zhan stared a little too long, and Wei Ying coughed under a pretense of feeling discomfort from being ogled by his spouse. The older man ducked his head and quickly pushed a small bowl of steamed braised bear paw garnished with broccoli and root vegetables, and a bowl of bear meat soup that had simmered for over four hours; Wei Ying glanced in askance whether the bear - a rare predator to be served on the dinner table - was the one he'd killed a couple of days ago, and Lan Zhan nodded. The younger man marvelled at the offered dish, and savoured the sweet, meaty and dense flavours steaming into the air, with his wiggling nostrils. Such foods were clearly meant for the elites, and were sometimes dismissed as scraps when those said noblemen and generals decided that they were either too full, or if the dish wasn't up to mark to their tastes, thus, relegating to the likes of doggie bags and leftovers that the kitchen staff happily packed for their own consumption, or taken back to their families to be enjoyed. The kitchens, it seemed, served free meals not only for the military base, but also for all others who served the facility.

The older man continued to share his thoughts and memories using non-magical means, and kept burping between sips of soup. He had garnered a bit of reputation amongst the kitchen staff as a very helpful and wise worker (and one who has indigestion, burping problems), so he was allowed to take on bigger responsibilities - he manned one of the many kitchen stations and had a couple of servants to read out the orders coming in from the dining halls, prepare the ingredients, keep the place clean, and bring out the cooked food whilst Lan Zhan's amazing flaming wok kept pumping out filled dishes one after another. Dinner service was busy and packed to the brim, with many hungry mouths to feed, especially with a battalion of war-weary soldiers returning to base at sundown. He didn't have the time to prepare special dishes on the side for Wei Ying, so his new peers advised him to 'cook a little more' and keep the extra portions to be shared later. He'd balked at the idea at first, but a strict, no-nonsense nod from his supervisor told him that it was acceptable, even expected, for kitchen staff members to cut corners and take the surplus for equal distribution at the end of their shifts.

“Wah...! Darling, all these small bowls filled with different types of food were on today’s menu? They’re really delicious!” Wei Ying gleefully remarked and used his chopsticks to pick a bit from every platter, put them straight into his mouth, before picking out from more bowls, with large chunks of rice in between. Lan Zhan ‘Mn’-ed calmly and leaned back, having finished one bowl of rice himself with meat and vegetables from various cuisines, and reached over to fill up another bowl. They were seated in a corner of the vacated dining halls; at eight o’ clock, all soldiers and officers had finished their meals and were either in the bath house, or pursuing other activities as dictated by their schedules, and it was the time for the kitchen’s staff members - and their families - to gather in their small, separate groups, and tuck in into tonight’s delightful dinner offerings.

Look at the family of four seated beside us! They look content and happy with the free and tasty, nutritious food the father had managed to collect from the dinner service. And over there, behind you, there’s a romantic couple sharing bowls of fried rice and noodle soups that the wife had made for serving from the kitchen. I feel conflicted at times like this; it seems this system... this culture... brings happiness to the people, yet all I can think of is that in the end, they’ll probably be at each other’s throats for their selfish gains.

Lan Zhan felt Wei Ying’s socked toes reach out to his ankles and started to draw circles around them, threatening to pull down his shoes and play footsie in front of disinterested spectators; everyone was too busy eating with their own loved ones and didn’t pay attention to others. He shrugged, and burped out a message that it was too early to make any judgements on the people they’ll be living with, so Wei Ying should dial down his hostility and suspicions, and simply go with the flow. He kicked off his shoes, and allowed the younger man's soles to slide all over his feet - toes, arches, heels and all. Wei Ying hnn'd discreetly in approval, and played footsies below the table, molesting each of the older man's toes with his own, then rubbed nnnh-inducing circles at the bottom of the arch, using his big hairy toe or a sweep of the other four smaller ones - because he knew Lan Zhan stood rather unmovingly for a couple of hours at his cooking station and his feet were probably crying from holding up an overweight man's weight - and made sure to melt away the throbbing aches and pounding strains with titillating presses on acupressure points on the balls of the feet and upon the defenceless but terribly, terribly wanting heels too.

Lan Zhan put down his bowl of rice and decided to lean into the backrest while chewing and swallowing the rest of his mouthful. He took a deep breath, closed his eyes, then had a sip of tea to cleanse his palate, and let Wei Ying massage his delighted feet to orgasmic peaks as he arched his back and curled his happy toes repeatedly with each masturbatory stroke.

.

The thinly masked footjob-cum-dinner done, the couple packed up for the night, including a set of bamboo food containers freely given out to all kitchen staff filled with leftovers that could be easily heated up as supper or breakfast for the next day, such as whole barbecued meats, rice dumplings, sweet and savoury desserts, fruits and nuts as snacks, and the like. Lan Zhan did the dishes - he was getting used to treating the common kitchens as his own, and even his fellow chefs did the same; they didn't exchange many words, because everyone was guilty of stealing a bit for their own consumption, so they quietly cleaned up their assigned stations, signed off forms to confirm that they'd completed their duties, and collected their pay packets from a small office next to the kitchens, and left with their family members. Everyone received bear bile pills purported to boost one's energy and clear toxins out of their bodies as bonuses for the superb dinner service performance; Lan Zhan popped in his share and Wei Ying followed-suit, before the latter decried the vile, bitter taste, and the older man quickly gagged his lover and dragged him away before they created a scene. Lan Zhan was grateful to be given such expensive health tonics, and at the same time, uncomfortable about such kind treatment from his employer.

They meandered through the dimly lit streets and increasingly yawning patches of dark spaces where Eye and Sense spells have been deactivated due to lack of traffic. It was a nice change of pace, to stroll through cobbled paths after a heavy meal and enjoy the relative tranquility at the campgrounds, besides the occasional barks of One-Two-Three-Fours from nearby practising groups of cultivators, without the annoying female voiceover announcements of available jobs, and to take in the fresh, crisp nighttime air while gazing at the star-dotted skies and a crescent moon peeking from behind silver-lined clouds. Wei Ying pointed at the trading post, which was still open even close to lights-out time, and whined that he wanted to buy something. He opened his palms and stared at the older man expectedly; Lan Zhan sighed, and emptied his sleeves - about twenty silver coins rolled into Wei Ying's hands, and the younger man's eyes gleamed with anticipation.

“Well, since there's hardly any shops around and no way out of this place, and we've been so used to going to night markets whenever we were in town, I figured we may as well do some shopping before heading back. There are some things I want to buy to make our lives more comfortable than what is provided by the basic amenities in our room,” Wei Ying declared, then hooked an arm around Lan Zhan's and together, they walked to the brightly lit building that thronged with late-night customers and cultivators looking to spruce up their gear or lifestyles in exchange for a pretty coin. The older man was concerned for a moment, and sent his thoughts through - their horse cart had been deposited right in front of their room, and there was no way all the bulky items could be stored inside their tiny studio apartment-like living space.

Our floor mat and other magical belongings have been returned, after they've been inspected and found not to emit any magical aura. We can't activate those items while being surrounded by those Eyeballs and Sense radars, and more so, within this Anti-magic field. So please, Wei Ying, please don't buy too much...

Wei Ying giggled and 'Enn'd innocently, and started counting their tallied wages for the day; he was already thinking of what splendid things to bring back to their little home, and polishing his A.S.S. haggling skills inside his mind.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 179

Back in the dorms, the creative craftsman and tinkerer Wei Wuxian worked to dismantle several pieces of wood from the horse cart parked in front of their abode. There wasn't much space in their room, so he left the less valuable, but bulky contents in there, outside their room and covered by a waterproof tarp - extra camping gear, harnesses for the donkey, cooking stove and some kitchenware, travelling supplies and personal hygiene products, and the ilk. It made the entire process of transforming the horse cart into a hand cart much more cumbersome, and soon, he wiped sweat off his brows and his forearms were trembling from the exertion.

“Lan Zhan! I need help here!” he called out without caring if he'd wake up their neighbours or not at half past nine; since they were categorized as civilians, hence the curfew hours did not apply to them, however they were warned to be polite and respectful to others' needs. The two dormitory units on either side of theirs were unoccupied - on one side, the monk who had been dragged to the temple earlier the morning and his annihilated fierce corpse yaoguai friend, on the other, he'd heard from a passing-by patrol guard that the man who bonded with the Tiger Woman yaoguai had been sent to a detention facility - more like, a jail with iron bars and plain straw as bed - after misbehaving and hurting an instructor during class. Wei Ying did enquire for more details, and learned that the man was angered by the many restrictions that apply to soldiers-in-training and kicked the Imperial sergeant in the jaw, and was punished to stay in an enclosed chamber located inside the Tao temple for a week; that man would be forced to undergo intense remedial spiritual meditation surrounded by mystical Tao statues and their Tao Masters, and repent through the way of the Tao. “So far,” the guard remarked and rubbed his chin, “The temple has reported one hundred percent success, and all treated cultivators graduate into junior monks upon completion of the one-week therapy, having discarded their old, bloodthirsty and hot-headed ways. They were sent to other military research centres and enlisted to serve newly set-up temples elsewhere in the region.”

At that time, Wei Ying felt suspicious and asked for a few examples, and what happened to their left-behind yaoguai partners. “Well,” the guard said, “Those transfers happened during the nights, so I’ve not met the cultivators who had turned over to new leaves, but I’d congratulate them from the bottom of my heart, for having found their corrected path through the Tao. As for their partners, they’ve been re-bonded and paired up with the up-and-coming Imperial champions you’ve seen that arrive at this centre upon receiving recommendations from their leaders. It helps to bolster the Imperial troops’ confidence, that they have a chance to participate in this programme and obtain their own yaoguai as tools and weapons of choice.” Wei Ying was dismayed at the one-sided explanation and when he was shown what transpired for the victimized Tiger Woman, he wasn’t shocked - under the glow of silver moonlight, a Tao priest accompanied her to her new master’s home, which was in another dormitory building not too far away and still within his line of sight; the priest waved a little bell shaped like the pagoda that dominated their campsite, and with each crystal tinkle, bursts of spores could be detected emitting out of it, hypnotizing the poor female yaoguai to smile sweetly and accept what was happening to her, then unthinkingly, started to undress her robes even before stepping through the doorway. Wei Ying thought the terrible ritual was akin to killing a man to rob him of his newlywed wife, then forcefully gift that said wife on her ruined wedding night to a greedy, horny neighbour who paid large sums for a virgin maiden. Such salacious tales were fit for smutty B-grade novels, and yet, that was what Wei Ying believed he witnessed that night.

“Mn. Let me carry it,” Lan Zhan murmured gently and that broke Wei Ying from his reverie - true enough, a single flabby arm dipped beneath the cart and with a single heave, the transport floated seamlessly upwards, to the latter’s amazement; his darling man was, although physically unfit and as fat as a pig, still had the strength of more than ten men in his biceps after all. Within minutes, the adjustments to the cart was done, and both returned to the room after locking the door; Wei Ying broke his own moral pledge and bribed the patrol guard with snacks stolen from the kitchens that evening; in return for the very favourable deed, the guard gave Wei Ying the keys to their room, along with the former promising that the dishonorable Imperial soldier would get dibs on whatever Lan Zhan brought back - honestly or not - from a day's work, which usually constitutes of cooked foods or fresh farm produce.

Inside the warm cocoon of their new home, Wei Ying continued to improvise using the few meagre purchases he made at the trading post before it closed, plus two sleeves and a sack's worth of tools he'd pilfered from his workplaces; if any, despite his earlier claims of wanting to walk the right path, Wei Ying was the bigger thief between the two when it came to bringing back the loot from the military centre. He used one of the tables, flipped it over and re-purposed it with some woodwork to fashioned a small shower stall; by using a Water-spell powered outlet and showerhead fixed to the wall, retractable curtains from extra tarp they had in the horse cart, and a large wooden basin 'borrowed' from the tool shed to collect used water, which would then be poured out of the waste hatch beneath the sole window in their room. In essence, they owned an ever-present source of fresh water drawn from nearby streams, and didn't need to carry buckets of water from the communal wells anymore.

"Clothes off," Wei Ying ordered, as he gingerly stepped into the basin to give his invention a try, "I don't want anything to become soaking wet in case there is a mishap!". While Wei Ying disrobed and threw his garments carelessly to the floor, Lan Zhan picked them up and hung them in the wardrobe, simultaneously reading a brochure they'd picked up from a corner of the trading post that listed the do's and don'ts of spell-casting under Imperial Laws. There was a table drawn on the parchment that stated what kinds of basic magic was allowed in special administrative zones such as military research centres - which was mostly harmless and everyday elemental spells, plus a handful that aided ordinary activities such as short-range telekinesis.

“Lan Zhan, can you start the water?” the younger man called out from behind closed shower curtains, and Lan Zhan, already prancing around naked as instructed, easily twirled his fingers to release a tiny sliver of his godly magic to cast a Level 0.5 elemental spell. He had tensed up the moment a ghostly flow of sparkling water spiralled from the partially-opened window and straight into the showerhead above Wei Ying; he almost believed he’d be struck by that horrible, incapacitating Anti-Magic headache and be arrested by shouting guards for breaking the rules - but such events never materialized, even with tens of Eyeballs staring straight at him from all angles, deeply embedded into the surfaces of their room and furniture.

Wei Ying squealed that the water was too cold and there was a burst of pitter patter of dancing feet inside the wooden basin, so Lan Zhan concentrated again - he added a Level 0.25 Fire spell into the trickle that supplied Wei Ying’s home-made shower, and with a resounding ‘Ahhh, that’s much better!’ joined by a chorus of off-tune Yunmeng-style folksong sung in the shower stall, the older man knew he was on the right track. He was called to hand over bottles of soap and shampoo and washcloths through the folds of the curtain, like a butler in waiting - and received an eyeful of his sexy soulmate furiously masturbating while shaking his hips and ass energetically to the lousy singing, and a big mole-like wart on the pubes named Ernie received hot lovin’ too with plenty of caresses and finger-pokes. Without getting too distracted by the eye candy, Lan Zhan withdrew tactfully so that he could continue to busy himself with flushed cheeks and a bowed head with the tasks at hand; he used a mop that Wei Ying had somehow cleverly brought back by hiding it inside his robes from the classroom janitor’s office, and wiped away any stains or spilled puddles; he also made multiple trips into the large cupboard that was as high as the ceiling, on the pretense of putting away some larger items - but in fact, he’d placed his favourite floor mat inside, so that each time he went into the cupboard and closed the door - fortunately there were no Eyes or Sensing spells inside -, he was able to access the underground kingdom that he’d dearly missed.

Those lovely two-minute romps into the deep inferno were more than enough to quench the fires boiling from within the loins, which left the older man extremely satisfied to the point of pleasant deflation of certain body parts, with twenty four thousand rounds of tasty sex and a bit more - the children and descendents he'd fathered the season before were coming of age in the time-warped space beneath the floor mat, and that made Lan Zhan very grateful that he had fallen in love with Wei Ying, and his many other Wei Yings, in the first place.

After both men showered, Lan Zhan was again shown another of Wei Ying's brilliant side - by putting away the basin to dry against the window, the table was flipped back (with Lan Zhan's bicep-licious strength) to become a kitchenette of sorts. The younger man marvelled for a bit at a few metal strips and plates taken from the same source of construction material for repairing the big hole in the main administration office that morning, and a roll of asbestos cloth purchased from the trading post - they were definitely Imperial high-quality make -, and asked Lan Zhan to first lay a few slabs of rocks upon the tabletop covered with that said heat-resistant cloth. Using weak telekinesis, the older man did as he was told, and floated a few flat stones and arranged them on the furniture. Next, using Level 1 Metal spells according to Wei Ying's detailed instructions, Lan Zhan fashioned heating coils (because Fires were not allowed, for safety reasons) and supporting grids to hold woks, pots and pans, which were also shaped out of the metal plates. The older man contributed his stash as well, to maximize the use of those wide sleeves of the uniform - little containers of salt, sugar, sauces, dried spices and other versatile condiments that were stocked up in excess in the kitchens' pantry, along with small amounts of dried foods, even eggs and noodles, that his fellow chefs egged him to take some back to his living quarters. Adding a small stack of tableware, and their basic kitchenette looked surprisingly functional, and Wei Ying begged his darling man to make supper for two, because he missed Lan Zhan's preferential treatment and his trademark cooking style when it came to mealtimes.

Lan Zhan's endeavour to make a simple supper turned out to be a very, very lovely time for the couple. Being naked - Wei Ying had long ago declared that the sick pervert voyeurs peering at them through the Eye and Sense spells could go to gay hell -, the younger man took every opportunity to re-engage with his darling husband now that they had much less time spent together living in the prison camp. He peppered sweet kisses on every inch of Lan Zhan's skin, tweaked his nipples from behind, grind his hard-on lasciviously against the older man's hips and butt-crack, slid his feet against the other's - and when the chef in the house tried his best to hold back from burning water meant to heat up leftovers, Wei Ying coo'ed Lan Zhan's name again and again, crouched between the latter's legs with his back firm against the kitchenette table, and gave his darling husband the best blowjob ever, surpassing even twenty four thousand inferior copies of that younger man that inhabited beneath the enchanted floor mat.

The Gusu Lan champion moaned uncontrollably and trembled with fingers squashing dumplings into a fistfuls of sticky gooey mess, when Wei Ying worshipped each of the godly man's testicles lovingly, attacked those vulnerable, exposed husbandly genitals with such fervour, with plenty of tender licks alternating with vicious suckles, accompanied by a deadly hand-and-lips combo of nibbling then violently sucking and tugging the swollen penile flesh, then he hummed and hummed until Lan Zhan's scrotal sac vibrated, then throbbed powerfully with waves of orgasmic testicular orgasms; those jiggling fatty glutes shook and pumped in earnest, and Wei Ying gladly swallowed down the twitching, wildly spasming angry-red turgid rod poking out from its nest of sweaty, saliva-slicked curls; Lan Zhan groaned with great pleasure sizzling through his nerves, sparking great virile joys of cresting sensations building up, boiling, erupting, rhythmically squeezing every sweeping torrent of fluid, seed, roaring pleasure, fiery missiles, curling toes, seizing muscles from the lower back to the thighs, powerful jerks to the front and back, coaxed to ejaculate again and again and spill his scorching-hot, thick, milky climax straight into Wei Ying's waiting lips. Had it not been Wei Ying's bottomless appetite for Lan Zhan's semen, some would've landed in the steaming pot and enriched the flavours of their supper.

Once is never enough, so as Lan Zhan struggled to prepare a meal for two, Wei Ying continued to sexually assault his darling husband; whether to keep giving wonderful blowjobs and handjobs wherever the man tried to move around their tiny room - Wei Ying followed closely from behind, even when Lan Zhan took the tableware and arranged the chopsticks and spoons, and nearly dropped some because Wei Ying refused to stop reaching from behind to cup his tired but very happy balls and playfully stroke his flaccid, cum-leaking penis to full attention - then, Lan Zhan turned around to reprimand the man to stop horsing around, but found that his penis slid perfectly right into Wei Ying's waiting rosebud when the latter also spun around and bent down to shove his ass straight into the older man's crotch - the two engaged in tasty sexual intercourses against tables and chairs and flat against cupboards where necessary, because Lan Zhan truly wanted to punish the sex-demon for his naughty games, in which Wei Ying simply cackled then squeezed his buttocks to sexually ensnare his favourite throbbing, thrusting penis deep inside his rectum, and the said sex-demon started whispering very dirty pornographic stories about a husband who raped ninety nine virginal maidens named Wei Ying, blasting his virile seed to sow wildly unto uteral gardens filled with gurgling, coo'ing baby Wei Yings, to plant hundreds of twins and triplets into healthy, waiting fertile wombs - the terribly cliched sordid tales riled up the older man well enough, and Lan Zhan proceeded to slam his hips hard and fast between Wei Ying's ass to give the man a taste of his own medicine - a breedworthy fuck that would leave him bow-legged for a while - and Wei Ying was even more overjoyed at tricking his darling husband to explosively orgasm many, many lovely times inside him, until Lan Zhan ran on empty and pleaded for surrender on the floor, dribbling increasingly dilute, seedless fluids uselessly from the point where their bodies entwined too many times, the younger maiden-boy erotically swayed his hips while riding the older man to more forced climaxes than ever humanly possible, until he, too, squirted seed and pee all over Lan Zhan's rounded, sexually flushed, contracting tummy, and then delirious, spasming Lan Zhan made an off-the-cuff remark that he still had to cook supper for the two of them, while experiencing yet another skyrocketing orgasm of feeble thirty-spurts deep, deep inside his lovely Wei Ying.

.

The studio apartment-styled room was cramped, but it was cozy and quite comfortable - a bunk bed, a shower stall that doubled as a kitchenette with a flip of table, a quiet corner for reading and studying, cabinets, wardrobes and cupboards filled with their paltry worldly possessions, and a transport cart waiting outside if the need arises to move around. Wei Ying said - while munching on moist, re-heated baozi and mouthfuls of quick-cook hand-torn flat noodle soup with dried anchovy broth and whole hard-boiled eggs, and dining under laundry lines fashioned out of ropes from their travels that were filled with hung, drying washcloths, robes, trousers, boxers and loincloths - that life in the prison camp wasn't too bad, as long as they know how to bend the rules to their advantage.

Terrifically satiated Lan Zhan carefully stepped over a few bags, sacks and neat bundles of stuff, almost as though he drifted through the piles of objects like a phantom - because he'd been drained too many times in the past hour and his loins felt float-y like zero gravity -, and laid down the cursed purple cushion on the ground - they had to eat on the floor because all tables were, sadly, filled with more stuff and needed to be wiped after the mind-blowing sex - and sat down to have his supper too. "I thought you weren't too keen in this... you know, settling down to living here," the older man finally responded, and slurped down the noodles; at this rate, he wasn't going to lose any weight from his obesity, but for the sake of Wei Ying and the want of pampering his beloved spouse, even at the expense of his health or his burgeoning waistline, he pressed on with eating multiple meals per day as long as Wei Ying found it agreeable to stay by the side of the softest, warmest human pillow ever. Lan Zhan hardly flinched when he felt a hairy foot reach across and its sole rubbed vigorously against his half-hard though weakly twitching flesh. Soon, the glans was caught between Wei Ying's large and second toes, and he was given a very, very nice footjob, which unfortunately didn't elicit the kind of response the couple would've liked, because Lan Zhan had already exhausted his daily quota of sexual excitement that day.

Wei Ying shrugged at the lamentable situation, but he wasn't disappointed. He stared at a half-eaten dumpling in his hand with a hardened gaze in a sombre mood. He had some serious thinking to do in the nude with a sleeping shirt draped over his shoulders, decisions to make, and a direction to take, plus another day of living quite an interesting life as a civilian, earning good Imperial money, carrying out productive activities that he quite liked, here in a prison camp located in the heart of Jinshan.

Shortly before midnight, the couple snuggled closely to each other, sandwiched into the lower bunk of the bed, lulled by each other's heartbeats and the warmth of bed-warmed skin. Wei Ying wanted to play a game of 'nursing the baby to sleep' in his role as the lao po and mother in their relationship, so Lan Zhan indulged in his lover's wishes; he was cuddled and coddled, had his hair stroked splendidly and his back patted, pampered with maternal love; Wei Ying offered his sparse bosom, and Lan Zhan gladly suckled on each nipple hungrily, attacking each nub as though in revenge of the earlier soul-draining attacks on his penis that left him more than high and dry.

"Ah, you're such a greedy baby, you like to steal milk from your pregnant wife and become a spoiled brat of your own," the younger man chuckled and lovingly continued to run fingers through the older man's hair; sometimes he'd let those fingers roam to his chest and let Lan Zhan lick and suck on each long digit, from base to tip, up and down like making sweet love to a trembling sexual organ, and of course, the hairy thumbs received the most passionate service. Lan Zhan wasn't too insulted by what Wei Ying said, because he loved to be bullied by Wei Ying's nonsensical name-calling, and he made sure his lao po sported pretty puffy male areolae by the time he was thoroughly done with Wei Ying's breasts.

Having satisfied his own twisted sexual hunger, Lan Zhan nnngh'd finally called it a day - both were exhausted, but satisfied, after a whole day of working, eating, making love and so on. The two easily eased into the narrow bed and snored away, with the younger one's face squished against the husband's musk-heavy armpit hair, his arms and legs around the latter like a bloated human sausage squeezed by limbs, resulting in the older lover being trapped against the wall, dreaming uncomfortable dreams of being held in a death grip by a giant, thin, body spider against a hard rock, that was incredibly intimate, warm and frankly, creepily desirable. Later, Wei Ying performed some sleep-induced acrobatics and ended up with his back spooning against Lan Zhan's abdomen, with the older man's penis hard, excited once again from some naughty Gusu Lan dreams, that slid easily into the stretched, cum-slicked rosebud, and Wei Ying continued to move his hips languidly in his sleep, then massage the intruding flesh inside him by exercising his pelvic floor muscles, until Lan Zhan nnnh'd repeatedly, almost too excitedly from instinct, and moaned Wei Ying's name in his own disturbed slumber, body quivering periodically in mini-orgasms, penile muscles pumping tasty Lan seeds weakly deep into Wei Ying's warm, welcoming love cavern, all night and into the wee hours of the morning, still cuddling in each other's arms.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 180

Lan Zhan had a wonderful dream. It was inane and disrespectful to Gusu Lan intelligence at all levels, absurdly hilarious, yet extremely disturbing at the same time.

He dreamt he had been kidnapped by many Wei Yings in all forms, shapes and sizes. He was meditating and playing his longtime friend, the guqin, inside the Jingshi of his childhood days, peacefully minding his own business of pursuing the purity of thought and mind - when suddenly, little Wei Yings no bigger than finger-sized papermen poured through the open windows, the cracks on the floor, and horrors of all horrors, out of his teacup too. Like creepy ants swarming his body, Lan Zhan tried to shoo and sweep them away, but to no avail, because every Wei Ying, with their cute little lovely faces and squeaky voices, were far more intelligent than a full grown man destined to be captured and devoured by the Wei Ying-ness that had consumed his life since they had found themselves in each other's arms.

The tiny Wei Yings chirped like noisy, annoying insects and went to work, despite the man's valiant struggles to roll all over the floor of the sacred Jingshi building, flail his limbs, and scream for help, to rid himself of those dastardly things worse than biting red fire-ants. Using Binding Spells, Lan Zhan was soon bundled up with tight and silky-soft threads like a caterpillar's cocoon, and he was carried out of his home like a fatty pig spit roast to its doom.

“Do you really want to work your ass off for the rest of your life, whether for yourself or for your loved one's sake? Or do you want to have naughty fun instead, and live with untamed, unrestrained joy with those that you cherish?”

Lan Zhan blinked, and found himself inside an empty, dark room, except with a white spotlight on two items in front of him. It was unnervingly quiet, disorientingly featureless, and absolutely nerve-wracking to be standing before a straw broom, and what looked like a toy chest adorned with lotus designs. Out of bad habit and without thinking, Lan Zhan grabbed the straw broom, then the entire scenery swirled into a kaleidoscope of increasingly bright, though muted pale colours, leaving him giddy for a few seconds - and he was back in the Jingshi, sweeping the floor in the front chamber facing the main doors as always - but without his pants on.

Alarmed, he suddenly felt the urge to quickly sweep the last bits of dust away before running to his bedroom to put on a pair of decent pants, but there were always more piles of dust, some litter, and some thrown crumpled balls of paper around. He furiously moved the straw broom like a non-stop swinging pendulum, the instincts to clean up the house overwhelming any rational thought to get himself dressed - even as people began to shuffle into the house, staring curiously at the man, shrivelling to a teenage boy, younger and younger until Lan Zhan was merely eleven or twelve of age; those men were his neighbours, his school teachers, *shushu*s from related families, vendors who sold groceries and provisions to him at the markets - all familiar faces, and they gawked at him, a young precocious adolescent who kept sweeping the floor without his pants on, and who was becoming more and more embarrassed by the minute at becoming a spectacle in the middle of murmurs, whispers, and gossips between uncles that he knew so well.

“Look at him, a poor dear child orphaned before his tenth birthday, and he’s already misbehaving by prancing around in near nudity! Whip his body with a cane, aim for his sensitive nipples, so that he’ll learn not to do it again!”

“Such a bad boy! How could he be given the Lan surname? He doesn’t deserve it, he must be punished! Spank his buttocks, so that he’ll repent!”

“Bad, bad, boy. Stop trying to pretend that you can sweep the floor! It’s getting dirtier the more you sweep! Lift up the broom, and let this uncle come closer to inspect what you’ve been hiding inside your pants all this time!”

Lan Zhan didn’t know why, but suddenly he felt very small, very young, and afraid to face the world; greasy uncles surround him and started to touch him very inappropriately; tongues snaked into his ears and nibbled his plump earlobes; more drool-y wet moist lips slathered his neck and collarbone, sending shivers up and down his spine when fingers moved in from behind to tickle his ribcage, grab his child-tits, and massage his nipples very sensuously, very generously; more tongues attacked his baby navel, poking and prodding deeply to swirl inside the tight shallow crevice, eliciting illegal moans and forbidden giggles; more uncles rub their faces on his groin area, moustaches and curly beards grazing across his pubic area to worship the hidden treasure within, seeking the tiny body to grow faster and blossom into an adult sooner than possible; unsurprisingly, two uncles panted hard and very, very excitedly, touched and licked his testicles, mauling his delicate boy-scrotum like tearing a plump fruit apart, each dirty rapist uncle passionately attacking each fragile boy-egg with powerful suction alternating with tongue-swiping circles, and they had all the time needed, from morning to night, to savour the juices, from milky virginal semen to clear seedless fluids, spurting and fountaining liquids that only pre-pubescent boys like him make from immature sexual organs.

The tiny body was not prepared for multiple testicular orgasms, and as anticipated, one bold, evil-looking wrinkled old uncle finally made a decisive strike to attack the child's defenceless, exposed pinkie-length penis with such fervour; he bent over like a hunched monster and dipped his head between the child's shaking legs repeatedly with such lustful vigour; the child hiccuped and sobbed from the sexual assault as his back arched in orgasmic waves that his body hadn't learnt yet until that day, unfamiliar and uncomfortable rhythmic spasms scorched his loins and caused very, very nice itchy and hot feelings, yet alarming for someone too young to know that pleasure was forced upon his underdeveloped genitals. Still, Lan Zhan did not give up - he had chosen to work instead of play, and tried his best to sweep the floor of the Jingshi. Demonic uncles continued to move around him like leeches clinging onto his trembling body, grimy, unwashed hands reaching down to fiddle and play with the irritated, swollen, but very, very excited boy-genitals that hadn't known the meaning of multiple orgasms until that day, molesting and rudely awakening his erogenous zones - french kisses, neck hickeys, swollen nipples, tentacle-like tongues and finger appendages burrowing between his butt cheeks, wrinkly scabbed skin brushing roughly on his smooth inner thighs down to shins and toes, each of his limbs and digits were properly swabbed with coiled forked tongues, make-believe adult fucking thrusting of muscular tongues upon the hypersensitive grooves between fingers and toes, and still more uncles with unusually long snake-like tongues licked his nostrils and ears, trying to penetrate and plunder his bodily orifices, seeking to break in with such vileness and foul monstrosities, wanting no more than to defile the pre-teen's virginal innocence that was soon torn away from repeated sexual abuse from the uncles that lived in his neighbourhood.

“Look at the boy! Is he not the second child of the great Lan master and see how he has fallen from grace! He's no more than a boy-slut in the hands of experienced dirty pervert uncles. He must be a pervert himself, watch how his body writhe as he enjoys being sucked off by warty, unwashed and smelly lips!”

“Oh, oh, blessed Guanyin, see how his nipples flared up into juicy grapes? Come, neighbours of this esteemed Lan house, come and feast upon this boy's sparse milk-jugs, perhaps someday he will prostitute himself to us, and everyone of us shall breed him like a bitch until he carries babes inside his womb! Those milk-jugs would come in handy, I'm sure!"

"We cannot fertilize his rosebud yet because he's too young, too delicate, and he might tear like a flower petal in a dog's razor-sharp maw, and we will be punished by Master Qi Ren! So let's play with that rosebud until it blooms, insert our tongues and fingers, and find that hidden prized treasure inside every male... yes, yes, can you feel it? A little bump in the rectal wall, and we shall play with it like tossing loquats and dribbling them on the ground, until that sweet, sweet juicy gland shall swell up nicely and squirt its nectar to slake our thirsts!"

In the dream turned nightmare, Lan Zhan braved the unwanted touches and rapes to his innocent child-body, and continued to chase after piles of dust that kept appearing left, right, centre, with his heavy broom. He would lunge with a sweep, then gripped the handle of the broom tightly like a walking cane, bracing with his dear life at another climax bursting from his very, very excited and disgusted boy-cock; his deflowered body quaked, his back arched and his face etched with the half-snarl, half-yawn and half-sneeze look, followed by erratic breathing and the tell tale spread of red sexual flushes sweeping across the chest to the neck, then rhythmic grunts that eleven-year olds should not make - signs that told the victorious demonic uncles that they had succeeded in forcing the boy to ejaculate spiritedly, again, into someone's waiting cummy jaws.

Then, he proceeded to start over to sweep away the shameful stain left on the floor, along with more dust that kept falling to the ground. Someone's knobbled bristly fingers reached down from behind his waist and made a tight O-ring of thumb and forefinger over his ensnared penis, and moved it back and forth so quickly until it was a blur. Lan Zhan grunted like an adult in the throes of breeding into a finger-made cocksleeve, very un-boyish-like of him, and continue to unsteadily move the broom while his hips danced to the sweet, sweet tightness fisting his wee-wee; he'd stagger to the right, and the hands drifted in the same direction, relentless in their cruel strokes until sparks flew in his eyesight and he jerked into the thin air for want to orgasming desperately although his penis was rubbed raw; then he shuffled to the left in a bid to escape that uncle's terribly experienced hand, but ended up shoving his crotch straight into another dirty uncles mouth, and his balls were lovingly worshipped, boiling unejaculated virginal sperm inside each sac simmered and spurted excitedly, raring to be born from their cradle of boy-eggs; then, cornered like a mouse, Lan Zhan tried to run away but his hands were gripped, molested, and his hips were forcibly spread while standing bow-legged, and the fingers that were giving such a marvellous handjob pulled back his tight child-foreskin to expose the pinkish candied fruity glans that all those loathsome corrupted evil Gusu Lan uncles loved to have a bite at; his straw broom dropped with an empty thud, those dirty smelly men crowded around his vulnerable genitals and took turns to lovingly attack the boy's penis, one by one, ten, twenty, fifty strokes and suckles like milking a teat, waves after waves of very, very nice penile contractions moved from base to tip of his wee-wee and back and forth repeatedly, until those glistening penile glans turned red with bruise from such rough love-making, the pee-slit gasping, suffocating, oozing crystal clear boy-prostatic fluids with short, spasmodic jizzes of virginal urine because the very, very nice orgasms kept cresting over and over his tortured jerking penis, each time searing-hot lust forcing the boy to spill everything he had from within his pelvic area, squeezing until the last drops, vacuuming dry the shrunken testicles and deflating prostate, feeding the demonic rapists until nothing but cold, cold, pee-pungent air was left.

Lan Zhan couldn't hold back from thrusting vigorously into an uncle's puckered lips, while his twin testicles were pleased non-stop by vacuum-strength suctions and vibrations; the child was not prepared to have adults perform full-blown perfect 10-10 oral sex upon his genitals, and he gasped and moaned wantonly, very inappropriately for someone who had just started having wet dreams, and those wet dreams would never be enough now that he'd tasted the pleasures wrought upon dirty rapist uncles living next door. Tongues massaged his prostate through the soft, pulsating fleshy perineum, and more slimy long jointed claw-like appendages violated his anus to attack the helpless walnut-sized organ from within, and soon, Lan Zhan aaah'd many, many times with such lewdness, such vulgar sounds, and with such erotic wiggle of deeply pleased hips, when another stream of boy-nectar started to ooze, then spurt uncontrollably, very, very excitedly and with the strength of vibrant, energetic youths reaching their sexual pinnacles, sucked out so terribly, terribly hard by at least three uncles at any time, vying for five gulps each, every neighbour, teacher, vegetable seller and even the one who delivers periodicals every morning wanting a taste of the sweet child's ecstasy, all sweaty, groaning, very excited as well in their quest to corrupt the tender-aged boy trapped within their clutches, taking their turns to drink and savour what was unwantedly, unintentionally gushed out from a wilting, pulsing angry-red wildly-twitching flower of innocence, jutting out from smooth, hairless pubes, fondled endlessly until it unwillingly grew in size and length again and again, seized like a stiff candied tanghulu stick, quivered like a dying silkworm, and sputtered like an incontinent miniature garden hose, thirty times for each malicious, black-hearted sex offenders who decided to finally lock the main doors with a resounding click! , and stay with the boy inside the Jingshi for many, many sweet unending, sex-fuelled days to come. Uncles from all walks of life - the old one who manned a vegetable store, the younger bearded one who helped to do gardening work in the neighbourhood - made the Jingshi their favourite pitstop for a tasty child-rape, where they would stop by from time to time, throughout the day, and knock the door using secret taps, then enter with a twisted smile on their hungry lips; hours later, those individuals sauntered out from tightly guarded doors, licking off sweet sticky fluids that stained their faces, and sometimes their fingers as well, and went about their daily lives.

At that point in the nightmare, Lan Zhan cried, in his cracking boy-voice, that he regretted his decision to choose work over play. He wanted to play, he shouted at the top of his pre-puberty shrill voice, oh he wanted to play.

Twenty and more merry uncles smiled at that confession - some with yellow-stained teeth, some smelling like alcohol, some with ulcers and rotten teeth all over, but all of them suddenly looked very, very wicked and full of immoral intention.

“Oh yes, let these uncles Play with you. Come, sweet child, lie on the bed. There’s no need to work hard and sweep the floors of your home. These uncles will play with your penis all day, it makes you feel very, very good, doesn’t it?”

“I will play with your buttocks, my tasty boy! Come, spread that ass and let this uncle kiss your rosebud and make sweet love to those clenching walls with his wriggling worm-like tongue! Open up, don’t be shy, you’re the one who goaded us and begged us to play, so stick to your promises like a good Gusu Lan boy, and let this uncle rape your virgin ass!”

“Do you see my forked tongue? These two tips love to play with your sweet honey eggs. Come, pull back your foreskin and don’t be shy. Let this uncle insert his tongue and wiggle them in like a snake burrowing into a rabbit’s hole, where all the baby bunnies will be snatched, eaten and swallowed! Mmmm... do you see how your penis is twitching so powerfully while uncle inserts his forked tongue into it? Oh, do you want to pee? Pee, boy, try and pee... and you can’t, because my tongue’s blocked it like a boulder to a tunnel! Ha ha! Squeeze s’more, boy! Squeeze it out if you can! Squirm all you want, because no one's going to save your sweet, sweet juicy eggs from being eaten alive!”

“Oooh, look at how his testicles are jerking like crazy, swinging like juicy grapes off their branches during a windy day! Do you like it, boy? That uncle’s forked tongue has finally reached your eggs, and he’s going to rape your testicles from sunrise to sundown, here inside your bedroom filled with bunny bedsheets and bunny pillows. Do you see how multiple tendrils are violently swishing and flicking beneath your scrotum? Yes, that uncle's tongue has pierced into your balls and he's drinking the sweet lumpy oatmeal out of it. Imagine, all that immature, underdeveloped sperm cells, robbed off their cradles before they have the chance to see the light of day! Come, let me help to speed up the process, by massaging your swollen, bruised testicles... mmm... look at your face, are you feeling pleasure or pain? Each time I pressed on those little, shrivelling eggs, more of your unborn semen squirted out, like a fruit being mashed until only dry pulp is left! You don't like it? Then this uncle shall pleasure your sweet quivering boy balls with his oily tongue and stained lips... mmm... lift it up, and let me have a taste of a dying testicle...!"

(At that point, in the Imperial dormitory at two o' clock in the morning, Lan Zhan Hnng'h'd very audibly, and sent another jet of clear seedless fluids straight into Wei Ying's rectum on their shared bunk bed; the latter refused to let the older man go from his ass - because Wei Ying had trained his anal sphincter so well that it functioned like a vice-like grip around the phallic organ -, so Lan Zhan was forced to experience several loops and iterations of the same pornographic, sleazy and obscene nightmare again and again.)

.

Wei Ying... didn't have a particularly enjoyable dream.

The longer they stayed in the so-called Camp Pseudo-Paradise Jinshan, the more they would come to enjoy the lifestyle, comforts and conveniences of typical low-to-middle class citizens of the Imperial lands - which wasn't too bad, as long as they uphold their core values and didn't cause harm to others, according to the man named Lan Wang Ji; however, his beloved spouse, Wei Wuxian, preferred to take an extremist's worldview and refuse the entire fallacy he'd recognized to be governed by a false Emperor and its corrupted religion.

"Did you hear? Another three men were sent to the temple yesterday. More than half of our original classmates have gone missing, replaced by Imperial cultivators!" someone was heard seething in muted anger, and tipped his head to let a posh expensive imported Joseon-style hat block the mid-morning sunlight from his eyes, then promptly puckered up his lips to reach the end of a reed straw; his lips stretched and wiggled obnoxiously in broad daylight to inch forward and finally captured that beverage tool, and he took a large sip of magically-iced orange juice in a bamboo cup, just next to his face. The man lazed on a lounge chair repurposed from furniture salvaged from the former fierce-corpse neighbour, right outside of their newly expanded home - originally the side that was previously owned by Tiger Woman, whose voluptuous striped body and very likely, virginity had been sold to some sick masochistic freak dwelling just a few blocks down the road.

Despite the misgivings and constant complaints coming from Wei Wuxian, it was evident that the young, handsome man continued to enjoy their meteoric rise in fortunes living as extraordinarily hardworking, good-hearted and fortune-blessed Imperial civilians. The dormitory units on both sides of their assigned room had been gifted to them for their undying loyalty to the Imperial army, vacated then filled with gilded and expensive, ornate jade and teakwood furniture commissioned by the top generals of Chang'an, and in essence, tripling their living space instantly after mere days of settling down the so-called corrupted hellhole.

At the senior guards' behest, Lan Wang Ji was employed as a head chef because his internationally-renowned cooking was well-received, and even the recipe books he'd written became best-sellers throughout the Imperial-owned Middle Kingdom. He was also hired as part-time farm manager - and presented a large piece of land too! - to make sure that there was enough food growing from the fields surrounding the campgrounds that fed into the kitchens and ultimately, to satisfy the numerous hungry mouths in the military centre with picture perfect success every single day. In reality, though, Lan Zhan didn't need to do much work since he had skillfully delegated his work to the many other civilians workers who weren't as diligent and smart as he was, and gave them enough training - thus, ensuring that he had an iron grip on the entire management from farm to fork, an army of faithful underlings to do his bidding, papers to review and sign in the mornings and fat paychecks slipped into his pockets after dinner service, with plenty of spare time in-between throughout the day as an Imperial laoban of sorts.

Wei Wuxian, on the other hand, maximized his A.S.S. skills and became an unofficial top advisor to the military centre's administration office although he wasn't in active military service; he doesn't need to lift a sword to cause hundreds of soldiers to cower in fear, because he held their salaries as ransom any time of the day - which truly showed how lax the entire camp was run. He learned the many loopholes and sweet spots that he cleverly took advantage of, and made many friends amongst Imperial soldiers, Tao priests and their higher-ups; his cheerful, unassuming and charming demeanour, coupled with his sweet, boyish, innocent and harmless outlook made it easier for everyone to relate to, entrust their secrets and favours, in that Wei Wuxian was able to pull a few strings then make Fairy Messenger calls in the morning to get things done through his network of contacts - be it honest work or sleazy ones - such as assigning workers to clean-up classrooms or gyms, sweep the central courtyards or fix broken roofs - or on the flipside, dictate which cultivators were sent to the temple's chopping board or selectively demote lieutenants to slaves on whim, just by planting devious suggestions to the top generals' minds while making his rounds to talk to the top dogs of the camp -, then receive sacks of coins by sundown for a commendable job done of keeping everyone on a tight leash in servitude to the Emperor of Chang'an. He would have tons of free time during the day to loiter, hunt jungle fowls with his escorts, indulge in pastimes of digging lotus ponds in every corner to introduce Yunmengesque cultural oddities to the camp, shop until his pants dropped at the trading post because every powerful magical item was reserved to his name, and even drag his hubby into the bushes for quickies because he knew by heart all the blind spots for the guards at the watchtowers and the limited range of the Eye and Sense spells throughout the fenced area. Still, the man was not completely happy with the outcome, because he suspected he was living a lie, untruthful to his heart's real desires, that is, a man free to nurture and thrive in his own terms, charting his own path, forever seeking in wanderlust with his soulmate, savouring everything the universe has to offer, and not just by the Emperor's rule of thumb.

Everyone would come to fall in love with Wei Wuxian's exuberant greatness, and celebrate the days when he was in his jovial, good moods, which was every day, anyway. Fed well, and thriving as a civilian-cum-former grandmaster of the Dark Arts, Wei Wuxian became the most sought-after man in the Middle Kingdom, being tall, lean and muscular, smokily dark and very handsome, while his hubby turned short and pimple-faced like a toad, grew ugly moustaches and beards as much as his waistline exploded from the life of luxury, then went completely bald before the year passed. Life would still be perfect, and the mismatched couple decided to remain as permanent residents of unlimited privileges within Camp Jinshan, despite the younger man's continuous complaints and dissatisfactions of living in a paradise he didn't quite agree to in the first place--

“Wei Ying.” You're daydreaming.

Wei Ying blinked his eyes blearily. How dare the husband disturb his ritual at dawn - that sweet, foggy window of time between sleep and wakefulness, that five more minutes after rising from a night's slumber, that precious moment when one's lucid dreaming was as real as possible because one was actually awake and wanted to lie in sleep-warmed blankets and roll around pillows, indulging in ridiculous, non-productive thoughts before morn finally knocked on the door.

“Wei Ying. ” Your non-magical Dream powers have built up to immense levels that I’m having difficulty to contain even with our shared energy connections.

That’s all Lan Zhan had to murmur audibly, whether once, or in multiples, to break the cycle of idiocy that Wei Ying loved to drown himself in, like playful bees swimming in honey. The younger man groaned and wiped away that comforting fog off his sleepiness. He stretched like a cat, slapped Lan Zhan’s double chin when his hand landed on the man’s body like a floppy fish tail, then nnnnnnnngh’d languidly - and proceeded to burrow deeper into the man’s tummy fat and squeeze him with all four limbs as though he was hugging the biggest, bestest human pillow ever. It didn’t matter if his nostrils were tickled by Lan Zhan’s sparse chest hair or if he left drool all over the man’s abundantly bulging bosom; the strong, steady heartbeat he sought was there, and that was what mattered - Lan Zhan, his husband, his soulmate, being present.

“... do you really wish for what you daydreamed?” came the hesitant question. Harmless, intentionally vague, but loaded, especially in the eyes of the various detection spells honed to their verbal conversations.

Silence.

Finally, Wei Ying spoke, and his sleepy voice cracked due to the lack of use during the whole night, “Nah. Too boring. Cliched ending. Been there, done that. But having less troubles with the authorities, more living space, and maybe a piece of farmland, would be nice. Don't you think so, darling?" followed by lethargic, but awfully saccharine-sweet kisses peppered on Lan Zhan's sensitive, bouncy chest. Wei Ying started to rub very nice circles all over the man's rounded abdomen, which seemed like a typical lover's adoring gesture, though it was actually masquerading an unsaid permission

Lan Zhan placed a hand over his eyes and sighed contentedly; the said built-up of immense Wei Ying powered energy caused his belly to rumble, and he had to let out a squeak of a fart into the blankets - clean, odourless, Gusu Lan standard; the filled water pots on the stove started to bubble instantly when the heating coils on the kitchenette countertop became searing-hot. The ability of energy transference without the use of qi medium was unbelievable, even a taboo in the realm of magic, but Wei Ying had done it with Lan Zhan's help.

Lan Zhan's other hand reached around Wei Ying and pulled the latter into a tighter embrace, and a heartwarming cuddle of two men squeezed into a single bunk.

"Mn."

.

By the time Wei Ying finally rolled out of the bunk bed at six, the first rooster crows were heard from the greying landscape outside the window. Lan Zhan had already earmarked a small plot of land behind their dormitory with bamboo sticks, cleared the weeds then planted the seeds, bulbs and tubers he'd collected the day before, and watered the freshly ploughed soil. Laundry was done and hung up to dry, the grounds inside and outside their dwelling had been swept, and most of their unpacked belongings had been properly stowed away either into the horse cart, Bags of Holding or beneath the floor mat. He was careful with the Bags of Holding, because he knew the detection aura was keen on sensing spikes in magic use, so he climbed into the largest cupboard, closed the doors on him, and did whatever that was needed, away from any magical Imperial sensory organs.

The night before, Lan Zhan was informed that Wei Ying had checked out the mechanics behind the Eyes and Senses spells scattered throughout the military centre, when he befriended a few higher-ups at the main administration office. There was hardly anyone manning the spells, and security was actually quite lax; the spells had been programmed like automatons to check, respond and report about prohibited spellcasting, surges in qi, violent behaviour and suspicious conversations - because these were the hallmarks of lowly-educated and uncultured cultivators and fighters -, and did not have the intelligence to understand the finer details and nuances of actual human action, interaction and thinking. In addition, since the couple was designated as civilians, hence curfews and some restrictions do not apply to them, so Lan Zhan was able to climb through the window when no guards were watching, and complete his tasks.

Wei Ying bent over and nearly wailed in discomfort while sitting on the oversized spittoon - because he was suffering from an early bout of diarrhea after too much semen was deposited and stored overnight inside his rump, and its laxative effect finally reared its ugliest head -, when Lan Zhan prepared a plate of pre-breakfast snacks and filled bamboo containers with hot Yunnan tea at the kitchenette. There were defrosted 31st-century mini-dumplings, a selection of pastries from other worlds, leftover muesli made from Gusu grains they'd brought with them in the horse cart and steaming mugs of soy milk imported from Far, Far Away - foodstuff Lan Zhan managed to sneak out from their stash without raising any suspicions from the detection magic, because they looked absolutely normal -, to start the day with a zest of energy.

“Wei Ying, are you feeling better? Drink the warm milk, it’ll soothe your tummy,” the older man tenderly advised and pointed to the mug left on the floor next to his bemoaning lover, while flipping the kitchenette table to transform it to a shower stall. There were plenty of wet, squelchy and unsavoury gurgling sounds coming out from the direction of the nnngh-ing younger man, but that passed soon, and by six-thirty in the morning, Lan Zhan was out and about fertilizing his freshly tilled vegetable patch with a clothes peg fastened to his nose, with a very relieved Wei Ying happily karaoke-ing with his trademark dismal performance whilst showering, his tummy filled with a better kind of stove-warmed milk than the night before.

Just then, Lan Zhan heard a couple of neighs, and was pleasantly surprised to see two donkeys, one large and the other smaller, slowly trot by. Calico the Cat stood atop Lil’ Apple, scouting the horizon, and the donkey’s hindquarters were fervently sniffed by Big Apple that marched not far behind. It was a nonsensical scene, but Lan Zhan felt a little relieved; Dream-kin animals were free to walk in and out of the enclosed space since they did not radiate qi or regular, run-of-the-mill magical energy. He nodded in acknowledgement of the animals’ presence, and all three reciprocated with respectful bows as much as their bestial statures permitted. They left as quickly as they appeared, and onward to their own respective adventures and travels that Men will not have the opportunity to read and experience, because those kind of narratives belonged to a different path, a different species. With nothing else to do, Lan Zhan hoped Wei Ying would finish his shower soon, so that they could walk together to the dining halls to have their breakfasts before seven.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

EDIT: Added more icky details!

Chapter 181

“ Lao gong , lao gong ...” he cooed out from behind the shower curtains, with melodious waves in his pitch to coyly ask for a favour.

“Mn.”

The drizzle of water powered-up by a notch, yet its temperature was just right. Warm, not too hot. Wei Ying moaned and gripped the showerhead a bit too hard - for a moment, he was afraid he'd break the precious baobei he'd bought just the night before, for a mere three Imperial coins. Nnnh, he cried out wantonly again and again, as he reached down a bit lower, tilted it a bit to an angle, and aimed at that sweet spot, then swayed it back and forth, back and forth. His testicles shudder with joy at the sensations of pitter-patter drumming on the thin, delicate scrotum, exacting ticklish pulses of sexual pleasures coursing round and round those plump, juicy man-eggs that were generously covered with dense, black curls. The balls convulsed delightfully, then with impressive, innate strength, drew themselves up, up to the base of the wonderfully hard, throbbing cock, where they tucked themselves tightly in the throes of shower-induced, masturbatory, testicular orgasms, pulsing fifteen squeezes hard against the penile flesh with each balls-awesome climax - until they became too hot, blood rushing in to pump more excitement into the loins until they risk being overheated into hard-boiled eggs, then automatically, with a mind of its own, drew down and loosened to a saggy, wrinkly pouch that extended more than the length of Wei Ying's palm. It wasn't as sad-looking as one would think, having dangly balls filled with honeyed man-nuts; those wonderfully climaxing testicles continued to swell sweetly in lively quivers, unable to decide whether to succumb to the rain of sizzling feather-light hydro-powered pressures licking, dripping, dancing upon its excited weight, and rise up again for firing another salvo of thick, rich morning sperms; or to yield to its nature, that is, to protect its precious baby Wei Yings from the heat and remain loose, cooled and viable, at least for the next few minutes.

Alas, indecision was always the favourite way forward. Wei Ying turned around and gleefully realized that Lan Zhan had been standing at the other end of the tiny shower stall, cheeks red, eyes gleaming with an unspoken hunger, breaths coming out rather heavily, grunting, the tip of the tongue peeked out to lick the lips in anticipation. The younger man's heart swelled at becoming the sole audience for a larger, taller and fatter man increasingly desiring nothing more than to devour what was being showcased right in front of those shockingly handsome golden-hued eyes.

Wei Ying continued to masturbate himself with the showerhead, letting the pressures alternate between light sprays and pulsing jets - Lan Zhan knew how to manipulate his low-level Water spell to make his young, sexy lover as horny as possible - play with the special spot between the balls and at the sensitive perineum, before grinding the unfortunate lotus pod-shaped head against the wildly-twitching cockhead with its foreskin pulled back as much as possible.

“Ah, Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, look at my hairy balls, they're hanging so low... is this because they're too heavy? Oh, what should I do? Can you help me to lighten 'em up? Can you suck-suck these loaded eggs, and touch-touch my penis to squirt some out, so that they return to normal?”

Wei Ying jiggled his sexually excited-heavy testicles temptingly in front of the ravenous man, lifting the fat ripe twin-eggs from its nest of curls, and with his other hand, placed the showerhead back to its holder, before reaching down again to stroke himself furiously in a brazen display of desirable male masturbation, deliberately pulling down his foreskin to reveal the bulbous glistening pink prize beneath, then letting his longest fingers play with its bulging tip and the captivating pulsing pee-slit lips until sticky pre-cum fluids formed like crystal-clear webs all over his genitals.

Lan Zhan switched off the Water spell and undressed in record time, even kicking away his socks and his belt without hesitation. His eyes burned with greed as much as his own massive, over six-incher bobbing from his crotch throbbed with pent-up desires for a bout of pre-breakfast sex in the shower; he crouched between his lao po 's legs, used his hands to part the bushy curly pubes, and did not wait for another 'please' to start his first meal of the day, before opening his hungry mouth.

.

“Lan Zhan, you must have had a terrible nightmare last night,” Wei Ying remarked casually, and stuffed his cheeks with sweet red-bean and rice dumplings - part of standard breakfast set for everyone (also, Wei Ying's Second Breakfast after the husband prepared morning snacks in their dorm; and Lan Zhan's too - he had two servings of baby Wei Yings and three tasty breedworthy orgasms into the younger man's rosebud earlier, which made, for all accounts and purposes, a delectable, satisfying sexual meal, really), “Because you kept wanting to toss and turn, but luckily for you, I held you tightly with my ass so that neither of us fell out of bed!” and laughed rudely until several sticky rice grains littered the tabletop.

I know dreams are often an exaggeration of real-life memories, but... holy shit, I didn't know that you Gusu Lans were such a twisted, perverted lot! You already had it tough when your brother sexually assaulted you at ten, but to be gangbanged by your neighbouring uncles at eleven? Didn't those sick old men know what they were doing to their children, even the Er Gongzi of their clan, or were they simply manipulating the Lan family rules to their advantage to silence little boys, and dare I say, girls, to whet their sexual appetites?! How many times did you suffer in their hands, or should I say, how many times they visited the Jingshi whenever your older brother wasn't around? Three? Five times a day? How many in a week? A month? A year?

The older man nnngh'ed to warn the young man not to say too much inappropriately, verbally or not, or try to provoke him with unsavoury conversations and mental gymnastics - not when there were hundreds of other soldiers, guards, trainees (detainees) and officers present in the same building, busily munching away -, and put away his emptied bowl. He politely wiped his mouth with a napkin and took a sip of tea, before replying, "It was an unpleasant, but not necessarily a bad dream. I learnt a valuable lesson that a more work-life balanced lifestyle is in order."

Wei Ying was about to retort with something very crude and related to sex (of course, what else?), but they were interrupted by a string of soft female-voiced announcements inside their heads. Several groans echoed throughout the dining hall - apparently, Imperial civilians weren't as enthusiastic about working for honest wages, especially not when there were easier, shady ways to get things done and accelerate towards a comfortable, middle-class living. They quickly finished their rations - the worst meal of the day, really, with Lan Zhan having no hand in it -, and washed off their hands before leaving the hall. They didn't try to blend in with the crowd, because although people preferred to keep to their circles - their kind, their kin, their clan, their sworn brotherhoods, et cetera ad naseum , and the couple wasn't in any; civilians minded their own businesses, while their classmates seemed to have forgotten them or pretended not to know them, since they were magicless and deemed unfit for combat for the greater glory of the Imperial army; guards and soldiers were the least friendly of the lot, and the moment they approached someone, it meant that there was a transaction to be completed, a favour to be sought, a question to be asked, or an order to be followed without question.

The morning was sunny, so both men opted to take up landscaping work to start their day with plenty of sunshine and vitamin D, and the chance to work up a sweat. The pay was good, because there were hardly any other takers who feared their skin might tan from excessive ultraviolet rays - the society serving the Imperial Court was one that prized fair skin colours, large brown almond eyes, pouty demure link lips, long luscious locks of shiny black hair and typical oriental looks, after all. Thus, Wei Ying crouched on the ground to shear away carpet grass tops, and did a mediocre job out of it with plenty of uneven cuts and even barren patches - which would still pass for normal pedestrian curbsides, but would leave golf course owners fuming; while Lan Zhan, being heavy set and at risk of suffering from arthritic knees, went about to hack away at waist-height bushes and shrubs to turn them into spring-green organic art, particularly in the shapes and likeness of the twelve legendary Middle Kingdom Zodiac animals, each bearing such finely sculptured details made from leaves and flowers, that they resembled truly living animals with human facial features. Along the way, Wei Ying plucked some long grass and palm leaves out of boredom to fashion traditional origami grasshoppers, cranes and other woven toys. Lan Zhan fared better, and pocketed goodies foraged from the greenery including herbs, edibles, nuts and seeds, and in some ways, harking back to the days when he was an expert in living off the wilderness with his spouse.

Being outdoors, the couple had plenty of opportunity to engage in people-watching, while exchanging noisy one-sided banter as the younger one kept critiquing what he observed.

Lan Zhan! Look at Niu Mo Wang performing his Flying Bullseye while sending scores of trainees soaring into the skies with a single head butt!

Huh, he thinks he's such a great yaoguai for this ability, wait till he gets a taste of my Dark Ass powers! I'll kick him to the ground, fart on him, and wipe him on the floor using my ass! Darling, do you think my kickass ass can ass-sasinate twenty enemies at one go? I can't keep a straight face when watching those men practise their cultivation moves - they're really lame! How can the Imperial army recruit such amateurs?

Look at that Tiger Woman and her new human owner! Did'ya hear what happened last night? She's such a bitch, in a feline sense, to change partners like changing clothes! What a slut! They're all lovey-dovey and pawing each other in that corner, refusing to participate in the training! Wait till they're called to join the next squad to hunt stronger demons - no matter how famous they are, or how much the yaoguai resembles mythical creatures described in the legends, the moment they let their guard down, they can be easily defeated by foes as easy as a dagger to the neck!

Ah, over there! Senior Guard Zhen is leading another victim into the temple's rear gates! It's a female cultivator and a very young one too! Do you think those demonic priests breed with human females? Maybe they're conducting some strange experiments to create hybrid yaoguai-humans! Oh no, I'm supposed to meet Zhen xiansheng later, I hope he doesn't send me there too! If he does, I'll make sure to call you and you better save me, okay? I don't want to be part of the Tao's madness!

Ehhh... that greasy Senior Guard Liu is heading to the main gates with some Imperial soldiers. I wonder what he's up to, since the next hunt isn't due until the Lieutenant returns next week and carries out their weekly witch hunt. Did you know? Liu xiansheng is part of the Outer Corps, mainly responsible for bringing in bonded pairs and civilian slaves from the surrounding lands and enlisting them into this prison camp's service. He has to be cunning enough to trick people into getting themselves chained to this place! Zhen xiansheng, on the other hand, is from the Inner Corps, and takes care of more internal, operational matters, such as the welfare of detainees and making sure the Imperial cultivators stationed here are fit and ready for war. He's a bit more serious in his work and doesn't seem to cheat as much as the other guards, but I still don't like him!

Waah! You're sweating like crazy until I could feel your sweat drops fall onto my head. Move over there and do your bush-trimming away from me! Lan Zhan, if you work out like this every morning, you'll surely lose weight faster than going on a diet! Oh...! On your right, two steps more, that's a sugarberry bush! Pick as many and keep them in your sleeves. Those make great desserts!

Speaking of the devil, Senior Guard Zhen approached the couple after locking the rear gates to the temple. "Civilians! The two of you! I need some helping hands to carry buckets of fertilizers from the dorms to the farms, before they become too smelly!" he called out rather rudely, and waved at them. Wei Ying rolled his eyes - he'd have to get used to being addressed as a lowly servant, and openly given downright dirty jobs, especially in the presence of the almighty military; the entire courtyard of sweaty men and yaoguai who were training hard broke into sniggers and murmurs, which Wei Ying didn't take too kindly. The larger sized spiritual beasts and their human counterparts sent arrogant, threatening and provocative looks, including that "I'm watching you" V-sign points between eyeballs, others pinched their noses even though the couple had showered before leaving their room; for some baseless reasons, Wei Ying believed that someone actually read his mind, so he cowered and lowered his head, promising himself that he'd keep gossips to himself, and maybe, just maybe, out of spite, pretend to slip and splatter human feces fertilizers in front of someone's dorm. The two men quickly left the grassy grounds to pick up more high-paying jobs.

Lan Zhan opted to stay back to do farm work, including harvesting crops and feeding some farm animals with a bunch of tightly-supervised peasants, before the morning sun rose too high and the temperature too warm for his easily overheated bulky body. He sweated profusely, but he was working out as planned, by carrying cartloads of freshly dug soil, sacks of grains, and digging up trenches and irrigation lanes. Then, he listened and jumped in when janitorial jobs were offered around the classrooms, where he could cool off indoors, and indulge in his favourite pastime of perfecting the art of keeping things spotless and sparkling clean. Armed with brooms, mops, buckets and washcloths, he joined another group of lowly servants to scrub the floors and walls, and wipe down the furniture, after a particularly rowdy class about the theories and practice of Imperial-style martial arts. Lan Zhan spied on the notes left behind on the blackboards and stacks of textbooks and scripts that the instructor forgot to take with him; he noted, with pride, that the Gusu Lan-style of fighting was superior in the deepest, spiritual sense, however, the Imperial-style of hand and leg movements were much more brutal, faster and lethal especially during surprise and opening attacks.

The weather was fine for a typical Spring day, the military centre was already bustling with groups of men marching about, patrolling, preparing for various training, drills, and stocking up their inventories. Whether from a lookout mound in the farms, or on the third floor of the classrooms, Lan Zhan kept a close eye at what went on around the camp from his vantage points, despite the hardships of being yelled at and sometimes, suffered from occasional undeserving whippings from his tough supervisors, because he seemed to stare longingly at certain off-directions, or burped out too often which did not augur well for his manners; his peers easily broke into tears and ran off from the abuse, but he endured, because he'd lived through similar experiences sixteen years ago, and lived to tell the tale, after all. He noticed how soldiers assembled and were deployed on foot or on horseback in small groups, such as Senior Guard Liu's squad; and also observed, with interest, at incoming large caravans bearing horse carriages of supplies, elite guards, lines of soldiers, and more pompous-looking Imperial cultivators walking through the talisman-decorated and magically enchanted gates.

Wei Ying. Look around us. It is as though they are preparing for a war. This camp in Jinshan could be a launchpad for strikes against the yaoguai. They're stocking up weapons, people, cultivators. If only I can see what lies beyond the gates. Perhaps the Jinshan village is transforming, too. There seems to be a lot of construction works and clouds of dust. Out there.

Wei Ying, on the other hand, loitered around the main administration office again to say hello to new acquaintances, and to try to gather intel on what has been going on in the military centre. There were some office boy duties, such as delivering documents between departments and meeting rooms, serving tea and taking out the trash. Eventually, he was called to Senior Guard Zhen's room.

“It's only been a day or two, but our monitors have already endorsed your exemplary behaviour and work ethics, even as ordinary non-combat civilians serving this facility,” the guard said. “It's very unusual for a yaoguai, let alone one that chooses the path of a civilian to live peacefully amongst men, particularly one that bonds well with you,” he added with a shrug and fished out something from his sleeves.

“The leaders of this military centre adhere to the reward system established by the Imperial army, and it goes without saying that you've hit the jackpot and earned a very good one, bigtime,” he smiled - a genuine, appreciative smile - and Wei Ying relaxed for once in the presence of the senior guard; inside his head, he was twerking his little figure with joy, and gloating at what he hoped would be the promised improved, expanded living space. He imagined how the quality of his life would improve if the two dorm units on both sides of his room were given to him; he'd take one and turn it to a workshop where he could pursue his DIY projects, and maybe build a bathtub with jacuzzi features to it, while the other unit could be gifted to Lan Zhan so that the man can have a peace of mind to practise his guqin, meditate or read some books in perfect tranquility - their bedroom would be an entire dorm unit, which meant they could choose to have crazy sex all day, on the bed, on the furniture, against the wall, walking on the floor on all fours, maybe hanging off the ceilings too.

Suddenly, Wei Ying heard a whoosh! and he felt as though his head was hit by an enormous ten-tonne rock. The room spun, his heart raced, and he lost the balance on his feet. Dizzy and disorientated, he crashed to his knees and tried to grasp his head to massage the sharp, throbbing pain away - and found his limbs to be anchored to where they were, immobile and stuck to his body. A glimmering, thick dark chain materialized out of thin air and wrapped around him tightly like cellophane until his lungs couldn't expand, he couldn't breathe, and its massive weight bore down on him, his legs held immobile as though they were stuck in an inescapable pool of sludge.

"What..." he uttered, before his struggles died at his lips; mystical writings lit up on his skin and even a magical circle with cursed words emerged on the floor around him; every last ounce of strength was sapped from his bones, his entire body went limp as though someone knocked him out with some kind of sleeping gas. His vocal cords stopped working, the room fell silent except for an alien, perverse-sounding mantra, of someone reading what sounded like, but wasn't, an inverted holy sutra; soon, multiple low voices joined in a discordant chorus, deafening his other senses; his vision swirled into inky blackness from the ringing voices, despite moving blurry figures rushed past him - one, no, two, perhaps three priests, at least that's what he thought from those bald heads and bearded faces; he felt himself tilting, slipping away on a sloping surface, spinning in circles, diving down, going down, down into an abyss of restlessness, a void without sensations besides that horrible chanting of many voices worse than nails on chalkboards in slow motion; the terrible headache pounding harder and harder until the blinding whiteness of torment overwhelmed his consciousness.

“It took us a while, but the Tao Masters figured it out for us, Wei Wuxian,” Senior Guard Zhen’s last words echoed into Wei Ying’s dissipating senses, and the young man had no strength left to battle the malicious spell, thus he succumbed to the welcoming embrace of darkness and beyond.

.

Elsewhere, Lan Zhan found himself on the ground, hands balled into fists, gritting his teeth as he received another lashing from a stinging bamboo whip. His supervisor was furious and kept beating him until red streaks painted his torn uniform, demanding that he continue wiping the wooden floorboards with a tiny washcloth rather than loafing around while staring emptily into the corners of the classroom. However, Lan Zhan refused and instead, in his mind, he kept searching for a reply that his heart yearned to hear, but hadn’t responded since a while ago.

Wei Ying...?

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 182

The hour of the approaching midday is the weakest for yaoguai -kin, when the high point of the Sun saps their strength, dwindles their defenses, and renders them vulnerable to the effects of holy, religious artifacts, such as the Magical Gourds of Demonic Liquefaction. The unholy alliance of the Imperial army and the Tao Masters have produced a steady supply of filled gourds to not one, but multiple military centres where corrupted Tao temples in their infancy reside, to the delight of the burgeoning population of possessed priests.

Nieshan is one such military centre - just a few hills away from Jinshan. It is a small, insignificant and unassuming village, a few weeks younger than its twin, located on side of the Qinghe borders of such frontier-lands. Being new and less developed due to its even more remote location, it needed more raw manpower to construct a temple at its heart as well as an expanding prison camp around it in a similar layout as Jinshan. At the campgrounds, construction progressed in full swing, with the help of hired Imperial soldiers, cultivators, labourers and servants imported from larger towns in the vicinity - dorms were being built, officers were set up and so were basic infrastructure, such as kitchens, dining halls, armouries, waterways, and farms and stables. Huts and tents littered the village, serving as temporary buildings for the men to work, sleep and eat in.

The Tao temple in Nieshan started just like its sister in Jinshan - first, barricade walls were built to purportedly protect the people around it from, say, falling construction debris, but in fact, it hid the dark, evil truth of the polytheistic religion from the wider populace. The Tao practitioners based in Nieshan were selected and dispatched from little-known paganistic local cults, compared to the ones from Jinshan, who were from one of the more powerful deviant branches of the nation's religions. Thus, the priests - more like monks who had ungroomed, grimy, unwashed hair, did not abstain from eating meats and from worldly pleasures -, were more varied, and of lower quality, in some sense. They kidnapped the villagers with permission from the Imperial overlords, because those peasants lacked education and building skills, and therefore, were of no use to the Imperial army.

Those monks that reside in the den of dirty, messy half-constructed altars and half-sculpted, headless statues, lived in depraved paradise served on a golden platter, literally. Adult, male villagers who could carry their own weight in wood and bricks, had their lifeforce sucked out by the demons that possessed the minds and bodies of the resident monks, then turned into mummified walking zombies - those bent, scrawny bony figures that shuffle around all day, pushing mounds of construction materials around -, who became the foundation of the countless undead that served the Tao and erected the temple at their own sluggish, but bearable pace. Females were turned into living nests in perverted sexual feasts to spawn the next, more advanced generations of yaoguai , who would inhabit more warm bodies sacrificed and offered to them like candied fruits made of unfortunate victims of Nieshan, and soon, fresh tasty cultivators with exceptionally rich golden cores captured from the outside world under the pretense of serving the Imperial corps as bonded-pairs, the latest so-called technological advancement in warfare. Children of the villagers bore the brunt of the monks' abuse and exploitation, in which such sordid, hardcore details were cleverly hidden from public view.

Coming back to the story of the gourds: the demon-possessed monks have come to rely, with a certain level of comfort and confidence, on the Imperial army to do a region-wide sweep in the proximity at least once a week with Lieutenants at the helm, sometimes with the grace, magnificence and splendour of a thousand-strong army under the command of Grandmaster Gao, to replenish their much-relished inventory of demonic blood. Within the half-constructed temple of Nieshan, however, trouble was brewing, in the form of escaped captive yaoguai from their gourds (because one individual, in particular, was just that awesome).

“The gourds were invented by monks, priests and clerics of various religious denominations from faraway tribes,” Wei da ge said with an air of arrogance, as he unravelled the secrets of the corrupted monks and their abominable activities under the shadow of the Emperor, “But all of you, lowly yaoguai s that love to cheat and swindle rather than prosper our kind, have hijacked this ancient technology from one weak branch of paganistic beliefs, then outgrew the others in terms of strength and power because of your cannibalistic tendencies, and what do you get in the end when the devastating, blood-sucking carnage is complete?” He merely speculated a future that would never materialize, though not expecting an answer; he picked up another orange-coloured hulu gourd the size of a man’s forearm, gave it a good swirl, then uncorked the vessel and tipped it over his mouth. A round of pained whispers and cries echoed in the central chamber of the dark mist-covered mess of scaffolding, walls without ceilings, dirty furniture and carved rocks.

“Forgive us, we’ve sinned, oh Great One!” one wizened old sage, bald and bearded just as much as he was crooked and slouched from his advanced age, grovelled to the floor and begged the man in his forties, whose wild, oily hair and rugged, handsome look gave him an imagery of being a notorious leader of mountain bandits. The elder council members of the temple fell to their knees and pleaded the man not to hurt them, and more importantly, not to devour their entire stock of liquefied demon; such rare, ambrosiac sustenance exist in the form of crimson elixirs bottled up inside the gourds, after they’ve been exposed to days’ worth of sunlight - the more exposure to sunlight, the sweeter the taste. The gourds have an in-built ability to vacuum up any yaoguai and evil, malevolent spirits and store them, where the miniaturized beings would be slowly digested, stewed and melted into pure demonic essence, and the process is sped up by solar energy just like photosynthesis in plant life. The essence prolongs any creature’s life, and empowers it with spectacular capabilities, if only for a short while, while giving the drinker a boost of excitement, confidence and even a surge of very good feelings and raw energy coursing through the veins - the equivalent of a lethal mix of highs from drugs and intoxication from strong alcohols for the demon-kin.

“Mmm! Such exquisite liquor! I’m not as bright, but I know when I’ve tasted a really good sip of wine... and I’ve never tasted better, da ge ! We should take over their operations and seize ownership for these bottled gourds for our own consumption,” Wei er ge licked his lips, clearly a connoisseur with distinguished tastes for refined adult beverages. He had been the first to tumble out of the gourds when they were uncorked by the monks, who had spent days baking them under good sunlight, and from time to time, impatient, undisciplined individuals opened them to have a peek at the curious, digestive processes within the vessels, take a whiff to whet their appetites, and if there were no seniors looking around, steal a gulp or two. Due to a stroke of bad luck, the gourd containing the four Wei cloned siblings was examined because it smelled strange, had astringent qualities and rather unripe, and soon, four fearsome Wei-kin appeared in a puff of strawberry-red clouds.

“I’ll formulate world-building strategies using my awesome computational powers and complex algorithms to find sustainable ways to grow and harvest this realm’s yaoguai , and then, get our little didi to build the needed infrastructure for the supply chain, including mass gourd-production, yaoguai -spawning, sun-drying capacities across the galaxy and planet-wide interstellar warehousing!” Wei san ge remarked happily with a noisy slurp of an emptied gourd and yawned; as soon as he plopped to the ground full of nails in sand, wood chips and broken mortar, he woke up from a very nice sleep inside the cocoon of a gourd and immediately sprang to action, because he was an avid and athletic gamer and had the nanoseconds-type reactions to violent sceneries. One monk who was huffing and howling like a struggling, dying beast between a crying woman’s spread-eagled legs on a rickety bed - was immediately beheaded by an energy shuriken; another older monk used the traditional method of absorbing an unfortunate male villager’s life force by shoving a clawed hand into the abdomen, gouging out the spiritual core with glee while the victim screamed in torment, tied to the floor with ropes - that monk had his arms blown off by 21st-century rapidfire gunshots; one guarding monk who was happily distracted from his job and crouched in front of a red-cheeked peasant boy's crotch to feed off his immature sexual fluids - had his tongue sliced by precision laser beams emitting from Wei san ge 's hands; and all demon-possessed monks in the immediate vicinity who were too busy engaging in lewd acts with their victims, nourishing themselves with the pleasures of the flesh - had their legs chopped off by spiked discs that materialized from pixels made out of thin air.

Wei didi wasn't one to lose out in the conversation taking place between his brothers, squeaked and stammered, "Umm... umm... I'll make sure we can make money with this! Umm... How much can we sell for each bottle gourd? Err... How much does each gourd cost to grow?" He took a tentative sip while sitting on a bench, and stuck out his tongue - it tasted bitter to his childish palate, though with an alluring, sweet aftertaste, just like a five-star alcoholic beverage. The elder monks around them begged the four to stop wiping out their stores, and Wei didi twirled a finger because it was too noisy - all monks were immediately bound by advanced Silence spells, and some began to suffocate from the powerful magic.

A-Xian passed by with an open empty gourd in one hand - he was helping his family to vacuum up the monks into the gourd, and it worked miraculously well; he only had to keep it steady and aimed at the intended target, then, by weaving spiritual energy into the vessel, the said target would be sucked in with plenty of distorted screams, the body bent and twisted then squeezed in ways that break the laws of physics, before popping inside with a resounding fwip! . He'd seen it being done to others during his capture, and being a smart child, he learnt the mechanics of the gourds with just a single demonstration. A-Ji trailed behind with a handful of gourds to assist his child-partner, and more hung from his sash; he looked like a festive gourd-bearing tree.

The bratty eight-year old swiped the half-drunk drink from Wei didi 's hands and took a swig - then reacted similarly with a cough and belch, and he promptly returned it to the slightly older boy before rushing off. "A-Xian, A-Xian, keep going. After we're done, we can go back home," kind-hearted little A-Ji encouraged his child-lover; A-Ji wasn't too sure what was happening, because the four Wei siblings had subjugated the monks when he appeared on the dusty ground, and immediately, he was put to work by his stepmother.

"What's the rush? D'ya want to go back home so badly because you want to fuck your eight-year old lover?" Uncle Wei purred into the boy's shocked reddened ears and at the same time, he reached from behind, slid into the trousers and grasped the little bulge beneath the loincloth. All four Wei siblings rolled their eyes because they hadn't had any Lan-kin for breakfast, lunch or dinner, and the act of molesting a Lan Wang Ji-clone was, at best, irritatingly enviable. A few light squeezes later, which left the alarmed boy with a tiny tent in his pants, Uncle Wei guffawed rudely, and went on to help out to pick up as many goodies from the not-so-touristy heart of Nieshan with a few gourds of his own.

Just a short distance away, the amazing Uncle Lan stood tall and proud on a table to oversee the operations. He made sure to pierce the limbs of any fleeing monks with ethereal spears, like pinning rats to the ground before the pest control company arrived to mop them up. At the same time, he kept a sharp eye through a window at some hills in the horizon. Unknown to the bewildered monks, the four Demons of the Negative Plane scurried from room to room, sliding between pillars and climbing on walls and ceilings like skulking insects, to spread their Inabilities and render all monks in the temple helpless, their zombie-slaves inactive and stupid, and the rest of the human population in the campgrounds blissfully unaware of what transpired inside the corrupted heart of their base.

Then, suddenly, there was a flash of light, followed by a gust of wind through the window. Uncle Lan's hair blew in the wind, enhancing his stoic, dashing and handsome looks as the perfect Lan specimen, and his facial expression hardened.

"It has started," he curtly stated.

Wei da ge was the first to react, after having his fun of gloating over the grovelling monks. "What? That's way too soon!" he exclaimed and trudged towards the sole window in the dark chamber, and kicked a few monks cruelly to send them rolling off into someone's activated gourd.

"Mn," came the hesitant reply.

.

"Ohhh... who knew that beneath the illusion, there lies a quite handsome, young though rather hairy man! Hah, if that human Zhen xiansheng was still here, he'd be nauseated by what we're doing, so I'm glad we sent him away and then locked ourselves inside this private meeting room," one priest in the Jinshan Tao temple murmured, and let his forked tongue slide all the way from ankle to the back of the knees. The trail of saliva was unmistakable, slimy and vile.

"Yes, yes, once we realized that this person is actually human in nature, and his bonded pair is the yaoguai , then it made sense! What a silly mistake we've made, but look at the results! A simple spell that incapacitates humans works well on him, and look at how youthful his skin is!” A pair of hands grabbed and spread the immobile, unconscious man’s legs, while another priest whose eyes gleamed with inhuman hunger, eagerly rolled up that man’s lower robes to reveal smooth knees and supple thighs with curls all over, particularly adjacent to the groin.

“Let’s deal with that yaoguai later, because I simply cannot wait to feast on this man! With his undetectable shields down and his meridians restored with an easy fix on the deliberate locks he’s placed inside his body, he smells very delicious! He’s extremely rich with qi and other tempting, tasty qualities!” Greasy kisses peppered from the inner thighs towards the red loincloth, where the demonic horny priests hoped to unravel to reveal the prized treasure tucked inside, and then sexually devour the man and his life force, until only lifeless skeletal remains were left on the ground.

Without warning, something wiggled inside the loincloth from the pubic area - a dark spot that grew like a soaking wet spot until the entire cloth became dark, blackened, as though the material had absorbed shadows. The surrounding priests hissed like angry cats and leapt back, surprised at the living movements that resembled, uncannily, like a cold black thing with tentacles of an octopus, crawling its way out of Wei Ying’s loosened loincloth.

Within a heartbeat, the entire main administration office complex was consumed in shadows, as though someone threw a coat of grey shade over a picture of the scenery. Unspeakable horrors took place within its many rooms, hallways and walls, and sadly, none would live to tell the tale. Silence took hold of the building and its surroundings, and the shadows spread across the ground like countless viral, parasitic tentacle-like roots. Anything that had a shadow under the light of sunny blue skies - any living creature or object - became victims of the horrendous entity’s wrath. People of interest, yaoguai that boasted specific abilities, treasures locked up in someone's cabinets, even valuable statues, pretty sculptures and ordinary fruiting trees that stood in the way of those replicating, spreading shadowy tentacles - one by one, things were covered by the shades of darkness and were pulled into their shadows without any notice or sounds besides a soft fwip! masked by passing breezes.

The cold black thing reached the dormitories, and within seconds, the entire room that belonged to Wei Ying and Lan Zhan had been consumed and dragged into its own shadow, including the cart that lay untouched outside. A huge gaping hole between dorm units was left, with bits of dust and rubble falling to the ground where beds, furniture, walls, fixtures and furnishings and a comfortable roof once were.

.

The bell of the Tao temple tolls at every hour, not only to tell the time, but to remind the faithful about the tenets of its philosophy - of Balance and Harmony, of relinquishing one's desires and sacrificing oneself for the greater good, and more alarmingly, to spread the demonic spores that controlled the minds of men and their bonded yaoguai alike.

Lan Zhan dearly missed his spouse's nonsensical banter between their shared mental connections, and he could hear the low baritone of Tao priest chanting in the background, growing louder with each passing gong of the bell - that did not bode well for his immediate safety. He knew right away - and didn't need to confirm because the bond between the couple was incredibly intimate and accurate -, that something had gone terribly, terribly wrong that morning. The couple has had many discussions about the laws that govern their way of life in this lifetime, one of which Wei Ying had clearly stipulated: just as in any television drama, when something unexpected happens for better or worse, the attention of the audience gravitates towards that event, which puts the characters in play in the spotlight, thus elevating them to the roles of protagonists and antagonists of the story - which clearly violated the wife's wishes to stay out of the said spotlight, because he preferred to live a simpler, more peaceful life as a sidekick, a faceless mob character, or better yet, a shady figure blended into the background.

The couple had plans to hang around the Jinshan military centre a bit longer to gather crucial information about the demonic activities that took place within its corrupted heart, and later, raze the camp to the ground before fleeing - but the priests beat them to it. Without Wei Ying's protection - whether through the man's amazing non-magical prowess that seemed to render the spores ineffective around them, or through his absence, and therefore, resulting in Lan Zhan's panicked, unfocused concentration -, Lan Zhan knew that he was susceptible to the effects, particularly when he found himself picking up the straw broom to resume the cleaning duties, without so much as another word of protest; in fact, he started to entertain thoughts about giving himself up entirely to the Tao priests, and allow those dirty, corrupted monks to do perverse things on his body, and use his godly powers to smite all who dared to disturb the Tao's magnificent way of living - he even smiled when musing about such nefarious thoughts. The sudden twist in his being, therefore his story, was a foreboding he knew too well - the proverbial spotlight was coming towards him like an unwanted UFO from the skies, and it was time to put this sickened, meandering narrative to its demise, before he was forced to become a superhero or a supervillain of sorts - and his lao po's wrath.

The supervisor let out a vexed but smug 'Hmph!' upon seeing the change in the man's uplifted mood and returning to his cleaning tasks, and marched out of the classroom with the bloodied whip; to the bearded man, Lan Zhan didn't seem to be prone to his own episodes of daydreaming and inexplicable pauses anymore. Lan Zhan gritted his teeth at the pain flaring from his scarred, wounded back, and leaned weakly against the broom for support, as he swung it unsteadily from side to side. He frowned when his thoughts became more and more muddled with the next few gongs of the bell; images and worried feelings for his missing spouse were interrupted by powerful, compelling impulses to carry out his assigned duties like a docile slave, sweeping piles of dirt off the floor, and wiping down all dirty surfaces of furnitures and walls full of finger-marks and footprints until they were spotless to the touch - all within the backdrop of increasingly deafening chants in languages he could not comprehend. He took one last gasp, and burped the longest he could muster with his failing strength.

Wei Ying, I do not know if you can still hear me. It's been an hour since our last connection. My mind is being taken over by the Tao. I cannot hold back my sanity. The Imperial army and the Tao priests must never lay their hands on this body. It is too powerful, and it belongs only to you. If you're not here to hold onto me, then no one else will. Good bye, my beloved. May our souls find each other in another place, another time.

Alone in the room, Lan Zhan performed an elaborate ritual with advanced hand movements and a series of circular spins - the floor glowed with a vibrant white magical circle, and his body began to smoke. His hair flew wildly upwards, as though he stood within the heart of an inferno; several tables and chairs were flung by the searing winds circling around him like a tornado, and they splintered against the walls upon impact. His skin turned red, then started to blister when steam and tiny fires started to eject themselves from his form dangerously, like a burning gas canister about to go off. He scrunched his face - the discomfort was great, but that would not stop him from destroying what little evidence the enemies have about him, let alone gain unauthorized access to his godly body, then expose and take advantage of his deepest secrets. He crouched a bit, when his belly lit up with raging fires that threatened to jet out in plumes that would tear his body apart. The pain was real, self-inflicted and excruciating - his insides were melting, burning itself up like a matchstick, heated acid boiling through flesh, organs and blood.

Anti-magic sensors embedded in the walls of the classroom kicked in and started firing off inverted magical yin-yang waves to subdue the form that had turned into an amorphous, fiery human bonfire, however it was too late; the countdown had begun. Even the supervisor, who had left earlier, returned and shouted “What’s happening?! What the hell are you doing?!” before the unbearable heat pushed him back and he fell on the floor, shocked until he pissed in his pants, crying for help on all fours.

An unnamed spell was cast that sealed Lan Zhan’s golden core and caused it to disappear into the roaring flames surging from within the body; the loss was tremendous, and Lan Zhan’s legs felt weak from the numbness in his limbs, because blood-flow and nerve-ends that fed to the core had been severed in the wake of the destruction wrecked from within, and he had to crouch lower to steady himself. Simultaneously, he farted from in his half-squat stance while the control of gas-flows were spiralling out of control; the incredible outward exertion of godly qi through non-magical means, without the core to stabilize and control the outburst of magical energies, meant that the scorching heat and fires on his skin became uncontrollable, starting from the sudden high-pressure fiery blowout from his anus - like an oil rig on fire -, and expanded great distances to incinerate everything in its mushrooming path of hellish annihilation. The detonation was sudden, and went off like millions of nuclear bombs at once starting from his ass, obliterating all anti-magic components in its radius and vaporizing all matter and life; both men and yaoguai were extinguished in an instant, air was sucked in and further fuelled the blazing finale of the entire building and beyond; the fires that raged on travelled miles per second like volcanic pyroclastic flows until the fences around the camp were singed and turned to ash upon contact. At the last moment, a single white thread of hair from Lan Zhan's scalp miraculously survived the fiery end, and flew with the rippling explosions, buoyed by the extreme heat and winds generated from the hurricane of devastation.

In a brilliant moment of white-hot incandescence, Lan Zhan passed gas and abruptly went supernova.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 183

If souls could blink, then he's doing it.

Just a twitch of the eye. Then another. His vision opens, closes, opens. Bleary, spinning, eventually the world ceases to waver and finally steadies itself upon a horizontal plane. Focus.

Rising from a supine lying position after an eternity of confusing fogginess, the first thing he notices is his fully functional physique - including six-pack abs for a tummy, sculptured pectorals on the chest, and none of the cursed flabbiness that had clung to him in the last several months. He is in his humanoid soul-form though, not his real physical appearance; he looks like a drop-dead gorgeous, muscular, sci-fi videogame male character drawn to pixel-perfect proportions. His skin glows, is translucent and incorporeal; a fancy manifestation of a naked version of himself, that is, a sexually attractive mannequin made of blue-hued outlines, filled with glimmering patterns in the spaces in-between, and he is as permeable as the air itself. His limbs move - he wiggles his fingers and toes to prove that -, and pushes himself up to rest on his elbows. The tiny bit of force causes him to float off what looked like the floor of a cave; he puts one and one together, and concludes that he had turned into something akin to ghosts. With a bit of concentration - there seems to be some qi circulating inside his soul-form -, he stabilizes his weightless body and maintains a few inches off the carpet of soft cave moss.

If it's about the afterlife, then this is it.

He takes a deep breath - yes, he seems to be breathing normally, and his senses are functional -, and relishes the crisp, fresh air despite being held inside a dark cave with glittering stardust-like particles everywhere. He scours his surroundings with his keen eyesight, and finds himself inside a beautiful, tranquil chamber of ancient cavern rocks and formations, of magnificent stalactites and stalagmites gleaming with the tell-tale vibrating hum and shine of Twisty crystals, with dry moss and straw as comfortable bedding and a soft padding to walk upon. He clears his throat, and hears his own voice echoing off the various mounds and curved surfaces of his newfound home.

Lan Zhan knows that if he had died, he wouldn't go to Heaven, that is, his second, lavish and palatial home in the skies; because that would be his homecoming - which didn't make sense, since he had lost a battle for his life, and didn't gain any notable victories to warrant a Good Ending. So, it had to be the other way round, that is, he would've been sent to the underworld - well, not that Underworld ruled by the Lord of Hell, because that would also be akin to putting him in his third, sprawling and opulent home and estate miles beneath the surface of the Mortal Realm, and that would run reverse to the principles of judging one's fate in the Purgatory after death, and of determining one's final destination in Life. Thus, being sent into a dark, lonely cave to live out the rest of his existence in solitude, after such a big boo-boo in blasting himself to smithereens before completing any missions, seems to suffice as his punishment in the so-called afterlife.

Therefore, if he is a soul drifting about in loneliness in the afterlife, then that, he is.

With a groan - because his soul is aching and sore all over, as though his flawless blue-hued skin had been lacerated, then stripped off and the bare flesh left to bleed and inflame from such deep grievous injuries -, he slowly rises to his feet. Some minor adjustments in his breathing, like deflating one's tummy in minute degrees to un-levitate himself, he then lands softly on the carpet of squishy material - and nnngh'ed in unbridled delight at the ticklish, prickly yet cushion-y sensations embracing his heels and the balls of his feet. He shifts his standing stance to spread his legs a bit more, and to his elation - as simple as it is -, finds little bumps that give remarkable massaging pressures and kneading to his tired feet. Briefly, he wonders how long it has been since he received a good feet massage, and more pressingly, how long he'd been lying unconscious in the cave since his last breath in the world of living.

He'd sorely miss his beloved wife, Wei Ying, that's for sure.

“Lannnn Zhannnnn! Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, you're awakeeeee! Lannnn Zhannnnn!”

Or maybe not.

He turns around and spots the luminescent mouth of the cave, bathed in dim orange, indigo and dark blues from the outside world. It isn't that bright, so he guessed the time to be either sometime around dawn or dusk. A small silhouette emerges from a dot and grows into a sprinting figure, with arms waving about crazily like the man he knows too well.

Lan Zhan sighs, and smiles.

It's not really an afterlife, but it's home for his weary, well-travelled soul.

Notes for the Chapter:

Due to lack of interest and time, for the time being, this fic will continue as drabbles or mini-chapters. Don't expect huge arcs with sweeping plots and changes. And don't take things too seriously, because the story's going all over the place.

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 184

“This,” Wei Ying crouches at the mouth of the cave, then points to the ceiling, the floors and the many moss-covered surfaces of the cavern’s floor, interspersed with pretty sparkly pillars filled with sprouting, energy-thrumming rainbow-coloured crystals, “is our very own Soul Restoration Cave.” It’s unfortunate that the younger man couldn’t just saunter in and have his own (sexually tasty) way with the older man, because there is an invisible barrier that prevents the fully-living from entering and mingling with the very weak, very fragile soul of the departed within the cave. ‘Like a placental membrane,’ he’d said, and that left the older man scratching his head in bewilderment. So, Lan Zhan could only watch, listen but not physically touch his dearly beloved spouse with a foot apart between their bodies.

Lan Zhan follows the direction where his spouse pointed. Technically, the description befits what is said, because the enclosed air - a special bubble of space-time - is indeed incredibly rich with circulating high-quality qi and other healing protons, hunger-quenching electrons, energizing neutrons, and zillions of other rarer, exotic subatomic particles that make up a wonderful, nutritious balanced meal for the recuperating soul with each deep intake of breath. Lan Zhan has heard of such places, which are highly sought-after by cultivators as hotspots to meditate and gain extensive levels in cultivation, or better yet, to attain immortality if enough time is spent in this so-called cultivator’s paradise of power and tranquility. He wonders what fates and good fortunes struck that the younger man would stumble upon such a rarity, a one in million chance of a grand cultivator’s ageless lifetime, and willingly present it for the husband’s use.

“Well, I tried to design it according to the specs and wonderful details narrated in the best-selling 21st century xianxia novel ‘Proud Immortal Demon Way’. Y’know, the one where the protagonist saved his comrade in the Qiong Ding Peaks while trying to cultivate years of level-ups through meditation in mere paragraphs...” the over imaginative and bubbly man went on and on with his self-gratifying rant, and Lan Zhan sighs. He should’ve known that great things do not find Wei Ying; Wei Ying finds, or rather, makes them happen with his innate curiosity and enviable good luck. He sits down to listen to his spouse’s soothing, singsong and melodious voice, with plenty of animated hand movements to accompany each ludicrous idea. He is unfazed by the fact that he is completely in the nude while being semi-transparent in nature, while his wife is fully clothed in his usual trademark black-red robes - after having discarded the wretched black-white uniforms born of the unholy alliance of the Imperial Court and the perverted Tao religion.

“... and I added those Twisty crystals because, you know, heroes can meditate in shorter periods of time to gain explosive strengths. Why? Well, to beat up those heavenly deities that dared to lend their power and influence to the Tao, of course. I want you to be like that awesome Hua Cheng from the other novel, who challenged and defeated thirty three gods in a single fight! Yeah! A Blazing Scythe upper-cut, then a Thousand Supreme Lotus Punches, followed by The Great Golden Finger-Snap Ending that’ll annihilate everything in those mountains...”

Lan Zhan isn’t listening anymore, because he knows too well about Wei Ying’s wild ideas, and that they’ll all come to fruition anyway - after all, the wife is the Creator of this current lifetime, and the husband, a mere Supreme King of the Gods who was unlucky enough to blow up his physical body to avoid capture by awfully insignificant denizens of the Mortal Realm. He sits beside the constantly-talking spouse side by side, visually shoulder-to-shoulder, separated by a foot-thick force field akin to a glass barrier; his fingers knock on the transparent surface, slide up and down, trying to find an opening to reach across and grasp his beloved man’s hand. Alas, he could only stare longingly at Wei Ying’s beautiful side profile, starving and yearning for his lover’s touch - combed long black hair swept to the back and tied neatly with a topknot, luscious lips flapping around, the fully-restored body of his lover that wasn't thin and bony anymore and instead, is temptingly ravishable and endearingly cuddleworthy, long slender legs that coyly cross upon each other as though indicating to the voyeur that something delectable resides between them - peek, darling, peek further and please touch-touch me, the clothed crotch persuaded him using imagined words -, and delicate but strong fingers that could play a flute as masterfully as to aim an arrow on the bow to strike a bullseye one hundred paces away - as well as sending titillating images of nimble digits caressing, dancing on heated skin, curling at the joints in a come-hither motion to invite the same voyeur to engage in tasty mutual masturbations.

“... Ai-ya, Lan Zhan, are you even listening? Stop scratching the barrier like as though it's a piece of scab! It took me aeons to collect, condense and fill enough superbly high-quality qi from the primordial solar system just for you to absorb during these crucial nine days! After you went supernova and destroyed everything in this part of the galaxy, our Kingdom's interstellar salvage team had to search, retrieve and put the remnants of your soul into suspended animation for that amount of time, and I will not tolerate having you destroy my hard work just because you woke up from stasis and had an itch in your fingers! Did you know how much my heart broke when I carried your weightless, white, fuzzy soul-shard against my chest, praying that you wouldn't fade out of existence in the cold, deep space while we rushed across light-years to take you to the best hospital in our Kingdom?”

Lan Zhan lowers his head in shame, and leaves his hand spread out on the barrier, palms down. The surface is silicone-cold, lifeless, not quite comfortable to the touch - but he knows, deep inside the chasm in the gut, he knows how much Wei Ying has sacrificed for him: nine years of finding needles in the haystack that were soul-shards that had been blown off the face of the shattered planet and drifted off into the nebulous space after that apocalyptic detonation; ninety years to piece together those shards by the most skilled doctors employed by the Kingdom's bottomless coffers and use of unlimited medical technology in their arsenal; nine hundred years to build the perfect cavernous cradle and shelter for Lan Zhan's soul to recuperate, and to fill it with homely comforts and mementos of their love, in the hopes that the man would wake up with memories of their lives spent together; nine thousand years to, according to the doctors' prescription, collect and transfer the best, the most flawless, and the strongest qi energy particles into that said cave, atom by atom; and finally, ninety thousand years for that shard of soul to marinade, stew and simmer in that perfect cauldron of premium-blended qi until head, body and limbs sprouted out - and, to the joy of those who had waited so long, nine more days after awakening before the seal to the cave can be removed, for good. For all the Wei Ying had done for him, he has nothing else of equal value to return the honorable deed, other than pure, unbridled and absolute blessed love, deserving redemption, and the happiest of happy endings for the young man that had gone to such great lengths just for the man named Lan Wang Ji.

"I... I'm sorry. I lost my temper just now, because I've been impatient, lao gong ," Wei Ying murmurs, and rests a cheek against the invisible wall, while gingerly inching his own spread fingers to match Lan Zhan's at the opposite side of the barrier. He speaks again, voice choked with rare, heavy emotion until it cracks at the end.

"I miss you so much, Lan Zhan."

The glassy, unclouded shield between them is far from being a deterrent. With Wei Ying's hand aligned perfectly with his, it feels a tiny bit warmer, even for a soul-form's lifeless fingertips.

"Mn. I know. I'm here."

.

The hour-long lunch break had passed, and Wei Ying went back to his lively self. He had tonnes of work to do, he said - he had planets to rebuild, terraforming tasks to complete, populations of men, animals and plants in the Mortal Realm to check off his list, and furthermore, he still hasn't put the finishing touches to the Moon and Goddess Chang'e's throne, litter the space between the worlds of Mars and Jupiter with the prerequisite asteroid belt, and paint Saturn's lovely rings with stardust before the end of the week. Time in the cave flows at a different pace than reality. More than four and a half billion years may have passed in a blink of an eye, enough for the planetary system to grow from prototypical formation, evolve and mature to the point where the couple last separated, in Jinshan village, somewhere to the north-east of the Middle Kingdom, at 2000 B.C. He had the Kingdom to help out, with his four clone-siblings at the forefront of the restoration works.

Alone once again after his dear wife had left, Lan Zhan rises from his cushioned seat and walks away from their reunion spot, venturing deeper into the cave to explore the vast collection of treasures, relics from the past, and technically, bits of his previous lifetimes just to jog his memory a little. There are countless chambers in this sprawling network of tunnels, grottos, alcoves, secret rooms, above and underground and even dipping into different realms within realms - rightly so, since he is walking through their family's enormous, immeasurable cloud drive.

He taps on a fuzz-coated mound, and lo and behold, dirt-covered lids lifted then panels opened - like compartments in a 21st century car -, revealing stashes of goodies. In those numerous vaults and hidden niches, he can easily find and pick a steaming bowl of Wangxian Co. Ltd's Limited Edition Matriarchal Spicy Congee to sate his hunger, an old Cultivation Times magazine to read, a red button to press to lead him to, say, a quiet room to meditate, cultivate with Bichen and play the guqin, or even have a look at his keepsakes, such as the semen-crust red loincloth from Yiling long, long ago, the fragrant herb pouch stolen from Mian Mian and made into his money bag, or even some sleeping bunnies and unused Paperman talismans from Gusu.

He finds himself staring at a wooden door out of millions of others. At the top, it reads cryptically about having Dinner at the family's house with the same surname as him, chapter one.

He thinks for a bit, and with the belief that he has nine more days to go while being imprisoned in this solitary, soul-healing paradise, which in actual fact could stretch into many centuries or millennia, he concludes that he has plenty of time on hand to revisit his past lives.

Lan Zhan reaches for the doorknob and gives it a twist. The wood creaks, and yields with a rusty groan. It seems to be night time on the other side; he can hear sounds of bubbling soup in a pot, of someone cutting vegetables on the chopping board, and he gets a whiff of the unmistakable smell of chicken being steamed.

He takes a step forward.

Notes for the Chapter:

I'm glad to be able to put a little bit of MXTX's other works. I watched the SVSSS 3dcg donghua and I'm watching Heaven Official's Blessing donghua... I can't relate to those stories enough to join the fandom, since I've not read the novel or any other related works yet, but I just wanted to give recognition to the wonderful worlds created by the hands of novel writers that gave me, and so many others, a lot to be happy for :-)

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 185

Lan Zhan spends his precious nine days of applied annual leave (technically speaking) like a kid stuck at home during a Covid-19 lockdown situation with nothing but old PC videogames to play. He binges on good soul-food in the air and hidden in compartments all over the Soul Restoration Cave, morphs into a couch potato who surfs from lifetime to lifetime tucked behind closed doors all day, taking breaks only during lunch and dinner to spend quality time with his one and only true family - Wei Ying - before slogging away for the rest of the day - which can last millions or billions of years in this warmed space-time bubble - enjoying the fruits of his past lives, and his kins’.

It helps that Wei Ying has designed a special floor mat inside the cave where their lives’ treasures are stored in a rather haphazard and chaotic manner - that man would not think twice before recklessly throwing precious heirloom furniture and artifacts salvaged from the Cloud Recesses into a pile of garbage sinking into the bottom of the lake beside a reimagined, rebuilt but sloppy version of the Lotus Pier. Thus, as good distractions, Lan Zhan would climb down the floor mat to do some decluttering and reorganizing, catching glimpses of the results of their shared hoarding tendencies over lifetimes. To the pleasure in his loins, the floor mat is somewhat connected to his favorite underground kingdom - and the world beneath the mat is populated by Wei Yings of all forms, shapes and sizes, but every bit lovable and passionate at the same time. He spends an inordinate amount of two-minute breaks in that world to make sweet love to Wei Yings, twenty-four thousand times each, to father many babies inside them and cause his descendents’ population to swell and boom.

Lifetimes are like videogames, really. There is a set logical flow of background and storylines, characters, items, enemies and bosses, locations, trigger points for predetermined events, some flexibility in the plot and sub-plots depending on the player's choices, and one or several types of endings. Lan Zhan spends his days living through memories each of his past lives and the lives of his Kingdom's subjects, revisiting familiar places, opening new treasure chests or cupboards that he didn't try before, reacquainting with old relatives and friends, establishing new relationships and taking them to different directions - but always, always, he makes sure to find good, happy endings because he doesn't like to lose, and is the sorest loser amongst 'em all. It would seem pointless to go through such a long-winded, repetitive and laborious exercise, but thanks to his mild obsessive compulsive disorder, he really likes to go through the same steps again and again, with a bit of variety in the middle, before achieving one hundred percent victories of life-goals in those videogame replays. It's really therapeutic, he tells himself, as he watches and acts like the protagonist inside that said videogame, to grow up in a disciplined household, excel in his chosen fields of studies, met and fell madly in love with a Wei Ying-lookalike, have arguments and break up, before reconciling and getting married, then have tasty sex on wedding nights and many nights after that, become a successful contributing member of society, have lots of children and grandchildren, et cetera ad naseum .

Lan Zhan thinks that he should take such holidays more often, because such undisturbed downtime is needed to reset his hectic pace of life, reflect on his state of happiness and well-being, and for him to sit down and re-evaluate his life choices. It is assuring to know that the Regent - the eponymous awesome Uncle Lan of his dreams - is taking care of the Kingdom, the multiverses, and his company during his leave; the four great Wei clone-siblings are doing their best to (re-)create a better reality for him to return to; and lastly, his four Demons of the Negative Planes helped out in household chores that would otherwise be forgotten during his absence.

All's well, should end well, he says to himself.

.

He's had a fair share of reminiscing, and even as a true-blue Gusu Lan man, he has reached a kind of ceiling, a pinnacle, a plateau with nowhere else to go - an upper limit of rewinding, reliving, exploring and transcending his proudest and most embarrassing moments in his many lives, his kins' lives, and the infinite iterations in between. Enough of groundhog days, enough of going through the same motions, even with significantly different or simple minute variations, but always, very happy endings for him and his manly wife (and generations of descendents living under the same roof, to boot). It is time to move on.

Nine days had passed after an eternity.

“You know, if it wasn't for Ernie's incredible skill of Shadow Swallow, we wouldn't have the data needed to recreate the world to the precise moment of destruction. That boy's really amazing, I have to hand it to him - he basically captured, nanosecond by nanosecond, the universe's data and preserved everything he managed to consume with his Dark Shadow to pixel-perfection. I praised him a lot after that, and rewarded him by letting him stay in my pubic hair, where it's cold, black, smelly and probably as slimy as he likes,” Wei Ying says casually with inserted self-deprecating jokes, while munching on a baked sweet potato topped with peppers, onions and pork mince for lunch - his first meal of the day, since he'd always been waking up at eleven in the morning. Lan Zhan isn't hungry, because he's been having sumptuous buffets - the food and the sexy kind - all morning from travelling to lifetimes where he'd grown morbidly obese, extremely satiated and delighted, from getting overfed and loved to bits by an enormous harem of male and female versions of the spouse - not to mention, their children and many more offsprings made purely from parent-child incestuous love.

“Mn. What about Ni-er?” he ventures calmly while sitting on the floor by the mouth of the cave, examining his still-naked body for signs of solidification into physical reality. Sadly, he is still in his blue-hued outlined soul-form, which is fine and he’s beginning to get used to it. It’s a good thing that Wei Ying didn’t build mirrors, otherwise he’d be checking on himself too frequently, particularly for any imperfections, marks, scars, bald spots or pimples. He’d read somewhere in one of the Cultivation Magazines that having too much sex in a short span of time sends one’s cultivated qi to dangerous levels, and besides causing qi deviation and leading to a very happily productive prostate gland and overjoyed twin testicle eggs dancing between the legs, one’s testosterone levels would shoot up, causing hot, horny and lustful flashes, premature baldness on the scalp and oily skin all over.

“Our girl? Oh, she gets to stay in her daddy’s crowning glory as a glaringly annoying strand of white hair. Don’t worry, husband, no one’s going to notice your greying hair or your receding hairline, because you’re too godly for that. She’s done a tremendous job of uploading every single byte of data captured by Ernie to our family’s cloud drive, which I’m sure you’ve seen its greatness and grandeur in scale and capability. That tenacious, indefatigable fluffy white thing finally relented after working non-stop for infinite periods of time, so she’s been sleeping a lot to recover her strength. My clone-siblings have fitted her to your physical body; she’ll wake up at the same time as you transmigrate your soul to its new home, darling,” the spouse answers at length, and sweetly kisses the glass barrier to leave puckered lip-marks made of potato-mush. Lan Zhan instinctively reciprocates by kissing the invisible surface that keeps him a foot apart from his beloved man, this time, leaving semen-stained kiss marks; there is no reason for jealousy, because those dried, crusting seed belong to Wei Ying as well of another individual but of the same genetic make-up - it would be shameful to reveal how many male Wei Yings he had skillfully violated beneath that special floor mat, and forced them to spill their brimming hot sperm into his waiting open jaws, gulp after gulp, until countless twitching, pleasantly-drained individuals writhed weakly to plead surrender to the greatest lao gong to rule their universe.

“Home?” Lan Zhan asks, anxious and with a foreboding feeling creeping into his heart. He is afraid of that term, because he’s become accustomed to his lair called the Soul Restoration Cave, with all niceties, comforts and conveniences, and pleasures of the flesh, within his arm’s reach. A new home would mean a different... set of circumstances that govern his life, and he’d be heartbroken to lose everything he’d learned to enjoy in the past nine days since awakening. His fingers traced circles on the carpet of reflexology-worthy moss hesitantly.

“Of course! Your soul needs a new physical body, and this time, I refused the Heavenly kitchen staff’s offer for baked biscuits from their dreary, off-fashion ovens. You won’t be eating a bland, tasteless gingerbread man to gain a new body - I’ve specially ordered an ultra-modern, 3d-printed organic, 100% natural, magic-enchanted, gluten-free, low-calorie, added antioxidants and vitamin-rich substitute for you. Here,” he points at a spot next to Lan Zhan’s rump. The latter withdraws his hand from the ground, and lo and behold, another lid springs open to reveal a packaged rectangular snack no bigger than one’s index finger in length.

(At that juncture, Lan Zhan mourned the loss of opportunities wasted in the last nine days; if Wei Ying could transport ready-made goods into the cave by way of secret chutes, hatches and compartments, could he have not made the journey himself into the cave and spend the days together, entwining bodies and hearts, as a loving couple for the past week or so? Alas, there is no reason to mull over spilled milk, just as there is no use to wail over dried, crusted and uselessly spilled semen. Therefore, Lan Zhan steeled himself and falsely put on a mask of hope and positiveness as to what the future holds for him, and his love life.)

The older man stares bemusedly at the packaging - it seems to be a plain brown rice-paper packaging, still warm to the touch and fresh from the 3d-printing oven. On the surface, there is a hand-drawn picture of a penis with hairy balls, that only juvenile nine-year olds could draw with such crude chicken scratches. At least, he tells himself, it smells good. The aroma of newly baked goods wafts into the cavern, and it is quite mouth-watering. Without waiting for permission, Lan Zhan gently tears open the packaging from the edge and lengthwise, to reveal a sad-looking, crooked, bent and limp biscuit that would pass off as a failed imitation of a penis, unsurprisingly. He sighs and looks at his wife, expectedly.

“Well...” Wei Ying grinned sheepishly and scratched the back of his head in embarrassment, “I drew the design on paper, and wanted to make it look like an adorable copy of my dick. Sorry, I’m bad at drawing and it’s the 3d-printer’s fault for making this unappetizing piece of phallic confectionary. Blame the machine, not me, please?” That grin turns into the sweetest apologetic smile until his eyes crinkled - Lan Zhan had to forgive the young man for his early attempts at making biscuits. He lifts the penis-biscuit to his lips, gives the uneven balls a good lick to savour the chestnut-brown sugary coating - dark chocolate mixed with finely powdered fragrant nuts and roasted grains. Mmm, delish. -, before taking a bite at the cockhead. It snaps into two, chewed heartily in several crunches, and is swallowed gratefully.

“Mn. It tastes okay. Thank you, Wei Ying.”

Notes for the Chapter:

I really like moments of playing god with the fic's storyline and adding sci-fi elements to it. It's kinda refreshing for a story based on ancient Chinese culture and mythology.

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 186

Lan Zhan had a strange, naughty dream.

He finds himself still inside the cave, but caged in an enclosure not unlike those used to keep large circus animals - a plain cube-shaped jail with solid metal platforms for its ceiling and floor, and grey vertical bars on all four sides. Normally, one would grasp those bars and shake them hard, screaming and begging to be let out of imprisonment, or if an inmate is around, there could be either friendly banter or worse, violent brawls. However, in this dream, Lan Zhan wants to remain locked-up, because it is packed with warm, writhing Wei Yings of all genders, ages, shapes and sizes. There is hardly any room to move, and he could feel his naked skin rubbing against one another every time he squirmed or tried to take a step in any direction. It didn't take long for the heat to leave him wanting, desiring to fuck every Wei Ying and bed the offered throbbing, tight flesh, just as he'd done for the past nine days beneath the special floor mat.

The fantasy is made even more tantalizing when all Wei Yings appear in their soul-forms; glowing, translucent, elegant, angelic, and partially see-through - he catches glimpses of internal organs beneath the skin, of a pinkish heart beating strongly for him, lungs expanding and contracting with each thrilling breath, muscles sliding over one another and even peristaltic movements of the gut; truly, a visual feast of the human anatomy. Lan Zhan's eyes widen and he couldn't stifle a moan when his disobedient penis springs into action to point to what it wants - and it wants 'em very badly. It twitches, alive and lively, bobbing up and down excitedly as though it is sniffing every presented crotch and butt-crack. He watches, mesmerized, at how his diamond-hard erection selects a lovely rosebud winking back with puckered muscles, and slips in easily into one 'Ahhnnn~~~'-ing Wei Ying's ass. It's surreal to observe an X-ray vision of how a thick, throbbing penis enters into the rectum and gets squeezed lovingly by muscular walls, in and out, in and out, invading Wei Ying's inner sanctum before it is grasped by flesh as warm as his, like a animated socked hand right in front of his eyes.

Not even ten fucks later, his penis slides out, drooling and having been caressed by squishy folds of body-warmed flesh, having tasted one out of many Wei Yings easily within reach; it wetly slaps the next Wei Ying's rump and inches then crawls over mounds of buttocks like a jerky, fat snake, seeking another virginal hole to deflower - and it is delighted when it slithers, slippery with pre-cum, down, downwards to find a female's blossoming rose. Unsurprisingly, it turns out to be a female Wei Ying, who cries out with pleasure upon being pierced by the turgid, angry-red flesh, doggie-style and from the back, and Lan Zhan couldn't stop his hips from shaking with joy. The friction, the juicy squelching, the hot tight clenching, the boiling, rising liquid pressure - the more he pumps his hips, skewering and slamming hard into a fertile garden to father many offsprings - the more he loses his rational thought. It didn't help that the see-through nature of their lovemaking is extremely erotic visually; he stares at how his over six-incher plunders the tight, freshly-deflowered birth canal with amazing detail, the fleshy folds and bumps caressing his penile veins and pulls back his foreskin with each thrust; until he hits the the hilt and couldn't fuck deeper, at which his penis glans was aimed directly to the mouth of Wei Ying's uterus; the sight was too much, the sensations were too great, that Lan Zhan 'Ahhh's himself and for a second, becomes too excited at the prospect of watching how babies are conceived and made - and he one-two's; a dollop of seed oozes out visibly, and due to the jerking movement inside the incredible warm, tight vagina, spurts far enough to splatter the cervix, and leak into Wei Ying's wonderfully sexy, bouncy womb.

Lan Zhan howls with pleasure and quickly descends into a lust-filled orgy of sexually-depraved proportions, then starts to rut madly with that female Wei Ying, and later, all Wei Yings around him. As a result, every Wei Ying trapped in the cage is rewarded with at least ten fucks each, spoonfuls of accidentally-ejaculated seed, and for a handful of very lucky individuals, full servings of thirty very excited shots straight into the womb or ass.

Lan Zhan's love and passion for his Wei Yings grows fonder, as he drills and spills repeatedly after tasting every few individuals; all Wei Yings are hot, tight and sweet, both male and female, although he has a preference for leaving spoonfuls of freshly ejaculated seed in the latter gender, for the sake of propagating his kind just a little bit more with each increasingly tiring but very, very nice orgasm sizzling his loins to cinder. His back arches erratically, his face freezes with a stupid, drunken grin-cum-snarl, he grunts uncontrollably, his fingers claw and grasp at anything he could touch - Wei Ying's slender waist, Wei Ying's ample milk jugs, Wei Ying's smackable buttocks, Wei Ying's spread-eagled thighs -, his hips shudder again and again, indecisive of whether to keep pumping hard or to stay still, because all Wei Yings worship their shared husband's penis with their hands, lips and genitals, making sweet love with kisses between dicks or while fully engaging in tasty sexual intercourses; in the end, he takes the easy way out, and lies on the rather cold metal floor of his sexual prison, and lets every Wei Ying have their delicious ways with him. His eyes flutter and his breath hitches as fast as his penis, which gets swallowed, milked, stroked, licked and squeezed by vaginas and anal muscles, and he shoots out fresh creamy seed - and watches, like a sick, twisted movie, of how his patriarchal and majestic sperm enters Wei Ying's orifices, travels through cavities and tubes, to be swallowed and digested helplessly in the gut, to swim to the ovaries and mate with eggs and make many healthy, fat babies born from their genes.

Even while he throbs hard into one Wei Ying, scores of others crowd around his crotch to pleasure their master - whether to caress his thighs, to reach for his nipples and tickle the erect nubs, or his favourite, knead and please his balls in mid-orgasm, so that he experiences strong testicular orgasms to go hand in hand with his actual climaxes; it is intriguing to watch how his happy man-eggs react while working hard to pump out newborn sperm, then those twin plump sacs are lovingly attacked by warm wet tongues and powerful vibrating suction between moist, glistening lips, and he nnnhs again and again and the wonderful spasms rolling up and down his pelvis, because his testicles are delightfully coaxed to release their contents when there is none left - still, those tentacle-y tongues lick their naughty circles and draw pictures upon its spherical, lightly-fuzzed surface, jabbing and pressing every last droplet out - and then, Lan Zhan looks up from the floor, with one particularly young virginal Wei meimei riding him to sunsets and midnights, his - her - maidenhood had been forcibly taken by Lan Zhan's insatiable appetite for fresh Wei Yings, and he - she - whispers innocently and oh so adorably, “ Er gege , er gege , it still feels itch-itch down there, can you scratch it for me?”

The sexually flushed Lan Zhan couldn't say no, and he gently flips them over, missionary-style, so that he can mount this Wei Ying's blossoming rose to kingdom come and enjoy every last bit of raiding his - her - probably underdeveloped, immature, but oh so hot garden and sow it with his wildest seeds when he blasts his fertile soldiers deep, deep inside.

“Mn. Like this?”

“Ahhhnn... gege , you're moving in circles... it feels stretchy... can you move it up and down? The itch-itch is uncomfortable. Please scratch that itch properly.”

“Mn. How about this?”

“Ahhh! Ahhh! Ahhh! It feels so good! Gege , please scratch my itch-itch harder, faster, deeper! Yes... oh, gege is feeling very good too, I can feel you growing larger with each scratch, and my belly feels very, very warm... very, very full...”

Lan Zhan continues to taste, savour and taste his Wei Yings, deep in his slumber.

.

After an eternity of non-stop fucking, Lan Zhan finally yields before his body protests out of overexertion, and calls for a break for his tired hips and pleasantly-emptied loins. The entire scene pans out, and so does the cage which magically stretches itself thin until it disappears.

He finds himself standing in the cave, gazing longingly at a immeasurable line of Wei Yings arranged side-by-side to each other, each presenting to him with their naughty bits - males are on all fours on the ground with their perky asses facing him like sets of sexy twin pale moons and a hairy crack in-between, whilst females lie on the floor with hips spread and knees tucked and juicy lips of those blossoming petals pulled apart to tease, and to entice his errant penis to come in er gege , please come in and stay inside to make lots of babies tonight; thereby giving him the best sexually-appetizing view he can ever wish for, in this sexually-charged nightmarish twist of dreams.

“Play our song, dear husband, play our song with your penis! We’re your musical instrument, so please play with our naughty bits , er gege , and let us sing our song!” the Wei Yings chant in unison.

It took a while to figure out what needs to be done. Lan Zhan chooses a particularly attractive male teenager and stands so close until his excited reproductive organ touches the smooth mound. His hands spread the butt-cheeks generously to reveal the wrinkly entrance covered with dense curls; he aims, then thrusts vigorously in a straight swoop - and hears that Wei Ying “Ahhhh!” like a melodious lark that sings a single, sweet prolonged note filled with such grace, such passion, and such heartfelt emotion of a man losing his virginity. The pleasure is mind-blowing, because he can feel straining muscles contract around his arousal just as one squeezes the muscles of the belly to belt out a rich-sounding note, sending pre-cum gushing abundantly into that teenager.

Then, he pulls out, slick with boy-juices, and crouches against a young female Wei Ying this time. He steadies himself before leaning in, making sure to gently pry open those swollen, lubricated petals, before delving deep into the shy, hidden hole, missionary-style, and dips his penis into the very tight, very desirable and very lustful, elastic youthful pussy - one, two, three times, shallow thrusts - and that feminine, lewd Wei Ying sings with an operatic “Ahhhh! Ahhhh! Ahhhh!” in tandem with each strike, with a higher, obviously female pitch, and with plenty of breathy moans in-between.

Lan Zhan stands back and rubs his chin, penis dribbling with excitement of tasting two Wei Yings, and in anticipation for more, please, can I have s’more to fuck, please. He’s musically gifted, and having played the guqin before, he had no problems deciphering that those Wei Yings are arranged like the keys of a kinky piano. The Wei Yings to the right sang higher pitches, while those to the left did lower notes. There is a random distribution of age and gender of the Wei Yings, though; if he is lucky, he may land on a tasty young virile Wei Ying at a longer note, and maybe he’ll be allowed to go all the way until he explodes in a series of magnificent orgasms for crescendos. Mentally, he maps out which Wei Ying sings which notes, and so, he works out the orchestra for the first passage of his - their - song, aptly named after a mix of their courtesy names of Lan Wang Ji and Wei Wu Xian.

There are twelve notes, so he starts at the right end, fucking one Wei Ying to hear him sing the right note at the perfect pitch; after the third or so Wei Ying, he becomes increasingly lustful, and steals additional quick hip-thrusts, tasty pumps between butt-cheeks or delicious heterosexual intercourses - and is rewarded with fancy alternating “AHHahhAHHahhAHHahhAHHahh” like jewelled quavering, trilling ornaments to a musical masterpiece. He makes staccatos with quick powerful thrusts, and slurs and prolonged holds by generous deep plunges. By the sixth note towards the left, he reaches a ‘key’ on the Wei Ying-piano that needs to be ‘pressed’ a bit longer than the rest. He smiles faintly - it is a little boy that hasn’t reached puberty yet. Empathetic of the boy’s pain due to his full-grown girth and size, and also because it would be distressing for such a young male to experience sex before his time, Lan Zhan becomes very loving and tender to his one-note underaged lover; he sits cross-legged on the floor, and lets the boy ride him on a sitting position, while straddling his awesome and very pleased adult penis. It is a tight squeeze, and air escapes out of the boy’s lungs in musicless wheezes, but eventually, he hits the deepest sweet spot, and the boy opens his mouth and sings with his heart and soul - the sixth note, in perfect timbre and pitch, clear as glass and unbroken for one who hasn’t reached puberty yet; Lan Zhan promptly roars together in unison with majestic pleasure, and spills deep into the precocious child in excited spurts, filling the boy’s tummy with an adult’s warmth and pedophilic love.

The rest of the piece is played, like a tasty sexual melodious game that turns the man into a horny lustful beast singing along with each defiling of Wei Yings; he plays to the twelfth note to complete the first passage of Their Song, sweaty, panting and on the verge of yet another explosive climax, and refuses to end his musical score just yet - he wants to play the entire piece with his quivering Wei Yings, and by the grace and powers bestowed upon the couple, he is allowed to continue dreaming, playing with lovely, lovely

Wei Yings until every and every one is properly bedded, impregnated, made sweet love, and filled with the man's perverted seed, singing hard and sweetly, deep into his sleep.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 187

Four and a half billion years, multiply by the number of dreams that leaves one restless, horny or simply snoring - that's a tall order for Wei Ying's capability of dreaming whilst his husband is held hostage inside a Soul Restoration Cave, but he does it anyway, and dreams zillions of sexy dreams that Man can ever dream. (He doesn't like being separated from Lan Zhan, so he tells everyone that the Cave inside their family's cloud drive has kidnapped his Prince Charming, leaving him a miserable hermit that is forced to abstain from sex for more lifetimes than one can count with his or her own fingers.)

Wei Ying dreams of all kinds of things and situations he has, or could, encounter during his existence. Usually, he dreams of becoming a megalomaniac tyrant, a leader of mountain bandits, a mad scientist who creates the greatest robot that serves every single one of his worldly needs, or the greatest arch-wizard ever known to slaughter everything in sight, then proceeding to rape and sexually abuse all the imaginary Lan Zhans that lived, however briefly, inside his mind during the wee hours of the morning while slumbering. Sometimes, he dreams of nicer, milder albeit still spicy-hot things, such as this one particular scene.

Wei Ying is a happy, satisfied man. He's the male-wife of Lan Wang Ji, who is the greatest hero, the champion of all that is good, the king of nobility and whatnots - more importantly, the alpha-masculine husband lets and lives according to Wei Ying's wishes. The young man breaks into a sprint gleefully through dense forest undergrowth with his prized catch of the day - two colourful jungle fowls in hand with their necks cleanly cut and their bellies gutted, and a basket filled with fish and foraged edibles strapped to his back. He works hard to put food on the family's table for two, and plays even harder - he enjoys running barefoot through the forests chasing and hunting animals, making runs to a small remote town on the hillside to sell his produce and handicraft goods, and return before sundown with jars of tasty wines and plenty of time to cuddle up with his husband, or work on his side-projects, before calling it a day. In retrospect, Wei Ying realizes that amongst his many lifetimes, the brief stint of eking out a simple, humble living in the Burial Mounds near Yiling during his younger days, before he was crowned King (or Queen) and employed in a Company, were probably one of the best times he's experienced thus far.

He calls out Lan Zhan's name excitedly, like a child running back from school with wonderful stories to tell to his family members - Wei Ying feels elated, because here, in an isolated, faraway clearing in the middle of pine and bamboo forests, far, far away from civilization, Lan Zhan only has eyes, time and love, for his one and only Wei Ying.

The older man, dressed in his trademark Gusu Lan white robes, appears at the doorway of a rustic countryside cottage, with a water-wheel built upon a small stream next to it, a vegetable patch inhabited by reared chickens, bunnies and a couple of goats on the other side, and backyard filled with greenery, a livestock barn and toolshed, and a sprawling blooming lotus pond at the middle. It is a little misty deep in the heart of a thriving forest, so Wei Ying thought that his husband looked rather dashing, ethereally handsome and very, very alluring, surrounded by a halo of mysterious whites. With a simple "Mn", he gestures the wife to place the day's catch in the kitchen at the back of their cottage - then, gingerly, with an armful of freshly washed tunics and trousers, he closes in with a few majestic steps and bends forward to place a sweet kiss on Wei Ying's forehead. Lan Zhan is careful, though, because he doesn't want the laundered clothes to be soiled by mud-smudged Wei Ying. "Welcome back," he says gently, before moving off, resuming his work to hang the washed garments on a clothesline erected close to the vegetable patch.

Wei Ying skips his merry way, rounding off the corner of the rectangular, plain but incredibly cozy-looking building made of wood and some concrete blocks, and promptly hands the two chickens and the basket to another Lan Zhan. He gets another kiss from the loving husband, this time on the cheeks, after the second Lan Zhan wipes his face with a washcloth. "I'll prepare our meal, so go and wash up in the pond," he orders, and Wei Ying is more than happy to obey. Five minutes later, he dives head first into the pool on a sunny, misty bright morning, against a backdrop of birdsongs, insect chirping, rustling of a passing-by crisp refreshing breeze, and the calming thud-thud sounds of a househusband chopping up herbs and vegetables, scaling the fishes, carving up the meat and putting them into pots and pans bubbling, sizzling with delicious flavours and mouth-watering scents.

The young man laughs at his good life and good fortune, and swims in circles around the pond, kicking away lotus flowers and entangling his legs with lotus plants' roots. Then, a newly plucked lotus pod appears in his line of sight. His husband, a third Lan Zhan, naked from head to toe, emerges by his side and seems to propose to him with that said lotus pod, which looks awfully like a green-hued flower from a distance. Such a sexy gesture, Wei Ying thought, to be proposed by a man in the nude - and he steals a glance beneath the shimmering, rippling surface... yes, the said man has an erection too, which pleases Wei Ying to no end..

"Wei Ying, this morning I've harvested a whole basket of cabbage and lettuce. Now, I'm collecting lotus roots so that we'll have some tasty soup later today," Lan Zhan duly provides an update to the wife about their perfect harem-ish household. He proceeds to pop out a few seeds and slide them into Wei Ying's lips, akin to nutty candies typically found in the markets. Wei Ying 'Mmmm!'s with joy at being hand fed, and he gets a nice scrub on the back too while heartily emptying out the offered lotus pod.

Elsewhere, another husband-Lan Zhan waves his hand as he returns from collecting firewood, and one more comes out from the increasingly populated cottage - with spindles and sewing kits in hand because he was halfway through with making a new pair of trousers for the wife -, to check out the commotion of a squealing wife having a blast splashing in the pond as recklessly as a child in a swimming pool. It didn't matter to Wei Ying that he'd lost track of which Lan Zhan was the original one, and if the other four are simply named Lan da ge , Lan er ge , Lan san ge and Lan didi - they all looked very handsome and alike in size and stature, with the ability to shapeshift and timeshift so that he didn't need to deal with bratty kids or smelly wrinkly old men, and all are very, very desirable.

Having peed in the pond like a naughty boy in a public swimming pool, then getting a nice wash from one of the many husbands, Wei Ying feels refreshed, climbs up from the pondside, and enters their cottage from the rear entrance. He's naked and doesn't bother to gown up or dry his hair properly - because one of the husbands trails behind like a servant with a thick towel to keep the lovely wife warm and patted down as dry as possible. "Lunch will be ready in an hour's time. We're having your favourite soup, steak and pies from the oven, rice and stir-fry vegetables from the stove, fruits, a few other dishes," two Lan Zhans manning the kitchen said. Wei Ying hmms in satisfaction and starts humming some classic Yunmeng folksong, while prancing quite a bit around the cottage to explore the rooms - there is a living room, a dining room beside the large kitchen, study and workrooms adjacent to nooks and crannies of storerooms and hidden compartments, a spiralling stairs, and of course, the entire floor above is their grand royal bedroom filled with king-sized beds and mattresses.

Being naked, it doesn't take long for roving eyes to turn to roaming fingers, and soon, all five husbands remained indoors to watch, then follow, and whenever Wei Ying is within reach, the thrilled younger man gets the attention he very much wants and deserves - he'd lie on the sofa and pretended to read a magazine off the shelf, then spread his legs sensuously yet crudely, recklessly, to expose his naughty bits and rosebud to the world to see; he'd scratch his crotch and run his fingers through his dense, hairy pubic bush, and before long, one of the husbands lodge himself between the younger man's legs and starts to dry-hump, naked crotch to naked crotch. Or, Wei Ying would deftly maneuver around his Lan Zhans, and seduce them with light touches, kissy lips, swaying hips and his killer move - he would back up until his bouncy ass hits one of the husband's iron-stiff arousal, and naughtily grinds the angry, twitching turgid flesh in circular and up-and-down motions, until the husband moans and trembles from want, and just before he's shoved to the floor and mounted like a bitch, Wei Ying laughs and runs off, leaving the husband agitated, and sexually frustrated. Or, Wei Ying sandwiches himself between two husbands and cleverly takes the hand of the one at the front, and places it on his crotch; "Darling, my penis is hard and itchy, can you please stroke it nicely?" he'd asked, and then plaster his lips with the hapless husband to seal the deal; at the same time, he grinds his ass against the other husband at the back, and even allows the occasional slip that sends Wei Ying into a moaning, jerking frenzy whenever he feels a penis-head hit, stretch and peek through his anus; "Oh, my other darling, my hole at the back feels itchy too, can you scratch it for me? Something long and hard, do it deep and fast, please," he'd whisper in sexy breaths, and soon, he enjoys a titillating foreplay of a threesome in action - before suddenly ducking out to escape, thwarting a full-blown sex, thus, leaving two men very, very aroused and irritated.

The teasing goes on and on for minutes, until every Lan Zhan marches in hot pursuit from behind the cheeky young man, in tandem with their bobbing, rising heats between their legs. Soon, Wei Ying runs upstairs and checked the clock at the bedside - there is still forty five minutes to go before mealtime, so he leaps and bounds for the king-sized bed decorated with patterns of bunnies and lotus flowers, and lifts his hips gratefully while arching his body wantonly like an animal in heat, inviting his husbands to taste his wifely hairy penis, balls and rosebud.

Soon, one husband - he hopes that it's the original Lan Zhan - bears down on him, penetrates the waiting rosebud in a mighty single lunge, missionary-style, and fucks him silly into the bed like a furious pistoning machine. Another Lan Zhan stealthily wedges in from beneath, until he lies under Wei Ying and becomes the latter's pillow and bedspread, and slides his lustful hardness from behind, squeezing into the buttock that is already busily fornicated by the first husband; Wei Ying is double-penetrated and he sings his 'Aaahn's and 'Ooooh's as loudly as his lungs would allow. The copulation is not complete, not without having two more husband flanking Wei Ying's sides; one takes charge of performing the perfect blowjob, with plenty of licks at the intimate weaknesses such as jabbing the tip of tongue into the pee-slit and swirling circles around the special sweet spot beneath the glans, until Wei Ying's cock detonated in multiple orgasms and his brimming wife-sperm spills carelessly all over the bed in excited ejaculatory spurts, and onto the husbands' faces and hair; the other Lan man skillfully kneads, licks, sucks with vibratory hums and swallows generously one testicle alternately with the other, until twin wifely man-eggs instinctively felt so violated and they throbbed so hard, convulsed too excitedly from the maddening arousing sensations that ejects every last freshly-produced sperm cell out of their cradles, that Wei Ying cries again and again in sweeping pleasure as his body bends and bows erratically, wrecked by mind-blowing testicular orgasms that causes his entire pelvis to seize into one giant climaxing explosion. Finally, the last husband - doubtfully, Wei Ying thinks this one could've been the original Lan Zhan - crouches over Wei Ying's head and torso, and gives the young man deep french kisses, playing with each others' tongues until Wei Ying is left more than breathless and pleasantly drained from head to toe; the husband's manly calloused fingers fiddled, pinched and tweaked Wei Ying's nipples until they become a twin set of puffy areolae, fit to be suckled by babes or husbands, in this case. Each Lan Zhan takes his turn to dip his head between Wei Ying's sparse bosom, and gently attacks the man's genitals until they swell and blossom continuously from the arousing lovemaking, also switch with one another to engage in a riotous orgy with the fertile sexy young man, sometimes with double and triple-penetrations because they're getting impatient to taste Wei Ying's hot, welcoming tightness, sometimes when there's not enough room then two or more hungry, twitching cum-slicked cocks vye for Wei Ying's mouth instead - every Lan

Zhan silent pleads that the sweet, lustful young man would conceive their children from five mens' worth of glittering, qi -enhanced seed injected repeatedly, very, very excitedly into the one lucky bloating man-womb.

Then, the kettle whistles, the pot bubbles over. Lunch is served.

Wei Ying snorts and everything disappears when he opens his eyes in comforting darkness, face and hair matted with sweat. He finds himself alone on the bed with a huge patch of semen at the front of his pyjamas. His stomach grumbles - he thinks he should make himself a midnight snack of cup noodles, before returning to sleep. Then, thinking that it is too much effort, he turns around, sticks the unfortunate purple cushion between his legs because it feels very, very nice to hump against something firm although his groin is completely sticky and dripping with nightly emission beneath his pants - and snores.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 188

Without a cup noodle to fill his stomach during the night time slumber, the missed midnight snack returned to haunt him in his dreams. It didn't help that Ernie emerged from its mother's curly, entangled, frizzy pubic hair and wrapped the front with its slimy, writhing cold, black mass, and extended a phallic appendage towards the rump, inside Wei Ying's pyjamas, with every intention to turn itself into a self-inserting, self-pleasuring and automated dildo to please its master even whilst slumber.

Wei Ying dreams about taking a walk to town, after a filling lunch of good food and even better sex.

“Here, I've woven a few rolls of fabrics using the traditional loom in the work-room, and hand-embroidered it with intricate cloud and lotus patterns. They should fetch a decent price at the boutique store.”

“Wei Ying, please use the money from selling the fabrics, to buy some provisions. Here's the list. It includes potatoes to make fritters as snacks, minced pork to make patties for tomorrow's breakfast, and a brand new broom to replace the old that had broken and been worn out.”

“ Lao po , please come back before sunset. I'm preparing a sumptuous dinner and another pot of your favourite soup with extra large slices of lotus roots and juicy ribs.”

“Wei Ying, buy the cup noodles from the supermarket. According to this morning’s periodical, there is a sale going on. There’s a ‘buy five free one’ offer today.”

“Mn. Please be careful and stay away from the stray dogs.”

He waves his hands and bid his five handsome, sexy husbands goodbye, and flashes his brightest smile, although deep down, he wishes that one of them would at least openly allow him to procure and bring back sweet wines, rather than having him sneaking a couple of jars through the rear door.

.

Unsurprisingly, halfway through his journey through forest trails and dense undergrowth, he was ambushed by a group of mountain bandits. Daggers and swords pointed at the terrified man, and Wei Ying nearly tumbled down from the edge of a cliff in his panicked state.

“Ah! Mercy, mercy, kind sirs! I’m just a poor wife trying to earn a living by selling these rolls of fabrics. Take them... take my money pouch too, but there are only a few silver pieces in there! Please, spare my life, sirs!” Wei Ying cries, and grovels to the ground on all four.

One bandit, who looks exactly like the hero named Lan Wang Ji, except that he had rubbed ash over his chin and drew a moustache above his lips, looms above the shivering man, and says in a rather flat, uninspiring though supposedly accusing voice, “These fabrics are too cheap, and the pouch isn’t worth anything in value.”

“If this man is wedded, then at least his body is cherished. Let’s taste his fine body, and mayhaps we can savour what could’ve been this maidenboy’s lost virginity, taken by his husband and then stolen by us,” remarks another Lan Wang Ji calmly without any fiery eagerness, this time, the bandit sports exotic braided hair and accessories, with a black eyepatch just to make him look more frightening.

“Put away his goods and undress him. Let’s rape him to hearts’ desire, men,” the third Lan Wang Ji states, as though he’s reading a script with a deadpan voice. Fearsome dragon and tiger tattoos decorated his limbs and close to the face, enough to scare away any ordinary defenceless peasants just like Wei Ying in this twisted dream.

In the next scene of the sexy dream, Wei Ying finds himself with his back on the ground and legs spread-eagled, one Lan Wang Ji pinning his arms to above the head, while the other keeping his hips raised and the thighs properly open, and of course, the lucky Lan man, after a couple of rounds of rock-paper-scissors, wins and gets first dibs to savour Wei Ying’s lost innocence, right between those lovely sweaty, trembling and sweaty hairy legs.

From his not-so-vantage point on the ground, Wei Ying is glad that he can look away and try to ignore what is happening amongst the dense black bush on the pubes - which, gratefully, partially hides the tasty sexual assault of very, very lustful man performing a top-notch vigorous sexual intercourse with a fellow smaller male victim; the three Lan Wang Jis passionately made love to a rather unresponsive and whiny Wei Ying, who complains that he his hips are sore and his back aches from being held up and open for too long, while having his rosebud drilled, flooded with another man's semen, fucked threeways, gushing again with more warm and gooey seed, lovingly raped repeatedly with extensive pistoning of hips into a tight, hot hole, and blasted with thirty ejaculations of thick, creamy spermy milk, amidst groans, howls and roars of orgasmic pleasures from the assailants. Wei Ying felt a bit of pain but that subsided soon after, because he's used to getting fucked by his husband, so he hummed some old folksongs, looked at his surroundings in boredom, picked his nose, then the ears, flicking clumps of wax and mucus away without care, stared at the neatly folded piles of his robes and pants in amazement, and just how perfectly vertical the ransacked, then re-arranged, rolls of fabrics were - he is bored while being raped repeatedly by the bandits that look like his husband, until his belly is full of those imposters' seed, leaking like mini-waterfalls each time a very excited and satisfied penis pulls out, before the next man takes his place between Wei Ying's spread legs, inserts a giant, jerking, over six-incher monster snake to replicate the copulating action again and again.

"Hurry up, kind sirs, I still need to run to town to buy some groceries," Wei Ying calls out with a heavy, disinterested sigh, and then squirms a bit, when he hears an audible squirt deep inside his rectum, and a loud, heartfelt, 'Nnnngh!' from someone shaking his hips wildly against his split buttocks.

.

There is a weird sign at the entrance gates to the town, and it states that all Lan-kin are allowed to pass by without prejudice and fear of suspicion, whereas all Wei-kin must deposit their pants at the station lockers by the gates and go through a physical examination.

“Ahh! Ahh! Ahh! Senior Guard Lan! How can you do this! Nnngh! Fucking a visitor who is patronizing your town... like this! Ahh! How shameless can you all be?!”

Wei Ying was lifted from the ground as soon as he lost his pants, and two strong, calloused hands grasped and cupped his springy buttocks, then held him tight against a Lan Wang Ji's chest. His legs were, expectedly, spread-eagled, and not shockingly, three Lan Wang Jis crowded his exposed, vulnerable loins and lovingly attacked his genitals with such vigour, that Wei Ying screamed upon receiving a legendary threeway oral sex, and forcibly ejaculated shortly thereafter. As he nnnh'd and aaahn'd like a sexy vixen in heat and in the throes of god-tiered ecstasy, he tried to back away by wiggling his hips in that direction - only to have that strong, pulsating penis fucking his behind way, way, deeper than ever possible, until his unclothed belly bulged with a bump reminiscent of a mushrooming cockhead. Alarmed, he wiggled his hips to the front to escape the rapist plundering his ass, and to his dismay, willingly gave wider access to the three Lans who happily - without showing an ounce of emotion on their rigid facial expressions - licked and lapped and suckled then tenderly yet eagerly attacked his penis and scrotum, in an all-out frontal sexual assault that left Wei Ying dying-living-dying in screams and unrestrained moans.

Unable to run, Wei Ying started to sob in his helplessness at the situation, and was forced to alternate between getting a juicy fuck that left his rosebud blossoming to full bloom, full of slick juices and leaking cum from too many excited one-two accidental spurts - and having his penis sucked into a vacuum that made him roll his eyes to the back, have his sensitive foreskin pulled back and the glans molested with three tongues at once, then have his testicles' modesty outraged by lips that refused to stop grazing and nibbling at the quivering sweet man-eggs, drawing blood and honeyed fluids in with each impassioned swallow, down, down into the oral cavities and throats of two servicing men; each lovingly pleased testicle tugged in their own separate ways to milk its contents until nothing but spermless fluids were left.

“Sir, his penis glans is very engorged, heavy and twitching abnormally, as though it is alive. It could be harbouring contraband or even illegal organisms inside. I shall take a sounding stick covered with pearly bumps to examine the insides of this man’s urethra, and the mini-camera at the end shall show if something is hiding inside the man’s prostate.”

“Sir, his right testicle is larger than the left. It does not conform to the standards of the Lan’s Perfection. The two of us shall bring out our vibrators and vibrate each testicle at different pressures, frequencies and angles. We will enlarge the left one to the right size, and push the right one higher to the base of the penis, to have the perfect twin set of testicles. Compliance of testicle sizes is a must for entrance into our town, after all.”

“Sir, his anus is fluffy, softened and well-used, and I can feel the seed of others sloshing inside his rectum from his past lovemakings, and they’re still warm. We need to investigate the nature of these seeds, as they may contain diseases or genetic material disallowed by our laws. As part of border control, I shall use my vaccinated cock to scrape out the semen, and we’ll examine the residues under a microscope to validate this.”

Senior Guard Lan listened to his subordinates’ report and watched, with intense, hungry eyes, at how Wei Ying was increasingly violated and raped against his will. He simply nodded with a ‘Mn’ and waved the junior Lan guards to proceed.

“Wei xiansheng , keep your hips up and spread your legs wider. You must complete the investigations before you enter the town’s gates, otherwise we’ll confiscate your belongings and kick you out into the mountains with your name added to the blacklist,” he remarked without gentleness in his voice. Wei Ying stifled a wail and sniffled loudly, as he obeyed like a scolded child - because he didn’t want to run afoul with the law -, and kept his crotch wide open for repeated attacks by all manners of Lan Wang Jis, and willingly let himself be deflowered, molested, raped again and again by the guards that thronged around him to have a taste of his unmistakable, fertile sweetness.

.

Bow-legged, deliciously violated from the inside out, sexually flushed from head to toe, and with an uncomfortable pulsating ache in the lower body around the pelvic region - Wei Ying hiccuped and rubbed his cheeks angrily and staggered to the markets. He was pantless because they were soiled from the previous encounter with the bandits (that left a very, very deep stain that couldn’t be washed by a normal rinse in the water, by the way) and deemed as a biohazard, and so, were seized upon entry. He didn’t file a formal complaint, though, because the Senior Guard understood the importance of the basket of fabrics that bore his clan’s insignia imprint, and bought the entire basket for five gold nuggets, that is, five times the normal price Wei Ying usually asked for.

Just as Wei Ying started daydreaming about the kinds of wines he could buy with the handful of precious gold pieces, he chanced upon a vegetable seller by the street.

“How much for these potatoes?” Wei Ying casually asked while jiggling his heavy money pouch, as he browsed the man’s wares of fresh produce and dried herbs. The seller, who looks exactly like his husband - therefore pleasant to the eyes and elicited a smile from Wei Ying -, replied curtly, “Five fucks for an armful.”

Wei Ying stared idiotically, then did double take. He stammered and cursed, how could people trade using sex as currency, or did he hear incorrectly. There, the laoban said, and pointed at a huge red cloth banner that hung over the market stalls - it stated clearly that due to an inexplicable announcement by the higher-ups, the vendors would trade normally with Lan-kin using normal money, and use fucks for Wei-kin. Wei Ying balked at that and nearly wanted to walk out in frustration, shaking his fist in fury at the unfairness of this world - this dream.

“Wei Ying,” said the very, very familiar and heart-throbbing voice - hairs stood up on the younger man’s arms -, “One fuck is one round of sex, and it doesn’t matter who climaxes in the end. I will be gentle, so please, buy my potatoes for five fucks.”

The vegetable seller looked rather sexy, with half of his robes sliding down to reveal a sculptured, sweat-beaded torso, bronzed skin, and one adorable pink nipple poking out from the hem of the garment.

“Nnngh. I’ve had too much sex today, laoban . One fuck, otherwise my ass will split and I will be a cripple for life.”

“.... Four fucks. It would make me very happy if we can have a quick romp at the back of this stall, away from prying eyes, and I promise to make you feel very, very good. Plus a bag of chillies.”

“... Ahhh, you know I love chillies! How dare you! Nnnnh! Two! Two fucks is all I can do! Look at my legs, they’re quaking from overexertion, and can you see all the milky white stuff leaking from between them? I cannot bear to be slammed hard against the wall or the dirty ground any more than to part with my favourite chillies!”

“... Three fucks, then, Wei Ying. You are the light to my life, the fire in my heart. Please, Wei Ying, let me fuck you three times, and you can have the potatoes, chillies, and a brand new jar of Emperor Smiles that’s just arrived in stock last night.”

“How heartless can you be, Mister Lan Wang Ji! You must understand that I’m defending my dignity and health with my life right now, for good reasons, because of my pained, pitiful state! I’ve been gangbanged by my husbands and raped by bandits, then I’ve undergone a very invasive body check-up by the town guards. Have mercy, and let me have just the potatoes with two fucks! They’re all wrinkly, dried, and sprouting buds anyway, they’ll go bad soon if I don’t buy them up!”

“Two and a half. Potatoes, chillies, and two jars of Emperor Smiles. Take it or leave it.”

“Eh? What’s with the change of atmosphere-- half? How does one have half a fuck?”

“Do you want to try it out? I’m a very gentle lover, that’s why my vegetables grow so well under my green-fingers’ care.”

Wei Ying thought that he'd struck a hard bargain, and this one-night stand with a stranger who looked like his husbands - and a notch better, because Lan laoban started to flex his muscles and sent sizzling, romantic heavy-lidded, pouty looks that pressed all the right buttons upon Wei Ying's hyperactive sex reflexes -, this vegetable seller looked like a tempting, marvellously sexy keeper, after all. He'd hooked a big, tasty Lan fish, and he's reeling him in, fast.

“Deal.”

As promised, Wei Ying was swept off his feet and bridal-carried to the back of the vegetable stall, where a mattress was waiting. The sex was more than a miracle from the gods or a gift from the Heavens, because Wei Ying had never experienced such amazing sex, powerful hip thrusts, a very hard and enduring arousal that could never back down, sweet kisses, manly roaming grasps, skilled lips and tongue, from tender foreplay and until the end of the mother of all orgasmic climaxes - all at once - that made him sing and cry for his dear life, mourning the past because why, why didn't he find this perfect stallion lover earlier, who has such greatness in his sexual prowess and for pleasing lovers in bed, who knows how to touch and pleasure the partner until kingdom come, edge forever until Wei Ying exploded, twenty ejaculations each, into stars and galaxies soaring higher than the known Nirvanas. Between powerful creaking and tasty moans of a man being sexually ravaged and devoured, Wei Ying would learn how divinely sex is with a superior version of a Lan Wang Ji the vegetable seller who also doubled as a hard-working, body-building farmer.

Two fucks wasn't enough and he wished he'd asked for more.

At least the extra half-fuck was worth it, though.

.

He still had to buy minced pork and a broom, also six cup noodles, amongst other things in the shopping list handed by his husbands. Wei Ying wonders what other offers Butcher Lan and Merchant Lan have that he could willingly exchange by selling his body. Armed with the knowledge and experience of how nice it feels to fuck a Lan Wang Ji, let alone multiples of them, he starts to hatch a naughty plan to catch ‘em all and cheat his husbands - technically speaking - in a shopping spree of sexual apocalyptic proportions.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 189

Interlude:

Since one trolly AO3 user said so, and I added a few more tags that automatically appeared in my search list :-)

Wei Ying dreamt about walking through the forests with nothing on except a pair of sandals. Fortunately, there were no mosquitoes biting his ass, but one giant hornet flew by and landed on his scrotum without his knowledge while he foraged around a bit. He found some blueberries amongst the bushes by the side of the hiking trail, at the same time the hornet stung his balls and left them bluer than those berries, and Wei Ying sang the blues in long miserable howls of pain and heartfelt screeches of torment throbbing from within his insect-bitten testicles.

Furious at being bested by a flying bug, Wei Ying rubbed hot fat tears off his eyes and cheeks, then grabbed pebbles from the ground and tried to throw at the fleeing hornet. It buzzed and buzzed, higher to the skies and disappeared into the dense foliage, so Wei Ying ended up littering his pretty hiking trail with sharp stones that would wreck the feet of any barefooted passers-by that dare to tread the path.

The awful pain from stung balls had to be addressed, somehow, so he headed downhill and ran towards a nearby river to wash down, and hopefully, cool the swollen bits between his legs with a few rinses of fresh, icy-cool springwater cascading down from mountain peaks. Sadly, when he reached the river, it was dry as desert with a sign written by a blue pencil that the waterway was under maintenance; however, the sign also directed all visitors to a nearby platform by the mud-caked riverside, where an outdoor shower had been installed. It looked exactly the same as the showerhead he'd bought from Jinshan's supermarket, so he gingerly stepped on the concrete plate, pressed a red button to activate a Water spell, which drew water from nearby sources and piped it through the lotus pod-shaped outlet.

Wei Ying enjoyed a refreshing shower then, and made sure to wash his hairy balls properly and let the water trickle through between his pitifully swollen testicles. The drain at the corner of the shower slab clogged up with Wei Ying's hair - from his scalp and from his infinitely dense bushes on the pubes -, but Wei Ying couldn't care less, because his comfort mattered, and he was sure some unfortunate public janitorial worker would be tasked to pick up those matted pieces of hair out of the drain anyway.

With his less-hairy testicles chilled and cooled, Wei Ying returned to the hiking trail wearing only his sandals, and he skipped and hopped merrily along his way. He chanced upon a huge tray of freshly baked bread for no particular reason other than this was simply one absurd part of his ludicrous dreams, so he crouched down and began to tear off chunks for a nice snack. True to his feral nature, he left crumbs and half-chewed bits all over the grass, so future victimized barefoot hikers would have to contend with sharp stones and food on the ground, to no concern of Wei Ying.

Then, with his testicles returning to normal sizes, Wei Ying scratched his crotch out of bad habit and to examine the family jewels' condition - they were all right now. The self-touches had an unintended consequences, and Wei Ying became a little hard after rubbing his penis in front of the warm, fragrant, mouth-watering tray of bread.

So, in the end, Wei Ying decided to masturbate himself with the hapless bread, and fucked the whole pillow-like fluff until the tray became bent and twisted from too many manly thrusts, and the poor underappreciated serving of baked food was pulverized into smithereens.

Then, Wei Ying snorted in his wet-dream climax, turned over to the other side of the bed, and continued to snore and hump the semen-stained purple pillow.

Notes for the Chapter:

A short interlude because one trolly AO3 user challenged me to tag this fic with "pebble on the ground, bread crumbs, blue pencil, too many hairs in the shower drain". So here you go.

We'll return to the regular scheduled programming once this wave of trollsomeness annoyance passes.

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 190

The harrowing dream of haggling for one's shredded dignity and innocence, in a noisy mundane village market, like housewives arguing over the prices of chicken and vegetables in the stalls - was disturbing yet exciting at the same time, and Wei Ying takes that as a signal that his body had become overwhelmingly sexually frustrated over aeons of celibacy, despite the unlimited access to sex toys in his own bedroom; he'd stoop so low to get a taste of Lan Wang Ji-flavoured sex - and Wei Ying groaned and shrugged at the sheer idiocy of the idea.

He barked out a heart-broken laughter and sat on his bed, alone, at somewhere between two to three in the morning. His purple cushion is thoroughly soaked from his wet dreams, and he knew very well that the 'son' hiding beneath the pubes had done tasty things to his asshole in the last few hours of disturbed dreaming. He stared longingly at an open box of P-Cool Mega Collection sex toys - dildoes that shapeshift to his desires, vibrator eggs in all sizes, bottles of high-grade non-biodegradable lube, fancy glitzy and mechanized anal plugs, sounding devices that would kill a mortal man (and he is an immortal, after all), plus an assortment of other crazy stuff he'd amassed over the years. However, sadly, none of those cold plastic toys could ever replace Lan Zhan's hot lovin' in the flesh that he vividly remembered every night, tormenting him into such sexy nightmares in his slumber.

The end of the ninth day post-awakening by the husband was just around the corner, still, Wei Ying had to be patient whilst the much-awaited reunion eluded him. He flicked his fingers to bring up a holo-screen, then checked his emails, browsed a few porn clips, and searched for mentions of himself in the vast, vast universe of ErNet's social media. Eventually, after a few minutes of creepy glowing blue and green walls of texts and pictures dimly lighting up his face and the bedroom, faintly, Wei Ying decided to go for a walk and get some fresh air - maybe that'll clear his mind and lighten up the dark circles under his eyes for a bit.

He scooted off the bed and undressed, then kicked away his soiled pyjamas; some unfortunate servant would pick them up anyway. The temperature automatically adjusted for the comfort of His Highness The Great And Magnificent And Venerable Wei Wuxian The Awesome Dark Arts Grandmaster And Creator Also God Plus King Of Kings; so Wei Ying trotted around naked except a soft, flimsy pashmina shawl draped over his shoulders just because he felt the need to look a little elegant should his royal subjects find him wandering around listlessly. His bedroom looked just like any sterile interstellar bunker room in an UFO-shaped mothership the size of continents - a bed, table and chairs, cupboards and cabinets, with an attached bathroom and few other ultra-modern furnishings and fixtures for comfortable, convenient 51st-century living. Automatons stand ready at the door-hatch to serve their masters, and droids patrol the hallways periodically to ensure the security of all occupants on board in the dead of the night - biologically speaking, of course, since in outer space, there is no differentiation between night and day when one travels through the cosmos without regard for planetary specifics.

Wei Ying simply walked through the door, which opened upon visual and high-tech recognition of the resident owner of the mothership, and he sauntered through those long, windy hallways, in search of something fun to do; but first, he thought of heating up a cup noodle because his stomach was rumbling in complaints - he has more than five meals a day, and yet, his love for snacks has not diminish, just as his desire to return to Lan Zhan's arms soon, hopefully.

.

The young Sun shone promisingly in the heart of the infinitely dark and vast space between planetary bodies revolving around the solar system. Being an immortal - and a very special one too, since he is the Creator -, he didn't need to suit up in special gear to have his little space walk to point his ass at the ball of fire, and fart at it to give it a boost in burning power; the quintessential sign of a budding young star that had great destinies in store, where it needed to shine brighter than ever to start new lives, new existences, new worlds in a expanding void of a corner the Milky Way. Wei Ying's fart was, in essence, God's breath to bring new stars to life from their nebulous cradles and fuel them to maturity.

With the Sun's health taken care of, he went around in his faster-than-light policing of each birthed planet to keep a vigil on their progress. He flew through space wearing only a shawl tied around his neck and shoulders like Superman's mantle, flashing his naughty bits to all aliens drifting by in their own spaceships, who passed by out of curiosity to observe a brand new solar system in the making, only to jump away into hyperspace in horror at the vile sight of wild, ungroomed curls from chest to navel, and from that navel to the whole black oily bush between the legs. Wei Ying laughed merrily and jerked his hips in defiance, proud and arrogant of the weapon of mass panic standing tall from his crotch.

The act of shaking his hips in vacuum felt a little kinky - since there was no air in outer space, his penis naturally bloated up, grew tremendously and hardened into a permanent state of arousal even without really feeling the need to jack off. He thought the experience was akin to attaching a penis pump to his member, then one thing led to another, that resulted in Wei Ying furiously masturbating while floating past planets in the process of formation from stardust and bits of rocks.

He stared forlornly at Saturn's ring - he'd painted a single solid yellow-brown ring around it out of laziness, and realized that there should've been multiple rings. Oh, he thought, the husband would certainly go into a fit if he found out that the universe, at least Saturn, wasn't depicted as it should be before the supernova. After some creative thinking, Wei Ying zipped around the huge gas giant to figure out how to splice the large monolayer ring into smaller circles - and a light bulb blinked above his head, figuratively speaking.

Wei Ying squealed in delight and started to orbit the gas giant at incredible speeds. Soon, he was literally skating on the crumbly but decently thick layer of dust and bits of rocks like a highway surrounding the planet. Once he'd gained enough momentum, he lowered his body while cruising at those insane speeds - until he was literally facing down to the said ring and his body hovered parallel to it. Unsurprisingly, Wei Ying's super-godly penis sliced through the ring at those blazing speeds; barely enough to dip through, but it did a fine job of carving a nice, relatively dustless lane into the ring, just like how one puts a finger into a bucket of sudsy soap water, and run it across the surface to cut foamy mass. Any mortal's penis would be shredded instantly by the sharp rocks and vicious edges of space dust, but Wei Ying's penis isn't made of mortal flesh. He 'Ahhh's with delight at the bumpy, scraping and tickling sensations raining upon his excited, turgid organ, like skimming across a pool of warm gritty sand that feels like feather-like whipped cream to him, travelling in speeds faster than light.

Soon, Wei Ying orgasmed from the wonderful sensations caressing his penis, and he'd drawn a few rings out of the initial solid one around Saturn. His semen would draft aimlessly in deep space, clumping up bits of dust and rock to form larger asteroids; some of which would end up in the belt between Mars and Jupiter someday. With so much sexually pleasant work left to do, especially in fixing up the flaws in the laws of physics and obvious mistakes and misses during the creation of the solar system, Wei Ying took a very laid-back approach in solving the problems that he started in the first place.

Speaking of Jupiter, Wei Ying turned his attention to the largest planet of the solar system. It was filled with rolling clouds of thunder and lightning, and it lacked its distinguishing trait. Ah, he thought again, if he missed that feature, then sure the husband would scold him to no end.

Jupiter's giant red spot was missing - no biggie, he could remedy that with a fiery intercourse with faster-than-light pistoning hips to the core of that planet, to cause a volcanic meltdown and tremendous eruption to burn the cloudy atmosphere in the vicinity until everything turned crimson. Then, he thought of ejaculating straight to the Martian grounds next door, fertilizing the iron-rich soil and farting out more flammable gases to its thin atmosphere, so that an ancient colony of Martian organisms would evolve and walk the face of that small red planet, before getting wiped out just in time for the first dinosaurs to walk on Planet Earth - his true home.

Wei Ying received a message from his holo-phone tucked inside the thick bush of pubic hair, where the multi-talented, multi-tasking and multi-capable Ernie resides. It was almost dinnertime, and the final meet-up he had with the husband was still stuck in the Soul Restoration Cave in another dimension, where the family cloud drive is locked and hidden.

He smiles and licks his lips in anticipation. It's time for showdown!

.

At the very least, one can appreciate the diligence and care shown by Wei Ying in re-creating the solar system after it went supernova caused by the husband's inopportune and overpowered, panicked fart in the heart of Jinshan villages, Middle Kingdom circa 2000 B.C. He did spend more than four and a half billion years to atone for the glaring lack of oversight in balancing their incredible godly powers, which has since been revised and corrected with the husband's reincarnation and rebirth in a process of soul transmigration. During that time, he and his royal subjects, all of whom are related to him and the husband, took on the challenge to rebuild what had been blown to bits, as one happy and united extended family. Following the grand scheme of the universe's evolution and lifecycle, things got a bit tricky towards the last few hours of Lan Zhan's nine-day confinement, or hatching - translated into real time as tens of millions of years of Earth's life; an infinitesimal portion of the planet's life, really - because not only Wei Ying had to deal with a sudden spurt in Life's evolution and diversification upon the Mortal Realm from the first dinosaurs to the first mammals and then making sure to deliver a meteor hurtling to the surface at exactly 65 million years prior; but also, in the final hours, he realized that there are holes to patch, unassembled parts to fix and et cetera ad naseum ; it turned out that the entire solar system had been shoddily made with poor workmanship, so Wei Ying had to repair and mend those bits to ensure that he, and Lan Zhan, will have a near-Perfect new beginning after pressing on the 'Resume' button on their lives.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 191

Wei Ying ran for his dear life, because he was late for the appointment of a lifetime. Oh no, oh no, he gasped to himself, if he left the husband waiting at the front of the Soul Restoration Cave, like a man released from prison and has nowhere to go, what would that man do and how would he feel?

He'd been careless in his anxiety to meet up and finally be with the husband after more than four and half billion years of living in relative solitude. Wei Ying had been engrossed with designing then assembling a dating sim game built into a hyper-virtual reality suite that comes with a full body-suit plugged to ErNet and plenty of sexual appendages wiggling non-stop both inside out, because he'd somewhat fallen in love with Vegetable Seller-cum-Farmer Lan, Butcher Lan and Merchant Lan from the dreams he's been having, then transferred and brought to life using 51st-century computing technology and artificial intelligence. It worked like an online dating game, actually, that he would play through several routes, with daunting quizzes about relationships and romance, with the ability to choose action and conversation options to dictate the gameplay, and of course, to connect and interact with very handsome and sexy Lan Wang Jis-que avatars through animated cutscenes, video calls or messaging using holo-phones, and find ways to achieve his one hundred percents, and explore all sorts of endings the game has to offer. The game was clearly rated R18, and intended for mature audiences, because it was launched not long after, free-to-download and filled with yaoi and hentai elements that left Wei Ying and zillions of customers sexually satisfied in more ways than one. Visual and audio cues were transmitted through a holographic helmet, while tactile and other forms of sensory stimulations were delivered via the body suit. Wei Ying became obsessed, even addicted to the game controlled and nurtured using Ernie's awesome digital capabilities, that he lived through countless lifetimes meeting, falling in romantic love, and having endless sex with the virtual Lan Wang Jis that checked every single box on Wei Ying's list of must-haves in the characteristics of perfect boyfriends and husbands. Often, he played harem routes, and engaged in double, triple and multiple dating and marriages, then found himself in virtual orgies with three or more digital dicks sawing into this well-abused and flooded rosebud, while his own genitals were constantly played and pleased by the body suit's sexy appendages, kept swollen and engorged, overly excited and leaking wifely cum for immeasurable periods of time, as long as the game remained live in the eternal ErNet.

Wei Ying nearly sobbed in panic when he realized the time, and disconnected from the game after what seemed to be ages since he'd last climbed out of the smelly, cum-soaked and sweaty body suit. He had to shower and perfume himself - after all, he could not embarrass himself further by not making decent, proper first impressions. During bathtime, he suddenly thought that perhaps, Lan Zhan would want to make sweet love to him during their reunion and the subsequent first night together - it's like the night of one's wedding all over again -, so he had to go all out to douche his asshole with the best 21st-century products to cleanse whatever filth that was sitting inside him after days, even weeks of suffering from constipation from living a sedentary life, drowning in the dark enclosed pleasures of that dating sim game as a living couch potato. As if that wasn't enough, he chose to overdose himself with bottles of enemas stuck to his anus, and that resulted in an explosive stomach-churning diarrhea that lasted forever - but at least, in the end, he was clean where it mattered most.

While riding on a very unsteady Bichen through outer space and through interdimensional portals and fluxes, with many near-misses and near-crashes because it'd been an eternity since he flew on the husband's sword transport - he wanted to impress the husband that he had taken good care of his bulky ivory and sacred family sword, and that he could still wield it, which is a symbol of their shared cultivation connection -, he screeched in alarm because he remembered belatedly that he should buy a gift as a 'get well' gesture to wish the husband a speedy recovery to normalcy; thus, he swooped down to the nearest space-supermarket and wasted even more time browsing, window-shopping, haggling before finally deciding on a fruit basket. He knew Lan Zhan loved succulent, exotic imported fruits fresh off the farms, so he paid premium prices for just-arrived stocks of tropical mangoes, pineapples, seasonal apples, oranges, kiwis, bananas and whatnots, arranged into a colourful and pretty spiralling mountain-like display that symbolizes prosperity and good health. Unsurprisingly, he forgot his wallet, so he asked the cashier manning the counter if he, a Lan Wang Ji-derivative, would accept fucks as currency.

Fortunately for Wei Ying, the cashier-cum-store manager had played the dating sim that Wei Ying programmed and put up for free downloads in ErNet, so he knew exactly what the young, teary-eyed and red-cheeked man was on to. The purchase was wrapped and bagged properly, then set aside, and Manager Lan put up a 'Closed' sign on his counter - leaving countless of customers complaining -, then dragged the grateful Wei Ying to the broom closet where the janitors' stuff were kept, where both men undressed and then engaged in tasty rounds of sexual intercourses until Wei Ying was impregnated by a stallion, buffed-up and very, very desirable guy that was greater than Farmer Lan, Butcher Lan and Merchant Lan combined. Wei Ying became very agitated and conflicted - on one hand, he had a husband to fetch from the prison-cave, on the other, his heart throbbed so hard and his anus sucked in the delicious over seven-inch monstrous snake and refused to let go because this Lan Wang Ji's boner was just too tasty, too sexy, too virile and fluttering in and out too vigorously, until Wei Ying's pelvic insides relented, yielded and instinctively grew a womb and vagina in place of the rectum to welcome another man's seed to conceive a Perfecter Than Perfect Baby of Manager Lan. The cashier himself went wild between Wei Ying's buttocks and mounted the smaller man multiple times and lost himself in repeated rape-y ruts, until his hot, rich fertile sperm spilled carelessly, too excitedly, massaged by Wei Ying's rectum-turned-vagina like a cocksleeves tightening up around the helpless but super-thick penis, with plenty of fleshy folds and and kissy cervix at the mouth of a waiting womb, milking the phallic angry-red twitching organ for what it's worth - ten fucks and a half for a fruit basket; the delirious, lustful Manager Lan roared and howled with great pleasure along with a grimacing Wei Ying's screeches and screams of orgasmic eruptions, and the larger sexier man made sure that his seed is properly pumped in and sown deep into the smaller man's womb, that many babies had been made and fathered by the incredible lovemaking of ten and a half fucks to pay for the purchase; he continued to crush Wei Ying beneath him, mating-pressed the man-slut and pistoned deep into the lovely, semen-flooded canal because Wei Ying's hole felt very, very good for his steel-hard penis, and he was still hard, unsatisfied and had nine and a half fucks to go, and he demanded sweet kisses from the younger man and let his cashier register-calloused fingers roam and rake hungrily to play with Wei Ying's body like keying the cash register, counting money, or more typically, plucking guqin strings, to heighten the younger man's pleasures to frenzied levels, causing the younger man to gasp and moan for more, more, please fuck this weak and flawed man more - that Wei Ying's body sang praises for the Manager that had done what no other real men could, and he spread his legs wider, raised his hips higher, used his fingers to pull his butt-cheeks and open up his well-abused anal sphincter and the puckered rosebud, until one could stare straight into the abyss of Wei Ying's asshole, dripping and convulsing with seed, man-juice and other bodily fluids, and welcomed Manager Lan to pillage and plunder the defenceless, bare-opened ruined maidenhood with his entire passion and soul.

The broom closet in the nondescript supermarket located somewhere between dimensions remained locked for hours, even days and longer. The fruit basket ended up costing more than hundreds of fucks, but Wei Ying didn't really keep count of the price because it was worth every orgasm.

.

Wei Ying had plenty more tasty sexual encounters with superior Lan Wang Jis on the way to his destination; the closer he was to the family's cloud drive, where the Soul Restoration Cave resides, the higher quality of Lan Wang Jis were found, because they were all drawn to their First Fathers' memories, the Grand Patriarch and Matriarch of their society, like all filial clones and descendents of the great Lan species and family.

One, in particular, happened when Bichen sputtered and coughed out smoke, to declare that the four and a half billion-year old sword needed a break after having rudely woken up to plough through hyperspace by the man who was married to its master and had become sworn soulmates-cum-cultivation partners. Wei Ying sobbed then, because he didn't know how to fix a sword that didn't originate from his ancestral clan, and he was really, really running out of time. With a stroke of genius luck, or rather, with hidden entities working behind the scenes with lewd, lascivious intentions orchestrating the entire fiasco of grand proportions, a rather intimidating shirtless and perfectly sculpted-body Mechanic Lan happened to chance upon the teary-eyed man sulking next to an asteroid, and offered to fix Bichen with an extra service of oiling up the blade, for a mere five fucks. Wei Ying had nothing else but his body to sell, so he agreed, and five marvellous rounds of sex that left the younger man with a blank mind, orgasmic hangovers, and spewing seed stupidly from his twitching, lively penis, because his nervous system had been electrocuted by too many tremendously satisfying and anus-blossoming rounds of sex that made his prostate sparkle with stars - after five fucks' worth of service, Bichen was kidnapped along with its drooling, drunkenly laughing wife-of-owner, and he revealed his true identity - he wore a half-mask, looked absolutely dashing in his black and white suit, bridal-carried his prize, and spirited off Wei Ying to smuggle that tasty wife of all Lan Wang Jis to their homeworld.

The Planet of the Clouds, a secretive, fabled world that had never been seen by the naked eye nor by deep-space exploration satellites and scouting vessels, is the motherlode of all Lan Wang Jis in the entire Kingdom and company, that not even the First Fathers knew much of, other than hearsays and speculations from gossipy patrons in teahouses and in the back alleys of homes of noisy housewives. The Lan-kin had existed for nearly an eternity, and yet, their numbers continue to grow modestly in line with normal general population birth rates. The brightest, smartest, strongest - basically the best of the best, the cream of the Lan crop - such Lan Wang Ji-clone individuals had never stepped forth and contribute spectacularly to the Kingdom and company, simply because they decided to pack up, migrate, and live in this secluded island of paradise the shape of a cloudy gassy giant planet, and pursue their scholarly, technological, intellectual, physical, sociocultural, aesthetic and artisanal interests peacefully, also, living out simply, humble lives that included waking up at five in the morning, sleeping at nine at night, with lots of meditation and sweeping the floor with straw brooms throughout the day. It is a world that mirrors and expanded view of the Cloud Recesses, where majestic snow-capped mountains and incredible mist-covered cascading waterfalls reigned, with picturesque foundations of river gorges and lush evergreen valleys and fields of crops, vegetable farms, fruit orchards, virgin forests and natural waterways.

Wei Ying regained consciousness in this beautiful yet cruel world as a refugee with nothing on his body except the clothes on his back. He woke up in the heart of a large city inhabited by zillions of superior Lan Wang Jis, lying on the ground and surrounded by curious onlookers. It was an unnerving experience to be stared at, rudely, by people of the same faces though with very, very sexy bods and of a variety of abilities, magical capabilities, physiques and glaringly, lustfulness, as evidenced by the sight of some individuals furiously masturbating while gawking at his frail, vulnerable form. After asking a few logical questions and getting the logical answers that he needed, he knew he had to survive and escape this world before resuming his journey to fetch his much-missed husband from the Soul Restoration Cave.

Wei Ying started the same way as with how he usually starts when he finds himself in brand new places with no money or fame - at the bottom of society's ladder. He opted to undress and begged for alms in the form of fucks by the roadside, and fortunately, he was very much cherished by the Lan Wang Jis that crowded around him - and their numbers swelled as fast as news spread that the one and only, the prized Wei Wuxian of all Lan-kin's dreams, was taking up temporary residence in their world. Soon, Wei Ying worked his way up, by offering services to residence at five fucks per hour, working in fast food joints for fast fucks at ten per hour, then found himself some managerial positions and eventually, unsurprisingly, given how brilliant Wei Ying has always been, he earned top spot working as an office-cum-prostitute boy in a C-suite of a spiralling megatower, clinching the position as a top earner of six hundred fucks for each hour of hired professional consultation. In no time, he was noticed by the ruling Council of Lan of that planet, and he was elevated to a status of a goddess, where he would spend his days with his legs spread open upon a pedestal in the greatest temple made of gold and diamonds, where the faithful queue up patiently in perfect lines to have their chance to worship Wei Ying's ass, engage in enough rounds of tasty fucks and non-stop penis-in-asshole sex, pay their tributes to their goddess in the currency of fucks, and father enough babies inside helpless Wei Ying to start new generations of fat healthy offsprings.

Even after years, centuries even millenia of non-stop sex with extremely desirable specimens of Lan Wang Jis, Wei Ying was left conflicted as his body evolved to readily, even greedily, accept all the wonderful penises and lovemaking gifted by those gentle Lan-kin. He fell in love with the trillions and more Lan Zhans he'd met in the Planet of the Clouds, orgasmed enough for countless lifetimes for a single male, and he was impregnated generously by his devout followers, which now included non-humans such as angels, dragons and all forms of admirable variations of the single husband individual he had in mind. He tried to struggle away to return to normalcy and the task at hand - his dear husband! -, but each time he did that, he was pulled back, enticed with the sweet calls of 'lao po, lao po , I'm your real husband and I want to make you feel good. Please open up your pussy and let this husband make the two of us feel very, very good down there', and Wei Ying could never refuse free fucks, so he returned to his king-sized pedestal bed, and allowed himself to be mounted, raped, loved, sexually ravaged for nearly an eternity until his mind went blank again, his throat hoarse from howling with pleasure, his sweaty back seized from too much humping, his limbs ached from directionless flailing because he didn't know where to find salvation in his depraved state, and his sweet, sweet swollen and thoroughly abused rosebud spread far and wide to allow unrestrained penetration by happy penises competing to savour the taste of Wei Ying's honey and hot tightness; that tunnel of love eventually, joyfully evolved to a feminine version so that he had a man-vagina and a man-womb filled with swimming babies and wriggling clumps of sperms, yet penises continued to invade, pillage and plunder the insides, kissing the womb and greeting the babies tucked in their warm amniotic cradles within good mornings, good afternoons and good evenings with such eagerness and virility; that birth canal continued be filled, lubricated, gushing with countless men's seeds, the repeated thrusting, pounding and hard-fucking injecting more semen into the conquered womb, and Wei Ying cried out again and again, surrendering his body and soul to the best of the best Lan Wang Jis ever known to exist in the multiverse, lining up to have their taste of Wei Ying's purity and non-existent virginity, spending hours writhing, pumping rich man-milk inside lovely Wei Ying to fuck his lovely man-pussy until the young man sang goddess-like praises to bless the world and the inhabitants of the Planet of the Clouds with his sexual divinity.

Wei Ying would finally find a way to escape, through devious means after aeons of orgies with his favourite Lan Wang Jis, only to emerge out of the cocoon of deviated space-time two minutes later in real time. Wei Ying thought that two minutes felt too good, and his loins twitched with 'Yes'es in earnest agreement, and his ass loosened up to emit a wet, gurgly fart of spilled seeds to concur, because evidently, Wei Ying will never have enough sex with his husband and his lookalikes.

Two minutes, he told himself. Two minutes of a lifetime of sex with each trip into the space-time bubble where the Planet of the Clouds reside.

What are the chances that he'll ever come across such a great bargain?

Without a second thought, he undressed again and stowed his clothes and long-waiting Bichen behind another asteroid, then turned around, and dived back into his newfound favourite world with a loud squeal - naked, ass first, with his thighs spread wide and his puffy anus convulsing in excitement to welcome cities full of exemplary, superior and very, very desirable Lan Wang Jis with their hard, anticipating penises pointing skyward, for another round of worshipping of their new goddess hurtling like a meteor crashing to the surface.

Wei Ying will have many, many more fucks to go, before his lust is finally sated.

.

By the time Wei Ying finally reached the Soul Restoration Cave on a rectangular golden platform that resembled a Windows Folder icon that is their family's cloud drive, he sheathed Bichen to his belt and staggered and ran unsteadily to the mountain-like structure with his prized fruit basket in the arms, and sporting a pregnant belly not of the original Lan Zhan's, looking absolutely sweaty and wrecked down there, sexually flushed from head to toe like a drunken fool, and absolutely unpresentable to the Grand Patriarch that had been waiting for him for way too long. He didn't see Lan Zhan by the mouth of the cave, so he hurried inside and was greeted by a terrible, heartbreaking sight.

Lan Zhan hadn't been waiting Wei Ying like a good, obedient husband that he purported to be; he sat on a large sofa dragged from one of their shared memories, fully naked and sweaty, grunting rhythmically like a beast in heat that kept fucking anything warm, fleshy and with a hole within range - and there was plenty of 'em; Lucky Lan Zhan was having an orgy with a harem of those who had arrived first, and got first dibs on the husband's tasty bits. Wei er ge was busily engaged in loving deep french kisses with locked gazes with the husband, and that left Wei Ying red faced and very jealous; moaning Wei er ge happily bounced on Lan Zhan's crotch to ride them man to multiple sexual sunsets; Wei san ge and Wei didi each had found their prey faster than Wei Ying, and probably dragged the vulnerable husband back into the cave, pinned his body down, and each man and boy took their sweet time to lovingly attack his four-and-a-half-billion-year-old testicles with skilled fingers, lips and tongues. Worst of all, Uncle Wei, the rapist and dirty smelly criminal that devours children's innocence and sells the souls of people through deceit and trickery, happily roared with laughter and groans, lying beneath Lan Zhan with his huge hairy cock stuck into Lan Zhan's ass - Uncle Wei fucked Lan Zhan very, very hard and kept talking dirty to say sleazy things filled with sordid details of how tight Lan Zhan's ass was, and how beautiful Lan Zhan would look like if he carried babies like A-Ji every day, first thing in the morning at five o' clocks. A-Xian, on the other hand, squealed and shrieked like a monkey, because of the strange reason that he was allowed to sit on Lan Zhan's undulating and spasming six-pack abs, and with his little fingers, he enthusiastically drummed an energetic tune by flicking, pinching and tweaking the man's abused and puffy nipples. Beside the copulating and fornicating harem, A-Ji lowered his head and worked hard to wipe the floor stained with semen, pee and other unmentionable bodily fluids with a washcloth, while Uncle Lan stood by silently to observe, with gleaming interest in the eyes, of how the original Grand Patriarch reacted upon being sexually ravaged and assaulted by too many wives at once.

Semen-pregnant Wei Ying slowly walked into the cave - that foot-wide invisible barrier had dissipated -, and the young man was thoroughly disappointed that he'd been the last bird to catch the worm, and there weren't any worms left besides a terribly, terribly sated Lan Zhan, whose face was frozen in half-ecstasy, half-grimace, half-yawn, his hips shook very excitedly because Wei er ge sensed something was coming and squeezed his lower half of the body as he pushed his rump deeper then slammed against the delirious husband's crotch very hard, again and again, and the teenager and Wei boy picked up their pace in playing with Lan Zhan's swollen, wildly twitching testicles, and penile muscles contracted in tandem with how his sweaty, shivering back arched, fingers and toes curled but Wei da ge passionately slid his long forked tongue deep into Lan Zhan's throat and made oral sex much better than what went on in the nether regions - and Lan Zhan Hnnngh'd so loud that his raspy croaky voice echoed off the walls of the Soul Restoration Cave - and Wei Ying let out a weak sob of defeat, and ultimately, a lamentable loss that he would probably never recover from.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 192

The mother of all conundrums - at which point did Lan Zhan lose his virginity?

During the time he inhabited his first body? What of the bodies from past lifetimes? Or the current body in this lifetime?

Was it during his first sexual encounter with pervert neighbours at a very tender young age? His first wet dream? His first handjob from Xi Chen da ge in the Cloud Recesses? His first experience of having a dirty uncle's finger playing inside his anus? Or many years later, when he had his first, rather unsatisfying anal sex with Wei Ying behind some bushes in a forest that resulted in a disappointing premature ejaculation? What about the many firsts - the first oral sex, the first handjob, the first homosexual or even heterosexual he had with Wei Ying, during the various lifetimes that they'd experienced and lived through together? What about today, in his brand new transmigrated virgin body that had been jolted awake with sweet, sweet sexual intercourse and mind-blowing sex with a harem of Wei Ying-clones?

It was as mind-boggling as it was unsolvable.

Wei Ying knew, to his dismay and envy, that he hadn't been there for many of Lan Zhan's firsts, in many instances and iterations from different lifetimes. However, he was grateful that he had at least clinched one first, this round.

Lan Zhan's harem of four Wei siblings, the family of little A-Ji and A-Xian, and the ever-unseen four servants of the Negative Plane politely disengage themselves from serving their Grand Patriarch, wet squelches and schlicky sounds included, and promptly gave way to a red-carpet arrival for the Matriarch. They bowed and picked up their clothes, whispered hushed words amongst themselves, then quickly left - but not before stealing dirty glances at the man that looked in complete disarray; his hair was messy and stained with crusty white stuff, his robes looked torn and one sleeve slid off to reveal milky-white shoulders and a hairy nipple with bite marks on it, a bulging pregnant belly, and below, streaks of sticky white trickled down the legs, dirtied his scruffy shoes and the defiled the soil in the sacred Soul Restoration Cave. And a fruit basket that looked worse for wear, with few bruised contents after Wei Ying accidentally dropped it repeatedly when engaging in crazy monkey sex with other Lan Wang Jis he'd met along the way to the cave.

Lan Zhan looked no better, particularly since the sudden loss of his harem left him hanging in more ways than one, and his entire heaving and panting body was flushed to seven degrees of pinks and his sweat-covered skin glistened in the dim light of Twisty crystals embedded in the cave's pillars and walls. One very hard, very wanting, very lustful purple-red penis the length and girth of a man's bulging forearm stood tall and proud from its nest of curls, quivering desperately with unerupted molten pressure boiling from within; it does not hesitate to jerk back and forth, as though greeting its fated partner who stood just a couple of paces away.

"I woke up from a late afternoon nap a while ago, and found myself settling down well in this new body. Your clone-siblings came in around the time of the first humans on Planet Earth, three hundred thousand years ago. We spent some time together, since they didn't want me to feel alone, while waiting for your arrival. One thing led to another, and you saw the results," Lan Zhan started to explain, a dire need to explain the twisted and vulgar situation the couple found themselves in. He pretended to examine his fresh new, and already used body, such as checking his fingernails, brushing some semen stains off his skin, rubbing some fingerprints, hickeys and bite marks, twirling his hair and running fingers through them to rid himself of saliva threads and other icky stuff left inside - all done to avoid eye contact with the spouse, whom he believed to be terribly heartbroken and in all possibilities, even suicidal at the turn of events.

Several crucial moments passed, and finally a long, heavy sigh. Wei Ying walked to Lan Zhan and lowered himself so that he crouched next to the beloved husband. He seemingly joined Lan Zhan in a joint examination of the husband's new body; touching and counting fingers and toes, caressing the rosy skin with very healthy complexion on the chest and abdomen, sliding a palm and cupping the chin, tilting the taller man's gaze and then gingerly, shyly, timidly, Wei Ying leaned in to give his hubby a ‘it’s good to see you again’ kiss. In a wifely fashion, Wei Ying maneuvered his clothed body to straddle the man on the sofa, and kept his gaze locked to the now-embarassed husband’s, and he left his arms around the older man’s shoulders in a loose embrace. Wei Ying was sad, and Lan Zhan, determined to cheer up the wife, somehow.

“Wei Ying, I’m sorry I didn’t protect my virginity enough to give it to you. But I saved the best for the last,” Lan Zhan murmured as he returned the embrace gently and guided the younger man’s hips to rest on his crotch, so this is desperately quivering penis had a chance to lean its engorged, sagging weight against the sweet, sweet curve of Wei Ying’s ass, and take a breather.

Wei Ying was already peppering sweet kisses on Lan Zhan’s forehead, temples and the tips of the reddened ears, whispering words of Sorry and Thank-Yous - forbidden words that were only used under special circumstances such as this time. “Mmm? What is it?” he asked huskily and sent the tip of his tongue swirling into Lan Zhan’s tenderly assaulted shell of ear.

The husband shivered, of course. Nothing could energize and set his desires afire than the man named Wei Wuxian, and he felt another waves of stirrings, rising heat and skyrocketing hunger roiling from within. He gasped and moaned and Wei Ying’s gentle skinship as their embrace became tighter until they were sharing breaths, warming each other through their skin contact, and lips and fingers carelessly touching and grazing every inch that could be touched. “I haven’t orgasmed a single time yet... since gaining this new body... from eating the 3d-printed biscuit that you made. There is... three hundred thousand years’ worth of sperm... that I cannot wait to release,” Lan Zhan said, and proposed to his wife in an impassioned plea, “Wei Ying, may I cum inside you?”

It was such a simple request, yet so clear and meaningful, that Wei Ying really couldn’t refuse. It also signified that whatever terrible things that Lan Zhan may see on Wei Ying’s body - the pregnant belly and the messy, untidy condition -, was duly put aside for the sake of their loving marital relationship.

“Do you really have to ask? My body is all yours, and your body is mine. Lao gong , lao gong , please fuck this flawed man’s male-pussy and shoot your fertile seed inside, and make this man yours once again,” Wei Ying was quick to take advantage of a get-out-of-jail free card, and put sweet icing and succulent cherries on top of his undeniable offer to make up for his mistakes. Deftly, he undressed himself and kicked away his pants and soiled underwear, and dearly prayed that Lan Zhan wouldn’t mind the still-warm slimy goo trickling from his ruined asshole to pool onto the husband’s crotch.

“I’m sorry, I’ve been a bad boy, and have been having sex with other men-” he started to rasp and moan while indulging in fervent kisses and deep tongue-play, while locking hands and legs to dry-hump and ride Lan Zhan to full arousal. There was so much to explain, to seek for forgiveness, to repent for his idiocy and weakness to the pleasures of the flesh of the Lan Wang Ji kind, the unplanned and technically forced pregnancy from trading fucks for goods, but Lan Zhan cut him off.

“Mn. You don’t have to say. I saw the news through my holo-phone and even played your dating sim game. It is a good game, and I enjoyed it. I can understand how you feel,” Lan Zhan said, with uncharacteristic gentleness, in between hungry kisses and tantalizing foreplay with grasping fingers and back-and-forth hip motions. Wei Ying let out a sob of multitudes of emotions - of gratitude, of joy, of hope - at the rare display of empathy by the man known to be stoic, logic-cold and unfeeling at times.

“You... You’re not angry? Even with this?” He had to ask, he had to confirm. Wei Ying even pushed his rounded, protruding abdomen until it hit Lan Zhan’s ribcage to indicate that he looked like a ravished, violated man carrying a pregnancy to full term.

Lan Zhan unexpectedly leaned back and shifted a bit on the sofa until he could bend down and kiss the top of the bloated ballooning naked abdomen - like a new father kissing his wife’s pregnant tummy to wish the growing baby within a sweet, sweet good morning; Wei Ying nearly teared again at that wonderfully tender gesture. “Your belly is full of my seed anyway, regardless of which specimen or individual’s. Why should I be angry?” he added, and puckered his lips to kiss-kiss the stretched rounded surface, until it spasmed to reciprocate the act, as though saying 'hello' back to its father.

“In fact, I will be disappointed if I don't get to experience this body's first explosive orgasm inside you. And give our baby its first serving of daddy's milk, to keep it warm inside you, my lovely wife. Wei Ying, will you let me fuck you, make love to you, and cum deep inside you?” It was such an honest declaration, admission and request, that Wei Ying felt giddy for a moment and half-stood, took a step back, and easily sat upon the arm-sized penis that had waited for four and a half billion years to taste its sweet, sweet fated partner that is Wei Ying's man-pussy and man-womb that already carried their lovechild, drifting, floating, swimming within an enclosed uteral pool of many Wang Jis' semen; now, the shared fruit of their love has received the seal of approval from the Grand Patriarch, who has every intention to spend the rest of his days, months, and years - nearly three hundred thousand years' worth of catch-up passion waiting to erupt from swollen divinely gigantic testicles - inside his lovely Matriarch, making hard and sweet hot love to father many fat healthy babies, spilling their passionate seeds together again and again, until the time has come for them to return to the real narrative story circa 2000 B.C., that is, their present world.

“Oh, Lan Zhan...!” Wei Ying cried and started moving his hips excitedly upon Lan Zhan's mighty penis and godly babymaker.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 193

Another mystery posed by senior members of the Council of Lan, formerly known as the elite grandmasters of the Qishan Lan, office holders of the best-performing company in the multiverse Wangxian Co. Ltd., and top generals and officials of the Kingdom of Lan :-

How does one play, excite and finally fertilize Wei Ying's eggs?

Or should they even be called 'eggs', being of male origin and certainly located not within a female reproductive organ such as the ovaries. From an anatomical perspective, Wei Ying's eggs are described in great length in various literature research as a man's testicles, however from the holy texts and grade-school education textbooks that all of the Kingdom's royal subjects had known, memorized and understood from their stance about the way the universe works, the man named Wei Wuxian is simply said, and validated through rigorous scientific research and testing, that he does have a pair of testes that is more commonly known as man-eggs; for the sake of non-argument on gender parity and sexual discrimination and confusion, therefore the Kingdom is of the position to call Wei Ying's eggs, simply as 'eggs'.

Those lovely oval-shaped organs slightly smaller than a decent-sized commercial chicken egg, hang low in their scrotal pouch and have the flexibility to move around a bit inside their warm nest richly innervated and supplied with blood vessels. A dense fuzz of curls and frizz covers the pouch, partly made of Ernie the cold black thing, lending a very masculine appearance and softens any blows, thus providing those delicate and precious eggs - the only two in existence in the entire multiverse - for the enjoyment, entertainment, pleasure and sexual reproduction of the Grand Patriarch.

Thus, once the eggs are fully characterized, defined and described in detail, the question begs itself once again - how does one play, excite and fertilize them?

To play, one can start by carefully, gently cradle the scrotal pouch with both hands in a cupping position, then roll the soft pads of both thumbs upon the eggs contained snugly beneath the wrinkly, hairy skin - one thumb for each egg. First, one can roll in clockwise with the right thumb, and in anticlockwise directions with the left thumb, simultaneously, while swaying the palms to gently buoy, lift and further roll both plump eggs in an in-and-out motion. One can also squeeze them, milk them, turn them a bit to massage every square inch of the fragile surface, and make undulating motions from the base of the penis down to the lower ends of the scrotal pouch to milk lovely bodily fluids and improve the blood circulation that feed into the oval-shaped organs, therefore coaxing the eggs to grow and swell lovingly, warming up to the touch, and to notice the tell-tale spread of reddish sexual flush and brown tans across the dangling sac, particularly when it starts to contract and relax rhythmically, whether the entire egg itself or with lovely rolling spasms from top to bottom towards tasty testicular orgasms.

There are various ways to play with Wei Ying's eggs - by gently pulling both eggs each in different directions, milking both eggs with squeezing motions to stimulate seed production, stroking those lovely bouncy balls at downward angles to coax them to make and release more baby sperms, even tapping rhythms - particularly lively Yunmeng folksongs - from top to bottom and back up again, going round and round the eggs until both lovely yolks quiver, spasm with heavenly delight, and gush out fifteen testicular ejaculations of nectary, translucent sperm-rich liquids straight through the windy tubes and drain into Wei Ying's convulsing prostate gland. Another way is to mimic the mechanics of 21st-century washing machines, that is, to press, knead and spin the egg's yolk-y contents in alternating directions, drumming sonic pulses deep into the throbbing core of each lovely ball until the sperms quiver in a trance-like dance, and the egg itself spasms excitedly in the process of having its liquids stirred and shaken vigorously, each lively microscopic tadpole is rinsed and dipped repeatedly and the swirled around in its own nutritive fluids, and then, the grand final spin cycle, where some magical aid is used to send fast-moving whirlpools to lovingly assault each egg in opposing directions, wringing out the very last sperm cell from their dizzying twirling cradles and flinging them straight out of the penis in hearty ejaculations, until Wei Ying cries and screams with the extreme pleasures of having his eggs washed thoroughly like a washing machine does.

With play, there comes excitement and tantalizing, erotic stimulations, often by using one's lips and tongue, plus other parts of the body such as grazing those tender adorable eggs with light, skimming fingernail touches in horizontal, then vertical and finally circular directions in both clockwise and anti-clockwise manners. Performing the perfect oral sex upon the eggs is very, very much preferred when Wei Ying is fully aroused, as the rougher, and more violent, invasive forces of lip suction, tongue licking and vocal humming usually sends Wei Ying's eggs into a mating frenzy, releasing copious amounts of spermatic fluids in a series of mind-shattering, epileptic fits that attack the eggs' membranes non-stop, even long after the last baby sperm cell has been drained out, so that Wei Ying's eggs serve their dual purpose of producing seed, and tasty sweet seedless fluids in healthy spurts, fifteen excited dollops in total per egg.

To ramp up the excitement, one can use non-organic means which could be a tad bit risky to the swelling and shrivelling eggs depending on its cycle of testicular orgasm. For example, casting sexual spells, using electrostimulation, and pressing vibrators against it - care must be taken not to crack and break the eggs, as they are more prone to bruising and damage than, say, hard-boiled chicken eggs without their shells. There are plenty of references and grimoires that detail on how magic can be used to heighten one's sexuality and performance in bed; in particular for these testicular eggs, spells with mechanical action such as spinning, twisting, tickling and kneading are particularly useful, and so are spells that send sexual poisons straight into the cradles of sperm production within each lovely egg. The insertion of implants and objects are frowned upon by the medical fraternity, however, permission need not be sought to peruse worm-like parasites and other ball-piercing and injection devices for the sole purpose of torturing and pleasuring Wei Ying's cute eggs.

Electrical stimulation, on the other hand, is much simpler - simply purchase Wangxian-branded testicular electrical pads and hook them to the generator, and watch how pulses of raw electricity travel through narrow cables to deliver tasty shocks onto the adhesive patch that covers most of Wei Ying's testicles - and the eggs within shall vibrate, contract and spasm uncontrollably to the user's desires, accompanied by sweet, alluring screams and extremely tempting hip-shakes and fluttering of pelvic muscles.

Next, vibrators. The hallmarks of enhancing the pleasures experienced by Wei Ying is to encourage the use of sex toys, in which magic wands and vibrator eggs are highly sought-after goods for the purpose of playing and stimulating Wei Ying's lovely eggs, rivalling that of a human's touch. There is hardly any need for instructions for use, as one can simply strap these devices onto the scrotal pouches, massage the devices hard against each quivering egg in delicious directions, and at opportune times, press the tips or heads of those vibrating toys deep into certain sweet spots deep inside Wei Ying's pelvis to stun, numb and destroy his sanity and his grip on his excitement - until Wei Ying orgasms both testicularly and prostatically, to the point of urinating in sweet spurts and farting erratically whilst climaxing, because those strong mechanical waves and pulses are known to loosen sphincters and bladder control, amongst every other sexual reproductive organs located within Wei Ying's nether regions.

The topic of playing and exciting Wei Ying's testicles - the anatomically correct term - has been described and discussed at length in this essay. So comes the final part - how to fertilize Wei Ying's eggs? This problem has been researched with numerous literature and books published on the topic, but with little resolution in sight. The greatest scholars of the Kingdom had debated on this for aeons, and there could be no agreement - because Wei Ying is technically a male, and therefore, his testicles are not eggs (scientifically speaking), and cannot transform then birth into babies on their own. Colloquially known as 'baby Wei Yings', the man's sperm cells swimming inside Wei Ying's testicles (eggs) do not function as a typical human ovum that can be fertilized by another man's seed. Thus, the issue of how to fertilize Wei Ying's eggs remains a mystery to this date.

Scientists have long debated on the methodologies to experiment with fertilization of a man. The test subject named Lan Wang Ji, who also sponsors the research efforts, has been enlisted to attempt Wei Ying's fertilization efforts using manners learned from hypothesis and hearsays. Baby Wei Yings have been forcefully extracted in violent spurts, sometimes coaxed out in rich ejaculatory dollops from an exhausted hairy penis, and placed into petri dishes where in vitro fertilization techniques have been used. Unsurprisingly, injecting and flooding baby Wei Yings with a pool of baby Wang Jis did not yield any success of forming a fat, healthy baby as desired by the Royal Couple of the Kingdom.

Another method tried and tested, is forcefully inserting the husband's semen straight into the eggs, thus replicating a more realistic condition of sperms from the husband raping the wife's eggs in any typical heterosexual carnal acts. Through high-precision insertions and high-resolution scope cameras implanted inside the scrotal sac to monitor the delicate process of fertilizing a man's eggs, Lan Wang Ji was tasked to masturbate furiously into a funnel, that connected to a pump and a catheter tube that travelled all the way from urethra, through the prostate gland and straight into the testicles. A microscopic incision was made on each egg, so that the catheter emptied straight into the spongy, viscous lumpy oatmeal-like tissues within each egg filled with active wriggling, and sleepy unborn baby Wei Yings. Upon receiving thirty very excited ejaculations from the husbands, because he'd been feed with tales of how his sperms would swim their way through to meet the eggs, then greet each baby Wei Ying inside, and kiss them good morning and gently wake them up from their nests, then make sweet, sweet love between sperm cells and egg-cum-sperm cells to create new life inside Wei Ying's lovely hairy testicles, until fat, healthy offsprings are birthed. Those violent ejaculations sped through the catheter and tubing like a retrograde ejaculation, aided by mechanical pumps placed along the way, and soon, Wang Ji's sperm cells happily arrived at their destination to swim through the incisions, and passionately invaded the home of panicking baby Wei Yings. Of note, Wei Ying's eggs were monitored from the outside throughout the assault, and scientists recorded the animated movements of each egg as though it was being eaten alive from the inside; since Wang Ji's sperm cells are known to be voracious rapists and extremely passionate in pursuing then humping violently and biting, sexually devouring, and mating every baby Wei Ying in the vicinity. Wei Ying's helpless, smaller sperms were defeated, and their home was lay waste by very excited, hungry and greedy sperms from the older man. The genes from Wei Ying's sperm were evacuated into the egg's yolk as baby Wei Yings were violently and passionately fucked by baby Wang Jis one by one until the point of disintegration. However, the mix of genetic material from both men did not result in any conception of new life, and thus, scientists concluded that this method of fertilizing Wei Ying's eggs did not work either.

And so, the quest and scientific discourses to find out how to better play and excite, and more importantly, fertilize Wei Ying's testicular eggs - continues.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 194

If sex is art, then Wei Ying is the canvas upon which Lan Zhan paints amazing portraits of their everlasting love.

If sex is ambrosia, then Wei Ying is the feast for his husband-god, and vice versa, Lan Zhan is deliciously tasted and consumed, one penis at a time, swallowing down thick, rich seed into the womb one mouthful at a time, again and again until both men were thoroughly spent.

Wei Ying was living out his dream paradise inside the Soul Restoration Cave. The cave had plenty of good qi left for absorption, and the couple didn't want to waste it - especially since Wei Ying spent many years collecting and packing the energizing particles into the soul-healing place -, so upon Wei Ying's request, and with the seal of approval from the husband, Wei Ying speed-dialed his secret lovers - including Farmer Lan, Butcher Lan, Merchant Lan, Manager Lan, Chef Lan, Scholar Lan, Artisan Lan, Swordmaster Lan, Butler Lan, Blacksmith Lan, Mechanic Lan, Doctor Lan, Teacher Lan, and all sorts of other superior Lan individuals Wei Ying had met or kept their numbers in his holo-phone's private directory - and invited them to stay with the couple for a qi -rich feast, and an intensely debauched orgy of many happy husbands and one very, very satisfied wife, lasting for many, many days, weeks, months and more. Whilst doing so, the Regent and his family stayed in the Realms of the Gods to oversee the Kingdom and company's operations; the four Wei clone-siblings journeyed on to more exciting adventures on the Mortal Realm, starting from where they left off in Nieshan village; and the four invisible demons of the Negative Planes made sure everything ran smoothly and no one would ever dare to question the couple's rather incompetent rule.

Wei Ying was in nirvana, and he was surrounded by nirvana itself; a nirvana of writhing, bare-chested and bare-buttocked Lan Zhans of perfect handsome looks, gentleness and kindness in their demeanour, servile and very accommodating to his needs, and most important of all - they all sported lovely pecs, six-pack abs - none of the flabby obese nonsense -, of perfect young to middle ages and ready, waiting penises more than six, seven, eight inches in length, twitching, turgid and jerking excitedly for the turn. They huddled around Wei Ying, and the lucky wife only had to open his mouth, wiggled his tongue, sing a song, then his hands would claw, rake, grasp and stroke anywhere, anything, it would always be Lan Zhans who received Wei Ying's touch; and Wei Ying's genitals exploded with more waves of pleasures, cresting over and over again the pinnacles of climaxes, because they were always more than five, six, seven, eight Lan Zhans tending to his dying-dead-alive arousal, excitedly spurting seed, seedless fluids, plenty of pee and farts, the cup of his passion brimmed then overflowed, and spilled abundantly like waves crashing from stormy weather, with rippling foamy excitement until everything emptied out, his eggs have boiled over and drained from within, then filled with so much hot lovin' that he swore those vacuumed-up testicles had become wombs to be filled with newborn babes.

Upon the soiled, soaked king-sized bed, where the crux is his sexual corruption, debauchery and the core of countless pleasurable copulations took place - he spread his legs far and wide as much as anatomically possible, feet kicking into the air, knocking on a hapless Lan Zhan, then crossing and closing, drawing in one Lan Zhan at a time like a spider reels in tasty preys - he tastes Lan Zhans' penises inside his man-pussy, often at a merciless pistoning pace until his rosebud bloomed into fresh bouquet of bright red roses, glistening in sweat and sunlight of Lan Zhans queueing up to serve him their penises and semen; each Lan Zhan tastes, smells, feels and looks different, whether it's the hardness, length, girth, curve, excitability, sensitivity, speed to climax and endurance towards prolonged edging - all thoroughly savoured inside Wei Ying's man-vagina residing in the rectum, past the loose and cum-drench de-puckered anus, in which beyond the growing ocean of freshly ejaculated seed, thirty fluttering dollops from each individual and the many rounds that each Lan Zhan desires to bed with his wife and father many, many fat healthy babies within, Wei Ying squealed and his tummy convulsed from the sheer fullness inside his man-womb, and he could feel great torrents slosh around the insides of the belly, creating tightness and discomfort like a pregnant cow about to calve - and after rolling muscles that had lost control from overfucking and abuse, he farted out excess spent seed to the bed with glee, while another Lan man's penis drilled that same hole deliriously at a feverish pace, sometimes in pairs or threes during peak hours when the queue of horny sexy men backed up - at that point, Wei Ying would tell the boys to calm down and not spar with their dicks at his anus, because there's plenty of him to be loved after all.

“Farmer Lan, you're such a patient man, you've been fucking me for hours, cumming inside me every ten minutes or so. You must be so tenacious and diligent in sowing your wildest seeds upon this fertile garden, and then ploughing it like a bull - you just keep going on and on, no matter what!”

“Manager Lan, are you making a profit? For each fuck you make from me, it's sweet money for the baby Wang Jis waiting for their inaugural launch between your legs.”

“Scholar Lan, you're so good! I never knew scholars could be so sexy and masterful in sex! You know exactly how fast to thrust your hips, and precisely how deep to reach my sweetest womb. Oh my lovely scholar, please kiss my womb, you're hitting all my right buttons!”

“Butler Lan, you're so kind and polite! You even wipe my sweat and serve me food and drinks while we make sweet love. May I have another grape please, and please, darling, shoot another round of manly milk into my hole, it thirsts for more of your tasty man-juice!”

“Doctor Lan, Doctor Lan, please examine my ass, it feels itchy everywhere. Can you scratch the itch inside and make me feel better? Pretty please? Should I open my legs wider for you, so that your penis-scope can have a better look, deep inside my ass? Like this? Mmm? Or like this?”

“Teacher Lan, this student has a failed grade, please may I get better grade by letting you fuck me and make lots of babies inside this fresh young student womb? I’ll do anything to get a passing mark, please, please teacher, fuck my man-pussy and give me better scores? Ah, don’t spank my buttocks, this student admitted his wrongdoing already!”

Wei Ying became a heap of contradictions and a sweaty mess; he’d grabbed the hair of one Lan Zhan to stop him from bobbing his head upon the defenceless, violated crotch to polish the hypersensitive, soul-wilted but still very excitable penis - because truly, Wei Ying had nothing left to offer from his loins except teaspoonfuls of seedless prostatic fluids and more likely, pungent pee -, and the clutching fingers immediately went limp and Wei Ying’s hands went to the sides, clawing and raking the bedspread at the delicious waves of incoming orgasmic contractions, as though he was trying to futilely fight off the invisible, insidious enemy of imminent tantric explosions that he knew, the battle was lost and the war was far, far already over when he was conquered by Lan Zhan and his common-cloned comrades’ penises; Wei Ying’s face and body became red as ripe tomatoes when sexual flushes decorated his sweat-glistening skin, prickling with goosebumps with each passing-by climax, and he twisted and turned, pleading for the sexual marathon to stop, and yet he thrust his shuddering hips wantonly to meet every heartfelt fucks given by the Lan Zhans, unknowingly coaxing the men to drill deeper, harder and faster into him, dip repeatedly into his innermost sanctuary to spill their virile hot seed and bless his eggs with fecundity. He cried again and again, begging Lan Zhan to stop, no, don't stop, fuck me harder please, suck my dick too, oh god please let me breathe, slow down, nnngh no no please oh sweet baby Guanyin I'm cumming, oh Buddha oh Dalaoeye oh I can't stop shaking my hips, please for the love of Gusu Lans please give me your babies ah not so hard, I'm tearing and splitting oh yes yes yes deeper please mmm yes; in which, all Lan Zhans had learnt not to listen to the incoherent babble, and resume their husbandly duties of touching, fucking, bedding and making sweet, sweet orgy love to their one lucky semen-filled wife. Wei Ying was unravelled layer by layer with each orgasm, peeled like a sweet onion until only the core was left, and countless penises attacked that core until it congealed into a puddle of baby Wei Yings, in which that puddle was shaken, stirred, then slurped completely by the merry band of greedy, insatiable and lustful men named Lan Wang Jis.

There was no hurry and everything was perfectly organized. When the phone-ordered pizza arrived, and Deliveryboy Lan found the orgy to be of mutual interests amongst the Lan men at the sex fest, so he joined the fun too. The teenage boy was the most handsome, hunky, youthful and striking-looking pizza delivery boy ever in Wei Ying's eyes, and that budding Lan boy hadn't experience sex before, thus Wei Ying gave him a priority queue number. Deliveryboy Lan took that number and waited patiently for his turn to enjoy the mind-blowing experience of losing one's virginity to another man's ass, to taste a man's womb for the first time, and to roll his eyes in fluttering back and forths, at the heavenly sensations of man-vaginal walls clenching and clamping down on his exhilarated teenage penis - jacking off to posters of superstar Wei Wuxian would never be the same again, ever - and to inject his superbly virile seed freely into Wei Ying's bottomless cup of babymaking, adding to the bloating pregnant belly growing from Wei Ying's quivering, moaning, thrashing body, as one Lan Zhan after another went very, very wild, dancing their hips and thrusting like animals in the throes of bestial ecstasy, although with a mildly-noticeable constrained pace so as not to burn out too quickly, that each Lan Zhan could shoot thirty times into Wei Ying's ruined and blossomed rosebud, thirty rich ejaculations each, before withdrawing without so much as a hair out of place, then replaced by another eager Lan Zhan and his earnestly happy penis, ready to make more babies inside the screaming man, back arching off the bed, thighs spread wider and lifted higher, welcoming all men's sexy sperms into his sweet, sweet body.

Wei Ying, being a voyeur, installed mirrors made of crystalline surfaces of larger Twisty crystals all over their love nest, and he revels in observing, through heavy-lidded eyes, how Lan Zhan's glutes squeeze mechanically and pumps rhythmically deep between his wantonly spread legs; from the top view, it looked almost as if he was being crushed and devoured alive by the sexual hunger of an alpha male thrusting non-stop atop the crotch, lips peppering sweet kisses from forehead to cheeks, to nose to the Adam's apple, to bite the collarbones, before inserting tongues and sweet dirty words into Wei Ying's reddened ears. From the sides, Wei Ying looks even more perverted, as he head lolls from right to left and right again, his facial expression is one of a slut begging to be fucked and inseminated, hips bucking and limbs thrashing uselessly jaws slacked with sweet mewls of Yes'es and No's, and the beautiful crimson sexual flush spreading from his belly to his chest, to the neck and to both of his cheeks like an artist's canvas painted wonderfully with lustful hues and raw emotion; while Lan Zhan patiently pumps in and out in a steady, maddening rhythm, even as Wei Ying orgasms in mid-fuck to squeeze and vibrate around his lover's pistoning turgid meatstick, but Lan Zhan continues to drill in and out, deep and shallow, until Wei Ying climaxes multiple times from that mechanically moving manhood; and Lan Zhan plods on with his everlasting rhythm with that terrifyingly calm yet lustful, unceasing timeless motions, until Wei Ying whispers, then shouts, then screams and finally sings at the top of his lungs, because he'd gone past hypersensitivity and started to urinate uncontrollably when his loins had absolutely no more seedless fluids to ejaculate; and still, Lan Zhan makes slow, sensuous sweet love to Wei Ying with his in and out, in and out, hitting the thoroughly swollen and abused prostate with a cockhead punches and prods, schlicking and squelching, thick engorged penile veins massaging Wei Ying's inside with each slide, slicked with cum and purposeful in depth, firm in its strength and hardness, spreading those lovely juicy fleshy folds, before pulling back to withdraw, and driving through like a propelling missile, thick and tenacious, driving Wei Ying crazy when his man-vagina explodes in post-orgasmic convulsions at being stroked gently from the insides, for hours on end, that frighteningly calm of the tempest that rip and tears Wei Ying's sanity, in and out, in and out, in and out. The next Lan Wang Ji stands by the bedside, waiting for his turn to do his in and outs nestled inside the very well-loved wife of many Lan men.

In the end, it seemed Wei Ying amassed a vast collection of Lan Wang Jis of different professions and capabilities, and they all voted democratically to stay with their sole wife, and designed a new floor mat in which an underground kingdom is built within; thus, Wei Ying was gifted with the magical floor mat that would grant him all-day access to sex with all forms, shapes and sizes of Lan Zhans that exist throughout the multiverses. The young man also sneakily connected the floor mat to his favourite Planet of the Clouds, so that he would always be a god - goddess - worshipped in all vile and sweet manners by his followers - the inhabitants of that planet -, who were in every aspect so much more superior than the original husband; Wei Ying hit the jackpot that day, really.

.

At some point, the couple decided to they had enough of twisted, perverse reunion sex, with Wei Ying gaining more than he'd bargained for after four and a half billion years' worth of solitary work. They showered and freshened up together, with Lan Zhan, ever the gentleman, combing and tying Wei Ying's hair into neat knots and braids. They put on their ancient black-white Imperial trainee robes - still in pristine condition despite the passage of time -, and double checked their gear, now simplified to simple garments and they'd go hands-free for their equipment; because their Kingdom is fast moving away from 51st century technology to the 61st, and everything could be conjured and summoned at one's whims without necessitating the need for bags, pouches and storage compartments. Thus, no weapons or magical items and Bags of Holding would be required, even for Wei Ying to cling to his precious newly minted floor mat filled with Lan Zhans of his dreams, because everything is uploaded to the family's cloud drive and can be downloaded and materialize to reality at any time, with or without the use of magic.

Due to the laws that govern the flow of Creation, Time and Fate, Wei Ying explained to Lan Zhan that they cannot simply change the sequence and circumstances leading to key events when they return to where they left off; the alternate option would be to destroy everything and start over, which Wei Ying sourly declared that he wouldn't want to stomach reliving his awful, painful life when he was spiralling down to despair, madness and heartbreak, sixteen years ago. Lan Zhan agreed to the proposal, and was in fact, simply grateful for Wei Ying's divine generosity to grace him a new lease in life after the last supernova, now, a chance to reboot and resume in a parallel world that had been painstakingly built to mirror the one that was obliterated, particle by particle.

"Wei Ying, what would I look like?" he asked, before stepping on a waiting hovering Bichen to take them out of the cave, far, far above the mountain and clouds that make their family's yellow-coloured rectangular cloud drive, until they twinkled like stars in the vast empty space above to execute the perfect hyperjump to the Mortal Realm.

"Mmm..." Wei Ying paused a bit before taking his place in front of Lan Zhan, standing and spooning against his darling man like a sweet, charming young wife in her (his) hubby's arms, "I reckon you'll look not a day older than when I met you in Mo village after resurrection from my sixteen-year slumber in hell. Fit as a fiddle, clean and shaven, and an extra dash of sexiness. I made sure to add sexy sauces to the biscuit you ate the other day," and he winked to the back.

“Mn. I’m thirty four, and you’re twenty two, then,” Lan Zhan calculated aloud, and waved his wrists to send Bichen to a lift-off. The creaky sword pattered like a clunky old car, spitting plumes of smoke and shaking quite a bit, but once its in-built engines started with a hacking wheeze, it was off to a good start.

“Yes, a dirty old man and a pedophile preying on sweet young things like me,” Wei Ying chimed in with mocking laughter, and instinctively outstretched his hands to balance himself on the blade. “By the way, my clone-siblings have taken over Nieshan village and forced that camp’s administration office to register their identification papers. They’re now citizens of the Middle Kingdom, just like us, and their marriage certificates state that they’re your wives too after the officer reviewed their documents issued by Yiling’s civil registrar, long, long ago.”

There was a noticeable hesitance when Wei Ying spoke next. “The privileges extend to the rest of our Kingdom, though. I hope you don’t mind,” he said with a slight waver in his voice at the end, and his arms lower a bit, as though losing a bit of that confidence he had before taking flight on the billions-year old sword.

Lan Zhan leaned forward until his chest lay tightly against Wei Ying’s smaller back, and he embraced the younger man from behind - whether to provide comfort or a reassuring hug that everything would be alright in their maiden flight for a long time coming -, then sweetly kissed the nape of the spouse’s neck, eliciting a short giggle from the latter.

“Mn. I understand. I may have many wives, and for you, many husbands in our brave new world... but you’ll still be my one and only, Wei Ying.”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 195

The story thus far, with few liberties taken by Wei Ying because only he, the Creator, can do so, while Lan Zhan, although holding the esteemed title of the Supreme Almighty King of Gods, merely goes with the flow and wants of his beloved spouse:

At Camp Jinshan, the moment resident Tao priests discovered the true identities of the couple, Wei Ying was kidnapped in a sleazy official's office and he was struck down by spells that typically incapacitate any humans; lustful, soul-possessed priests were about to outrage his modesty and strip the man of his dignity with a tasty, demonic sexual assault. On the other side of the sprawling prison and training facility, Lan Zhan, who was now tagged as yaoguai, was cornered in a classroom with a broom, followed by watchful eyes wherever he went, sedated by mind-controlling spores that fouled the very air that everyone breathed. The camp's defense and capture systems are geared to bring down any errant super-powered demons the moment they break into fits of fury and insanity, and the response was proportional to the level of threat.

Therefore, when Lan Zhan went supernova with a powerful fart, he blew up like a Fire Elemental on steroids that could turn even Hell to cinders, and immediately, the facility's automated containment mechanisms kicked in. The huge bell at the pagoda rang loudly at unexpected, alarming speeds, supercharging the spores in the air to do their terrible, but necessary work - and all unvaccinated detainees at the camp were knocked out immediately - including Lan Zhan himself; the supernova would've burnt everything to ashes and nothing, and not even the spores or the anti-magic defenses of the camp, could save any soul from the eternal fiery damning end that ravaged across the entire Middle Kingdom.

That was the past.

The difference this round, though, was that Wei Ying's own bodily defense countered, just in the nick of time - Ernie emerged from the pubes and transformed itself to an impenetrable, spiky and vicious, grim-looking male chastity device; a cage around his cock and around his pelvic area like a twisted, perverse diaper made of cold, black metal strips that shielded even his asshole to thwart any rape-y attempts from dirty old priests. The effect was immediately evident.

“Curse Ne Zha and the fiery Lord of Hell! What is that smell coming out from the man's crotch?! It's worse than rotten onions, cheese and fish mixed together and left to ferment in some one's unwashed socks for weeks! I feel nauseated just by breathing right now... exhale, brothers, exhale!”

“Aieeee! It moves! It moves! It's a living demonic chastity cage! Our suspicions are right, but what do we do? I have no appetite for smelly crotches and bums, much less trying to wrestle that cold, black slimy thing around the man's private parts. It might even bite me and poison my soul that I'll have to leave this yummy priest's body! This man's bonded pair, the true yaoguai of the two, is indeed clever enough to have set this booby trap so that his dignity is protected!”

“Ah, but this man... just by tasting the fouled air, I can sense that his meridians are blocked but not severed as initially thought. If we can restore the flow of qi in his body, his golden core will blossom like a juicy ripe loquat, ready for our consumption... but still... still... uuurgh... blearrgh... oof... it's so stinky, I can't-- I can't! I have to get out of this room!”

The three priests had to stumble out of the meeting room and lock the door behind them, and they vomited all over the floor, to the alarm of panicking servants and Imperial patrol guards in the vicinity. Even Senior Guard Zhen was called back see to the priests' condition, with so many eyes and ears around including nosy bonded pair detainees hard at training who peeked in at the rousing commotion - the deterred Tao priests decided wholeheartedly to blacklist Wei Ying from their menu, at least for that day.

Elsewhere, Lan Zhan closed his eyes and laid to rest his fears and concerns, knowing now that his entwined fate with the spouse remained safe. Still, his stomach twisted into a knot because how can a husband ever remain steadfastly calm when his wife was knocked out cold with a flimsy chastity cage fending off would-be rapists - so, he allowed himself a small, squeaky anxious fart. The deviation in qi -flow was minor and did not kickstart the camp's in-built anti-personnel mechanisms, but still immense in godly terms, and caused a disastrous, bone-shattering explosion from the third floor of the classroom complex that was being cleaned by enslaved servants such as he.

Lan Zhan's ears rang from the deafening boom and felt shockwaves ripple from his butt, then allowed himself to fall down, down, through the three storeys because the wooden floor gave way after the incredible detonation that vaporized everything within the immediate radius. Miraculously a strand of white hair slid out of Lan Zhan's head and grew exponentially into a furred silken infinitely long piece of white cloth that wrapped itself around the man's body; the man spun around like a fallen flower blown by unseen breeze, a delicate angel clothed in stunning whites, embroidered clouds and glimmering gemstone-like sequins, twirling from the heavens to touch the earth with the softness of cotton and feathers. Lan Zhan landed on the ground with a soft, muted poink! as his silk-cocooned body bounced off surfaces like an elongated balloon of white dandelion fuzz, accompanied by the sounds of children's bubbly laughter, bell chimes in the wind, and tinkling crystalline glass - his covered figure, now resembling like a giant white furry caterpillar sprang up and down a few times to avoid broken burning furniture, crumbling walls and debris and rubble raining down from crashing tiled rooftops, then rolled itself like a giant serving of vanilla ice cream, moving out of harm's way and into the courtyard of shocked spectators and fleeing guards.

The entire devastated classroom complex collapsed in a mighty roar of fire, rattling nearby buildings and spreading wildfires across the camp. Lan Zhan's caterpillar-like figure sprouted beautiful and wide furry wings, then a tapered tail on one end and an impressive dragon-like head on the other - its fearsome and majestic appearance was completed after it barely skimmed by the kitchens and wrecked some pantries - a couple of tomatoes stolen from the kitchens for fiery-red eyes, splintered and bent broomsticks stuck to the forehead mimicking impressive antlers, undulating twisted ropes used to tie làcháng sausages as whiskers, and a long, bumpy reptilian snout fashioned from a handful of baozi freshly steaming out from the ovens - all gleaming misty white and silver in the glittering sunny springday light.

The entire camp was thrown into chaos from the explosions, and people in the courtyard screamed and tried to run away from the fast-spreading flames; guards carrying buckets of water began to arrive, while others scrambled to action to secure the perimeter and bring as many to safety as possible. All paused for a few seconds to marvel at the mesmerizing sight of a dragon hatching from a gigantic silkworm cocoon, then taking flight from the ground after the destruction of one of the camp's prominent buildings. It soared high and clouds parted for its ascent, gliding in a magnificent, aerial stride like one long streaming woven silken war banner, and its tail lashed quite a bit to propel forward and send sonic booms in its wake, leaving swirling winds racing past it “Look! That white wyrm... no, it’s a Silver White Dragon! Such beauty, such grace, and it’s beating its majestic wings as though it’s taking its maiden flight! What yaoguai is that, which takes the form of a human but hides such impressive strength and majesty beneath the skin?”

“Dragons! It’s a legendary dragon yaoguai , and a very rare type too! A great dragon lives amongst us! Rejoice, fellow yaoguai brothers, we have a supreme lord here, treading upon these filthy grounds to bless us with its regalness! O’ ye faithful, bow and worship its strength and wisdom, for such Silver White dragons only appear less than once in a lifetime, even for yaoguai -kin like us!”

“Where is it going? Oh...! It’s headed for the dorms! Who cares for training and exercise drills! Brothers and yaoguai comrades, let’s get out of this place and follow this amazing fabled creature! Maybe it’ll set us free from this cursed place once and for all! Look around you, everywhere, the Imperial bastards have their hands full trying to put out the fire and salvage the situation, so pick up your swords and activate your magical powers, we’re going getting out!”

Hence, while the situation on the ground devolved into violent anarchy with detained bonded-pairs rising up against their captors - because the great explosion sent flaming waves in all directions and sterilized the air from the third-storey up and obliterated all spores from the atmosphere, and the awakening of the dragon seemed to have deactivated whatever curses that had been cast unto every detainee’s body that they were free to rebel -, so while fights and bloody manslaughter broke out amidst uncontrollable fiery destructions on the grounds of the military centre, little Ni-er roared with pride at her new form - a roar that filled the winds with echoes of windbell chimes and clinking glasses - and flew to her daddy’s home, that is, the place her parents spent the night before, had good meals and where everyone was kept toasty and warm.

She wasn't sure if she'd done the right thing, but she knew her daddy would approve of her action because she's, really, daddy's sweet lil' silver pumpkin pie, after all. She smiled at that thought - the awesome and mighty dragon smiles and bared its glowing, fearsome lips; fortunately, no one noticed that it had no fangs or teeth, and in fact, it fearlessly displayed a mouth full of pink toothless gums and smiled in the way that only babies can smile with adorable bubbly gurgles.

.

Wei Ying has another trick up his sleeves, or rather, his shadows - people do not call him the Grandmaster of the Dark Arts for nothin', he told himself smugly while keeping his eyes closed in a pretended grimace etched on the face. By tapping on Ernie's vast capabilities and unlimited magical energy hiding in his pubic hair, even in his semi-conscious state after getting zapped by the Tao priests' magic circle, he wove a spell without using any qi - like playing a common flute to summon unimaginable supernatural evils. His shadow on the wooden floor in Senior Guard Zhen's office became a portal to another dimension, and he slipped through effortlessly into a tunnel of moving, revolving colours from all spectrum, his rainbow highway filled with fun, ditzy kaleidoscopic lights - to the wonderful cozenspace beneath his very own floor mat that interconnects with everything else in the multiverse; he wondered briefly if he could spare a two-minute break at his favourite playground, the Planet of the Clouds, to not only have tasty trysts with his unlimited number of lover-followers inside his temple of fertility, but also to greet his offsprings that had been raised in droves in test tubes, hospitals, daycare centres and loving Lan households - the first of many generations of Homo sapiens wuji'ensis born solely from one male-mother and many fathers.

“You swine, you’re a few hours late and it’s almost nightfall! What happened to your so-called two-minute break you told us on the holo-phone a while ago?” Wei da ge remarked with a rude guffaw as he pulled Wei Ying out of the opened floor mat with one muscular arm. A heave, and Wei Ying easily flipped over to the stone floor with a dull thud. He was naked as a babe because he didn’t bother to put on anything after the sexual carnage he’d done and swathes of farmlands created in his name, filled with rows upon rows of newborns planted like radish sprouts, then watered and nurtured by their fathers - just like the good ol’ days when he had A-Yuan, long, long ago.

“Ah... not so rough, I’m still sore everywhere. Sex during childbirth is no joke!” Wei Ying groaned and rubbed his bruised hips and buttocks - there were plenty of fingerprints, hickeys and semen stains present along with amniotic fluid and placental membranes, and the four Wei siblings who welcomed him didn’t need to strip the Grand Matriarch to find out why. He emerged into a typical Imperial soldier or detainee’s dormitory room, and had ordered his siblings in advance to place the floor mat there, for good reasons. Wei er ge rushed in with a basin of perfectly warmed water and washcloths, and immediately fussed over him like a concerned mother, “Oh! Sit down on the cushioned chair over there, your back needs adequate support while you rest! Lift up your legs to get any swelling down, and let me wash and massage your lower parts. Your insides must still be throbbing after giving birth to so many young ones before rushing here!” The eighteen-year old teen may not be the brightest, but he surely knew what to do, and what mattered most, when it comes to postnatal care.

Wei Ying did as he was told. His da ge made sure to furnish and provide the best room a five-star postnatal confinement service can offer, better than scores of professional midwives out there; the er ge happily comforted the new mother with niceties such as spoon feeding him bowls of nutritious herbal ginger chicken soup and giving free massages from head to stretch-marked strained abdomen to the wiggly toes and soles of both achy feet; Wei san ge acted like a prickly teenager who was half-intrigued, half-disgusted by the idea of popping out babies between the legs after sex, so he stayed on the sidelines to watch and learn, and he was tasked with cleaning duties and heating up food for the tired but hungry mother of zillions; Wei didi was truly innocent and remained by Wei Ying's, because he was truly fascinated in the stories of how one gets pregnant and the journey to carry babies to full term until childbirth, so lil' didi accompanied the chatty man in his non-stop prattling and flaunting words, praising him for his hard work to populate worlds with his infallible womb, regaling in his tales of manhandling ugly wrinkly newborns, the horrors of breastfeeding through male-nipples, and the nightmares of changing stinky soiled nappies in the dead of the night.

“Can you believe it? I was screaming bloody Guanyins that he was responsible for putting it in, so he should take it out, and he really did! I had ten Lan Zhans waiting on me inside the maternity ward, and forced them to watch me go into painful labour until they sobbed, and when twins and triplets plopped out one after another like blood-covered wet sacks of rice out of a gaping pipe hole, half of them fainted. I swear, those good-for-nothing men...!”

“All those perfect Lan Wang Jis in the Planet are perfect bachelors, good husbands and loving partners, but they're awful at childcare - probably because they're all youngest in their families and had no experience in caring for younger siblings! They had to be taught how to bottle feed babies and burp them after nursing, bathe them in a tub and change their diapers... it was awfully funny, ya' know, observing them from afar at how chaotic things become with babies spitting up breast milk, how the fathers panicked because they didn't know how to hold such a delicate thing inside soapy water, and how the strongest of 'em were reduced to tears at the sight and smell of baby poo on the table!”

“You should’ve seen the time when I was in my bed in the temple, all naked and breastfeeding babies snuggling against my belly. That’s an important bonding time for me and my babes, but what does the husband think? He becomes a horny devil with a eight-incher hard-on between his legs, jerking up and down, begging for attention too; I don’t know if it’s jealousy or if the sight of me squeezing my boobs and of newborns suckling these teats that made those Lan men super-excited. I mean, I know it’s erotic, but trust me, trying to make sure your babies get enough milk while having two, sometimes three husbands fucking you wantonly down there - isn’t fun at all! They also tried to steal some milk from the baby by nuzzling their faces on my chest and trying to shove the baby’s away... the nerve of those hopeless horny men!”

Wei Ying’s stories were as colourful as they were filled with his wry sense of humour that demeaned the Lan-kin - which were well-received by the room of four other Wei-kin, of course. Everyone was amused by Wei Ying’s antics and animated recounts of his travels beneath the special floor mat, and had a good time reuniting the whole family once again, with good food and lots of group cuddles. The siblings shared their side of the story too, and told Wei Ying that they’d arrived much earlier - thus, breaking the covenant between the laws that govern the current reality and had therefore caused irreparable damage to the timeline. Wei Ying raised an eyebrow at that.

“Oh, don’t worry,” Wei da ge gruffly remarked with his chest puffed out, “I’ve everything under control since I’m so awesome,” followed by little cheers and applause from the other three Wei-kin, “There is absolutely no concern with time paradoxes or time travels, because I’ve met up with my self from the preceding timeline and we have discussed at length about this; he and his group of Wei-kin agreed to relinquish the ownership and rights to this reality to us, while they hopped onto a free homestead vacation in another galaxy to man our new factories producing blood wine made of liquefied demons, and enjoy living in rustic countryside farmlands with three suns and three moons in the skies plus incredibly picturesque rings around their new homeworld that they can admire all day.”

Wei er ge placed warm towels on Wei Ying’s belly to keep everything toasty and loosen up muscles that have overworked and strained hard during childbearing. He added chirpily, “That’s right, Grand Matriarch,” such a polite young adult, really, to address Wei Ying with such respectful formality, “We successfully incorporated the wine-making technology to our company’s portfolio, so everyone in our Kingdom can enjoy this really refreshing beverage soon! Before you got here, we’ve already taken over Nieshan village, enslaved the Tao priests and senior guards with our own mind-controlling parasites, and we’re now running the village’s camp under the guise of the Imperial army’s rule. You should thank san ge, he’s been instrumental in orchestrating our military strategies to establish a footprint here, on the northern side of the Middle Kingdom.”

Wei san ge perked up at being praised, and he skipped over to give Wei Ying a nice shoulder massage, while proudly narrating his achievements like an overachieving youngster demanding for compliments, “Yeah! I used my awesome stealth artificial intelligence technology to control those parasites, and have infiltrated the Imperial Court from here! It’s much more exciting than playing an RTS sci-fi videogames! I’ve sent priests and soldiers to the Imperial Palace to seek out intriguing secrets and mysteries and gathered the intel for us. I’ve asked the Regent and his family in the heavens to coerce certain elite insiders within the Imperial Palace to do our bidding, by sending them nightmares about the Mandate From The Heavens and other false prophecies. I’m so smart, aren’t I?”

Wei didi, as usual, was the last to voice out, but he was heard, nevertheless. He squeaked while clinging on to Wei Ying’s wrists with shiny sparkly adorable puppy eyes, “Umm... umm... I installed the Swallowing Shadow ability to my planetwide warehouses, so that it sucks up anything we want for storage and for delivery to wherever that needs to go. I stole the Infinity Gauntlets from the Emperor and Grandmaster Gao, made a copy of the Mortal Realm and uploaded the data to our family's cloud drive, and... oh! That's right, I have this too," and the little nine-year old boy quickly rummaged his broad sleeves, whipped out a little bamboo water bottle that kids bring to school, decorated with Wangxian's bunny logo, and showed it proudly to his Grand Matriarch.

Wei Ying stared at it quizzically. He'd known ahead of time if he were to be presented with something, because all Wei-kin shared their minds and mental connections; so it must've been a real secret - and a real treat.

The boy popped out the bottle's cover, which served as a small cup, and poured its content into the cup - a very fragrant, mouth-watering and crimson red elixir flowed. All Wei men leaned forward to inhale the wonderful scent of the best wine ever to exist on the realm, and they agreed that the mother of their clan should take the first sip for its health tonic and blood- qi circulation-improvement purposes.

Wei Ying grinned and he was indeed very, very happy. He couldn't ask for more than a loving family and a cup of very tasty wine.

.

While Wei Ying enjoys a relaxing confinement period after secretly giving birth to many offsprings, Lan Zhan works hard to figure out what to do with a ruined village filled with flattened buildings, wounded men, spreading fires, soldiers and yaoguai fleeing the chaotic scene and fighting one another in needless melee combat.

He sat like a lone, forlorn-looking figure on a rocky outcropping in front of what used to be his dorm. The entire unit had disappeared, leaving only crumbs and some rubble behind; little Ni-er had panicked during her descent because she was too young to know how to land on her tummy properly - so, she sucked in air to tighten her tummy and brace for the worst of massive crash landings, and inadvertently, inhaled the entire dorm unit. Everything that Lan Zhan and his spouse owned or bought, including the cart and their belongings such as the Bags of Holding, furniture and the bunk bed, showerhead and buckets, heating coils, kitchenware and prepared food, even the sproutlings in the vegetable patch at the backyard - everything was swallowed up in a seconds-long tornado, before the dragon poof'ed into a huge round ball of cotton candy fluff and bounced off harmlessly from the ground, once, twice, before rolling to its side; Lan Zhan floated somewhere in its core; it was akin to levitating in a world made of poofy silky soft white fur.

Ni-er deflated to her original size and form with a hiccupy wheeze, and Lan Zhan sat on his haunches, safe and solidly grounded to the sandy ground littered with debris. He was a little disconcerted, quite frazzled and his hair was quite messed up, by the dragon-flight experience. His knees were shaky too, so he found a place to park his rump while reflecting on what the hell just happened, and took the time to settle down and regain his composure. It helped that he had Ni-er in his arms and he stroked her bloated and incredibly soothing-soft belly just like how one runs his fingers along the fur of cats and rabbits, which was graciously therapeutic as well - plus, her fur stuck out in odd directions after the incredible transformation and her maiden flight in dragon-form. Ni-er giggled and burped, then hiccuped and made whiny 'nnngh-nnngh' sounds because she ate too much and her daddy was adamant to keep tickling her swollen belly.

There were sounds of men shouting and yaoguai roaring around them, of more buildings crumbling to the ground and of things breaking and exploding; yet, amidst the war torn scene, Lan Zhan remained calm with his furry lil' girl nuzzled against his chest. Then, she spasmed for a few moments with a look of discomfort on her faceless head; her toothless mouth grimaced a bit and she made a long squeal-y sound - out popped a few Imperial gold coins from her furry butt, which Lan Zhan wordlessly pocketed into his wide sleeves, and he tapped on her fuzzy cheeks.

“Ni-er, give daddy a comb. You need a good brush after what the wind has done to your fur, and I need to fix my appearances after that... harrowing flight,” he said as a matter-of-fact.

The furry worm nnngh'd and made a wiggly movement, then burped out a comb, as requested. Wei Ying bought it from the Jinshan trading post the night before (technically speaking) - a plain brown wooden comb, but it was strangely decorated with jade edges, embedded with diamonds, even emanated magic. Lan Zhan stared at the comb - realizing that his lil' sweet pumpkin pie had not only retrieved an item she had swallowed into her bottomless gut ala a living Bag of Holding, but she was able to change and transform those items inside her to grant them improved qualities and magical properties as well. The downside was, it was covered with her saliva, which was easily removed with a couple of flicks of the wrist, and soon, Lan Zhan was peacefully, and happily brushing his favourite lil' girl's fur, then went on to comb his hair and adjust his topknot.

Four and a half billion-year old Bichen would be regurgitated in due time, now armed with brand new engines built in its hilt, and a new lease of life for its shiny restored blade after an immense overhaul and magical blacksmithing done inside Ni-er's tummy; but for now, Lan Zhan simply wanted to focus on what's important to him and the task at hand.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 196

Wei Ying sighs. Oiled hands knead his shoulders, in tandem with another pair working in titillating circles on the heels and the arches of his feet. His face is nourished with a moisturizing mask and two slices of cucumbers, each on the eye. Someone brings forth a straw and with a gentle touch to the lips, Wei Ying barely puckers his lips to take a sip of a blended cocktail of exotic fruit juices and wines advocated by his royal subjects as a tonic for postpartum nutrition. At the side, someone is fanning palm leaves to keep the pampered new male-mum comfortable in the well-ventilated Nieshan dorm room-turned-spa.

The service is excellent, five-stars, deserving of a chef's kiss, and he thinks about how to reward his siblings-turned-slaves just for his confinement and recovery period. Perhaps, he could share some of the spoils from his conquest of the Planet of the Clouds; those used, pleasantly drained specimens of superior Lan men could be gift-wrapped and presented to his clone-siblings; they may have fathered many children and their veiny penis and wrinkly testicles may be limp, dangling too loosely from extensive use - however, after a quick rub between the legs, surely those old coots will rev up nicely like rusty machines given brand new lubricating engine oil, and still demonstrate their stellar performances in bed without doubt.

“Oh, no, no. There's no need to return the favour, especially with deflowered, used men with grandpa dicks and balls. We've already taken our fair share when we decided to serve you well during your recovery period. San ge had duplicated the Planet of the Clouds at its peak and prime, unspoiled stage of evolution, then downloaded the raw data to each of our own respective empires. I've personally stocked up with enough genetic diversity of superior, perfect Lan Wang Jis in my bedside drawer that I can put a few drops onto my very own floor mat out of tens of others, and it opens up into a portal filled with fresh new planets thriving with diverse perfect husbands in all forms, shapes and sizes.”

“Yes, da ge is right, and if you want, we can share the biodata with you too. I feel guilty for cheating too many husbands and the fathers of my children, so I’ve only been using one floor mat at a time, while keeping the rest in didi’s vast storage space. It gets a bit boring after climbing in and out every two minutes or so, but we all have our own ways of enjoying the fruits of our kins’ efforts. It helps that subsequent generations of Lan Wang Jis are equipped with parenting skills and we’re close to bringing 61st-century medical technology to fore, which greatly aids the process from conception until childbirth and all the way through raising children to adulthood. See, my skin’s still supple and young, and I don’t have any fat thighs or strained ligaments in my pelvic area, even though I’ve taken a two-minute trip to my floor mat to mate with new husbands and my tenth-generation descendents, while making this fruit juice for you in the kitchenette, just now.”

“Hmph! Er ge is so old-fashioned! All of these wouldn’t be possible without the help of my great computer programming skills! I’ve programmed zillions of books, research and wikis on reproductive science, antenatal care, parenting and all those stuff into massive databases, and had countless robots design and implement the improvements to bring the future to us! Aren’t I awesome? I don’t even need a floor mat; I have the portal-generating device in my pocket, and I can just reach in, press the red button, and teleport in and out of any planets filled with sexy husbands of my choice, and return here in two seconds feeling fresh and young, even after having crazy monkey sex for millenias and birthing a world’s worth of kids! What d’ya think? It’s fast, it’s convenient, it fits into anyone’s pockets and it can be activated with just a touch of a button! I’m already making babies with twentieth-gens and their ancient first-gen grandpas for the sake of keeping some purebreds around.”

“Umm... umm... I-- I can’t have babies yet, because I haven’t reached puberty... but, but I can help! I’m running huge factories and warehouses in my empire where planets, even galaxies brimming with perfect specimens of our Grand Patriarch are pumped out every other minute. I’m supplying everyone with medical equipment, housing, food and other resources, whole civilizations and all that, so that every father can live comfortably to raise the children well while the mother is away to make more offsprings. And... oh! All the children will grow up and they’ll be sent to my facilities for processing, enriching our archive of genetic mix, and we’ll make more royal subjects for our ever-expanding Kingdom! I don’t really know why because these are all scientific stuff that I haven’t learned in school, but I’m following what I’m told, and I hope I’m doing a good job!”

“Oh, didi , you should tell him about the time when you mixed up the orders for Uncle Wei and A-Xian in the Realms of the Gods, both of whom are deserving Wei-kin for this novel technology. Did you hear? That horrible Uncle Wei received a batch of floor mats that led him to worlds filled with middle-aged and rather elderly Uncle Lan lookalikes, while A-Xian dove into his presents without checking and ended up having fruitless sex with A-Ji clones because the kids aren’t fertile yet - like you! Ha ha ha!”

“Hush, didi is red-faced now and he’s about to cry! Come here, boy, and let er ge give you a sweet kiss on your cheeks to make you feel better. Don’t listen to that bad da ge , he likes to bully you a lot, doesn’t he? You did a good thing, because surprisingly, the Regent’s household in the castle in the sky became more peaceful with Uncle Wei being trapped and held against his will by very powerful husbands inside his floor mats. Plus, you received feedback from the Regent, Uncle Lan, and A-Ji for similar floor mats but populated by the best of our Wei-kin. That’s good for the business, isn’t it? You have new customers!”

“Hey, that gives me an idea! Let me fire up ErNet and my hidden network of Wangxian-nets and awesome computing powers. Who says that kids can’t have more kids? Challenge the status quo, man, rules are meant to be broken! Let me change the genetic make-up and the evolutionary outcomes of the current linear coding, and morph it to a more organic and serendipitous one... mmm... I can make pre-pubescent Wei-kin fertile if I wanted to and have them bear babies just like any adults, so who says that can’t be done? Huh! Just you wait and see!”

Wei Ying clicked his tongue in annoyance upon hearing the revelations from his siblings, and the suffocatingly envious party-like mood in the air. He realized that once again, he was lagging behind not only in reproductive management practices, but also in the number of babies made. He sighed and silently retracted his now-uninteresting offer, then plucked the two cucumbers lying on his eyes, and munched them noisily out of spite. He would ask about san ge’s two-second sex-in-a-pocket later, when his mood improved.

.

Lan Zhan has, undisputedly, long, lush black hair that shines and glows with an ethereal sheen in both sun and moonlight, and his crowning glory is truly, an exemplar of the pride and envy of every Gusu Lan man. It deserves good steady brushing, at least twice a day, and a thorough rinse, at least daily, to keep the flowing woven piece of art in top condition. However, he’s picked up a stowaway in the form of a greying strand of hair, hidden at the bottom; it does not grow a root at the man’s scalp, but it hides amongst those lovely obsidian locks, entwining itself with other strands of black hair to firmly grip and hold on to Lan Zhan’s head wherever he goes.

Little Ni-er has a tendency to explore her daddy's nape and shoulder, because staying inside his hair, cocooned by the comforting warmth, shielded from the elements of nature, and encased in the woody, sandalwood scent of her parent, can be both very relaxing, desirable and boring at the same time, especially with nothing else to do, but to play with daddy. So she wiggles and dances on her own, coo-ing and babbling like a baby with the sounds of windbell chimes and clinking crystals, inside Lan Zhan's hair and sometimes, sticking out like an errant grey hair to get a whiff of fresh outside air, before diving back in to crawl through her daddy's collar and snuggle up against the crook of the muscular neck. She sways and slithers around her parent's neck and upper torso, like a rather annoying but endearing thread of hair that tumbles carelessly into one's clothes.

"Ni-er," Lan Zhan murmurs calmly, and she stops what she's doing. Oh, she thought, her daddy is probably a little upset and irritated, because she'd been rolling around his ticklish bits from touching the fine bit of hair on the skin close to the jugular, to creeping downwards, tumbling past the collarbones and almost, nearly almost, reaching the broad expanse of his clothed chest, wanting, nearly wanting to entwine herself with some strands of nipple hair around her daddy's breast. Those hair are short, but soft, and they make a comfortable place to latch on while she circles the said pink nipple for a tasty suckle. She knows there's no milk to be had from her daddy's tits, but she's still too young to wean off her infant habits and at times of anxiety, she wants to be as close to that strong, beating heart as possible.

Lan Zhan scratches the itch left behind by his lil' girl, and adjusts his topknot. He raises his left arm a bit, and smiles he feels the stray strand of wiggly hair crawl across his pecs and take up residence in the bush of straight short armpit hair beneath his arm. There, nestled in the crook of daddy's mighty arm and snug against the upper sleeves, she can curl up, snuggle and doze off in peace, without worrying that an unexpected gust of wind may blow her away, and that she's much closer to her daddy's strong beating heart that would lull her to sleep once again. The corner between the chest and upper arms is a little damp, a little musty, and smells a little ripe - but it's daddy's manly spicy, and wood-y smell all right -, so she's a happy camper after migrating to Lan Zhan's armpit, and ceased to tickle the man whenever he turns his head or takes a bow.

.

Lan Zhan received an ErNet private message that Wei Ying wanted to take a break after the fiasco at the Jinshan Tao temple, presumably to recover from the electrical shocks from the magical circle that almost incapacitated him, but not before Ernie saved the day and transported the spouse to a safe haven in neighbouring village Nieshan. It didn't seem too out of the ordinary; once in a while, a spouse may feel tired of his marital life, and wants to temporarily return to his hometown and reunite with his siblings - Lan Zhan's wives-cum-in laws, technically. A bit of me-time would do wonders to their relationship, according to various expert marriage counsellors.

Without a megalomaniac wife behind his back to pull his puppet-strings, to dictate his actions, to tell him whether to stand up and be the protagonist of the story once more, or to slink into the shadows and remain as a sidekick that'd doom their future - Lan Zhan breathed easier and pondered his next move, and took his time to evaluate his options and the words that he'd speak that would pave his way forward. Ni-er settled down for a nap inside his clothes, tucked inside his armpit, in the meantime.

The twelve greatest yaoguai of the Jinshan military centre, sans their human counterparts, assembled in front of the demolished dormitory building, with a large gaping hole in the middle that was formerly Lan

Zhan's dorm unit - and the center of attraction for the growing crowd. These non-human warriors organized themselves coincidentally following the mystical astrological zodiac of the ancient times, and their followers - presumably rescued and allied yaoguai from other parts of the prison camp - trailed behind. All yaoguai had shed their black-white prison uniforms and magically returned to their original, more intimidating and exotic looks, part humanoid and part beast, armed with weapons and armour made of fur, wood, metal and other primitive or sometimes enchanted materials. Their eyes gleamed with uncanny intelligence not seen the day before while they were sedated by the effects of the spores and while milling around with their bonded-pair human cultivator partners. The fittest and most fearsome of them strode to the spot where the front door to the annihilated dorm unit once stood, and the tall, imposing bull-headed demon king bellowed in frustration while stomping the ground with its cloven feet. A tiny rodent barely clung on from its horns for its dear life, as the bovine barbarian shook his fists in fury.

“My lord, Niu Mowang , we've been scouring the entire perimeter and even used your wife's Flaming Leaf Fan to burn down those ugly structures made by those pathetic humans, but we weren't able to pick up the trail left by the legendary Silver White Dragon yaoguai . The sun is setting, we must make haste and join the rest who've broken through the damaged fences and set up camp outside for the night, safe from those migraine-inducing magic and chants from wandering Tao priests. Also, there's no telling when human reinforcements will arrive, much less the appearance of that formidable Lieutenant!”

“Mooo....! Mouse didi sitting upon my head, your wit is sharp, your intelligence is farsighted, and your cowardice probably drives us all farther than the fastest flying heavenly cranes; no wonder you won the first place in the Jade Emperor's race towards the Heavenly Gates for reasons I shall ne'er be impressed of. I'm neither cowed by humans nor the satanic magics of the Tao, but I'm driven to remain here to find our prophesied Dragon who, according to our holy texts, shall lead us to victory against those who serve the royal bastards of Chang'an!"

"Mowang , Mowang , please do not be so hot-blooded over a mere single sighting. I'm also a Dragon descendent, and I have ties with my relatives who share the same blood as other dragon gods and the Dragon King of the Seas. I can ask for their help to locate the Silver White Dragon - but only if we escape this prison and out into the open space, so that I can perform my kin-calling rituals. I know the life cycle of dragons; the one we saw hatched from its silken egg in the courtyard, and must've been some kind of mystical reincarnation. It cannot fly far from here at such a tender young age. So please, Mowang , let us leave this place first."

"He issss right. I'm a Ssssnake descent, one of the thousandssss of offspringssss of Creation Goddessss Nuwa, blessingss with powerssss to create, but only when a fressssh body of water issss available. Find me a river or a lake, and I sssshall ussse my abilitiessss to build a sssshelter for all of ussss, protected from intrusionssss of both human and Tao!"

"I concur to Sister Snake! I have plenty of bitter memories here, after my cultivation partner was murdered last night and I was forced to bed with another. It's a disgrace to remain here, a nightmare of gender subjugation and enslavement, being a proud disciple of the Tiger-Claw clan! Mrrrowl! In my blind fury, I've killed as many human soldiers and cultivators that still breathed after that surprising explosion, and you commanded!"

"Don't forget us, Tiger gu niang , we also helped you to rid the pests from this sickened encampment. Both myself, a respectable great-grand offspring of Sun Wukong, and my fat brother here, a relative of the venerable Zhu Bajie - we shixiong and shidi helped to cull the numbers of resisting humans and left the useless officials and administrators barricaded inside their crumbling buildings. Alas, some senior guards, like the one surnamed Liu and Zhen, escaped to the woods. If only I had my ancestors' master's steed, Bai Long Ma, we could've pursued and wiped out all surviving human bugs from this land!"

"Uhh... do you think we can befriend that Silver White Dragon and ask it to be a holy dragonhorse? How far can we travel, and can we reach a town by nightfall? I'm getting hungry, and I sure don't mind taking a break from slaughtering people to have good food in a toasty warm teahouse, with lots of wine and beautiful women too..!"

"Cock-a-doodle-doo! You're a real pig, Zhu gege ! Once night descends, it'll be dangerous even for the powerful yaoguai and demigods amongst us! Remember, the wilderness is filled with marauding low-level yaoguai who, like us, were created from animals and objects, then enchanted over generations with magic, to make us who we are today - intelligent demons bearing slivers and blood-drops of ancient gods and deities, created from bubbling cauldrons, magical spells, longevity and qi -rich pills, and plenty of time stewing and meditating inside the giant, steaming and smoky underground volcanic dungeons of the Imperial Palace."

"Woof! Woof! That's right, Rooster shixiong ! We were created as monsters who blindly follow our masters' calls to ravage the enemies' lands and destroy their people and civilizations. Fortunately, thanks to the mishap during the New Year's Hunt, some of us escaped after possessing and feeding on enough enemy cultivators' bodies and souls to turn the tide for the Hunt. However, our inherently dark nature demands that we follow the cycle of the yaoguai despite our divine nature - at day, we are subdued and civil, at night, we revert to our reckless, unintelligent forms unless we maintain our high energy levels."

“Please! Mowang ! I don’t want to turn into a horny humping rabbit when the last rays of the sunlight disappear from the horizon! I must find a suitable spot to meditate and cultivate enough qi in order not to descend to that madness that is in my God of Fertility genes! Let’s find a safe place to hide, and I promise to help you, along with my countless wild rabbit brethren in these lands, in your search for the Silver White Dragon at first light of dawn tomorrow!”

“Baa--- Baa--- Yes, especially for us lesser herbivore yaoguai who do not have nobility’s blood like yours, Mowang . If I turn to a normal but tasty-looking giant fluffy mountain sheep at midnight like a were-animal, surely all the predators in the forests will chase after me! Also, I don’t want us to fight those lesser yaoguai running in the wild... that’s like starting a civil war with our own kind! Think of your followers’ safety and well-being, while balancing your need for heroics and our mutual desires for a rebellion against the Emperor of Chang’an. We’ll surely have our revenge some day, and rise against our former creators and masters, but not unless we have sound bodies and minds in the first place!”

“Brrrhmm... Indeed, all of us are at our peak of power when we’re sane. Rooster xiansheng over there can call out the might of the Sun God for a few seconds, and Dog xiansheng has inherited the abilities of the Heavenly Sun-Eating Dog to eclipse the heavens to scare our adversaries, and I, being the great-great-grand-nephew of Horse-Face, can turn into a Nightmare Horse and call upon the Underworld to aid us in times of need. We can summon fierce corpses, vampires and evil spirits, but only when we’re intelligent enough. In fact, I’ll ask someone to sneak into the Lord of Hell’s home and take a peek at the Book of Judgement, perhaps we’ll find clues to pinpoint the location of that prophesied Dragon that you seek, rather than running around like headless chickens!”

“Cock-a-doodle-doo! Hey, don’t diss my kin! Just so you know, the special plate of scrambled eggs you ate this morning were from my wives in the other dormitory!”

“Oh my goodness, I’m going to feel sick and vomit all over my monkey fur from this disgusting talk about eggs! Fatty pig, do something to shut that bird-brain up!”

“What’ssss so bad about eggssss? You furry four-leggers will never undersssstand that joyssss of laying hard, leathery and clean eggssss, asssopossessed to a bloody messsss of ssssoft, sssslimy, weak and wrinkly flessssh ssssliding out from between your legssss!”

“Roooooaaarrrr! Why are we arguing about the ways we give birth to our children! I’ve given birth to a litter of cubs before and there’s nothing wrong with that!”

Niu Mowang bellowed out a deafening “Silence!” and everyone scurried back to their places, while the lesser followers-of-followers shrank into the shadows, meekly quivering with fear at their fearless leader’s anger. The ensuing minute was filled with trepidation, of harsh bull-ish breathing and bloodshot stares that wordlessly disciplined the entire assembled ragtag army of yaoguai warriors. He raised his magically enchanted flail - a cruel-looking handheld weapon with a spiked ball chained to one end - and brought it close to his heart. He lowered his head and there was a look of sadness and regret on his face.

“Fellow yaoguai comrades, this Demon King has heard your pleas and reasons. I rue the day when I ordered us to seek human cultivators to bond with, in the hopes that we can lead better, more peaceful lives in this world, as equals of the citizens of this country... only to have our trust betrayed by their wickedness, fall into our enemies’ clutches, then brought to this prison camp against our will as battle thralls, due to our former masters’ treachery and those terrible Tao priests’ mind-controlling magic.” Niu Mowang ’s form was hunched, and his hands balled into fists, portraying his disappointment and bitterness as much as his massive hulking body shook with raw emotion that resonated with his followers’.

There were soft, whispery murmurs emanating from the back of the ranks of the yaoguai assembly, and plenty of nods.

The gargantuan bull took a deep breath, and when he spoke next, he lifted his chin and clouds puffed out from his nostrils, “Never again will we attempt to cross that bridge between our kin and the human’s. That friendship bridge is burnt! There is no more but enmity between them and us! If you call yourselves true-blooded and enlightened yaoguai , follow me to the furthest deserts of despair, we shall climb from our ashes of defeat and rise once again - like the Sun at dawn, and the Moon at dusk! We will rally our kin, teach the young ‘uns to fight alongside brothers, to lay waste on our common enemy’s land! We will destroy Mankind!”

Niu Mowang ’s bellows echoed across the dormitory compounds where the intelligent yaoguai thronged, their hearts stirred and their determination steeled by their leader’s speech. Snarls and howls punctuated each declaration, claws and carapaced appendages swung eagerly in the cooling evening air to lend their heart-rending thumps to the clarion war cry. The bovine war general took a step forward, his Demon King form glowed red with barely-restrained energy seeping out from within, no longer suppressed by any spores or any oppressive forces from humankind, his mighty heavyweight hoofed foot kicking up a cloud of dust, and he thrust his trustworthy flail toward the setting sun.

“We leave now, brothers sworn unto a common oath of revenge, and blood shared from the same cup we drink in our newfound freedom! Let us find shelter for the night, recover from our injuries and recoup our losses. Those who are strong, protect and heal the weak. Those who can find our guiding star, the Silver White Dragon, do so and you shall be rewarded. Those who are able to, seek help from your brethren, strengthen our ties with the outside world as well as build homes for our new families who tread the same path as us! The gods are on our side, so, have faith!”

The crowd roused to a monstrous applause of grunts, roars and a variety of animal sounds - even the Mouse that sat atop of the Demon King's crown of bristly hair and horn, clapped its paws fervently and dabbed its whiskers and cheeks from unbridled tears of hope.

Not too far away, Lan Zhan hid in the shadows as quiet as a mouse, not related to the one with the Demon King of course, and observed the latest twist in events as he learned the true nature of the yaoguai that had besieged his world since New Year's Day. The four Demons of the Negative Planes crouched beside him, shivering with fear after watching such bloodthirsty creatures boldly announcing their intent for countrywide massacre - they had done well to protect their master from being noticed while they went around rummaging through debris and rubble of the master's dorm unit for any leftover valuables after Ni-er's earlier accident of unappetizing proportions.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 197

Apparently, Lan Zhan's dramatic weight loss and makeover, from a tubby obese man with facial hair, to a tall, handsome and muscular, shaven noble dressed in white - fortunately, Ni-er swallowed and brought along his old Gusu Lan robes made during the time from before he fattened up over the preceding winter -, didn't attract any unsavoury attention or recognition from the yaoguai -kin when he tried to blend in, and joined in rank and file of the moving mass of non-human creatures.

With the Jinshan military centre reduced to smouldering ruins, looted warehouses, armoury and pantries, barricaded burning offices filled with terrified surviving human soldiers, and a relatively untouched Tao temple cordoned off by its tall, imposing fortress-like walls, where Tao priests refused to go out and defend the Imperial army's honour - because they probably turned tail when they realized their pagoda had stopped functioning from the damage caused by the explosion, and they had little spores left to control the rebels - with no other reason to stay behind, he followed the merry band of yaoguai , just like scores of others lesser creatures who sought protection within the safety net cast by the inspiring and formidable Zodiac Demons.

He was interrogated several times about his identity, because he bore peculiar features that resembled the yaoguai 's mortal enemies - humans. Lan Zhan obviously disliked putting on airs and lie about his background, or indulge in silly cosplays such as wearing a wig made of leaves and twigs, or slipping into a gutted, skinned roadkill to satisfy someone's fur fetish; so he simply lifted his arm and let his lil' girl slide out through the sleeves, and told his gawking audience that she's his cute lil' sweetpea.

“Aww... such a fuzzy cute silkworm! You must be insect-kin, the butterfly and moth kind. It’s advantageous that your species is good at camouflaging and metamorphosis, no wonder you’re the ugliest human I’ve ever seen, yet your lil’ girl is simply adorable for yaoguai standards. Can I pinch her cute furry cheeks?... Who’s the cutie... Who’s the cutie... it’s you of course, you little demonic fuzzball!”

“The father must be as handsome as he’s white as ghost-kin, and so is his daughter! There’s something mysterious about creatures donned in white, and the two of you emit a very strong, heartwarming magical aura. Well, like daddy, like daughter, as they say, right? Where’s the mom? In another village? Oh dear, the poor lil’ girl misses her mom, doesn’t she? What does she look like? Cold, black, cunning and oily...? Of course I’m right, your wife must be from the oily-worm clan! There’s an enchanting pull between opposing sides sometimes, that’s why silkworms and oily-worms tend to argue a lot over their differences, and yet reconcile with plenty of sweet mixed-heritage caterpillar babes like yours. Your son must be a cold, black thing too, I believe. Bratty boys don’t run very far from their mummy’s side, I’m sure.”

“Are you joining us on our journey to Chang’an? No? Where are you headed to? Oh... that’s... somewhere in Qinghe province, right? Over those hills, I guess. If you ask that yaoguai over there, he may be able to help. He’s a friend of the wildbirds in this area. He may summon a crow or a magpie to guide you safely to that village. What would you do when you’re there? I heard the prison camp hasn’t been properly set up yet, and their anti-magic fences aren’t completed, so you should be able to infiltrate with your powers. You can cast swarms of butterflies to distract those silly humans and get your wife out, okay? If you need more advice on military tactics, Brother Mouse atop Niu Mowang ’s head can help you.”

Lan Zhan felt a little nervous and unnerved at the friendly banter with yaoguai -kin, with some individuals bearing very ugly or ferocious looks and body parts of beasts he'd rather not stand too close to. However, he was drawn to the tonnes of mommy-guides offered by demons both of the male and female kind, and he could relate to the conversations that revolve around relationships and parenting. His daughter had a wonderful time getting to know these strange new uncles, aunts, gege s and jiejie s - she rolled and bounced between each individual's welcoming arms, sniffed and nuzzled them, nom-nom'ed their clothes, fur, scales, appendages and left her drool everywhere to the tune of coo-ing 'Aww that's so cute' and excited 'She likes me, she likes me!' especially when she smiled to bare her toothless gums, without eyes, nose or ears, atop her furry tapered head like the giant foot-long caterpillar that she was, giggling out light bell chimes and the tinkling of glass and crystals against soft soothing breeze.

Eventually, the convoy made a stop when they found a nice place to set up camp for the night by a running river - using a few tents stolen from Jinshan, bubbling pots of icky and grisly-looking meaty stew cooking over campfires, and some of the more tribal yaoguai began to perform strange singing and dancing rituals to herald their freedom and to pray for a safe night for all. To make their performance more engrossing and mysterious, each tribe donned special masks and costumes hastily carved and woven using materials they could find from their surroundings. Reptile-kin swayed exotically, mammal-kin skipped with fancy footwork eagerly to percussive beats made from beating drums or swinging chains, and they sang using throaty voices and animalistic grunts and whistles. It was akin to immersing oneself to a primitive party made from a gathering of many tribes and races, from the lens and enjoyment for non-humans.

The yaoguai are wild and independent, their primal needs are basic and simple, and they're just as happy to curl up against a tree trunk garbed only in their skins and furs. Lan Zhan observed and learned a bit more about yaoguai culture, which seemed barbaric and alien in nature, borrowing bits of exotic Far, Far West elements and mixed with local paganistic beliefs; he thought he was doing well in blending into the crowd, particularly when one centipede yaoguai approached to serve him a bowl of brownish goop that smelled bitter and bloody, earthy and uncooked, and engaged in pleasantries and talked about raising one's brood in a world without conflict with humans. Lan Zhan duly poured the contents of the bowl into Ni-er's waiting mouth, and the centipede - being related to worms and all things creepy and crawly, including silkworms - cheered the little ball of fur for a job well done in finishing her daddy's portion, and wished her well to grow up strong and ferocious, that she can devour ten men in a single mouthful once she's pupates and emerges as an multi-legged, multi-segmented predatory adult. Lan Zhan nodded hesitantly and sheepishly thanked the centipede, who invited him to get more grub if needed (he politely declined), and the man gave Ni-er a soothing backscratch to quietly praise her for good behaviour amongst bloodthirsty monsters. The fuzzy worm squealed happily, twisted and turned then arched her goosebumped back frenziedly, at her favourite daddy-daughter bonding activity.

As the moon rose, against the glint of silvery light from the dark skies above and amber hues from dying campfire embers, Lan Zhan noticed that few yaoguai - especially the nocturnal ones - began to explore their sprawling campsite that sheltered nearly a hundred individuals. Just as many hunkered down for a shuteye, some woke up from their daydream-like state, and started to look for food - hunting for animals in the vicinity seemed to be an attractive option - or some physical company of either gender to spend the night with. Despite their diversity in physiques, abilities, needs and wants, the yaoguai in general seemed polite and helpful to one another, keeping their utmost respect, and in some way, distance, towards the Zodiac Demons; nobody refuses an order from those twelve leading Demons, and their orders have been few and far in between, quite inspiring at times, and is as demanding as asking fellow yaoguai to simply be nice to one another, not to cause trouble amongst themselves, and to live another day and fight for their cause. The yaoguai live freely and practise liberties in their melting pot of clan and tribal cultures, which vary from a smattering of elaborate rituals and beliefs to being practically non-existent especially for lesser demons such as those that evolved from crawling insects and invertebrates.

A few yaoguai decided to part ways because they didn't really want to join a war, or their families and homes were nearby - the forests around Jinshan are lush and thriving, filled with wildlife that hadn't been disturbed by mankind for centuries, and some blessed individuals had meditated and cultivated for decades to attain intelligence and shapeshifting capabilities before they were captured by the Imperial army. As soon as there was a break - a change of shifts in patrolling guards -, Lan Zhan headed off as well, without rousing much suspicion from the haphazard sea of lounging, walking, crawling and trotting creatures in the middle of the forest. One wolf-type yaoguai warrior eyed him curiously to ask, with growls and spits in-between, "Going already? Won't you contribute to our cause for freedom?".

Lan Zhan opened his sleeve to show a resting, curled-up silkworm, her body gently rising and falling as she slumbered into dreams of getting hand-fed by daddy and having her back scratched, and gurgled happily while rolling to her other side. The wolf 'Aww'ed and his eyes dilated then turned shiny sparkly against the faint moonlight at the ultimate wholesome display of cuteness, and waved him off. "Single fathers sure have it tough at times like this. Go on, take your girl to safety and raise her well," the wolf said, and bid Lan Zhan farewell. The man thought that after what he's seen and heard, the yaoguai seemed to be a decent bunch, as long as one keeps within their circle and does not mess with their hierarchy and livelihoods.

Less than a hundred paces away, behind a clump of bushes and away from prying eyes and ears, Lan Zhan reached his rendezvous point. A magical horse carriage awaited him. The four Demons of the Negative Planes emerged from the shadows, like pulling off their jet-black cloaks that hid them from every living beings' senses.

A-Jia, like the other three, dressed in black tunics and trousers, with similarly coloured bandanas and masks as well, and looked like a deadly assassin in the night. He bowed respectfully with folded hands at the front, and gestured to Lan Zhan to board his royal transport; needless to say, A-Ding, being the youngest and most energetic, was the dark brown horse that pulled the said glimmering carriage made of sturdy hardwood, adorned with dark jewels, cloud and lotus-themed ornaments, with a solid roof of carved bamboo and four large metal wheels to give the construct adequate stability and speed. “You have uninvited guests inside, but their company would help you to pass the time. According to the schedule, your estimated time of arrival will be around sunrise, so there is time to enjoy first-class supper onboard and a premium selection of entertainment options during the trip,” the middle-aged servant bowed again and raised his hand to point at the carriage; the door opened on its own, and A-Bing appeared from the inside of the spacious vehicle of choice circa 2000 B.C. with a napkin hanging neatly from an arm - his personal butler.

“Uninvited guests?” Lan Zhan asked quizzically, but that question was left unanswered as he rushed headlong, partly from wondering who would dare intrude his royal ride to see his queen, and partly because his nose picked up mouth-watering smells of foods being cooked and heated inside the carriage by a private chef - A-Yi, supposedly. His stomach rumbled in anticipation.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 198

First-class service came with everything he, a god, needed for a trip on the road. Within this spacious, well-furnished and fully serviced space-time bubble that included the cabin, lavatories, a shower and jacuzzi, even a kitchenette, he had a driver, A-Ding, a personal guard, A-Jia, a butler, A-Bing, and a private chef, A-Yi; all four took turns to transform into the horse that pulled the carriage, starting with little A-Ding, and everyone followed proper procedures to the letter.

His three-seater ergonomic-friendly couch with in-built home theatre and gaming systems, acupressure support and advanced robotics, could be fully reclined to become a king-sized bed. There was plenty of legroom and with a ceiling as high as thrice a man's height; he could do somersaults or practise swordboarding if he wanted, but he opted not to, because a disembodied voice spoke through the various screens and panels dimly lit around the seats, casting comforting blue hues throughout the expansively decorated interior of the cabin.

“Ladies and gentlemen, this is your attendant, A-Jia, speaking. On behalf of the Kingdom of Lan and the prestigious conglomerate company Wangxian, the entire crew wishes you welcome aboard our non-stop pleasure cruise and horse carriage service from Jinshan to Nieshan. Our journey time will be twelve hours and thirty minutes. We will be travelling at ground altitude, past windy hiking treks, rustic farmlands, virgin and primary lush forests and picturesque mountainside trails at the speed of a steady, calming and child-friendly three kilometers per hour.”

A-Jia and his fellow demons had their own single seats, and the eldest read through a prepared script into a microphone, while A-Yi and A-Bing went around to check on final preparations, such as securing the door and serving one round of refreshments, before putting things away.

“Three keey-looou-meee-terrs purr hour? What’s that? Is it edible?” one shrill-voiced child blurted, while downing his cup of orange cordial.

“Shhh... A-Xian, just listen and follow their instructions. Uncle Lan paid for our tickets and he said there’s plenty to eat and play. So we shouldn’t complain,” the other, more serious partner pleaded with logic and rationale, while picking off a saucer of toasted mixed nuts from the tray table.

On the other side of the cabin was another three-seater with those two uninvited guests, with plenty more room to spare since there was a playpen corner filled with said toys ranging from straw objects to metal and plastic figurines, and loads of Wangxian Children’s Classics Favourites line of packaged snacks. A-Ji and A-Xian had politely greeted the Grand Patriarch with a grovelling bow (A-Ji had to push A-Xian’s head down, because the latter was stubborn and ignorant of the etiquettes of greeting one’s First Father and God), and the two runts explained that they fled their castle in the sky - again -, this time out of boredom more than anything else; apparently Uncle Wei and the Regent each had errands to run - one to destroy people’s innocence and ruin livelihoods, the other to maintain a semblance of a ruling stable government across the Realms - and hadn’t been paying enough attention to the boys. Ever since the invention of the floor mats arrived in the Realms of the Gods in the form of free FeiEx courier deliveries to all Lan and Wei-kin’s homes, all adults had been exceptionally busy, starting from their two-minute intervals of going down and climbing out of those strange mats, to more recently, doing two-second skinny dippings through those shady-looking pieces of rugs.

(At this point, Lan Zhan, who had been at the top of the news around his Kingdom using ErNet's awesome faster-than-light psychic connections, let his toes slide to the floor to touch his own floor mat beside the seat. His toes grasped one corner and lifted it for a peek - he was pleased to note that the mat had been automatically upgraded to the said two-second version - ah, the conveniences of being a VIP member with active subscription privileges; he quickly wiped off the smirk off his face, barely restrained his tongue from licking his lips, and returned a stoic gaze to the two boys, hoping that they didn't suspect anything from the most perverted man-cum-god in the entire multiverse.)

So, after a decent bit of pestering by adorable A-Xian who had fallen out of favour with the mighty Uncle Lan - who now owns his own harem of little A-Xian lookalike slaves in his personal underground dungeon that also doubled as a breeding den -, he simply slapped a couple of free all-around-the-world open and unlimited travel tickets sponsored by Heaven's bottomless coffers to the boy's hands, and told the brat to find something fun to do "out there". A-Ji was a little lost, because Uncle Wei stopped waking him up at five in the morning with sex and he wasn't around throughout the day to touch and fiddle with the boy's wee-wee, or to probe and attack his rosebud - in fact, A-Ji kind-of missed the dirty rapist uncle's presence after spending so many lifetimes being abused by that man, and the physical withdrawal symptoms were rather distressing; the moment A-Xian appeared at A-Ji's bedroom after a long while, they reunited with tons of fruitless child-sexual intercourse that only eight-year olds can enjoy, and it was after satisfying A-Ji's loneliness with sweet kisses on the cheeks and cute rubs on the pinkie-length penis, that he was willing to calm down and talk about their escalating situation. With the two tickets in hand, they set off for another adventure of another lifetime.

The children's animated retelling of their exodus and exciting encounters with the denizens of the Mortal Realm, which included fighting off huge monsters and getting raped by faceless mobs - all the usual for these sexually precocious Dream-kin children -, was interrupted when A-Jia's calming voice continued the necessary pre-journey announcements. “At this time, make sure your seat backs and tray tables are in their full upright position and that your seat belt is correctly fastened. Also, your portable electronic devices must be set to ‘airplane’ mode until an announcement is made upon arrival. Thank you,” the demon said in a very friendly and courteous manner, that even A-Xian started to look for his seatbelt and rummaged wildly for the controls to adjust his seat, while asking what is an ‘airplane’ and whether that was a kind of Demon from another Plane. A-Ji shushed him gently and reminded his partner to stop moving around unnecessarily. Like a child of noble upbringing, A-Ji engaged in pleasant banter with their attendants and to seek their advice whenever needed.

Lan Zhan requested his attendants to tend to the two boys, since he was well-versed with boarding and taking flights during his past lifetimes, and didn’t need to be fussed by three fully grown demons. The boys continued to narrate their side of the story and Lan Zhan listened, lulled to complacent silence in their chatter, especially A-Xian’s. Once in a while he’d lift the curtains adjacent to his window seat, and peered outside - featureless, an ocean of nighttime blacks and misty greys with faint outlines of nearby tree trunks and foliage; since there was nothing of interest, he left the curtains closed. There were few other sets of velvety heavy curtains around the cabin, and each hid a portal leading to a particular location - whether a fully equipped kitchen and pantry for A-Yi, lockable wardrobe, cupboards and closets to store one’s coats and baggage, a warehouse of amenities for A-Bing to bring out his fullest service as a butler, or to the toilets attached with bathrooms and a jacuzzi pool.

“Cabin crew, doors on automatic, cross-check and report. Prepare for departure. Thank you.”

Everyone took their seats, and there was an air of anticipation and excitement to finally depart for their long-haul overnight journey. A-Xian kicked his legs excitedly when the three demons buckled up, and A-Ji had to place his foot atop his partner's to stop the rather irritating, creaky sounds and bouncing movements. In the end, A-Xian played footsie with A-Ji's toes, and slid his little smooth feet around A-Ji's shins, and that left the latter red-faced and unusually still.

Videos on safety procedures played on the screens on the walls and holographically. A-Xian became rather flustered with the amount of information and list of do's and don'ts. There was only a single, well-lit emergency exit, i.e. the entrance door, so he couldn't understand why he had to pay attention to it for a potential disaster that would probably never happen; there were panels on the ceiling that probably stored oxygen masks and more panels on the floor beneath floor mats that likely contain life vests, and his fingers itched to know what they looked like, or if he could press a button to release them for fun; and before either boys knew, A-Xian was already sitting on his haunches to mimic - very poorly - the bracing position, and that resulted in him getting a scolding from A-Ji; thus, in the end, the bratty boy grabbed a couple of in-flight magazines and safety information cards, tore into sizable chunks, and made paper cranes out of them, to A-Ji's chagrin.

Then, the horse - their captain and pilot, apparently - took its first few steps, and hauled the carriage along with nail-biting groans and squeaks, at a leisurely pace of three kilometers per hour.

.

“Ladies and gentlemen, the Captain has turned off the Fasten Seat Belt sign, and you may now move around the cabin. However we always recommend to keep your seat belt fastened while you're seated. In a few moments, the attendants will be passing around the cabin to offer you hot or cold drinks, as well as supper and snacks at any time of your choosing. In-cabin entertainment is fully operational and we hope you find delight in the latest movies, games and other virtual and holographic options onboard. Now, sit back, relax, and enjoy the rest of the journey. Thank you.”

The word ‘snacks’ perked up the two boys, and soon, the seatbelts were off, and they were in the playpen corner making up new adventures with action hero figures, zoo animal figures, robot and construction toys, 3d holo-video games, children’s story books and tons of other edutainment options. A-Yi made sure to see to the children’s needs by cooking up storms as demanded by the boys, which are mostly sweet and salty snacks, confectionaries, dairy and baked goods, and classic favourites including burgers, chicken nuggets and fries - with a vending machine that dished out all sorts of packaged food that were filled with synthetic colouring and flavourings.

Lan Zhan was about to settle for his supper - a delightful plate of golden breaded and fried pork cutlet served with sweet-sour plum sauce and thick gravy at the side, a serving of seasonal garlic stir-fry greens with mushrooms and fried tofu, and a large portion of steamed fragrant multigrain rice. There were appetizer salads and soups, as well as fruit and other healthy desserts, plus one sinful-looking cup of ice-cream to keep the VIP happy throughout his meal - he was about to take his first bite after tucking a napkin to the folds of his collared robes, when something began to struggle and move below his sleeves, and made tiny “nnngh-nnngh” sounds.

He sighed, and gently tugged out little Ni-er from the armpits of his sleeves. She was awake when she smelled the mouth-watering scents of good food wafting in the air of the enclosed space. He didn’t really fancy carrying a foot-long tub of baby fat on his belly strapped to infant seat belts during his journey, much less while having his long-awaited supper, so he handed the elongated ball of fur to A-Bing, the butler, who was also trained in professional babysitting. Soon, Ni-er forgot about her daddy's smell and warmth, and she was with the two boys in the playpen; with two Demon-nannies watching over the trio of kids. Ni-er squealed with delight because she was fed with the best, tastiest and freshest food that the 51st century Wangxian company made from its production lines and delivered through portals into the cabin; she also received plenty of belly rubs and back scratches while engaging in wrestling games with excited, shrieking boys who were biologically older than her, but in reality, much, much younger, because she'd gone through more lifetimes than anyone else, really. A-Ji and A-Xian ended up straddling the white furry worm, who shapeshifted to grow up to a few feet tall and to match the boys' heights, and she didn't mind when the boys humped against her fleshy, fuzz-covered body because those brats had been trained by their guardians to enjoy soft touches upon their developing, immature crotches.

Finally, with that out of the way, Lan Zhan inhaled deeply, smiled faintly, and proceeded to enjoy the cabin chef's selection for onboard first-class fine dining. Mmm, delish.

.

With the kids making a racket with full bellies even past bedtime - because there were so many things to play with, especially with a big furry worm she-monster as their companion -, Lan Zhan simply pulled the overhead soundproofing curtains to draw a border between his seat - his side of the aisle - from the children's. Silence reigned inside his personal cocoon, interrupted only when he pressed a button to call for an attendant for service. In there, a space-time bubble within another, a small office within the cabin, he made important calls to his royal subjects to check on the state of the Kingdom, held several holo-video conferences with his councils of gods, elites and advisors, and even had a one-to-one session with the perturbed and flushed Regent to review his yearly performance and remind the latter not to be too preoccupied with his new toy. “I’ve been using this floor mat much longer than any of you, and know the ins and outs, so heed my advice. Sex beneath the rug is extremely addictive. It taps into the subconscious like a drug, especially with its inherent breedworthy and entertaining experiences like no other. Therefore, treat it as a strong medicine - use it judiciously for its beneficial effects on one’s physical, mental, emotional and spiritual state, be wary of its corruptive influence, do not let it divert you from your noble goals,” he said, and the Regent held a regretful, almost bitter look on his face before acknowledging the sage words with a heartfelt bow on bended knees.

With that, he waved off the Regent and sent him to work overtime to make up for the losses in productivity - there were stacks of documents to be signed, new species and races to be discovered and named - including the branch of Men that Wei Ying founded with his newfound fertility capabilities -, brand and brave new worlds to be created, nurtured and farmed, company meetings to preside, gala concerts to attend for launching lines of exciting, innovative Wangxian-made products, et cetera ad nauseum . Lan Zhan felt accomplished, so he watched primetime news on the holo-video screen, checked his holo-phone and browsed the infinite ErNet to catch up on the latest trends, gossip and burning hot topics.

“... and what of the yaoguai ? The ones you travelled with, earlier this evening. Should I terminate their puny lives, like the many creatures that crossed your path?” the Lord Of Hell’s withering, raspy voice rattled from a Weichat voice app; the great God of Death preferred not to use video-conferencing lest his diabolical and fiendish visage cursed the network and crashed everyone’s holo-phones, and so he preferred to remain audio-only.

In the news, there were reports of increased baby dumping and requests for baby hatches at hospitals; the sudden influx of new births has started to cause chaos within the Kingdom's society and affected the company's employee welfare, benefits programme and focus on the business. He sighed and rubbed his forehead at the headache created by his spouse's penchant for mischief and the pleasures of the flesh - and he was partly to be blamed as well. He opened a tiny slit on the curtains that enclosed his private office in the cabin, and peered at the peaceful imagery of three kids sprawling inside the playpen, eyes closed and heads nodding off. The two attendants looked frazzled beyond means, after having to chase the brats around, feed them round the clock, and make sure they were cleaned, suited up in their bunny-themed jammies, had their teeth brushed (Ni-er was an exception, because she has none on her pinkish gums thus needed no brushing, and she wore an easy-to-wear oversized sock), bedtime stories read, before being tucked under warm fur blankets. One by one, each youngling was gently lifted from the disassembled playpen, and carefully placed into their reclined seats, where a snug fur-lined seatbelt was tied over their bulging bellies, and a sweet kiss placed on their cheeks, before the lights were dimmed.

Lan Zhan thought how happy life could be with little ones running around, watching them grow up and raising them to be capable, respectable young adults. Pure-hearted, intelligent, wise, strong and resilient in the face of life's challenges, including the corruption, falsehoods, evil and treachery that besieged his world in recent days. Listening to Niu Mowang 's naive but inspiring, heroic speeches, and learning about the struggling yaoguai 's approach to survival, society-building and child-rearing did stir some sense of hope in him, in that there is still some salvation at the grassroot levels, albeit of a different species and race than what he'd expected.

“Mn. The yaoguai are kind-hearted and brave. They deserve a winning chance in their fight for freedom.”

“... Sire, you do know that means a rewrite of an entire page of the Book of Judgement? Those Zodiac Demons have blood-relations to gods like us. To allow them triumphant victory is to send the realm back to the time when gods walked the Earth, when supernatural forces ruled the lands, and when Men barely emerged from their caves after evolving from apes.”

“Mn. Proceed. There is no hurry, so align my decision with the rest of the council, and report back to me when there is progress,” Lan Zhan curtly signed off his good friend from the Underworld shortly after that final instruction. He felt a twinge in his bladder after having one too many cups of steaming pu'er tea for supper, and his lower body felt really, really full and wanting - he had to quickly log out of his workplace. With the holo-phone switched to silent mode, he walked out and was escorted by A-Jia to the nearest bathroom, with his favourite upgraded floor mat nicely rolled under an arm. It was time for a break, a quick shower for sleep, and plenty of invigorating, tasty two-seconds' treats - to make the sweet, sweet slumber so much more relaxing.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 199

Each inexcusable trip to the floor mat, whether intentional, sensible or not, was akin to a drug-fuelled kaleidoscopic and whimsical adventure to more strange, twisted orgies woven from Lan Zhan's lustful, horny imaginations. In his upgraded floor mat, instead of falling through a rabbit hole like a heavy rock and landing softly upon a sea of waiting, writhing naked Wei Yings - using the stairs was optional, but usually he was too impatient to rush down in a pitter-patter of baby steps -, he found himself drifting against gravity at a leisurely, non-stomach dropping pace, his weight was buoyed by the air around him like a balloon of some sort. He could swim upwards, to the side or accelerate downwards, or twirl like an adept dolphin that leaps and dives in a huge, yawning cavernous pool that stretches infinitely in all directions. Around him were countless tiny sparkling pieces of gem-encrusted objects, each no larger than a thumb, glittering in pillars of light that shone through honeycombed openings from somewhere up above.

"Ah," he thought, as he reached for one of those shiny glassy pieces, and realized that it was a shard containing a cut of some kind of carpet or rug, frozen hard in its primordial, original state, glazed with a coat of sheen. They weren't simply tattered pieces torn from other floor mats of his Kingdom's subjects, rather, they were quick-access, pocket-sized objects, each piece being a crystalline mini-portal, paving the path to one unique mat out of the zillions that floated in this time-stopped space filled with galaxies of such precious jewels.

Lan Zhan understood that the upgrade to his floor mat not only granted him immensely expanded access to his, but also every other underground kingdoms filled with his people, their dreams, their fantasies, and of course, their harems as well - he is, and owns, the command centre and the core of all floor mats that ever existed, as the Emperor of the Kingdom of Lan should be. Every shard was a miniaturized physical manifestation of a portal spawner - one touch was all that was needed to activate a world of pleasure.

He gingerly picked one glimmering, reddish piece decorated with intricate floral designs embroidered in gold, smaller than the pad of his index finger, and wordlessly instructed it to open, to allow the Master unlimited access. Lan Zhan immediately winked out of existence, only to fwip ! back in two milliseconds later, looking very sweaty, flushed with rosiness, his clothes in disarray and his hair swept back because he forgotten to brush it after bedding thousands of Wei Yings without the knowledge of that floor mat's owner, thus stealing those lovely Wei Yings' virginities and impregnating countless sweet young mewling and purring, spread-eagled men, to his pleasure, before returning to the present - in a single heartbeat.

Lan Zhan tilted his chin and nearly gloated at his newfound ability and privilege as King of his people. Time had not moved in the next layer of reality where he originated, and yet, he'd already fathered another generation of babes. With a rare, uncharacteristic "Wheeeee!", he allowed himself a slight grin, and he kicked the air and propelled himself past numerous pieces of bejewelled rugs, like an astronaut performing a ballet in zero-gravity conditions. Along the way, he stretched out his arms and his fingers glided through those masses of stardusts, each containing a world of harems and pleasures from the acts of fertility. He blinked in and out of existence almost non-stop, as his skin touched those glittering pieces when he swam through the ocean of shimmering galaxies, savouring the tastes of each, two-milliseconds each and not a single second has passed yet in his reality, loving his Wei Yings more and more with the passage of time.

As night passed, and day arrived, the attendant demons became increasingly worried about their VIP passenger that had gone into the bathroom but did not return to his seat. They knocked on the door to check on him from time to time, but it was locked, and it sounded like the water was running - perhaps the esteemed guest was having a soak in the jacuzzi.

“Ladies and gentlemen, as we start our deceleration, please make sure your seat backs and tray tables are in their full upright position. Make sure your seat belt is securely fastened and all carry-on luggage is stowed underneath the seat in front of you or in the overhead bins. The attendants are currently passing around the cabin to make a final compliance check and pick up any remaining cups and glasses. Thank you.”

A-Jia kept staring at the tight space between the curtain that hung over the portal leading to the baths and those that closed around his master’s seat-cum-bed, hoping to catch a glimpse of a man rushing through to properly take his position and buckle up. A-Yi and A-Bing gently gathered the snoring children and oversized caterpillar, and somehow managed to prep them for arrival.

“Cabin crew, please take your seats following arrival protocols,” A-Jia announced to the microphone - it was inevitable that they’ll have to stop upon reaching their destination, with or without all their passengers accounted for.

There was a faintly felt deceleration, and the cabin slowed down to a grinding halt from three to zero kilometers per hour. There were some bumps along the way, as the carriage wheels ran over a few errant pebbles and uneven slopes; fortunately all baggage and loose items had been secured by the attendants beforehand.

A-Jia sighed, and continued with his script-reading, “Ladies and gentlemen, welcome to Nieshan. Local time is eight-thirty in the morning and the temperature is a chilly two degrees centigrade. For your safety and comfort, please remain seated with your seat belt fastened until the Captain turns off the Fasten Seat Belt sign. This will indicate that we have parked at the gate and that it is safe for you to move about. At this time, you may use your electronic devices if you wish. Please check around your seat for any personal belongings you may have brought on board with you and please use caution when opening the cupboards, as heavy articles may have shifted around during the journey.

If you require further assistance, please contact our ground crew. On behalf of the Kingdom of Lan and the prestigious conglomerate company Wangxian, the entire crew would like to thank you for joining us on this trip and we are looking forward to seeing you on board again in the near future. Have a nice stay!”

The bathroom door remained locked, with a man inside, beneath his personal floor mat, making sweet, sweet love to his lovely Wei Yings across universes and timelines, ignoring about his business trip and the reason that he was travelling in a horse carriage in the first place; he was lost, oh so lost but so overjoyed, enjoying all his Wei Yings’ warm, tight and young bodies until each and everyone was thoroughly fucked, bred and turned into mothers of his offspring, and he used the extra journey hours to sexually ravish even his descendents, because they were all plump, healthy, adorable and lovable - and fertile - as well. He could live forever dipping in and out of the floor mat repeatedly, just like how he mounts each mewling Wei Ying that begged for his mighty babymaking penis and spread their man-pussies wantonly to welcome their master’s tool of mass sexual carnage; Lan Zhan would do it and repeat his five-star performance in numerous beds without really caring what his future holds and where he’d go next.

... Well, that was at least what Lan Zhan fantasized, but alas, it was not meant to be, because otherwise he'd be stuck in a cycle of sex and baby-making, and the story would not progress further. He was already the master of ErNet's root directory that gave him access to all knowledge and resources, both material and intangible, magical and technological; he'd also carved his name to the family's cloud drive, namely at the apex of the folder called the Soul Restoration Cave, where he could access and enjoy all manners of the past - experiences, memories, even physical sensations and all kinds of miracles and whatnots; and then, a twenty-four-seven buffet beneath his upgraded floor mat, where he could pop in and out of various underground kingdoms filled with lovers and tasty two-millisecond trysts that amount to two-seconds in his reality, which helped to propagate his kind and cause uncontrollable population booms. That unholy trinity would mean an apocalyptic end to the known universe, and really, Wei Ying would be heartbroken if he had to stomach another four and a half billion years of loneliness - and Lan Zhan would never, ever, allow Wei Ying to shed another tear for his sake.

So, as Fate would have it, Lan Zhan placed the floor mat next to the shower cubicle and he started soaping himself before turning on the showerhead for a quick rinse - habitually, he preferred to be cleaned and performed before engaging in delicious ruts with his lovely spouse and spouse-clones. Suddenly, the horse carriage must've run over a rock, as the entire cabin tipped a bit and there was a violent lurch to one side. As a result, he dropped the soap after scrubbing his lightly fuzzed crotch energetically, so he bent over to pick it up - and knocked his head against the wall of the cubicle because cabin bathrooms were quite narrow compared to usual facilities found in bath houses. One thing led to another and Lan Zhan lost his footing and balance, and he ended up knocking himself right, left and center like a pinball in a pinball machine, accompanied by soft curses spoken in Gusu dialects, and finally, he stepped upon the cursed soap.

Lan Zhan's limbs flung over and he crashed through the shower cubicle's door, then tumbled straight into the gaping waiting floor mat that had been soaked through by sudsy runoff from the shower.

There was a loud “ Bzzzzttt !” sound of short-circuiting electrical wiring, an explosion of fireworks-like sparks, a whiff of smoke and of something burning -- and everything went dark.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 200

Lan Zhan was truly living his whimsical fantasies. He streaked naked across a golden field of corn, stomping on those tall stalks with nary a care, snatching ears of corn from those plants in his unbridled run towards freedom, then tearing the husks and nibbling here and there, before leaving a messy trail of half eaten raw corn cobs.

He ran and sprinted, and kept his chin up and high, because he was eyeing the skies and chasing a flock of flying penises. He knew straight away when he caught sight of them - they were Wei Ying's and boy, do they fly fast. It was ridiculous, even going against all laws of physics, for sausage-like erect cockmeat to soar through the air and their plump, aerodynamically oval testicles flapping eagerly with lip-smacking ' thwap! thwap! ' sounds to lift themselves higher. Then, after a couple minutes of cutting through a maze made of thick dense corn stalks, Lan Zhan arrived at a clearing.

Six penises perched on the plants and leaves, chatting amongst themselves. They were ordered sequentially from largest and veiny-est, most tanned and with saggy loose skin, pockmarked with warts and grime, to the smallest and smoothest, perky and firm, fair-skinned and absolutely adorable like a juicy baby strawberry hidden inside a pocket of tight foreskin. As they spoke, the hard-ons bobbed up and down, pinkish penis glans wobbled excitedly to the sides, and the scrotal pouch swung and flapped like noisy birds on someone's frontyard high-voltage electrical power lines.

"It's down! It's down! We have a black-out, the fuse has blown, there's no power to run the systems! Everyone, stay at home, light up your primitive candles and huddle up, it's going to be a long, long wait in the darkness of Man's most dire hours!" the darkest hairiest one bellowed victoriously, its cockslit seemed stretchy and pliant as it mouthed each syllable with a smattering of bursts of pee and smelly bodily fluids. It wore a wig of curly pubic hair, and from the way it shone against the sunlight, Lan Zhan believed it hadn't been washed in a long while.

The penis next to it, a slightly smaller one and less scary-looking, but still impressive and girth and length - and well-groomed pubic hair to boot -, slammed itself against the largest specimen in what looked like a perverse show of overly sexual male giraffes necking one another. "You imbecile! Don't you dare to cause panic, because I know what you'll do - you'll bring your merry band of bandits to steal money from unguarded treasuries, cheat people by selling fake, useless aromatherapy candles, and if you chance upon helpless boys being home alone waiting for the technician who'll never come, you'll waltz right in, lock the door with a crisp click ! and rape that boy to your heart's content!"

The largest penis counterattacked and tried to stab the smaller cousin with a jab of its fleshy penile sword, and ended up entwining each other like a sick incestuous display of dick-fencing. "Go away! I'm the oldest Uncle here, I get dibs on dictating what will happen in the event of a breakdown in the Kingdom and the company's C-suite! Respect the elderly, you rascal! I can turn the world into ruins if I want to, because everything has stopped working except for my awesome powers! I shall rule with terror, I shall be worshipped as an evil god, I shall rape all virgin boys and girls until they bear my offspring!" it squawked obstinately, and started spitting ejaculated semen upon the other five penises.

The third penis - Lan Zhan gasped, because he knew by heart that it was his lovely, lovely spouse's, by the length, width, angle, colour, texture and even the heartwarming cherishable milky and nutty scent -, bravely dodged the incoming volleys of the equivalent of bird-poo attack, and used its succulent man eggs to shove the younger penises deeper into the wall of corn leaves and protect them from getting showered by another man's dirty seed. He shouted with the familiar voice of the one and only Wei Wuxian, “What are you yapping about? Da ge is the greatest, and his powers surpass all of ours even in the event of a power outage! He’ll fix this mess and bring everything back to the way it was, you’ll see. This is just a temporary glitch, because the servers are overloaded with a population boom, and this sudden loss of power. Right? Right?” Wei Ying flapped his testicles anxiously, causing the lovely eggs to shudder and bounce against one another, and its cock-slit winked in the only way penises can wink, right at Lan Zhan.

The fourth penis, one that belonged to a man in his late-teens, peeked out with its faceless but drooling cockslit from behind the leaves after the bombardment of thirty healthy viscous spurts was over, and the Uncle-penis went limp from the outburst of release and exertion, “I may not be a smart as everyone else, but I know that hard work and patience will pay off in due time. This round, we’re more prepared for a sudden loss of energy flow, ErNet connection and Soul transference with the rest of our Kingdom, the company and our family’s cloud drive, compared to last winter when we were at the Cloud Recesses getting rid of those foul, corrupted Lan elders. All of us have contingency plans, and I have my very own battery-powered pockets of space-time bubbles safely stowed inside my pubes,” he wiggled a bit in a sexy dance and shook his curls of shiny pubic hair for everyone to see, “... so I’m hopeful that things will be better this time. Let’s all put our hands together and pray for the best outcome, all right?”

Its words were inspiring, and promising, and that brought the next, even younger teenage penis out of hiding. The smooth, healthy and turgid throbbing flesh walked on its balls with squish-squish footsteps, and strutted proudly into the light - its angle was the highest, perky and pointy, and it looked very, very tasty indeed to the man who’d tasted enough Wei Yings in his lifetimes to know which ones deserved chef’s kisses. “Yeah! Just because of a blackout doesn’t mean I’m helpless, even though I’m a techno-freak! I just need a bit of time to... err... re-orientate myself in this brave new world. I was about to hit 61st-century technological advancements and the servers were in the process of deinstalling old software and putting in new ones when the power outage hit, so I think I've lost a substantial amount of data. Even during restoration, there's no guarantee that everything will still remain the same. But yeah... in the meantime, I've enough to sustain myself, and I even have offline games downloaded into my console to play when I'm bored!" it announced arrogantly.

The sixth, smallest, most adorable penis gingerly stepped out, and it started to hop unsteadily on one cute juicy boy-egg when the other testicles rose and touched the fifth penis' in what seemed to be a hand-holding, or rather, ball-holding gesture, for assurance that their wholesome penile family was fine even during such dark times. It squeaked, "Umm... umm... I still have my warehouses and stocks somewhere, and umm... they should be fine, because I've installed back-up systems and generators in case the power gets cut off like this. San ge can help me figure out a way to draw out goods using manual ways, since teleportation probably doesn't work for now. Er ge can get us organized and back on track as a closely-knit family. Da ge will be our breadwinner, so we won't go hungry or without a roof over our heads. And Grand Matriarch will keep us all together, won't you?"

Those sweet words buoyed everyone's hearts and they crowded around the smallest penis and gave it sweet kisses to the glans, resulting in that xiao didi squealing from the ticklish and slippery sensations. The Uncle-penis was evidently jealous and fumed in isolation at the other end of the corn stalk. It humph'ed and huffed, upset, before making a last ditch effort to salvage its twisted pride, "Well, since you're all so easy peasy, nicey dicey, and lovey dovey - if you won't take advantage of this chaos and sow unrest amongst men living in this realm, then won't you at least think about the zillions of babies that all of you - except for that bratty didi over that - have made in the last few days? What are they called... uuh... Homo sapiens wuji'ensis? Don't you want to steal this world's treasures and food to feed them, use trickery and treachery so that your children will quickly ascend the ladder of society, and then, gift them harems of men and women so that your lineage shall always prosper?”

The other five penises recoiled in horror and shock, followed by murmurs of “Blasphemy!”, “How dare you!” and “Are you out of your mind?”

“Heavens, no! We shouldn’t make such momentous decisions on our own! That privilege belongs to our husband, doesn’t it?” the second largest and hairiest penis’s baritone voice was loud, clear and rather hostile from being verbally attacked by its largest, hulking penile brethren. It bounced on the branch of corn energetically, and the sight of full testicles about to fall out of their sacks from their sagging weight was really, surreal.

All six angry-red penises turned around to finally glance at Lan Zhan, and the man felt very, very uncomfortable from being stared at by those meaty, pre-cum drooling organs. Goosebumps prickled at his arms and all over his nude body, and he exhaled in a loud whoosh ! at the sudden turn of narrative.

.

“Good morning, Grand Patriarch!” every talking penis shouted in unison with glee and exuberance, in an unexpected change of atmosphere in the cornfields. Each begged and demanded for their good-morning kisses with vigorous flapping of testicles, quivering movements along the length, and gaping, pulsing cockslit at the top , like baby birds pleading to be fed by its mother.

Lan Zhan reluctantly kissed the first, hairiest penis-glans and after that, he got into the mood, and calmly wished each penis their good-mornings, and a tender smooch upon their lovely man-eggs a hello to those cute, plump baby Wei Yings. The third penis received the longest kiss, whilst the sixth, smallest one, the adorable didi 's - Lan Zhan really loved how precious it looked, and carefully peeled the foreskin to the back, brushed its underside with drumming, gliding calloused fingers that could easily grab and snatch that lil' birdie away, and when it became too excited from the feather-light loving touches and started to spasm and throb from within, Lan Zhan swooped down and gently attacked the child's penis-glans with such vigour, performed such inappropriate adult oral sex with it with plenty of entwining tongue-strokes, wished it with plenty of good-mornings and lashing rough licks deep, deep into the shuddering, tingling boy-cockslit, until the pinkie-long length jerked wildly trapped inside Lan Zhan's hollowed but so, so warm mouth, and his hands cupped and massaged the child's spongy testicles like delicate cupcake dough, until it spilled tasty nine-year old's seedless fluids that Lan Zhan drank greedily, knowing the taste too well to not waste even a single drop.

.

Reality flipped around when the penises dropped to the ground, one by one, like slabs of meat, after they've happily orgasmed from Lan Zhan's excellent oral-sex greetings, and they transformed into male buttocks upon contact with the grass. There was an exception, though, that is, the Uncle-penis switched into an Uncle-vagina - and a very hideous-looking one too. It was as though someone ripped out the hairy, grimy smelly dick and then carved a slit in the resulting barren crotch, and lumpy, loose skin folds emerge from the hole in between. Eww, he thought, as he barely caught glimpses of the vile hairy man-pussy, covered with unruly pubic hair and pockmarked with either ingrown hair or what looked like blackheads and pimples at the vaginal lips, drooling whitish mucus, and it smelled really, really bad, like moldy cheese and old fish mixed in someone's leftover socks for weeks. "Fuck me!" the talking vagina cried out with a shrill screech. Banish the thought, he yelled to himself in disgust at the pulsating female genitalia, and true enough, the Uncle-vagina monster poofed into a cloud of exploding popcorn and disappeared from his sight.

That's when Lan Zhan realized, gratefully, that he was in a very realistic, strange and perverted lucid dream. He crouched to pick up a few of those white puffy popcorn pieces, and popped them into his mouth. Fresh, warm, needs a bit of salt and caramel, he concluded.

The remaining five buttocks picked up themselves and began to hop around the grassbed like rabbits. As they leapt and sprang forward, the glutes swayed and flung around erotically like milky moon-lit mounds, and Lan Zhan couldn't help himself to chase after those scattering human-rabbit buttocks for a molesting grasp. One by one, he caught 'em all and placed them atop the corn stalks, where, using the rounded bottom, each buttock balanced precariously on their former perches. They were surprisingly sturdy and held fast to the plants, so Lan Zhan asked himself, how wonderful it feels to have sex with Wei Ying's buttocks all day in his wet dream - and that wish was granted.

Each buttock spread itself as much as it could, to reveal the prized puckered lips of Wei Ying's lower mouth. They were already well-lubricated by their favourite herbal paste, and Lan Zhan furiously masturbated his arousal to reach his peak hardness, before digging into his sumptuous buffet. He tasted the hairiest butt-crack first and knew it was the da ge 's, because it was kinda loose and not so exciting. So, he slipped out after a heartfelt, empathetic one-two - just enough to cream the man's ass and inseminate him, and plucked an ear of corn at the side. He shucked the husk and gave the knobbly surface a good lick, before shoving it into the biggest anus - and it roared and howled with such pleasure, such manliness and such loudness, than Lan Zhan winced as he pushed the entire corn cob into the hungry, devouring anal lips. He left it there, then, because the butt worked its muscles to move it in and out of its hairy hole, and Lan Zhan was sure that would leave plenty of good feelings to that man's ass and prostate gland, and those buttocks could have their own fun, in a world of their own.

Lan Zhan stared forlornly at didi's butthole and wished he could violate it enthusiastically as with the remaining juicy three anuses. However, he didn't want to hurt the didi, so he tapped the bouncy mounds gently and asked if it'll turn back to a penis - and it did. Lan Zhan stole another kiss at the cute penis-tip, and rummaged the wall of corn stalks for their silky fibres and medium-sized leaves. He fashioned a mini-windmill out of the leaves and a stalk, so that when held up against a passing breeze, it would spin on its own. With those silky fibres that doubled as connecting threads, he fashioned a bundle of spun silk not unlike the head of an ink-brush, and attached it to the threads leading to the rotating leaf-blades. Didi squealed with pleasure next, howling inappropriately for a prepubescent child in a series of explosive undulating penile adults' orgasms that his child-genitals weren't prepared for, when a constant breeze blew, that sent the silky fibres spinning deep, deep side the child's penis - because Lan Zhan had carefully inserted them into the delicate, ultra-sensitive urethra, until the boy peed and spurted uncontrollably seedless fluids that only nine-year old's undeveloped prostate could make in its unripe state, forced to contract and convulse like a grown-up's before its time.

With the eldest buttocks and the youngest penis taken care of, Lan Zhan licked his lips in anticipation of fucking the three most breedworthy of Wei Ying's asses. Each pucked up, pulsated and stretched open to reveal their lovely tunnel-y insides, filled with love, warmth and slickness; a twenty-two year old's, an eighteen-year old's, and the cream of the crop, the virile, tight and juicy fifteen-year old's anuses, all for his taking, his breeding, his non-stop thrusting fucking machine between his legs, to his delight. Those buttholes chanted, with a visible tentacle-y tongue wiggling inside each for perfect pronunciation, "Love you! Love me!"

He carefully placed the disembodied buttocks on the corn stalks at perfect heights, that is, at a bit lower than waist level, so that he could joyfully, forcefully breed each ass effortlessly, and when he became too excited to hold back, he'd one-two in one, then pull out and stick his cock into the next, repeat and rinse, in alternate choices. His hands grabbed and massaged each buttock greedily, pinching and cupping the bouncy flesh that had long captivated him from whence he first lost his own virginity, and even spanked them a few times just for old times' sake - and received a thunderous applause of squeals and of Wei Yings' voices whining, begging to be bedded, fucked and have babies made inside their asses.

Lan Zhan takes a deep breath, and works on his jaws and exercises his cheeks - because he knew he'll be making stupid silly faces for hours to come in the throes of the pinnacle of all sexual ecstasies -, then steels his arched back and snaps those well-oiled hip-joints to full attention and in preparation for a full-scale assault on three defenceless presented lovely buttocks that would boost his alpha masculinity to new highs - and enjoys his time in this twisted, perverse dream caused by an innocent power outage.

.

Elsewhere, those who weren't in their underground kingdoms were not affected by the blackout. A-Ji, A-Xian and Ni-er were sleeping peacefully together in the real world when the fuse blew, along with the four Demons of the Negative Planes in the carriage who searched far and wide for their master. The Regent in the Heavens had learnt his lesson and foregone his desires while on duty, like a monk taking an oath of celibacy, and had kept away his sexy rug. Ernie was fortunate too; he crawled away from his mother's pubic hair when that man couldn't resist going skinny-dipping inside a portable floor mat while still recovering from record spate of births - because the cold black thing was a little bruised from getting slammed and whacked by so many sweaty Lan men's hips vying for a spot between lovely Wei Ying's legs.

With the light of the world switched off, darkness reigns and so does Ernie's shadowy powers.

While the 'Under Maintenance' sign was hung on the front entrance of one reality, or lifetime, as the man preferred to call it, another door opens for refugees to slip in, to take temporary shelter, and to spend time with their loved ones without the constant disturbance of someone's internet, a piece of technological wizardry, a problem caused by qi deviation, or jealousy and envy of someone's hurt feelings. A shadow dashes freely between open and available doors, to no one's knowledge.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 201

The days are getting longer, and the er gongzi seems restless. Has Spring called upon the young boy who's just turned to the age of adulthood at sixteen, merely weeks ago? Family doctors examined him just as they do with every elite Gusu Lan member, and he received a clean bill of health, plus a prescription for cooling herbal teas to welcome the rising heat during daytime and in all likelihood, surging hormones of a young man raring to prove himself to the cultivation world, in search of adventure and excitement, and to meet new people, new friends, even a love interest should the stars align in the Heavens.

At least, that was what Xi Chen thought, but he trained his eyes upon his didi without drawing suspicion, and noted that whatever the teenager was up to, he was certainly hiding it well. Each time he asked if there is anything, anything that a gege can do for his beloved little brother - and the man made it clear that he'd bend over backwards or break a rule or two just to make Wang Ji speak up about his heart's desires - that stubborn teenager would clamp up indiscernibly, and give a silly excuse, such as to finish up some homework, to read a book in the Library Pavilion, or to meditate, and hurry off somewhere out of his reach.

Certainly, that did give Xi Chen pause - because Wang Ji had been an exceptional child prodigy ever since he'd overcome the loss of their parents years ago, and had meditated to the highest levels of cultivation that can be achieved at such a young, tender age, and mastered his guqin, his musical instrument of choice; also, Wang Ji had already read every book in the library and even seamlessly rummaged through the basement level in his spare time to leaf through its vast collection of ancient, dog-eared scripts and scrolls - to the point that Xi Chen believed that to be the best way for a heartbroken child to grow up in a strict, disciplined life, without parental love or the joys of friendship - because Wang Ji is inherently a lone wolf and dislikes socializing -, to drown himself in sterile, scholarly pursuits so that he may achieve excellence while sacrificing the childhood happiness that he could never have, that at least he would still be an achiever of sorts in the end; and lastly, the annual multi-sect study exchange was slated to start later in Spring, with the Gusu Lans hosting the year's prestigious event this time, so if there were any homework to be completed, that would only take place months later.

In short, Xi Chen smiled and realized that his cute but ice-cold, no-nonsense, overly serious little brother had lied to him - and that was one of the first, or many firsts to come, he hoped, in seeing a change in his sibling's attitude towards others.

“Wang Ji,” he called out from the front porch of his room, and the teenager duly walked towards him - running was not allowed in the hallways, after all. “Before you go to... whatever that is you need to do for the rest of the day, take this pouch of money, and buy a few packs of the cooling herbs that Doctor Li prescribed for you. You have my permission to go to town,” he said, and jiggled the said small pouch of clinking silver pieces no larger than a man's palm, in plain sight of falling cherry blossom petals and branches sprouting with fresh new greens around the garden surrounding .

The teen's eyes widened with blooming interest, and he nearly broke into a sprint - but held back at the last moment. Lan Zhan eagerly snatched the pouch from his older brother's hand, which was a very uncharacteristic act for someone who upholds the family's rules as if his clan's existence depended upon them. Xi Chen knew, and took advantage of, his little brother's well-hidden desire to see the outside world, of which he caught glimpses of the revealed wanderlust whenever the boy-turned-man received his meagre monthly stipend and was allowed to buy some necessities about once or twice every full moon.

Lan Wang Ji, the second of the Twin Jades of Gusu, and arguably, the more powerful and more handsome among the two, went off in a hurry atop a flying Bichen.

.

“Wang Ji, have you taken your herbal tea?” a simple question, with neither judgement nor accusation. Lan Zhan returned just before the gates closed at sundown, and he hadn’t managed to put away his things, change his clothes nor give his body a wipe before rushing to have dinner with the older brother at seven in the evening. If anything, he looked slightly off and a little tired, with dust on the sleeves and smudges on the hems of the robes, and of course, he hadn’t taken his tea after running up thousands of steps back home in the mist-blanketed mountaintops; flying off the cliffs on a sword was allowed, however, when treading upon the steps, one must pay respect to those ancient carved stone blocks as much as giving prayers to one’s ancestors, and use them with both feet - not one foot, and certainly not hovering on a fancy blade. Lan Zhan berated himself for staying out too late, that it became too dangerous, dark and misty to skim between cliffs on broadsword, to the point that he had to take the stairs instead.

“Mn,” came the half-hearted reply, while Lan Zhan’s mind was preoccupied with the day’s events. He hadn’t told anyone what he’d been up to every time he went to town on a speeding Bichen. In this lifetime, the Yin Metal Amulet that hadn’t come to existence yet, was carved into multiple portions, each under the guardianship of a Great Clan located across the entire Middle Kingdom, regardless of good or evil. Power and influence had been more equally distributed among both sides of the balance, thus one could not easily predict if the outlook of their destinies was bleak or bright. He’d been spending his time indoors researching about the possible locations and owners, and practising hard on his cultivation so that he would be prepared to face the tough challenges ahead; and during his precious, rare opportunities to go out such as today, he scoured the lands as far as the eye could see on a speedy Bichen, to determine the level of threat and risk of the mission, and to gather more intel on the ground - at the tender young age of sixteen.

“You still look a bit rosy in the cheeks. Are you having a fever? Let gege put a hand on your forehead--” the cold, rather clammy hand touched his cheek and that jolted the teenager out of his reverie. His body reacted the way it always had been with outsiders, due to his inherent, debilitating dislike of interaction with people; he slapped the brother’s hand away and there was a look of rude, wide-eyed shock on his face. His brother, on the other hand, simply pursed his lips, expecting an explanation for such an unbecoming behaviour of the second heir to their family’s position within the Lan clan.

“I’m... f-- fine,” Lan Zhan stammered, despite the sinking feeling in his heart that he’d acted rashly, uncouthly, even with hostility, against his brother. Somehow, he wasn’t good with words, and no apology would verbalize from his unresponsive lips; he quickly regained his composure and reached to the side with his chopsticks. “ Gege , have some boiled fish,” he looked down, face frozen without expression, and picked a juicy chunk of riverfish from a platter and sent it to Lan Huan’s bowl without asking twice.

The brothers dined in a separate room in the common dining halls located adjacent to the main kitchens. Despite the lavish furnishing - for minimalistic Gusu Lan standards - of a large round table and plenty of chairs, shelves and even earthenware decor, having just two men in the large room felt rather empty, and the distance between the two men seemed very, very far; Lan Zhan sat two seats away from his brother for no particular reason. The served dinner of boiled fish garnished with chopped scallion and ginger, steamed tofu and mushrooms in diluted light chicken broth, a plain egg omelette, and under seasoned stir-fry seasonal vegetables made for a reasonable though bland meal for elite members of the clan such as them.

Lan Huan seemed to be a little ticked off by his younger brother's antics, and he already had a piece of fish lying in his bowl anyway. He placed his own chopsticks down and sat up straight, his hard, withering look made him the disciplinarian between the two. "If you want, we can calm down and relax with meditation when we have our hot bath together later this evening. And talk. At my place," he suggested, and there was no room for negotiation in his offer. It was a "no buts" instruction.

"Nnnh," Lan Zhan made a noncommittal grunt, and focused on finishing his bowl. He picked some greens with chopsticks and shoved them into his mouth directly, trying to look busy and meek, but really, he ended up appearing downtrodden, unfocused, and he'd already broken three rules in a row during dinnertime.

The older brother wasn't letting his little sibling off easily, because he'd been noticing certain things - a lot. He leaned back and kept his stare at the silent, rather unapologetic teenager and reminisced his own days of blossoming youth - flaring tempers, disobedience, uncourteous, secretive, anti-social, stubborn, arrogance, insecure, rebellious, et cetera ad nauseum, oh he knew very well how it felt like when one's blood boiled with hormones and when actions precede logical thinking. "You know, I've always been able to read your mind and your body gestures, but these days, you're quite difficult to decipher. Perhaps, as they say, it's the surge of random youthfulness with unexpected sparks of residual childishness, the want for greater things away from home because the grass is greener on the other side, the yearning for serendipitous events than day-to-day boredom, the tense uneasiness when finding one's true self upon reaching that age when the world finally opens up," he made a kind of poem using vague and flowery words, to indirectly tell the younger teen that the latter was making the situation complex by keeping to his troublesome ways.

Lan Zhan had to swallow hard - he had too much greens and half-chewed tofu in his mouth and he needed to give a clear reply. "Mn. Meditate and bath. Your place," he said mechanically with his eyes on the bowl.

"And a session to release your tension. It's good for your blood pressure, you know," Lan Huan added with a more cheerful wink this time, knowing that he'd tore down one barrier that the didi had built up around himself over time. The gege made a fist with his right hand, and pumped it up and down a few times suggestively, just to be very, very clear of his intentions that night.

Lan Zhan looked up, then his face went red until the tips of the ears, and he looked away shyly. He picked a mushroom, which seemed to be an unsavoury choice of food given the context of the conversation. He bit into the stalk and licked the gravy-like broth off, but couldn't really fathom what his palate was tasting, because it was bland and unsalted. "Mn," another grunt, before a hard swallow that made his Adam's apple bob up and down hesitantly.

Xi Chen da ge smiled smugly and returned to his sunshine mood, because he always told them both that he studied medicine, and therefore, he always knew what's best for his little brother. "Good boy," he remarked, and picked a tasty chunk of egg omelette with a spoon - fried on the outside, juicy and moist on the inside - and placed it into his cute little brother's bowl, "Now eat up, you'll need it to grow up healthy and strong."

Lan Zhan nodded slightly, and he fidgeted on his seat, thighs tightening up against one another.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 202

Although historically, at least so far to his knowledge, Lan Zhan's abilities surpass even his brother's, he does not show off like any other heroic cultivator nor does he have pride in what he can do with his in-depth knowledge and masterfully-practised skills. He simply worked hard, diligently, through reading manuals in martial arts and cultivation and mastering all the moves depicted in those texts, building his golden core day by day, and keeping mostly to himself to remain out of the public's eye. He made it clear early on that he wasn't interested in taking the mantle left behind by their late father, and he was all for supporting Lan Xi Chen to be the next clan leader once the Council elders voice their approvals.

So, during those turbulent years after their parents' passing, Lan Zhan had been clingy to his older brother, and relied on the latter for many of his needs. The situation was worsened when Lan Zhan was diagnosed, at least by the family doctors, as an extreme introvert who shys away from social interactions; at that point, as the eldest of the two, Lan Xi Chen took it upon himself to care for his brother and to protect the precious innocent boy from the evils that besieged their harsh, cruel world; in return, Xi Chen da ge was put on a pedestal by the younger sibling, and the older one was showered with whatever little attention that Lan Zhan could give whilst growing up together in such an awkward family. Thus, when Lan Zhan grew up to be a healthy but disconnected, outcast teenager, the da ge could not put to rest his worries until he got to the bottom of his little brother's troubles.

"Does it feel good, like this?" the soft-spoken up-and-coming clan leader gently asked.

"Ahh... it feels... f-- feels good... very, very good, gege ... ooh... gege"

Lan Zhan breathed out uncharacteristic moans and sent more heated puffs of condensed moisture into the humid bathroom; his voice cracked towards the end while calling out the gege. Lan Huan's private bathroom was a privilege for elite Lan members - most disciples had to use communal baths, but not for this rising rock star of the Gusu Lans. Within the spacious room, there were the usual bamboo water piping, buckets filled with heated water provided by servants, drains, mild soaps and unscented shampoos - and one large bathtub carved from marble that can accommodate at least two persons. The bathroom was a closed space except for a partially-opened window for ventilation, and the door leading out to the rest of the owner's home, thus, Lan Zhan's grunts and sexy moans were mostly contained within the building, and scant noises filter to the outdoors except when he cums.

Lan Xi Chen wasn't sure how to communicate with his seemingly speech-impaired younger brother besides using their bodies to connect, so whenever Lan Zhan threw a silent tantrum or became unreadable from a physical or emotional standpoint, this was how he usually solved their problems. He sat cross-legged opposite of the younger brother, whose legs spread out wantonly - but that didn't faze the older man. He kept his cool and continued to move his hands vigorously under water, between the teenager's legs, noting how thighs trembled in the rippling water, toes curled and unfurled with each energetic swipe on the tormented, bulbous pinkish penis-glans, how the boy's back swayed back and forth, then arched and seized when he was about to climax, the sudden jerking movement sending water splashing out of the bathtub, and more interestingly, how Lan Zhan's pale, flawless skin bloomed into deeper shades of reds from the chest upwards, signalling his impending pleasurable explosion.

Lan Zhan started to use some swear words - in Gusu dialects, no less -, his hips snapped up against the tight calloused fist, and even let out a few fart bubbles because he was losing control of his muscles in the lower half of his deliriously excited body; Xi Chen smiled, because he'd seen and hear everything about his younger brother and nothing really surprises him anymore these days - furthermore, within the four walls of the da ge's private bathroom, no rules can be broken since nothing gets out; Lan Zhan nearly screamed with a high-pitched voice when a meaty palm dove into the violently thrashing water and landed softly upon the penis-head - and started polishing vigorously in tandem with the fast-paced, relentless strokes from the other hand.

“Tell gege how you’re feeling now. What do you want that’ll make you happy, Wang Ji?”

Hearing his name spoken so intimately close, using the low baritone voice that bounced off the walls of the bathroom, seemed to trigger something inside the teenage boy. Lan Zhan started to hump Xi Chen’s fist as though he was making sweet love with it - he hadn’t lost his virginity yet, at the tender young age of sixteen, he was already engaging in a mock-form of sexual intercourse with his gege’s lovely, long and muscular fingers -, and his face was refreshingly animated - the stoic, expressionless visage had been shredded, replaced by a very passionate half-yawn, half-grimace, half-snarl, with slackened jaws and closed eyes, flaring nostrils and beads of sweat running down his temples; Lan Zhan was a tasty imagery of sexual flushes, of a boy learning the ropes of male sexual pleasures using incestuous touches - and he didn’t need to say another word of what will make him happier, because Lan Huan read his expressions in between the lines.

With a tilt of the chin, Lan Huan cast an amusing form of Water spell, and sent vortexes swirling between Lan Zhan’s shuddering legs; his ballsacks were surrounded by little whirlpools that spun and vibrated energetically until his testicles were lovingly rubbed, kneaded and shaken by jets of warmed water streams; those lovely boy-eggs swelled up and began to convulse from the mind-blowing sensations; another long spinning vortex found its way between timid-looking butt-cheeks, wormed its way until it licked the anus tenderly to seek entrance, and made for a wonderful rimjob filled with violent bubble formations and cresting flow of water; the tsunami of good feelings didn't end there, when water pushed through the anal sphincter and spilled inside the rectum like tentacles made of silken liquids, which massaged, rinsed and spun maddeningly inside, particularly hard against a bump on the muscular wall that was in contact with the teen's prostate gland; needless to say, Lan Huan was a certified medical practitioner and an urologist, so he knew exactly where to send the whirlpools to. Lan Zhan yelped and devolved into a series of rhythmic groans when his prostate was lovingly stroked and vibrated by unimaginably marvellous hydraulic pressures and pulsing fountains of water from the hot springs with alternating directions, frequency and speeds.

"I-- I can't... I need to u-- u-- urine... uuh!" the teenage cried out in alarm using formal terminologies, when he realized that staying too long in the bathwater in a room full of watery sounds, had other unintended consequences. Lan Huan simply hummed cheerfully and ignored the warning.

The teenage boy howled and roared "Gege !" many times and nothing more, when he could not hold back and started to pee hot jets into the bathwater at the same time the first waves of pleasurable penile and pelvic contraction started from deep within his loins, swollen balls rose and tightened up against the penis base for an impressive detonation. Lan Huan could feel the spurt of warmth and maybe a slight tinge of yellow in the earth-shattering climax unfolding beneath the churning, foamy surface, but he remained undeterred. His hands continued their deadly stroking-polishing combo, and soon, he observed, with heavy-lidded eyes and with a strange, glazed gaze at how his adorable little didi orgasmed beautifully, turning tomato-red from head to toe with a pained look etched upon his handsome face, the boy's plumbing thoroughly devastated with uncontrolled ejaculations of pee and cum mixed in each spectacular projectile shooting out of the tortured dick, the resulting watery semen floating upwards, uselessly, until it blended with the soapy foam and became nearly indistinguishable from the rest of the bodily and bath fluids left on the surface of the rippling waters.

.

“Hmm. So we’ve one piece beneath the Cold Springs close to the backyard of the Jingshi. You told me about it months ago, but nothing’s been done so far against the impending evil gathering of shards of the Yin Metal. I thought you wanted to retrieve that piece before summer classes start, so what’s holding you back? Gege can help, if you like,” Xi Chen da ge murmured on the bed, his back against the bedframe and cushioned by pillows, whilst his adorable, sweaty, moaning didi lay against his chest in a semi-upright spooning position. Lan Zhan arched his back and raised his hips again and again, pumping into those two lovely muscular brotherly hands that continued to play with his penis and molest his lightly fuzzed testicles from behind, long after their shared bath. One hand stroked the turgid throbbing flesh without fail nor falter in its speed, the other merely drew circles upon the hapless, convulsing slick cockslit oozing with generous amounts of pre-cum and ejaculated seed, in-between swipes to the special spot beneath the bulbous head, then running fingers through the light pubic curls before grazing those quivering inner thighs, and returning to lovingly attack the cockhead with more drawn shapes.

Lan Zhan admitted, breathily, that he didn’t want to burden his older brother who had been busy with preparations for the study exchange, what more with the logistical complexity of welcoming, housing and teaching nearly a hundred students from different sects all over the country.

Lan Huan leaned forward and gave a sweet kiss to one red-tipped ear. “Didi ,” he whispered on the king-sized bed where the two will ultimately share that night, “I may be busy, but I can access information sources where you cannot. For example, I can ask our Council elders or our uncle about how to safely access the cavern beneath the Cold Springs and connect with the spirits of our ancestors. As the future leader of our clan, I have the right to question these things and seek out answers, and I can do so without exposing your plan to save the cultivation world. Have faith in me, sweetie?” followed by another kiss on the shell of the other ear.

Lubricated fingers glide down from penis to the testicles - they squeezed happily at the tickling sensations and throbbed very, very hard to evacuate their contents for the next salvo -, then with a bit of stretch, Lan Huan lightly grazed circles upon the delicate perineum, sending delicious sensations straight into the younger brother’s prostate - pre-cum spurted out excitedly, more beads of crystal-clear fluids trickled out from his rubbed-raw cockslit -, and finally, finally, those fingertips massaged the teenager’s anus with such precision and perfect pressures, that it opened up effortlessly to welcome its would-be invaders - one, two, then three fingers lovingly loosening up the muscular barriers, and they did not hesitate to search for that walnut-sized gland, where once again, the prostate was lovingly attacked until it spasmed involuntarily, sending another surge of pleasure running through Lan Zhan’s budding sexual meridians and forming the basis of another pending orgasmic explosion.

Lan Zhan wanted to “Mn” in agreement, but ended up moaning the sound out like an animal in heat. He was a conflicted man, because he knew that engaging in an incestuous relationship with his older brother was wrong, however, at such an innocent age, he had no other outlet besides this form of depraved release. He cared and loved his older brother genuinely and would do anything to preserve their physical connections - his only other flesh-and-blood in this world, after all -, so when he lifted himself up from a puzzled Lan Huan, and went on all fours with his ass pointed upward in a slutty display of want, and bucked his hips erotically like a lewd dance of sorts for his brother - his flesh-and-blood -, he told himself that he was doing it to protect their treasured memories, because he, and the brother knew, that their time spent together as carefree, innocent siblings, without real adult responsibilities and without a care if their young bodies experienced good or bad feelings, of wonderful pleasures or disgusting defilement - all that would come to an end soon.

Lan Huan licked his lips at the presented buffet of his younger brother's virginity - the one on the rump. He went to his knees and placed his hands over those lovely bouncy teenage male buttocks - muscular, lean, and springy, and he gave them a nice squeeze to the tune of a moaning younger male. Without thinking too much about what is right and what is wrong, what is black and what is white - because within the four walls of the building, no rules can be broken - the man named Lan Xi Chen leaned forward with great anticipation and panting breaths, against a backdrop of dimmed lights and few lit candles, with the curtains pulled over shut windows so that no prying eyes could spy on what goes on behind closed doors of the future clan leader's room; his own majestic over-six inch cock, elongated, far larger in girth than the didi's developing one, already engorged and heavy with blood after such a prolonged, titillating foreplay in the bathroom, and now excited beyond belief because he hadn't jerked off to his little brother's sexy body in a while, and now, he was getting his chance to savour and taste his didi's young, tight virginity for one, hopefully, several more nights before they have to part.

The bed creaks.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 203

Notes for the Chapter:

Not that it really matters - but a big fat warning that there's Het content ahead. All together now, just like how kids used to shout along with the Thundercats OP...

.

.

"Het... Hete... Hetero... Heterosexual Sex... HOEEEEEEEEEE !!!" (insert orgasmic roar) :-D

.

.

The Yunmeng Jiang trio has always been very close together since their childhood days. Jiang Cheng, barely ten-year old and already a pompous upstart Crown Prince of sorts, marched through the hallways with his chin up, his back straight, and his footsteps heavy; he'd just attended classes on the etiquettes of upper class society sponsored by his mother, paid by his father, and taught by some dodgy ex-headmaster from Chang'an - and he had plenty to show around. At such a young, impressionable age, he was all about displaying his ego and telling the world who he was, and why they should respect him, despite his small stature, less-than-admirable archery skills, and an annoying yet endearing crybaby nature whenever things do not go his way; but as always, his sworn Twin Hero of Yunmeng and his loving jiejie would make things much better, after having a bowl of his older sister's lotus root pork rib soup, and a brotherly hug by the teenager named Wei Wu Xian.

So, he walked with an air of superiority, and his pride swelled when servants from the Lotus Halls bowed before him, then praised how handsome and manly he looked, and that he would rule their Pier with greatness and prosper the clan and the town with his wisdom. Of course, Jiang Cheng didn't really understand all that poetry and stuff about the far future when he'd take the throne, but he really liked it when people butter up to him and say good things about everything that he does, and is. No detractors, no criticisms, none whatsoever. It also goes without saying that he likes to look smart and praiseworthy in front of his subjects, and at times, he looks down on others just because he's allowed to, habitually - and that's a growing attitude problem, some older servants once remarked, so he'd been judicious in reining his childish arrogance, because someday, as those servants said, he'll be a grown-up man and he has to be fair and courteous to other grown-ups too. The only people that he looked up to were his siblings - one being a step-brother -, and of course, his kind but meek father and the rather fearsome, shrill-voiced tiger mom.

Thus, when Jiang Cheng reached the front Jiang Yan Li's room and knocked the door, then received no coherent response other than some rustling, creaking and shuffling sounds - and of someone falling flat to the ground -, he yelled out in his half-squeaky voice, “Jie jie ! I've finished my classes already! I want to go to the forest to catch butterflies, like you promised!” and banged the door again, this time three times.

“A... A-Cheng! Wait a bit! Jie jie is putting on... putting on her make-up! Wait five... no, ten minutes, okay?” came the muffled reply, followed by faint, incomprehensible hisses and what sounded like a teenage girl scolding another person inside the room.

“Oh,” Jiang Cheng sighed and crouched like an uncouth peasant beside the hallway. In spite of the hours-long training on how to walk like a fine gentleman of noble standing, the boy was still an innocent, naive ten-year old. He looked like an abandoned child in the streets, sporting a rather unhappy and bored look while he stared at the wall obediently and waited those five minutes. One servant passed by with a ludicrous look on the face and asked in alarm if Little Jiang gongzi was feeling alright, because he was hunched as though his stomach ached and wanted to poop on the floor; the boy shook his head and simply said, “ Jie jie asked me to wait for ten minutes.” with such clarity and sincerity, one almost wished to hug the child and love him to bits for his adorable innocence-cum-ignorance. The servant simply shrugged in exasperation and left, because there were other masters to serve in the Lotus Halls.

Ten minutes passed, and sure enough, the door swung open. Jiang Yan Li looked every bit ravaged from head to toe, hair half-tied and unruly, her skin sweaty and rosy, and she was flushed to tomato-reds and dressed only in a thin flimsy top and her underskirt. Jiang Cheng, who hadn't known yet what 'sexy' and 'lewd' meant, reacted just like any other bratty ten-year olds - he sniggered and squealed, and made gleeful juvenile remarks of “ Jie jie is wearing only her underwear!” and then closed his eyes with his hands squeamishly. The teenage girl shushed her little brother and told him that she needed to run to the toilet for a bit, so he should go with the gege first. Then she stood up, stared laser beams at the next person to emerge from the room, and with those ferocious glaring eyes she hissed petulantly, “I told you not to do it inside, now look what you've done!”. Her hand held a bunch of crumpled up soiled tissues and napkins, and she nearly wanted to throw them at that gege - but held her tongue and kept her actions in check, then huffed rather angrily and dashed off to the hallways. Jiang Cheng added to the insult faced by his step-brother, when he peeked from his hands and then squirmed and giggled, and pealed out, “ Ge ge is wearing only his underwear too!”

Wu Xian gege gingerly took a step out of the room wearing just his boxers, equally dishevelled and out of breath, with one hand rubbing a reddened cheek hesitantly, while the other massaging his rump generously; he looked rather afraid after getting a mouthful from the owner of that bedroom. Wei Wu Xian grimaced at the painful double blow combo dealt to those throbbing parts, because he'd been slapped and smacked by a scornful but beautiful shijie who scolded him harshly when he couldn't hold back from feeling too good, so to speak. It was shijie 's fault, really, he told himself, because she was the initiator, the culprit - do not be deceived by her kindness and sweet cheerful looks!; she invited him into her room with a very persuasive ‘let jiejie clean your ears’, which seduced and ensnared the boy until he found himself on her fragrant and feminine-smelling bed, and then she undressed to wordlessly tell him that she wanted ‘it’; no amount of warning could save the horny, hormone-lustful thirteen-year old boy from pulling out in time, not when his sweet sixteen-year old sister explained to him beforehand, with images from erotic comics clouding his judgement and control of his body, that she was in a pretty dangerous period of her cycle, and that any untoward incident could result in getting drowned in a pig-cage dunked into the Great Lakes. For Wei Wu Xian, getting into bed with his lovely shijie had become a ritual, a habitual and almost routine daily activity between step-siblings since a couple of years back, and lately, he’d been having wild fantasies of getting formally hitched into the Jiang family, plus he was naturally curious about how babies are made inside those attractive, appealing members of the opposite gender - blame sex education, as they say.

“Wei Wu Xian!” Jiang Cheng called out for the nth time with lean arms on his boyish hips, and his face told him that the boy was increasingly agitated for being ignored in the middle of the hallway. When the boy was finally noticed, he said, “I said... take me to the forest to catch butterflies! Are you even listening?”

What an arrogant little prick that Crown Prince was, the teenage boy told himself and he grinned half-heartedly to acknowledge the little didi ’s demands. He told the boy to wait a bit (again), while he gathered his clothes; took one last whiff from the pillows where he’d shared several rounds of intense passion with the woman - no longer a girl, technically - that he hoped to pursue with his heart to the very end; and grabbed one of lovely shijie ’s discarded garment to wipe away all traces of spilled stains on the bedsheets - of milky sticky whites mixed with honeyed nectar that females produce, which the gege found to be irresistible - evidence of the boiling heat that had fanned the flames in his loins, and now, he half-dreaded, half-intrigued, half-desired, one hundred percent fantasized, that the spent seeds would take root inside his beloved shijie , that he may be allowed, as true family member and vindicated by an official flesh-and-blood relationship to the foster family, to take an oath upon his love for her, to cherish and protect her, Jiang Yan Li, the most beautiful woman he ever has met and the kindest he has ever known, during his thirteen years of early life thus far.

“Why were you two wearing your underwear? What were you doing inside? Were you studying hard like me, or playing some games? You’re all red and sweaty, it’s too hot to stay indoors, is that why you were wearing so little? I want to play with the both of you too... next time, wait until I finish my classes so that we can play some games together! Oh, oh! Today, my teacher gave me an ‘A’ when I showed him my homework from yesterday. I only get ‘A’s when you help me with my homework, so you better do it again tonight, okay? By the way, is jie jie angry? Did you do something to make her mad? These days, jie jie looks a bit restless when you’re not around with her. I noticed that too, my eyes are very sharp, aren’t they?”

Wei Wu Xian rolled his eyes at the smattering of questions coming from the didi - Jiang Cheng only acted like that, akin to a spoiled child demanding for attention and answers, defying all etiquettes about giving others privacy, really, when his siblings were in the same room as he. The gege quickly cleaned up as much as possible and made sure the shijie ’s room would look minimally presentable when she returned - then grabbed A-Cheng’s wrist and dragged the boy to where the latter wanted to go in the first place.

“Let’s go and catch the butterflies,” he smirked while adjusting his tunic; he wanted to at least redeem his pride as a responsible gege after what he’d done to the shijie - not that it really mattered -, and then, inexplicably, he let out a tired yawn. Sex felt really good, and it relaxed his body and soul, plus the urge down there had been sated for the time being. It didn’t feel morally wrong to engage in sexual intercourse with members of the opposite sex, not when one lived in the era circa 2000 B.C. when arranged marriages were rampant and people lived short lives; when girls became mothers before they reached the age of fourteen or sometimes, younger; and men hardly lived beyond their thirties unless they were cultivators and all that fancy stuff.

“ Gege , there you go. You’re yawning again. Every time you say that you’re out to meet a girl, you return home like this. Is it so bad to see a girl? It’s tiring, isn’t it? Girls complain a lot, they smell bad, and they’re ugly with all that make-up... well, except my jiejie , of course! I don’t understand what’s so nice about going out with a girl, when you come back home looking as though you’ve run a marathon... like that A-Hua who lives two roads down our home, A-Lian the flowergirl, A-Li who works with the doctor, A--” the boy rattled on with names of the gege ’s secret girlfriends that only he knew, because he’d been spying on the gege and became jealous of girls that took away their precious sibling play-time. Immediately, Wu Xian gege shoved a palm over the boy’s yapping mouth, and signalled the latter not to say anymore - especially if Yan Li jiejie happened to be in the vicinity, and she’d be heartbroken to know that she wasn’t the only one who had shared her body with the eldest son of the clan’s ruling family.

“I’ll... I’ll catch the biggest, baddest butterfly you’ll ever see today! So hurry up!” and the gege broke into a light jog, pulling along a yelping boy. Poor Jiang Cheng, Wei Wu Xian thought, due to his lineage and position as the Crown Prince of sorts, the boy was discouraged from pursuing any romantic interest with the females of his clan, and was instead, taught from an early age that if anything, he should fall in love and marry a person of a different family and clan name; in-breeding was frowned upon, more so for a person of royal blood that shouldered the burden to bear healthy sons fit for ruling the future generations; the boy should focus on building the skills needed to become the next leader of the clan, and not to be distracted by menial things in life such as relationships and feelings; however, at such a tender young age, Jiang Cheng was blissfully unaware and did not even understand the notion of love and the matters of the heart and of one's lust, so he simply took for granted, and never questioned nor harbour any ill-feelings about why he spent so much more time in classes specially designed for elite members of the Jiang clan, while his older step-brother gets off scot-free with a more enjoyable, carefree life, mingling with others Jiang members of both genders, sometimes beneath bed covers.

"You said that the last time, and we never caught butterflies larger than my hand," the little boy cried out in dismay, though his spirited run out of the hallways and through the gardens said otherwise about his improving mood. He was such an adorable gullible little thing, the gege thought, and he snickered.

"Okay, then this time, we'll catch the fiercest butterfly with bloody sharp teeth! I'm sure you've never seen one before, so let's go before they fly away!" he hollered and laughed, once they reached the dense undergrowth that marked the border between the gardens and the bamboo-pine forests.

"Really?!" Jiang Cheng squealed and picked up his pace. He actually believed the gege, that sweet innocent boy.

Two children - one teenage boy and his little brother - played in the forests surrounding the Lotus Pier on that beautiful morning, and later, they were joined by their sister, now freshened up, looking dainty and bright in pinks, magenta and whites. The Yunmeng trio remained, indeed, very close knit during those wonderful days of yesteryears.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 204

“Wei Wu Xian, you have to tell me!”

“Tell you what?” the gege replied lazily, rather than asking; he was getting a bit annoyed at the boy’s refusal to address him using honorifics that he’d learnt in those expensive elite etiquette classes, and his way of ordering a teenager about three years older than him around like a lowly servant, at his beck and call at all times.

“Tell me, why does A-Wang always disturb me in the boy’s toilet?”

Although Wei Wu Xian, the heroic, tall and handsome gege of Lotus Pier loved his little brother just like in any other bromantic love between blood-related siblings, he couldn’t possibly be acting like a helicopter guardian and be expected to know every little thing about Jiang Cheng, particularly since the boy was growing up fast, with huge expectations of leading an entire thriving clan building up upon his tiny shoulders, and had his life slowly diverging away from elder of the Twin Heroes. Jiang Cheng attended separate and different classes, had different circles of friends, experienced different day schedules and all that, so really - would Wei Wu Xian know exactly why one of their neighbour’s sons, an equal peer from a different branch of the Jiang family tree, would do something untoward towards the Jiang gongzi and cause him distress?

“Umm.... that big-boned boy with a large tummy and a wart close to his nose? That’s... what’s his name-- Jiang Wang or something, and he used to be bullied and had his name spelled backwards so that he was known as a ‘yellow ginger’, tubby and spicy hot, right?” the gege recalled while scratching his chin. The Twin Heroes brothers trudged through tall, prickly shrubbery and caught a few butterflies using handheld nets - none with teeth, disappointingly -, while their elder sister offered to take them back because she promised her mother, Madam Yu, that she'd help out in the kitchen to prepare lunch; plus, she complained discreetly to Wei Wu Xian that she felt discomfort and of something leaking out 'down there', and rushed off in search of a covered bath somewhere; so, the gege waved her off and accompanied the playful didi to explore the forest to search for juicy bright wildfruits or tasty nuts as snacks for later that day.

“Huuh! You're so outdated! Now he's known as Lao Jiang the Old Ginger, because he's the biggest and meanest of the boys in my class! He doesn't dare to bully me when the teacher's around, and I try to avoid him with my smarts, but he catches me in the toilet and grabs my wee-wee when I'm peeing!”

Now that got Wu Xian's attention. He slowed down to a stop, and led the boy trailing behind him to a shady spot. He placed a hand on Jiang Cheng's arm and gestured to him to take a short break from their foraging activities. Both boys sat down on a bed of soft grass, fallen pine needles and bamboo leaves. “Oh? Do tell this gege, what did this spicy old ginger do to you and your wee-wee?” he murmured sultrily, and the air around them suddenly felt a little warm. Insects chirped in full force in the midday sun, marking the height of the passing seasons, and in the cooler shaded areas, such as beneath the shade of trees, a spider could be seen weaving its glistening net sparkling with jewel-like dew; the arachnid intended to trap delicious bite-sized prey and reel them in like tasty morsels, to sate that unending hunger for flesh.

The ten-year old boy adored being in the limelight of the gege's attention, because in some way, this gege revolves around his world, like a planet orbiting the Sun named Jiang Wan Yin - Wei Wu Xian was amongst the very few people that he could fully trust and share his deepest, sometimes shameful secrets, as intimate as a sworn code of honour in a brotherhood, where betrayal was non-existence, and his everything - flaws and all - was gladly accepted by that gege who promised to be his Twin Hero, long, long ago; to the boy who considered Wei Wu Xian as a blood-related brother, blood is thicker than water, after all.

Thus, he narrated his experience of being touched unkindly and inappropriately by another boy of the same age, and had their dicks compared - which shattered his fragile child-confidence, because late-bloomer Jiang Wan Yin was, to the family's dismay, a little smaller in size and shorter in stature than the average ten-year old kid, always drawing the ire of his overachiever mother and now, the uncomfortable target of sexual predation by the older kids. Wei Wu Xian coaxed the boy to show him what happened, so Jiang Cheng gladly, willingly, unbuttoned his pants and slipped off them, and let the garment drop into a messy pile.

Wei Wu Xian, unknown to the boy, had other hidden intentions behind the request to reenact what had happened. He was a sly person and cunning in the field of child psychology, because he'd learn enough since his earliest days living off the streets as an abandoned orphan, then rising through the ranks of Yunmeng Jiang's finest elite sons and daughters; he'd bully others just as he'd been bullied too, regardless of the presence of sexual activities amongst those precocious young children - back in the day of 2000 B.C., there was hardly the concept of proper sex education and abstinence, much less any concern about sexually transmitted diseases and the problems of child marriages and teenage pregnancies that would be easily swept under the carpet by tyrannical patriarchal societies. Sadly, in a dog eat dog world (and Wei Wu Xian hates dogs), one had to use all means to survive and advance, even if it meant hurting others or using sex as a kind of tool to subjugate, control and weaken others.

“Hmm... A-Cheng, you know, big bullies like A-Wang are just that - they think just because they’re big and have huge hands, that they can grab that and scare their classmates. Well, let me tell you,” Wu Xian gege said, and he rubbed his nose and beamed his confident, cheeky grin, “I’m older than A-Wang and I’ve eaten more ginger than him in this life! I can show you the techniques of grabbing other bigger boys’ dicks and making them cry like girls instantly!”

Little A-Cheng perked up and stopped touching his penis clumsily that demonstrated an awful, lacklustre handjob that the bully had done unto his defiled junior. No wonder the boy didn’t feel good and harboured grudges against that A-Wang; after that terrible lovemaking of an inexperienced ten-year old’s dick with a pumping greasy palm that smelled of nasty pee, the latter walked off bellowing out laughter when he stole the boy’s underpants, leaving squirming, red-faced A-Cheng alone in the boys’ toilets. It would be great if Jiang Cheng could counterattack before he was molested, that’s for sure; plus, he never knew nor had interest in learning how to jack himself off because he only started having wet dreams very recently, and didn’t know what felt good, didn’t feel good, or supposed to feel good.

So, he turned to the side, sat cross-legged on his discarded pants and opposite his step-sibling, the half-erect wee-wee throbbing and jerking lightly in the warm midday sunlight, glistening with a measly droplet of pre-cum - despite the less-than-exciting act, it still led to a reaction in the boy’s loins. Then he unknowingly spread his legs, thin slender thighs parting to reveal a baby-smooth crotch with a very light fuzz near the edges of the genitals, and very cute, plump hairless boy-balls as fair as the rest of his baby-fat child-body.

“ Gege , please show A-Cheng how to grab a dick in a way that can make even the biggest, meanest boys cry?” he asked with such wide-eyed innocence and in deference to his elder sibling’s sexperience - Wei Wu Xian couldn't help being smug because he was finally addressed as an older brother, and he nearly wanted to embrace their newfound strengthened relationship with the didi - so of course, he couldn't resist saying 'Yes', then gently, gently with a coo-ing voice, asked the didi to watch and learn, and he started to fondle the rising, swelling ten-year old's penis lovingly with very, very experienced hands.

That noon, alone in the woods with his older step-brother, A-Cheng did cry out in the forests, a boy losing more and more of his innocence to the touch of another, even non-blood related relative - however, no one would hear the boy's cries except for the butterflies that continue to flutter about, waiting to be caught someday.

It is very easy to trick a ten-year old by the intelligence of a sneakier, smarter and sly thirteen-year old. All Wei Wu Xian had to do was to convince the tired, sexually flushed boy still soaring high in the aftermath of explosive orgasms that ten-year olds should, really shouldn't experience unless forced by an adult's sexual prowess - he only had to tell the boy that real men, that is, men who take social etiquette classes and destined for greatness such as becoming a clan leader - those real men are brave and do not shy from the next level of testing one's endurance, such as in the face of bullies named after ginger and spices. A-Cheng was delirious by then, not thinking straight and kept begging the gege to keep stroking his overexcited penis because it felt really, really good to be touched, even violated, because he'd never experience anything like this in his tender young life - and asked how, how can he, a mere ten-year old boy, test his endurance and all master all those heroic skills needed to beat the other boys.

Wei Wu Xian smiled and licked his lips, and casually talked about how men have sex with each other, that some day, Jiang Cheng may encounter such lecherous or aggravating people, so he must learn and recognize these acts, before he can defend himself properly, and be that superhero twin of the Jiang family that he so fantasized since his younger days. It took a persuasive and bullshitting ‘ didi , that’s right, pull your foreskin to the back, and lift up your cute balls, gege will perform something amazing to build some muscles in them and make you a hero’ and ‘ didi , raise your hips higher and bend your knees to the back, your adorable rosebud must be massaged and opened, because in there, lies your weakest spot that gege must exercise generously’.

Needless to say, little A-Cheng obeyed without protest because he dreamt of becoming the hero that would beat up all those bullies who dare to touch his penis; not realizing that in the end, Wei Wu Xian greedily sucked and licked the offered prized exposed hairless, veinless baby-smooth penis, moist and pink, succulent and juicy, peeled and tight, firm from a wonderful foreplay, and now, those hips bucked wildly and the immature penis jerked maddeningly at those erotic, indecent kneading of tongue-play and kissing lips, trying its best to fuck deep, deep into the loving gege ’s throat because it was experiencing its very first deflowering - of instinctual hot fucking into another man’s mouth - but alas, it was rather short and couldn’t reach the end, so it must exercise well and grow harder and longer - until the ten-year old boy cried louder and moaned wantonly from the uncontrollable pleasure coursing through his veins, the pelvis wrecked with involuntary shudders when one calloused hand endlessly cupped and massaged his excited, spasming testicles filled with sweet, sweet virginal boy-milk, and another hand busied itself by inserting one, then two, soon, uncomfortably, three fingers that curled again and again, drawing loving circles upon the barely functional and still-developing prostate gland until it convulsed excitedly from too many jabs and presses, and sent molten hot creamy boy-semen straight into the gege ’s waiting mouth, fifteen healthy ejaculations each time, and for several more rounds that day.

A-Cheng devolved a mess of incoherent moans, sweaty flailing limbs, seizing muscles and an arching back, flushed steamy red from head to belly; he forgot about his etiquettes and all forms of discipline and manners, because he spread his legs wider to welcome the foreign invasion upon his genitals and couldn't decide what to do; he thrust his hips forward to fuck, sweet, sweet fuck whatever that needed to be fucked until that tongue swiped around his sputtering penis and it became too much, too overwhelmingly pleasurable that he had to rein back his fanned flaming desires, then he pushed away to the back, and realized belatedly, that those three gege 's fingers started raking energetically inside his anus, and something extremely hot, exceedingly irritable, and horrendously itchy welled up from the insides of his crotch; so he snapped his hip joints to the front, then back, again and again, trapped between the gege 's greedy tongue and lips and those mind-blowing fingers.

Wei Wu Xian, on the other hand, enjoyed his meal of sexually devouring his didi , and he hoped the wonderful sensations would leave only joyful memories inside the boy's body, so that in the days and nights to come, A-Cheng would become addicted and think only about his gege 's handsome lips, tongue and fingers, and willingly search out for release in his older sibling's bedroom, shyly tip-toe to his bed, then undress lewdly and with the cutest, most lovable look on the boy's round face, asking with a coquettish voice, ' gege , gege , this didi cannot sleep. Can you play with my penis tonight?' He was a patient teenager, having knowledge about sex far beyond his years, and he continued to suck the cute pinkie-length penis with a steady, timeless rhythm and edged it as much as possible, and finger the boy's ass as deep as he could, until A-Cheng was left in tears and hiccups, body and limbs completely useless that he had to lie on the ground and yet, just yet, the gege continued that sweet, sweet assault upon his genitals, not even letting go from his grasp for a second, until the penis sputtered wildly like a garden hose gone wrong, because A-Cheng moaned that something was shooting out again, his hips couldn't stop shaking, and this time it felt like real pee; the warning went unnoticed and unheeded, and Wei Wu Xian continued to pleasure the boy before another salvo of flying spoonfuls of semen mixed with urine, during those very, very excited and strained pulses of a boy - a man, really - cumming very hard until his plumbing broke, and afterwards, even during the refractory period, the penis was polished and loved, the boy-eggs somewhat shrivelled from a sudden loss of seed in the short span of time around noon, but still coaxed to keep producing healthy sperm to feed the gege 's sexual hunger, the boy-prostate exhausted from emptying itself too many times like never before, and it cramped up to protest the endless wonderful massages upon its walnut-sized mass.

By one in the afternoon, A-Cheng begged his gege to stop, that he was defeated, he can not be that real man and hero that beat up bullies, because he had peed all over the grass bed floor and couldn't possibly cum again, his legs were like jelly, and his hands rubbed raw from clutching uselessly at the bare dirt, and it was time to go home because jiejie would be waiting with a home cooked meal.

Wei Wu Xian ignored the boy's pleas. Spending time with shijie didn't sound as exciting when he was rudely tossed out and slapped due to the inopportune timing of her menstrual cycle, so this lovely, defenceless and very gullible didi would make a great substitute. He used his greater weight and bulk to pin the little boy to the soiled ground, and continued to suck eagerly for a long, long time.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 205

Notes for the Chapter:

Another Het warning, this time it's a big one, and hopefully the last one in a long while. Remember, according to the arc's title, it's all about brotherly love :-D

.

When one ponders, why was Wei Wu Xian, the Yiling Patriarch, labelled with such terrible reputations and notorious names - for good reasons, perhaps, including being a rapist of both genders -, notwithstanding his devilish boyish charms, jaw-dropping good looks, and a beguiling gentle, carefree and friendly nature - one could look back further in time, when the first seeds took root and made him the villainous, infamous man that he'd become some day.

.

“A-Xian, you’ve slipped out again,” Jiang Yan Li purred breathlessly, in-between sweet kisses upon a sweaty forehead and rosy cheeks, “Be a strong boy for jiejie , and put it back in. Higher, higher... ah, finally, it’s going in. There, there... see? It’s not so difficult after all. Now you’re warm and comfortable. It’s nice, wet and snug inside, isn’t it? Your face looks silly right now, yawning like you’re in pain and yet as red as the chilli peppers you ate for lunch. You’re so cute. A-Xian is really an obedient child (乖)...!” She slowly closed her slender long legs around thin, fluttering boy-hips - that were as fair as full moons in a starless night, as hairless as a babe’s because he’d just undergone puberty -, and locked the delirious, panting boy tight against her, caught like a spider’s prey wiggling desperately to escape the tangled web. There were plenty of squelchy and slapping sounds, as the boy worked hard to please his sister first then himself, practising an adult's sexual intercourse to screw deeper, drive in and out vigorously, fucking a juicy, elastic and very inviting wet pussy that only loving sisters have for good little boys like him; it was becoming harder to insert his twitching penis inside his sister's vagina, because each push resulted in more dollops of their overflowing mixed spent passions being squirted out to the bedsheets, an exotic blend of freshly ejaculated boy-semen and a girl's natural syrupy lubricants, and it was a hot, sexy, slippery mess indeed.

Another series of waves of contractile pleasure crested, causing the boy to accidentally let out a soft fart - "So cute," she coo-ed at the loss of bodily control - because delicious pulses ran up and down his swollen, excited genitals that hadn't known the taste of a maiden's flower a month before; so he slammed his crotch hard against his shijie 's and kept it there, missionary style, mating pressed, a red-hot engorged key lodged deeply into its soft but vice grip-like lock. He moaned and tried to stifle howls of "It feels too good!" (很爽! 太爽!), letting those waves radiate from his pelvis like sparkling fireworks to the spasming arching back and the tips of his fingers and toes, one gigantic wave rippling from the anus down along the throbbing perineum, through convulsing plump, darkened and seed-filled testicles heavy inside their tight sacks, all the way to the turgid angry-red arousal that jerked wildly inside a cocoon of clenching vaginal flesh, shooting rampantly with such eagerness to sow virile sperm of the eleven-year old boy deep, deep into his fourteen-year old princess sister.

He would go partially soft after a while to recover from the earth-shattering aftershocks, slipping out weakly with a string of pearly-white, still-warm and thick semen hanging from the tip of his happy, exhausted penis-glans to the still stretched, gaping, cum-stained vaginal entrance where that made his heart race like a marathon of aerobics and sent his rational mind up into the heavens, so to speak; he was too tired to pump his hips properly and needed to rest a bit; however, too soon, he would be coaxed by succubic, feminine intimate whispers filled with love and pride for a boy who had recently lost his virginity - and now, ninety-nine sex positions stolen from the book on kamasutra and hundreds of sexy romps later, he was truly a stallion lover still trapped in a growing boy's body - and he'll harden once more, put his penis inside to where it belongs, and go for another round of sex with Jiang Yan Li upon her fragrant though cum-stained, pink lotus-themed bed.

.

It was the usual, really. The Yunmeng Jiang trio would spend their carefree days together, playing under the sun when they're not stuck with homework, household chores or practice of dignified scholarly arts or with cultivation. Jiang Fengmian allowed the children to pick some summer fruits at the fringes of the forest, to Madam Yu's consternation, because she held the blatant belief (and lie) that the golden apple of her eye, her son Jiang Cheng, would be better off not whittling time away with useless childish fun.

As fate would have it, Jiang Yan Li spotted a shiny ripe red apple near the top of an old tree, and her two brothers scrambled to please their beloved jiejie to bring the fruit to her lips. She brushed aside their heroic antics and begged them to return home to get a ladder, but Wei Wu Xian refused gallantly. He crouched beside the tree trunk and called Jiang Cheng to hop onto his shoulders and stand atop them, so that when the two worked together and stretched as high as they could, they'd reach and easily pluck that fruit without any worries.

Two minutes later, two boys tumbled to the ground when A-Cheng slipped in his footing, and A-Xian lost his balance. Little A-Cheng suffered from a sprained ankle, and his step-brother, a couple of bruises. The latter would earn Zidian-branded whip marks on his limbs when they returned, faced with a hellish demoness and a father that tried his best to pacify the wife but received a slap as punishment.

The pandemonium eventually subsided, and A-Xian was grounded for five days, while A-Cheng was sent to the elite's hospital where he would receive five-star treatment and a mother's doting attention all day long. Jiang Fengmian continued to work but conducted part of his business at home because he had to look after the two left-behind children, so he told A-Li and A-Xian to behave and do their own things, and not to disturb him when he had guests over at the main hall of their spacious abode.

A-Xian was down in the dumps because he felt he was being treated unfairly, and his plight fell on deaf ears especially his adoptive father's - staying at home all day with no class and no interactions with friends from the outside world, felt suffocating for the boy who was a ball of energy, fuelled with hormones and youth, raring to experience new adventures each day. However, everything changed when shijie, who opted to stay in after feeling guilty for causing the botched fruit-picking operation, appeared at the doorway to her bedroom. She twiddled a well-used earpick and grinned sweetly, cheering up the Xian Xian she loved so much.

Jiang Fengmian caught a glimpse of the two and sighed with a weary, but contented smile. He'd lost count of how many times his eldest daughter invited the boy to her room to make him happy - whether to offer an ear-cleaning session, to play with straw dolls and other toys, to read comic books together; he wasn't privy to the specifics, because working daddies like him didn't really go into such details when it comes to their children's lives and happiness - and best of all, they played quietly on their own, behind locked doors, and did not disturb his work-from-home arrangements at all. He hummed an upbeat Yunmeng folk tune and trotted down the hallway with a bundle of documents in his arms, and looked forward to a fruitful hours-long meeting with several council members to discuss some humdrum land reclamation projects around the Great Lakes.

A-Xian loves to have his ears cleaned, more so when he lays on his shijie 's lap and faces outward, then has his right ear lovingly tended to. The experience was made more sensual, when after entering her bedroom and locking the door, that she immediately undressed to her undergarments and the boy happily followed suit without asking why. Yan Li eyed her brother - now growing fast to a handsome young teenager, though his body and limbs still lack some muscles and in fact, A-Xian looked a little soft with a bit of residual baby fat around his face, tummy, buttocks and thighs; still, she was definitely sexually attracted to the brother, and the fact that he wasn't a Jiang made the entire journey of discovering their sexuality, bodies and heart together made her feel validated, as though she treaded the right path - much better than to fall in love and to live with a stranger of the faraway Jin family that she absolutely detested but had no say due to an arranged marriage inked when she was borned. She bitterly wished she could turn back the clock and change her love life, but she'd learned to accept what she's been given in this lifetime, and she plans to cherish what she can and to leave no regrets.

Yan Li reaches beneath her camisole and with a couple of tugs, unabashedly takes off her bra - it was the silky, lacy one, padded with sponge and perfumed by her natural body odours after hours of doing household chores such as mopping the floor and doing the laundry. A-Xian enjoys putting the used bra on his face and inhales eagerly at the scents of a fertile fourteen-year old maiden, while an earpick gently scratches and sweeps inside one pampered ear canal, a prelude of more exciting and feel-good things to come. A tap on the cheek, and A-Xian turns over and embraces the warmth of his sister's lean waist, curvy hips and a growing voluptuous body. He praises how nice she smells and how pretty she is - in contrast, A-Cheng would spit out childish mockery such as girls stinking up the room and something he'd heard from other bratty kids about unwashed female genitalia. Yan Li is delighted at A-Xian's kindness and sweet words, that she immediately gives him another heavenly ear-cleaning session and secretly, fervently hopes that the boy would find her feminine smells - the ones emitting from her groin - would appeal more and more to him with each passing day.

When A-Xian opens his eyes and looks up to gaze and worship shijie 's beauty with captivating and heart-throbbing words, he is rewarded with the sight of twin picture-perfect milky fair-skinned mounds, the hallmark of feminine beauty - her developing breasts. Yan Li was at that age where she'd seen her peers getting married one by one, then getting pregnant and giving birth to fat, healthy children, and she was fascinated by how calming, how sweet, and how beautiful it looked - from an observer's standpoint - for a new mother to breastfeed her needy child; so, she tries to imitate the maternal act to satisfy A-Xian's need for the kind of love that he didn't receive since his youngest days, and pretends to breastfeed the spoiled eleven-year old.

“Come, come, three-year old A-Xian, touch jiejie 's breasts, are they soft enough? You can play with them if you want, and when you're hungry, jiejie has lots of milk for you,” she teases. A-Xian unreservedly, wordlessly agrees and plays with his shijie 's nipples with his tongue and lips while lying on his favourite sister's lap, hollowing his cheeks rhythmically with a dreamy, half-asleep look on his babyface, while the sister knowingly, without thinking twice, reaches down to let her finger dip into the boy's underwear repeatedly, and starts to fondle the hardening penis, caressing his lightly-fuzzed balls, stroking the liquid heat to pool and rise up, up, it's time to wake up and have lots of sexy fun with lovely jiejie , until clear sticky beads of clear pre-cum begin to ooze out liberally from the attractive winking boy-cockslit.

The teenage girl then swoops down and does very naughty things to her little brother's genitals using her lips and tongue, mirroring what was done to her breasts earlier, but twice the extent of pleasurable punishments. The boy cries out and whines, that he's on the verge, sexually frustrated and needy to want nothing more than to release the boiling tension inside his loins. However, the girl simply prolongs the pleasure and injects some play into their cute little romp; the two would roll around the bed and later the floor, of a younger brother pursuing his older sister in the nude with a twitching hard-on bouncing between the legs; then rub themselves against walls, furniture and tables' edges, and every bit exhilarated to satisfy their curiosity about each other's bodies and what feels pleasurable and fun, between a pre-teen boy and a sexy, lustful teenage girl.

Yan Li loves the way A-Xian giggles like the tinkling of sunshine inside her curtained bedroom, each time the boy catches her from behind in a tight hug, then inappropriately touches and tickles her erogenous zones, before releasing her and then chase her around the room again. She knows that the boy is getting sexually aroused, from the way he grabs her milky breasts and refuses to let go; then, she turns around and squeezes her tits and the horny didi indulges in a much-awaited fantasy of sticking his perky wee-wee between them, pistoning back and forth like a racing train; next, he lies on atop of her and settles down between her legs on their favorite shared love nest that is Yan Li's bed, and humps his leaking penis hard against bushy pubes the down, down between the juicy lips of her vagina, spreading the shijie 's slippery elixir all over his coated and very excited cock; he deliberately makes little endearing accidents, like sliding off track with an unapologetic and mischievous "Oops! Xian Xian made a boo-boo" and actually dipping into the very warm, welcoming soul-sucking maiden vagina; those dips into the sweet, tight very hot pocket of feminine flesh become more frequent, deeper until they're indistinguishable from a full-fledged eleven-year old boy's attempts to bone his sister and knock her up; the faster he humps and fucks, the harder he clutches at her breasts with unbridled moans escaping from his lips, his fingers and toes curl delightfully at the excruciatingly pleasurable sensations running through his nerve-ends, until she knew that by the morrow, her bosom would bear the mark of two handprints from the lovable little brother.

However, she toys with him like a sister plays with her brother, and she rolls off again in mid-tit fuck and in mid-vaginal intercourse, gets chased, tries to jab at each other's nipples (hers receives generous grabs) and genitals (his receives wonderful strokes of a skilled handjob), steal kisses from each other because their lips fully knew where to nibble and leave feather-light smooches, until she is caught and has an excited, drooling penis rubbed against her - grasped in her hand, between her butt-cheeks, sliding between her smooth curvy thighs, and sometimes, a quick sweet, sweet vaginal penetration in interesting sex positions against all manners of curves, edges and corners in the bedroom - just enough to let the cockhead in to savour the rising heat of a female wanting to mate, before she giggles and jogs off, leaving behind a desperate, very, very wanting thick and hard child-penis pointing upwards from its nest of light curls, twitching in annoyance.

Eventually, they tire from the game of merry-go-rounds, so it was time to relax and engage in sixty-nines; A-Xian had been taught and trained to suck at her blossoming clitoris and stick his saliva-coated tongue deep inside the cavern that would soon house his babymaker, while the jiejie once against showed her sexual mastery and maturity by performing an adult's oral sex upon the hapless eleven-year old; A-Xian lost a few spoonfuls of rich, creamy seed to her sister's oral finesse in a long, grunting adult-like moan, and they spilled uselessly down her throat when he couldn't hold back a shout of warning, followed by wonderful fifteen warm pulses resulting from overstimulation of lustful penile nerves and boiling molten liquids that sweet fertile eleven-year old boys make for their sexy sisters.

Alas, the fun ritual of playful lovemaking between incestuous siblings (not really, technically speaking) needed to progress towards its climax and finale, as otherwise, their father would've finished his meetings and start knocking on the locked bedroom door. Thus, when they had enough of foreplay and were ready to do what real brothers and sisters do, horny and sexually hungry upon the sister's bed, Jiang Yan Li coo-ed for cute A-Xian to 'come over, and let this jiejie love you more' while lying on the bed with her legs spread-eagled, her wet, glistening and naturally tanned pussy swaying to an erotic beat in tandem with the boy's rising lust - he was hard and good for more rounds of sex just minutes after the last one, such wonderful youthful energy! - and welcomed A-Xian to taste her feminine flower and stay inside for as long as he wants, hours upon hours of in and outs, the baby-fat around his tummy rolling nicely over his shijie's pubic bone and her navel, nine quick shallow thrusts followed by nine deep gouging ones, she reaches over behind him because Xian Xian is smaller than her and must be loved and cherished, so she lets her hands gently guide the young, nubile boy to the best tempo to make love, grazing those bouncy boy-glutes when they slowed down more than she liked, caressing those boy-ass mounds to gently encourage him to 'go faster, go faster, let your lil' didi feel jiejie's softness and taste jiejie's honey inside her womb', which drives the boy to insanely lustful highs fuelled by wild visual imaginations.

Their copulation is tender and romantic with plenty of physical pleasures and with little words exchanged unless the shijie needed to tell the boy to 'hurry up, hurry up, shoot more of your manly seed into jiejie's fertile vagina, because that's where it belongs'; A-Xian obeys without a question, jabbing the plunging his angry-red and fully peeled and aroused penis clumsily and hurriedly, spearing his sister's lovely grasping vagina repeatedly, dribbling explosive copious amounts of an eleven-year old's semen rich in newborn active, lively and excited sperm eager to swim into the sister's pussy, lovingly plunder the entrance to the womb, effortlessly vanquishing the barrier and breached into the lovely jiejie's uterus, and those lively wriggling tadpoles seek out like ravenous bloodhounds for the prized, precious sister's egg where fat, healthy babies are made, racing with dogged determination to proclaim that yet another boy in the Jiang clan becomes a father at the tender age of just eleven-years old; mixing their energetic performance in bed with sweet kisses and touch-touches, of uncontrollable unrestrained and very, very youthful, excited thick spurts and involuntary juicy, fleshy clenches, of giving and receiving orgasms between copulating siblings while locking gazes with one another, staring deeply into each other's deepest wants and desires, to speak directly to the soul of how deep their twisted, incestuous love is - that is, of a boy moaning then howling, with cracked voice and hoarse cries, with complete satisfaction each time he climaxed and made more imaginary babies inside his jiejie with fresh ejaculations of fifteen volleys each, while the sister molested and pleased the seizing, jerking little sexually flushed growing-boy body, patting his head, kissing the tip of the nose, thanking him for orgasming so beautifully right in front of her, telling him that he's a good boy for trying so hard to be a heroic man for his deserving sister.

.

“Shijie , shijie , it feels so good! A-Xian feels very hot, as though there's a fever down there, but A-Xian cannot stop moving his hips. Oh shijie , jiejie , I can't hold back... uggh... I want... can't wait anymore... one more time... I... hahhnn... unh unh unh...”

“Silly boy, you're babbling! Xian Xian feels hot because he's been a naughty boy, reading those stolen dirty comics. If you feel hot, come and find jiejie in her bedroom. We can play 'practise making babies' in here, on jiejie 's bed, just like those obscene drawings in the comics. Do you like it?”

“Enn! Xian Xian likes shijie very much! Xian Xian loves shijie and wants to marry shijie when he is a grown-up man, so that we can make babies all day! Every! Single! Day!”

“Let’s... not talk about the far future. Here, let jiejie use her pussy to squeeze-squeeze your cute little penis. Can you feel it? When jiejie raises her hips like this, it feels like your xiao didi is kissing jiejie ’s inner rose. It’s playing touch-touch with jiejie ’s womb! Mmm... Xian Xian is so adorable, working so hard to make babies inside jiejie ’s flower. Jiejie also loves you very much.”

“Ahhn... hnnngh... Xian Xian’s wee-wee is very itchy, shijie , and it’s very hot. Can I scratch my itch inside shijie , please? Pretty please?”

“You’re such a hopelessly adorable boy, of course jiejie will let you do that. Closer, closer, scratch to the left... harder, harder, scratch to the right... faster, faster, in and out, and round and around, does your wee-wee feel better now?

Keep pumping those hips, and be strong, do not tire easily. This is why jiejie loves Xian Xian, because Xian Xian is a very strong and handsome boy, right? Here, a kiss for you, sweetie. Oooh! That’s it, push in as deep as you can until the hilt, and draw circles and eights with your hips... oooh! Yes, that’s it, such a good boy, whisking your baby batter that’s already pooling inside your jiejie ’s womb! Jiejie feels very good too!”

“ Shijie , Xian Xian loves you so much, please be mine! Ahhhnn!”

“Xian Xian is so cute, and will grow up to be a handsome young man. Xian Xian will be a great hero, a strong man, and a very, very desirable person... up here where jiejie can kiss your lips... and down there where our bodies are entwined... and also down, down there, right behind... A-Xian, your eggs are so hardworking today, we’ve already done it several times, and yet, they still feel full-- ooh! Jiejie feels a spasm. Are you coming again soon? Do you feel happy, breeding the jiejie of your dreams? Jiejie is a really special person to you, isn’t she?”

“Enn! Xian Xian will always be special to shijie , so please, stay beside Xian Xian forever?”

“Mmm... there’s still a long road ahead of us, my beloved didi . Let’s start by letting you stay inside here for the night? Jiejie knows A-Xian’s didi likes to sleep overnight inside jiejie ’s pussy, because jiejie can feel its happy twitches throughout the night, and your happy milk keeps spurting out every hour that makes jiejie ’s tummy warm too. You’re a naughty boy, dreaming of dirty things while sleeping with your jiejie !

Oh, Xian Xian, let’s sleep together every night like this, with you inside me, after our parents have gone to bed. What do you think?”

“ Shijie , A-Xian loves you very much! I... I-- I’m going to... I can’t hold back again... ooh, shijie , shijie ... hnngh, aahn, aaah, uunh, uuh, uuh...”

“Silly boy. Jiejie loves you too, A-Xian. Come, come and let it go inside another time...”

Elsewhere, Jiang Fengmian was busy hosting a meeting of top ministers and advisor sages of the Yunmeng Jiang clan to discuss how to create a manmade island in one of the Great Lakes as a profitable resupply point for fishing vessels and transport barges making their way through the network of waterways that make up the greater Long River. They plan to create one by transporting and filling up a shallow point with sand and rocks mined from mountains, then build some amenities on land for passing-by shipping merchants - teahouses, shops, warehouses, fishermen's piers, toilets and bath houses, even a small motel to cater for long-haul travellers. It was a serious discussion, and one that bodes well for the future of the clan that depended heavily on the bounties of the lakes.

In the background, for more than two, now nearly three hours, there's been low levels of a variety of interesting sounds - of grunts, sexy moans, creaking furniture, bumps against the walls and floor, shouts and orgasmic cries from both genders; however, for the group of ten or so aging men who are hard of hearing, it seemed like mere insect buzzing that could be easily dismissed and tuned out while they debated on where to build that moneymaking island - which potentially could house a casino and a gambling den too - and some of the wizened men rubbed their hands gleefully at the prospect of lining their pockets with more gold with interested customers streaming in from afar.

"What is that sound? I hear shouts and noises from upstairs, and that racket's been going on for hours. Are those your children, Sect Leader?"

"... ah, Minister, you can understand that I'm specially holding the meeting in my house today, because I have to look after those two kids..."

“Don’t be cruel and pick on our fearless leader, young man. He’s been cowed by that fierce tigress due to the incident that happened to the Jiang gongzi , remember? It’s good enough that he’s still doing a fantastic job, even if it means the rest of his family has to stay away while we discuss confidential matters in his humble abode.”

“Old sage, I wasn’t picking on him. And I give my appreciation to the venerable Sect Leader for hosting this meeting with plenty of good food and drinks to go around. Let’s not waste time on trivial matters then--- oh, there they go again, is my hearing really that sharp? My, my, Sect Leader Jiang, your kids sure are lively, aren't they?”

“Well, Minister, A-Xian just turned eleven recently and he’s really close to his fourteen-year old sister, so he spends a lot of time with her especially on days like this, when they’re holed up together - whilst us old men huddle to talk about important socioeconomic matters for the Jiang clan.”

“Ha ha ha! Well said, Sect Leader! Let children be children, and let little eleven-year old boys do what they like to do with their fourteen-year old sisters then! Carry on, my comrades, let’s move on to the next topic...”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 206

The power came back on with a Wham! , and sighs of relief echoed throughout the Kingdom of Lan, the Wangxian company and its infinite multiverses. Table fans spun, air-conditioning units whirred to life, heaters started to defrost chilly homes, television sets came back on, life-saving ErNet connections were restored, factories resumed churning out Wangxian's box lunches and holo-phones, inter-dimensional travel made possible again, et cetera ad nauseum .

The husband was still dripping with sudsy soapy water from his interrupted shower in the carriage that had long arrived at its destination, so Wei Ying ordered him to sit down on a chair inside a decent Nieshan-themed dormitory - one decorated with sabre motifs and figurines of fierce-looking masculine warriors -, to have his matted, soaked hair and drenched body wiped. Both men were naked because one, Lan Zhan was obviously fresh from the half-shower, and two, Wei Ying was still recovering from delivering too many births, though it didn't need to make sense why a man who had birthed children would want to walk around naked in a rather toasty, heated room with a lit, crackling fireplace in one corner.

“ Lao gong ,” Wei Ying called out, and used a fluffy bath towel to squeeze and absorb as much moisture from the man's long, lush hair, “How did you fare during the power outage?” A simple, but loaded question, softened by wifely love when the said wife took the chance to massage the man's scalp to nape in tender loving circular rubs and light scratches - ooh, frissons running up and down the neck and goosebumps all over! Lan Zhan had to close his eyes and feel his body float to relaxing highs.

“Mmm... nnn...” Lan Zhan started with a shuddering moan, and narrated his side of the story, in broken sentences filled with grammatical errors, unexpected halts and awkward pauses. He lived - or rather, dreamt - that he tried to change the flow of events of their past lives in an alternative reality. He was able to seduce - or rather, garner support from - Zewu Jun and stayed by the brother's side while unravelling the mysteries of the Yin Metal, unveiling the role of the Qishan Wen, and rallying the allied clans to fight for their cause. The Yin Metal pieces were far more fragmented and spread across the country, so Lan Zhan gained an insight of new, prominent clans in this different version of the Mortal Realm, adding more pieces to the vast, convoluting jigsaw puzzle that lead the the same conclusion - that in the end, darkness, in unimaginable forms of demonic invasions, yaoguai revolutions, carnage of sins and corruptions and all that - prevailed and were victorious over Men.

Lan Zhan got rid of Meng Yao early on - secretly, as a love rival, but officially, because that man was destined to live the short, pathetic life of an outcast of the Jin dynasty -, and with Zewu Jun - his incestuous lover and trained dominatrix to sate the er gongzi 's addiction for sadomasochism -, the Twin Jades of Gusu Lan made good on their promise to lead the allied clans to battle.

“Interestingly, although with lesser Yin power, but with more clans enslaved and siding the Wen in their conquest for land, Wen Ruohan became a formidable Emperor of his own kingdom. Without Meng Yao's treachery, he lived for several more tumultuous decades. It was a tedious, protracted war between two, plus the Imperial Court, three competing forces. After his gruesome death by Zewu Jun's blade, head cleaved off the neck perfectly without any splatter of blood, those clans working behind the scenes emerged in their new freedom, revealing their true nature and powers--”

“Was he good in bed? Your brother, I mean. He's such a tall guy, surely his dick is as long as the finest blades in Gusu,” Wei Ying rudely cut in at the most macabre moments. He acted nonchalantly while picking out suitable clothes from the wardrobe for the husband - something light, though not necessarily white because whites get dirtied too easily. There was a pregnant pause, and a keen ear listening for any affirmative sounds or signs from the husband who was deep in contemplation - and guilt.

“Your movies suck in all levels in the visual effects department. The camera view keeps fading out or panning away just when either of you were about to be screwed on the bed, so I wouldn’t know. Too many cliffhangers, and it’s sexually frustrating for a man masturbating while watching your show,” Wei Ying added with a snort.

Lan Zhan looked away, ashamed, hands clutching the moist bath towel after his body had been properly dried off. His cheeks pinked and his ears turned tomato-reds at steamy, lustful memories flashing inside his mind. The room fell silent, aside from the rustling of Wei Ying moving about in the single apartment-like dwelling with standard military camp-style furniture, bunk beds and a shower-cum-toilet stall. Shadows stretched far and long to the bedside and walls, due to the low angle of light from the setting amber sun; soon, the window curtains would be drawn, and lamps needed to be lit up for the impending dusk. The husband shifted uncomfortably in his seat, and placed both hands over his crotch; too many good things ran rampant inside his dirty, perverted but introverted head, obviously. The wife had taken good care of him since he awoke in the post-blackout world, so he was indebted to Wei Ying and owed him at least a plausible, acceptable answer; but he could not bring himself to say it out loud.

“Ah, nevermind then,” Wei Ying clicked his tongue and smirked in his usual easy-going way, although there seemed to be a hint of disappointment and hurt because the million-dollar glint was missing from his usually merry, crinkled corner of the eyes. “So, where was I? With so many great clans vying for the top, and knowing that my ancestral clan was the runt of the litter, being the worst off financially and otherwise, what happened to the Jiangs?” he asked, and examined a potentially suitable choice of garment in his arms - a plain beige loose tunic, comfortable to the touch, minimalistic in design with some cloud-like and wavy patterns sewn to the hem, and a matching pair of dark brown trousers.

Lan Zhan swallowed hard, and was internally grateful that their derailed conversation had resumed its original direction. His gaze returned to the floor, and said, “Your ancestral clan, unfortunately... became a pawn of the wars waged over time. Like a commodity, condemned into enslavement and frequently tossed around between the three opposing forces. You weren’t there when we ran the study exchange in the Cloud Recesses, because your father sent you off to fight another hostile clan that held a piece of the Yin Metal and revealed itself earlier. You were an up and coming war general at the age of sixteen, Wei Ying.”

That last compliment greatly improved the wife’s mood, and he returned to his usual cheerful self. Wei Ying handed the clothes to the husband, and silently gestured to the latter to put them on, his improvised jammies for the unplanned stay for the night in a new place, that is. The wife crossed his arms, and observed the husband put on the clothes with a glint in the eyes. He still couldn’t believe how much he missed this drop-dead gorgeous, handsome hunk of a dashing, smokin’ muscular middle-aged man, after spending forever with a walking tub of cuteness and chubs. He let out a knowing “Hnn...” to signal the husband to continue the narrative.

“We met shortly after Wen Ruohan’s death. Numerous clans, armed with their Yin Metal armaments, came out of hiding to seize the empty throne left behind, including what used to be the Jiang family. I fell in love with the majestic, graceful, beautiful you in the battlefield, with your sword’s sharpened edge against my neck.”

The wife squealed softly while helping the husband to slip into his comfortable tunic, and couldn't resist giving a sweet peck to the said neck and leaving a hickey.

“Naturally, my brother became furious and surprisingly jealous. He went on a rampage against you, the surviving clans serving the Wen Kingdom, and the Emperor of Chang'an, and slaughtered countless innocent people, of course.”

Wei Ying had to laugh at that point, partly at the major plot twist, and partly because Lan Zhan was having trouble buttoning up his pants; it had a Nie fancy and edgy stylized sabre zips as opposed to the usual traditional button-knots more commonly found in Gusu - so Wei Ying happily crouched between the husband's legs and began to help the man trapped on the seat of chair with a half-worn pair of trousers.

“You don't have to tell me the rest, because I don't really want to know how it ended for me, for better or worse. I'll read from the spoilers off ErNet myself. Your movie-dreams have received rave reviews from our Kingdom's citizens lately, you know. You need a star at the walk of fame, someday,” he chirped and for some annoying reason, instead of buttoning up the husband's pants, Wei Ying amused himself by fluffing and playing with Lan Zhan's pubic hair, since it was already within his naughty grasp.

The husband was patient, and allowed the wife to tickle his genitals, which had already swollen and hardened since the time he spoke about the illicit trysts with his da ge . “So, sum it up in less than a minute, darling. I miss giving your sweet didi a blowjob after parting from you for so long,” came the unexpected instruction, and that sent Lan Zhan's heart racing, his toes twitching in anticipation, his thighs spread a little bit more on the cushioned seat, giving access to the man who was intent to suck his dick to heaven-high.

“Mn. The three forces fought on. More deaths and suffering. Demonic spirits rose from the hatred and resentment energies. End of the world.”

Wei Ying raised his eyebrows and then gave a petulant, accusing stare. Not good enough, he wordlessly said, because as the wife, he can smell from a mile a way and knows when the husband cuts corners for the sake of the rushing to completion, or in this case, towards a much-awaited quickie. The clock was ticking, so the husband sighed and re-stated his answer, with the calibre of an experienced professor circa 21st-century.

“Some of the clans serving the Wen turned out to be descendents of the fabled ancient Xue Kingdom. One thing led to another, resulting in the realization of the true powers of the Yin Metal, which was more terrifying than that Patriarch of the Wen clan. The heart of the mystery lies with the Xue Kingdom that had gone extinct centuries ago; it is the key to unlocking the secrets of the Yin - one of which is the summoning of the demonic apocalypse that happens in every reboot and reincarnation that we see. This means that for reasons that remain elusive to our Kingdom, the Yin Metal continued to exist long after it was thought to have been obliterated at the time of your first death in the Nightless City. It exerts a continual influence on the finale temporal event of our lifetimes, and should be investigated further: to track the surviving pieces from the Nightless City, and analyze its destructive powers.

Second, my brother became consumed by the Yin Metal's influence when he gained hold of enough pieces, and learned its secrets after fighting the descendents of the Xue. Instead of using it to create more evil such as fierce corpses or yaoguai, he took it to the next level by creating corruptions in the flow of Time. Following that, it would be logical to assume that other skilled cultivators with enough Yin Metal could travel through time to contribute to the chaotic end of the Mortal Realm, or possibly, to escape undetected and cause undue effects elsewhere that we do not yet understand. We should pursue any Time fugitives, capture and bring them back, and undo their actions and potential consequences."

The impressive speech done - Wei Ying's eyes glazed during the middle of the explanation as the older man became immersed in the details laid out point by point - the wife blinked; somehow, Wei Ying had unconsciously nibbled Lan Zhan's fibrous but fine pubes while listening to the droning but comforting voice, and ended up with a mouthful of his public hair. The husband's erection, its spongy mushroom head hard and proudly pointed skywards like a pink candy stick, bobbed and twitched to the tempo of the man's pulse rate, begging for attention and drooled pre-cum desperately. There was much to ruminate on with these new insights and information, but Wei Ying knew he should pay his dues after such a reality-altering revelation - that they'd been looking at the wrong places and should investigate other clans, and that they need to travel through time and figure out what had, or could, go wrong.

"And?"

Lan Zhan groaned and internally, nearly burst into tears, because it was so hard to satisfy his wife. His hips jerked off the cushioned seat to show Wei Ying how horny he was and needed that blowjob to release the scorching molten volcano that was about to erupt from his loins. The wife, however, was undeterred and remained steadfast; he pinned the squirming crotch back to the seat, and whispered dangerously to sweeten the deal with one final condition.

“If you behave and tell this lao po the whole truth and nothing but the truth, I’ll blow you as you talk. If you stop talkin’, I’ll stop suckin’, and if you do a good job, we can play gege and meimei on the bed.”

Lan Zhan visibly calmed down and his lips twitched upward just a miniscule bit. It was hard not to notice how he bit those luscious lips nervously to decide whether to push the envelope further, to make the hopeful reward more palpable than ever.

“... and play itch-itch and scratch-scratch...?” meek, timid, shy, but yes, the slightly higher pitch sounded quite hopeful.

Wei Ying actually snorted at the proposal and inadvertently inhaled a full lungful of Lan Zhan’s pubic aroma - musky from sweat, a whiff of dried day-old cum, buttery milky masculinity and salty pee-pungent. His shoulders shook from trying to stifle a barrage of laughter at the husband’s regression to infantilism when it came to experimenting, then enjoying their sexual role-playing escapades.

“Of course, of course, er gege . Your meimei is only... what, eleven-years old? Does er gege want to make babies inside his cute little prepubescent Wei meimei ? If the answer is ‘yes’, then er gege knows what to do, right?” mischievous Wei Ying looked up with a sleazy grin etched on his face, then made those annoying kissy pouty lips at him, and he even fluttered his eyelashes like a twenty-two year old drag queen without make-up, which riled the husband because that was totally unsexy, yet already countless supersexy images ran marathons inside his pervert mind, and the contradiction of reality and fantasy couldn't be more apparent and provocative. Challenge accepted.

Lan Zhan took a deep breath and proceeded to narrate the third and final piece of his story, while getting his penis to make love with Wei Ying's pretty lips and swirling forked tongue. His testicles received a double whammy, from getting sucked like goat teats from the outside, while having that forked tongue drilling, invading and worming its way through the abused urethra and bulging prostate to raid twin nests of freshly woken-up sperm within those unprotected plump man-eggs. Those eggs were caressed from the inside by those vibrating tongue-tips, until they contracted and relaxed repeatedly from the alien, cooling sensations, then the tongues burrowed their way into each lovely excited egg, whisking the contents while still encased in its shell, until it turned into soupy blend of borned and unborn sperm and their living tissues, which are then gently sucked up, spitted back in each violently throbbing testicle, rolled around and spun until they froth within the spongy organ, then Wei Ying happily blows bubbles inside each lovely abused man-egg. Thus, in-between incoherent moaning, erratic spastic convulsing, accidental spills of unejaculated seed when his speared, tortured blossoming genitals were lavished with exciting sensations from the inside out - he did make his storytelling as compelling as a man trying to sing karaoke while climaxing recklessly - that is, some parts wouldn't make any sense, some parts sounded off, and in most cases, a mess of jumbled words and sentences filled with sexy times.

In that alternate dreamt-up reality, Lan Zhan saw that his elder brother had degenerated into a lost case - Zewu Jun drowned himself in his miseries of falling out of his didi's love and favour, and repeatedly travelled back in time to his younger days when he had the innocent and helpless Hanguang Jun to himself, to take sweet, sweet sexual revenge unto the hapless boy that would dare to refuse him decades later (a time paradox event, really). Rape-y brotherly incest ensued, but the husband begged to differ in terms of the benefits reaped from such tasteless acts, and maintained rigour in his practise of virtuous values according to the over-4000 noble Lan family rules. So, he left the da ge behind in his own own sex-trapped fantasy, and went further back in time, powered by that da ge 's Yin Metal to try and reach the point where it all started - possibly, during the ascension of the Xue Kingdom to its peak and prosperity, more than five centuries ago.

Fortunately or unfortunately, Lan Zhan is a perfectionist, and could not resist taking selfish actions to advance his philosophy of keeping things clean, helping the underprivileged, championing the rights of the discriminated, et cetera ad nauseum . With every time jump, usually a few decades each, he encountered various adventures and met ordinary, insignificant people needing saviors and rescues, which he had no excuse not to lend a helping hand. Adding to the burden was his ineptness in leaving mundane events and things alone in their flaws, imperfect state; for example, the poor farmer who needed assistance to push a fallen cart of grains out of a drain, then invited the kind handsome Good Samaritan to his home, which was naturally a little run-down and dusty, so that helpful man ended up cleaning the farmer's home, then without hesitation tended to the drought-ridden vegetable gardens and animal barns until they thrived once again, and eventually he was given the reins to run an agricultural smallholding because of his impressive management skills and diligence in turning over profits for the now-retired farmer, who then presented him a heirloom magical nine-toothed rake said to be passed down from descendents of the god Zhu Bajie that could plough the soil and kill yaoguai by stabbing nine vicious holes in their heads... which resulted in more chains of events that led to Lan Zhan's prolonged trip back in time. He'd discovered and hoarded many nice memories and material treasures of the ancient, fabled times, and left them in well-hidden caches marked by buried straw brooms as testaments of his enduring philosophy to keep things simple and clean; apparently, things that happened in the past of Lan Zhan's god-tiered dreams could be carried over into the present reality, thus adding the Third Mission of sorts for the couple after the first two related to solving the demonic mysteries - that is, to go for an exciting roundtrip of treasure hunting around the Middle Kingdom and discover secret, buried treasures that the husband had planted and marked with straw brooms across the countrysides.

With so much storytelling going on, each narrating an adventure of sorts, it was a bit unfortunate that by the time Lan Zhan reached far, far back to the Xue Kingdom's timeline, he had unknowingly dozed off. Wei Ying performed the best God's-god-tiered level oral sex upon the husband's overjoyed penis, sucked the man's soul out of it - literally, and nine times in rapid succession, no less - that each time Lan Zhan orgasmed while trying to speak, while his penis fired off happy projectiles of rich, hot, sputtering, though contrastingly, increasingly diluted semen, Wei Ying use his hands to knead lovely circles unto the convulsing balls that had tightened so much and rose to the sides of the meaty penile barrel, until the overexcited and energized sperm cells spazzed like heated atoms and rushed out through the testicular tube, emptying out the tireless seed-producing factories as fast as they're born, charging forward in super-pleasurable torrents to the where they should belong and fill up the brimming-full prostate gland - until Wei Ying smiled devilishly and then lovingly attack those yummy testicles with a hard, hard swallow, sending the screaming sperms down into an unending descending tunnel like being engulfed by a python, in which Lan Zhan nnnh'ed in mid-pronunciation because he absolutely, delightfully spasmed with jolts of pleasure made of strange, spiralling sensations of having his balls sliding, vacuumed, tugged down, down into the abyss that was Wei Ying's wonderfully tight, massaging throat.

The wife didn't hesitate to use a couple of fingers to vigorously rub the underside of the throbbing pulsing length from base to tip, and encourage each lovely lump of kinetically-propelled sperm building up inside the urethra to shoot out in spectacular aerial acrobats; fingers invade and stretch the husband's anus and rectal wall, pleasing the pulsating prostate gland so exuberantly, that each muscular contraction resulted in more lovely teaspoonfuls of fresh and very excited semen loading up into the penis, ready to be launched straight into Wei Ying's waiting mouth in thirty joyful ejaculations each time; the husband's hips bucked wildly as he tried to maintain a semblance of a husband-and-wife conversation between throaty uunhn-uunhn-uunhn grunts, drawled out nnnngh moans and uncontrolled wheezes, veins bulging out in the pelvic area as the man soared far and high into climaxes, post-climaxes, and climaxes after post-climaxes, his face frozen in snarls and half-sneezes as red as peppers and muscular, heaving chest blossomed into sexual flushes because he was making sweet, sweet love with Wei Ying's mouth that wouldn't end no matter how many times he came; that he ended up peeing into the cushioned seat because his entire lower body lost control after that, nine orgasms multiplied by thirty heart-felt ejaculations each - and the man collapsed then fell into a deserving exhausted but sexually-sated slumber on the soiled chair not long after, halfway through his storytelling.

Wei Ying grinned and giggled at the aftermath, spitting out spilled pee from his mouth and grimacing at the acrid, icky taste. Then he dragged the incontinent fool to the bed, leaking a trail of cum and pee on the floor, proceeded to strip the husband's clothes off (such a waste, those carefully selected jammies), straddled the lucky middle-aged man with every sexy intention to ride the latter to kingdom come while in his sleep, and became the promised meimei that continued to sexually prey on and devour the defenceless, sleeping er gege for that evening.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 207

Notes for the Chapter:

Another big naughty Het warning. I broke my pledge about writing Het sex scenes, but I realized I needed to add this one to complete the Brotherly set. It's about brotherly love, after all...

.
.

In a surreal fantasy born of lucid dreams, a sexually aroused body, and an oversexed mind:

A little precocious girl aged just eleven, lies spread-eagled on the velvety bed, framed with greyish net-like veils that drape all four corners, lending an aura of mystery and of danger akin to the dens of spiders, scorpions and other creepy-crawlies known in the animal kingdom. Above the girl, a ravenous-looking panting man more than three times her age, crouches and bends over her. He breathes hard in anticipation, inhaling the scents of maiden in sweet surrender; he swallows hard because hunger is gnawing from within, and it is not due to food; thick tongue lapped the edge of his lips, the saliva wouldn't stop drooling no matter what.

He is the predatory Lan er gege , who has seduced this step-sibling Wei meimei barely a third of his age, and he has taught her well on how little girls should indulge in an adult men's lewd pornographic fantasies of incestuous love. He'd taken her virginity before she learnt about dirty words, lovingly speared her flowerbud and tore her hymen with masculine howls of pleasure, accompanied by thick spurts of virile seed that would take root someday inside her womb. He'd also tasted her nectar and groomed her to become the perfect cocksleeve, giving her instructions on how to exercise her pelvic and vaginal muscles wonderfully to massage a man's fully aroused, blood-engorged cock lodged inside her, until completion and fertilization; that the rhythmic thwup-thwup-thwup sounds of a fully-grown man's penis fucking her pussy until balls-deep, until she grunts like an animal because gege 's boner is too big and long that something might tear inside her, and the sounds and sensations of heavy, seed-filled testicles slapping against her crotch - that is a good sound, he keeps telling her, and a sound that is perfectly normal, music to their ears, each time they 'play' together, whether on the couch, against a wall, bent over a table, or their favourite place, upon her girly pink bed with lots of soft toys and teddy bears watching over them with fake furry smiles as the sexually flushed and excited man enjoys peeling the girl's last physical defenses and taste the sweetest defiled innocence and nubile flesh; pummeling past the forcibly stretched vaginal lips, driving through those useless torn flaps of her broken hymen, charging across the slippery and lubricated but very tight and juicy channel that squeezes in discomfort at the foreign invasion of a phallic battering ram, then at the mouth of her cervix, battered and bruised from the constant pounding until it weakens, yields, kissed once too many times by pre-cum slicked penis-glans until it is wrenched open like a treasure chest being pried apart, and the gege 's amazing length and girth continues to plunder deeper until it pokes through directly into her womb, where with victorious roars and groans, he can easily inject torrents of thick sperm-laden milk and force his meimei 's immature ovaries to drink up or be soaked with the man's foul inbred seed.

The eleven-year old meimei happily opened her legs for her horny gege without question everytime he approaches, believing that they were playing an innocent game called making babies on meimei's pink and fluffy bed; the gege spent many hours each day inside his meimei to fulfil the little girl's dream of becoming a mother at such a young, tender but biologically acceptable age - from dawn, when she wakes up with gege's massively fat, lively penis pistoning between her legs, to night time, when she sleeps with gege spooning warmly against her back, whispering how he loves his cute little sister because she keeps him and his penis cozy, strong muscular arms embracing her from behind to clutch and milk her snow-white developing breasts to coax those lovely mounds to grow faster to feed the soon-to-be incestuous father besides a newborn baby soon; all those erotic fantasies take place with his penis nestled deep inside her, as they sleep through the night in each other's arms, the gege gladly pumping spoonfuls of his vile semen whenever the urge rises, hot flames licking his loins to fan the desire to breed the lovely eleven-year old maiden living under the same roof as him, behind closed doors and curtains drawn over the windows, so that neighbours would never know what happens when a perverted adult gege moves into a house with his cute pre-teen meimei, under the pretense of taking care of her while their parents are hard at work in a faraway land.

Upon the bed, the er gege leans down to inhale the girl's pheromone-laden smells from the neck and shoulders - fragrant, feminine, intimate -, and the tumbling locks of shiny hair he'd help to washed for her in the sex-stinked bath earlier; he nibbles and peppers kisses up and down - soft and radiant skin of an eleven-year old who has blossomed into a woman before her time, all his, all his to rape, enjoy and savour. He steals kisses from the moist, parted lips and elicits shrill moans from her slender throat, because he told her a fairy tale during bath time that he's the brotherly Prince Charming in her imagination, and it's time for the princess to have a happy ending to become the queen. She believes him wholeheartedly, of course, which is why she willingly undressed on the bed and offered her body to the brother who shares bedtime stories with her every night until she sleeps in his arms. With the last flimsy garment out of the way, with no defences and obstacles left, the er gege began to greedily grope her flesh and molested her to his desires - it's all part of becoming a queen, he said, and she squealed from the fun of having her limbs worshipped like royalty, licked from fingertips to armpits, from toes to thighs to tongues puncturing her flowerbud entrance eagerly, lubricating it, exciting it with feathery touches and quick nibbles, her budding, immature clitoris bulging out from trained sensations; the gege happily kisses the dark-red nub like how he suckles her breasts day in and day out, until the girl nnnhs and squirms wantonly, restlessly opening and closing her thighs from increasingly hot feelings welling up from her belly, hips undulating in waves to shamelessly tell the gege that her body is ready, ready to be taken and bred today, tonight.

The pedophile tells her many perverted stories, in his conquest for her body, mind and soul, to brainwash her and to skew her view about relationship between siblings, that it becomes perfectly okay to have sex and at any time of the day, or month - a sneaky hint that someday, when he's ready to throw away family planning, he plans to rape her every day and pump enough semen into her sweet, sweet vagina daily, that he'll certainly be a father by the next full moon. He tells her that families are happy when babies are born, and he teaches her how babies are made once she's of the perfect, ripe age - that is when he knows, even smells through light stains on her panties dotted with little hearts, that she is fertile for the first time in her life. Brothers with brothers, sisters with sisters, brothers with sisters, no matter in which order and seniority - they're all family, and they're happier when babies are made between them, he coos sweetly and with such persuasive charm, while taking her virginity for the first time on her tenth birthday, that she smiled while shedding tears, because it was very painful to be deflowered by a then-thirty three year old man on her bed by his aroused, swollen penetrative tool, and her child-vagina experienced tremendous trauma and discomfort, stretched like never before, and possibly internally bruised from the surprise sexual attack that night - but it was worth it, she was convinced, because er gege gave her a present of a soft teddy bear that she really liked; although that teddy was left unattended and unloved on the bed throughout that same night because her gege gave her another, subsequently better birthday gift in the form of deflowering fucks to take her mind off hugging soft toys, that is, gorgeous insemination-worthy rippling male orgasms deep inside her for her first time - which shocked her to excited squeals because she's never felt something so lively, jerking thirty times with such strength, inside her clamping virginal vagina -, and marvellous sensations of a ten-year old's tight vagina spasming with discomfort, clenching over and over around meaty, pulsing foreign male penile flesh as she climaxes, for the very first time, with her gege 's penis skewering deep into her ruined maiden innocence. It didn't matter that when he withdrew he saw streaks of bloody red on his pedophilic cockslit - easily washed off with a rinse of water -, because that was triumphant proof that he'd robbed her many first times that night. That teddy bear - the present - was eventually discarded and strewn on the floor, in exchange for a forcibly stretched ten-year old's vagina gaping and closing up nicely due to her youthful elasticity, with drops of freshly ejaculated, frothy sperm dribbling out from that lovely violated camel-toe slit between her legs to dirty her bedsheets.

Er gege remembers with fondness on that birthday night. Once wasn't enough when the man found new pleasures and sexual highs from sexually assaulting his little sister; that overzealous pursuit of good feelings in the loins meant that he'd made up his mind to treat her like a gullible wench whose sole purpose was to sate his volcanic lusts and be ruthlessly bred, raw and bareback; the meimei's well-being was simply an annoyance, easily fixed with a few whispers of fake promises. That night, and probably well into the next day, the gege kept her pinned to the soaked and soiled bed. Meimei cried in sniffles and hiccups, because her tiny slim body had to experience tremendous friction, pressure and poundings to accommodate such a large adult man-size hairy penis slamming and screwing inside her, her body's soft supple skin ravaged by a sex predator's violent scratches and grasps, her breasts mauled by a rapist's greed, her lips bruised from when the brother brutally kissed her amongst many other bite-marks left upon her body. He wished her 'happy birthday' sweetly each time he fucked her, signalling to the meimei that perhaps this form of strange, painful greeting was how little girls celebrated their birthdays with their *gege*s, so she'd come to accept it as part of her new life as a ten-year old.

He taught her that as big girl now, it's a must for her to be brave, and not to bawl like a baby, to spread her pussy lips wide and relax her awfully tight, hot, possibly injured vagina, so that the gege can shove in his fat excited penis to deliver birthday kisses. Meimei didn't protest nor refuse, because she loves her gege very much and didn't want to disappoint him, so she obeyed and allowed the thirty-three year old man unbridled access to her deepest maidenhood; she reached down to her crotch and with delicate fingers, parted her hairless, soft pussy lips and held them open to show a cute, gaping, defenceless pulsating hole slick with nectar, cum and traces of blood from her broken hymen. The gege bellowed victoriously and with such pride, when his fearsome over six-inch monster phallus slid in without any resistance until he bumps the cervix, and thrust deeper some more to the hilt, where he started to draw circles in clockwise and counterclockwise directions to spread his foul male liquids and painted the insides of meimei's vaginal walls like a stretchy canvas. Balls tightened, penile flesh throbbed so hard, excited beyond belief to taste the girl's wettest, warmest, juiciest, innermost recesses where the heart of her fertility lies. “ Gege , gege , is meimei doing a good job? It hurts, it hurts...” she whined, and in response, the terrible gege simply embraced her, kissed her forehead tenderly, and assured the little girl, “ Meimei , it feels very nice to be inside you, and it's so easy to move inside if you stay still like this. You're such a good girl, letting gege 's penis kiss your vagina like this. Be strong, be calm, don't cry, gege will make you happy again.” That was a fake promise, of course, since meimei continued to feel pain inside her pussy and all over her tired body from her hours-long rape upon her smelly cum-stinked bed, well until the sun rose high in the sky, and over the weekend; but she was brave, because she worked hard to keep her youthful, bruised vagina wide open, vulnerable, without protection, and easily fuckable all day and night for that sex predator lurking in her bedroom.

After that inaugural night of losing her first times, the pervert er gege fell in love with her body and pussy more than her as a sister, so the man showered her with many niceties, such as pretty dresses and trendy jewelled accessories, in order to buy her heart and loyalty; so that when her guard is down, he beds her as often as he can whenever they're together at home, partaking the freely offered flesh of a tasty ten-year old that whets his sexual appetite, without feeling any guilt or remorse, because her virginity and innocence had been sold for mere few gold pieces.

In one instance, he returns from work and expects his meimei clad only in silky panties and nothing else, to have bathed, cleaned and perfumed her body and private parts, so that he could quench his thirst and sate the monstrous hunger first by raping her on the couch - a simple act of rushing up to her, pulling the flimsy material aside when he forcibly spreads her legs and put his steel-hard member in without asking for permission first; she laughs and believes that gege was acting spoiled and sweet with lots of kisses and hugs, and a pumping sweltering hot and smelly, grimy angry-red hairy uncut penis drilling between her forcibly spread-opened fragrant vaginal lips, while they watch silly cartoons on the television together before starting on dinner. The gege does not hesitate to lick then stick his middle finger, and more fingers, sometimes even his hairy toes, straight into the meimei 's slutty pussy, and perform cum-slicked stretching exercises inside her, while having their romantic candle-lit dinner on a table for two. Sometimes, when having after-dinner tea, she sweetly asks exactly how she's been trained, “ Gege , please pour some milk into meimei 's tea?”, in which the horny gege masturbates in front of her and happily spurts a few spoonfuls into her beverage, and she downs it gleefully, despite the smelly cheese-like taste, because gege praises her for a job well done in drinking her tea. At other times, the lustful gege feels kinky, so he jacks off then ejaculates all over his fingers and coating them with the greasy white goo, and then tells the meimei to “open up your sweet pussy, gege wants to feed creamy desserts to your lower mouth”, and the little girl squeals innocently at the playfulness; she willingly lifts her hips and lets the gege insert, penetrate those sperm-coated digits into the wide-open flowerbud, sometimes with lovely fucking in-and-out motions mimicking what he does to her from sundown to sunrise with his penis; those calloused, rough fingers caress and smear the sticky still-warm man-milk all over her vaginal walls, making sure to deposit as many wiggling lively sperm inside her love canal to swim and hunt for her lovely eggs; gege 's filthy but expert fingers tickle the surface full of fleshy folds until they convulsed from those hot sexy massages, sending those lovely clumps of gege 's swabbed sperm deeper, inching towards the womb, effectively inseminating the girl that had barely reached her teens. The tea-drinking session, of course, ends with a nice incestuous copulation because the gege becomes too horny from playing his meimei 's pussy, and he couldn't resist injecting another tablespoonful of fresh semen into her waiting womb while mounting her excitedly, with shuddering throaty moans, convulsing testicles, powerful penile ejections and trembling hairy thighs, because he was doing god's unholy work to breed his sister and propagate their family, achieving his lifelong mission of fathering babes inside the defiled meimei 's womb, bodies entwined and writhing upon their home's carpeted floor, missionary-style.

Even after dinner and another bath, they would continue to make sweet love everywhere in the house; the evil er gege would growl and chase after a naked meimei - because, he'd told her that between brother and sister, she doesn't need to wear her bra and panties at home and is free to wander around in the nude -, he would playfully catch her and they'd tumble to somewhere soft, be it a cushion or on the rug, and he would happily spear his excited, twitching cock into her sweet, sweet sweaty pussy, whilst she struggles and squeals with peals of innocent laughter, then release, pursue and catch again; they would engage in brief bursts of energetic sexual intercourse in all mannerisms and sex positions, with her legs pulled over his shoulder, from the side, missionary, doggie, upside down, anything - until gege groans out a warning and starts to spill his filled cup of fertile semen boiling up from within his loins, and like clockwork, meimei remembered her lesson that gege taught, that is, she whispers ' gege , gege , you feel so good, please shoot your sperm inside meimei and knock her up, make this ten-year old girl pregnant with your baby'; followed by exercising her vaginal muscles around the overjoyed shuddering member deliriously sawing between her legs, that he explodes with a sensational roar and unending shaking thrusts of hairy muscular hips, thirty powerful jets of day's worth of virile rapist incestuous seed; finally, the meimei lovingly pulls the gege down to the floor and stays there, because she's been taught that when gege comes while mounting her, she must lie beneath him and raise her welcoming hips, like a receptacle vessel for the convulsing manhood spewing out warm, pulsing seed, containing the spillage, not letting a drop out, a cup for the evidence of their lovemaking, where brotherly milky liquids and sister's sex juices mix and stew, where precious pure eggs finally roll out from her ovaries and plop in and become fertilized, growing into new, corrupted inbred life.

Back to the present - fingers roamed around the girl's smooth, nearly hairless body, voraciously touching where men should not touch, brazenly violating her inner sanctums and her illegally sexy erogenous areas; but she giggles and laughs, crystalline tinkles echoing off the bedroom walls, because to her, it's a fun, fun game of yearning, to have gege sniffing her armpits, stabbing her navel with a slimy tongue, playing with her titties until her nipples stood up, perky and firm from too much rough rubs, bruising fingerprints mar her marble-white skin because the thirty four-year old man became ravenous, greedy, and grasped and grabbed whatever he could from the innocent girl, enjoying the experience of inserting fingers into her flowerbud without resistance, even her anus where someday, he would pound her into the bed and fuck her into the mattress like real, aggressive rapists do to sodomize their victims - but for now, while their relationship is sunshine and rainbows, of gentle teasing and happy sexual intercourses between a loving giant brother and his seemingly miniature-sized little sister, er gege is happy to engage in tasty sex with her with fairy tales, and let his magical unicorn horn between his legs entertain her and her tasty clenching vagina that is being shaped and moulded from frequent sex, to the brother's phallic desires.

.

“ Er gege , er gege , this meimei feels very itchy today.”

“Mn. Where does it itch-itch?”

“Here, here, down here, gege . I'm spreading it open to let you peer deep, deep inside this secret, private place. There's something inside meimei 's vagina that's causing some discomfort, can you see it? Please, put your finger inside, anything, it's hot, it's swelling, it's very itchy. Please gege , scratch-scratch this itch for meimei .”

“You’re a naughty meimei , you didn’t wash your flowerbud, that’s why it’s itchy. Gege has lots of foamy warm milk that can wash your flowerbud properly and ease the discomfort.”

“Yes, yes, please, meimei loves it when gege puts his penis inside and brushes it like brushing one’s teeth. Be gentle with meimei ’s pussy, please? I just had my period last week, so I’m at my dangerous time. Be careful gege , if you spurt your happy milk inside, you’ll make fat and healthy babies inside meimei ’s sweet, fertile womb. Then you’ll have to marry meimei and take care of our babies!”

“Mn. Gege is inside meimei now. It’s hot and tight. Stop clenching your flowerbud, meimei , otherwise gege will cum straight away. Now, tell gege where it itches most? Here? Or here?”

“Mmmm! Gege feels very, very thick, hard and warm, ooh-- I can feel it pulsing very lively inside. Is gege very excited, drilling in and out of meimei ’s sweet nectary vagina? Let meimei squeeze-squeeze her pussy, does it feel better? Or let meimei move her hips in circles, like this... ooh, gege , your face looks silly right now. You look like you’ve been burnt by fire and yet your hips keep thrusting wildly between my legs. Gege , this pussy is made just for you, you know, because meimei dreams of marrying gege soon, then we can have sex all day, and meimei will become impregnated with lots of gege ’s beautiful babies. Please gege , please be the father of meimei ’s babies?”

“Mn. Gege feels happy and blessed to have a lovely meimei like you. You’re so kind, letting this gege make sweet love to your pussy every day, all day. Gege also wants to kiss your breasts and suckle them, massage them like steamed baozi from the basket, so that they may grow into plump fruits to feed the babies.”

“Ah ha ha! Meimei will let gege steal a taste of the fragrant milk, then. Nnnh, not so hard, please don’t squeeze meimei ’s underdeveloped breasts like that or grab meimei ’s thin waist so roughly, even though your body is sweaty, hot, seizing up like you’re about to have a heart attack. Gege , you look very red, and it feels very good to have nine shallow fucks followed by nine deep gouges alternately. Meimei ’s womb is opening up, and your penis is growing longer, harder, more passionate to kiss the entrance of this maiden’s untouched flowerbud. You’re the first man to kiss it!”

“Mn. Gege will kiss your womb with his strong, virile penis. Do you feel it? My penis is bumping into something spongy and firm. Kiss kiss, kiss kiss.”

“Oooh! Oooh! It feels so sexy! Soon, a baby will grow from its cradle inside, please wish it good morning and wake it for a morning feed?”

“... Good morning, baby. Good morning my sweet child, do you hear your father? Daddy is very excited to meet you, baby. Here, daddy has just pushed through the entrance to your home, do you see daddy’s penis? Say hello to daddy’s penis, baby. Ohh... daddy wants to give you milk, please drink daddy’s milk, thirty gulps, and they’re coming out soon.”

“Ahh! Ahh! Ahh! Gege , you’re so naughty, talking to our unborn child while fucking this hot tight eleven-year old’s vagina so wildly like a rutting stallion! You’re a pedophilic, incestuous brother! I want to squeeze and massage your happy penis now, you bad, bad gege . Please gege , please flood this meimei 's flowerbud with your love! I love you, gege , I love you so much! Let your hot brotherly penis stay inside this naughty meimei 's vagina and make her your woman right now!"

"Mn...!"

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 208

“Let’s see... gege and didi , from both perspectives, checked. Jiejie and didi , checked. Our latest entrant, Gege and meimei , checked. Did I miss anything?” Wei Ying asked with a grin and lifted a spoonful of steam-blown congee to the husband’s lips.

Lan Zhan kept his head down and the tips of his ears pinked noticeably. He ate the offered rice gruel, and tasted ginger-like herbal flavours infused into nutritious pork parts, such as liver, heart, congealed blood, meatballs and fatty slices. Slurp, slurp. Mmm, delish.

“Which one did you like best? Oh, don’t tell yet, it’s a secret, right?” Dab, dab, goes a napkin to wipe away an errant trail of the liquidy food that accidentally found its way to the husband’s chin. The husband, though, focused on the heart-warming food and opened his mouth to wordlessly ask for another serving. He refused to reveal his favourite Dream-powered movie, lest the opinion of the Emperor of the Kingdom of Lan sways the will of his people, or worse, creates a sense of divisive resentment and of unfair discrimination that could lead to civil wars between Lan and Wei-kin.

“I watched the whole series on my holo-phone. I liked the first movie where it featured me and Xi Chen gege . There was drama, suspense. It was fascinating.”

“No! That’s stupid, with all those stupid cliffhangers and even stupider twisty plots! The last one’s better! It’s Uncle Lan and me in my girly meimei form! It’s what I do in real life whenever Uncle Lan’s not working in the castle in the sky!”

“Grand Matriarch, why is it always about a p-- penis and a h-- hole?”

“Ahhh... A-Ji, you’ve just said a dirty word! Matriarch, wash his mouth with soap, quick! Ha ha ha!”

“Did not.”

“Did too!” (and A-Xian, the eight-year old from the world of Dreams, stuck out his tongue like a brat.)

Wei Ying rolled his eyes and huffs in exasperation. “Will you two ever shut up? And for heaven’s sake, eat your bread rolls quietly and let Ni-er brush your hair, then go to sleep!” he bristled and that caused the two kids on the floor to shrink into the giant two meter-long furry caterpillar’s body like sinking into a quicksand pool of white fluffy fur. Even the husband was taken aback by the naggy wife’s outburst, and he closed his mouth, no longer demanding the next spoonful of congee like a pampered king. Ni-er, however, was unfazed by the humans’ noises - because she’s just that awesome even for an infant magical creature - and continued to lick with her tongue to groom the two children’s hair. Her tongue was barbed like a cat’s, chilled and slimy with what seemed to be hand sanitizing gel, which then evaporated and turned absorbent like a high-quality bath towel to properly dry those brats fresh out of a steaming hot bath; the constant, steady licking left the kids’ hair poofy and frizzy akin to afro hairstyling, due to the generated static electricity.

The husband woke up the second time too late for dinner but just in time for supper, and he was feeling rather hungry at that point. He lay on the lower bunk bed, and was immediately tended to by the lovely wife, who showed no obvious signs of sexual overexertion or walking bow-legged - thus, either the wife recovered pretty quickly, or there was a blip in the timeline. He wasn't sure if he was knocked unconscious from the sex earlier that evening, or if he had been living inside a strange, pleasant, loins-draining dreams. In any case, being the King of Gods, he wasn't too irritated by the lack of details, more so because his dreams are always broadcasted live to his entire Kingdom and he really, absolutely really, didn't want to dwell into those tasteless iterations of his own wet dreams.

When Lan Zhan opened his eyes, the two freshly-bathed kids and his furry daughter were already with them, and they brought supper. Both kids had a snack of warm bread rolls dipped into milk provided by Ni-er's awesome depthless stomach, which rivalled even the great sprawling planet-wide networks of food factories and supply warehouses owned by Wei didi. Wei Ying ordered, and received a bowl of spicy red-hot noodle soup with extra chillies, and it was bland grey-white herbal pork congee for the husband. The cheerful gurgling worm regurgitated those Wangxian-branded ready-to-eat food packs that self-heats with a press of a red button, and once her saliva evaporated off the plastic shrink-wraps, the family had a nice toasty get-together over a well-deserved supper.

Wei Ying placed the bowl of congee on the bedside table, before taking a noisy bite from the noodles, and, to Lan Zhan's relief, picked up the congee to feed the waiting husband two more spoons. The husband, of course, had to blow the steam off by himself, and lean forward and puckered up his lips to vacuum the liquidy sustenance from the spoon held by the wife - because cranky Wei Ying was busy scolding the two kids and left the poor husband unattended.

“Hurry up and finish your milk! It’s already past your bedtime! Ni-er dear, please give these two their toothbrushes and toothpastes, and make sure they brush their teeth properly. We can’t have tooth decay running in the family, you know.”

The giant white worm made a ‘Hmm?’ sound of confusion, then looked up to think for a moment with her tail lifted to her chin (she doesn’t have eyes, but her ‘Thinking Man’ pose was cute), then with a spasm on her belly and a guttural nauseating heave, Wei Ying’s request was granted - two slime-covered handy toiletries bag typically found in five-star hotels or airlines, rolled out of her toothless mouth. Ni-er also provided the children their jammies filled with pictures of bunnies, clouds and lotus flowers, helped them to change (even without arms - she’s just that awesome, and used plenty of Invisible Hands magic), give them sweet fluffy kisses on their milk-warmed cheeks and bellies, then levitated upwards to the upper bunk bed with the two gradually sleepy kids in tow (again, using magic). The two eight-year olds constantly clung to her like baby monkeys to their mommies, because Ni-er is the biggest elongated self-heating beanie bag covered with soft fuzz that all children likes; she was straddled and crudely humped by those two sexually precocious boys and didn’t mind when A-Xian blatantly squirted clear seedless drops onto her fur while sucking a flab of flesh on the caterpillar’s body, and A-Ji rubbed his grape-sized boy-eggs against her pulsating warm belly because it feels very, very nice to massage little boys’ testicles in circles against feathery, fuzzy surfaces; Ni-er is a kind of high-level magic-based demon-kin, and isn’t as preoccupied about sex and such needless pleasures of the flesh as those that evolved from primitive apes.

The husband and wife couple chatted discreetly and kept their voice low, while finishing their supper, and hoped that the kids wouldn’t wake up for a while. Unfortunately or not, the number of dormitories in Nieshan was limited due to its early stages of construction. Most rooms had been taken up by other residents and soldiers - mind-controlled ones or disguised Lan and Wei-kin individuals included -, and there was no daycare facility so the children and their pet caterpillar were sent to stay with the royal couple instead. Lan Zhan mainly kept to one-worded answers, while Wei Ying went on and on about himself, his concerns, his likes and dislikes - because Wei Ying was fine eating and talking, though the husband less likely; they had eight other courses for their supper, congee and noodles being just one - thus, between waving a fried chicken drumstick, chewing sauce-dipped rice cakes, poking into bowls of fruits, nuts and salads, biting into a Big Mac or a sub sandwich - the husband quietly learned that the power outage lasted for a few days in real time, and he was hauled up from the damp, soggy, fungus-infested drippy floor mat inside the horse carriage when rescuers finally managed to pry open its portal using electrical tools. Lan Zhan, Wei Ying and a host of others were lifted out across countless underground kingdoms; each had been trapped in their own fantasy worlds like those getting locked up in escalators when the fuse blows.

When they were done with their lavish meal, and Lan Zhan burped expectedly from a filled belly, Wei Ying kissed him to thank him for eating well, and gave that happy belly a nice fondling rub. Then, after putting away the bowls and cutlery, he climbed up the bunk bed to check on the children - thank goodness they're fast asleep and Ni-er seemed to doze off too while curling around two little boys in the middle of the bed (it's hard to tell, because she has no face other than a toothless mouth filled with pink gums). Wei Ying mischievously arranged the boys so that A-Ji spooned against A-Xian upon Ni-er's wide rotund belly, then rolled down the boys' pants; he slipped a hand to the juncture where the boys' bodies closely touched each other - at the hips -, then used two fingers - a thumb and a forefinger made into a tight O-ring -, and masturbated the sleeping Lan child until his pinkie-length penis swelled and started twitching; A-Ji sighed, dreaming of bunnies mating with one another, and started to hump against Wei Ying's adult hand. Finally, Wei Ying peeled A-Ji's foreskin as far as he could to reveal the glistening, throbbing and adorable naked bulbous cockhead, and gently, precisely, inserted it into A-Xian's buttock, which he forcibly stretched with his other hand. Once the excited, twitching penis was safely nestled and lodged inside the Wei-child's rectal cavity, Wei Ying released with a pop! - a testament to the legendary elasticity of a child's anus (and vagina, of course). Wei Ying smiled, having completed his naughty mission, then climbed back down the bed with a smug look; soft, rhythmic creaking noises on the children's upper bed ensued.

Lan Zhan stood by the bedside like a gawking bewildered bystander, and stared incredulously at his wife's antics before shrugging. He was guilty of being the most horny and lustful man in his Kingdom that raped countless children, men, women and harem of wives both legal and illicit, so Wei Ying's crimes of making and forcing two cute boys to engage in cute gay anal sex was tantamount to a cute child's play, really. He pushed the notion of corrupting children aside, and thought that he, too, should freshen up, wash his face, take a walk in the late evening to have a look at his new surroundings; a walk would do wonders to help to digest his late-night binge; plus, he couldn't possibly fall asleep again especially with little A-Ji making those steady creaking noises of fucking little A-Xian on the upper bunk, and briefly, he wondered, what do eight-year old boys experience when they tingle and orgasm inside tight little hot holes.

"Wei Ying, where are my pants?" he asked, realizing that he'd been naked all along together with Wei Ying in their fireplace-heated room - proof that being married and living as a couple for too long makes one forgetful, complacent and very comfortable in his own skin in the company of the significant other, literally. He paced around the small studio apartment-esque room, and went around rummaging drawers, cupboards and wardrobes. The wife allowed the husband to conduct his own investigations, while he cleared everything, wiped the bedside table, and put the stacks of tableware, cutlery and used napkins, and Lan Zhan's soiled and sadly crumpled boring beige-grey jammies outside the door; a servant would patrol the vicinity of the dormitories every hour or so, to conduct a sweep and collect anything that needed to be washed.

“You won’t find anything of use in there, and they’re as good as rags,” Wei Ying remarked and cocked his head, “You’re such a tall, handsome man around here, and the godly qi aura from your reborn body tends to wither ordinary clothes into ashes within hours unless your garments are imbued with magic or you’re placed in anti-magic territory,” he added, the last part referring to their recent escapades from Jinshan, “In addition, because of your height and bulk, nothing here fits you decently and those jammies have been sent for laundry. So, until a new batch of extra-large garments are made for you by the tailors in this village, hopefully by sunrise tomorrow, you’ll need to play the king of the fable called ‘The Emperor’s New Clothes’. Have you heard of it?” he asked, somehow having waltzed from door to bedside, hands locked around Lan Zhan’s neck in an intimate loose embrace that was rather seductive and revealing, particularly since they were both naked. Seeing no response from the older man with handful of clothes that were too small for his size, the wife snorted and slid against the husband, face to face, skin to skin, until he was sure Lan Zhan could hear his wifey heartbeat each time their nipples brushed against one another, of one hairy chest rubbing romantically against the one with less hair but with more muscular pecs, and smell the musky mild wifey-masculinity wafting off his showered body. Wei Ying then, unsurprisingly, in a bold display of sexiness, hooked one leg around Lan Zhan’s hips, and while balancing himself rather unsteadily on one foot, he pursed his lips in concentration and felt with his sensitive hairy genitals, to rub their crotches together in pure nudity, never mind that their pubes would entangle in dense curls, and smoothly yet swiftly, tease the unsuspecting husband by rubbing the latter’s hardening arousal from the back of the younger man’s scrotum all the way to the puckered rosebud with sweet penis-licking swipes.

Lan Zhan closed his eyes and groaned, clearly not in the mood after having woken up from immeasurable amounts of sex, and he was still running on empty, very empty, yet his arousal stood up anyway out of bad habit and as an acceptable, perfectly natural response from the physical stimuli.

Later, the couple gave goodnight kisses to the sleepily fornicating A-Ji and A-Xian, and gently asked Ni-er to look after them before she dozed off again, and they quietly left the room stark naked for some quality couple-time away from the kids; it's the parents' night out, after all. "Nieshan practises similar regimented living as Jinshan, so since it's past lights-out time, everyone's gone back to their dorms and quarters except for the mind-controlled guards that patrol twenty-four seven," Wei Ying explained to assure the husband that they wouldn't be caught with their pants down - or rather, without wearing anything. That made sense, Lan Zhan thought, and it would be a good opportunity to explore the countryside at such deserted, tranquil hour; insects chirped loudly around them, and beyond a couple of rows of buildings of the encampment, there were simply miles upon miles of darkness, moon-kissed farmlands and shadowed forests and undergrowth; a half-moon peeked from behind drifting clouds, casting a dim silver sheen to the entire scenery of a remote settlement in the middle of nowhere.

The husband pointed out that the wife could put on some clothes rather than walk around exposed like a hairy, pervert and dirty flasher. "Oh, no, no... the Emperor takes a tour around the town in his new, invisible clothes, so should his Empress too, correct? Besides, I've been applying lots of herbal oils on the stretch marks around my belly, and I need to air them a bit to prevent my clothes from stinking up with sweat mixed with those oils," Wei Ying casually shoved his abdomen to the fore and revealed, to the husband's wide-eyed amazement, ugly-looking gnarly patterns around the lower portion of his belly, as well as on his upper arms and thighs; he didn't notice them before in their dorm because of the amber and ambient lighting, but now that he had a proper look--

"C'mon, don't just gawk like an inexperienced father! Let's walk to the garden outside and have a seat at one of the benches in the fresh crisp nighttime air. I can sit on the table, then show straight in your face what it's like to have a swollen belly until it stretches and grows these crack-like marks, and how a man's loosened, saggy pussy looks like after countless childbirth under your surname. You can touch all you want with your fingers or with that rising hard-on of yours, because that's something only I'll have - the privilege of male motherhood!" he barked out a laughter and trotted ahead, with the husband, forehead creased with worry and confusion, rushing not too far behind in the nude.

Lan Zhan's penis twitched with perplexing interest.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 209

A casual catch-up conversation between naked stiff, red-faced, crotch-covering husband and an openly sashaying, crotch-swinging, equally nude diva male-wife down the hallway out to the lobby of the dormitory building, which in reality looked a bit like a dodgy three-star hotel than anything else.

“Wei Ying, what happened between our separation in Jinshan, and waking up here in Nieshan?” the husband asked, after confirming several times that those passing-by butlers, servants and guards would not, and never ever, realize that two nudists streaked through the bamboo-lined passages and past occupied rooms, some with opened doors and guests staring at them in a mix of bewilderment and curiosity. The wife had informed that mere mortal guards and soldiers had their senses rewired so they saw only a couple of mundane-looking civilians in plain Nie clothing, while disguised otherworldly Lan and Wei-kin that had infiltrated the encampment had been briefed through flashing news all over ErNet that the royal couple was taking a Spring holiday at the rustic, remote village and did not want to be identified, recognized, nor chased by paparazzi, plus there was a gag order placed on everyone from the Kingdom within the perimeter of Nieshan for the couple’s privacy reasons.

“Eh? Didn’t you watch the latest Wei-themed series of live-action movies? I directed and starred in those, it’s a six-part double trilogy that’s been sitting in the number one position on the charts for weeks in a row! It’s a greatly exaggerated reenactment, and a compelling retelling of my experiences during those dark days. I worked hard on that autobiography, you know,” Wei Ying asked in response, a bit baffled by the husband’s ignorance of current news and trends. He grasped Lan Zhan’s and swung it rather energetically as they walked briskly through a windy path of gravelled trail and ill-fitted floor tiles; the construction of the Nieshan military centre, more fondly known as a mere camp, wasn't as good in quality in its engineering and architecture compared to its cousin in Jinshan. Their accommodation is a humble two-storey building primarily made of wood and bamboo, with not more than thirty standard one-room units, each with bunk beds and sparse Nie-themed furnishings. Some parts were rickety, creaky when the wind blew, while others, like their family suite reserved for top officers, were reinforced with bricks and mortar. Lighting was rather dim with inconsistent patches lit by torches affixed to certain walls, and the ground looked like it was only swept once every few weeks, and was littered with leaves, dusty cobwebs and muddy footprints.

"Did not watch. Did not know either," came the smooth reply, as they rounded another bend, past through a musty-smelling storeroom with a partially opened broken door, and Lan Zhan's eyes started to twitch and his fingers itched to grab a straw broom to clean the exterior of his dwelling - if not now, then best by next sunrise.

"Gee... have you been living under rock?" the wife giggled, and repeatedly pried open the two hands crossed at the husband's crotch; Lan Zhan was such a shy guy when it came to walking in a deserted open space wearing his birthday suit. "Zillions have posted rave reviews, cinema screenings run every hour, it's won every other major film awards this year. My bank accounts are bursting to the seams with a flood of earnings from ticket sales, concerts, royalties, merchandising. I've even opened a Yunmeng-themed fast food franchise, and have sparked resurgence in interest in hanfu with my new Lotus Couture branded clothing line launched in major boutique stores. I'm a WeiTube influencer, a celebrity social icon with platinum accounts in WeiChat, and I'm leading in the WeiBoy magazine polls for the year's Most Desirable Married Man title - did you know that?" the bright-eyed bubbly young man asked and had his hands fiddling the husband's exposed crotch; Lan Zhan gave up on defending his dignity and let his limbs relax on the sides, thus allowing the wife to play with his soft, hairy penis and plump testicles as much as the wifey wants until the member started to jerk and nod, that yes, yes, please play more and more with this excited penis, lao po .

A group of chattering soldiers walked past, even barked out to the couple that it was past curfew so they should return to their dorms; Lan Zhan froze like a deer in the headlights because those burly armoured men would have witnessed the unsightly, criminal scene of a naked man engaging in tasty handjobs in public space with a younger person; Wei Ying merely saluted to pacify those haughty armed guards, and was oblivious to them after that.

The brand-new erection wilted after that scary episode, Lan Zhan quickly regained his composure and thought back about what Wei Ying said about his latest venture in film-making and stardom, and the fruits of his labour of love. “Nnnh. Didn’t know. Haven’t been checking my emails. Or news from ErNet. Haven’t logged into my social media accounts since waking up here.”

“Huh... it figures,” Wei Ying hummed in disappointment, and withdrew his hand from the husband’s genitals. Being naked, the young man had easy access to the husband’s body, and could sexually seduce and attack him anytime he wanted, anyway. His interest in Lan Zhan’s penis lost for the time being, he added, “You’re such an old grandpa dinosaur when it comes to technology and livin’ in our fast-paced world. So uncool.”

“Mn. Uncool, it is. So... do tell, what happened while I was out?” Lan Zhan didn’t even bat an eyelid about being labelled an uncool grandpa, because that’s how Wei Ying treated him sometimes, ironically as an endearment. As if to prove his theory, right after that gentle scolding, Wei Ying proceeded to grasp his hand and they walked like a nudist romantic couple towards the dorm lobby; the husband smiled faintly with pinked cheeks and red-tipped ears, because he's such a smitten fool addicted to the wife's tough kind of love and a very mean way of expressing one's feelings.

Wei Ying looked up to the dusty cracked ceilings and noticed a few spiders and roaches scurrying between some beams and roof tiles. He sighed heavily, "Well, lots. Maybe not as plot-heavy or brainy-intelligent as yours, though. I've already experienced getting impregnated by mob Lan characters, giving birth to fatherless babes, and raising generations even during our time in the Soul Restoration Cave - you should still remember that. My soul-form was perfect, like yours, so when I returned to the Mortal Realm, I got back into my body with these stretch marks... and boy, I had lots of twisted contemplations after that together with my four clone-siblings, who treated me with five-star postnatal care. A phenomenal philosophical breakthrough. A switch flipped, I guess." Wei Ying waved his arms about like a crazy naked man, which pretty much summed up his character.

"That is?"

"It's hard to describe." Wei Ying said when they arrived at an empty lobby with just one female receptionist; Lan Zhan steeled his heart and stood in front with his chin up, chest high and crotch bared - and she did not even flinch, thank goodness. The wife whispered some instructions to the uniformed lady manning the counter, something their room keys while they're out; Lan Zhan squirmed and fidgeted, desperately hoping with a poker-face that the wife would quickly finish his business with the receptionist and they could streak out to the courtyard where there would be even less prying eyes. "Motherhood is the pinnacle of a man's life, at least for people like me, ya know? I've reached that plateau, savoured its experiences, moved by laughter and tears, rose to great happiness and fallen to pain to bitterness, all that scholarly, philosophical, poetry stuff, ya know? I grew boobs and had a womb, raised babies from diapers to adulthood. Ya know?” the wife turned around while waiting for something, one hand inexcusably reached for the receptionist’s clothed breasts and he gave her a very, very hard squeeze. She bit her lips in discomfort and took a step back, but did not think further about the hand that continued to grope her chest in broad daylight - rather, night time in an empty hotel lobby. Lan Zhan swallowed - of course, the lady might think that she’d strained some muscles on her torso and chest when she bent down towards the reception desk, and her senses could not even pick up information about a man brazenly molesting her while yapping about twisted male motherhood stories; that was how awesome the mind-controlling effect was.

“... don’t know. But I... I guess I can understand. Sex change and bringing up children, that’s tough,” the husband stated in vague rather than unequivocal terms, while relating to his own experiences.

“But fulfilling!” Wei Ying exclaimed and his face broke into a grin that screamed a knowing ‘Right?’, “The bottom line is that I wanted to retrace my steps a bit and experience variety... the kinds of stuff not found in that pinnacle of a man’s happiness and life... ya know? The power outage was a great opportunity, because I could explore my own underground kingdom of my innermost desires without having to limit myself to two-minute or two-second visits,” he continued, then muttered a thank-you when a butler arrived shortly with a couple of bath towels meant for guests wanting to use the swimming pools at the front of the dorm building.

“... and?” Lan Zhan was as curious as he was braver now that he was getting used to the mind-controlling effects. He even dared a quick thrust of muscular hips in front of the male butler, and lightly slapped the pimply-faced boy’s cheek, just to test the dorm staff’s reaction. True enough, the butler simply bowed in politeness, turned around and marched off, scratching his reddened cheek as though an insect had bitten there.

“I made moves towards the little brother in my dreams, and also my shijie,” Wei Ying declared with a rather smug smirk and put on the woolly bathrobe, and the husband followed suit, “I’ve always wanted to try that, and I got stuck there, because it felt, well, for the lack of better words... ‘nice’. You should watch my movies. They’re R-rated for that reason. I shouldn’t spoil the details, because unlike your free-to-air movie that runs for hours on end, I get paid by people who pay tickets to watch my show in the cinemas, or those who swipe their credit cards for pay-per-view privileges - in instalments up to all six episodes. Don’t be a stinge, Lan Zhan, now that you have the synopsis, go and watch those six movies, won’t you?” A million dollar wink.

That was a decent request. Lan Zhan hadn’t really grasped the idea of intellectual property, copyrighting stories and patenting ideas, thus his daily life and night time dreams are live-streamed unchecked and uncensored to all main channels in ErNet’s most popular forums; there was never the problem of pirating either. “Mn. Maybe after you give a one-minute summary? I narrated mine earlier, you should too. It’s only fair,” the husband counter-offered.

“... Aaah! You scrooge! I knew you’re not as keen to watch as my most loyal fans and followers! Alright...” Wei Ying huffed; his heart wasn’t as cruel as not to give the husband some tasty tidbits of his show anyway. So, the wifey elaborated about his dreams, while daintily adjusting the super-sized bathrobe on Lan Zhan, because if he didn’t tie the waist belt correctly, he’d look like a tall, handsome but rather frightening naked flasher walking in the park.

“I bashed the Jin family before my sixteenth birthday once I could wield a sword properly and join inter-clan tournaments. We annulled the joint agreement between them and our Jiang families so that I can marry shijie - and I did. I fathered many babies with my older sister, got into the Twin Heroes role proper, we whacked the Wens to outer space with our magic and swords, Yin Metal became a golf ball and I scored a hole in one with it. It was sent to a black hole and was never seen again, though you can understand that that meant I was never a Dark Arts practitioner in this fantasy.

The Yunmeng Jiang became a formidable force against the rising Imperial forces but by then, I ditched everything and handed in my resignation, and left it to Jiang Cheng to take care of the clan's future. That's because before I was two decades old, I was saddled by escalating family expenses and had to look for a decent job, with many mouths to feed after kidnapping the girls in the neighbourhood to start a harem, then there's the kids' schooling - oh god, you should see their report cards and what the teachers had to say, it's crazy! -, and plenty more intra-family politics and complications since I became a Patriarch that is committed to marrying more underaged girls, have lots of incestuous relationships within the family and running orgy parties every other night. I lived to the 21st century, four millenia later, as an inventor, scientist, businessman extraordinaire, a king of my own country, and of course, an Immortal because I've cultivated that much using sexual qi with my female offsprings and their descendents, and lived a pretty good, normal, healthy, hyperactive heterosexual life as a world renowned, highly successful Great, Great, Great, Great, and Great, Grandmaster Patriarch after that."

The couple strolled from the lobby and out to the courtyard and gardens outside the dorm building, where a closed swimming pool was built adjacent to one of the corners. Lan Zhan stopped in his tracks after listening, with furrowed brows in great concentration, to Wei Ying's lengthy account at no extra charge. He saw his spouse in a different light, and his hands balled into a fistful of bathrobe woolly material at the sides.

“Wei Ying, are... are you really het-- bisexual?” Hesitant, anxiety gnawing in the guts.

The spouse had to backtrack a bit because he didn’t realize the husband had stopped walking by his side. “Wha-- After what we’ve been through all these years, you’re still asking... this?”

Yellow-tinged eyes stared unblinkingly, expectedly. No, Lan Zhan wasn’t going to let his wife off without getting an answer, and he looked like a sad, distressed puppy with each passing second in silence. It didn’t help that the entire dormitory building had fallen into its night time solitude, with no one walking around, and only the sounds of dripping water or leaves rustling in the breeze could be heard. Wei Ying swallowed and straightened his pose to stand upright against the taller husband.

“Lan Wang Ji, when I proposed to you at the Grand Cultivation Council hall lifetimes ago, I married you for who you are as a man, for your noble, kind and loving heart, and for your eternal promise for the two of us. I can fantasize about fucking every man or woman out there, but in this and every lifetime we’ll have together, I’ll still return to your arms because that’s inked in blood, magic and stone of our entwined destinies that prove we’re perfect soulmates. Does that make better sense to you?”

As expected, the dense husband took a full, heart-pounding minute to recall his early blissfully wedded days, sift through each and every adventure they had as a couple and all those lovely feelings poured unto one another, and to digest the wife’s words to the last letter and dot. Wei Ying’s trepidation was rewarded, finally, when Lan Zhan wordlessly rushed forward to embrace him with two very warm and well-muscled hands - fully naked except for the soft bathrobe.

“Mn. I understand. Thank y--, no, Wei Ying, I love you too. I accept who you are and that you’ll always be by my side, no matter what,” the husband whispered with rare emotion into Wei Ying’s ears, and that sent goosebumps all over the younger man’s skin, and made his heart flutter like the zesty yearning youth he once was. However, Wei Ying had matured over the years and lifetimes spent with this old coot who had for whatever reason held on to past beliefs, superstitions, outdated over-4000 rules, and now, insecurities about love and sex - and he knew, the husband needed a pick-me-up.

“Oh you romantic old fart, stop sayin’ such mushy ‘tings, oth’rwise I’ll take us back to our room, and we’ll make sweet babymakin’ lurve ‘til sunrise,” Wei Ying coo’ed with a little Gusu dialect drawl, and patted Lan Zhan’s back tenderly with an equally given giant hug.

“You’re insatiable, that’s what I admire about you, lao po .”

“Yeah, and you’re insufferable too. Don’t ever change, darlin’.”

The two men kissed beneath the front entrance of the dormitory building, where strangely a bunch of old green prickly leaves hung from some unfortunate spider’s web, like a bundle of store-bought mistletoe from last year’s.

Kissing and hugging done, Lan Zhan was reluctant to let go, now that they’d made up and he’d renewed their wedding vows of sorts. But Wei Ying was adamant, and said, “Let’s stop hugging, we look like infatuated sex maniacs rubbing one out of each other like this, in public places, no less. C'mon, I still want to show you my belly's stretch marks under the starlight and let you take a good look at a saggy overused hairy pussy hiding behind my balls. Your penis will love it, I'm sure, and we can fuck on the picnic tables 'til midnight, if you're up to it, big boy." Eyebrows wiggle and more cheeky winks, from the man who loved to spout curses and dirty words in front of his husband.

"Mn."

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 210

The romantic couple, free of any interference from clones, siblings or children, strolled leisurely along a dark, relatively unlit windy path around the soldiers' dormitory and explored the sparse landscape of few other buildings, offices, gardens and farmlands. Wei Ying happily lay his head against Lan Zhan's bared shoulder, fingers entwined, as they walked under cloud-covered moonlight wearing nothing but oversized bathrobes that kept slipping down, down. The weather as mild,

They talked about their past, their dreams and fantasies, their experiences during the power outage (Lan Zhan didn't have to subscribe to WeiFlix to watch all six episodes of the movie series starring the wife and his pornographic adventures), and their shared future both worries and hopes. Lan Zhan also remarked that now that he's seen what pregnancies can do to a man's belly, and he's seen the ins and outs of an intersex or hermaphrodite matriarchal Wei Wuxian, he can rest easy, knowing that he too, has reached the pinnacle of lifetimes and had made sweet, sweet love with Wei Ying's cock, pussy and asshole all in one, three in one, one in three, plus titty sex, oral sex and handjobs in a single sitting - Lan Zhan, as a male who tasted such exquisite exoticism, has ascended beyond nirvana, for sure.

It took a while and lots of patient thinking, between light banter and serious discussions, for the husband to bring up the topic in the most straightforward, yet unoffending and roundabout way. It was uncomfortable, but it was the elephant in the room.

"Wei Ying, what do you think about... having children? The human kind, of course, not demonic ones like Ni-er or Ernie."

“Huh?” Wei Ying looked baffled for a moment while crouching in front of a patch of grass to pee. It was very easy to simply pull up the lower folds of the bathrobe, squat and pee like a girl - plus, the pelvic floor muscles are relaxed, the body is in its natural tension-releasing position and the legs didn’t need to strain as much -, and the wife had taken a liking to pee this way since he discovered the joys of having both genders’ genitals on the crotch. “I told you before didn’t I, lao gong , that I spent lifetimes birthing and raising generations of our kins. They’re all cute and bubbly, but they’re a hassle for a goddess-like figure worshipped by my ardent lovers and followers. I prefer to keep making babies like a queen ant, and leave the childcare to the single fathers. Sure you can appreciate, I’ve been a working mom, and have no time to settle down for my own selfish needs,” he answered, and gestured to Lan Zhan to take his place beside him, and pee as well. A family that pees together, stays together, the old adage goes.

The husband didn’t mind obeying the order, and simply placed his hands to part the folds of bathrobe covering his crotch, then hold his soft, limp and well-used happy dick, and take aim into the darkness that descended upon them in the relatively unlit spot of the garden; nobody likes to be watched while peeing, deliberate or not, because of the bodily reflex to retract whatever that had to flow out and go into reverse with goosebump-inducing uncomfortable sphincter and muscular squeezes around the urethra.

“I... I mean, if you have the time and means, to be selfish or otherwise, how do you feel if you were to have children?”

Wei Ying clicked his tongue and squirted a jet of urine to the unfortunate fertilized grass, in his annoyance. There the husband goes again. Insecurity breeds confusion and that line of thinking beats around the bushes, the saying goes. Wei Ying reached to the side and lightly grazed the husband’s calves with his fingernails, and muttered, “Speak and spill the beans, you old fart. Your wife is hard on hearing when you mumble in circles.”

The sadomachistic Lan Zhan enjoyed a brisk of loving abuse inflicted upon his right leg by the wife, like a cat that scratches its owner when it is upset. “Nnnh,” he moaned and relented, “Wei Ying, do you want to have our very own children? Since you can give birth and raise some on your own, if you have all the support and love that you need.”

Wei Ying bounced on his haunches to shake off the last dribbles, before rising to his feet. Obnoxiously, he used the inner side of a corner of the woolly robe which doubled as a great absorbent material, to wipe the pee-smearred female slit between the legs. “Now that you mentioned it - I’ve raised A-Yuan for a couple of years in my earlier lifetime, and that boy was a joy because he’s such a nice and gentle kid. In retrospect, that was one of the best times in my early life, and I learned a lot from growing up with him. Furthermore, I’ve sworn to protect that precious bean as long as I’m committed to my promises to rid the world of suffering, such as to care for orphans who started off as bad as I did,” he said thoughtfully, then nonchalantly reached for the husband’s dick too - one flick on Lan Zhan’s wrist, which elicited another nnnh, and the husband lets go, surrendering the control of his penis to the wife to take the aim. He had bowls of congee and drank several cups of pu’er tea, so he had been holding in quite a lot and for quite some time, until with his wife’s permission to relieve the throbbing, bursting bladder.

“In contrast, the past few days I’ve pretty much been saddled with those two brats while waiting for the rescuers to haul you up from your malfunctioned floor mat pinned inside the horse carriage’s shower stall,” he said, and the husband had to hang his head low in shame - he started the mess, after all. The first trickle of pee shot out before steadying down to a nice dribble. “My clone-siblings refused extra childcare duties, because they’ve got their own underground kingdoms to tend to, and they’ve each found more adventures to pursue after living out their own crazy fantasies during the power outage. Being trapped and quarantined for prolonged periods in one’s own enclosed fantasy world does that to people, ya know... they get inspiration and motivation to veer off their path and find better things to do once their lives are back to normal,” Wei Ying remarked wryly and started to stroke the husband’s penis even though it was busy peeing. It goes without saying that Lan Zhan gained another rising erection from the wife’s expert touch, and the plumbing threatened to seal itself off as it gradually hardened, swelled and aimed its yellow pungent fountain towards the winking Mr. Moon in the night sky.

“A-Ji is a dear because he’s kinda slow and dense despite being hardworking, but that’s why I like him and can order him to do whatever I want; he’ll pick up household chores without asking, and if I told him to masturbate his wee-wee while getting naked belly rubs from me after dinner, he’ll do it without asking twice. That A-Xian, though, I can’t believe I was, or could be, like that monster during my childhood days. He’s obstinate, counters everything I say, refuses to follow orders, poops on the floor intentionally and bites me when I boss him around. He wouldn’t hold a straw broom or eat with a spoon, and never washes his hands after peeing, can you believe that? For him, everything revolves around A-Ji, and he’ll only listen to A-Ji, also the two are inseparable worse than a pair of Siamese twins. Even little Ni-er is cowed by A-Xian’s aggressiveness and she feeds his spoiled, demanding feral nature by regurgitating whatever that brat wants. Ugh. That’s so frustrating, because who the hell do you think is paying for their living expenses these past few days?”

(Actually, the kids’ stay, including meals and board, is automatically paid by the Kingdom’s coffers, with cheques signed off by the Regent high up in the skies.)

The wife rambled on and unloaded his annoyance, much to the discomfort and pleasure of the husband, because his penis was rubbed angrily and at a breakneck pace until there was only a blur of fluttering fingers; Lan Zhan’s toes curled, fingers balled into fists, back arched, testicles rose and tightened to the base of the purple-red arousal, and that stupid look started to form on his face - those closed eyes, gaping mouth, rosy cheeks, that grimaced 'Ahhh...' written all over, framed by beads of sweat on the forehead. His hips shook uncontrollably, and made tiny shuddering thrusts into the turbo-charged Category Five hurricane currently sexually assaulting his delighted and detonating penis. Lan Zhan's pee flow slowed down, and started to splatter everywhere within the immediate radius of bombardment of fertilizer-rich sprinkles.

"So, I plan to send those two brats back to the Heavens where their Dream-kins live near that supermarket down the road from the Heavenly Palace, and tell your Regent to take good care of his own family - once Uncle Wei returns, of course, because I can't ship those kids off without their legal guardian. He's the only one left unaccounted after the rescue operation, heaven knows where that drunkard vagrant's gone."

Lan Zhan wanted to interrupt and tell Wei Ying that even the Heavenly Guards could not trace that criminal uncle, because that uncle is an evil demigod of sorts and has special protective privileges granted under their Kingdom's over-4000 family rules - and that is besides the point, because he was asking about having children, but he couldn't think straight and voice out his argument, when the first of many, very nice, healthy fertile contractions welled up from his prostate, pelvic muscles and all the way to the tip of his penis that was being pleased and polished by the wife's skillful fingers. He moaned wantonly in front of the soiled patch of garden and shook his waist and hips erotically, six-pack abs contracting and relaxing like it was doing sit-ups on its own and undulating like a serpent's, akin to an exotic male belly dancer to no audience around them.

"Back to your point," Wei Ying groaned and turned to the side to watch how his darling man's pained-pleasured expressions changed in quick successions, “I want to live happily ever after with you, love you and be loved, have your and our babies conceived inside my womb, give birth to as many fat and healthy kids under the Lan surname, and raise them together with you, lao gong .” Lan Zhan hadn’t heard the rest of Wei Ying’s proclamation and promises yet, but that sounded like a renewed wedding vow coming from the wife’s side, and that sent his heart soaring with absolute marital happiness, that he started to pee and ejaculate in thirty powerful throbbing spurts because Wei Ying lovingly massaged convulsing firm, fleshy tube inside his tireless penis with kneading motions from base to tip, coaxing the trembling barrel to unleash its payload with utterly devastating firepower and climax-worthy squeezes, then rubbed and vibrated the penile frenulum vigorously before letting an index finger play touch-touch with his hopelessly exploding cockslit; beneath, another hand cupped and grazed those lovely plump and ever-full testicles until they spasmed and bulged out of their sacks, like living convulsing eggs dying to milk itself out of existence into shrivelling shuddering releases and finishing with a series of testicular orgasms marked by dancing testicles that wrinkle and smoothen themselves as they pumped very, very hard to feed their owner’s mighty explosion of thirty virile jets of thick male seed; the long, drawn-out baritone ‘mmmmm’ soothing to the ears ensued and his shivering legs threatened to give out because they’d turned into jello from that wonderful hand-induced sexual climax, and at the back of his mind, Lan Zhan was silently grateful for the mind-controlling effects when passing-by patrol guards ignored their noisy hand-lovemaking.

“... and the last condition is that, if we make babies with my permission, and the first one that pops out happens to look like you but act like me - you’ll raise him and I’ll be the breadwinner for the sake of my sanity. On the other hand, if the kid looks like me but acts like you, I get dibs on being the mummy and househubby. I get to spoil ‘im, overfeed him, teach him sex ed, and you go put food on our table. Deal?”

Lan Zhan’s mind blanked, his senses shut down, and he continued to hump steadily into the wife’s watery-cum covered, pee-wetted fist with a dreamy look on his face while standing buck-naked on the grass; his bathrobe somehow loosened then slipped off the broad shoulders during the heaving and huffing excited bodily movements, and fluttered to the ground, useless. It was only when Wei Ying slapped the limp, very satisfied and sleepy penis like a squishy tube of softmeats, then two twists on both his defenceless pink perky nipples from the wife, that the husband ‘nnnnhhhh’ drunkenly from the stinging pain radiating through his boneless body, and he finally acknowledged the wife and agreed to everything that was said, even though he actually heard none of the conditions that had been laid down as a binding contract for lovely Wei Ying’s baby-making, with an universally loud and clear “Mn.”

.

Having had sex with a hermaphrodite, then getting a peeing-cumming handjob whilst having their joint wedding vows renewed and signing off a contract about baby-making with a heartfelt orgasm, followed by a hand-washing ritual at the village’s well that would feed into the residents’ drinking water supply by the next sunrise - Lan Zhan was beginning to think that his stay in Nieshan was a wonderland of unbelievably ridiculous male fantasies that hit everything in his to-do list in life; thus he was secretly thrilled when Wei Ying invited him to the sundry shop - the camp’s only trading post - to shop in the nude draped only with their bath towels to keep the chill out during the cool Spring night.

Lan Zhan wondered if the sundry shop would still be open at that hour - if not, he was up for breaking into the store, then fuck Wei Ying amongst the shelves of groceries, on the aisle floor, even up against the cashier’s register counter; and he would be willing to throw his dignity away by having wild sexual intercourse with and ruining the laoban’s fruits, vegetables and maybe those confectionary and baked goods with creamy fillings and sticky sweet syrups - he’ll pay for the damages, of course. However, that would have to remain in the imagination, as when they reached the closed shop and peered inside through a glass window at the dark interior to make sure there was no one, Wei Ying simply stomped on the dusty floor mat like knocking someone's door, and they were teleported away with fwip! and winked out of sight from the front entrance to the building.

.

The wife explained, while pushing a shopping cart made of the modern aluminium cage construct equipped with four rubber wheels, that since the power outage was fixed and normalcy was restored, his clone-siblings, now armed with a renewed sense of purpose and a shiny new list of adventures they wanted to go for, quickly finished what they'd set out to do in Nieshan and departed for the stars and galaxies in their spaceships and through inter-dimensional portals. That left Ernie with instructions to burrow and build subterranean multiple underground kingdoms and tunnelworks beneath the Mortal Realm, right above the ceilings of the Lord of Hell's domain. "Besides expanding the number of underground kingdoms availed to our empire's loyal subjects, we'll interconnect all kingdoms so that in case another fuse blows from someone's bad habit of showering with the electrical ports running exposed, we can still find our way out. There'll be plenty of manually-operated emergency exits and extra storage spaces filled with supplies in case of people have to hunker down for prolonged periods, such days-long apocalyptic disasters of earthquakes, floods and storms that typically mark the end of times, and universal wildfires for restarting realms," Wei Ying explained while pointing at some canned food that were on sale on the shelves; the husband staggered a bit in his manly stride, reached out with his long arm, and handed a few of those modern processed food items to the wife, who inspected briefly - particularly for any dents, the expiry date and the price tag to make sure that they were not ripped off by shady supermarket quick-sale practices -, before dropping them into the cart.

Lan Zhan was once again amazed by the Wei-kin's ingenuity, but he was hard pressed to say it out loud, because Wei Ying had bent over the cart's handle bar like any lazy shopper, which caused his bathrobe to hike up and show his bare ass, and the helpless husband trailing behind in bewilderment of walking through an underground, brightly lit and air-conditioned 21st-century supermarket, could not resist becoming distracted by the winking and puckering anal bud between those lovely springy butt-cheeks, that he hastened his walking pace and slotted his arousal perfectly into that kissy anal bud. Thus, the couple strolled relaxedly, with Wei Ying doing most of the shopping, while Lan Zhan desperately grabbed and latched onto Wei Ying's fertile hips, fucking the younger man with each step through aisles, the fresh section, the frozen section, and other sections displaying everything a 21st century shopper typically finds, ranging from clothes, kids' toys, DIY tools, electronics, household goods, to baked foods, dairy and eggs, cooking ingredients, beverages, and dried, packaged and canned goods. The husband begged softly for the wife to slow down so that he can engage in tasty fucks properly without straining his back and catching up with the meandering wife, savour the tight hot and juicy hole and the deep, deep unending tunnel, in which the wife naughtily but effortlessly squeezes and milks with strong fertile muscular contractions, resulting in a quickening of heartbeats and a very, very excited penis pistoning in and out the perfect lubricated body-warmed cocksleeve, that Lan Zhan hnnngh'd and aaaahn'd loudly with accidental one-two's when his pelvis shakes while selecting grapes from the fruits section, his hips thrusts erratically when waiting for the butcher to carve and pack tenderloins and pork belly strips, and he spills out semen in excited, joyful splats deep into the wife's ass while waiting for the supermarket staff to weigh broccoli, carrots and cauliflower for them.

He was tremendously grateful for the gag order, which meant that the supermarket staff acted oblivious to the naked couple's constant breeding and disruptive behavior within the premises:

Mischievous Wei Ying inexplicably climbed atop freezer boxes containing ice-creams and frozen foods, then lay face-down with his legs spread like a slut's, bouncing his butt invitingly for a quick fuck on the glass countertop. Lan Zhan couldn't resist, and pistoned deliriously while cursing those freezer boxes for being made to the perfect height that he could enjoy breeding his wife in the chilly nude while standing straight, and when he deposited enough to inseminate a young man, Wei Ying inadvertently left his own mark upon the glass panel tops with his junk smearing man-juice all over. Then, before they left with bags of frozen meat patties, chicken nuggets, mixed vegetables and pizzas, Wei Ying giggled naughtily when he forced a couple of ice cream tubs open, rubbed hot spunk into one chocolate vanilla, the other neapolitan flavoured product, with red-faced wheezing laughter, then closed those contaminated tubs, before grabbing a couple of other unopened tubs for his own consumption and ran after Lan Zhan. He also left those freezer boxes open;

At the fresh seafood corner with rows of fish tanks, Wei Ying laughed non-stop when he dipped his ordinary-sized hairy penis into several choice tanks filled with live small fishies and shrimps - and avoided crabs and lobsters, for good reasons -, and loved how his genitals were tickled when they nibbled at his balls and foreskin, so much more when he aimed his phallic meatstick into those whirlpool streams of aeration bubbles. Lan Zhan sighed and dearly hoped the supermarket staff wouldn't complain about a floaty dancing penis dirtying the seafood or leave icky whitish residues that the fishies may mistaken as food;

The miscreant Wei man happily accepted free samples from oblivious sales promoters, and made good use of those free food. He carefully placed teaspoonful scoops of a new ice-cream flavour onto Lan Zhan's throbbing, jerking withering penis and then ramped up the temperature with a vanilla-flavoured blowjob that left the two with enough vanilla-flavoured cum blended ice cream to tongue play each other with. In another occasion, Wei Ying grabbed those little bites of cooked food and cut fish and meatballs stuck on toothpicks, enjoyed those samples like any normal customer and gave good feedback to the sales promoter, then inserted the used toothpicks into Lan Zhan's drippy penis - and naughtily makes lovely lightning-quick in-and-out motions into the abused urethra; any resulting spillage from the older man, whether accidental pee, clear bodily sexual fluids or dribbling cum each time he misjudges his fucking rhythm and shoots outside of Wei Ying's hungry and welcoming anus, there is a cleaner waiting not too far behind to wipe away the stains just like any other spillages from fruit juices or defrosted packed raw meats.

After many attempts of sexually arousing the squeamish, ashamed husband with plenty of masturbation sessions using with the supermarket's products and services, or simply playing with the husband with food, Lan Zhan finally threw the towel and caution into the wind, even under the watch of CCTVs. He freely engaged in french kisses and molested Wei Ying's nipples peeking out from the bathrobe, generously groped his body and ass, and exchange arousing handjobs and oral sex in the plain open, from aisle to aisle, from section to section, without a care of their surroundings; at such late hours, fortunately the entire underground store was relatively empty except for a handful of other ignorant customers rushing to grab late-night snacks or emergency groceries;

.

All in all, the total came up to a whopping couple of gold bars plus a few more gold pieces, for a full cart of provisions. Sexually flushed and very tired and sated Lan Zhan yawned and fished out the one and only The Emperor's Royal Golden Platinum Jade Token Seal, while complaining about economic depression during such tumultuous times and inflated prices for Wangxian-branded products in such an upscale supermarket; the jade token being the credit card equivalent of the modern times, which instantly checks out their purchases and billed the amount to the Heavens' treasuries. The sex-happy wallet-unhappy hubby, fresh from an interesting, physically invigorating shopping experience tilled with visual and sensational feasts, and from many delicious and loins-fulfilling fucks, asked the wife if they had completed their shopping list, and the crux of the trip - what was the purpose of buying so much.

“Oh, lao gong , since Ni-er swallowed our horse cart and our belongings, I thought we should just let her have them and we’d get fresh new stuff for our inventory and our wardrobe. With these near-61st century technology built into each of us,” Wei Ying remarked and lifted his hands, “-- we can always store and retrieve any possessions from anywhere, at any time.” Lan Zhan marvelled at his own hands, a little calloused, muscled and veined, smooth and healthily tanned at the top side with a bit of golden-brown fuzz against one of the supermarket’s ceiling lights, a little pale on the underside, but otherwise, perfectly normal. Then, the wife showed how it worked - just a little bit of kinetic qi - such as a blink or a snap of fingers - and the entire shopping cart of purchased and plastic-bagged goods glowed bright blue until it became a microsecond of brilliant incandescent, and then deformed, shrunk and melted into Lan Zhan’s wide opened arms like a gooey blue-white blob of light and dissipated into the older man’s skin. The husband made an amazed “oooooh” expression, then curled his fingers - a line of light formed in his palm, and lo and behold, a recently purchased Wangxian-branded Double Action Anti-Bacterial Toothbrush (Hard) materialized in his grasp. A twitch of the wrist, that toothbrush re-entered into the man’s body.

“See? It’s nifty, isn’t it? I made sure the 3d-printed biscuit you ate back in the Soul Restoration Cave incorporated this technology into your new body, and added a few more upgrades you’ll find useful.”

Lan Zhan had to agree - he wouldn’t need to pull handcarts anymore, or ride horses to do the same. He could conjure a fully-furnished home or access food pantries and storewide goods at the touch of his fingertips. It was living in the lap of luxury circa 2000 B.C., the next level.

Then, one hand grabbed the husband's wrist and tugged energetically.

“Come on, Lan Zhan, the night is still young and the kids are fast asleep with their babysitter. Let's go on a date in this space-time bubble! I still wanna shop for more stuff! Watch a movie with popcorn and soft drinks! Have a couples' night out drink at the bar! Scream my ass off in the kids' amusement park then pop by into a sexy adults-only love hotel next door! Go for foot massages, spa, a manicure and pedicure! You didn't think there's a laundromat here that cleans our clothes from the dorm room, and boutiques opened twenty-four seven where your Extra Large-sized garments have been ordered online, then made and sold from here, did you? There's absolutely nothing to do in Nieshan Village but everything that us, young lovers, want, here in the heart of Nieshan Underground City!” Wei Ying gleefully announced and waved his arms wildly, with their purchases safely stowed inside the husband body that now doubled as a walking warehouse - because Lan Zhan's the more organized one between the two, and is better in keeping things in alphabetical order and in numerical sequences; with his bathrobe hanging barely off the waist and his naughty bits protruding out in the open at the entrance of the supermarket, he was truly the iconic flasher of their Kingdom. Lan Zhan had to lower his head and stifle a chuckle.

Elbows hooked to each other's, the couple walked out of the modern five-storey supermarket located in a huge, sprawling 21st-century metropolis that spanned across recently-dug underground caverns, lava tunnels and miles upon miles of polished granite and natural gemstone-covered surfaces. The tarred roads are quite deserted though clean, the alleys dark and buried in shadows, and there are plenty of concrete buildings, apartments, office towers as well as metal skyscrapers still devoid of occupants that were being constructed and just opened; from first impressions, with such high-quality build and trendy architecture, slated for twenty-four seven operation because in this underworld, the night never sleeps and doesn't exist; and obviously there's excellent 21st-century infrastructure with utilities and transportation, tenants would be coming in droves, but not before Wei Ying has had a chance to sample everything the city has to offer first. All around them, there were bustling signs of rushed development to cater the needs of families and a burgeoning workforce waiting to settle in - fully loaded trucks, tractors, cement mixers and advanced wheeled construction robots zipped past quietly with little exhaust, dust and smoke due to the use of environment-friendly technology. In the background, one could see the silhouettes of moving tall cranes and other robotic arms working hard to stack and lift new materials, erect new floors and assemble each high-rise at breakneck speeds that seemed inhuman at first glance, until one realizes that the huge mass of moving parts that looms over everything else of the underground city is, in fact, the shadow of a cold, black thing.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 211

Someone asked, so someone receives, nicely:

In an ad-hoc extension to the story, in yet another alternate universe, a sort of side sex-venture, at least just for a few pages in the big bad storybook of sexy Wangxian times, there is a mention of A-Huan and A-Zhan, two orphaned characters with slightly different baby nicknames to differentiate from those of the main storyline's. A-Huan is the teenage future Lan clan leader and rising superstar of the cultivation world, and his didi A-Zhan, a boy who had barely turned ten at that point and already had a few wet dreams of the former. It's still all rainbows and roses, though, because A-Zhan is very much loved by his all-understanding gege ; the privileges of being born as a quiet, lonely, withdrawn introvert cursed with social ineptness, that the gege knew he had to live for A-Zhan, so that A-Zhan could grow up in a happy family of two in a safe, wholesome environment filled with brotherly love. The little boy worships his gege like the Sun of his universe and freely spends an inordinate amount of time with the older sibling. In doing so, A-Zhan opens up well to the gege and the two siblings are sweet and tender to one another, in more ways than one.

A-Zhan is A-Huan's alarm clock in the wee hours of the morning, much better than any roosters in their backyard. It's a daily ritual for them - the pitter-patter of small but excited footsteps at the crack of dawn before most servants are up, the bedroom door creaks open, closes, locks with a crisp click !, then more cautious footsteps as those tiny feet inch closer to the slumbering form, rustling of falling clothes that tell the subconscious mind of the sleeping teenager that innocent, naive and sexually precocious A-Zhan is definitely very energetic that morning.

The king-sized mattress dips, and A-Huan nnnghs when he feels a comfortable body-warm weight press upon his broad naked chest; the young man sleeps in the nude, especially on hot, humid summer days. Even with eyes still closed, the teenager could map out where those lovely twin smooth boy-buttocks sat on the pecs and faintly, the feather-light touch of wrinkled plump boy-balls upon his sternum.

“Gege, gege, A-Zhan is here. Wakey wake! It’s Sunday and we should go and pray at the temple!” the boy murmurs excitedly, but in a voice that is hushed enough so that servants never notice what goes on behind the closed bedroom door. Delicate fingers grasp A-Huan’s shoulders and shake eagerly, which elicits a grimace, a tired raspy groan, but not much else.

After a couple minutes of suffering from ultra-adorable attempts of a whining cute ten-year boy trying to wake his gege , A-Huan finally opens his eyes with just a crack in contrast to a wide smile on the lips; he is rewarded by his daily bread - the sight of A-Zhan with his hair already tied up neatly like a good, disciplined, faithful Lan child, his features child-like, handsome yet absolutely lovable bolster with some baby fat, body stark naked, smooth as a hairless babe; just a little farther below the pert boy-tits and slim waist, past the lickable navel, a pinkie-length morning wood sticks out proudly and jerks a couple of times, softly demanding for attention - the icing with a cherry on top on A-Huan’s daily bread. A-Zhan has been well-groomed by the brother since time immemorial, that they share so much inappropriate skinship inside the gege ’s room, so clothes are not needed within these four walls.

“ Gege , good morning! Please play with didi ’s penis, I cannot wear my nice Sunday clothes to go to the temple if this doesn’t go down,” the preteen whines. The oh-so-cute stick of firm, throbbing warm flesh caresses A-Huan’s cheeks and lips, with light taps of chubby hairless grape-sized testicles on the teenager’s slightly unshaven chin, adding to the chorus of wake-up, good morning, wake-up alarm clock calls that A-Zhan is known for, only for the lucky gege . Something sticky smears across the teenager's lips, and A-Huan knows that the didi is getting a tad bit excited for a Sunday morning meant for holy prayers.

A-Huan finally relents, since a bouncing didi upon the neck and upper torso means sleep-ins are a no-no - so he yawns and streeetccches his limbs like a graceful cat. Not surprisingly, the brazen A-Zhan sticks his twitching wee-wee into the brother's gaping mouth because he's been trained to do so, and A-Huan gives the sweet strawberry-pink lolly a few loving brotherly licks and sucks the offered fruit. He pushes the foreskin to the back with his skilled, muscular tongue at the same time when he swallows the entire length easily like a snake does with its tasty prey; then, he works his jaws and lets the gliding, weaving tongue polish the moaning didi 's bulbous penis-glans happily and vigorously attack the wheezing pee-slit, before withdrawing languidly with an upstroke while tickling those tiny veins, resulting in a lovely series of visible shuddering ripples running through the boy's wildly jerking arousal, shooting straight deep, deep into the child's pelvis where happy things begin to swell, become sweetly engorged, filling up with throbbing molten heat that only ten-year olds make for their beloved gege s.

"Mmm. A-Zhan, last night gege had some late-night businesses to attend to," A-Huan murmurs huskily in-between gentle candy-like suckles, and lets his sleep-warmed breath tickle the light pubic fuzz growing above the stiff organ, when he swallowed right to the hilt and the tip of his nose bumps into the pubic bone..

"-- and that includes giving extra prayers to the gods to wish for a fruitful harvest this season," the lips move down to gently attack each child-testicle lovingly, alternately, swallowing one juicy grape at a time, rolling the defenceless egg with such vigour then vibrating it with a low, teenage baritone hum once the egg is lodged inside the throat, before releasing it with a wet juicy plop from the youthful scrotal sac's elasticity. The inexperienced egg convulses from sensations that it was starting to get used to, since it is attacked day after day by the orally skilled gege ; until every last drop of newborn sperm is milked out in uncontrollable spasms, because each testicle is overwhelmed by feelings that it isn't prepared for.

“Would that extra prayer count for today? Gege has had a long week of cultivation training and studying in the library... let's stay indoors this time and rest,” gege persuades the boy, while a long index finger - the length of a grown-up's - slips through the boy-anus unnoticed, and draws and doodles wonderful shapes upon the helpless rectal wall, then locates the sweet lil' bump that all boys love - and starts to massage the nut-sized prostate gland with plenty of sweet circular rubs to jumpstart the production of sexual fluids that horny, lustful and sexy gege s love to drink from their ten-year old didi s.

A-Zhan becomes flushed from head to chest in blossoming reds, his breathing rapid and excited, eyes heavy-lidded and moist lips parted, legs collapsing like jelly from the wonderful adult's oral blowjob that only his gege can give; and still, the boy reflexively thrusts his hips deeper, faster, masturbating his penis using A-Huan's oral expertise, and a burning hot itch throbbing from deep inside his ass. One free hand, the size of an adult's, roams greedily all over the preteen's spine at the back and gropes the thin chests at the front, molesting every last inch because A-Zhan feels so small, so vulnerable, so deliciously smooth and warm to the touch, and smells of fragrant wildflowers and succulent fertile summertime fruits. The naughty gege 's hand swipes up and down the boy's back and ribs to the sides, gently grasps and squeezes tasty palm-sized butt-mounds, and he relishes how silky smooth they feel that he couldn't resist to give it a light bouncy pinch.

The sun has yet to rise, and there's at least a couple of hours before the day starts, thus A-Huan is unhurried in taking his time to savour the boy's first orgasms of the day. He drinks the gushes of freshly made virginal semen made exclusively by a ten-year old. Thirty healthy though tiny spurts each, three climaxes in rapid succession because the gege refuses to let go after each loving explosion of sadistic pleasure, accompanied by wild muscular penile contractions of a very, very tired yet absolutely delighted exposed pinkie-length cock trapped inside the diligent mouth, with long, shrill child-like incoherent moans, shaking hips, and trembling lean hairless boy-thighs. Mmm, it is mildly flavoured with the taste of sandalwood and sweetfruits from last night's supper... delish.

Later, the still-panting, sexually flushed boy lay boneless in his brother's arms, cocooned by the all-encompassing warmth and afterglow from the mind-blowing oral sex. A-Zhan is a little sweaty but his face is all smiles like a drunk adolescent, and his cheeks brightened up into a healthy rosy complexion. It's A-Zhan's turn to yawn because orgasms make him feel very, very nice, and a little sleepy, although his hips jerks erratically sometimes from the aftershocks, and his penis is still half-aroused from their daily sexy ritual. He asks innocently while gazing up at the gege from his cradle of muscular manly arms, that if they didn't pray on Sunday, does it mean that they could play all day?

A-Huan rubs his palms over A-Zhan's tiny nubs on the thin bony chest, and the teenager does not hesitate to lean in to give each boy-nipple sweet suckling kisses; eliciting unbridled but soft giggles from the prepubescent boy. The teenager promises his beloved didi that the boy can stay in the bedroom and play all day - while with one meaty hand twiddling the boy's tired penis, stroking it with that O-ring that the boy knows too well as a prelude of things to come - of more wonderful fun that they can enjoy with their naked, aroused bodies on a beautiful Sunday morning.

Sundays are special days in the Cloud Recesses for the faithful to count their blessings and to pray for good fortune at the local temple, and that reflects in the siblings' breakfast of sweet red bean baozi , rice dumplings with chicken and mushroom cooked with gravy, lucky red-dyed hard-boiled eggs, baked sweet potatoes, a plate of fruits and nuts, and a jug of warm soy milk accompanied with a side dish of youtiao . The servants who came in to quickly put the tray of food on the study table, tidy up the floor and collect any used or soiled clothes and bedspreads, were pleasantly surprised by the sight of the adorable but 'untouchable' er gongzi snuggling in his gege 's arms by the table where breakfast was being served.

“ Er gongzi looks like when he was just a toddler, just three years old, always clinging onto his brother's chest. How cute!”

“Only Zewu Jun can hold his brother like this. It's a special privilege, indeed. Zewu Jun, you're so talented both in matters of our sect and also in caring for your didi !”

“Ah, er gongzi is buck naked, please take him to bathe in the attached bathroom soon, Zewu Jun. We certainly would be heartbroken if er gongzi catches a cold because he insists to strut around without his clothes whenever he's in your bedroom.”

With the squealing maiden servants gone after completing their duties, the door is locked once again, and the brothers enjoy their breakfast in leisure - since there's no need to go to the temple on that Sunday. A-Huan takes his time to enjoy the meal and his didi , exchanging hot, long wet kisses and ticklish touches, playing with fingertips and food simultaneously, feeding the boy mouthful by mouthful of bite-sized dumplings, at the same time, masturbating the little boy to multiple completions because the teenage clan leader has all the time in the world to sexually prey upon his didi .

A-Zhan floats in a semi-wakefulness state, because too many orgasms had tired out his tiny ten-year old body that is unprepared to handle such extremely pleasurable shudders and convulsions that wrecked his meridians, overburnt his flaming lusts, and put his loins to a happy sleep. He regresses in his behaviour to the delight of the older brother; A-Huan gently chastises the boy for being seen naked by those servants, “Shame, shame on you, A-Zhan, letting those jiejie s see your smooth buttocks and your wee-wee”, in which those embarrassing feelings welled up from within, causing the boy’s penis to jerk in a strange, twisted response of excitement and humiliation, also because the gege continues to fondle with the didi ’s hairless penis while enjoying breakfast, that A-Zhan curls up and shifts in his cradle of gege -scented arms until he straddles A-Huan’s hips, to suckle on gege ’s teenage breasts like a babe, then after a few languid jolts of hips that sends the turgid, swollen ten-year old’s penis straight into A-Huan’s navel - because it’s such a lovely fleshy narrow cocksleeve fit for preteen boys to fuck in - A-Zhan cums weakly in oozing, pulsing dribbles. A-Zhan moans incoherently that he’s ashamed, he’s sorry, and he’s a bad boy for showing his unclothed genitals to the jiejie s, and A-Huan, having forgiven the sweet didi trapped in his arms, reaches down to give the boy’s trembling testicles a few nice impassioned rubs. He whispers into A-Zhan’s hair and kisses the scalp, “You are, A-Zhan, you’re a naughty boy after all, especially when you’re with gege . Suck gege ’s breast harder and let gege play harder with your cute little penis, so that you’ll calm down.” A-Zhan mms in acknowledgement and obediently surrenders to the rising waves of exhausting sexual peaks, then ejaculates a couple more times from the lovely feelings inside his stirred yet shrivelled loins, and tries his best to be gege ’s baby by continuing to suck in his dream-like state.

With breakfast and bath done, it is time to get some prayers done indoors. Staying out of temples on Sunday mornings does not preclude one from the responsibilities to pray and give thanks to those who bless their lives. A-Zhan had been taught how to do this before, and there is no need for family altars or shrines - bodies are sacred temple, and worship can be done within, according to A-Huan's wise words that the didi gladly memorized and captured into his heart.

First, an incense stick must be lit. Like acting out from a perverse script, naked A-Zhan bows with folded hands at the front while A-Huan wipes his body dry with a washcloth, fresh out of a private wooden tub of warm springwater. “ Gege , A-Zhan wants to pray. Can you help to light didi 's incense stick? I'm not allowed to go near a fire source during prayer rituals, according to the family rules,” the boy pleads. A-Huan smiles and nods, of course he'll help, because gege 's hot lips is the fire source and didi 's dick is the incense stick that must be lit to send prayers up to the heavens.

Less than a minute later, the insatiable gege looms above the boy and between the spread slender legs upon his bed, now with a fresh set of bedsheets and pillows. He tells the boy to prepare the incense stick properly, just like he's been taught since earlier childhood - A-Zhan obeys without a question and starts to masturbate to sate the brother's desire for a visual feast. When A-Zhan's hairless child-penis stands up and twitches excitedly from the wonderful hand strokes, he uses his fingers to pull down his tight foreskin until the prized red strawberry within is fully exposed, ready to be sexually assaulted by the brother - to be lit up, literally -, and his testicles spasm in anticipation. A-Huan takes his time to devour the fruit again and again, because he has all the time in the world to plunder the boy's penile innocence on a beautiful Sunday morning, bobbing his head up and down in a steady rhythm until the boy cries and writhes, pumping those thin hips high and deep into the brother's loving mouth, patiently sucking the boy's screaming soul out along with drizzles of mildly sweet boy-essence, pre-cum spurting excitedly in showers in tandem with pulses running up and down the pretty angry-red incense stick, and testicles that get cupped and massaged like adorable dough balls until they swelled and darkened with blood-engorgement, again and again.

The incense stick is lit, and now, it is time to place it into a holder. A-Huan exchanges their positions, this time he lies on the bed and the didi is lifted and manhandled until it's the boy's turn to settle down between the larger teenager's legs. He coos, “ Didi , come, come, put your hot smoking incense stick to where it belongs, just like how I've taught you long ago” while raising his hairy hips and aiming his spread butt-cheeks at A-Zhan. A-Zhan breathes hard and is sexually aroused from the aftershocks of yet another record-breaking blowjob, and now, the sight of another man's anus ready to receive his pinkie-length penis to deliver it to nirvana. The boy obeys without hesitation, because he's been trained to lose his penile virginity at a very early age, long before his first wet dream, and that this practise is a prayer ritual that has nothing to do with one's purity and virginity. A-Zhan happily deflowers himself when he pushes his turgid, jerking penis into the dark puckered crevice, then snaps his hips forward, and he goes into a wonderfully hot, squeezing and living, pulsing cocksleeve that far exceeds the pleasures of any form of sex he's had so far. The boy cries, hiccups at the overwhelming sensations and feelings of being connected, mumbling “ gege , gege , it feels so good inside you, my wee-wee is so hot”, his penis exhilarated beyond belief in a warmth, lovingly encased by a man's rectal muscles and grasped by anal sphincters, body connected with his older brother at their most sacred, intimate parts - there is a rush of transcendental feelings of love and bonding deeper than flesh-and-blood siblings ought to have; the glaring fact that he's engaging in the ultimate tasty sexual intercourse with his da ge and yet, he does not have the words to describe the torrent of unrestrained thoughts and heart-squeezing emotions of what it really means to make sweet love with his gege , because he's too young to understand what goes on in his inexperienced, immature ten-year old body - so he cries out hot fat tears.

A-Huan sighs and wipes those tears off the didi 's reddened cheeks. “A-Zhan, A-Zhan, do not cry, otherwise gege will be sad too. Be strong, A-Zhan, and start moving. The third and final step is to pray. Bow as many times as you give each thanks to a person, or a circumstance, that you're grateful for."

For each bow, A-Zhan has to bend his body until his forehead nearly touches the teenager's pecs, resulting in the withdrawal of his quivering steel-hard pinkie penis from the gege's marvellous ass. To complete the bow, he shoves in, slides the excited child-penis and spears the heavenly asshole until he is completely sheathed, slammed right to the hilt, and the boy's eyes rolls up, back arched, toes curled, fingers clutch wildly at the brother's waist, and balls tighten at the luxuriously tight and wet tunnel milking out his spirit and strength.

A-Zhan's first prayer goes to the Almighty God, for granting a blessed life despite his difficult orphaned circumstance, that he still wakes up every morning, that he has family, and he still has warm food to eat and a roof over his head when he sleeps.

The second prayer goes to his deceased parents, for giving him a chance in this world, and for giving him an older brother who loves him very, very much. He wishes their departed spirits well, and hopes that they live a good afterlife, and that someday, when he's done enough good in this world and earned enough merits, he will be able to see them in the heavens once again.

The third prayer goes to Xi Chen gege - at that point, A-Huan too, was in tears after listening to the boy's wishes - for being the best big brother a didi can ever wish for, for raising him when they no longer had parents, for working hard to build and strengthen their clan so that every Lan member can and deserves to live in the Cloud Recesses filled with peace and harmony.

A-Huan just had to embrace his sweet little younger brother after those three wishes, and he thanks the boy for thinking about the three most important pillars in his life. After sharing some tears together, and later, some nuzzles and nose rubs, whispering I-Love-Yous, Thank-Yous and Sorrys, to take their minds off the depressing stories, A-Huan tells the ten-year old sweetie that he should continue his prayers quietly, starting from the fourth to - how much was it again?

“Two hundred,” A-Zhan answers like a boy who’d raised his hands enthusiastically to respond to a math teacher’s question. With that, A-Huan leans back into the freshly cleaned pillows, spreads his hips and buttocks further, and braces for a morning full of sweet, tender lovemaking of a ten-year old fucking his man-ass. A-Zhan would falter at prayer number thirty, sixty and ninety, because he came hard inside the brother’s clenching butt, with tasty moans and inappropriate uunh-uunh-uunh grunts, wild hip-shakes, cute twitching penile flesh and a blossoming canvas of different shades of reds radiating across the boy’s contracting abdomen to heaving chest, to trembling upper torso to those rosy, sweaty cheeks. A-Huan smiles and admonishes the didi to practise harder and start all over again from prayer number four until he can reach the two hundredth prayer in a single stretch without ejaculating recklessly, thus disrupting the count.

The gege ‘helped’ his hardworking didi to breed the teenager’s man-pussy, by molesting the thin, bony child-body using unrestrained kisses on the lips and nipples, to generous butt-grabs where the gege could guide the tempo of their manly lovemaking, then reaching behind to knead the delicate, sensitive boy-eggs to shorten the detonation time - to A-Zhan’s childish frustration because he’d have to start over the number of fucks-cum-prayer, but it was done in playful fun -, and once in a while, they’d switch so that

A-Zhan can rest with his back on the bed, with the naughty gege riding him with his fleshy ass, and he'd pull up each of the adolescent's slender legs, bend it at the knees until the soft-padded smooth sole is within his reach, and A-Huan gives A-Zhan a wonderful foot massage with his calloused fingertips while giving a different soul-draining massage using his anal muscles upon the boy's helpless, shuddering penis penetrating deep into the larger older sibling - in which, A-Zhan turns into a mass of boneless moans and falls asleep from the excellent relaxing reflexology therapy and the tiredness and sleepiness that comes with any tension-releasing male ejaculations, so that A-Huan can extract and steal a few orgasms from the defenceless boy - until red-faced A-Zhan wakes, bleary eyed and cutely yawning in utter exhaustion, shuddering body burning hot, hot from the constant lovemaking, and a very, very satisfied, slightly crooked grin etched on the boy's face because his body is riddled with very, very nice feelings, jolts and throbs - although he has to start from prayer number four - again.

All in all, it is a beautiful Sunday morning for the two boys, nestled in the older brother's bedroom, somewhere in the Cloud Recesses in another world's Gusu.

(A very drained, emptied and very, very sleepy and pleased A-Zhan never really reached his goal of fucking his gege until the two hundredth prayer - but he keeps trying anyway for the rest of Sunday, like a good little faithful Lan boy.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 212

“Ah ha ha ha ha! So, Lan Wang Ji, is that how you take revenge upon your unfaithful wife? That since I deflowered the shijie in my fantasies, so you did the same unto the older brother of your dreams? You stoop so low in your morals these days, I can no longer look at you in the eye, unless I’m as sexually depraved and desperate as you are... and I am! I really am!”

The young man stared at the older husband, took to step forward, then the latter, two steps backward. It was becoming a sort of fleet-footed dance, with Wei Ying slowly approaching his naughty husband with a withering glare, and Lan Zhan backing off while his eyes looked away in any direction possible. They moved from bed to against the wall, from wall until someone’s back bumped onto a table’s edge, from table to floor when Lan Zhan slipped on a banana peel - the kids’ snack - and Wei Ying finally settled his weight comfortably between the husband’s strong, muscular thighs. Till this day, days after arriving in Nieshan, the couple continued to remain as the village’s only resident nudists whenever they’re in their room.

“Don’t forget, Grand Matriarch also raped his younger brother! And here’s a spoiler: shijie got pregnant the next day and they still had crazy monkey sex after that!” A-Xian called out from somewhere in the upper bunk, and an orange peel launched from the creaking mattress, arched gracefully, then landed atop Wei Ying’s unruly hair with a wet splat. The wife shook off the peel and groaned tiredly - precocious, undisciplined brats, really! - then scolded A-Ji to pick up the trash when they’re done eating fruits and having underaged sex. A-Ji merely grunted, also somewhere in the upper bunk, because he couldn’t formulate a proper ‘Mn’ when A-Xian rode the eight-year old Lan loverboy energetically to kingdom come using his fast-paced soul-shattering shakin’ bubble butt. Ni-er yawned cutely because watching two pairs of males, one adult, one immature, bone one another in an assortment of sex positions and role-plays was, in demonic terms and quite frankly, boring.

“Ni-er, make sure A-Xian washes his hands after eating, I don’t want sticky residues all over this room that will attract biting ants! And you A-Ji, you better control your bladder this time, because I am NOT going to wash your underwear, or your bedsheets, and hang them out to dry like little white flags anymore!”

“Ahhh! Grand Matriarch is a bully! No wonder that smelly evil Uncle Wei is like you, because you’re both related! Go away, and stop disturbing my A-Ji! Meanie!” (and an apple core comes flying and bounces off Wei Ying’s head.)

“You rascal! I’m going to sell you to a brothel before your step-parents come to pick you up! You’re gonna get raped by dirty smelly and fat uncles with warts on their penises, like those merry band of bandit friends of Uncle Wei, and you’re going to get pregnant before you reach ten!”

Lan Zhan sighed and allowed the wife to throw barbs and exchange insults with his childhood feral self, because that ignited some kind of savage fiery heat within the latter and the wife started to dry-hump the husband to his own kingdom come. Lan Zhan closed his eyes, let his head droop on the floor in mock relaxation, and basked in the radiating, throbbing pleasures of having one’s crotch engage in titillating erotic play of pubic-rubs, dick-fencing, and all manners of mutual masturbations without the need for hands. To keep the incensed wife from rolling away in his determination to verbally abuse the eight-year old brat, Lan Zhan crossed his legs and captured his very own Wei Ying, and soon, he was well on his way to his nth orgasm that day, hands-off, vigorously serviced by a fertile humping sexy man-wife.

“Grand Patriarch! Is it true? That Uncle Wei came from your dreams? Why would you dream up of such a smelly evil uncle? He used to rape A-Ji every morning and all day, how could you imagine such a terrible person at all?” the squeaky child made Lan Zhan cringe, because he really, really didn’t want to be dragged into their spats.

“Let me tell you a story, then,” he finally relented, because he thought he should at least reveal that much to his closest family members. Everyone listened, to the tune of creaks and rustles since both Wei boy and man continued to sexually pleasure their partners be it upon the upper bunk bed or on the cold hard floor.

The Grand Patriarch regaled the family and a giant furry caterpillar-babysitter about how he was sexually abused by neighbouring uncles when he hadn’t even reached the age of eight - thus smashing A-Ji’s and everyone’s record of who started to have sex at the youngest age -, and how those sexual trauma eventually culminated into sleazy, criminal characters such as Uncle Wei and his merry band of criminals, pirates, thieves and all manners of foul, vile people. His unsavoury stories drew the children’s attention, and they stopped misbehaving though still continued engage tasty child-sex, and that gave Wei Ying a well-deserved respite. Thus, the wife rewarded the clever husband with a sweet kiss on the cheeks and made sure Lan Zhan’s nth climax felt the most heavenly, most pleasurable, and most mind-blowing for that day.

.

The days are long and idyllic in the rustic, remote village of Nieshan. With Imperial scouts on the move after the devastation of Jinshan caused by Lan Zhan's so-called qi deviation and the subsequent rebuilding that town in the backwaters of the Imperial empire, the couple didn't want to risk getting caught on the road by anti-magic wielding Tao priests or their military escorts - so, they decided to bide their time in the unremarkable and forgettable neighbouring village until the chaos unfurled and was laid to rest as 'just another social unrest' with yaoguai to be blamed for the damages.

Resupplies from the Imperial army still occurred at least on a weekly basis, including captured rogue cultivators and yaoguai who are sorted in a new facility in Nieshan, then bound by magic and shipped off to more advanced training and brainwashing facilities in Jinshan or elsewhere. The lower-level yaoguai are turned into bloodwine by junior Tao priests housed in Nieshan's small, rickety temple, in which Wei Ying and some privileged but well-camouflaged citizens of the Kingdom periodically raid the stores when the unwary priests are asleep; the unneeded human cultivators, sometimes the odd, mistakenly-captured peasant, are turned into demonic food as a source of sexual qi by the older priests, and they make for nice de-stressing primetime entertainment for most of the Kingdom's subjects hiding amongst Nieshan's populace - and they get to steal quite a bit of the emitted qi for their personal consumption too. Parasitism is the name of Wei Ying's game, and while the wife engages in those objectionable, unscrupulous activities, Lan Zhan prefers to do things discreetly - he taps his feet and winks out of existence for two seconds, before re-materializing back to the present, fully invigorated and satiated in his loins. His body is his own temple and warehouse, and he is free to choose whichever floor mat in his inventory - there are infinite varieties of mats, actually - to worship the fruitful, sexual fantasies of his desires and whims.

The uprising of yaoguai , suspected to be led by the powerful, increasingly notorious murderous Zodiac Demons, meant that the world that they knew was slowly approaching its fateful end. It was no longer safe to journey between towns as pockets of intelligent, evolving man-eating yaoguai overrun certain key areas and settlements. The sinister counterbalancing force of Tao strengthened considerably as well, and countless local priests and monks were recruited to join the ranks of Imperial troops and accompany their night hunts; junior priests are groomed and trained into very powerful spellcasting warriors who master the arts of wizardry, and when they've gained enough firepower and kills, their souls become corrupted and possessed by the same, yet different, ferocious depraved demons to restart their strange cycle in the evolution from the hunter to become the hunted. In this state of bloodthirsty, wartorn balance between men and yaoguai , the precepts of Tao are put in place and constantly upended, which serves to elevate the importance of this seemingly holy, yet corrupted religion to the attention, and later, interest of the Emperor of Chang'an.

However, the royal couple chose to be oblivious to the latest developments in the Mortal Realm because technically, both had applied for annual plus bonus childcare leaves and had every right not to take calls for work, or be involved in matters of the mundane world. The four Demons of the Negative Planes had been sent back to recuperate stress and overwork, however, fortunately, Ni-er and Ernie were around to help out in babysitting; Ni-er being the biggest soft toy-cum-soothing masturbatory aid for the two boys, and Ernie looms above everyone else, perpetually scanning the horizon for danger and opportunities with either his orbital platforms circling the planet, countless mind-controlling and intelligent sensory nanoparticles that infect every living thing in the Mortal Realm, or through his subterranean cold black tentacles that spread far and wide across the continents. The family spent their days doing mundane things together, including household chores, farming, foraging and hunting for game, their nights in the underground space-time bubble city that slowly progressed towards the 51st-century, and lots of two-second breaks in-between for personal enjoyment - for the kids, at least - and to propagate their own sub-species - for those horny adults; and they would regroup by the end of each productive, fun-filled day in their beds, huddled up together as one happy family and even happier, sated bodies, minds and souls.

Despite such busy schedules, the couple managed to utilize their vacation to rest and rebuild their strengths. Lan Zhan was glad to practise his cultivation three times a day, have nutritious, balanced meals and plenty of sex, and work on his interests in reading the latest editions of Cultivation Times, writing calligraphy and poetry, composing new songs for the guqin, go swordboarding in circles up to the skies, and even improving his sweeping techniques with the straw broom amongst a spate of leveling ups on his domestic abilities. Wei Ying did much more, albeit in a rather haphazard fashion, but he managed to keep himself feeling accomplished and satisfied with a balanced mix of holing himself up to research, invent and craft new gadgets and magical talismans and potions, solving puzzles, surfing ErNet aimlessly and finishing computer games online, improved his archery skills before having wild sex parties, next to practising his flute in peace, before running off to start new worlds in another universe, battling aliens in spaceships and crushing rival empires, then returning to hunt jungle fowls in the bushes in the vicinity and go treasure hunting for ancient relics geocached by the husband several millenia years ago, probably.

The Wei clone-siblings popped by occasionally during mealtimes and some odd hours, giving the couple well-deserved breaks from babysitting (done mostly by Ni-er anyway, and she's gained the reputation of becoming a kind of monster-cousin to the boys). Each have plenty of marvellous time-travel and inter-dimensional multiversal stories to tell, which the couple listened and took to heart, knowing that once again, each Wei gege and didi have moved on with their journeys in life and into whole new adventures, discoveries and excitement, but they still call Wei Ying - the original Wei Wu Xian -, their 'queenie home of homes'.

Uncle Wei was eventually caught, after he attempted to assassinate some shady character known as Jesus Christ in a particular time period two thousand years from the couple's in a land Far, Far, West. In his defense, he called out the decree issued by the Heavenly Palace to apprehend rogue cultivators that had time-travelled to cause chaos throughout history, and he said that for an unknown human to cure illnesses with his bare hands, to raise the dead including his own life after getting nailed to a wooden cross for a sacrifice, to part a large body of water seemingly with miracles and magic, and stuff like that - surely this Jesus Christ xiansheng must be a powerful cultivator in hiding and should be removed from the annals of mankind's history; fortunately, the Kingdom's Time Police did their job and restored peace, justice and the flow of events, and sent the dirty, unwashed and criminal Uncle Wei back to the Regent in handcuffs, no less - because Uncle Wei had been running a network of crime, piracy, drugs, smuggling and whatnots under everyone's noses and profited tremendously over the entire history of mankind, and corrupted countless bodies, minds and souls to the benefit of his huge organization of merry drunken bandits; many were eventually rounded up, and Uncle Wei was kept under house arrest in the Heavenly Palace. In the typical but respectable fashion of Lan-kin, the Regent made a brief appearance in front of the media and bowed in apology. "I am sorry for the troubles, and I promise to take better care of this spouse and win his heart, so that he will not run away again, and this sort of chaos shall not recur," the Regent pledged in front of ErNet's largest news networks.

Happily, Wei Ying and Lan Zhan shipped A-Xian and A-Ji back to their step-parents' loving and abusive arms just as it was about time to leave Nieshan, their newfound favourite countryside resort hidden amongst miles upon miles of uninhabited forests. They chose new garments for their next expedition to the outside world, after having been clothed in colourful 21st-century cotton t-shirts, sweatshirts, hoodies, comfy denim jeans and tracksuits, Calvin Klein underwear and other modern fashionable accessories like 24-carat gold and gemstone-studded matching earrings, holo-watches and Nike shoes, at least in recent memory - so the change back to plain hanfu robes of the beige, brown and grey colour scheme was a refreshing though mundane welcome, and they match with Nie country's culturally preferred colour palettes, where they are based in. They had everything with them, with in-built near-61st century warehouses filled with their daily, emergency and extraordinary necessities - Lan Zhan's being far more organized than Wei Ying's -, and even floor mats digitally woven into the soles of their feet should a quick escape for quickies, or more practically, trips to interconnected underground kingdoms and fantasies of the entire Kingdom of Lan and the Wangxian company, be required. Still, Lan Zhan insisted that they should carry something to look mundane and not too out of place in 2000 B.C., so they opted for classic embroidered Bag of Holding satchels that could be bought in any Magic R' Us shop in most major cities. With headpieces and topknots in place - Lan Zhan brushed and tied Wei Ying's hair, of course - and brand new shiny cloth shoes wiggling on their feet, the couple was ready to set out.

.

“Lan Zhan, that's enough! I don't need that much, otherwise I'll end up suffering from diarrhea!” Wei Ying exclaimed with amusement, as he watched the husband pick ripe red chillies off the plants in a thriving vegetable garden patch, and annoyingly, out of bad, outdated habits, slipped them into the sleeves one chilli at a time; the act was unnecessary, really, because every chilli could be teleported into an extra-dimensional warehouse by virtue of a feather-light touch, a drawn magic symbol, or a miniscule elevation of qi . Lan Zhan continued to pick them calmly, as though in a dreamy daze - there must be some miraculous therapeutic effect of selecting those bright red finger-length glazed peppers in a sea of contrasting fresh, dew-dropped greens, thus contributing to the husband's obsessive-repetitive compulsive disorder, as well as his hoarding nature that demands that he pick every last chilli in the vegetable patch. Thus, he picks, inserts them into the sleeves, where they're transported to god knows where, and God is the one picking the chillies, by the way.

The older man had started a farm not long after arriving in Nieshan, because the land is fertile and unused, and there's plenty of sunlight and rainfall as the weather became warmer. After a season of planting, fertilizing (with you-know-what, enchanted with fertile godly powers, by the way) and taking out the pests, within just weeks, he was rewarded with multiple harvests of chillies. "You've already vacuumed up a tonne of those from the courtyard earlier today, you know, the ones that were drying in the sun. And yet, you're intent on taking every single ripe pepper with you - what are you thinking? Poisoning me with spicy curries and red-hot congees every day?" Wei Ying laughed again, a hand scratching his protruding belly and downwards, obnoxiously, to the crotch to groom his pubic curls and pick a few itchy scabs and blackheads. The younger man was as shameless as he was crude - he wore only a thin outer robe meant for sleeping and nothing else underneath, so he looked pretty much like a male porn star ready for a shoot, minus the trademark sexy body because Wei Ying didn't really have those legendary six-pack abs unlike his husband. However, he did have a bit of a belly because he hadn't been exercising, framed by pliant, soft rounded hips, ugly stretch marks to match with gnarly curly body hair all over the abdomen, and further up, a fair-skinned thin bony chest with somewhat saggy grandpa's tits. To add to the insult of being a walking contradiction, he does have a handsome, charming boyish face of a twenty-two year old man with slightly unruly hair and sometimes sports a five o' clock shadow when he's too lazy to shave, and down, down there, he has an overused female pussy hiding behind a set of penis and wrinkly male balls. The husband, on the other hand, is perfect in everything - height, proportion, bronzed tan, musculature, esteemed and distinguished, drop-dead gorgeous, superbly handsome and absolutely attractive, and is every bit qualified to win this year's Most Desirable Married Man award from the renowned LanBoy magazine.

"No, Wei Ying. I just wanted to collect and store enough. In case of rainy days, as the saying goes. I want to be able to always cook your favourite dishes. No matter where and when," the husband answered patiently, and picked another handful of chillies. The plants grew well even though it was an off-season harvest.

The wife made a squeal-y “Lannnn Zhannnn!” with tiny hearts dancing above his head; how could he not fall in love with such a simplistic, yet so stubborn and old-fashioned fart, Wei Ying remarked to himself with a silly lovestruck grin. He looked at their surroundings - so far, they’ve been able to successfully avoid those nosy junior priests and the pack of soldiers, cultivators and yaoguai who generally kept to the couple of rows of buildings in the heart of the village - their civilization. Both men disguised themselves as Nieshan villagers, and they pretended to live on the fringes and work on the fields close to the military encampment. They’ve had a few close brushes - once, when a bald, wrinkly drooling senior priest sniffed out something tasty from Lan Zhan and tailed him to the outdoor toilets where the latter was inappropriately touched, and Wei Ying saved him throwing a bucket of human waste meant for fertilizing the farms at the molester priest; the priest ran off with a furious scowl and a string of curses and the next day, he disappeared from from the temple without a trace, presumably sent on a holy mission, but actually, he was eaten by Ernie that same night; in another instance, Wei Ying was called to carry some sacks of grains like a slave - because all villagers are considered as lowly peasants suitable for menial tasks given against their will - and the man nearly suffered from a strained back when a few fellow yaoguai labourers detected something unusual and piled up upon him with blades and claws drawn. Lan Zhan farted in panic at the spouse’s dire predicament and caused a disastrous qi overflow, which would’ve resulted in a massive detonation of unsurpassed proportions and ended the world - fortunately, the husband’s new body, originating from Wei Ying’s home-made recipe for 3d-printed biscuits, contained an Anti-Lock Braking System (ABS)-esque countermeasure, which immediately activated Lan Zhan’s six-pack abs (ABS) to spasm painfully and cut off all intestinal peristaltic movements, and squeezed his anus shut in a last-ditch effort to prevent the apocalyptic passing of gas from the man’s buttocks, and everyone lived. The suspected yaoguai were hastily taken down with tranquilizers from trigger-ready snipers hiding in all corners of the village, and were promptly eaten by Ernie from the deep, abyssal underground.

Wei Ying sighed. He owed a lot to the husband, so he thought a bit and tried to hatch an interesting plan to divert the man's attention from those chillies - because, really, as one ages, one cannot eat too spicy foods anymore. He spread his legs wider like a male slut, then scratched his exposed, naked crotch harder, while lying on a picnic bench by the vegetable patch, far away from the main military encampment.

“ Lao gong , lao gong , my crotch is itchy because there are too many curly hairs growing there. Can you take a look and trim it a little? It's making my wee-wee itch, and my balls are irritated by the ticklish sensations. If you pay attention to my crotch, I'll let you touch-touch my pussy with your penis, do you want that? There's no one around, you can kiss-kiss my womb and make some babies here and now, if you're up to it...”

Lan Zhan immediately dropped his red-hot chillies and unbuckled his belt, then grabbed a pair of garden shears, and rushed to the wife with his pants off.

(cue scary music from a horror movie)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 213

A-Huan was having an unusual predicament of his lifetime at the peak of his youth, when his fledgling pre-teen little brother discovered the despairing truth of engaging in male homosexual and incestuous relationships.

A-Zhan had been religiously praying almost every Sunday by worshipping inside his brother's anus, and he prayed zealously for a happy family blessed with happy babies; he never got to reach that two-hundredth prayer, but seeing how hard he tried, tenaciously fucking his brother's ass every holy Sunday until he collapsed in a panting, sweaty and very, very satiated heap by the afternoon with boy-balls flat-tyred thereafter, pushing himself over the edge until his overexerted hips couldn't shake anymore, until his child-penis couldn't endure another series of multiple orgasms despite how good it felt to rub inside the gege's hot sexy rectum - A-Huan finally conceded, broke his vow of silence about the dirty sex happening between them, and asked the boy a simple 'why?'

A-Zhan cried fat tears and hiccuped pitifully, when he learnt that boys cannot make babies by fucking each other's asses - it just simply doesn't work that way, in a biological sense, at least, A-Huan explained. However, he says, as he cuddles his adorable red-faced little didi in a warm embrace on the bed, and peppers sweet kisses on the boy's rosy cheeks, then a smooch on the button nose, one could experiment and test Mother Nature's limits and try to make happy babies just by following what is normally done. At that point, A-Zhan sniffled and stopped crying, and there were sparkles of bewilderment in his eyes, because he thought the gege had a fantastic enlightenment, a stroke of ingenuity, to solve the problem of baby-making between two brothers. So, when A-Huan instructed the boy to get naked for a lesson about sex, A-Zhan obeyed without a question and ditched his clothes, then instinctively lay down on his brother's gege - scented musky pillows - because he's been trained to so by default - and spread his legs for the smiling, anticipating A-Huan.

“See, normally, a man has to make sweet love with his chosen woman partner to make babies together. His penis goes into her vagina, and it feels very, very nice to do that, so he squirts his seed as a reward for being loved by his woman. The seed is like a vessel carrying their shared love deep into her, past the womb where the baby will grow up later, and goes to find her ovaries where her eggs are stored. When the seed and egg are joined in holy matrimony, a tiny baby is formed and it is nurtured and cared for inside the woman's womb for nine months, before being birthed.

It's a bit like walking through a lovely garden to your friend's house, then opening the door when you're there. After that, you need to walk inside to find your friend, who may be in the bedroom and elsewhere, then the two of you spend time in the main living room to play together and be happy. Does that make sense, A-Zhan?”

The meaning is lost to the ten-year old, because A-Huan is a dedicated and very patient teacher to all Lan disciples; as he talked about penis going into a vagina, he stroked the boy's arousal vigorously with a full nearly adult-sized fist to illustrate that yes, it feels very, very nice to let a penis move in and out, in and out, of a wonderful tight cocksleeve that could either be a vagina that the boy hasn't known before, or his brother's, which the boy is completely familiar with.

When the gege talked about the womb, he also inserted one finger into A-Zhan's anus and found the cute nut-sized prostate gland and poked it gently, tapping it to indicate that for men, this is where babies can grow to size if that is even possible. A-Zhan nodded one to acknowledge the lesson, but A-Huan deliberately massaged tasty circles and patted the bump on the rectal wall like a cat does with soft bouncy surfaces, sending those nectarly fluids swirling and gushing within A-Zhan's helpless pelvis.

At the mention of the all important egg, A-Huan briefly released his hand and cupped the boy's plump succulent testicles. That was all A-Zhan needed to know, but the gege insisted, wordlessly, to knead those adorable balls inside their trapped sacs, causing juices to be milked out in yummy pulses just like how it's like to squeeze an orange fruit.

A-Huan is skilled not only with his mouth and ass, but also his fingers - so he played with his didi's penis very well and lovingly fondled the special spot beneath the strawberry tip until it quivered, pulsed, and A-Zhan grimaced and sighed and his hips began to shiver uncontrollably from the sudden shockingly pleasurable lightning strikes to his loins, because he was not prepared and there was no foreplay - and squirted a pearly droplet of white, that is, A-Zhan's famous one-two release when the child's genitals became too excited from unfamiliar sensations or from being rubbed raw too quickly, that a single prolonged undulating wave of incredible tension-releasing orgasmic convulsion surged from deep inside the ten-year old's pelvis to the tip of the cockslit to spill, before its intended time, with mini-climaxes dotting stars in the child's fluttering vision, one single dollop of precious seed that the poor boy couldn't hold back.

A-Huan stared at the surprised, sexually flushed didi and did not hesitate to dip between the boy's spread thighs repeatedly to inhale that sweet opaque and syrupy offering, then licked it off before raining endearing kisses along the trembling erection from peeled tip to base, nibbling the underside length to coax the urethral tube to loosen up and relax for more lovely ejaculations to come, sliding a grown-up's lips from base to balls, loving violent licks around the jiggled testicles before returning up, upstroke, feeling penile veins throb almost too painfully, tugging at the child's foreskin playfully, before leaving with a sweet kiss upon the bulbous spongy pink strawberry upon A-Zhan's wee-wee.

The sex ed done, A-Zhan was gasping, breathless and spread-eagled upon the brother's bed like a wanton slut. He reached for his turgid penis and pointed at the angry-red tip, “Gege, can you shoot your seed inside didi's vagina--” then drew a line along his perky twitching penis to somewhere close to his pubic bone, “-- so that it goes past didi's womb here, and--” the index finger led the way down, down to his hairless balls still trapped inside their wrinkly pouch, “-- and finally the seed can reach here, A-Zhan's eggs, to get married and make happy babies?”

A-Huan couldn't tear his eyes off those lovely testicles no larger than grapes in his large calloused palm. He bounced the sac gently as though to test their weight and maturity, and ran a thumb across both defenceless, fertile boy-eggs. One of them, the slightly-raised, larger right one, spasmed from the glaring attention, and tried to scurry away by tucking itself closer to the boy's penis base.

Lan da ge smiled calmly and leaned in to kiss the fleeing testicle that had nowhere to hide. Sandalwood fragrance, smells of sweetfruits from earlier that day, with a hint of mildly salty pee to taste, wrinkly skin very delicate and silky in texture, the sounds of blood racing, coursing through insides of the child's excited loins to lovingly pump fluids and make everything swollen, engorged, excited, ready for fun incestuous sexual play between and adult and a child.

“Of course, gege will make happy babies inside you, so that we all can live in a happy family,” A-Huan said as he sexually attacked and swallowed one testicle at a time; it was Saturday morning, and he didn't have classes or work in the fields, so the Lan's future clan leader has all the time that day to lovingly breed and rape his little brother's eggs for the sake of the didi 's happiness.

.

If a preteen's pinkish penis and hormone-darkened rounded balls look like an upright vase, then the panting, rosy-complexioned ten-year old paints a beautiful spreading branch of cherry blossoms with wood coloured by his milky white seed, with small strawberries and raspberries dipped in those lovely streaks of cooling semen as flowers, against a backdrop of heaving baby-smooth alabaster skin tinged with sexually flushed reds, and twin perky boy-nipples standing out with excitement, each time the gege sprinkles more tiny red fruits upon the sensual canvas, then dips his head to the boy's exposed, revealing abdomen, to lick those dropped fruits coated with pooling boy-cum, and savoured his - their - masterpiece.

A-Huan declared that for a boy to receive seed in his eggs, he must first vacate as much of his own semen to make room for the incoming seed. That made sense, so A-Zhan lay on the bed and let his older brother pursue artisanal and scholarly delights using his ten-year old body - painting, for example. The teenage gege is a prodigy at such arts, and he knows how to pin the twitching penis against the boy's pubic bone, then, using two fingers, make rapid swiping movements from base to tip repeatedly, squeezing the tube at the underside of the delicate, hypersensitive penis like milking a tube of toothpaste, at such ferocious speeds and with such deadly precision, that when A-Zhan couldn't help but to explode into millions of stars into nirvana and his genitals convulsed violently in powerful, muscular waves to spew its lovely fertile contents, A-Huan directed the penis like a garden hose to draw the 'branches' of his imagined cherry blossoms. Each throbbing ejaculation streaking across the boy's abdomen, even up to the chest, marks a branch. Then, the creative artisan picks some red fruits from a bowl brought by servants earlier as a morning snack, and one by one places each succulent fruit along the semen stream, signifying the blossoms themselves. A-Huan reached for his bedside table and fished out an ink-brush, and he used it to perfect his art by painting twigs off the cummy, milky-white branches - and later, dipped his brush into A-Zhan's wheezing, jerking penis to tickle the insides of the boy's urethra out of spite and innocent fun, for troubling the gege with such a strange request on a Saturday morning.

When A-Huan made a beautiful centerpiece of more than five branches - ejaculations - sprouting from the boy's fertile, turgid, angry-red vase, he knew A-Zhan had been pleasantly emptied and his testicles did look rather tired, shrunken and lighter in weight. The ten-year old boy yawned drowsily with rosiness glowing in his cheeks, because cumming too many times in the span of an hour on a beautiful Saturday morning, when most boys watched puppet plays (the ancient equivalent of modern cartoons on TV) rather than have their wee-wees pleased and shooting excitedly like horny perverts - the very act of orgasming from his brother's trusting, warm hand was very, very nice, and a sense of completion and tranquility descended upon the bedroom, so A-Zhan's pliant, almost boneless body settled in for a short nap from the wonderful workout, buoyed by lucid dreams of making babies inside his snoozing, drained testicles.

The boy was absolutely numbed and thankfully, sleep-paralyzed when A-Huan completed the procedures to prepare a boy for testicle-insemination. The cute pinkie-sized penis was obedient, limp and droopy, no longer responsive to sexy stimulations but still very malleable and bendable to his liking. The gege lovingly cast some spells to open up the urethra as though a stent had been placed inside and expanded its width. He took their favourite ear-pick and began to lovingly scrape and scratch the tunnel of love, mimicking the fantasized in and out, in and out of a thin reedy penis lovingly making love with a vagina that is the boy's urethra, and relished in how A-Zhan sighed and moaned while snoring. Hips quivered, and sweet seedless fluids began to rise, and still, the penis slept on like its owner.

Then, the next tool appeared - a q-tip made with a bamboo leaf's stem and fresh dry cotton moistened with the gege 's saliva, and A-Huan lovingly swabbed the boy's urethra, in and out, in and out, like cleaning A-Zhan's itchy ears, until the cotton tickled the bottommost part of the shivering penis. A-Zhan thrashed his limbs by then, because he experienced discomfort and his childish scrunched features on the face told the gege that he was doing the right thing to gently fuck the adolescent's penis with a swabbing action. The irritation caused more sweet pre-cummy fluids to eject out in spasms, and droplets began to dribble out from the agitated, forced-open and viciously invaded pee-slit - A-Huan licked the strawberry nub and gave it sweet kisses even as he moved the q-tip faster and faster, striking deep into the boy's pelvis, shaking the prostate gland with loving vibrations.

Minutes later, the Lan future clan leader, who was as tall as a fully grown man, groaned and grunted with satisfaction as he fucked his didi in the ass and caused the king-sized bed to creak. A-Zhan doesn't know that his gege had been training his cute rosebud since years before, when he was constantly sexually abused and raped by dirty uncles in the neighbourhood during the daytime when he was alone in the Jingshi, and at nights, when he slept in his brother's protective arms, deep in sleep and an incestuous penis pistoning deep inside the child's growing body. A-Zhan's rosebud had been groomed to accept an adult's penis for most of the first ten years of life, that the child had no problems nor protest to swallow and suck A-Huan's hard-on and the subsequent energetic fucking strokes deep into his buttocks. Patient, virtuous and infinitely calm A-Huan gladly achieved climax inside his little brother with little fanfare or howls even as the latter slumbered in peace, and he pulled out gently with a used bulging, heavily-filled condom hanging off his twitching, still-hard and slick member.

Then, A-Huan crouched between his didi 's slender legs to inspect his prey - no, patient, because it was about time for an injection of incestuous seed into a boy's genitals, after one final medical procedure. The anal intercourse had aggressively bumped and massaged the boy's prostate - the womb - generously, and caused his wee-wee to stand up in full attention - a mere physiological reflex. A-Huan stuck a tiny hollow reed into the helpless, gaping peeslit and sucked as much fluids as he could - seed and seedless fluids included, tasting of wildflowers and sandalwood, mmm delish - to clear the urethra, and A-Zhan nnngh'ed with squirming hips and legs at the loss of what could've been an orgasmic wet dream - his very own semen, no matter how watery and diluted at this point, was robbed by a vacuuming straw, so he felt very, very empty and rather restless, unfulfilled, unable to achieve a climax, during this part of his sleep. To make the tedious process of sipping prepared lumps of warm boy-semen that waited futilely for ejaculation, A-Huan drank the first bubble-like pool of newborn immature sperm, then pushed the straw deeper to penetrate the next bubble, and blew lots of ticklish froth into it before sucking it up, and then, he made a little propeller at the tip of straw and stirred the third bubble of boy-cum, like swirling a drop of yoghurt milk inside the wildly twitching and spasming stretched urethra, and so on. Once all bubbles of A-Zhan's cum had been devoured, nearly thirty in total, then like a doctor who knows what to do with a medical treatment, A-Huan slipped a funnel used for making tiny magical potions, into the boy's wee-wee, and he inverted the used condom and poured its still-warm, fertile, virile da ge -class rich sperm directly into the funnel.

Like the dreams that horny men had long before, of dirty rapists having all the time in the world to carry out their dirty deeds inside little boys' testicles, of massaging using physical and magical means to gently guide the foreign, invader incestuous semen through a boy's plundered and penetrated genitals, a stream of warm, thick yolk-y and cloudy, sometimes foamy brotherly seed travelled through the network of penile tubes, filled up the previously-emptied prostate, then all the way down and around, accompanied with squishy and squelchy sounds, until those lovely boy-eggs unwillingly received their new masters, that is, luscious creamy drizzles of the older brother's mayonnaise-like semen upon the panicking, spasming and crying ten-year old's testicles, who would conquer and colonize the little brother's family jewels, and turn A-Zhan into A-Huan's personalized seed factory. A-Huan repeated his monstrous act a few more times, uch to the moan-y, grunt-y discomfort shown on A-Zhan's cute little scrunched face as the latter's genitals are gently invaded, plundered and pillaged, until the conquest was completed; the boy's tender eggs shivered non-stop because A-Huan's monstrous sperm launched an all-out assault and takeover of the boy's semen-producing operations, and every last one of A-Zhan's tiny underdeveloped sperm was captured, unable to flee anywhere within the confines of those grape-sized spheres, then vigorously made love in a way that sperms fuck each other, entwined tail-to-tail, until A-Zhan's delicate, weakened baby-sperms are penetrated, punctured, impregnated, and defeated by his gege's mighty masculine seed. Even the smallest, immature sperm babies were dug out from their cradles embedded in the testicles' spongy walls, then lovingly gangraped in the open by millions of gege-sperms unto each unprepared, shocked and orgasming didi-sperm, causing untold sexual carnage upon the boy's vulnerable, defeated testes with each funnel-full of warm, foamy ejaculate massaged into the boy's wildly screaming penis.

The older brother knew little precocious boys could hold quite a lot of seed in their genitals especially during their growing-up years where they become very horny - so, he continued to fuck the sleeping boy because he loves to rub his adult penis deep, hard and fast inside tight hot rosebuds, and they gave him the impetus to shoot as much semen as possible, which would then be poured into the funnel again and again, massaged straight into A-Zhan's swollen balls, brimming with lively, swimming and wiggling slimy sperm that belonged to another man.

A-Zhan finally woke up some time later and felt very, very hot, not only in his raw ass, but also his entire crotch and especially his balls. He wept and sniffled at the uncomfortable, throbbing fever ravaging his swollen, bloated and stretched loins, but by then, the damage had been done. His testicular virginity had been forcibly taken without his knowledge, and before he could ask, the handsome gege kissed the sobbing boy's cheeks and whispered into reddened ears, “Didi, didi, don't cry. It is uncomfortable because your body's not used to it yet, but gege has impregnated your eggs while you were asleep. Your wee-wee's vagina made gege feel very, very nice, so gege couldn't hold back and spilled a day's worth of sperm into you. You did well, didi, because you didn't resist, and gege was able to easily implant sperm inside - and now your eggs are pregnant. My beloved didi, our new babies will be swimming happily inside there soon."

A-Zhan sniffled and tried to smile, because it was good news and a cause for jubilation - he should hug his charming, loving gege and thank him for making babies with his child-eggs, after all. A-Huan touched the boy's engorged reddened but hairless testicles and that made A-Zhan jolt from a sore ache throbbing very badly inside those twin bruised fruits. He apologized and made up by giving A-Zhan a sexy french kiss to take the pain off the adolescent's mind, and then said, "Now that we've made babies, we should make lots of love with our bodies to feed them. Some babies will make their way to your sweet prostate-womb, and they'll find their way out just like any ejaculations that you shoot, dearest didi ... so let's do that, shall we?"

The innocent, tricked ten-year old was confused about childbirth, let alone child-making, but it sounded fine and dandy when the story was told through the brother's convincing and persuasive voice. A-Zhan adjusted his hips and made himself comfortable inside the nest of sweaty pillows and twisted blankets, of boy-juices and semen stains on the bedsheets, and spread open his legs again - yes, gege, he murmured, because he wanted happy babies after all.

A-Huan enjoys his incestuous feasts of the young, innocent and tasty flesh every Saturday morning, especially with a pinned didi upon his bed who begs to be fucked, to be played, to be impregnated and soon, to have their babies crawling out from his boy-eggs.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 214

“Aaaahhh! Wei Ying... No, no... uunh, uunh, uunh!”

“You cheat! You fall asleep after cumming five times inside my man-pussy that I worked so hard to seduce you with, and yet, you’re dreaming about getting impregnated by your older brother while doing your sixth inside! Have you forgotten that you’re married only to me? You ungrateful wench! Bastard!”

“No, not so hard, your nails...! Hnnngh! Unnh, uunh, uunh!”

“That’s cum number seven! I didn’t make you cum seven times just to hear you mumble ‘ gege ’ when you shoot your useless sperm! Are you really sexually attracted to your brother? I should castrate you here and now! Asshole!”

Wei Ying was absolutely aghast and furious upon the ruined picnic bench that had lost all its wooden legs and crashed to the grass. The husband, screwed deep, deep into his juicy freshly-shaven vagina hiding behind the still-hairy balls, had unknowingly dozed off after having several rounds of wonderful lovemaking, because it felt very, very nice and relaxing to ejaculate straight into lovely Wei Ying’s womb after all; in his lucid state, he dreamt about being A-Zhan in a bedroom with A-Huan, inseminating the ten-year old’s boy-eggs, and cried out ‘ gege ’ in the throes of his wet-dream mixed with real-life orgasmic ecstasy. Adding salt to the younger man’s wound was that he tapped into the husband’s mind to find out whether Lan Zhan dreamt of fucking the Wei Ying of his dreams, and horrors of horrors, he got a blow-by-blow account of how an older Lan brother raped his didi in a nightmarish, twisted perverse story that should never see the light of day.

Pinned to the bench while getting boned missionary style, mating-pressed, Wei Ying got upset at the revelation, and viciously raked fingernails across Lan Zhan's back, waist, hips, buttocks and thighs - wherever the spiteful wife could reach -, drawing multiple sets of three to four parallel lines of angry-reds on the trembling skin glistening with a sheen of sweat, and made the husband look like he'd suffered from an awful cat attack. Lan Zhan cried out in pain and in sadomasochistic pleasure, because those radiating points of fiery misery and goodness sent very lewd and conflicting feelings straight into his excited pumping loins, culminating into another peak of sexual highs.

To appease the fury of the wife, Lan Zhan accepted his punishment to go pantless for the rest of the day as he toiled hard to stuff his sleeves with chillies; he was slapped until his buttocks bore the marks of a man's handprints, and had his low-hanging testicles liberally grabbed and molested, even rubbed with crushed chilli paste at the wife's sinister, cackling pleasure, his pubic hair plucked in retaliation, and his tormented penis manhandled almost constantly by itchy grasp-y hands. Cultivators and yaoguai who caught a glimpse of the two shook their heads, lamenting how barbaric men from the far North, such as uneducated, uncivilized Nie peasants, could be more dangerous to society than the demons themselves.

Then, just a day before the couple was scheduled to leave their holiday resort, while they frolicked in the sunlight amongst chilli gardens without care, without their pants or with only with a flimsy cloth to cover their dignity much less their hairy nudity - war broke out in the northern regions of the Middle Kingdom, and the province of Qinghe was not spared from the ensuing chaos.

.

Wei Ying screamed and screamed some more at the top of his lungs when rubble, metal shrapnel, burning debris and wooden splinters flew everywhere as though he was caught in the eye of a devastating firestorm; his ears rung from the deafening explosions detonating left, right and centre, and overhead, fiery arrows and cannon balls bombarded from the skies and shattered the earth where he tried to hide - against a pile of barrels next to the tool shed, but that vaporized into fire embers, so he scuttled behind a boulder in a flattened, smouldering farm, but that too, cracked like eggshells in bone-rattling booms, so he crawled on all fours for his dear pitiful life until he reached a nearby well, and dove into a fifty-feet deep well with his eyes squeezed shut and an echo-ey “AAAAAaaaaaaAAAAaaaaa!” trailing behind. Fortunately Ernie activated himself from Wei Ying’s pubic hair, and with the sound of garments being torn off - that is, Wei Ying’s thin flimsy robe being ripped into shreds -, Wei Ying parachuted gently down the long, long vertical tunnel with what looked like an inverted cold, black umbrella with bat-like wings growing from his pubes, until his feet touched the cold, cold spring water, and sunk beneath the dark, dank, rippling surface with a big fat splash.

However, his struggles did not end there, as he was sucked by undercurrents - the well wasn’t one of stagnant water, but rather, there was an underground river flowing beneath the manmade structure. The water flow was fast, filled with churning undertows, and Wei Ying was dragged along and under despite how much he tried to swim, paddle and pull himself up with his tired limbs. His trusty pubic-hair monster squealed when crashing waves struck without warning, it lost its grip from the man’s pubes, and was sent sinking into the inky black waters below. Soon, Wei Ying’s vision was enveloped in darkness when the river pushed him farther and farther from the opening that led the well to the surface, and water crept up his chin, then nostrils; he gurgled and spat, coughed and choked, but there was hardly any pockets of air between the large river gushing through and the walls of its tunnel carved out from tremendous erosive powers of cold, cold mountain water that feed into the Great Eastern Seas. The freezing waters made Wei Ying feel lethargic and his body weighed like lead; the last thing he remembered before he swallowed another lungful of water when he desperately tried catch his breath, as his vision darkened further into blurry shapes, was watching his grasping, flailing fingers scrape the walls of that deadly underground river tunnel, silently pleading, “Lan Zhan, please save me... 蓝湛,救救我...”

.

It was a surreal sight for a pantless man to tip-toe his way through a lush wheat field (where he experienced transcendental tickling and caressing sensations caused by thousands of waist-high wheat heads and beards molesting his exposed naughty bits) and sprinted past a cabbage patch (because cabbage heads were so short and couldn't hide his leaky, excited hard-on) to reach the other side of the farm, where clotheslines were heavy with drying laundry, and more importantly - other people's clothes and pants for the taking. Lan Zhan is a tall, well-muscled man, so he took his time to pick, measure, and try on several larger pants to match his level of comfort - never mind that he was going commando, and some pants suffered from having pre-cum stains and pubic hair left inside, stuck between the pant-legs - some of which had a bit of frizziness or had split ends after the angry wife plucked handfuls off the unfortunate man's crotch.

Just as he was about to try one promising-looking pair of long trousers, a cannon ball whizzed by and all hell broke loose in Nieshan. With one leg hopping while the other stuck inside a leg of a pair of pants, Lan Zhan fell clumsily to the side, and blasts rocked his senses everywhere - shocking explosions, bombs detonating, fireballs raining from all sides - and soon, he was buried under piles of beige, brown and grey laundry that had collapsed from the clotheslines. Heavy soaked woollen blankets, suits of metal armour, even walls of buildings and all sorts of remains from the surrounding wreckage fell on the hapless man until his encumbered limbs were trapped beneath the rubble. The air became choked with dust and smoke, and the acrid smell of gunpowder was overpowering. There were chaotic shouts to run away, to fight back, to regroup and attack, to charge forward and sacrifice one's life for the Emperor and the Way of the Tao - everything became muffled, even drowned in subsequent explosions and the frighteningly close roar of great fires.

Lan Zhan panicked and struggled, but to no avail other than to stay put until the sudden wave of enemy attack blew over. His eyes widened with amazement when he recognized the remnant shells of cannon balls that struck the village - they bore the crest symbol of peonies embellished with white and gold paint, evidence that they originated from the army of the Lanling Jin. From small slits of light in his prison of rubble, he observed many Imperial cultivators and soldiers, with their yaoguai side-by-side, engaging in ruthless hand-to-hand combat, and some fighting with swords and bows. A group of men were easily mowed down by a mortifying rain of blazing fire arrows from the skies; the yaoguai who are impervious to such attacks stood their ground, only to be sliced by a rush of self-propelling flying sabers - Lan Zhan gasped, because those sabers glowed black and reds, indicating that they were magically enchanted, and imbued with dark, resentful energies; some sabers showed their beastly features, such as ferocious images of bears, bulls, lions and dragons shortly before they struck down the yaoguai's magical defenses and cut up demons into chunks of bloodied, smouldering meats. The man realized the sheer importance of the momentous event - the beastly legendary Qinghe Nie Soul-Sabers have risen from the dead!

However, there was no time to contemplate or digest on what he saw, nor to figure out how to escape from his increasingly perilous situation - a tiled roof somehow crashed atop his grave-to-be, and his body was squashed against the ground from the massive weight. He tried to call Wei Ying through their shared soul-connection, and realized that there was no response other than a dead, droning and cold, unforgiving dial tone.

“Wei Ying! Wei Ying... can you hear me?”

.

Guards and medics - shamans, healers and physicians - rushed to the battle scene bearing war banners symbolizing the iron-grey beast-head Nie and golden-white peony Jin clans once victory was secured, and to Lan Zhan's expert opinion, it was a breezy triumph, indeed. Two hundred well-armed soldiers of glory and a further handful of supporting battalions lying in wait, versus a measly crew of thirty low-ranking Imperial soldiers headed by an inexperienced sergeant, twenty rookie bonded pairs of captured cultivators and yaoguai who tried to flee but were easily slaughtered by Jin-made cannonballs and Nie soul-sabers, and a bunch of ragtag peasants who would be better suited wielding rakes and shovels in farms than fighting in the military.

The two main rows of Nieshan's wooden buildings were razed to the ground, and the broken tiled roof finally imploded and crushed everything underneath - but not before Lan Zhan activated his six-pack abs in desperation, with improved muscle control in the twin-mound aft, and farted his way out like a rocket launcher; fire was raging everywhere, so having a man skimming across the flaming wheat fields with super-hot gases ejecting from his asshole to propel him forward - was fortunately, unnoticeable in the pandemonium of screaming yaoguai and soldiers being burnt to death, anyway. However, sword-boarding and fart-flying were two different skill sets, and the man's inexperience in maneuvering using his ass instead of his steel-hard blade proved to be his undoing - he whizzed, spun, turned sharp corners and performed dangerous aerial stunts to avoid burning structures, but ended up losing control of his maiden flight, and crashing into Nieshan's temple altar near the heart of the village with an impressive bang.

Later, guards found the unconscious man while scavenging the devastated battlefield for useful supplies or dropped weapons, and searching for survivors.

“ Shixiong ! Look at this dirty, dusty peasant found under the rubble of the altar! He must be one of the sex prisoners of those twisted, evil Tao priests! He wears the Nie commoner's brown tunic but is pantless, his back is covered with scratches and what appears to be multiple whip-marks, his buttocks are bruised with handprints, and his private areas are coated with ... er... I think it smells of chilli paste. But look at this... his... err-- his rump! It looks like someone had shoved through a molten-hot iron brand, judging from the burn marks leading to the en-- ent-- entrance, and the smell of burnt flesh!”

“Medic! Medic! We have a victim of abuse here, who's still alive but whose body suffered from terrible trauma in the Tao's hands! Bring the salves for burns and wounds! 'Tis a tragedy indeed, to find yet another innocent man here devoured by those horrible possessed priests for their vile pleasures!”

“Take him to the base camp. Have the physicians and healers look at his condition, and request the shamans to calm him down with their meditative chanting. The rest of you, continue to search for enslaved villagers and bring back any documents and records that you can find. The Northern Liberation Army are stalwart guardians of freedom and peace and we've been entrusted to save as many imprisoned Nie clansmen from the Imperial forces. We must not disappoint his greatness, High General Nie Mingjue!”

.

A long time passed before Wei Ying opened his eyes. He was certain that much time had passed, from the way his joints creaked when he tried to move his hands, the soreness in his muscles from remaining stiff for too long, the dry, cracked lips when he tried to lick his chops - and boy, was his throat parched as well -, the grittiness in the eyelids when he tried to blink, an overripe smell emitting from his skin, and the urge to yawn, need to stifle that yawn, but the mouth simply opened by reflex, regardless of that twinge of pain from lips cracking a bit on the sides--

“Wei Wu Xian, you’re finally up.”

Female voice, his mind told him. Fragrance of a woman, a bit floral but more spicy, with a hint of bitter medicines. Familiar, it was familiar, but it wasn’t shijie , or his stepmother, or Mian Mian, or many other ladies he’d met so far, so, so long ago, in a past life--

“W-- Wen Qing?”

Then, a bit further away, a young, energetic shout, this time male and a more familiar voice, filled with springtime joy and innocence, “ Gongzi ...!”

Wei Ying blinked his eyes to clear away the blurriness in his vision, and shook off whatever spider webs that clung to his face, wiping away tendrils of dissipating nightmares or lucid dreaming, and he sniffled and snorted all sorts of itchy dust particles lodged in his nostrils, and he tried to rise from a bed made of uncomfortable hard rock lined with just a piece of rag--

“W-- Wen Ning!” he croaked with a raspy, long-unused voice.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 215

The stuff of fantasy novels told from the protagonist's point of view would go something like this:

Lan Wang Ji, the tortured, imprisoned and enslaved younger of the Twin Jades of Gusu, was discovered in a decrepit dungeon of the Tao by fellow Lan disciples once the war was won. The nation's best physicians were sent to his aid and found that he was The Chosen One due to the remarkable resurgence of incredible qi from his golden core never seen before. Word was sent around that the man was indeed the prophesied one that would rid the world of eternal suffering; all allied sect leaders that once served the former Grand Cultivation Council and held true to their promises of their brotherhoods, paid homage to and visited the former Chief Cultivator who served merely months as their leader, but already, left many indebted to his virtuous deeds. Treasures, mythical weapons and armaments, and ten-thousand strong armies arrived to pay tribute and to swear an oath of fealty to their new saviour, who would bring glory and victory for men to triumph over the demonic yaoguai ; a new mega-sect was born from the coalition of many, and a string of fortresses was erected in his holy name. The meteoric rise of news about the discovery, and return, of the world renowned Hanguang Jun sent tongues wagging and galvanized all good cultivators to unsheathe their swords to fight their common enemy as a united front against evil.

Or,

In a more romanticized version, Lan Wang Ji was found from the wreckage of war, and suffered tremendously from his imprisonment. His older brother arrived just in time before the man fell into a coma from excessive blood loss, and he held the dying sibling in his arms, calling his name again and again. Lan Wang Ji dreamt in his semi-conscious state, but the clarity of his brother's voice was unmistakable, and pivoted his broken, disintegrating spirits from gradually drifting away to coalescence into his true, tenacious and enduring self, to reach out and return home, home where his beloved brother's voice originated from, in darkness that eventually swallowed all senses and his entire being. Back in the real world where a group of bloodied and battered Lan soldiers surrounded their leader and his fallen younger brother in a mourning ritual - in a moment of stricken grief and inconsolable loss, Lan Xi Chen hugged his younger brother's pale, cooling body and cried tears of sadness, swearing to the heavens that he would do anything, anything at all, to bring the much-loved didi back - and to the shock and amazement of the crowd, Lan Xi Chen lowered his head to kiss Lan Wang Ji on the lips gently, lovingly, with such tenderness and raw emotion, then men shed tears at the heartbreaking display of brotherly love and loss. Suddenly, the silence that pervaded the atmosphere was broken, when lightning struck, and thunder roared, and everyone was spooked at what they witnessed next - Lan Wang Ji's hand twitched, and the supposedly dead man moved his blue lips, and croaked his gege's name! Lan Xi Chen never missed a single second of his didi's resurrection and while chanting the name of the one who holds dearly to his heart, he embraced the smaller, younger figure, the love of his life, again and again, crying and laughing, breaking down the eternally calm facade of the Gusu Lan to show that he, Zewu Jun of the Gusu Lan sect, has finally found his Happy Ending.

Well, that would make a great tearjerker and a fabulous read with a plate of chocolate chip cookies and a warm cup of milk on the side, but alas, Lan Zhan had opted not to be the protagonist, nor to put himself in the shoes of a snow-white maiden in distress, living or not. He was fated, rather doomed, to live the life of mediocrity and obscurity in this lifetime, post-main story, and would have to suffer through, physically or psychologically, according to what was written in the Book of Judgement about him.

Lan Zhan gained his consciousness whilst being carried on a stretcher by kind soldiers to another camp in the wilderness. He was housed in a makeshift military hospital ward with twenty or so other wounded men, out of hundreds more in the same location - and that number grew day by day. His wounds were tended to by unnamed nurses and he quickly recovered because the injuries were actually quite superficial in nature - he did not reveal that the marks on his body were caused by a playful, spurned lover, and the burns in his buttocks were self-inflicted. Thus, with three square meals a day of rice, leafy vegetables and meat and a savoury pastry or a sweet potato for dessert, plenty of fruit and water, a nice wipe-down or bath every day by expert carers, and being bedridden on the first lonely night amongst many other, groaning, more grievously-wounded patients, then he was able to get up and walk around during the next two - by day three, Lan Zhan had completely recovered but he was asked by the attending healer to remain under observation because the scholarly physician was skeptical that a victim of war would be back on the feet so quickly whereas so many others remained sickened, had their limbs amputated, and suffered from lifelong trauma both physically and mentally.

He didn't know anybody and nobody recognized him either - the curse of falling from grace and fame in a short span of time after he stopped appearing on the front news page of periodicals since the last summer - and he preferred to remain in his low-key profile too. He wasn't good at conversations either and had a rather dull, unassuming and uninteresting presence despite his good looks and healthy muscular body, amongst saved peasants and soldiers from Qinghe province where he was rescued from or their neighbours from Lanling.

Lan Zhan was a level-headed man, so he wasn't too anxious for not hearing from the wife after the initial confusion at the warzone in Nieshan village; in any fantasy novel, he would be rushing on a flying sword to look for his spouse who might be lost and captured then sold in a brothel - but in this reality, he is God, so it wouldn't make sense to do that because he was supposed to be imbued with awesome powers and helped by incredible but unseen allies. Shortly after he woke up, one of his grey hairs moved on its own and touched his neck, reminding him with a faint squeal and bubbly gurgles that sound like crystalline chimes and giggles, that it was alive and well - which meant that its brother, the cold black thing that was tasked to cling on lovely Wei Ying's pubes, would be in a similar state as well. However, that ticklish hair does not speak the human language in the normal sense, so Lan Zhan took comfort that no matter what had happened that separated him from the beloved wife, everyone was, hopefully, safe and sound, and he should concentrate on the task at hand - his own well-being and recovery.

(Plus, he really, really didn't want to waste his time by hopelessly pining for his missing lover and spiral down into depression for the next, say, sixteen years or so. He's a more matured, independent and strong-willed person, and a productive, contributing member of his own Kingdom's society, compared to those regressive days before.)

Facilities were basic, and as a civilian peasant, most areas of the camp were off-limits. He was still recovering and didn't want to cause any worry and later, suffer the wrath of those naggy, sharp-tongued nurses, so he behaved and did what he does best, that is, to stay out of the limelight and all manners of trouble. Still, that left him with too much time on his hands and with little to do, so he tried his best to meditate, cultivate inside his mind, and perform calisthenics inside his mind to keep himself active, upon his bed or while exploring the hospital wards.

In the olden days, people take days to recover from infections and minor cuts, weeks from more serious sprains, gashes and lacerations, and months from broken bones or severe internal injuries. However, given Lan Zhan's intrinsic awesomeness, but painfully modest and secretive approach in getting things done, he shuffled about between the beds, the nurse's office and explored a bit of the camp like a bored unnamed guest by day two, and rediscovered his powers. He touched carts containing medicines, potions and healing herbs, and inadvertently absorbed them into his skin due to his infinite storage capability; after taking a bitter pot of tonic, he peed outdoors at some bushes, and whole trees sprang up bearing ripe fruits - he grabbed a few juicy ones and quickly left, before curious guards passed by; he went to the kitchens like an awkward overgrown child who wanted seconds after a rather unfulfilling lunch that lacked the extravagant size of portions that he was used to, and stood in the corner with a sad look in his eyes and an empty bowl in his hand, silent pleading for attention - one gu niang asked the lost big boy what's the matter, so Lan Zhan help up his bowl and asked in his most sincere, though embarrassed voice, ' Gu niang , I'm still hungry after the lunch service. May I have s'more, please?', in which several ladies crowded around him, coo-ing and touching him inappropriately from face to shoulders, from collarbone to man-breasts, from his six-pack abs to down below, as they scooped rice gruel into his bowl, because he was wearing a short gown as a top and just a pair of loose boxers to indicate that he was victim of sexual abuse and of course the skin around his private areas was sensitive - the jiejie s insisted that he take a seat at a small table in the kitchen, and they topped his bowl as fast as he slurped down to his stomach's content, while getting shamefully flustered by uninvited, virginal shy kisses on the tips of his reddened cheeks and ears, delicate fingers dancing around his waist, and hands gliding between his naked thighs, shocking him into silence when they worm their way into the boxer's fly and tenderly fondle his penis - such shameless and rude display of female domination! - then, feminine whispers asked directly into his ears, naughtily, if he would like to work as an assistant and earn a few pieces of silver a day, and the hearts of many maidens who toil hard inside the kitchens but hardly seen any tall, handsome young men around, and would be very, very happy if this oversized didi would stay to enjoy their company whilst working, cooking and of course, in beds after work - Lan Zhan pinked and that elicited playful giggles, so he mumbled that he will think about it, and quickly left once his hunger was sated, and his pants tented considerably - unbeknownst to everyone, he used his Inabilities during the drawn-out conversation and molestation episode to make himself a chicken roast, pork pies, rice dumplings, a pot of soup, a large platter of boiled fish and a pan of stir-fried vegetables, before leaving the kitchen that had considerably less utensils and cooking equipment, a rather emptied-out pantry, and headed off to the camp's armoury to pilfer more goods right below the guards' noses with his godly touch.

Through hearsays and bits of eavesdropping, Lan Zhan learned that the camp was headed by Jin and Nie clans, with the former providing bulk of high-quality metal armaments and the latter sponsoring the brawns, that is, valiant and fearsome soldiers armed to the teeth with their ancestral magical beast-spirit weapons. He didn't recognize their leaders, although he noticed that the camp was a base for soldiers to group, rest and head out in campaigns to raid nearby Imperial and Tao-controlled settlements and bring back survivors along with any spoils of the war. The guards were tight-lipped about their missions and whereabouts, so Lan Zhan did not pursue too far in trying to make sense of his new living arrangements, alone and without the wife.

Being separated from the wife didn't mean that he'd have a holiday from uninvited sex attacks; the dirty touches he suffered in the kitchens were a prelude of things to come, and a rude awakening of what was actually happening in the camp. While during daytime, he could excuse himself (lamely) and make a quick getaway from marauding horny females, at night time, it was a different story altogether. After dinnertime, everyone gets a physical examination and their last serving of medicines before calling it a night, and Lan Zhan dreaded the moment the army of female nurses wearing golden-brown and iron-grey uniforms entered the ward where his bed was. They marched in with a serious demeanour and told everyone to be quiet, then drew the curtains so that each bed was isolated by thick, sound-resistant fabrics; he knew that he was in a special ward where sexually abused prisoners were housed - just like him, reportedly -, and he could imagine what every person had to go through before they were allowed to sleep.

In his case, the nurse held a list of examinations that he had to endure, including a check on his sensitive, delicate genitals for any signs of swelling after the attack of the chilli paste, and his worst fear, a rectal examination for the so-called investigation on his recuperation after having a molten-hot iron brand shoved into his ass - again, as the reports say; Lan Zhan never refuted those claims, and he simply stated that he couldn't remember what happened at the Nieshan Tao altar, which to the doctor's dismay and the nurses' secret delight, further lent proof that the man in his mid-thirties was indeed traumatized by the lewd acts performed by the priests and forced him into silence and submission.

The man was ordered to raise his hips and buttocks and pull up his knees to show his puckered, puffy but relatively cleaned anus to those snickering jiejie s in uniforms - he made sure to take a proper bath and cleaned himself down there, because he really didn't want to make a scene back in the wards. Then, hands pushed his thighs apart, in a wordless instruction to shamelessly spread his legs and bare himself to the jiejie s whilst being pantless. Lan Zhan closed his eyes and faced to the side, away from those molesting jiejie s, who happily inserted their fingers into his butthole and, for some strange tribal or ritualistic reasons - because in the year 2000 B.C., medicinal treatment included weird primitive practises -, he was told to brace himself for a wonderful therapy in the form of maidens' kisses laced with miraculous cures; the nurses placed a drop of herbal ointment, healing tonics and other mysterious liquids upon the tips of their tongues, and one by one, they swooped down between the man's open legs to apply their cure, one blowjob, one lick, one suckle and one kiss at a time, to Lan Zhan's defenceless perineum, shuddering testicles, hypersensitive scrotal sac and of course, the main course, his rising, bobbing, hardening penis.

Lan Zhan would have to endure the sexual torment, because he suspected that whatever those jiejie s applied to their tongues included aphrodisiacs, and soon, it felt very, very hot and unwelcomingly, very, very exciting, to have his penis sucked by five or more virginal maidens, his balls rising and falling, convulsing and dancing in their tight sacs from the pleasurable service of many horny females, and to seal the deal, his prostate was played and massaged by those jiejie s and the rimjob from extra tongues and kisses on his helpless butthole turned him into a moaning, incoherent lustful mass on the increasingly sweat-soaked bed. He was admonished not to struggle, otherwise a doctor would be called and a tranquilizer needle would be administered on his naughty buttocks, so Lan Zhan scrunched his face and bit his lips, as tremors ran up and down his trembling thighs, that he couldn't stop the shaking, and those fingernails grazing maddeningly up and down his inner thighs, sending jolts of lightning surging up and down his spine, in which he arched his back, his hands balled into fistfuls of bedspreads, he grimaced when he crested the edge between pain and pleasure, because those jiejie s were exceptionally talented with their hands and mouths, putting relentless suction unto his blossoming penis, caressing those bulging veins that sang with lustful bloodflow, multiple licks upon his weakest spot beneath the penis-glans until he nearly broke his silence and cried with orgasmic pleasure - but he held on, because it felt so, so wrong to explode into those lovely, lovely jiejie s' luscious lips, and yet, they continue to move vigorously between his shivering legs, kicking, flailing helplessly as his man-genitals were attacked by what he clearly identified as succubus-level finesse - then the sensation of something long, firm, undulating and textured, circled around his captured penis head in one of the nurses' mouth, before crawling, creeping closer, gently tapping on the penis-tip with cold, yet strangely tingling slimy touches, and finally sliding through his gaping, forced-open pee-slit, and Lan Zhan cried out this time from the uncomfortable invasion.

His vision blurred, because those penetrating tongues were, in fact, laced with poison that sedates a man while in the throes of ecstasy, so he could only make out luminous, undefined shapes of faces with horns on bodies now bearing bat-like wings - truly, succubi, indeed. Five and more jiejie s smiled sweetly at him, and he watched through his veiled vision, how each jiejie 's long, alien tongue lashed around like a living tentacle, then dipped into his penis repeatedly for a taste of a man's very, very excited but unejaculated seed, then swirled violently in circles and pistoning motions; he knew his penis was done for, when he felt those tongues fork out into finger-like appendages, and he experienced very, very hot throbbing inside his prostate gland that suddenly burst into unfamiliar fullness, of vigorous shaking inside his pelvis, and soon, even his testicles swelled up with foreign liveliness, as though it was inoculated with massive numbers of tongue-like worms that plundered his jewels and devoured his entire being. Lan Zhan's eyes rolled to the back and his jaws slacked, before letting out a long, very, very desperate and satisfied moan, as he experienced orgasms inside his body, thirty healthy spurts swallowed by those succubi's tongues like sucking juice out of a man's juicy fruit, so he never really managed to ejaculate anything, but his body continued to buck and bend restlessly, shoving his hips higher and closer to those jiejie s as though offering his male virility to them on a silver platter, his body wrecked by wonderful star-filled explosions that belied a man's dying effort to propagate and sow very, very wild seeds uselessly into those demonic jiejie 's gaping maws.

Later, Lan Zhan was left in a semi-conscious state, with his senses knocked out but he was still partially aware of what was happening. Each jiejie undressed with hunger glinting in her eyes, then climbed onto the bed like spiders preparing to partake in a wholesome meal; they would inhale his scents and some life energy to savour his taste, giggled in amusement at his tired grunts of pain-pleasure, and started licking at his bare chest with a spiked, knifed tongue to start carving up his chest for the glowing golden prize hiding beneath the ribcage, and their fingers continued to rake lightly all over his sweaty, pulsing skin, spreading an anesthetic poison everywhere - like melted butter on spread on bread - to dull his senses and make him pliant, submissive and docile. By then, Lan Zhan was barely functioning and obeyed the jiejie s' orders - whether to lift his hips vigorously, to spread-eagle his limbs further and let jiejie straddle his crotch comfortably and snugly encase his happy penis with warm, pulsing feminine flesh, to start fucking at tasty juicy shaven, hairless pussies served to his very, very hot and agitated cock, to reach up and grasp and grab greedily at soft, white milkjug breasts to sate his own masculine tactile lusts, or spank jiggling buttocks that cloud his vision, and so on. The jiejie s took their sweet time to rape the man on the bed - and every other beds' -, and let him excitedly spear his wildly-jerking angry-red penis deep into tight, hot, clenching succulent vaginas and virginal flowerbuds until it spilled rich man-milk inside those fertile and sexy vixens; they roide him to completion, many, many marvellous, sexually gratifying and satisfying times, over and over again until Lan Zhan knew that he was left drained, emptied to the last drop, and as dry as a dessicated husk with a crooked smile on his face and a large hole in his chest, in the end.

.

In the particular hospital ward of twenty patients - all male, coincidentally -, every night, at least ten would reportedly succumb from their wounds and be taken away in body bags that looked suspiciously lighter and crumpled than usual; another eight would live for another day or two before dying as well after the nurses' evening checks (and meal), and the survivors, like Lan Zhan, would ironically, enjoy having wonderful sex with succubus demonnenses and live on, due to purely good luck and having enough cultivated qi to survive the nightly sex attacks. It didn't matter, of course, since the Nie and Jin soldiers continued to bring in promising-looking survivors from the war with the Imperial forces every day to fill up the beds, until sundown.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 216

The experience of having one's life energy sucked dry through a succubus' hairy vagina is as macabre as it is pleasurable. All ordinary mortals would die to have a taste of such disastrously awesome sex at least once in their lifetime - pun intended -, but virtuous Lan Zhan would have none of it. Instead, he sealed his spiritual outlets using very advanced cultivation techniques so that he would cum with thirty hearty convulsive ejaculations each time he orgasmed into a jiejie's hand, mouth or otherwise, and his body would still undergo intense hips-shaking pleasures of physical release, but with little nutritional value for the succubi. The nurses left with their pussies dripping with seed and their gait bow-legged, strangely, disappointingly unsated in their eternal hunger for the human soul and its life-giving energies, and worse, they begrudgingly had to sew back the man's ribcage because they couldn't find the precious golden core no matter how many times they searched the chest cavity - including flipping the beating bloodied heart and peering behind the gasping lungs -, thus they had no reason to violate their demonic etiquette of killing the innocent man who wasn't food, and yet, smelled very tasty to every yaoguai-possessed persons in the vicinity. Not long after peace finally reigned - and with much less living, breathing occupants left in the ward, Lan Zhan simply wiggled his nose, and his 3d-printed biscuit body cleansed and fixed itself with in-built nano-surgery technology like a holographic reboot back to his pristine condition, then he turned to the side, clutched his pillow tightly with a dreamy 'mmmh', and snored the remaining night away, with loins pleasantly loosened and relaxed after having so much sex not of his own doing.

The days wore on, and Lan Zhan began to understand his new surroundings. It did not dawn upon him to try and discern the nature of the soldiers, guards, nurses, cooks and all those employed to serve the camp, because he was too focused in fending off those horny females from molesting him all day and squeezing his dick dry all night; sometimes he woke up with unintentional orgasms because some night shift nurse decided to ride him in reverse cowgirl style for a midnight snack, leaving him a writhing mess of "uuuuh"s and "aaaah"s especially when the jiejie used her hands to reach down and play with his tirelessly milked testicles. Thus, he tried to occupy himself by exploring the camp and finding good hiding spots, whether behind barrels or behind closed doors leading to empty tents, especially when naughty jiebies on kitchen or washing duties prowled the campsite for tasty lonely young men; he'd seen how men stumbling on crutches taking a stroll at nearby fields for some fresh air - because the hospital smells of bitter medicines, the army tents are tainted with a perpetual stink of manly sweat, and the kitchens are although tempting with free food served upon request - there were rumours about men walking in and emerging from the hut-like building with flushed faces as red as chillies and bodies as pale as blood-sucked victims of vampires, and little boys who went in to ask for candies never returned. After a few walkabouts, Lan Zhan understood that the camp was roughly circular in its layout, with two-thirds barricaded with walls to prevent the entry of non-army personnel, and the remaining being open public spaces that housed all the facilities that survivors needed during their stay.

He watched, one fateful day whilst everyone was fast asleep, on the pretense of going out for a nightly pee in the woods, after curiously following janitors that carried the body bags of his fellow human survivors into the bushes, then observing the grim sight of white tarp being unwrapped to ditch mummified bodies with tell-tale burst chest cavities and exploded, dried, bloodied crotches, into freshly dug trenches - he also saw the nurses on night duties busying themselves in the nearby river to clean themselves of icky, blood-stained evidence of their passion with scores of male victims, and how they used magic to pull out the collected life-energies from their vaginas like harvesting honey from a beehive; after sticking fingers into their orifice, they drew out thick, viscous glowing webs of shimmering coalesced bright bluish white qi still in its throbbing, warm liquid-y form. Other succubi held out bottles made from bamboo and glass to gather, contain and store the honeyed life energy, and some licked their fingers to clean up the sticky mess - mmm, delish. Lan Zhan watched intently, crouched between dense undergrowth, at how one nurse jiebie passed a filled bottle to a passing-by Nie soldier, who then greedily uncorked the vessel and shared the silvery creamy wine with another person next to him, this time a Jin soldier on patrol duty. It was as disgusting as watching men drinking semen off their cups, and it was fascinating at the same time - the revelation that the entire camp was filled with yaoguai who possessed or disguised themselves as Nie and Jin soldiers was mind-boggling, let alone being caught in the middle of a war between Jin-Nie yaoguai and Imperial-Tao yaoguai. quite alarming. For Lan Zhan, it was a clear sign of the coming apocalyptic end of lifetimes, where Man is always vanquished by demonic forces in the Mortal Realm, and degenerates into prey and food for more superior beings.

Without Wei Ying's guidance on how to defend oneself from and defeat the demons other than to let out a finale end-of-times fart-strike, Lan Zhan was at a loss of what to do next. He continued to scour the wavelengths and radio frequencies for signs of his wife, lodged an emergency report to the Regent in the Realms of the Gods, and posted a sign for help in ErNet; however, due to the difference in time flow between realms, Lan Zhan knew he wouldn't hear back from his Kingdom in the immediate future. So he had to brave through a real male's suffering from sexual abuse in the hands of females, sustain prolonged molestation and withstand having unwilling orgasms forcibly extracted from him day and night from greedy jiebies who sniffed his appetizing smell in almost ever corner of the camp. He cleverly avoided the soldiers, after witnessing how one recovering peasant with a bandaged arm was spit roasted and gangbanged by burly men in full armour, and had his body ripped apart when masculine passions overwhelmed everyone's rational thought, and the poor victim was consumed on the spot behind a tarp-covered tent.

Then, one fine early morning, after having spent enough time in this prison of pleasures and death, when Lan Zhan was about to give up on staying put and nearly fled the camp, there was commotion in the hospital ward where he was still held against his will - because the demonic doctor refused to give him a clean bill of health, and sometimes participated in tasty sex while examining his naughty bits -, and guards were seen rushing back and forth carrying out orders to prepare a red-carpet welcome for their great leaders. Lan Zhan was pinned on the his bed and was forced to bed with the strong-willed jiebies who continued to dismiss him as an errant morsel of meat; he pleaded the jiebies to let go of his exhausted penis and testicles, despite the delicious ripples of muscular waves running up and down his pelvis from the wonderful service from five or more women upon his defenceless genitals at any time; he told them that he would like to join the procession to and to tidy up his appearance in case the leaders visit the hospitals; alas, his pleas fell on deaf ears, and one jiejie lovingly attacked one testicle more intensely than the other, until Lan Zhan moaned wantonly from the scorching heat boiling the insides of that abused ball because it squeezed and contracted delightfully from testicular orgasms, and at the same time, multiple fingers were scissoring inside his ass, kneading his throbbing, itchy and very lustful swollen prostate until it convulsed rapidly in its own throes of climax, sending rich unejaculated one-twins oozing out of his wildly dancing penis and straight into a vacuum-like suction of another jiejie's grinning lips, followed by very, very hard swallows that grasped and caressed the extremely excited organ captured in the woman's mouth, that sent the man to greater sexual ecstasy highs.

There were some rustling sounds and heavy footsteps, and Lan Zhan was becoming more alarmed at the approaching presence. The curtains were drawn to give him some semblance of privacy while he was sexually assaulted by the jiejies, but they provide no actual protection for his dignity; not when he found himself drunkenly fucking one lovely maiden jiejie who decided to ride him to heaven, and his penis was insatiable, having been poisoned by aphrodisiacs and a female's fragrant pheromones, that it kept jerking yes, yes, more, harder, deeper, faster, yes, and gleefully penetrated and speared deep into those juicy feminine flowerbuds, with little demonic mouths and tongues inside that kissed his succubus-ensnared penis each time he fucked to the hilt, not just one jiejie, but two, then three, alternately, one sexy vagina grinding impossibly hard against his crotch and swallowed his whole penis again and again, one pussy after the other, too many manly moans and bestial grunts, breathy squeals and sexy giggles, spearing five, ten, fifteen times very, very vigorously and excitedly in each juicy, inviting, grasping and pulsing body-warmed flowerbud presented to him like a buffet spread over his creaking bed, that even as he locked his hips against one particularly tight and narrow, squeezing birth canal, few naughty jiejie's crowded around his raised hips between the spread manly legs to kiss and coax with loving licks at his spasming balls, and throbbing perineum, because they seductively persuaded the man to shoot it out, shoot everything out, and his balls undergo epileptic seizures from milking itself to death in sweet pulses, his penis was hotter than the Sun burning up the world, waves after waves of delicious contractions danced up and down his pelvic area and to base to the tip of his raging hard-on, and he was hurtling faster, faster than the speed of thundering steeds, towards his climax, locked and loaded deep inside one sweet, succubus' honey-dripping vagina--

Suddenly, the curtains flew open.

“... didi? Wang Ji! You're actually here! It's really you!”

Lan Zhan cursed himself inwardly for looking absolutely unpresentable, ugly, naked, his face frozen in half-yawns, half-sneezes and half-snarls, his rosy skin sweaty and sticky with love juices, and the appearance absolutely unbecoming of his own Hanguang Jun title, for orgasming like a horny pervert, accompanied with majestic roars and strings of dirty words grunted in seven Gusu dialects no less, even with his hands curled into claws at plump females' breasts because it was just too, too, pleasurable at that moment, that he couldn't hold his rhythmic Aaah-Aaah-Aaah moans, his back arched and hips thrust high, slamming triumphantly into female flowerbuds, whilst cumming spectacularly into six lovely nurse jiebies nearly simultaneously because they kept up relentless their pace of five lovely vaginal fucks each, each extracting one spurt from the helpless man, their fertilized blossoms drinking up thirty healthy ejaculations in total, with excesses dribbling out shamelessly from those jiebies' clenching tight hairless pussies like spilt milk in plain sight of everyone - when Xi Chen da ge arrived to greet him at the hospital ward.

With arch-enemy General Jin Guangyao by Zewu Jun's side.

And long-dead General Nie Mingjue looming from behind.

Also, at the back, cowardly Nie Huaisang closed his eyes in shock and embarrassment with an 'eep!', and turned tomato-red during the minutes-long sexual climax of the man named Lan Wang Ji.

.

Lan Zhan really, really wanted to bury his head in the sand. Never mind that it took General Nie a wave of an armoured, muscled arm and a sizzling glare to send the scared nurse jiebies-cum-prostitutes scampering out of the room in the nude, with warm, bubbly cum still dripping down between their legs; never mind that General Jin had to hold Zewu Jun's arm to keep the tall, flustered man steady on his feet; never mind that Huaisang made a ruckus by shoo-ing away patients still in bandages, crutches and braces and directing all hospital staff to vacate that part of the premise with immediate effect; Lan Zhan curled into a testicular ball of stained blankets and refused to acknowledge the presence of the Venerated Triad, even as he peeked out to shoot heated glares of hatred at Jin Guangyao's direction each time the short man garbed in shiny golds and peony insignias touched Zewu Jun's shoulder to pacify the older man that 'it's okay, it was a mistake, at least your lil' brother is safe, this will not happen again', he promised. Lan Zhan couldn't understand how the evil backstabber was back in the flesh, and acting friendly and peacefully with his older brother.

"A-Yao, I consented for you to carry out your scheme in harvesting life-giving energies when I decided to turn my back against Humanity and join the Dark side - but this... this is my one and only younger brother! The last person on this earth who is related to me in flesh and blood! He's precious, he's untouchable, he cannot--! Uggh... I will not--!"

"Lan da ge, Lan da ge, please calm down. A-Yao was careless and did not check the records retrieved from Jinshan's military centre meticulously enough. A-Yao didn't realize at first that the case of a man who was mistakenly identified as a human and turned out to be a yaoguai - would be of such great interest, because as you know, with us yaoguai increasingly conquering the lands, surely there are men who will figure out ways to join our ranks - just like you, da ge. It's not unexpected, but I admit, it was negligence on my side. A-Yao apologizes respectfully."

"Why should we fuss over this matter? Lan er didi is fine and well albeit rather shaken, and any further transgression from our own men and women against him will cease from this moment onwards. He's with you, with us, as a kin of yaoguai, a lost lamb returned to its fold and rightful family. It's a cause for celebration, not for regrets and all that. Zewu Jun, man up your confidence and see things in a different light! As Darkness, we do not sit and stew over such trivial emotions!"

“... Ge, h-- here’s a c-- change of clothes for Wang Ji xiong. I a-- asked the nurse to find one with the right size and height from the c-- camp’s inventory.”

Nie da ge bent forward and peered at the shivering lump of blanketed embarrassment and snorted, with an air of arrogance and slight annoyance, and with his hands behind his back. His voice bellowed deep, “Mm. Lan Wang Ji, do not disappoint me. Come out, come out wherever you are. You may be in shock to see long-lost friends from the grave, or nemesis that bring back bitter memories, standing right in front of you, and you deserve an explanation. All shall be revealed, provided you come out first and put on some decent garments, so that we can talk, man to man, yaoguai to yaoguai.”

Nie Mingjue placed a warm, meaty, calloused hand over Lan Zhan’s blanketed back as though he was petting a baby chick still refusing to crawl out of its hatched egg. The woollen ball nnnghs and wiggles, before Lan Zhan reluctantly pulled away the edge of the cover cautiously, his face a mix of confusion, upset, maybe even a flinch of fear and petulant disdain when Jin Guangyao too, bent forward and gave him the oiliest, widest cringeworthy smile the sly man can ever give.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 217

Fortunately for Lan Wang Ji, he wasn't subjected to further embarrassments, nor was he provoked to draw out Bichen hidden beneath his armpits (or intercrurally between the thighs, or wherever else he chooses to sheathe his trusty blade) and pull out his magical summoned guqin from the crack of his ass (or his mouth, or any other square inches available on the skin, really), for defense purposes. Lan Xi Chen insisted to have some time alone with his little brother, at least to dress him up in proper garments and have a heart-to-heart talk that brothers truly needed, after having not seen each other for many months since New Year.

Chifeng Zun, that is, General Nie Mingjue, nodded sagely and remarked that indeed, such reunions are sacred between siblings and should not be intervened, before hooking his arm around the thin, delicate waist of Lianfang Zun, this is General Jin Guangyao, and dragging the smaller man out of the cordoned-off ward. Nie Huaisang sent a worried, pleading gesture with his animated face, whispering many Sorry's and I'll-explain-later-too's wordlessly to the shell-shocked man, before loudly saying that he'll prepare a meeting room in the main army tent inside the camp's restricted areas, and that they'll gather there in a couple of hours' time. As the group left, the pleased General Nie could be heard laughing about how their day just got better with the recruitment of Lan er didi into their fold, and a small banquet with good wines and was in order to celebrate the occasion, along with the successful conquest of Jinshan village. In response, General Jin hushed the larger man, telling him not to jinx their fortunes and to behave in a more serious manner because they were now larger-than-life persona, and no longer mere yaoguai.

"A-Zhan?... you won't mind if gege calls you A-Zhan, just like we used to, during our childhood days?"

Lan Wang Ji looked up at his brother and swallowed hard. He merely nodded once while muttering, “Huan ge ,” in humble acknowledgement of the older sibling, and Xi Chen, birth name Lan Huan, took that as an approval. A-Huan, the gege , smiled calmly - truly an image of a fresh bright pink lotus blooming above a pond of dull dark green leaves and muddy browns patches. He soaked a washcloth in a wooden basin by the bed, wrung it half-dry, and nudged A-Zhan’s legs so that the younger brother shifted a bit and allowed the gege to sit down and join him on the creaking single mattress.

“A-Zhan, so much has happened since our last meeting on New Year’s day at the Carp Tower. Our world has turned upside down, I found a new life with a renewed sense of purpose with my loved ones. And from what I gathered from Nie da ge ’s dogged determination to liberate Qinghe from the clutches of the Imperial Court, and A-Yao’s excellent investigation skills, it seems that my beloved didi also experienced shocking upheavals in his life too,” A-Huan gently took A-Zhan’s hand and gave it an uncharacteristic, but tender princely, yet brotherly kiss on it, before starting to wipe the latter’s body using the washcloth. With each scrub, rivulets of water washed off sticky, sweaty griminess; A-Zhan felt fresher, cleaner, purified, from those terrible succubi’s dirty, desecrating touches, just with A-Huan’s heartwarming brotherly love.

.

The extent of the changes in A-Zhan’s world was revealed through his brother’s storytelling, and Xi Chen was careful to provide enough intriguing details without delving too much into each individual characters’ concerns and motives, deep-seated fears and insecurities, nor speculating what people may intend to do or think, because during such chaotic times, it was risky to judge books by the covers.

As testament to the yaoguai 's amazing growth, evolution and intelligence, since their release from the dungeons of the Imperial Palace as mindless battle slaves, they had become rightful sentient beings who could discern between good and evil, form factions and societies, bond with others with true feelings and emotions, and weave themselves into tight-knit lifelong relationships. One remarkable branch of yaoguai sought people of notable positions, influence and power, and approached them in very civilized manners, with offers that could not be refused, especially during times of despair and suffering such as after the start of the fateful year.

Lan Xi Chen, last known as a promising candidate for the position of Chief Cultivator the now-defunct Grand Cultivation Council, and Sect Leader of the Gusu Lan, carried a deep, irreparable wound of killing his beloved A-Yao inside his heart, and was haunted by disturbing memories of losing the special man in his life - the appealing boyish smiles, the kindness that is given only to Zewu Jun who is placed upon the highest pedestal, the adoring attention paid to every word that Xi Chen speaks, and the heartstrings-tugging image of little boy who wanted to grow bigger and taller even if it meant wearing a higher, heavier hat and putting a pair of uncomfortable padded shoes, but ended up tottering unsteadily like an overconfident but clumsy child, then falling, falling into Xi Chen's strong, comforting arms, because Xi Chen always has his back and was ready to catch the deviously innocent yet guilty A-Yao every time he made a boo-boo - until that day when Xi Chen became the one who drove a blade straight into A-Yao's beating heart, for whatever reason that would remain unclear, and everything cracked, shattered like a mirror collapsed onto the floor and fading into darkness, and the Lan da ge never really recovered after that.

His torment was suppressed, so much so, that his soul was weakened, his morals in tatters, his determination to live on virtuously became a mere shadow of its former self, a brittle barrier around his then-brightly shining golden core; he was easily seduced by demonic whispers while he slept, filling his thoughts with depraved, strange and twisted things, telling him abandon his clan's old ways and their old-fashioned over-4000 rules, to open his heart to accept a new way of thinking, a new way of seeing the world, a new way to escape the pain and guilt and find redemption in the form of self-gratifying pleasures and carefree happiness; much like escaping through drugs and sex - and soon, those tangible gains became material, and his new reality was born. He allowed a powerful yaoguai spirit to possess his soul and corrupt - no, change, improve - the person he once was; he had no qualms in sexually abusing his little brother on New Year's day to feed the demonic hunger that incubated inside his darkening golden core; when he faced Jin Ling, alone in the woods while night-hunting undead and spirits to score for the Lan sect that he no longer really cared for, the demonic voices reared their ugly heads and ordered the man to force himself upon the hapless boy, because Xi Chen remembered how smooth Jin Ling's ivory-white buttocks were when he slapped them with his xiao flute months before in a cultivation tournament, and perversely, he had a deeply-buried desire that by making amorous moves towards the boy, he could at least taste what could've been, but never shall be, the love he'd lost for another Jin clansman, that is, lovely, dearly-missed A-Yao.

The corruption and possession complete, the yaoguai inside Xi Chen instructed the man to construct the golden apple of his eye, that is, a body for the yaoguai to properly inhabit and manifest in the Mortal Realm, made from bone, gristle, flesh and skin carved out from physically fit soldiers murdered in cold blood, fed by those deceased victims' golden cores. The demonic body was nurtured and shaped from a mount of wiggly tentacle-y squishy flesh, moulded using Xi Chen's recollections of the man who left the previous world as the nefarious Jin Guangyao but was always cherished as lovely, humble and meek Meng Yao. The yaoguai adapted the mannerisms and personality of the man it would take over, and grew its physique to match whatever details that Xi Chen could and want to remember. Soon, it transformed into a charming young man that looked convincingly genteel and gentle yet with hints of astuteness and brilliance, cunning and crafty in its persuasiveness when it spoke, appearing noble that it was always garbed in gold, and that it resembled Xi Chen's clearest and loveliest memory of A-Yao in the peak of youth; the demon-turned-human's complexion was kept rosy and shiny with sustained liveliness with regular feasts of cultivators' life-energies, including his own.

"... feasting? Your own life energy?"

"Mmm. Yes, A-Zhan. I'm proud to say that I have a hand in making the sweet A-Yao of my dreams, and have consummated our inseparable, bonded relationship many times since we wedded in a simple ceremony of exchanging wine cups and kisses, once A-Yao could stand on his own two legs and return my embrace with his new arms," Huan gege sighed dreamily with a slightly drunk lovestruck smile, as he wiped away dried stains from the younger brother's thighs with the moist towel, before thoughtfully grabbing another dry washcloth to make sure Wang Ji was cleaned and comfortable. "It was a shaky start for us, and we went through many arguments about taking others' lives versus building our own shared happy ending made of two opposing worlds. But in the end, look at me, A-Zhan, I'm smiling like a crazy dork, aren't I? Every day, I wake up in bed with A-Yao in my arms, breathe in a deep breath of A-Yao's fragrant, sleep-warmed hair to start another wonderful day with my loved one - I'm the happiest man on earth. Won't you also share this wonderful feeling too, didi?" he added, and his smile couldn't be more blinding and peppered with little flying angels and floating hearts.

Wang Ji squinted from the spotlight until his face was etched with a half-crooked grin and grimace on his usually stoic expression; he simply nodded, "Mn. Then, I'm happy for you, Huan ge."

A-Huan hugged A-Zhan on the bed when he received the latter's approval; it was akin to announcing one's relationship, or even marriage, to the family and then receiving a round of applause and cheers in response. A-Huan dabbed a tear off his eyes, and realizing that he'd finished wiping his didi, it was time to dress him up in their military uniforms of beige, browns and greys; there was always a bit of white, be it stripes, a sash, or parts of the clothing coloured that way, for Lan Xi Chen, gold for Jin Guangyao, and more metallic silvers and greys for Nie Mingjue, to denote their origins. Just for this time, Huaisang had selected standard beige robes and similar light coloured trousers to go with them. Wang Ji noted that his brother no longer wore their sect's forehead ribbon.

The gege seemed to read his didi's mind and the nuances of non-verbal language, such as a twitch in the eyes as they stared above his brows; A-Huan touched his own forehead consciously, pretending to scratch something over there out of habit. "Times have changed, A-Zhan," he spoke while unveiling a buff-coloured undershirt in his arms, "A-Yao taught gege to live in the moment, while not forgetting memories that are meaningful and worth keeping, but without clinging on obstinately to traditions and legacies that keeps us anchored to the sinking ships of the past. Does that make sense? I no longer consider myself as a Gusu Lan, rather I'm a member of this wonderful yaoguai family here, up in the north of the country. I still cherish our bond as siblings, though, because you're my precious didi, after all. Won't you join us to liberate the Nie's homeland and next, the Jin's?"

A-Zhan gave a questioning look, and A-Huan just had to laugh - his didi was a bit hard to convince, sometimes, and the skeptical younger 'un needed to be given enough persuasive arguments to decide the case on his own.

Setting down the garments on the bedside, thus leaving the younger man in his mid-thirties naked for a bit longer than intended, Xi Chen da ge went on to talk about the Nie family. While he wasn't privy to the details because it was really, mostly internal family affairs and their own clan's confidential matters; he knew that it started after Huaisang returned to the family's fortress stronghold shortly after New Year's day, empty handed, and ready to declare defeat and the clan's surrender to the Imperial cultivators, after such an embarrassing performance from the night hunts. Yaoguai s had unknowingly camped outside the Nie's family home and their numbers had grown since the days Huaisang opened some ancestral tombs to let patrolling Imperial soldiers inspect his collection of mystical, spirit-imbued sabers shortly before Spring arrived. One night, the restless and worried Huaisang dreamt of having his older brother by his side, that together, they fought and successfully defended their homeland from the siege of Imperial armies - yaoguai sniffed out the man's most deepest desires from the bottom of his heart, and one particularly feisty, heroic and brash spirit took the bull by the horns, literally - and appeared in front of the frightened man the next day with a proposal that he couldn't refuse.

One thing led to another, and soon after, the legendary figure of Nie Mingjue in the appearance of his peak in life strutted across in the family's throne room, and marched straight to the balconies to confidently declare with a victorious roar, with one fist raised towards the skies and in front of a crowd of astonished Nie soldiers and servants, that he had 'returned' to bring forth a new era for the sect. He was, as described by Nie family confidants, forged from the ancestral powers derived from beast-influenced sabers in the tombs, inherited the strong generational legacy of steel-hard determination, incredible strength, wits and knowledge of the battlefield, tempered with pragmatism and wisdom of many past leaders of the sect, plus the former da ge 's hot-tempered temperament too - whoever this person was, whether real or imposter, he was the perfect reincarnation of the glorious Nie leader if there was ever one, and he was quickly accepted as the sect's new chief just as his popularity among the elite councils of Nie skyrocketed.

Whilst Spring was in full swing and life busily thrived on green fields and hills, so were the competing factions in their quest to redraw the map of the Middle Kingdom. The Nie clan's hometown became a magnet for powerful yaoguai on a pilgrimage to find new hosts and sources of energy - and their ancestral tombs proved to be the Nie brothers' windfall. Nie Mingjue, with the agreement of his cowed younger brother, took the helm and carried out a massive raid to search and break open all heirloom crypts of the expansive Nie family. Unsealed and unleashed, the tremendous mass of deadly, resentful and dark aura of the graves darkened the skies for days and drew the strongest and fiercest yaoguai like moth to flames; the skeletal remains of Nie ancestors were possessed by demonic presence, and regained flesh and appearance to resemble the greatest Nie heroes of the past; the cursed sabers imbued with wild, controllable beast-spirits that were buried with the deceased, became alive, flew in the air and roared with such ferocity, now serve with murderous glee under new, even darker masters of the yaoguai kind. Nie Huaisang retreated from the public eye soon after his brother took the mantle, and watched with mixed feelings, at how his sect sent dark, raging armies of the possessed, mind-controlled living and the superior, infallible undead, to the borders to pulverize whatever Imperial presence that dared to overstay in the Nie homeland.

"A-Yao and I met with the reinvigorated Nie sect sometime during one of their military campaigns to rid the Tao pests from their backyards. Our goals are aligned on the same path, and A-Yao was more than happy to join a family of yaoguai and bring me along; after all, we had been living like a nomadic couple for weeks on the road. So, with silvery moonlight as our witness on the night of our reunion, we shared a cup of wine mixed with a drop of blood drew from each of our fingers, and like Spring itself, we renewed our brotherhood bond and became a triad once again, leading armies of justice against the evil Imperial Court," A-Huan explained with some animated hand movements to demonstrate how that fine wine was savoured - and accidentally or not, knocked A-Zhan's pants off the bedside where they flutter uselessly to the floor, discarded and unnoticed. The younger brother wasn't wary or worried, because he thought that A-Huan was so keen in sharing his life story that he'd forgotten to dress up his naked little brother. In addition, A-Zhan wasn't complaining, because it was certainly a riveting tale that put an interesting spin to what he thought he knew about the yaoguai .

“Then, ge , how did you find me?” he asked innocently, wanting to divert the conversation to him, the lovable didi of gege 's eyes, and reached out in want of touching the older sibling's arm. Unexpectedly, A-Huan leaned forward to receive him, and give the shorter man - by almost a head in height - another heartfelt embrace in the nude, and that surprised the latter.

“Deep inside, ge always knew where to find you, just by listening to ge 's heart. But ge has been so busy with lighting up a new flame for his snuffed out romance, then rekindling the fires of a lost brotherhood, so ge has been distracted lately. But in the end, ge managed to find you after all and just in time, my precious didi ,” came the very touching reply, followed by a sweet kiss on the younger man's cheek, and A-Zhan actually giggled; the act reminisced what they used to do during their childhood days, when two partially clothed boys would roll around in the older one's bed, wrestle and play, and later, explore each other's bodies, behind closed doors.

A-Zhan was pushed back down to the mattress, his hands pinned above his head by one strong brotherly arm, while the other - he watched with heavy-lidded eyes and with acute interest - weaved a telekinesis spell to draw curtains around them - it wasn't needed, really, since there wasn't anyone left in the ward, but it was done and signalled something more private, more intimate - and those strong, calloused free fingers began to undo the wearer's buttons one by one. A-Huan disrobed as he lay atop A-Zhan and settled down nicely between the younger man's legs - it took only a gentle nudge to part the thighs, and the warmth of another man's crotch resting against A-Zhan, with the definite outline of another person's throbbing manhood, to send wordless delights coursing through the veins and heartbeats racing. Lips grazed the skin, beads of sweat began to form around the jugular where the older gege began to nibble and suckle, leaving hickey marks one after the another, drawing a trail of pink blooms from neck to collarbone, while the narrative continued in whispers and sighs.

Xi Chen knew that his little brother had sworn an oath of non-aggression and non-interference, and would avoid brutal warfare whenever possible. So he already knew that Wang Ji would be captured and willingly bound with ropes by patrolling Imperial troops - because so many of them criss-cross the country daily like ants from anthills; without fighting back, he'd be taken to one of those slave camps to serve as a civilian, and less likely to be recruited as a fighting thrall. Xi Chen accompanied his sworn brothers in their battles led by thousand-strong Nie soul-possessed soldiers, or in search of metal weapon caches buried by Jin forces in the past which A-Yao evolved a penchant to sniff out like a bloodhound - while scouring village after village for signs of his beloved didi. In many cases, the trail of records and verbal evidence often led to dead ends, especially with Imperial officials setting their offices on fire or slitting their own throats before they fell into the enemy's hands; however, one remarkable incident stuck out in recent memory, such as that when Nie da ge bumped into an old relative, Niu Mo Wang of the Zodiac Demon Horde - and both were of bull-headed cattle descent, in yaoguai taxonomic terms -, they learned about Jinshan and headed straight to the devastated site, shortly after an unusual explosion was reported there. Xi Chen helped to fend off senior guards talented in swordfighting and exceptionally skilled lieutenants, and A-Yao picked up clues about a mistaken identity case of a civilian man that turned out to be so powerful that he should've been classified as a yaoguai. The battle for Jinshan lasted for days, followed by more pursuits and conquests across adjacent districts, and it was only until much later when A-Yao remembered that piece of clue, and nearly received an annoyed knock on the head from Xi Chen da ge for overlooking such an important bit of information. A-Yao's investigation skills followed the trail to Nieshan--

-- and the rest is, as you probably deduced by now, is history. Ge is sorry it took so long to reach you, because we had to liberate a handful of other towns before coming here for a rest stop," Huan gege , now completely naked upon his didi , whispered to the younger man's perky, pink nipple after giving it an attentive kiss and lavished it with sweet licks, then Huan ge lay the side of his face upon the latter's chest to listen to the didi 's strong, racing heartbeat - music to the man's ears. There was unspoken gratitude between them, for being found, being reunited, and being saved. One hand snaked towards A-Zhan's belly and it gave the didi a nice circular rub, before tip-toeing down, down to where it should be, at least from the gege 's perspective.

"Are you still in pain, A-Zhan? Does it hurt anywhere? Ge caught snippets of conversations from other nurses that... bad things... had been done, here," fingers fiddled A-Zhan's pubic hair before skimming along the hardening, growing length of a man's penis, now cleaned and freshened up after being cleansed and wiped with mild soap and warm springwater.

A-Zhan's breathing hitched, and he deliberately spread his legs wider to allow unrestrained access to his gege . Huan gege did not hesitate to shift himself a little higher until he loomed above the didi , and positioned his own huge, pulsing and rather hairy arousal against the latter's - A-Huan humped gingerly, once, twice, and received a tiny moan in response from the throat that was covered with the gege 's hickeys. "Nnn. It's alright now," A-Zhan replied gratefully and started to move his hips in a slow, enticingly and temptingly slow circle, further pleasing the larger gege to greater heights. "But this didi would love it if gege takes another look. The doctor said the chilli paste causes itchiness, and the iron brand may leave some scars," he murmured huskily with his eyes looking as demure as a maiden seducing another for an incestuous romp, and began to raise his circling hips to gesture to the older man to yes, yes, have a look, gege , please examine didi 's most secret garden, right here. The air smelled of sensual bodily muskiness and the sterile floral fragrance of hospital soap, and the gege smiled again at the change in the atmosphere to one that is warmer, more exciting, electrifying and probably, more appetizing for brothers who longed for a more physical reunion than anything else.

“Enn. If it itches, gege will gently scratch it until you say it is enough. If there is scarring, gege will kiss and make it go away,” A-Huan said and lifted himself up to have a better look at his beloved didi’s nudity, oozing with subservient masculine desire, basking in the dim curtain-filtered light with spread-eagled limbs and long, muscled body stretched sexily on the bedsheets; the dark shadows that veiled those bewitching genitals covered with light fuzz, that A-Huan swore he would soon peel back, unravel and expose to his pleasure, and lovingly attack the long-awaited prized treasure between the younger man’s legs with his skilled fingers, lips and tongue, until A-Zhan moaned wantonly and yielded, yearning for gege’s loving touch and to brazenly open up without putting up any resistance, baring his flesh and soul for the gege to taste and savour with remorseless lust, that A-Zhan would cry out again, again, spilling carelessly in the deserted hospital ward where nobody would hear, then having his rosebud make sweet, sweet love with his gege’s mighty over-seven inch penis until A-Zhan was inseminated, and A-Huan, grunting with such heated joy dancing triumphantly in the loins for bedding his beloved precious didi many, many times upon the creaking bed.

A-Zhan’s clothes remained on the floor for an hour and a little more, clearly forgotten against the backdrop of two bodies joining again and again, entwined at the lips and hips, and sometimes they switched so that the didi could enjoy, as a full-fledged man and now inducted into yaoguai society, the pleasures of engaging in tasty incestuous sexual intercourses with his own blood-brother and leaving his own mark deep, deep inside A-Huan’s surprisingly tight, clenching ass. The smaller figure continued to moan and grunt recklessly, fingers groping and roaming freely along the long, slender and gorgeous broad back of the taller man, because his manhood was sucked too tightly and marvellously in massaging squeezes, that he was milked even as he tried to piston into A-Huan’s rosebud, and he had to surrender just after a mere handful of fucks, because A-Huan was remarkably talented in lovemaking and he had sheer masterful control of his inner muscles; sexually flushed and panting A-Zhan fell into a boneless heap atop A-Huan, still spooned against his older brother, doggie-style, begging the gege to stop, stop, please stop milking his dick because he was overheated, too sensitive after cumming, but oh god, he felt those grasping muscles kneading his dying penis like a sausage dough dipped in a pool of his own freshly-ejaculated semen, refusing to release the ensnared, wildly twitching penis. He couldn't breathe, his finger tried to scratch and rake his brother's shoulders and even circled beneath to seek the latter's attention on the muscled pecs, but he was ignored, his begging was ignored even as he was hurtling through another orgasmic wave, his hips shook uncontrollably because really nice feelings rippled through his shuddering pelvis, his abdomen convulsed from the pleasures radiating out from his loins like exploding stars, please stop, please stop gege, stop massaging didi's penis inside your anus, didi cannot hold on, it feels too good, it's aching, it's painful, didi's dick is crying, it's so hot, it feels all itchy and swollen, didi wants to pee, didi cannot control himself anymore, please stop--

A-Huan simply 'Mmm', placed his hands to cushion his chin and relaxed. The taller man swayed his hips in circular and undulating motions, murmuring to the didi shuddering uncontrollably on his back punctuated by rhythmic cries of pleasure, that he really, sorely missed his beloved little brother. He whispered huskily, "A-Zhan, A-Zhan, it feels good, doesn't it? Come, come harder into gege's playground, just like how we used to play when we were kids, where gege kept you nice and warm all afternoon, snuggling against gege's body with your cute little penis dancing joyfully deep, deep inside gege ..."

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 218

True as a Gusu Lan, despite the claims that he is not, Lan Xi Chen escorted his didi Lan Wang Ji so that the Twin Jades of no particular sect nowadays, arrived fifteen minutes earlier than instructed at the largest tent in the restricted section of the yaoguai camp. Both had freshened up with a quick bath and wore nice matching beige-white robes that gleamed in the sunlight as they marched across open spaces with many other tents and huts on the sides bustling with activity - activity which Lan Zhan recognized as purely yaoguai 's, since every soldier on duty or resting in the open grass fields was either a possessed man, or a high-level demon disguised as human, based on the aura that surrounded each individual. The entire army is made of non-humans, whether loud, boisterous iron-grey Nie or more restrained and elegant metallic golden Jin, working alongside each other with great camaraderie not seen before in Lan Zhan's previous experiences with various multi-sect military campaigns of the past.

“Many of the Nie soldiers hark back to the days before New Year's, when their yaoguai masters waited and eventually absorbed the powers of the sacred sabers in the family's ancestral tombs, to start a mass soul-possession operation in the Nie's stronghold. They're more senior and experienced on the battlefield, though a little more beaten up from hand-to-hand combat, so they prefer to use magic and spiritual weapons such as soul-sabers to fight oppressive yaoguai ,” Xi Chen da ge pointed out as they passed through crowds who bowed and cheered at the two men as they approached.

“Over there, you'll see younger, fresher Jin soldiers who were recently recruited after we've raided more borderland villages along the mountains that separate Qinghe and Lanling. They were already possessed and tainted with yaoguai since the fall of their Carp Tower many moons ago, and haven't had good meals or comfortable beds while marauding aimlessly in their destroyed homeland, so they were more than happy to join us after some convincing by Nie da ge 's heroic speeches, and A-Yao's persuasiveness - plus, it helped to have their own clansman to step up on their behalf and to take care of their well-being, just as what I'm doing with you now," the taller man continued as he made sweeping motions with his hands to show how well stocked and organized the encampment was, with groups of men marching around to patrol between watch towers and gates.

Lan Zhan raised his brows at the last statement, and gave a silent, but questioning look.

Xi Chen da ge simply laughed politely, "As long as I'm around, I get a say at the table of our brotherhood about the matters that relate to those of my kind. Our former sect is finished by now, probably razed to the ground since the spread of the yaoguai epidemic, but as one-third of this undefeatable new group's leadership, I can still command this horde on who to attack, and who not to antagonize. Chifeng Zun and Lianfang Zun do not know you as well as I do, and they have only vague memories from our younger days that had clouded over the passage of time - so you should treat them with respect and with polite distancing, and they will not harm you in any way that you may believe otherwise."

Lan Zhan didn't look too happy at the offered protection and privileges by his elder brother, and he kept quiet with brief 'Mn's along the way to show that he was listening, but also, deep in thought on how to handle the return of one legendary hero, and one infamous villain, whom he was about to meet under the same roof (and after they'd seen him in his naked glory whilst getting raped by breedworthy, succubic naughty nurse jiejie s).

Once they've arrived, Lan Zhan took a few moments to marvel at the lavish interior decorations that reminisced of Nie's - many polished, vicious-looking sabers and other hand-held weapons hung on the walls like decor, and potted plants and paintings bore warrior-themed designs -, and Jin's - upon tables, shelves and even on the pillars holding up the huge yurt-like hut, there were flowers and peonies carved into the furniture, and the furnishings were either painted in gold or silver and lined with cloth embroidered beautifully with more shimmering golden-white blossoms. A large rectangular table resided in the middle of the meeting hall, with cushioned seats on both sides.

Xi Chen mentioned that his little brother wouldn't be used to demonic refreshments such as human heart salads served with belly fat cheese, skin jerky with bloody golden core-flavoured dips, and deep-fried fritters made from intestines, lung and liver, or beverages including spiced blood wines, cocktails made from liquefied bodily juices or congealed life energy protein shakes. "Don't worry," he said when they were alone in the unoccupied hut, " Gege will ask the servants to bring in something more palatable, because your stomach is still human, after all. Even today, I have trouble swallowing some of these foods, so I always let A-Yao eat my portion and hope that he may grow taller someday, and I'm sticking to rice and noodles, drizzled with garnishing made from finely chopped human parts to taste, and sprinkled with faded crushed golden cores; you should try the latter, those cores when washed properly and left to age over a few days in the sun, the residual sugar-like crystals are actually sweet and not metallic iron in taste, contrary to popular belief." He eagerly trotted off to find some servants who may be milling about outside, leaving Lan Zhan to wait alone and feeling increasingly anxious and unnerved at the whole situation - the pleasant emptied throbbing feeling between his legs didn't seem soothing enough in the face of the prospect of having to dine with cannibals.

Just then, a shadow scurried by and hid behind a suit of armour that decorated the doorways of the meeting hut. “Who’s there?” Lan Zhan growled and he went into a battle stance with his fists balled on the sides, ready to magically draw out Bichen from his body at a heartbeat’s notice.

“D-- Don’t hurt me! It’s m-- me, er gongzi , it’s me! I j-- just wanna t--talk!”

It took just one question from Nie Huaisang, with plenty of stammers in-between, to inform Lan Zhan about the gravity of the situation. “Which of you is real? You or your brother?” he asked. When Lan Zhan pointed at himself without verbalizing his answer, Huaisang became bolder and peeked from behind a hollow metal arm, and fanned himself intensively with a traditional grey Nie-style paper fan. “Is that so? Tell me three instances to prove it!” he barked cowardly before taking two steps behind the suit of spiky armour, and kept his scrutinizing eyes trained on the Lan er gongzi from the narrow slit of space at the armour’s armpit.

“One, he calls us using childhood nicknames that aren’t real. I was always addressed by my courtesy name, or at least, ‘A-Ji’.”

A rather rude series of whispers was heard behind that suit of armour, one that indicated a man talking to himself, and slapping a fist to a palm in relieved feelings of vindication, “Right? Right? I also remembered hearing those old braggarts in the Cloud Recesses calling you that way whenever they asked you to bring something, like a loyal obedient disciple. And that imposter brother of mine, he never calls me politely, because I'm too much of a coward in his eyes! Unworthy, he said. But he's supposed to treat me like a respectable sibling, not a convenient bellboy!"

"Lan Zhan cleared his throat, "Secondly, Xi Chen da ge recalls memories of our younger days that do not exist in mine. From figments of imagination, probably. But certainly nothing that took place in reality as far as my senses remembered."

More hisses and angry whispers without the stammer and stutters, "I shouldn't have handed over the keys to my family's graves to that evil spirit! Damn it, I was tricked! That da ge said he'd honour the shared moments and memories from my recollections, and be the big brother I'd been dreaming of. But all he did was to bring his merry band of ghostly friends to steal the corpses and buried skeletons of my ancestors, and before I knew it, every last saber from the tombs vanished! Lies, it's all lies!"

"Thirdly, he never brought up the matter about Wei Ying. The Zewu Jun that you and I knew from the Cloud Recesses understood my feelings for Wei Ying, and that we are inseparable, spiritually married and dual-cultivating."

Huaisang finally ventured out cautiously from behind the suit of armour, fingers curled around the hapless metallic arm until faint dents could be seen; his eyes brightened up considerably compared to the downcast, scaredy-cat demeanour during the awkward first encounter in the hospital ward. "I knew it!" he had to stifle a knowing, impatient shout and cover his mouth, "They simply cherry-picked and selected memories that suit their needs. It's not fair! Da ge never talked about getting his qi flow deviated by Jin Guanyao's cursed healing music, and that horrible shortie murderer doesn't say anything about the terrible deeds and sufferings he'd caused for more than sixteen years. At first, I was suspicious and thought there was a glitch in their manifestation into their human forms, but now... uuugh!" The man slapped himself in the face and then suddenly, he went wild-eyed and completely pale.

"Wei gongzi ! Where's Wei gongzi ?! Wang Ji xiong , please tell me Wei gongzi is still alive? I cannot be the last human left on earth! You're already a yaoguai , at least a kind-hearted one unlike those liars that roam around and steal my family's homeland. I'm hoping to escape this place with Wei Wu Xian's wits and help, and live with him forever even if he's a man! I'll die of loneliness if there aren't any others of my kind left... wuuu... wuuu..."

The smaller man, Nie er gongzi , collapsed and sat on his haunches like a dangerously emotionally-unstable person, and whined like a crying child. He kept punching himself in the arm, then rambled about his miserable state and blamed the yaoguai in rather incoherent sentences that seemed to jump all over the place.

Lan Zhan crouched and leaned forward, and wanted to place his arm over Huaisang's to comfort the distressed man. "Nie gongzi , calm down, please. Wei Ying... he--"

A furious slap on the arm shocked Lan Zhan, and he immediately withdrew his hand-imprinted, throbbing hand.

“Go away! A yaoguai is always a yaoguai ! Look at your hair, it’s staring daggers at me! I’ll burn your cursed hair and make you bald!” an accusing finger pointed and nearly poked into Lan Zhan’s eyes, and the latter flinched in bewilderment, both at the man’s rising insanity, and the fact that those large brown eyes could keenly detect something as delicate as Ni-er hiding behind his nape - truly the hallmark of a sect leader - former or not -, although sadly, one that had been broken, both physically and spiritually; Ni-er gently coo’ed into her daddy’s ear and told him, in bubbly gurgles and yummy nom-noms on the shell of the man’s ear, that she hid well like a little girl should, but yes, she was staring at Nie Huaisang - partly because she hadn’t sniffed a pure human in the flesh for so long, that she salivated from the appeasing, tasty scent, but also because she smelled blood - clotted, rotten, poisoned blood from the man that spiked her demonic appetite, because it was Ni-er’s Holy nature to purify the sick and damaged; she also mewled that she really didn’t want her daddy to become bald, because then, her daddy wouldn’t be handsome anymore.

Then, Ni-er tapped gently on her daddy’s shoulder, and asked him to look closer; it was a bit hard to guess where a strand of grey hair was pointing, especially under the shadow of the suit of armour, but Lan Zhan caught a glimpse of it - as Huaisang started to furiously scratch and rub his scalp in exasperation for inexplicable reasons, while mumbling strangely, “Stupid hair! Stupid yaoguai !”, his fingers parted the hair that grew on the side of his head, and Lan Zhan saw, with horror, a sizable reddish gash-like scar that must have been festering there for weeks, if not months. The Lan man reached out again, this time to touch the wound, and he was promptly slapped on the arm by the prickly Nie gongzi .

“Don’t molest me, you bad yaoguai ! I’ve nothing left for you to touch! You’re already a dead man, fodder for the demons! Wei Wu Xian is dead too, gone somewhere without his cultivation partner, how will he ever survive anyway? Then I shall be a dead man soon! I traded my entire ancestral legacy for a chance to win, and I’ve been scammed. I’ve been robbed, I’m worth nothing, there’s no one left to save me! Da ge is right, I am unworthy, a coward unable to lift his own sword and stand proud in the throne room for his own clan, and destined to serve as a useless bellboy!” the agitated Nie man yelled the last sentence in self-inflicted anger, and immediately crawled on all fours until he was under the large meeting table.

Lan Zhan was about to follow Huaisang into the covered space under the meeting table to drag the man out and seek an explanation, when a voice boomed through the doorway, “Who’s unworthy? Who’s the coward?”

Two men entered, garbed in their regal robes, one with lead-heavy footsteps that sent dust swirling into the hut, and the other, elegant and graceful in his moves matching that of a stalking serpent’s that made almost no sound at all. The arrival of General Nie Mingjue and General Jin Guangyao caused a stir since from the outside of the meeting hut, and Nie Huaisang immediately crawled out with a fearful ‘eep!’. He quickly ran on fleet-footed steps and stood beside and a little behind of the da ge of da ge s, then lowered his head meekly and kept quiet; the change in behaviour from talking to oneself, to berating himself, to becoming a docile servant - was startling indeed. Both generals looked at the cowering figure behind Nie da ge , then to Lan Zhan, who rose from the floor next to the meeting table.

“Don’t cause trouble to others, boy,” General Nie chastised with his low baritone voice, and patted his younger brother’s head - it looked painful as those large hands seemed to grasp a little too hard, and in all likelihood pressed on the hidden scarred wound, because Huaisang squeaked in pain. From a distance, it appeared every bit like the da ge wanted to crush Huaisang’s skull like a fragile egg. He turned towards Lan Zhan, causing the latter to flinch from the somewhat bloodshot gaze that bore deep into him, “Did this brat say anything strange to you?” Huaisang shivered in fear when one of his elder brother’s meaty hands slid down to the shoulders and started to squeeze - hard.

“Mn. Nothing important. I didn’t really understand anyway,” the Lan man replied curtly and with conviction, but not specific enough - that the new arrivals thought the youngest’s rather impaired speech was incomprehensible. It was a dicey situation, indeed, and he needed to be careful of his words.

“Lan er gongzi , don’t take to heart whatever he says. He’s been stuttering like a fool and his thinking hasn’t been straight ever since he was knocked by a soul-saber in an accident. You know how it is during a chaotic battle, where in the heat of the moment, sometimes a friendly arrow might whizz by and pierce your head if you’re not too careful,” Jin Guangyao looked over the da ge ’s massive height to peer at Huaisang’s shrivelling presence, and gave him a glare of hatred, before his darkened facial features brightened up with rainbows and smiles, “Thank goodness our great General Nie always has our backs, right?”

At that note, General Nie rolled his eyes and snorted in disdain, presumably being jaded of his co-conspirator’s antics, “Hmph. You love to play with your bladed strings from a distance, while I have to charge into the frontlines and do the dirty job.” The haughty giant released his grip from Huaisang’s throbbing shoulder, and turned around to face-off with the sly General Jin - and just in time, Xi Chen gege waltzed in from another entrance from the back with a filled tray on each hand. He was smiling too until his eyes crinkled with gentle happiness at the timely arrival of his two sworn brothers; a family gathering was in order.

“Mmm. A-Yao is right. Nie da ge can be quite passionate in his saber swordplay when he’s up against a mountain of Imperial soldiers! Da ge , you should learn to tone down your aggression whenever you do that spinning flower formation with your sabers. Not only did you knock your little brother, you also tore a hole on my pants, remember?” he laughed politely, as he placed the trays on the meeting table. Lan Zhan instinctively stepped back at the horrible bloody sight of chopped human entrails and cooked body parts served in a variety of fancy ways on bowls and plates; that steaming pot didn’t look like it contained premium branded pu’er tea, based on the metallic and almost meaty, rancid smell that emitted from its spout. Xi Chen did not appear to be affected by the horrid-looking buffet, and he went on to invite everyone to take a seat.

“The servants are busy cooking lunch, so I took the liberty to raid their countertops. Here, snacks for everyone while we enjoy a late morning break and a family talk. Wang Ji,” he gestured to the nervous didi, “-- there’s a plate of toasted mixed nuts for you. We’ll adjourn soon for lunch anyway, and I’ve specifically instructed the servants to whip up something delicious and filling just for you,” and there was a wink to seal the frightening promise.

Nie Mingjue was already using his hands to snatch slivers human parts fritters and shoving them into his mouth like deep-fried anchovies, and he wouldn’t let go of the thinly-veiled sarcasm and barbs hurled at him his brethren, “Huuh! Hitting my own men and ripping your pants ain’t nothing to shout about! Who’s the one cheering on the sides each time I cut off twenty mens’ legs with a single blast of my trademark Hundred Deadly Circling Flower Petals move? Who’s the one always telling me with his xiao flute music to launch that tiresome Thousand Beast Fangs From The Skies attack from ten mountains away? And who’s the one that always say nauseous things like ‘ Ge, please stab your big, heavy, hot red saber into my male flower until the stamens are shredded’ each time it’s his turn to bed with me--” His lascivious descriptions were as crude as the way he open-mouthedly chewed his food and left bits peppering all over the tabletop; it was hard to determine if he cracked human bones between his gnashing teeth, or if he snapped a few tough tendons while enjoying those crunchy snacks.

Jin Guangyao's face was one of disbelief and dismay, "What? Male flower? How come I've never heard of that everytime we sleep on the same bed and have our nightly threesome fun--"

Xi Chen turned into an uncomfortable shade of beet red, and quickly shoved a whole human stewed finger into his A-Yao's babbling mouth to shut him up, "Ah, ah, ah, we're getting off-topic now, aren't we, gentlemen?" Nervous laughter ensued, followed by harsh whispers of 'come on, sit down and let's eat and talk'.

Meanwhile, Lan Wang Ji quietly took an unoccupied seat near the edge of the table, and struggled to keep his cool - and silence - around the bantering trio who kept teasing one another, while staring longingly at his plate of toasted mixed nuts still in the tray at the center of the large meeting table.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 219

The meeting with the Venerated Triad turned out to be more civilized than thought possible compared to what was served on the meeting table. While snacking on bloodied eyeball jellies and crushed golden core-coated sugar lollies, with Lan Zhan keeping to his safe haven of harmless toasted mixed nuts whilst his older brother tried some of the less gory, but still grotesque bits, and Huaisang having none at all because he's just a mere mentally-handicapped butler-cum-bellboy, they spoke at length about their circumstances, desires and hopes, long term goals, and how Lan Zhan could join them in their macabre death-themed festivities that only yaoguai can enjoy.

Lan Zhan learned that the triad strived to create an utopia for good, deserving yaoguai and allied kins, such as themselves. Courageous, strong and visionary, said Nie Mingjue; Clever, beautiful, and charismatic, said Jin Guangyao; Kind-hearted, fair, and virtuous, added Lan Xi Chen, for the qualities they look in individuals whom they recruit to join their cause in these survival-of-the-fittest wargames. The yaoguai would not need to rely on gods and their religions for power and sustenance, because they are already supernatural beings with demi-godly abilities themselves - Niu Mo Wang could easily subjugate thousands with his awesome fiery Iron Fan and burn away all dissidents, leaving only the faithful to worship and boost his sphere of influence, terror and iron-fisted rule; the God of Prosperity was persuaded because they have a common love for sinful greed and money, and he had discreetly starting to fund their military campaigns so that the yaoguai war generals need not to pray for good luck and fortune each day; numerous Tu Di Gongs and Kitchen Gods, the so-called lesser but widespread list of demi-gods performing mundane divinely duties in their assigned localities, have been swayed and have teamed up with the yaoguai to overturn the rule of law, and small feudal kingdoms have started to pop up where demi-gods, their yaoguai champions, and even corrupted men-turned-proponents of anarchy ruled over men.

Having liberated and conquered nearly two-thirds of Qinghe, and having made inroads into Lanling territory, within mere months of establishment, the triad decided to return to the Nie stronghold for a larger celebration, restore their group's morale and recover their strength, before pushing themselves to the next level in their efforts to fight off the Imperial armies and their Tao zealots.

Zewu Jun informed his two other brethren that he'd briefed the new cub to the club, Hanguang Jun, about their origins and events of the recent past, and both generals were pleased to induct the newcomer into their family of elite yaoguai - in good time, because certainly, they needed more hands on deck to attack, defend and secure a wider range of the Qinghe province than in the past.

"A toast to lil' A-Zhan, who, like his blood brother, is a human seeded with yaoguai qi, and a great asset to our brave new world order!" General Nie declared after swallowing a whole chunk of grilled human thigh seasoned with sauteed, congealed life-energies freshly harvested from another victim, and made everyone raise their cups and to drink to their bright, promising future; Lan Zhan was considered a newbie who had just come of age in yaoguai society, so he was given a cup of orange juice spiked with demonic blood wine. Unfortunately, the mixed nuts were salty, so he hurriedly and without thinking, took one huge gulp, which amounted to more than half his cup. The rosy-cheeked man became tipsy within seconds, but he managed to hold down his tongue for the time being, and stayed conscious and a little sane; however, he did have a bit of uncharacteristic fun by exaggerating his yaoguai origins, fed by Ni-er's protective psychic connections, to tell a believable lie that he was just like many other humans, wandering the plains of the northeastern country and getting possessed, haunted and eventually corrupted by yaoguai influence that had spread throughout the Middle Kingdom.

“No wonder my cute A-Zhan had been so willing in the flesh, and in spirit, while we joined bodies in the hospital ward,” the taller man, now turned into tender brotherly A-Huan, murmured and kissed Lan Zhan’s cheeks just as the latter made an endearingly adorable, crude, intoxicated hiccup. “... and for almost two hours too,” A-Huan added with a dreamy sigh and slid his hands beneath Lan Zhan’s tunic to hide a full-grope embrace beneath pooling clothes and draping robes; the clothes they wear were thick in material, richly embroidered and elegant and flared out in design. The meeting table was littered with half-eaten cooked human parts, blood puddles and bone pieces, but the rather unromantic setting did not deter the amorous older Lan brother.

General Jin rushed forward, then cut between the two lovebirds from making out in plain view of other men with a hand-chop, and rudely shoved Lan Zhan away.

“Lan gege , have you no control over your loins anymore, that you couldn’t hold back from bedding your own little brother with minutes of seeing each other? You’re worse than an animal for committing incest, let alone a true-blooded yaoguai !” he chastised Zewu Jun with a pout, and totally ignored the drowsy-looking er gege , who began to tilt and rock gently on his seat.

General Nie laughed out loud and the entire room seemed to shake and rumble from his guffaws, then Huaisang scooted to Lan Zhan’s side to prevent him from falling off his chair. “My Lan flower!” Nie da ge addressed the older Lan sibling whom by now, tipsy Lan Zhan suspected and vehemently confirmed, had illicit relations with, “While we have your didi join our ranks, don’t forget A-Yao whom you declared as your soulmate many moons ago. Us yaoguai do not simply make and break such deep lifelong promises and relationships like you humans; but you’re still an amateur when it comes to the ways of the yaoguai anyway.” The da ge’s large saber-decorated cup was slammed on the table, and everything - everyone - rattled quite a bit, from the gentle warning.

A-Yao had found his way into Xi Chen’s lap and he snuggled up unashamedly because he was the prima donna of the latter’s orchestra ensemble, and the Lan gege sighed, before starting to play with A-Yao like what he’d do with his xiao flute - he ran fingers through A-Yao’s hair, slid fingertips like gossamer against the smaller man’s face, plucked the Jin general’s clothes and unbuttoned his button-knots one by one, and drummed those lovely slightly calloused by long fingers from torso to abdomen, to the sash and to unbuckle A-Yao’s trousers too.

“A-Yao,” Xi Chen leaned in and let his lips graze the smaller man’s nose, then the smooth, shaven chin, “Of course I won’t forget about you, and you’ll always be my number one. Who will play ‘making bagel sandwich creampies’ with me and da ge if we didn’t have you?”

Jin Guangyao, or rather, the demon masquerading that villain, snickered and giggled. Then he shot a jealous glare at the increasingly sleepy Lan Zhan, whose shoulders were violently shaken by Huaisang with panicked hisses of “G-- Get up! Get up--p! T-- They’re going to m--make s-- s-- sandwiches! Please w-- wake up and r-- run for your l--life!”

“If we’re making sandwiches with four, then I won’t want to bottom for all of you. I’m no longer the youngest, so with my newfound seniority, I get dibs to choose who gets to be the bottommost soggy bun,” Guangyao held his chin up and spoke petulantly like an arrogant prick.

Nie Mingjue chortled and kept thumping the table with his right leg from the silliness of their conversation, “Good one, A-Yao! Let’s do a man-train right here, right now, and let this biggest da ge pound all of you into the flattest bagel sandwich ever! Ha ha ha!” It didn’t seem out of the ordinary that the large man began to pull off his armour and outer robes, and kicked away his shoes; A-Yao made excited squeal-y sounds because he missed having their threesome fun after not getting screwed by either of the sworn brothers since dawn; Lan Xi Chen sighed at the horny two, then reached out with one hand for another jar of poisoned wine on the table and uncorked it, while his other free hand began to pull off his own ribbons and robes.

“Drinking on the job?” A-Yao asked casually when he was down to his underwear.

Xi Chen shook his head to gesture a ‘No’, and replied, “To get my didi more drunk than he already is. His performance in bed with me was top-notch, but I don’t know how he’d feel getting hammered to the floor by two powerful, handsome yaoguai like you.” By then, the effects from the first and only gulp of demonic wine-laced orange juice had gone up into Lan Zhan’s head and paralyzed his meridians, and the man lay boneless on the chair while mumbling the lyrics of some old Gusu children’s songs

“I barely recall, at least from your memories infused into this body, that your didi was prohibited from taking alcohol. Are you really his older blood-brother for doing this?” came another sarcastic admonishment from the slightly concerned A-Yao. Lan gege cupped his hand around his younger brother’s jaws to keep the latter’s mouth open, and an entire new jar of demonic blood wine was emptied down the throat within seconds.

“Are we not living in the moment, and savouring the happiness of our times?” Xi Chen retorted with the wise, thought-provoking words that brought the triad together in the first place, which was akin to their group slogan - in which A-Yao simply rolled his eyes that said “You’re insufferable, you know that”. Xi Chen smiled with a wink, and worked to make sure both Lan brothers were properly undressed for their sandwich-making ritual, while whispering under his breath giddily, “A-Zhan, A-Zhan, gege can play with you for another hour before lunch time! Gege feels very itchy because the demonic presence inside gege’s body wants to scratch-scratch your flowerbud again!”

Across the meeting table, the great General Nie had grabbed Huaisang by the arm roughly, and ordered the shaking, whining man who muttered non-stop of ‘Don’t kill me, don’t make sandwiches, don’t kill me’ like a madman in his panic attack. He sent the man scurrying off to check on lunch and to keep the meeting hut’s entrance closed until they were done welcoming their newest didi into the family. “If we’re disturbed, this da ge will make sure you’ll sport another scar on the other side of your head, and you’ll be as good as a brainless fierce corpse after that!” he growled a warning. With Huaisang kicked out of the meeting hut, Nie da ge proceeded to drop his clothes messily on the floor, but he graciously used his furred, thick woollen robes and mantle as bedding for their latest love-nest of foursomes.

“Oh, how I wish A-Sang is as appetizing as your lil’ brother, Xi Chen. Too bad he’s an invalid and our yaoguai code dictates that handicapped people aren’t fit for consumption and should be turned into slaves,” he huffed in annoyance while masturbating his huge over-eight inch hard-on furiously without any qualms nor reservations; because they’ve been engaging in tasty threesomes for the past months, and had become comfortable in their own skins, and because yaoguai do not really care much about a man’s dignity and nakedness in their world where physical and instinctive, raw pleasures rule above all else.

“Don’t fret, da ge . With Lan er didi in our hands now, you can sate your hunger anytime whilst his meat is still fresh and youthful!” A-Yao clapped his hands after hanging his underwear on a chair’s backrest; being clean, elegant and proper, he preferred to keep his clothes unwrinkled for the rest of the day.

Xi Chen couldn’t resist licking his lips, even while preparing his didi by filing his stomach with toxic wines and sliding the well-muscled but smaller man out of his clothes. Nie Mingjue in the buff, armed with bulging, thickly-veined muscles on nearly every inch of tanned skin and supple flesh, with matching impressive pecs and six-packs - was truly an idol to be worshipped by spreading one’s ass for the godly warrior to take his pleasures from. The lewd stare did not escape Nie Mingjue’s attention, and the huge man raised his arms proudly and turned around for a couple of spins, just to let his admirers fawn and drool over. He brushed his moustache with his finger and gave it a twirl in tandem with one sexy raised eyebrow, exercised his protruding pectoral muscles with alternating pulsing motions to show how sexy his smooth, oiled, defined chest was, then did a few graceful body-building poses to raise the room’s temperature, and when his back was turned to the audience, he even squeezed his glutes to mimic how they look like each time he thrust through two men in their threesome sandwiches, virile and energetic, solid perfect in form, and ready to drill more male flowerbuds than ever before; Xi Chen sighed with a dreamy grin and nearly wetted himself, and A-Yao nnngh’ed with his eyes closed and naked thighs squeezed tightly together in anticipation for an exciting hour-long appetizer sandwich romp before lunch.

Lan Zhan was fortunate to have been blissfully knocked out by the alcohol before the three da ge s’ sandwich-making ritual began, with him being the helpless bottom soggy bun, of course. He’d only had his lunch four hours later, and by then, he was already a relatively unresponsive, dreamy-eyed walking ghost because he’d been drained to the last drop, he felt thinner from getting pounded for too long between the legs, and his belly felt pregnant because he'd been filled up much more than any human male could ever experience in a lifetime.

Huaisang got most of the flak from the shrill-voiced kitchen jiejie s because they had to keep the food warm for their great leaders, until when they finally arrived at the dining hut at three o' clock in the afternoon on that sunny, beautiful early Summer day.

.

The lengthening summer days seemed to stretch forever, when Lan Zhan was taken to the Nie stronghold fortress and made to stay there for a while. His brother was elated, of course, because he gets to wake up every sunrise with his precious A-Yao snuggling against his chest, and lovely A-Zhan lodged snugly between the legs in bed, and make creampie bagel sandwiches and had sausage fests all day with super-alpha masculine Nie da ge mounting all of them and Huaisang cleaning up their mess afterwards. Lan Zhan had an overdose of jiejie s in the days before, so he welcomed sucking multiple dicks jostling for his touch, stroking very, very excited meaty, twitching arousals until ejaculation, swallowing gallons of hot semen, having thick uncut hairy penises rub every inch of his skin and fucking every crevice and orifice of his body, sawing through between his butt-cheeks until his anus blossomed into the perfect male flower for Nie, Jin and Lan men to sexually devour, and in return, he also enjoyed fucking and spearing, penetrating hairy and smooth buttocks of all shapes and sizes regardless of who and where, to make his own male flower blooms and inseminate other males in sperm-stinked soiled and soaked king-sized beds that cater to foursomes and sometimes more, in rooms that echoed with the breathy, low husky moans of men singing in their throes of ecstasy and excited spurting fertile orgasms arching beautifully over ceilings, crescendoing into uunh-uunh-uunh rhythmic grunts, to finally reach climaxes of roars and howls of men making love with other men.

Life at the Nie stronghold fortress was akin to living like a princess locked up in her (his) own castle, though fortunately Lan Zhan was familiar with the place - he was at least there during the Sunshot Campaign more than sixteen years ago, and visited the Nies regularly after that -, so he didn't feel too out of place, and knew his was around the vast semi-desert-like estate filled with watch towers, dusty courtyards, stone and metal castles and their widespread network of annexes and underground labyrinths, with a total size of more than twice of the Cloud Recesses. Daddy Nie refused to let A-Zhan out because he took a liking to banging his sweet tight ass all day, so he kept their lifestyles rather opulent and lavish by making sure the man in his mid-thirties was well fed and clothed, given a richly furnished room, with lots of toys and playmates to accompany him including wonky, bipolar A-Sang; Sort-of-Mommy Jin became a bit jealous after having to share Second Daddy Lan's attention with A-Zhan, so he always traded barbs and insults when bad mood raged, and sometimes spiked A-Zhan's drinks and food until the latter became a mind-muddled, docile member of the twisted yaoguai family and their favourite gangbang beanie bag, cocksleeve and sperm bag; it goes without saying that Second Daddy Lan was elated to have A-Zhan around all day and night, whether embracing him whenever they bump into each other during work, or staying inside the didi when the nights are cool and the bed needed to be warmed. Having not much to do as the gongzhu princess, he was treated like royalty amongst the Jin and Nie soldiers, and he spent his time indoors cultivating, practising the scholarly arts and music, and meditated in his private room whenever he wasn't coerced, tricked or seduced to spread his legs to one or all three members of the Venerated Triad.

Over time, activities that trigger feelings of dislike and disgust became normalized, familiar, and even expected, because there is comfort in consistency, even if it means having sex with three men every day with a bellboy waiting on the sides to mop the floor later. It took a while to crack the mystery code that was Huaisang, and he understood that Huaisang believed that he was the last human left on earth - which was plausible, given that he'd not seen any other pure or untainted Homo sapiens around, and Ni-er's assessment seemed to agree with this conclusion. Nie er gongzi was damaged in the head, sadly, whose situation reminisced a late 20th century movie about a planet taken over by apes, where one of the last intelligent human survivors suffered a rather similar fate. Nevertheless, the Nie second prince has his good days, sometimes, and Lan Zhan would engage in meaningful conversations to try and pacify the man's disturbed mental state and soul, lending a shoulder for him to cry on, but fully knowing that whatever that man believed or intended to carry out, was of no consequence because Nie da ge's authority and decision overrides everyone else's, and nobody would trust a mad bellboy servant anyway - plus, Nie Huaisang was truly too cowardly in nature. If anything, Lan Zhan allowed Huaisang to play with his hair, braid it and tie pigtails and ponytails - especially when the Nie man was his incoherent, mumbling state -, in the latter's quest to find the yaoguai hair who played hide and seek to pass the time with the madman. At least Lan Zhan was rewarded with a nice grooming to his hair, and he had a few grey hairs plucked out too - a bonus treat.

At nights, before the orgy starts of three rightful Sect Leaders, former or otherwise, ramming their cocks into his anus that had been moulded into a man-cunt after too much drug-fuelled sex abuse, Lan Zhan would take a moment to meditate and calm down his restlessness and anxiety. He would ask, whether he was doing the right thing, whether he should stay, whether this foursome love who adoringly called him didi while fucking his ass and raping his penis lovingly until he inched towards becoming a desiccated corpse - was the pinnacle of all manners of brotherly love and brotherhoods. In retrospect, after spending days and weeks together locked up inside the fortress, he'd come to enjoy the comforts of living a rather decent, good life and he is well-loved by the Venerated Triad and the yaoguai servants and soldiers that serve them. However, each time he saw the moon outside the glass window, his mind would wander beyond, and stray thoughts would filter through intrusively, asking his mind and the core of his soul - is Wei Ying still out there, watching the same moon, waiting for him too?

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 220

When opportunity arose, the triad and the yummy didi went on campaigns to liberate more outlying villages, in which didi Lan Zhan didn't mind lending his standard weaponry as background support for the yaoguai's cause, just because. He didn't like those snobbish Imperial guards and their sleazy, lecherous Tao priests, and held a grudge against them for causing him untold miseries, such as that four-and-a-half-billion years of wasted waiting time; also, because his gege ordered him to do so, and he really had no say in his actions - not when his breakfast is laced with drugs that inhibit his ability to say 'no' and to refuse instructions from the triad.

Powerful yaoguai, such as General Chifeng Zun of Nie pride, and General Lianfang Zun of Jin glory, were able to break the Tao's anti-magic like shattering thin glass, simply because they possessed very high levels of cultivations rarely seen among demons; and Lan Zhan was astonished by his brother's level-boosted capabilities after imbuing himself with the yaoguai's ferocious powers - the Darkness-powered Liebing could send thunderstorms to flatten stone castles, dry up entire lakes and turn swathes of farmland into cracked, cursed desertland, and wreck an entire town with a single, twisted and ear-splitting song. The more they fought, the more yaoguai and possessed men joined their ranks, and soon, they were one of the largest groups in the northern regions of the country, the last bastions of freedom in a nation gripped by violence, slavery and bloodthirsty conquests.

Thus, when Qinghe was finally liberated and declared under the control of the now-famous General Nie, General Jin and General Lan - and his didi in the background, because Lan Zhan held steadfast to his oath of non-aggression and non-interference - he'd play his guqin to break the enemies' shields from afar or send Bichen to deliver wartime supplies, but he would not engage in bloody fights directly - the victorious yaoguai celebrated by having a week-long summer festival with fireworks, gatherings and parties, good food, all-night music and dancing.

As part of the festival, a Conference of the Demonic Cultivation was organized to invite yaoguai and all supernatural, non-human and human allies across the country to partake in the festivities, and to unite everyone under a single cause. Lan Zhan caught a glimpse of the invitation list while General Nie was working on it at his sturdy teakwood study desk - the large, burly man worked late into the night as one of the main organizers of the inaugural, celebrated and much-hyped event. He saw the names of the Zodiac Demons, whom he met briefly before in Spring but never since then, and he knew they had been battling in the heart of human evil of Chang'an, though not surprisingly, with little success.

“What do you think? It’ll be an honour if they would take a break from trying to hit their heads against the massive walls of the Imperial Palace, and enjoy what we can offer here, in Nie heartland,” Nie Mingjue remarked with pride, as he used his ink-brush to write the names on long parchment laid across the desk. Lan Zhan couldn’t agree or disagree, as he moaned terribly, terribly wantonly when Nie da ge shoved his hips hard against the man’s buttocks, there was that familiar ache, a tearing pain, of a huge over-eight inch manhood drilling continuously through his blossomed, puffy, overused flowerbud - and continued writing over Lan Zhan, who had to bend over the table’s edge because the talented, multi-tasking da ge insisted on getting work done even while having an orgy.

“Hah!” Jin Guangyao withdraw his lips briefly from Lan Zhan’s shuddering penis beneath the rutting two, and shifted in his sitting position just beneath the table’s edge where he could capture the Lan er didi’s genitals easily like reeling in prey, and pleasure and edge the man for hours, sometimes mere minutes before detonation, because A-Yao gives the best blowjobs ever, “Your main aim is to meet your Niu brother, and to butt-heads with brotherly love, because you've not seen him for months. For an old stubborn and brash bull like you, you sure know how not to hide your true intentions. You'll also try to persuade Niu Mo Wang to let you join the siege on Chang'an, but we all know that the Zodiac Demons are too arrogant and prideful to ask for help from lesser ones of their kins, like us." Jin gege guessed everything correctly, to Chifeng Zun's consternation, and the Lianfang Zun proceeded to kiss away a long web-like drip of pre-cum from Lan Zhan's vulnerable, imprisoned penis in the gege's hands, before the helpless organ was swallowed and stroked vigorously with such finesse, that Lan Zhan momentarily lost control of his legs and trembled greatly against the table. His shrivelled testicles continued to dance and throb, and pulsed erratically like a dying heart, with one testicular orgasm tearing through another non-stop from the Jin man's incredible skills with luscious lips, elongated and forked tongue and aphrodisiac-laced fangs; Lan Zhan had run out of penile orgasms long ago, having ejaculated more than the twenty-four thousand times he used to have during his earlier godly days, and these yaoguai proved to be exceptionally effective in extracting his honeyed seed and leave his pelvis absolutely, pleasantly drained from one sunrise to the next.

Lan da ge entered the study room with a tray of snacks - cooked and candied human parts, as usual, with golden cores as dips to rejuvenate their sexual demonic qi. He ogled at the artistic masterpiece of how his little didi was mounted by General Nie on a table and sucked dry by General Jin below - and he had just left for a few minutes to get those snacks after incestuously breeding his younger brother for hours earlier. "My, my, you're both impatient and insatiable, aren't you?" he remarked as he placed the tray on the desk, "Well, judging from the invitation list, I'm not too keen on yaoguai with animal appearances... but it would be interesting to see which human-dominated factions will choose to accept the invitation and join us in our celebrations." Xi Chen's graceful slender fingers leafed through the parchment pages with mild disinterest, before taking a few steps back to admire how the little didi was coping with having two demons rape him rather unwillingly. The sweat-drenched, sexually flushed Lan Zhan bit back another moan, because he was a bit shy for showing his shameful behaviour in front of the gege after all. His hair was unruly and untied after Nie da ge tore off his topknot when his passions got the better of his manners, and raked the smaller man's hair and back while roaring forty times for the mighty forty bullish ejaculations seeded like powerful water jets shot deep, deep into the sexually abused Lan didi 's rectum.

“Oh? Humans? Do tell, Xi Chen gege ,” A-Yao took another breather from deepthroating the dying, tormented purple-red shivering penis - it could no longer shoot out any semen, but A-Yao insisted on polishing and massaging the meaty phallus anyway with unrivalled sexual skills, and with such eagerness, until it became a screaming tube of wildly-twitching hypersensitized flesh that kept unloading and spilling recklessly, mixing pee with cum because the bladder and the sphincters were out of order, but of very little viable sperm as a reward because those still-contracting testicles had run out of juice anyway, and the prostate gland had been thoroughly abused by Nie da ge 's awesome bone-shaking thrusts that it had to shut down from emptying out too fast, too early. A-Yao resumed his blowjob, and Lan Zhan started to hum and groan out a long, protracted unintelligible ‘uuuuunnnnnuuuuunnnnnhhhhnnnnngggghhhh’ because his body was forced to convulse unwillingly - again.

“Well, based on reports... there are some sects in the border provinces... that are friendly to yaoguai but have more human influence... than the other. We've sent some advanced invitations... using Fairy Messenger spells... so we'll wait to see if there are any interests from... say, far south in Yunnan... far west in Qishan--” Xi Chen said with a halting voice, because he was getting distracted at trying to enlighten his dear A-Yao, while secretly delighting in watching adorable A-Zhan turning tomato-red again from chest up to the cheeks because his back arched and seized, and lovely pulses ran through his terribly, terribly, cramped and overexerted penis, in which A-Yao gladly drank whatever seedless fluids that was offered, and Nie gege groaned with pleasure from having the sweet, tight man-ass massage his demonic hairy, veiny cock, thirty milking squeezes, no less.

“Oh for gui ’s sake, stop yapping and let me concentrate on enjoying A-Zhan’s body and completing my invitation list at the same time!” the moustached macho warrior grunted in irritation and grasped Lan Zhan’s buttocks so harshly that he left handprints on those two bouncy mounds. He spanked Lan Zhan hard, once, twice, eliciting ‘aahn, aahn’ from the latter, out of spite for the sexy flooded, cum-slicked man-cunt that continued to tempt and entice him from his General duties.

Then, Lan Xi Chen grabbed a few morsel bites of human parts from the tray and fed them to his Nie and Jin brethren, before popping a slice of fried human liver coated with bluish gelatinous life-energy - mmm, delish - and he went to take his place next to Nie da ge . Lan Xi Chen was gloriously naked as well, though shinier, smoother and more slender and pliant than the brawn muscled hulk gege . Xi Chen slapped one hand that still clutched his didi ’s buttocks and he instructed, “Nnnh, move aside a bit, you greedy Nie man. A-Zhan’s mine too.” Next, Xi Chen carefully, forcefully, pushed his own steel-hard cock into the younger brother’s overstretched anus; he was adamant to have a double-penetration sex and get a taste of his own blood sibling, even if it meant crowding out the towering doofus next to him while alternating their two-stroke pistoning action deep, deep into A-Zhan’s well-lubricated engine. The youngest of them cried out with pleasure and pain from the extensive combined girths that felt like fists were being punched into his rectum to crush his intestines. Below, A-Yao sensed a change in the electrifying atmosphere, and began to milk the man’s spasming penis that’s still in its refractory period, with his clenching, massaging throat muscles, and a lovely forked tongue that started to make sweet, sweet penetrative love into A-Zhan’s pee-slit with every intention to reach, fluttering in and out of the urethra and the shuddering, invaded prostate gland invade, to rape his insides, to plunder the last nectary liquid gold from the incontinent bladder until nothing was left, and when the tongue had elongated enough to reach its prized targets, A-Yao lovingly hummed and attacked with sonic vibrations unto A-Zhan’s bruised, swollen testicles from within till only dried-out pruny husks remained - again, for the next few hours into the night.

.

How time flies, when he isn't with his true loved one, that is, his soulmate, Lan Zhan thought dreamily with a sigh. The days with Wei Ying could be measured by the minute, by the hour, filled with activities that two men in love could share and appreciate in the heat of the moment, and cherished as memories forever.

Compared to having sex marathons and orgies all day and night, and then filling the gaps in between with mundane, increasingly boring and meaningless pursuits such as cultivation, reading, writing calligraphy and playing the guqin - or rushing to battlegrounds to make mincemeat out of the Imperial dogs and their Tao sex-kittens. The days passed quickly without much fanfare or personal milestones archived, and Summer was in full swing when the Conference of the Demonic Cultivation was held right at the palatial grounds of the Nie family fortress. Lan Zhan eventually forgot a little bit about the annoying but endearing antics of his former spouse, after having spent so much time with his new tribe, the Venerated Triad and the yaoguai -kin that called Qinghe, and increasingly, part of Lanling, their home and headquarters. He'd help them expand their influence and extent of land grabs, built homes for orphans and those who suffered from the ongoing war, started a vegetable patch behind the fortress to plant cabbages, chillies, even dug a pond to nurture a few lotus shrubs;

he kept himself contented by maintaining a rigid regimented lifestyle of five to nines, of sweeping with straw brooms and living up to a virtuous lifestyle where possible; although it was challenging to maintain his sanity because he was always fondled in the hallways by an amorous Chifeng Zun who had no qualms molesting Lan Zhan in front of squealing servants and a fleeing Huaisang then pounding him up against the wall while having stand-up sex

- which meant that Lan Zhan always had someone's penis inside him from nine to five, had someone's greedy, lustful calloused hands creeping from behind then stroking his defenceless naked cock even while he tried to sweep the floor, but ended up soiling the glazed surface with splattered teaspoons of useless, spent seed, and his only virtue, at least in the eyes of the ever-hungry and insatiable Chifeng Zun, was when he spread his legs willingly and as widely as possible, relaxed his anal sphincter to allow the hulking huffing, sexually aroused giant full access into his ruined, drenched male flower;

he was constantly harassed by Lianfang Zun's sarcasm, then ambushed and sexually attacked each time he found himself alone with the thin, reedy and sleazy man, because A-Yao either secretly lit up an incense burner filled with scented sedatives and aphrodisiacs, or sent acupuncture needles laced with sexual poisons to his nape when he back was turned, that he ended up not knowing if he'd been whoring himself out because he sometimes woke up hours later in a daze, and his genitals thoroughly sucked dry, overused and feeling very, very drained, throbbing unpleasantly with forced emptiness - the torment does not stop there, as Lianfang Zun has a lewd obsession for Lan Zhan's genitals, and each time they shared a meal on the dining table, Lan Zhan would have trouble chewing and swallowing his rice and noodles, because someone had crawled underneath to fondle his tired, annoyed balls and vigorously played footsie with his penis until he ended up cumming while trying to eat braised pork bellies, roaring with forced pleasure while trying to drink his chicken soup, and choking on fruit desserts, his face as red as the apple he tried to bite, because he had to experience multiple very uncomfortable, very shameful full-blown thirty-throbs orgasms in broad daylight, grunting 'aaahn, uuuhn, ooohn' until he grimaced and inadvertently bit into the bitter apple's core, before he was allowed to finish his meal;

he could never say 'no' to his brother, not when he lovingly calls him 'A-Zhan' like the childhood days of an alternate twisted fantasy, and each time that gege tells A-Zhan that gege wants to play-play with the didi's penis, that A-Zhan obeyed without a question and stripped off his pants, to let the gege touch-touch his birdie until it turned red and swollen from the brotherly attention, was sent flying away in graceful thirty arches of brotherly ejaculations, and then, the gege would pretend to be kind and say that since didi has suffered enough from Chifeng Zun's daily attacked of the fearsome mighty over-eight inch saber, gege would let didi rest and enjoy a more relaxed pace of lovemaking, by letting didi gently fuck gege 's welcoming, spread-open male flower until the didi shuddered and erupted repeatedly and melted into moans, inappropriate grunts and incoherent ' didi loves gege , didi wants to marry gege , didi wants to stay inside gege forever because it's so tight, loving and warm', to the rhythm of creaking beds and pistoning hips, of rising balls and pulsing penile muscles, until A-Zhan was painting squiggly, oozing creamy white lines, very, very excitedly, inside gege 's inner canvas that lined the larger man's tunnel of incestuous love, and it feels very, very nice and heartwarming to cum inside his lovely gege .

.

The Conference of Demonic Cultivation took place as planned, though Lan Zhan did not participate since he was still an outsider - not an outcast - in yaoguai terms. He did not have beastly features or grotesque parts, and he wasn't a mass murderer that feasted on human flesh and willingly devoured golden cores. Lan Xi Chen barely made the passing mark because his golden core had turned black and corrupted, and he'd already scored enough kills, displayed his inhuman culinary skills by roasting a man alive and eating him straight off a spitroast, and showed that he had an appetite for human parts well enough, to be allowed entrance to the various meetings that took place all day. There were exhibition booths, breakout meeting rooms, and areas where yaoguai champions and leaders, both rising stars and established folklore legends, mingling about.

Still, Lan Zhan was allowed to remain out of bounds of those closed-door meetings, because he was a resident of the Nie fortress, and he still displayed a bit of demonic presence - whenever he was quizzed by guest yaoguai who either had heads of terrifying lizards, claws of eagles, body made of centipede carapaces, tails from serpents or hooven legs of devils, mostly fully garbed in vicious looking spiky armour - he would show his special Hair that could move independently of his crowning glory; the cute strand of grey hair would surge forward as fast as she could whilst rooted to the scalp, and wiggle wildly as though she was performing kung-fu and lash out with squeals and bubbly gurgles. It wasn't really impressive, based on the feedback Lan Zhan received especially when faced with legends of the demonic world such as those from the Zodiac Demon band or demi-gods from other localities - but the guests let that slide because all Lan Zhan did, at least in their eyes, was to dutifully move around with a tray in hand to serve eyeball cocktails, bloody wine drinks, and cordial liquefied qi blended with golden cores of freshly deceased victims, like a good but lowly waiter boy. On the first night of the Conference, the incredible, fabled Silver-White Dragon made another appearance in the skies, by flying through one cloud to another, and everyone cheered and cried with reverence at the sight that signalled the coming of prophecies, and some even grovelled to the ground to worship the divinely serpent's presence; later, Ni-er discreetly drifted back to her daddy's hair as a grey thread-like strand, then rooted herself around behind her daddy's right ear, and daddy Lan Zhan quietly praised his pumpkin pie for a job well done to delight their guests with an aerial show for this inaugural event.

Then, someone announced from afar, "Stand aside! Welcoming the Jiang sect from Yunmeng, their Sect Leader His Greatness Jiang Wanyin, the first lady, Queen Wen of Qishan, and their royal entourage!"

Lan Zhan stilled in his steps even as guests began to scold him to continue serving refreshments in the bustling fortress grounds and gardens where demonic crowds thronged. He barely remembered his elder brother mentioning about human-dominated factions being invited to the party, and he realized belatedly that Jiang Cheng's was one of those. He turned around almost too impatiently, and spilled some wines, to the annoyance of some guests whose clothes and leathery skin were splattered by crimson drops - and saw, to his bewilderment, hope and deep-seated fear - of one group marching across from the entrance fates, surrounded by war banners and soldiers bearing full Yunmeng Jiang battle regalia including swords, bows and lotus-themed armour. There he was, the Jiang Sect Leader that he'd known for a while, and next to him - his eyes widened and instantly, millions of thoughts rush through his mind because of the implications and possibilities - Wen Qing gu niang dressed in flowing red robes and a matching magnificent tiara and headpiece; he thought she had been killed sixteen years ago in the massacre of the Wen clan - then behind, he saw pale-faced Wen Ning with a rather proud look on the face with chin tilted up, in blood red and black Qishan Wen-style armour that he knew, remembered, hated too well, then just barely, barely a lightning flash and glimpse of what he thought was Jiang Yan Li, because he couldn't mistake those demure double-lidded almond eyes, bright cheeks and luscious lips, not especially when she's dressed in robes of shades of purples that represent her clan's colours, and next up--

The man - Lan Zhan nearly wanted to throw the tray away and run towards his beloved, dearly missed-- he took a step forth, despite yaoguai guests clamouring around him for a drink that he conveniently ignored-- his eyes locked gazes with that man, his spouse, his soulmate-- his opened his mouth to word but it would come out, so he trembled, filling up with anxiety and long lost love, of buried feelings welling up suddenly from the bottom of his heart and stabbing a punch into the gut that oh how he'd missed, wanted to, touch and kiss, embrace and love-- the tremor spread throughout his body, and soon, that tray did fall away to the soft green grass below, to no one's lament and loss other than angry curses for more spillage-- he took another step and soon, broke into a brisk pace-- but his heavy feet wouldn't move faster, curse those Nie metal shoes, why must they be weighed like lead, his heart raced and he was crying, crying from the inside yet his throat tightened, a single tear threatened to flow out and trickle down his cheeks, but he cannot-- he's the rightful husband, he has an established, eternal relationship with this man no matter what Gods try to separate them and to hell with those who try--

“... Wei Ying?”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 221

“Leave this place. Come back to Yunmeng with me.” Harsh, hungry, possessive whispers growling between hot kisses. Back pressed against the wall, the wife-y shows his dominatrix side and pins the husband’s hands to the side of his head. Another kiss, this time, a wet muscled tongue wrenched its way in between gritted teeth, and he yielded, because oh gods, how long has it been since he tasted his married man? Sweet, spicy, lecherous yet playful, that’s his man, the man that is named Wei Wu Xian; the kiss sent a jolt sizzling down his spine and straight into his loins; Lan Zhan moans into their locked, feverish lips.

The message hits home. Leave? Come back? Lan Zhan tears away from their conjugal reunion of salivating mouths, how horny can people be when embracing each other after not meeting, or even having sex, for a long while? The flesh wants, the will weakens, and Lan Zhan is as hard as a stallion, a wet spot on the tip of the vulgar tent on his pants.

“N... No, Wei Ying. I can’t. I shouldn’t. They... treat me well. I live well. I have a place and a purpose here. My brother’s with me. No, I now have three brothers. I... belong here, I should stay.” Timid. Refute. Say ‘no’ because he’s been told to, by his blood brother, drilled into his head and his sex organs every, single, day.

The wife is furious, and he rightly should be. A fist slams the wall right beside the ear, and what an ear-deafening, bone-rattling boom that sounded, even the paint job cracked. The husband flinches in terror.

“What buffoonery are you pulling out of your ass this time, Lan Zhan?! You’re suffering from Stockholm’s Syn-- no, nevermind. You’ve been brainwashed, radicalized, corrupted!” There it is, the snarl, the angry, jealous, possessive streak that he’d loved long ago, but hadn’t savoured enough before it was gone. Go on, the inner voice said, scold me, abuse me, break me, tell me I’m wrong and I’m the worst.

“No. I will stay.” That was the automated reply, like the ones recorded on machines. Defiant, but beneath the rippling, churning surface of raw emotions fogging up the air in the unoccupied room of mixed breaths and heavy, lustful male panting. Luckily Lan Zhan somehow managed to grab the wife’s hand and pull the latter away from the entourage, damn those onlookers, and rush into an empty, sparsely furnished room in an annex building to the fortress, whose door can be locked - and it was crisply locked, for good measure.

“Lan Zhan! If you don’t come back with me right now, I’m going to rape you until you say ‘Yes’!” Ouch, such anger, such petulance, such rebellious finesse, because those words run against the orders of the Venerated Triad, Lan Zhan’s current, maybe now, former masters. The lovely four-lettered word was music to the man’s ears, because that was how he had been trained and broken to serve new masters, and now, he desperately wanted - needed - to be undone to recalibrate his loyalties and feelings for his one true soulmate.

Thus, when Lan Zhan licked his lips and wavered in his grip on his sworn loyalty to the Venerated Triad, he knew, and the wife knew, that it was over. The darkness is lifted. It’s time for reconciliation lovemaking. At long last.

After a couple seconds of hesitation, because Lan Zhan, courtesy name Lan Wang Ji, shamefully forgot how, as a husband, to seduce the wife named Wei Wu Xian - but he got back on track quickly because he's supposed to be the older man in his mid-thirties and no longer a virgin boy - and made up his mind on how to carry out the shameless duty. He peeled off his belt to drop his pants messily on the floor - the impatience and lack of proper etiquette of folding one's garments, was telling, but it was also sexy as it's steamy; what wife would love to see his darling husband do a striptease, right?

Lan Zhan quickly scanned the empty room and found his sex prop - he sat on a cushioned chair naked as a babe with hairy curls on the crotch gloriously displayed to the wife, then spread his legs and draped his thighs on the armrests as though he, the husband, was ironically going for a woman's gynaecology check-up. His hands reached behind and below to spread his puckered male flowerbud, and the thrill of being naked in a room with another man, of feeling cool air caressing his buttocks, of presenting himself wantonly like a buffet spread to entice and tempt penises to spear, plunder and sexually assault his long-gone innocence - Lan Zhan bit his lips and looked away, but not before he let out a nnnngh because his heart was racing, and he truly, truly missed the taste of lovely, lovely Wei Ying after having been pounded, moulded and thoroughly used and abused by his three gege for far too long. Wei Ying's penis and pubes, he knew by heart, was by far the hairiest and he sorely wanted to feel those tactile ticklish sensations, the greasiness, the manliness of his wife-y - nothing beats that, not even incestuous double penetrations or being sucked by mind-blowing deepthroats.

Hooded, alluring eyes return to the spouse, in sizzling tandem with the moment he reaches for his proud, leaking and ferocious-red penis, in its over-six inch glory and jerking with 'Yes, Yes, Yes'. He starts to jack off while sending smoking stares and lustful gazes, along with licking his teeth with a silent rawr, and purrs with his low baritone to 'It's been a long time coming, and he wants to welcome the man named Wei Wu Xian back to his life, back into his body, the temple of manly fertility and of all things husbandly to his wife, through rape or not. His strokes hastens, his exercises his anus to bloom his male flower seductively, making lewd kissy-kissy gestures, to become the wife's visual feast and to stoke the flames that fire up, and rekindle their smouldering relationship.

Wei Ying stared back with unimaginable hunger and boiling lust at the offered sacrifice of flesh upon a doomed cushioned chair. He murmured his warning again though he wasn't really focused anywhere else other than the lovely, lovely opened male flower dripping with invitation for a warm, tight, hot loving, "... I'm going to rape you until you say 'Yes'...", while undoing his own pants and masturbating furiously with his gloved hands because he hadn't taken off his socks although his Yunmeng-styled shoes were already kicked to the corner.

"Mn."

.

"It's the same story, really. Qishan Wens raised from the dead, taken over by marauding and very intelligent yaoguai who played with the bodies and their deceased identities like string puppets. Mom and Dad's back at the Lotus Pier, not truly themselves and certainly not in their right mind, for the same reason.

Oh, you saw my shijie too right? I married her first shortly after waking up from falling down into a well, and that's how I got inducted to the family, just like how you got roped into your sick sausage fest foursome with the other Great Clans. Then, I had to marry Wen Qing, because she became a fierce lustful woman who couldn't find satisfaction in A-Ning, and she insisted - I just followed orders from that diva, don't blame me. Thank goodness the wedding had to be postponed until a few days after Jiang Cheng's, of course, since he was the one who called the yaoguai for help to set up his personal playground empire spanning from Qishan to Yunmeng, and he gets dibs to choose her as his queen and rightful first wife of Jiang Sect Leader, while I, the older sibling, get seconds. I'm still the outcast, can you believe that? Madam Yu insisted on protocol, which is so old-fashioned by the way. So yeah, me and my bro share Wen Qing as a wife, and Dad's pretty cool about it because he's afraid of Dark Zidian's powers. That thing stings like hell, I tell ya. The cuts don't heal until a week later!

Anyway, the thing with women... well, it still worked out in the end, because Wen Qing sneaks into my room every night, while I'm busy making my own family with shijie, up to our twelfth this week and probably my hundredth with a growing harem of other Jiang and Wen women who signed up for sex with me. Hah! Me, the outcast, and also the most desirable, prideful Jiang firstborn, for both of the human and yaoguai kind - the irony! Don't tell A-Cheng, but all ten daughters and sons born from Wen Qing aren't his, and don't ever tell him that those kids' beautiful dark brown eyes look like mine. I prefer to keep up my clean image of practising monogamy with my shijie and our lovely twelve children, and have my concubines hidden away from the public. Madam Yu would freak out and disown me if she learned that her legit grandchildren were born from cuckolded sex, hah!

Did I mention children? Yeah, my first girl's about twelve or thirteen this week, since this particular branch of Far West yaoguai can speed up their conception, birth and growth cycles to one week for an equivalent of one human year. Lovely A-Ying's a sexy mink and her body and girly breasts are developing faster than I thought, so I insisted not to bring her here, where there are tons of yaoguai suitors who would try to put their grubby hands on her... Nuh-uuh, no way, because A-Ying's already mine; she's daddy's girl and she's got twins growing in her belly this week after I popped her cherry last Sunday. Hey, don't give me that weird stare, because I believe it's absolutely fine to feel good, and enjoy breeding little girls, okay? A-Ying's got the sweetest tightest and hottest juiciest wettest fresh pussy you can ever imagine, and she kept crying out for daddy to make babies inside her while cumming and peeing all over my belly, how could I resist as a responsible, caring dad? What's more, she's my flesh and blood, so I own rights to her body and her virginity, and I decide who gets to deflower her, right? A dad's gotta do what he's gotta do, that when she's fertile and ripe for the taking, daddy takes it first before the other boys.

Do you want to hear about A-Mian, my second girl and the rest of the family's story, or should we continue our awesome gay sex? Your dick's still throbbing and growing bigger inside my ass even after cumming five times. Did'ja miss me so much? Anyway, where was I... A-Mian's a precocious brat but one very fine underaged slut. She outgrew her sisters and graduated straight from braless to size F cups without even having to try those training bras. It was fun groping her tits and molesting her baby smooth skin all day while screwing her sweet fucking tight vagina while I was teaching her how to masturbate like a real lady. Getting my dick squeezed like crazy by those fleshy bits inside her pussy while she rubs her clit to multiple climaxes, it's the best, I tell ya. I've already profited from getting six grandkids out of her, that's two sets of triplets, and another set of fat healthy cherubs are on their way! Her boobs are so plump and soft, I could've sucked them all day and I tried - it's awesome to drink out of your girl's lactating titties while fucking her bareback into the bed three times in a row to get her properly inseminated, because that's where she belongs -, but then my wives would hit me on the buttocks and accuse me of incestuous infidelity. Oh, the world is so unfair, dominated by feminist ideals and robbing virtuous dads like me of my most basic rights to enjoy my loins, and the fruit of my loins, and to start families with sisters and daughters! You... err... lao gong ? Hello? Earth to lao gong ?”

The room was a bit dark, bereft of sunlight. It wasn't clear if Lan Zhan was suffering from a migraine, facepalming at the ridiculous stories, or KO-ed and foaming in the mouth. Wei Ying continued to babble about himself and his wonderful adventures in the past few months, while tastefully riding the dearly-missed hubby's crotch with hip-drawn circles, squares and stars until the tomato-red, convulsing husband had nothing left to yield from his dying-dead penis and raisin-like testicles.

It was truly annoying to watch Wei Ying cackling like a fool and rolling to all four corners of the small, stuffy room while laughing crudely like donkeys braying birthday songs. The younger man gripped his stomach because he cramped up from laughing too much, and he farted and peed on the floor because it was just too funny, and his muscles had gotten too loose. The husband snorted indignantly at the unsightly sight of a man covering himself with his own bodily fluids with each roll - and his own, because Lan Zhan shot his semen everywhere too, like a misfiring machinegun, after many rounds of passionate lovemaking with a very, very excited welcome-home-i-missed-you, trigger-happy giddily spinning penis that stubbornly ejaculated prematurely multiple times in all directions.

The couple shared their stories and compared notes, first by Wei Ying because he was too impatient to keep his mouth shut and tell the world what wonderful manly things he'd achieved; which wasn't much, really, because Wei Ying was living out a man's fantastical dreams of becoming his own harem and orgy master by breeding his wives and children all day and night, and he mostly kept out of the public eye because he didn't want to cross against the Jiang's now-restored ruling family. He thanked Ernie for saving him from a watery death at the well - which remained a mystery to this date, because it was never found again - and teleporting then depositing him into the hands of the Wen siblings who happened to be at the right place at the right time to intercept his travel. Unnaturally alive and pretty Wen Qing was smitten at first sight and Wei Ying was glad to see at least his old friend, Wen Ning, who had been seduced by the latest wave of yaoguai pandemic and swept off by his kin (theoretically) to the central-west plains. Fortunately, A-Ning remained a virgin boy because as a derivative of yaoguai damaged with developmental challenges in mental health and cognition, he was a dull, plain simpleton in yaoguai terms and was unattractive for the flesh-eating demons, to say the least.

(At this point, Lan Zhan mentioned Huaisang, and the older man made a fair conjecture that yaoguai do not like damaged goods, in a non-offending sense when one considers the living flesh and their energies as food commodities for the demons.)

With Ernie snugly nestled in his pubes once again, Wei Ying swiftly got a diagnostic and a good handle of the situation - recalling distantly that a bunch of possessed and demon-infected Jiang disciples returned from the Carp Tower to Lotus Pier shortly after New Year's Night Hunt, the brilliant Dark Arts practitioner calculated, with 95th percentile confidence, that the entire Yunmeng Jiang clan had been diseased and possessed by the end of Spring. It didn't take long to return to his ancestral home, catch up with his stepbrother and see with his own eyes just how irreversible the situation was, with imposters having infiltrated, then ruled the sect from all levels of their clan's hierarchy. Wei Ying had resigned to the fact that his ancestral clan was defeated before it knew what happened, especially since the yaoguai found Jiang Cheng first and signed in blood a satanic deal that he could never refuse - the return of the Qishan Wens, under the sweet promise that he'd doubled his clan's size and might overnight and with Wen Qing as his bride.

(Wei Ying complained that Jiang Cheng held on to memories, grudges and bitter stuff long after they've expired, such as his long-drawn wish to see Wen Qing again because he still couldn't bury his feelings for her, and that he still kept that cracked, cobwebbed comb inside his treasure box after all these years. Lan Zhan drew parallels to his elder brother, who could never forget his A-Yao and continued to yearn for the latter even after his treachery was exposed and subsequently, leading to his death. In both cases, the men failed spectacularly once their weaknesses were exploited by the yaoguai .)

Wei Ying already knew the ins and outs of the Dark Arts and how yaoguai culture and society function, so he was savvy enough to trick the imposter Jiang Fengmian and Madam Yu to let him wed a fake Jiang Yan Li and let him stay as one of them, without having to show his squiggly Ernie-powered pubes to anyone and risk disclosing his true identity and capabilities. So, even as he started on a warpath to deflower all females within his arm's reach and to propagate with pleasure to keep boredom at bay, he lived a relatively good life as a prince of sorts, with cute Wen Ning as his man-buddy when he went hunting for jungle fowls, fishing in the river, crafting new inventions in his own gifted lavishly-furnished cottage with farms and orchards, or simply play truant and declaring absenteeism when his horny wives were on a lookout for a quick fuck when he's not in the mood; Wei Ying called the shots, dictated who he'd bed and make babies with and when, and engineered the clever arrangement for Wen Qing's two-for-one marriage that his fake adoptive parents couldn't say no to; because as long as Jiang Cheng is contented and satisfied, following the demonic contract formed by his - and by extension, his people's blood -, the yaoguai get to stay in the Mortal Realm in the comforts of Yunmeng and Qishan as manifested humans, and play around with impunity in a fantasy of a glorious resurrection of a forgotten race, a celebrated fairytale marriage, and of creating a new family that united two legendary clans (...not, Wei Ying scoffed mockingly).

(Wei Ying was a parasite to the yaoguai -infested Jiang and Wen clans, claimed the husband. A sneaky male in his tribe that receives the benefits of the ruling family, and yet, spreads his genes recklessly amongst the females to the detriment of the proper heir. The wife retorted by accusing husband of being too useless, weak-hearted and feeble to fight back, until he became parasitized and had his cock sucked dry all day to feed the demons, and his anus abused and used to service his new owners like cheap counterfeit cocksleeves sold for a silver apiece. With that, the husband stiffened and turned red from shame, and looked away in stunned silence.)

Lots of things happened in the last three months or so since they separated, Wei Ying remarked, but he had a good run and was feeling rather restless at his pinnacle of manly, playboy harem-master existence. “So, when a Fairy Messenger call came to Jiang Cheng’s work desk while he was out trying to pick flowers to gift them to his wife after a frivolous argument between a dense husband and his unfaithful spouse, I popped the fluff of amber light and was really happy to hear Zewu Jun’s voice and about this Conference! I said ‘Yes’ straight away and planned everything up until we safely got here!” Wei Ying excitedly ended his heroic and sex-stallion story with fist pumps and million-dollar grins.

(Lan Zhan turned sour and muttered under his breath that if the wife had the time to take other people’s calls, then why didn’t he respond to the husband’s repeated, desperate search at the start of their separation. At that, Wei Ying blinked his eyes, tapped his forehead to check the signal connection between their melded minds, then whipped out his holo-phone while in mid-fuck with the husband, and scrolled through some old messages and checked some settings. “I did!” he cried, just as the husband hnngh’d and spurted his nth ejaculation into the wife-y’s rectum, “I wanted to cut down on mental clutter, so I sent a long e-mail detailing why I was away and what I was doing. And I posted my daily diary reports to you, so you can keep tabs of how many wives I have, and how many children I was fathering. But you never responded and I couldn’t put my babymaking miracles on hold because babies had to be made constantly!”. Then, after some checks and quick calls to ErNet’s IT services, the couple, fresh from another round of sexual intercourse, realized that the husband conveniently forgot to update his holo-phone’s software to the latest version - so the emailing services didn't function correctly as they should in Lan Zhan's holo-phone. In which, Wei Ying slapped the husband's buttocks and scratched the pectorals with cat claw-like fingernails out of spine - and Lan Zhan mnnh'd at the sadistic pleasure of getting tortured by his wife - because the husband's refusal to learn about device maintenance and read up manuals was the cause of the huge misunderstanding. After another round of reconciliation sex - and Lan Zhan was dead tired and drained - they agreed that the husband, who holds the office and position of the Almighty God, should put an Out Of Office message if he knowingly couldn't reply to his e-mails, and if not, then a crisis must be assumed, and Wei Ying should rush on a flying Suibian and a terrifying Ernie-pubic hair monster to the fore to rescue the husband in distress.)

The long part one done, it was Lan Zhan's turn to speak. He was meticulous to detail every event, his feelings, his thoughts, and categorized them on a grandiose scale of perfection, until he recounted each sexual encounter he endured or enjoyed, and classified them according to mild, neutral, spicy to mind-boggling, et cetera ad nauseum . He was particularly proud of his achievements in contributing to the liberation of Qinghe, because at least he had the chance to exercise his military expertise, even if it was relegated to the likes of non-combative support in the background (Wei Ying had none, and didn't get into any fights that he could learn a lesson or two, the little gremlin inside Lan Zhan's jealous heart snickered; 1 for hubby, 0 for wife-y, even though the hubby lost in almost every other aspect in comparison.)

The more sexual abuse and torture, of being tricked and drugged into engaging in demonic soul-sucking sex, the more humorous and ridiculous Wei Ying found the husband's story to be. He couldn't believe how plain stupid and oblivious his beloved darling man could be, a loser with a capital L atop his family's surname, in the face of such mundane threats from a perverted incestuous elder brother and his two accomplices who weren't even of the same species. However, Wei Ying had been married long enough with Lan Zhan, and they've been through enough ups and downs through lifetimes, that he reined in his most extreme teasing and lovely bullying, and settled to simply laugh, laugh, and laugh again at the husband's expense of misfortunes and suffering - but in actual fact, the couple knew that laughter is the best medicine, and that when the wife laughs, he is happy and so is the husband - hence, the act of rolling around in the small enclosed space reeking of sweat and sex after they've enjoyed joining their bodies too many times in the span of hours - actually, just minutes in reality, because Wei Ying cast a space-time bubble spell before they entered the room with their sexual romps, and he knew the husband couldn't think straight anyway, not when they'd not met, hugged, kissed, talked, and stick their penises into each other's familiar comforting inner warmth for the last three months.

"Wei Ying," Lan Zhan murmured, when he finally caught the pee and semen-soiled human rolling pin that had been going round and round their little love nest in space-time, emitting hiccupy and hearty boisterous laughter, "Wei Ying, now that we have the complete picture of what transpired since Spring to Summer, what do we do next? I cannot stay here forever, because I still need to serve drinks before the conference starts in proper tonight."

Wei Ying took a few deep breaths and regained his cheerful demeanour without devolving into laughter, and sat on the floor with his back against a wall - the one and only chair in the room had been turned into splintered wood after just one round of hard fucking. His face became one that is more serious, and he placed a reassuring hand on the husband's.

"We'll figure something out, and this time, with your holo-phone and our shared mental connections patched up to that of near-61st century's technology, we'll stay connected for good since everything is embedded seamlessly into our body, mind and soul," Wei Ying replied, and placed a warm but sticky hand on Lan Zhan's cheek; the husband leaned into the touch, because he really relished in Wei Ying's affections, smelly or cumencrusted or not. “I need to talk to Jiang Cheng as the Patriarch of the clan to get you out with a valid reason that not even your brother and those two imposter yaoguai leaders can refuse,” he added with a persuasive wink.

Lan Zhan couldn't help but to tip forward on his knees and place a sweet, loving kiss on Wei Ying's lips, filled with unspoken promises - because no words are needed between the two - and Sorry's for the three-month coitus interruptus between their blossoming love, and Thank You's for being by his side no matter what circumstances - because they'd agreed lifetimes ago, that apologies and gratitude need not be verbally expressed between husband and wife who had joined in holy matrimony many lifetimes ago.

“I love you so much, Wei Ying.” That was the next best thing the husband could think of, to demonstrate his feelings for the wife.

“No, silly fool, you love my sexy gay ass.”

“Mn. I love your sexy gay ass, and will follow you back to Yunmeng.”

There, the promise is returned.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 222

The Conference of Demonic Cultivation runs for three nights, during which Lan Zhan's genitals get a rare break from his usual night-long sexual abuse by the Venerated Triad. Wei Ying eventually hatched a sneaky plan to rescue the husband out of the sex dungeon, and asked Ernie to carry out the mother's orders. The cold black slimy thing gleefully leapt out of the man's pubic hair, and magically transformed into a fine young handsome Yunmeng Jiang guard, fully equipped with robes, weapons and lotus insignias emblazoned on the chestplate. With a grand salute, the guard with blackened eyes marched off briskly to do the needful.

"I could've just plucked any other body hair, blow 'em, and make zillions of soldiers and magical demi-god warriors, but that's too much hassle, and I'd hate it if they regrow to more than what I already have," Wei Ying remarked, referring to the point that he is a distant reincarnate of the legendary Monkey King, Sun Wukong. He lowered his shirt after showing the husband that yes, he has a very hairy chest, belly, back and everywhere else, and his hypertrichosis is worse than a caveman brute's; deep down, though, Lan Zhan finds Wei Ying's hairiness quite endearing, and he secretly delights in having Wei Ying's hairy limbs and chest rubbing against his smoother, lightly-fuzzed ones - there's an unspoken sexiness of another man rubbing his manly scent off you and giving you amazing ticklish tactile stimulations.

"Mn," Lan Zhan agreed, and thankfully, the flames in his loins have been sated for the time being, and their reunion conjugal love making turned him back to the normally stoic, expressionless and very calm logical man that he always was, "No matter how much body hair you have, Wei Ying, you'll always be my one and only," and reached out to pull the surprised younger man to his chest, to kiss his forehead, and let lovely Wei Ying listen to his strong, assuring heartbeat.

Wei Ying squealed in coy embarrassment at the affection; they were sitting cross-legged on the floor of Lan Zhan's room inside the Nie fortress, sorting through his belongings to decide what to pack, or not, for his upcoming trip to the Jiang's. Earlier, the husband did question the wife why the latter wasn't involved in the Conference, given that he was the greatest grand master of Demonic Cultivation, that is, the Dark Arts, and surely he wouldn't be able to sit still while yaoguai gathered to essentially sing praises and worship his legacy and great achievements in spreading Darkness across the world. Wei Ying toot-tooted the husband's premature conclusion, and explained that although he was the most eligible Demonic Cultivator should he decide to reveal himself - but he did not, how clever of him -, "Let's say that I play the game by using my Sun Wukong trump card and insist that I'm a distant relative of a demi-god, to request for entrance to the Conference. Then, shouldn't you also say that Nie Mingjue's parasitic yaoguai is a cousin of Niu Mo Wang, the leader and champion of the infamous Zodiac Demons, that you're a sworn brother and a lover of his, to enter as well? Mind you, there's also another Monkey-descendent yaoguai mingling amongst the guests in the Conference as one of those Zodiac Demons, and yet I'm sitting here, playing house with you."

Lan Zhan gave the thought a few moments of consideration. Then, he shrugged and shook his head, "No. I'm barred from joining the main Conference sessions by the strict orders of the Triad. I mistakenly believed the cause to be my non-protagonist status in this reality, but now I know better. The Conference isn't to gather the greatest minds of the Demonic Cultivation world to progress the common needs of the cultivation civilization, but one to satisfy the Triad's personal agenda to network, form more brotherhoods and strengthen their forces with alliances for their own selfish gains. Chifeng Zun did mention, and Lianfang Zun confirmed, that one of the purposes of holding this party is for the bull-heads yaoguai to reunite after so many battles fought." Lan Zhan scratched his chin thoughtfully.

“See?” the wife chuckled, “ Lao gong , perhaps in other realities and lifetimes to come, I will truly be the greatest grandmaster of the Demonic Cultivation world, and I’ll personally organize the biggest, bestest and grandest Conference for our kins, including the yaoguai . We can have a bad-ass wedding ceremony to renew our vows, and have zillions of yaoguai and demons witness and cheer for our eternal love!” in which Wei Ying giggled like a boy with his head up in the clouds with fantastical dreams, and Lan Zhan couldn’t resist to embrace his adulating wife and give the latter more sweet kisses on the cheeks for selfishly putting their marital relationship above everything else.

After making out for a short while - such a lovey-dovey couple they are -, the couple resumed packing the husband’s suitcase, which was really, just beneath his skin. The wife went to great lengths to inspect every piece that the husband had gathered for the trip back to the wife’s home - be it a garment, a brand new five-ply king-sized bed commissioned from the best furniture stores in the North, trinkets gifted by his incestuous brotherhood lovers, a table full of food because servants always fed him a little too well whilst he was caged in his sex dungeon, magical soul-sabers and other legendary Nie armaments stolen from Chifeng Zun’s bedroom, a whole cupboard filled with the finest selections of poisons and potions from Lianfang Zun’s personal collection, heirloom Gusu Lan relics that Zewu Jun brought with him to Qinghe but that man never really bothered about those after falling blindly in love by the bewitching A-Yao - so Lan Zhan could easily bag them into a satchel and nobody batted an eyelid; and a limited edition custom-made set of dildoes made from P-Cool’s greatest craftsmen.

Wei Ying was delighted to find the husband’s secret stash of sex toys kept under the bed - bamboo phalluses shaped to perfectly match the Venerated Triad members’ penises, in terms of length, girth, angle of curvature, matching veins and foreskin folds, even the odd wart and birthmark. They were used by the husband when they went outdoors to join military campaigns, and sometimes when battles lasted for days, the man would feel awfully lonely during the nights on an empty bunk bed that he'd been used to have gangbangs and foursome orgies - that he'd stick those dildoes into his ass and pleasure himself with them alternating one with another, or stuffing all three into his goatse-d anus.

First, he unzipped his pants and pulled out his dick, gave it a good rub to make it stiff, and measured his own penis with the quite bendable and bouncy bamboo-made phallus labelled: A-Yao di . “Hmm, not bad for the one who historically masterminded my death long ago. Surprisingly it's about the same length as mine,” the wife remarked and shook his cock and slapped it against the nearly six-inch dildo christened as Jin Guangyao's. Finding nothing more of interest, because A-Yao di was quite smooth and didn't have many redeeming qualities, bumps and ugly-looking veins, Wei Ying tossed the dildo into the satchel where it came from.

Next, was a seven-incher monster, and Wei Ying couldn't resist swinging it like an overripe plantain banana fruit, and then giggling at the sight of a long, sagging phallus doink-doink 'ing from side to side like a metronome. A-Huan ge - it's given such an intimate familial name - is disturbingly impressive in diameter and length, and has a prominent mushroom-like head that makes it look more like a vegetable, or a scary-looking penis-gourd, than the actual functional organ itself. There are a lot more fleshy folds, veins and what looks like a stretchy foreskin carved to the phallus, plus the extra curve makes it appealing as a perfect aerodynamically designed anal plug; sleek and lethal, bulging where it should, dips where it would, the graceful gentleman's Liebing that promises to make men cry out with pleasure because its perfect angle of attack to the prostate is second to none.

Lan Zhan wanted to warn the wife that he'd used A-Huan ge the most during cold lonely nights in bunk beds, so it was rather dirty and sullied, in a hygienic sense, since it stayed inside Lan Zhan's grasping rectum the longest and sometimes remained unwashed for days when the man decided that it felt too good not to take it out from sunrise to the next sunrise - “Wei Ying, don’t--” was all he managed to gasp, but it was too late, because Wei Ying had already peeled off his pants and shoved A-Huan ge into his anus without preparation. The pleasing tapered, sleek and curved shape of A-Huan ge meant that ample stretching was not really needed beforehand. Thus, the husband was forced to watch how the wife spread his legs on the floor and raised his hips, while riding lovely A-Huan ge like a real male prostitute, and Wei Ying aaahn’d unrestrained in the soundproofed room, because that fake penis felt really, really good in his ass. Cuck’ed by a sex toy, Lan Zhan felt an strange, titillating sexual thrill - that his wife was being bred, fucked and sexually assaulted by his own blood-brother right in front of him, in a literal sense, and that wife screamed A-Huan’s name as he started to spill seed carelessly after mere minutes of vigorous, intense pistoning movements between his buttocks - A-Huan ge is really, really, that awesome in making men cum from getting banged in the ass, Wei Ying declared with conviction.

Still catching his breath, Wei Ying gave the smelly, grimy, slick, well-used A-Huan ge a parting kiss when they - the new couple of Wei Wu Xian and A-Huan ge the bamboo dildo - were done making sweet love on the floor. He handed it to Lan Zhan to clean up and stow away in the satchel of P-Cool sex toys, and instructed the husband to make more copies for the wife’s personal use later. Lan Zhan sighed and “Mn”-ed, not realizing that he had unconsciously been masturbating his own arousal with a hand fiddling inside his own trousers while fantasizing being cheated in unreal images of his brother and the dildo namesake breeding his lustful swinger wife.

Lastly, Wei Ying’s eyes went wide with glee and he sported an intoxicated crooked, giddy grin, when he carefully picked up the king of all kings, the dildo modelled after Nie Mingjue’s awesome manhood, nestled in a bed of rippling silk and cotton, housed its own richly embroidered box with patterns of sabers and warriors carved on the surface, reminiscent of ancient Nie dynasty decadence. “I haven’t used this before... yet,” Lan Zhan murmured with heavy-lidded eyes, as he watched with heavy breathing, and his hands fluttered faster between his legs, at the sight of his wife lavishing kisses on the phallus’ sweet spot just beneath the humongous spongy-looking glans, then wiggled a tongue into the tasty cockslit just like he’d always done to the husband with his forked tool. “Lao gong , since it’s pristine and virginal in its condition, you’ve the right to do the honours and perform an opening ceremony on it,” Wei Ying sent a sly, debauched look to the other, while energetically moving both hands up and down the giant curved, and muscular-looking bamboo rod, making squeak-squeak sounds with it “... but count me in when you do, okay? Your wife wants a share of this splendid male phallus specimen with his beloved darling stud husband too,” and gave a last long circular oval five-star sexy slithering lllllllick with his long tongue.

Lan Zhan found the sight of his wife pleasuring another man’s penis - at least a replica - to be extremely lewd, vulgar and shameless, and he arched his back then tilted his head and closed his eyes. His fingers moved faster and faster in his pants, dancing across and over the outlines of his burgeoning, excited erection until it twitched, jerked powerfully, and convulsed with yummy penile contractions - and one-two creams inside his pants; the husband nnnnhs.

-- and “Mn.”

.

A reunion photo is a must, for lovers who have not seen each other in three months. So, after yet another round of crazy monkey sex using A-Yao di and A-Huan ge , with plenty of semen spilled out from the extra stimulation of dildoes drilling in and out kinetically of men's anuses - the prized giant amongst phalluses remained untouched, for now - they took a commemorative picture with their holo-phones and uploaded everything into the family's cloud drive, including Ernie's quick scan-and-capture bio-data of the entire liberated Qinghe province and everything inside the Nie stronghold, including its leaders and occupants. For the photo that was to be uploaded into a folder named after brotherly love and brotherhoods, they symbolically and playfully posed with the dildoes, such as having dildoes aimed at their buttocks while giving coy looks, sexy stances and pouty lips; posing having sex with dildoes such as spreading their legs or doing it cowgirl style; and the classic formation, that is, they measured and lined up the dildoes and penises according to size and length, starting from A-Yao di from the left, Wei Ying's erect and happy penis, side-by-side with Lan Zhan's passable over-six incher with a bit of encouragement, jerking off and careful maneuver of limbs for the best angle for the shot, and next up was A-Huan ge which was held up by Wei Ying because it became the wife's favourite sex toy, and lastly to the right, the great penis of Nie Mingjue still in its decorated bamboo box packaging with see-through silk - all poses were directed by Wei Ying, of course, and the husband simply turned beet-red with shame for each increasingly shameful snapshot.

Then, right on cue, Ernie returned to Lan Zhan's room, and informed the couple that arrangements have been made. The handsome fine young Jiang guard with blackened eyes bowed respectfully with folded hands at the front, though he raised an eyebrow at how the couple posed happily with strange dildoes with their naked penises for a photoshoot - but said nothing else; because demonic cold black things have no use for dildoes, and do not have any appreciation for bamboo replica of men's penises.

When asked about the latest reports from the Kingdom, Ernie gave a laundry list of updates, and with a smile that comes with a glint, he also mentioned that the reunion photos had made their way to the Top Pictures Of The Year in ErNet, and that since the Grand Patriarch's ErNet connection was restored after the software patch, his entire three-month ordeal was finally streamed through all social media platforms at no charge and no paid subscriptions needed. The Council of Elders of the Kingdom has unanimously declared a one-day holiday because every citizen wanted to binge-watch His Highness' sexual escapades with the Venerated Triad and would call in sick for work anyway. Already, Ernie snickered with delight and rubbed his hands greasily, the Grand Patriarch's homosexual sausage fest videos have knocked off the Grand Matriarch's three-month heterosexual orgyfest from the top spot - in which Ernie started a business to sell licensed merchandise and sex toys since he was a legit Son of the royal couple and could legally fill his bank account with enough profits from his parents' swinger-cum-cheater bedroom romps to last many lifetimes - Wei Ying hnn'ed with disdain at how easily Lan Zhan became a superstar while getting pounded and doing nothing else, while he had to work hard to make babies because that was the inherent downside of a heterosexual harem-esque lifestyle.

Later, Lan Zhan put on his clothes and began to touch each item marked by Wei Ying as those to be brought along their never-ending journey that would soon take place in Yunmeng; with near-61st century technology embedded inside is new 3d-biscuit-made body, everything he touched and willed to take, glowed brightly but very briefly into a ball of bluish light, before getting absorbed into the man's fingertip to be stored in vast infinite network of warehouses that naturally exists within Lan Zhan's incredible body.

"I'll go ahead first, lao gong . Meet me at my room, which is the third guest room just down the hallway and to the right. We'll talk with shijie and Wen Qing, so that when my brother returns from the Conference tea-break, we can all sit down and talk," Wei Ying hopped while putting on his last shoe, and waved back at the husband like he was about to go to work. The husband's face darkened a bit with jealousy at the names of Wei Ying's wives - who bore his children, no less! -, but he regained his composure almost immediately especially when he placated himself with thoughts that this entire merry-go-round game of getting hitched and cheated was a fallacy, and reasoned that Wei Ying still places the husband as his Number One above all other men and women. He nodded and Wei Ying walked out of the door.

.

The Conference was in full swing, so the hallways were relatively deserted other than a few yaoguai patrol guards on duty. The Nie fortress is a vast tower-like building with many floors above, just as with many levels beneath. However, Wei Ying was also a non-Conference attendee, so he was restricted to the ground floor where the reception was held to welcome participating sects, and the first floor, where the majority of standard guest rooms were located, as well as Lan Zhan's personal room - because the husband was sadly, not a prominent figure in this yaoguai -dominated reality and landscape, and remained as the triad's fucktoy who fights with a broadsword and a guqin.

Wei Ying skipped and jogged his way back to the block of guest rooms designated for the Jiang sect, and he took the chance to peer into closets and storerooms, and touched the stone walls to appreciate the ancient symbols and pictures carved into those century-old structures. The organizers had booked him and his shijie a room, though it wasn't the best or the largest suite because that was reserved for the Sect Leader, which was Jiang Cheng and Wen Qing, of course. Wen Ning got a room to himself, and being the brother of the sect's queen, he was considered second-in-line in terms of privileges in a patriarchal society; Wei Ying was considered an opportunistic external addition to the family, and Jiang Yan Li, being female, in this day and age where gender inequality and females being dubbed the inferior sex was the norm, together they were at the third level down the Jiang family tree. Not wanting to complicate the situation further, Wei Ying walked past the second guest room, and hurriedly entered his, where two lovely ladies have been summoned to wait inside, then he closed the door with a crisp click !

Hardly two minutes after Wei Ying entered his room, he was already undressed again - it was becoming a chore to keep his clothes on -, and gladly settled down on the bed, atop a naked and waiting shijie , who coo'ed "A-Xian, A-Xian you're back. Jiejie missed you during dinnertime, is everything okay? A-Qing da jie brought some food here when she said you had a meeting and would return later to eat." She spread her legs wider to accommodate her husband, and the happy man grunted something incoherent in response because he had already inserted his erect penis into her pregnant flower, and speared excitedly in and out the grasping warm wet flesh, just as what husbands are supposed to do when they return from outside and they're greeted by their sexy fertile wives with free offers of raw bareback sex. His hands molested and caressed the bulge that was her belly - another batch of incestuous daughters are on their way - and relished in feeling multiple heartbeats throbbing from the veiny, stretched skin, and did not ask for permission to dreamily, violently suck both her milkjugs filled with a pregnant lactating mother's milky sweet goodness; stealing milk from the babies had become one of Wei Ying's favourite pastime.

Wen Qing emerged from an attached bathroom, fresh and steaming after a refreshing dip - a luxury in the accommodations provided by the rich Nie family, of course - and she hastily sprinted to the bed, because she was always getting seconds from her favourite man despite her higher rank in the hierarchy of the Jiangs. The lucky double-husband wasn't too keen with A-Qing jiejie because she is a bit thin and flat for his tastes, lacking the voluptuousness of Yan Li, and she always wears a fierce or jealous expression, but he indulged in her wordless request anyway to avoid any queenie wraths later on; so with both women lined up side by side on the king-sized bed, the hubby worked hard to fuck and breed alternately between two heavily pregnant wives, ten fucks each, eliciting satisfied squeals and trembling hips and thighs as they try to pleasure the fortuitous man and keep him inside their vaginas for as long as possible.

“Xian didi ,” it was Wen Qing’s turn to coo as she tried to copy A-Li xiao jie , but her personality and background being as bland and boring as a cutout from a cardboard - because she was created from Jiang Cheng’s limited knowledge about her actual identity and from few selected rose-tinted interactions he could barely remember from sixteen years before -, so Wei Ying doesn’t pay much attention to her anyway, “The food is on the table, please eat your fill before it gets cold. Our baby also needs to eat, so please, didi , shoot your fatherly milk into Qing jiejie ’s womb. Pretty please?” and she fluttered her eyes with a rather unsexy crooked grin, which made Wei Ying cringe inwardly, but he obliged, and switched to shoving his very, very excited penis - damn that organ for being weak to physical pleasures rather than pure love - deep, screwing and pounding hard against that woman’s uterus; he didn’t want to make her cross since she was the queen, so he had nothing to lose by orgasming inside A-Qing jiejie and ejaculating a couple of half-hearted loads inside her to shut her insatiable trap and quieten that unwanted demonic brat baking inside her oven, and saving his best, more virile, and creamiest semen for lovely pregnant Jiang Yan Li.

Fortunately, all rooms were soundproofed, so Wen Ning remained in the dark and out of the scene, where he happily read a few magazines and taught himself a few new words, and watched magically recorded puppet play projected from special reverse-Eye talismans; both entertainment options and a few more were offered to guests of the Nie stronghold, perfect for bachelors like A-Ning to while the night away. He never really caught on the fact that his older sister was cheating on the Jiang Sect Leader and spreading her legs for his best friend to fuck with wild abandon and implant babies inside her - again, and in fact, for all his nephews and nieces that’d been born in the past weeks, bearing suspiciously alike facial features as his buddy’s; but A-Ning wasn’t too bright to begin with, and never really noticed the string of coincidences.

Later, Wei Ying ate his take-out dinner on the table - with a customary thanks to A-Qing jiejie who did a servant's job of bringing in-room dining services to her favourite man, without hesitation - while getting his dick serviced from beneath the table by his two pregnant wives. Wen Qing brought back too much food, so there was plenty of leftovers that would be destined for the garbage dump later, but housekeeping would have to wait because right after eating his fill, Wei Ying went back to fucking his wives and spilling more seeds into them with many, many manly roars, grunts and howls of pure blinding pleasure that defines the pinnacle of Mankind's existence, that is, to go forth, breed and propagate, and sow his wildest seeds inside every single fertile female he can get his greedy hands on.

So, it wasn't a shock when Lan Zhan politely knocked on the door that was left unlocked, and he entered before graciously locking it - such an irresponsible person, that Wei Ying, he told himself wryly -, and was greeted by the vulgar but very erotic heterosexual imagery wrecking carnage on the unfortunate soiled king-sized bed made by Qinghe's finest craftsmen. He'd finished packing his own metaphorical suitcase, and had caught up with the latest news, WeiChat messages, WeiTube videos and work e-mails from ErNet, and even made a few trips into his pocket-sized floor mat to distant universes to numb his loins - so, seeing Wei Ying huffing and puffing like a beast in mating heat while raping two pregnant women whom he barely recognized - was nothing of significance nor consequences.

“Hnn... mmh... aaahn... lao gong , there's some leftovers on the table. Uuunhn... you probably didn't eat much... nnnhgh... while working as a waiter at the gardens earlier to serve cocktails.... Unh-unh-unh, oh yeah I'm cumming, fuck yeah... nnnh... so eat up, and we'll talk right after I'm done with these two... ooh baby, I'm shootin' all over my unborn babies inside! Oooh! Oooh! Drink my sperm!... these two... uuh, hah... two wenches... hnnngh!”

It was a bit hard to understand what the sexually promiscuous man was trying to say when he's in the throes of baby-making ecstasy, but Lan Zhan got the message, thanks to their shiny brand new upgraded mental connection. The two yaoguai disguised as past heroines, tarnishing the very identities they stole with such lascivious and immoral acts, seemed too out of it to realize that their shared husband just called another man ' lao gong ' - which showed just how oblivious and ill-mannered this branch of yaoguai is, and how weak they are to the pleasures of the flesh. In any case, Lan Zhan obeyed like a good husband to his wife's orders, sat down politely, and quietly ate his cooled sloppy seconds of rice and noodles with some chilled meat, vegetables and soups, even a wrinkly piece of fruit that seemed to be left out for too long - while watching with hungry eyes at how his wife's pumping hips between gaping succulent and soul-sucking vaginas made infidelity and cuckold-ery look so bad-ass awesome in the eyes of those who worship men destined for greatness, upon the creaking king-sized bed.

(And later, through coaxing yaoguai -imposter Yan Li to cast Dark magic to corrupt the space in the bedroom to open an illegal portal, and let some of Wei Ying's ill-gotten offsprings through - Lan Zhan got an eyeful of how a wife-daddy Wei make sweet love and sweeter babies inside twelve-year olds' preteen pussies, and then steal his grandchildren's breast milk from their moms because as daddy, he commands his daughters to do his bidding and feed him their developing breasts and better yet, serving their baby-making fertility on a silver platter to the amazing daddy-dick, where they belong. But that entire pedophilic and incestuous, sordid episode is best left for another lifetime's reality.)

Jiang Yan Li, Lan Zhan realized, was not the Jiang gu niang he remembered, because she was made out of Jiang Cheng's most vivid and best-loved memories of a loving, gentle, kind and polite young woman who always had to mediate her brothers' quarrels. She was soft-spoken, well-mannered, demure, friendly and approachable, and pleasing to the eyes and her outlook - in other words, possessing no interesting and fiery, intriguing and exciting qualities that would usually keep a wandering man like Wei Ying in attention for long. She was a pretty barbie doll that men can use and enjoy for body warmth, physical comfort, sisterly hugs and kisses and great sex; many would have no qualms treating a person like her as a disposable wench made to be bedded bareback, to be paraded as a trophy wife with no brains but jaw-dropping beauty, then relegated to the likes of willing baby-making factories to birth as many children and to raise them like a good mother should. No wonder Wei Ying had an incredible time living out his dreams of marrying and having crazy monkey sex with his brother's fantasized version of the shijie, because the Jiang Yan Li that Wei Ying remembered had more character, more fire in her soul, more bite to her punch, and he also spent more years growing up with her during their childhood and had more realistic recollections of her personality, intelligence, and their unforgettable, insightful and cherished conversations.

Fake Wen Qing was even more disappointing, that Lan Zhan had nothing good to say about the memories that wove into her very existence, because she became a bimbo who was indulgent in lavish lifestyles (with an in-built obsession for combs, in particular), spoiled by her rich in-laws, although she seemed to be a nice doctor-cum-nurse in that she was attentive to a man's bodily needs, and she was generally nice with moments of jealousy and of refusing a man's advances - so it bode well for Wei Ying, whom she worked hard to seduce and gain favours from, while she easily rejected her wedded first husband - Lan Zhan also learned that Jiang Cheng had not succeeded in consummating his marriage with Queen Wen Qing three months after their grand wedding ceremony at the Lotus Pier, because she spiked his wine every night and the next day, after spending hours overnight with her new writhing, jerking, moaning older brother-in-law convulsing excitedly and pumping fresh sperm inside her, before sneaking back into her proper bedroom at dawn, she declared that the baby conceived her belly belonged to the Sect Leader's, with much fanfare and celebration, good food and good wines, of course - such a good little cheating liar, Lan Zhan thought.

In conclusion, as Lan Zhan summed up, Jiang Wanyin was truly an ignorant fool and a very dense, gullible man indeed, to have created such a disastrous batch of yaoguai females and family members to secure the ruined prestige of the Yunmeng Jiang sect.

When the wife was done with a final round of noisy sex filled with sexy fertile sounds, he joined the husband at the table for a plate of candied snacks, and the pleasantly surprised and fully naked jiejie s followed as well, like bitches bewitched by their alpha male. Soon, Lan Zhan found himself uncomfortably squeezed between two naked pregnant and formidable-looking women, because they wanted to get to know him better - these fake jiejie s had zero knowledge of the legendary figure named Lan Wang Ji, such blasphemy indeed! - and already showed sexual interest in his quite attractive sculptured body too - plus, Lan Zhan constantly emitted a certain level of yummy qi compared to the wife who had cleverly hidden his since day one in this twisted, perverse reality.

“Lan Zhan, if you want, you can taste Jiang gu niang ’s juicy vagina and have a poke at A-Qing jiejie ’s unborn child too,” Wei Ying wiped sweat off his body with a dirtied washcloth while sucking on a candied apple wedge, and started to put on his clothes after such a invigorating post-dinner aerobics exercise. He made sure to pick out the drying strands of spent cum and sticky female juices from his pubes, because he knew Ernie would be dismayed to find his dwelling tainted by the scents of females that aren’t his mother’s.

Lan Zhan, ever the gentleman, politely declined with a shake of head, and that elicited whines and disappointment from the two high-ranking Jiang family women. The older man stuck to his principle of loving only his one and only soulmate, after all.

“What a spoil sport!” Wei Ying exclaimed, then suddenly, he grabbed all three at the table and hauled them up to the bed - again, and the naked man threw away his used washcloth to declare that they were going to have FMM threesomes and FFMM foursomes. Before Lan Zhan could fathom what those acronym meant, Jiang Yan Li and Wen Qing squealed and hissed with delight that only yaoguai females could - scary goosebumps, really - and proceeded to strip Lan Zhan to reveal, to everyone’s delight, that he’d maintained an impressive erection throughout his meal while watching his wife breeding other women.

Minutes later, Lan Zhan, who was now energized after his dinner, realized why he fell in love with Wei Ying and the brilliance of the man’s Wei Ying-ness all over again, when he finally saw the light at the end of the tunnel, metaphorically speaking; he actually enjoyed towering above and fucking Wei Ying’s ass, raw and bareback, because nothing else in the world is more lovely than the man’s puckered, slightly overused and loose anus and those lovely folds inside the rectum, whilst the latter went on to savour another round with one, or both lovely wives of the Jiang clan, missionary style. To the husband, the feeling of penetrating his dearest spouse who in turn penetrated deep, breedworthy pussies - it felt like one long tunnel for the train to ram in and out excitedly, energetically with everyone’s belly filled - and he still gets to own Wei Ying’s ass after all. Wei Ying became exceedingly drunken with the joys of fucking and being fucked - essentially turning into a human bagel sandwich - and spilled several more times uncontrollably because it felt too good especially with Lan Zhan weighing in with his awesome over-six incher adding to the orgy, so he made a few more extra babies inside those demonness’ multiple mutated uteruses and ovaries as their shared mutual after-dinner dessert.

At ten o’ clock at night, Lan Zhan felt a little sleepy not only because it was after his usual bedtime, but also because his loins felt very drained, well-exercised, and his body relaxed after going at it for several rounds, including a couple of forced copulations with Wei Ying’s wives because the wife-y insisted so since they were already naked on the bed. He had to slap himself on the cheeks and pinch his forearm to stay awake, after washing up, rubbing his face with a moistened warm washcloth and putting on his beige Nie-Jin robes - and for good reason; Errand-boy Ernie returned as scheduled, together with Sect Leader Jiang Cheng and totally oblivious Wen Ning into the room for an important Jiang family meeting.

(As a side note, Wei Ying coaxed Wen Qing this time to spare some demonic qi and open a corruption in space - a portal to warp in his pre-teen daughters. They rushed in one by one, naked and starving for another older man's affections, until the guest room became a classroom of underaged girls vying for sex with their newfound joy, that is, a true Uncle Lan in his mid-thirties busy pounding their Wei-daddy. Just in time, Wei Ying remarked, as he took a break from breeding his wives, and ordered his husband, the Uncle Lan, to take over and pleasure himself with his little girls. At that point, Lan Zhan was on the verge of cumming after being edged by a man's anus for a while, and he wondered how it'd feel to fuck his man-wife's daughter - would that be the classic seedy scene of a stepfather raping his own girls? Or an uncle forcing himself with great joy onto his step-nieces?

In any case, Lan Zhan couldn't refuse, not when he was getting desperate to ejaculate his babymakers - so while Wei Ying rested with two other useless, irredeemable wives who decided to rub each other during Wei gongzi's downtime, Lan Zhan went on to breed those little girls one by one, one giant penis slamming and orgasming happily inside their tight little deflowered tweens' vaginas, in the tune of rhythmic squelches and shrilly female moans, enjoyed on behalf of Wei Ying of course, whilst being called 'Uncle' and 'Daddy' for various reasons by those squealing prepubescent precocious children; Lan Zhan dreams of having joint custody of their step-granddaughters in the near future, because he's beginning to like little girls after tasting such good ones with his dick, after all. Then, as he turned to the side while pumping sweet man-milk into ten-year old's pussies, he watched, mesmerized at how Jiang Yan Li and Wen Qing engaged with pregnant lesbian sex play by licking each other's pink, moist, glistening pussies, mutually vibrating tongue and fingers for each other, before humping their kissy hairy crotches like a B-grade porn show fit for yaoguai consumption - and he grew very, very hard and excited, and crawled on all fours to ask whether he, an innocent masochistic Lan didi, could play with them too and be sandwiched between two lovely lesbian flowerbuds. Fortunately or not, that sort of trashy story is best relegated to the garbage bin, and never to see the light of reality, unless Lan Zhan says so.)

.

There were the usual man-hugs and handshakes, how are you doings and where have you beens, I've been well and yes, the summer weather is nice these days isn't it, and every other pleasantries known in Lan Zhan's limited vocabulary of social interaction niceties; it wasn't his first time greeting Jiang Cheng and Wen Ning after long separations, after all.

Wen Ning was easier to handle - he only had to steer the conversation to something about Wen Qing and her prestigious status, her stunning beauty, and exaggerate her kindness and finesse in a random skill, say, in the art of healing or the art of embroidery, and minus the fact that he had just bedded her and joined Wei Ying in fathering a child together through double-penile penetration inside her like a surrogate womb-vessel for two gay men - and Wei Ning was all praises and cheers for his awesome older sister. The initial awkwardness of having not seen each other since New Year's quickly dissipated, particularly after Lan Zhan cooked up a white lie about how whereabouts and his mundane but relatable lifestyle of living as a commoner before finding himself wandering into Nie country with his sibling, just as how Wen Ning was spirited to his sister's side - it seemed all roses and rainbows, and the former Ghost General was back to his good moods and spent most of the time sitting beside Wen Qing - who discreetly kept sending winks and pouty kisses at an increasingly flustered Lan Zhan, especially after seeing a little bump - a kick - from her bulging pregnant belly and he was momentarily alarmed if that baby was really his, Wei Ying's, or both men's, logged officially as another of Jiang Cheng's descendents. (It was all too confusing, really.)

Wei Ying, who had his hand around his shijie 's waist for most of the time as they talked over more snacks and desserts at their private conference table, took charge of diverting Jiang Cheng's attention and to goad him into agreeing into whatever they planned from the beginning. At first, the sneaky older stepbrother buttered up to his Sect Leader didi by asking, almost begging shamelessly about what the latter had encountered during the first couple of hours of the Conference. Jiang Cheng's nose grew inches longer, and he started to talk, sometimes boasted about who he met, whom he exchanged business cards with, how individual yaoguai sect leaders praised about the Yunmeng Jiang's great strength with two famous clans combined, yada yada and yadas. The first bit of the Conference consisted mostly of boring welcoming speeches, keynote addresses from yaoguai leaders and champions including some prominent members of the notorious Zodiac Demon band, and networking over good food and wine; Jiang Cheng complained that the conference served strange foods that looked like human parts but tasted like pork and chicken, and really tasty wines that run as red as blood (oh, the fool.), and for fun and games, the demons had tied up spread-eagled boys, girls, men and women on stone tables to presumably perform magical experiments to showcase their skills; Jiang Cheng arrogantly claimed that he was above mere rookie magicians trying to impress the higher-ups with hocus-pocus mumbo-jumbos, so he left those thronging crowds huddling around each table like stalls in a bustling market, and spent the time hanging out with fellow sect leaders, not followers. (oh, if only he'd stoop lower and open his eyes to the reality around him, he'd see rope-tied human victims being terrorized and gangraped, then mauled and eaten alive by those so-called yaoguai followers, at dinner time.)

It helped that Jiang Yan Li applauded her didi 's showmanship in carrying himself like an admirable leader of an up-and-coming political power from the western reaches of the country, and she complimented how he must've impressed the other yaoguai chiefs and lords based on the number of business cards he'd brought back - Jiang Cheng's pride swelled immensely at that point. With the jiejie s doing a good job to keep everything in check as planned, Lan Zhan bravely ventured a bit to ask, "How is Jin Ling?", because he remembered that around New Year's day, Jiang Cheng was furious and held a bitter grudge after learning that Zewu Jun sexually assaulted the sixteen-year old boy, and also, how the boy would react with a false image of his deceased mother now walking in the land of living. Jin Ling was last heard staying with his uncle, to Lan Zhan's knowledge.

"Jin... who?"

Wei Ying stepped in almost too hastily, "Ahh... Jin... Jin Guangyao! Did you manage to exchange business cards with one of Lan er gongzi 's sworn brothers? That very rich man... he'll inherit those vast treasures of the lost Jin kingdom once the Venerated Triad reclaims the land from the Imperial army. He could fund our future clan's expansion..." and mumbled something believable about forging alliances between faraway sects. The words 'rich' and 'treasures' caught the attention of both women, and soon, they shifted from their seats to clamber and cling to their new favourite intra-familial brother and husband, to Wei Ying's dismay.

The Wei wife-y grabbed the Lan husband's arm almost too painfully and nearly wrench it out of its socket, then pulled the latter to the side, leaving Jiang Sect Leader to ponder over a new business proposal with the top two women in his life, and an excited Wen Ning joined in too. He hissed below his breath, "Have you lost your mind?! My brother already had his mind brainwashed by the yaoguai , just as yours has his golden core turned to black as coal. His eyes are misted with magic, he sees only the good in yaoguai society, and his senses are warped. He has no recollection of Jin Ling or any of his friends, not since he was seduced by Dark spirits pretending to be Jiang Yan Li and Wen Qing shortly after they appeared during the week of New Year. Don't break his illusion, not when he actually witnessed the loss of his nephew. If he did, and remembered any of it, he'd break apart instantly and his fragile soul would be damaged beyond repair, even to the extent that's worse than Nie Huaisang's!"

Lan Zhan's breath hitched. "What happened?" he had to ask, while stealing a glance at the direction of the Jiang Sect Leader who was momentarily confused at Wei Ying's rash behaviour, but quickly dropped that when Wen Qing started touching his face and spoke kind and praising words for the man who not only ruled the Jiang sect, but also was destined for great riches and treasures.

Wei Ying rolled his eyes and gave an exasperated sigh aimed at Lan Zhan. "Look up WeiTube and watch my videos, won't you? I sent Ernie back in time when I realized the trio wasn't around and he brought back videos filmed from the past. Jin Ling was devoured by the yaoguai when the first wave hit; he bravely defended the Lotus Pier from fierce corpses and the unstoppable and untouchable Dark phantoms, but ultimately that sacrifice wasn't enough. Si Zhui, being as inexperienced and a virgin like Jin Ling, fell into the hands of succubus yaoguai that same day, just hours apart. Jing Yi was gone by then, with a smile on his face and a bang between the legs, just like any other victim." He shrugged at the shell-shocked Lan Zhan.

"I was angry too, but that was months ago. So much has happened between Nieshan and here in Nie's fortress, so I urge you to subscribe to my paid WeiTube channel and watch my videos to understand what I've been through. I'm now married to yaoguai and started having families with them, and I live under the same roof as the same murderers of my loved ones. The passage of time and new, novel experiences and joys tend to numb oneself to the pains of the past, and skews one's perspective of what is right, what is wrong, and where revenge lies - or not. You'd feel the same too, wouldn't you? Would you kill Jin Guangyao tonight to avenge what he'd done sixteen years ago to the countless victims of the cultivation world, after seeing how much your older brother had fallen in love with him, and worse, how much of a celebrity he's become in the northern regions of the liberated Middle Kingdom?"

That gave Lan Zhan a pause for thought. He had to admit, the ill feelings he had towards others had somewhat extinguished over time, as new interests and challenges piled up on his daily life. In fact, fond memories about getting sucked by Jin Guangyao surfaced without restraint, and his pants started to tent a little, and he'd quite taken a liking to living the life of a carefree person whose sole purpose is dedicated to the joys of sex, and of course, to lovely Wei Ying. Perhaps he too, bore a streak of that evil gene he shared with his corrupted older brother, that is, after a lifetime of living as a virtuous noble warrior who saw only blacks and whites and of no shades of grey in between - now that he'd tasted crazy heights, spiralled into abysses, and became God, the Devil, the Lover and the Everything - should he not just simply live in the happiness of the moment, and never feel bitter nor look back with regrets?

Lan Zhan cocked his head towards Wen Ning, who looked as though he was getting into the excited chatter of grand plans for the Jiang family to make further political inroads, power and influence during the inaugural night of the sham Conference of the Demonic Cultivation. He did not need to ask, because Wei Ying could train the line of gaze and give a very clear, indisputable answer. The younger man placed his elbow on Lan Zhan's shoulder, like best buddies that they'd always been and much more, because it was a shared, heartwarming, "and they lived happily ever after" moment.

"Isn't he the happiest kid ever? He laughs and smiles, he's with his jiejie again and he's loved. He doesn't carry the pain and nightmares of being a fierce corpse given notorious names that scare people away. So what if he lost a few friends, but gained back the life he should have sixteen years ago, as a respected, loved gongzi in a happy family of two great clans?”

The man surnamed Lan couldn't think of an argument for his own case, whose personal happiness also hinged upon the closeness of family ties, renewed harmonious relationships between him and the community around him, and forgotten conflict and forgiven grudges and ill-will among different clans.

“Mn. He is, Wei Ying. He's happy, indeed.”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 223

By midnight of the first day of the Conference, Lan Zhan had managed to introduce Jiang Cheng to his sworn triad of brothers. It felt surreal, but it was meant to be that way, according to Wei Ying, who knew how the reality works more than anyone else; since the two resurrected Triad figures had little or no knowledge of the Jiang sect leader, whilst the third vaguely recalled anything since his golden core had turned black, and Jiang Cheng himself had his memories wiped out then reprogrammed along with his senses that drowned in demonic illusions and fantasies. They were accompanied by Jiang Yan Li, Wen Qing and Wen Ning to bolster the presence of the Jiang sect, and to make a good first impression to the Venerated Triad as delegates from the West; plus, Lan Zhan gave a few tips to Jiang Cheng on how to approach the triad and how to best behave to garner the best results - loud, boisterous and haughty in front of Nie Mingjue, full praises and falsified even exaggerated social etiquettes for Jin Guangyao, and to show restraint and spend more time talking about morals and virtues with Lan Xi Chen, also not to pay attention to Nie Huaisang who was seen constantly milling about working as a servant to the triad.

Of course, Wei Ying had no intention to be seen nor mentioned - because in the larger scheme of things, he was a nobody in the Jiang family other than a donor of male seed to the family's eldest daughter -, and Lan Zhan had to keep out of sight as well because there were strict orders that he shouldn't be seen near the conference grounds in the underground levels; thus, through some convoluted planning that was necessary but an inconvenience, the proper Jiang main family members joined the Conference around ten at night, while the remaining two used dumbwaiters that connected the guest rooms to the basement kitchens which gave Wei Ying and Lan Zhan access to infiltrate the yaoguai -filled halls beneath the Nie fortress. The two equipped themselves with fancy animal-themed half-masks and the paper fans gifted by Nie Huaisang on New Year's day, to complete their disguise and pose as Nie attendees, to avoid arousing suspicious from guards and servants tending to the conference participants' needs.

After leaving the Jiang family members including the two Wen individuals with the Venerated Triad - because Lan Zhan coerced Huaisang to bring the latter trio into a private meeting chamber where everyone else waited for the momentous meeting -, the two left quietly to mingle with the crowd and learned a bit more about what yaoguai from the lands beyond the North - Qinghe and Lanling -, and West - Yunmeng and Qishan - looked like, their varied cultures and impressive abilities, their prospects and desires for the future of a free world ruled by yaoguai , and so on.

The Conference turned out to be a farce, and Wei Ying had nothing good to say except the endless buffets served by the servants in all corners of the hall. “Look, lao gong ,” Wei Ying remarked, one arm hooked around the other’s because they could let down their guard and stroll relaxedly as insignificant, anonymous visitors in a hall packed with demons and monsters, “The yaoguai do not really have their own origins carved in stone and in history books, because they descended from illiterate, cruel and mindless beasts with no morals and virtues. So, they have a penchant for stealing other famous people’s identities - over there, the one wearing a beautiful golden mask, jewelled robes and twirling like a ballerina, it’s a false Crown Prince of the otherworldly ancient Xian Le Kingdom, and over there, just beside the obsidian pillar, are a bunch of prominent figures from the fictional Cang Qiong Mountains derived from a novel storybook.” The younger man pointed recognizable faces he’d read up from ErNet’s multiverse forums, from watching too many animated donghua on WeiTube, and from reading R-rated fantasy manhua from pirated sites. Lan Zhan simply, and curtly, told the spouse not to point fingers everywhere, lest they attract unwanted attraction, and he held onto Wei Ying’s hands tightly to make sure the latter’s fingers do not roam carelessly where they should not.

Within the cavernous hall and adjacent meeting rooms, there were focus group discussions on demonic philosophical stuff, and magical and acrobatic performances for clans to showcase their prowess and capabilities to others, lots of merrymaking, networking, good food and wine for hours on end. Safe with their Inability-enchanted masks, the two held hands and went around making acquaintances, picking out bite-sized snacks from the banquet tables, joining the thronging crowds of spectators and observers when something interesting was on display. They steered clear of the stone tables reserved for sexual revelry and orgy fests, though, because both had enough of cheating each other and living a morally-loose swinger's lifestyle earlier that evening - so they engaged in titillating voyeurism to watch how moaning maidens and virgin boys, that is, human slaves and survivors of the wars, were deflowered whilst being pinned on tables, and raped wildly and passionately by groups of humanoids and monstrous beasts from all directions, before getting devoured ala succubus and incubus style into a bloody, gory mess.

Hours later, Lan Zhan yawned and couldn't hold back from complaining that it felt as though he'd been meeting and greeting yaoguai -kin for ever inside the underground conference hall, although there was always something intellectual to listen to, or something novel he'd not seen nor heard before from clans of the distant lands. "Of course," Wei Ying gleefully chimed in, "High-level yaoguai have the ability to warp space and time, just like your two sworn brother yaoguai s, and even my two wives. This entire Conference is meant to be held in a space-time bubble of corrupted flow of those universal elements, so that a three-day conference can actually span as long as three years, if need be."

The husband sent a blasphemous look beneath the wooden mask of a white rabbit, one that wordlessly said, "I thought you and I, and our kins, were the only ones who can do that." Wei Ying didn't mind how the husband aired his grouse, having lived under a shell all these years, so he patiently elucidated the basics of space and time-warping magic:

Take the Bag of Holding, for instance, or its more mundane cousins, the qiankun pouch and sleeves for holding physical matter more than the actual space it takes up, and spirit-holding bags for storing spiritual matters - those definitions were taken straight out of websites, by the way, Wei Ying made that disclaimer very clear; cultivators have long manipulated space, and to some extent, time, when using magic. Rules had been created, such as the ones set up by the Grand Cultivation Council long ago and now rendered defunct, to make sure that people do not abuse such abilities that could easily twist space and time to their whims, resulting in unimaginable consequences, chaos and destruction.

Yaoguai , however, do not follow the rules of Men. The weaker, low-level ones, such as Wen Ning who is simply an oversized, over-muscled fierce corpse with little magical capability, and probably ninety-nine percent of lesser-evolved yaoguai that plague the lands recently, will not be able to take advantage of such corruption in magic-use. The top one percent of the population, such as the two Generals of the triad, the first two wives of Wei Wu Xian, and a handful of a privileged few who eventually ascended into demi-gods and sometimes, turn into deities themselves, can use such magic in with impunity. “Fortunately, anyone that tried to rebel and turn the entire world upside down are promptly put down with tranquilizers, chained to massive lightning rods, and beaten with feather dusters until the skin on their back scars and their buttocks blossom, so that they’d repent in tears while burning in fire and thunder strikes, and swear on their lives and souls not to break such cardinal rules - our Kingdom’s rules, that is. It’s just that these capture-and-release incidence are so trivial and quite rare, so these are not reported to the Heavenly Palace to your attention,” Wei Ying pooh-poohs the husband’s concern, and Lan Zhan had no other choice but to cede, take the answer at face value, and a resigned shrug with slightly annoyed pursed lips - his way of saying ‘Whatever’.

Still, Lan Zhan was compassionate and kind enough to insist that he should at least bid the Jiang family members a good night before leaving the conference-cum-orgyfest party. Wei Ying gave a ‘don’t say I didn’t warn you’ look, before following the husband back to the private meeting room where the conversation between Jiang Cheng and the Venerated Triad should’ve been concluded long ago. Just a peek, Wei Ying advised, and if what he sees doesn’t suit his tastes, he should just go. Lan Zhan wondered why he was given such a strange warning, but he proceeded anyway, pushed the door ajar a little, just to catch a glimpse.

True to the spirit of illogicalness and of inexplicable yaoguai mentality, Lan Zhan witnessed how a thrilled, very masculine and sexually flushed naked General Nie Mingjue went wild with hip-thrusting passion on the tabletop with pregnant Jiang Yan Li roaring shrilly with pleasure, spread-eagled beneath the hulking naked man; against the wall, General Jin Guangyao pulled out on all stops and greedily grasped pregnant Wen Qing’s breasts and hollowed his cheeks with each powerful suckle on her milkjug nipples, then raised her hips and brought one sexy leg up to hook around his back, so that they could engage in a tasty stand-up sex with lips locked lustfully, full of heavy breathing and tongue-play, and hands touching and molesting each other’s bodies inappropriately between two supposedly unrelated persons; Wen Ning seemed dazed and smiled drunkenly, though it was hard to smile when he was spitroasted between giving General Lan Xi Chen a blowjob while on all fours, and Nie Huaisang was sadly, body-controlled to become a human sex puppet fucking a cold, dead fierce corpse’s asshole - the man cried and sobbed uncomfortably as he complained loudly that he couldn’t understand why his limbs would not listen to him, and he kept apologizing to Wen Ning for doing such an uncouth act towards hi,, and the next thing he knew, he was made to bend down forward to reach for Wen Nings chilled, clammy erect dick and stroke it to completion, so the man bawled in disgust because he’d never touched a dead man’s ejaculated semen in his life, and it was probably diseased, foul-smelling, rotting and filled with vileness. Jiang Cheng was left talking to a wall, and rather animatedly; at one point he shoved his lotus-patterned business card to the cold, unforgiving stony surface, and the card obviously fell to the floor, but the man continued to bow and gestured to the wall - he was truly trapped in his own illusion of impressing no one but a make-believe interested crowd that appeared only inside his mind.

Having seen enough, Lan Zhan gently closed the door with a crisp click !, and tiredly informed the wife that he wanted to go to bed and wake up to forget everything he'd experienced during the first hours of the much-maligned Conference.

“What? And crawl up in that narrow dumbwaiter to miss the rest of the party when the night's still so young?” Wei Ying exclaimed in mock disappointment.

The husband looked at the wife expectantly with a thought bubble that spelled out ‘Then?’ proverbially floating above the head.

“You’re irredeemably hopeless, you dinosaur of spellcasting awesomeness who still, at this unbelievable day and age, - still - relies on his wife to keep him amused,” Wei Ying sighed dramatically and placed a hand over his black rabbit mask’s forehead. Then, he pulled Lan Zhan aside into a covert cul-de-sac that housed a large flower pot at the end, hidden away from the rest of the conference attendees. Wei Ying raised a hand and with his index finger, drew a vertical line from his line of sight, down, down all the way to the floor. The line split alluring from the middle, bulging out like an opening eye - or rather, if one stretched a heterosexual male’s imagination, like an opening enticing vagina.

Wei Ying bowed and gestured to the husband to take a step into the ad-hoc portal. “It leads to my underground kingdom, lao gong, that’s been spruced up and filled with new toys since we’re nearing the 61st century these day,” he said with a sly wink, “My concubines are in there, so are their children and everyone else’s whenever I’m on the road with no one to take care of them back at home. A-Ying and A-Mian gave birth earlier today, I think, and following the yaoguai’s biological and fertility cycle, they’re ready to conceive. They’re waiting for their stepfather, Uncle Lan.”

Lan Zhan shivered with a jolt of excitement and became fully awake - the sleepiness wore off instantly -, and found himself gravitating naturally to the dimly glowing portal. He pushed one pussy lip-like flap of the gateway to have a better look, and got an eyeful of pretty young girls of all ages, forms, shapes and sizes, including tasty-looking preteens going skinny dipping in a large bubbling pool framed with a scenery taken straight out of travel brochures to tropical paradises - sunny blue skies, sandy beach, palm fronds, laughing and squealing naked females prancing and strolling around, chilled tropical fruit juices served along with spread-eagled precocious bikini-less virgin girls showing their cunnies to their new visitor, coaxing him to take another step, and another step inside into the sexual wonderland of infinite vaginal sex, of proving one’s manhood and his god-tiered fertility, and of illegal babymaking with women whom he had not met nor will ever wed because they’re all so fresh, smooth, supple, juicy, wet and so, so, oh so very young and pretty sexy things.

“Uncle Lan, Uncle Lan, please come in and play with us!” some girls shouted coyly in unison from a distance, and began masturbating fully in sight in broad tropical daylight by rubbing between their legs and spreading their flowerbuds wide open, slick with fragrant pheromone-laden female juices that Lan Zhan hated to admit, that he really, really found addictive after Wei Ying’s. His pants were already gone, stolen by one brave girl who dared to dash to the front and unzip the garment, before making a quick getaway - such Wei Ying-ness, indeed. Having no pants left, he had no choice but to enter Wei Ying’s wonderland where going nude was the rule.

It was time to go wild with passion between those naughty little girls' legs, go forth and multiply, adding into the increasingly turbid and dirty genetic pool with his own and everyone's else's, and enjoy making babies with fertile offsprings of his wife - that is, his stepdaughters of sorts. Uncle Lan would rule the roost as the breeding alpha male of his expanded harem, gifted by his man-wife.

“If you prefer something old but gold, and comforting from familiarity, all my descendents made from me and your vast number of perfect Lan Wang Ji clones, and my baby Wei Ying clones are waiting in there too. They're mostly girls and they look like me, though, since I prefer to weed out competition... but there are some really good cunt-boys in my collection, if you're up to it,” the young man called out from behind with a despicable sneaky giggle, after the husband had stepped through gingerly like a wolf being welcomed in an Eden filled with tasty virgin lambs and underaged babes, and the portal was closing on its own like the zipper of a pair of pants being tugged up.

“See you in two!” - though, it was unclear if Wei Ying meant two minutes or two seconds, but Lan Zhan didn't mind. He'd have twenty-four thousand times the pedophilic and orgyfest fun playing with Wei Ying's sexy feminine playground, sleep enough while having sex, and return fully refreshed, invigorated, and very, very satisfied in the loins, indeed.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 224

Among the many notices hung on a stone wall to inform Conference attendees about updates from the proceedings, one particular parchment stood out. After several formal deliberations, a joint coalition of all free yaoguai was established and officiated during the three-day conference, in which a mega-federation of the Original Five Great Clans showed solidarity and formalized their alliance in the fight against terror, injustice and slavery. Liberated Qinghe would push for independence of their neighbouring province of Lanling to unshackle the vast resources and riches that now belonged to all free yaoguai, followed by the liberation of Gusu to the south, and to the Far West, where Yunmeng and Qishan have already started their own war for freedom from the iron-fisted rule of the Imperial Court and their enslaved territories.

Lan Zhan pondered at the dog-eared announcement, before taking it down - the conference had ended, the attendees had come and gone, and the entire gathering of the greatest yaoguai had achieved more than what it had initially set out to do, even surpassing his skeptical expectations. General Nie Mingjue and the two other members of the Venerated Triad managed to pull together disparate, fragmented and self-serving indigenous yaoguai clans from all corners of the Middle Kingdom, and not only succeeded in their personal agenda, but also everyone else's, it seemed. Along with the declaration of the formation of a mega-sect - essentially, a new race of Demonic Cultivators cutting across multiple sects and their differences -, they also agreed on a set of universally basic laws in which their existence shall be cemented in their brave new world, once the last threats from the reigning capital city of Chang'an and their Tao-influenced incumbents are eradicated.

Highly-evolved yaoguai had long dreamed of living as humans in the Mortal Realm, and the time has come to bring to life the wishes of their forefathers. They shall be indistinguishable from humans in all aspects, and essentially replace Men as the dominant species on land. The difference, though, lies in their advanced, unorthodox and liberal culture that places great importance on personal freedom, rights of expression of one's needs, desires and wants, use of creativity and abilities to overcome hurdles, free acceptance of consequences of one's decisions and consequences whether self-inflicted or otherwise, and interestingly, an emphasis of celebrating moments that signify living the moment for want of a fulfilled life, whether of excessive indulgences, of living up the glory of the great seven sins, of enjoying hedonistic pleasures of the senses, the flesh, and of the material world - the yaoguai are determined to avail themselves the delights of the Mortal Realm and savour everything that the world has to offer after having been denied such god-given ambrosia for aeons.

Of note, in terms of relationships, age is but a number, gender is but a physical label, sex is an enjoyable social activity, pleasure is a currency that is given and taken, and love is freely shared. What had been restricted and restrained, made condemnable and punishable, and considered unholy, sinful and sacrilegious - was undone, normalized, even commoditized. Such is the freely-living culture of the yaoguai , set to conquer the world by storm as they approached total victory over Mankind.

“Are you sure?” General Nie Mingjue asked, his voice rather hoarse after rallying the hundred or so sects with his war cry and fists pumped into the air during the closing ceremony. The sun was rising on the fourth day, and everywhere from the littered palatial gardens to the numerous wrecked guest rooms to the sex-stinked underground halls, servants started to clean beds and tables, wipe away spilled gory, bloody foods and alcoholic drinks from feasts, and evidences of sex orgies that had gone on for days, and swept the floor with straw brooms and cummy water-soaked mops. A little exhausted from back-to-back meetings and non-stop banquets of the flesh, the large, stout, burly man was ready to call it a day's work. He handed a final stack of documents to a harried Nie Huaisang, who bowed repeatedly and rushed off like an office-boy.

Wei Ying bowed with folded hands at the front with such respectable grace, that it was hard not to nod and acknowledge his pleasing behaviour.

“My liege, I was the first to answer the noble call to bring together the Five Great Clans, in conjunction with your victory in liberating the Nie heartland, so this is my reward, which I shall finally take as I deserve,” he answered, confident, possessive and undaunted - true qualities of the yaoguai , also the greatest Dark Arts grandmaster that none knew. He received a ‘mmm’ approval from Chifeng Zun.

“Ohh... I shall miss Wang Ji didi , he was such a lovable boytoy while we raised him under our wings, and I’ll miss playing with him when we’re not hard at work as the infallible triad,” General Jin remarked with a pout as though he was heartbroken, though the drippy voice seemed to indicate something else more sinister.

“And so, the baby chick has fledged and it’s time to set out on its journey. Zewu Jun knows well the relationship between the two of us, and can testify that I, and the rest of my family, will surely take good care of him, just as he’ll take care of us, in exchange for the glory of the new alliance. It’s a win-win, no?” a sly wink, another bow, this time to the tall and slender former Lan Sect Leader.

Zewu Jun sighed - he always did that when he was restless, anxious. “I will not dispute what you said, Wei gongzi , because I have my sights set on liberating what used to be Gusu, and am actually grateful to have additional hands on deck, and a reassuring guarantee that our loved ones remain safe during these chaotic times. Having Jiang Sect Leader and Jiang First Lady join us at the frontlines, along with Sect Leader's most talented and beautiful wife, is an honour too."

Wei Ying smiled brightly because he'd sealed the deal with the triad, and he took Wen Qing's hand before shoving her lightly into Jiang Cheng's arms; both Jiang Sect Leader and Wen Ning stood around sheepishly at the side of General Nie, somewhat dazed and dazzled by the presence of the legendary triad, and the opportunity to serve under the same warbanner - also, because Wen Qing probably already carried Chifeng Zun's child inside her, in that yaoguai womb of hers that can hold many babies in a uteral space-time bubble. "Don't forget," he said to the persons opposite him, "Our accomplished sorceress, Jiang First Lady, can open teleportation portals using Dark magic and connect with my wife's portal, so if anything untowards happens, we're all just a door away, literally." Wei Ying tightened his grip around Yan Li's waist, and he gave an appreciate peck on her forehead, eliciting a mushy squeal out of the shijie - Lan Zhan merely kept his head down, and continued to help out in taking down notices and paintings that weren't needed anymore; being the silent, stoic but hardworking wooden stump that he always portrayed himself to be in such social situations. The promise of perpetually staying in touch was attractive indeed, like next-door neighbours, and implied that people and goods can be moved between two distant points - if the will is there, of course.

"Umm...! I-- I promise, I will take up arms and protect my jiejie and her husband! I'll also protect the honour of the Jiang family while working here for you!" Wen Ning's awkward declaration, with a cringeworthy three-fingered salute to boot, right in the center of the congregation of the triad, was expected from a noble warrior, though endearingly silly given how inexperienced he really was in terms of the yaoguai 's perspective. Wei Ying sent a sniggering remark through the shared connection between him and his husband, "He would probably fit in better as a servant to accompany Huaisang, perhaps as a fierce corpse counterpart to protect the other from further mental damage since Wen Ning is already part yaoguai and held up better from the endless agony of mental and sexual abuse."

“Alright, alright, and yes, A-Ning can protect Big Brother Nie too!” General Nie barked out with his powerful, thrumming baritone voice to call an end to the unceasing feel-good family drama and good-byes, and everyone broke out into polite laughter because A-Ning was just too precious and adorable. After all, they had agreed beforehand that most of the Yunmeng Jiang delegation which included soldiers and selected, high-ranking individuals from the Qishan Wen sect would stay on after the Conference to lend a much-needed hand in the on-going war with the Imperial forces. More troops have been summoned after a Fairy Messenger message was sent to Jiang Fengmian back at the Lotus Pier, with Jin Guangyao personally seeing to ten horse carts’ filled with gold, magical treasures and expensive gifts delivered to the family by express flying swordsmen from the prospering Nie and Jin sects.

Lan Zhan had completed his small task while the rest of the families discussed about their next course of action. He proceeded to bow at the Venerated Triad, then to Jiang Cheng, his first lady and a curt nod to Wen Ning, in wishing them well and good bye; the A-Huan of A-Zhan’s life couldn’t resist from taking two steps forward to give his baby brother a brotherly bear hug, with whispers of “I’m so glad we’ve spent time together and had fought as brothers in a brotherhood against a common evil” and “Gege will surely miss you!” - in which the female members wept a little and dabbed tears off their cheeks at the touching moment - and A-Zhan gave a faint, knowing smile before promising his A-Huan gege that “when the need arises, call me with a Fairy Messenger spell, or you can ask the First Lady to open up a portal for a quick meet-up, with Wei Wu Xian’s permission, of course.”

Jin Guangyao rolled his eyes and crossed his arms at that, and smirked, “Oh please, spare the long farewell between brothers, because it almost sounds as if you’re eloping with Wei gongzi ” simply because he’s a jealous prick for losing a boytoy to the authority of a man he, the yaoguai born of Zewu Jun's dreams, hardly knew; over the course of the preceding three days, it was clear that these yaoguai -made personas had very little knowledge and appreciation about what happened the year before, let alone sixteen years ago; a passing mention about Jin Guangyao's miserable childhood that led to the murder of Nie Mingjue through cursed music, inadvertently wronging Wei Ying leading to his death in the past along the way, and later, that Zewu Jun shoved a sword into the villain's heart as a cruel act of the karmic cycle of reciprocity of deeds - garnered absolutely no reaction other than "Oh, really?" or "Oh, is that so?", because yaoguai possess a completely different perception and understanding of time and events that affect the fates of Men; in that, sixteen years is nothing when compared to how old the yaoguai that inhabit the Generals' bodies spanning across centuries, and that they had absolutely no interest in matters pertaining to humans, their short, wretched lives, mundane and boring adventures and eventually their uninspiring deaths.

In any case, by sunrise of the fourth day, Lan Zhan was glad to walk out of the imposing fortress that had been his sex dungeon for months, and breathe the fresh, cool, crisp summer air at dawn, outside of the tall stonewall barricades. Wei Ying placed a hand around the husband's waist, while his other went around his shijie's, who remained smiling throughout the conversation because, in essence, she would ascend to the first lady's status once she returned to the Lotus Pier. She carried a basket given by the Venerated Triad containing the most valuable gifts that would be best hand-carried than delivered by flying swordsmen - a collection of trinkets and beauty accessories made from precious metals and gemstones, and some magic-imbued household items forged using yaoguai qi and Dark energy.

Smug-looking Wei Ying felt accomplished that morning, having traded his brother and best buddy along with the clingy, acupuncture needle-wielding sister, for Lan Zhan's freedom and a respite from future interferences from external forces for his happiness for his darling man, and his beloved, rather illusory shijie . He laughed, triumphant and empowered by his newfound reality that he helped to shape with his hands. Lan Zhan looked to the side and stared at the spouse's other roaming hand that had started caressing the bulge on Yan Li's belly - he wanted to feel jealous, but then remembered that the baby had been fed in utero - tainted, really - by his seed for the past three days of very, very vigorous and exciting double-vaginal penetration sex, and so, following yaoguai fetal development biology, the child belonged to both him and Wei Ying's shared with Jiang Yan Li, possessing features of all three parents and acquiring benefits and strengths from each.

“Xian Xian, look, look, the baby's kicking. It's very lively this morning, after a good breakfast from its parents' essence,” Jiang Yan Li, gorgeous and nearly glowing with the sheen on her skin reflecting the hues of the first rays of the morning sun, remarked softly while patting her pregnant belly; she carefully balanced the basket against her stretched waist and placed one her hand over Wei Ying's to keep his there so that the half-father could - feel - the throb of a tiny limb playing sword fights or cultivation while nestling in its mother's womb, “And the Qinghe countryside is so beautiful, with the sun slowly rising above rolling green hills filled with summer flowers and flowing rivers” she said and looked around the landscape outside the fortress - she hadn't had a good look because they arrived at night on the first day and were kept inside the dungeon-like interior throughout the conference -, “Oh, A-Zhan, is this wonderful? Our baby will be born soon, in this beautiful world, in a beautiful, loving family!” she gave the other half-father a gentle and comforting look, and Lan Zhan moved from Wei Ying's side to Yan Li's other side so that she received both their husbandly attention and affections; Wei Ying raised a brow out of curiosity and at how Yan Li effortlessly addressed Lan Zhan with his fictional childhood nickname - because they've had so much group sex in the past three days and grunted obscenities and howled with animalistic sounds at each other, so calling one another endearing names was not a problem at all - and said nothing, and released his grip on his husband.

Lan Zhan took the basket without hesitation, and placed a hand above Yan Li's hand, atop Wei Ying's, and together, they felt the baby kick a few more times. Unidentified emotions ran unrestrained, untamed and amok inside

Lan Zhan's head, because he was the other half-father responsible for the child's constitution; it was confusing yet gratifying, that the child was his and Wei Ying's, they were going to be fathers for a baby growing in a kind of surrogate mother; suddenly he had visions of delivery a child, a baby's first breastfeeding, the first burp, the first diaper change, the first word, the first steps, playing with their child with two other parents, living together in peaceful, harmonious family, threefold the happiness. He also realized the poetic beauty behind the entire unfolding scene - that Wei Ying, a Jiang, was indebted to Lan Zhan for redeeming justice and a second chance in life, and now, Lan Zhan owed his happiness to Wei Ying, who had brought him so much joy ever since they had promised their forever to each other as soulmates - and now, a baby made of two fathers is on the way in its mother loving care. In a lifetime of giving and receiving, there should be no need for Sorrys and Thank Yous, but Lan Zhan had so much more to say, and want to do for lovely Wei Ying, that he thought perhaps, he could express to their unborn child.

“Mn. It's beautiful, indeed.”

Yan Li became misty-eyed at the touching scene, and she somehow grabbed both men closer to her and her bouncing belly. “Baby's hungry again, because it's growing so fast. Will its two loving fathers please feed it more milk?” she asked innocently, as they headed to a horse carriage prepared by the Venerated Triad - a fairytale model of a large, spacious wheeled structure used by elites, pulled by a couple of horses and a driver ready at the seat. The carriage was well-furnished, and had a three-seater chair that could double as a king-sized bed.

Wei Ying's smile brightened, as they stepped into their royal transport, and already he was unbuckling his belt. Lan Zhan showed more restraint, but could not avoid licking his lips and sweating a bit on his forehead from the rising pulse in his blood, and a tent forming on his pants. Jiang Yan Li gave coy looks and winks to both men, and sweetly began to pull up her blouse just as the door to the carriage closed with a soft click !

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 225

The journey on horse carriage pulled by demonic nightmare horses was scheduled to take a few days, as compared to a lesser number of nights zipping on flying swords, or instant teleportation through corruption of space - and for good reasons - to avoid qi deviating events that can disrupt any spellcasting such as lifting swords or opening portals, including childbirth.

Some time after they left the Nie fortress, Jiang Yan Li went into labour whilst having two men feeding the baby with fresh, heated semen ejaculated excitedly through thrusting hips and spurts painting the contracting vaginal walls which had happily devoured two pistoning turgid angry-red penises. Sex felt very, very good for all three, so the mother did not feel the warning convulsions throbbing through her belly and pelvic area; blame the orgasms, as some say. Her water broke when one of the fathers jabbed a bit too hard, too excitedly at her spasming cervix, and it became a mess of yaoguai -stinked amniotic fluids on the floor and dribbling leftover spilled passions from the two men still soaring high in their sexual ecstasies. The driver was called to halt the journey and park the carriage next to a body of water, and immediately, the two flushed men pulled out in near panic whilst leaking cum from their dicks, and frantically searched the carriage's interior for supplies needed to deliver the baby.

Jiang Yan Li was glad to have both fathers at her side to welcome yet another healthy addition to the Jiang family. Lan Zhan was already experienced in watching how infants are delivered, although he didn't really have much hands-on experience in the dirty, messy, bloody and fluid-filled procedure - not enough give a helping hand, but thank goodness Wei Ying was there; the younger man had experienced multiple childbirths firsthand not too long ago, and knew what to do with lots of washcloths and buckets of warm water, all of which were fortunately supplied inside the horse carriage; bless the Venerated Triad for understanding the needs of antenatal care, especially for yaoguai -kin.

Thus, next a idly flowing river on one sunny afternoon, graciously hidden from view by a horse carriage and a driver who also posed as a lookout for the trio to guard their safety, a chubby baby girl was welcomed to the world with little fanfare, anxious parents who fussed over each and every aspect such as counting her tiny fingers and touching her delicate baby-soft skin with trepidation and bewilderment, and lots of noisy but hearty, healthy cries echoing into the woods. Then, out popped another girl, then another, and yet another, so the two fathers and the mother carried a quadruplet at the end, each with Wei Ying's beautiful smile and a head full of hair, with Lan Zhan's strong facial features and tinges of yellow-hues in their lovely bright tear-filled eyes, and Yan Li's soft feminine touches on the cheeks and curve of open lips started to plead for their mother's milk.

“Wei Ying, no more stealing baby's milk. There's hardly enough to go around, with four hungry mouths begging simultaneously,” Lan Zhan murmured while patiently carrying two red-skinned wrinkly but freshly cleaned bawling babes with his hands, as the eldest two gurgled happily with their first feed of their lives lying upon topless Yan Li's chest. She coo'ed, gently touched her babies' lips and adjusted her nipples so that they fit snugly into their suckling mouths, encouraging them to drink more and grow up healthy.

Wei Ying sighed heavily and started to peel off his tunic. “On the contrary, my dear,” he said, and Lan Zhan's eyes went wide, mesmerized by the sight of two lovely grapefruit-sized mounds that inflated themselves upon the man's chest, “I will steal my husband's joy by joining this breastfeeding frenzy because I'm also equally responsible here to make sure that all our children are fed well.”

Lan Zhan shook his head and smiled - a rare upward curve in lips -, because of course, how could he have forgotten that lovely Wei Ying is everything that could ever be and had existed in reality, and that Wei Ying can transform and shape his body using the godly Dark Arts to meet his needs under any circumstances, such as growing artificial wombs and pumping up his breasts so that he too, could experience the joys of becoming a female and birth children. He kept quiet and observed, mesmerized, at how the remaining younger two babes were gently grabbed by Wei Ying's large manly hands, one for each, from Lan Zhan's sparse but muscular and milkless bosom, and gently placed in the same manner as Yan Li's - one babe for each breast. Wei Ying's twin soft, but rather hairy, fatty teats are a little smaller and less plump than Yan Li's for obvious reasons, but they function just as well; the moment each crying hungry baby latched her lips onto one of the man's swollen nipples, the suckling motions started immediately, and they quietened down to a calm, satisfied and rhythmically feeding state.

With both half-father and Yan Li lying on the bed inside the carriage, breastfeeding a total of four newborns in their arms, Lan Zhan felt a little left out and for a moment, he was at a loss of what to do. Fortunately the Jiang gu niang didn't question Wei Ying's sudden partial change in gender, or his choice of words when addressing Lan Zhan - proof that again, yaoguai were immune to the complexities of human gender dichotomies and societal interactions; it was already well-known that some yaoguai are blessed with similar capabilities and can be husbands, wives, fathers and mothers at the same time, so Yan Li probably thought the same about Wei Ying.

The washcloths had been rinsed in the river water, and all equipment had been wiped dry and stowed away in their proper compartments. The talented driver was on standby, and was ordered to heat a pot of nutritious herbal chicken soup on the campfire, and start on cooking side dishes using a stove, nearby the carriage; they decided to stop at that rather picturesque riverside spot for the day and rest, to allow time for the mother to recover, and for everyone to recuperate from the stresses of delivering new lives into the world. There were some passers-by - marauding bands of yaoguai bandits in search of fresh human meat -, however when the driver - a yaoguai as well - spoke with them using demonic tongues and explained that they were from the newly established alliance of the free yaoguai and they just and a fortuitous birth of quadruplets, the bandits cheered for the new parents. Such an unbelievable change of heart was not uncommon among yaoguai , because they too live in the desire that someday, they and their children would live in a peaceful world of plenty, what more that those quadruplets probably represented a new ray of hope from a brave new world; thus, in deference for the renowned Venerated Triad, the bandits scoured the forests and brought back summer fruits and other wholesome edibles, and promised to patrol the surrounding area to keep any child predators or wild animals away from the carriage, before leaving.

“No rest for the wicked father,” Wei Ying toot-tooted and gestured the free, idling husband to come closer because it was tiring to shout when one was spending qi to exert internal muscles to squeeze out manly milk out of hairy nipples - the said milk being the real opaque white liquid suitable for babes this time - through magically bloated breasts. Lan Zhan obeyed like any new inexperienced fathers would, and he was beside Wei Ying in a heartbeat, eager to please and serve the new half-mother of their babes.

“Demons extract life-giving energy from sexual qi best, and during this delicate period of recovery from exhausted mothers, you, the sole provided for the time being, must do your duty to give shijie the nutrition she needs. She’ll heal faster and be able to feed our children better,” Wei Ying pointed out.

Lan Zhan swallowed hard, suddenly thrilled at the prospect of having sex with a lactating and breastfeeding mother.

“After you’re done recharging shijie , I’ll open up my man-pussy beneath my balls, and you’ll have to discharge just as many volleys of your daddy’s milk into me too. I can’t be wholly responsible for taking care of these younger two ‘uns,” Wei Ying added petulantly, and shifted his shoulders to let baby number three and four drink in a more comfortable lying position. Lan Zhan felt giddy at a very tangible perverted fantasy coming to fruition soon, and he smiled crookedly at his dreamy, self-inflicted drunkenness.

Soon, Lan Zhan was back at his sexual peak, drilling into Jiang Yan Li’s youthful, elastic, hot, tight and very wet pussy while watching his newborn daughters suckling the woman’s breasts. He timed his enthusiastic thwup-thwup-thwup squelchy thrusts with his girls’ feeding rhythm straight in until the hilt, and very, very excitedly, savoured the tastes and tactile sensations of a freshly birthed but incredibly sexy, fertile, lubricated, grasping vagina while filling up the now-vacated womb thirty healthy ejaculations, because he knew, and desperately wanted, for Jiang Yan Li to conceive together with lovely Wei Ying, and have another batch of baby-soft buns baking in the oven by nightfall.

(It goes without saying that Lucky Lan Zhan got to steal his babies’ milk, when he was on the verge of nutting the nth time, then roughly shoved his head between plump, milk-filled smooth or hairy mounds of either Yan Li’s or Wei Ying’s, nnngh’ed roughly and pushed his baby girls aside so that daddy can also enjoy a loving suckle at a swollen, juicy teat while spilling thirty blasts of virile energetic sperm deep, deep into eager fecund wombs.)

.

Lan Zhan did wonder aloud about Wen Qing's situation.

“Oh, don't bother. She's a big girl and as good as any respectable, fiercely independent, single mother out there, because Jiang Cheng and Wen Ning are absolute disasters at childcare. I suppose she'd have given birth too, since both were conceived last week when we had threesomes the whole afternoon with A-Ning made to harvest lotus roots that time, while Jiang Cheng was given the runaround and sent to the neighbouring port town, Lily Pier, to pick up some groceries that's commonly available everywhere. Hah, my brother never knows that the father of all his babies sits right next to him at the throne hall!”

The husband paused thoughtfully. “Babies...” he murmured and stared off-direction.

A gentle slap on the husband's arm to force him out of his reverie, because Lan Zhan had grown fond over little cherubs and become a little addicted, even fantasizes quite often, of making more of those now that he had tasted, savoured and enjoyed the wholesome experience from conception to birth, from a dad's perspective. With the jolt back to reality, Lan Zhan started fanning the wife - the male one - to keep the latter cool during warm summer days.

Arms behind the head, the wife relaxed at the servile human tabletop mechanical fan, “Wen Qing is smart for a yaoguai , and she'll know to teleport away her babies already tainted with the seeds of the Venerated Triad, to avoid detection and suspicion from her husband. If I'm right, they should be deposited in my underground kingdom by now, and my concubines housed in there, who also work as nannies and wet nurses to all my children, will take care of them and raise them well. She might fake her pregnancy for the sake of keeping the sect leader happy, but knowing her and how she, a fertile female yaoguai in constant heat, behaves around excellent male specimens of her kind... well, she won't need to fake that pregnancy for long."

"Won't the offsprings of those two generals and my brother... run conflict with the rest?" Lan Zhan asked naively, and realized that Yan Li tapped at his thigh too. She softly coo'ed to A-Zhan that she wanted a shoulder massage and backrubs after holding onto two babes while breastfeeding, and there was another two to go. The unofficial husband and biological half-father turned to the side and indulged in the woman's request upon the creaky king-sized bed, to Wei Ying's envy - because new mothers have it all, especially in terms of attention from the father(s).

"Nah," Wei Ying said, and got up to get a drink; there was a bucket-shaped herbal tea dispenser built into the carriage's interior furnishing, "In case you weren't aware, my shijie and Wen Qing went around collecting semen from all those awesome yaoguai males who congregated at the Conference of the Demonic Cultivation through quickies, like queen ants, and stored the seed inside their bellies so that they continue to give birth to children of superior lineage. Your precious triad included, of course." He winked at Lan Zhan while handing a cup to rosy-cheeked Yan Li, and she accepted the refreshment gratefully. Wei Ying man-grabbed those two suckling piglets (he calls them so, because they're so greedy for milk, after all), and effortlessly cradled them against his bare and swollen chest - the changeover was quick and seamless, so that his daughters continued to snack from their half-father. "There's no conflict at all, lao gong, because all our children are kind and nice in nature, unlike some human street brats that I've encountered during my younger days," he snorted, and then leaned back and spread his legs wide open. Yan Li shifted in her seat to give him a wide berth. "The older children, like A-Ying and A-Mian - you remember them, don't you, you horn-dogged Uncle? They've given us eight batches of grandchildren already - the more mature jiejie s there will educate the younger ones so that everyone lives by, and respects our family rules, regardless of creed and clan,” he added.

Upon noticing the Dawn of Dark Light - that is, in Lan Zhan’s words, a flowery description of the parting of Wei Ying’s plump and juicy hairy man-cunt lips between the legs hiding behind those lovely curly lining the testicles -, Lan Zhan hurriedly returned the fan to the tabletop, then drew in the curtains so that nobody could peek into what ungodly things happened inside a horse carriage moving at a leisurely pace on one of the lesser-travelled trails. The husband had been naked all day, and for logical reasons - he alternated in recharging his wives’ - one certified, the other still not legal - pussies with his awesome sexual qi , and it was lovely Wei Ying’s turn.

“Come on, lover boy. Time for this man-cunt to eat up your dick,” Wei Ying chuckled with twin babes busily feeding upon his breasts, then with a jerk of hips and a twitch of his semi-erect penis, his balls rose a little, and allowed the husband to have a peek of what a hairy pink, stretched and loosened but well-used and tasty vagina looked like, and that the husband desired most.

(At one point, Lan Zhan belatedly realized the implications of breeding like queen ants, as Wei Ying succinctly put it. Wouldn’t that mean that his babies have streaks of Nie Mingjue, Jin Guangyao or even his older brother, he asked. Wei Ying casually answered, while having his man-pussy lovingly fucked and drinking the rich sexual qi wafting off the very happy penis pistoning in and out non-stop, that Lan Zhan is allowed to believe whatever he wants and fantasize using his imagination - such as baby girls with muscled bodies and manly moustaches, thin and pretty foxy girls who love to poison and cheat men, or better yet, an incestuous rendezvous with his gege ’s daughter. Lan Zhan exploded into an unprepared orgasm at the last one, because the thought of making love with a real niece, as a horrible, immoral Lan er shushu , pinning down that baby girl on the bed while sexually ravaging her sweet virginity, breaking her hymen with excruciating pain-pleasure then tasting her pussy before any other boys, and deflowering her many times to plant grand-nieces inside her with his unrivalled libido- because he'd fuck and breed her every night for a whole month to make sure that every single window of opportunity to be impregnated was fully used and abused by the naughty er shushus -, before her father, Lan Xi Chen found out about the incestuous travesty - the thought was just too damn sexy.

Wei Ying cackled, of course, at Lan Zhan's loss of another accidental spillage of yummy semen, accompanied with a lovestruck manly 'Ahhnnn~~~'.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 226

Tucked inside an underground kingdom, linked by wormholes created by corruption of space and time, lies a tropical paradise by the beachside like no other, with luxury seven-star guest hospitality and services second to none in the Kingdom, specially made for the royal couple and their descendents.

Grand Patriarch Lan Wang Ji enjoys basking in the shade under a large beach umbrella upon a lounging chair, where a constant breeze blows in sea-chilled fresh air to keep the summer warmth at bay. Seagull cries and rustling from swaying leafy coconut trees orchestrated and timed perfectly well with the rhythmic, soothing crashing of gentle waves into the sandy beach. Everywhere, there are men, women, boys and girls busy with playing at the waterside, indulging in energetic beach games and generally having a good time with summertime activities under the beautiful sunny blue skies. The Grand Patriarch sits up a little and lowers his sunglasses to spy at naked figures fornicating on the sand and upon soiled towels; his Kingdom's subjects truly know how to enjoy themselves on their days off such as this, and spend their time intertwining bodies, making sweet love all day and night then pop babies out in a few months' time, and have wild sex parties in harems and orgies as regular as any unholy summer rituals between close-knitted families and friends.

Lan Zhan places the book he'd been reading on the ground and turns to his side. He waves at a waiter and gestures for a glass of orange juice - the drinks around here are known to be spiked, and being a pure-bred Lan, he should avoid those at all costs. Moments later, thanks to the seven-star service, a little boy no more than ten-years old trots up with the ordered beverage on a tray balanced on his small hands, and with no clothes on, of course. The Grand Patriarch enjoys watching how a boy squats on the table to dip his penis into the fruit juice, then serves his syrup-coated genitals to the man's lips. He lovingly attacks the boy's citrus-scented peeled penis and molests his spasming, rising grape-sized balls with his tongue, until the boy cries out, flushed beet-red on the face and chest, thrusting and jerking his hips hard into the man's welcoming mouth; the orange juice is served with droplets of seedless mildly flavoured and sweet boyjuice - the refreshing taste of summer, indeed.

Later, a group of three boys join in - extra service on the house, they chorus cheerfully -, and they snuggle up against the broad shouldered and strong-muscled man's body upon the creaking, sagging lounging chair. The Grand Patriarch hums, pleased that his hands are free to conquer, reign and roam all over those lovely boys' baby-smooth supple skin, kiss their rosy lips and play romantically with moist tongues, suckle their immature teats before tickling their navels, then slide fingers across twin bubble-buttocks mounds before letting one, then two fingers glide around the puckered entrances until they spasm and convulse excitedly, and he happily penetrates into the rosebuds with glee - he takes the boys' first times in anal penetration, and teaches them what it's like to have anal sex with a fully-grown man, and to appreciate how it feels to have one's prostate gland lovingly massaged by scissoring calloused fingers and later bumped with the head of a very, very excited adult's angry-red, engorged penis.

Those who've had their wet dreams, serve the man their first conscious ejaculation ever in their tender young lives, with shrill, cracked-voice sexy moans and primitive caveman-like grunts that are too inappropriate for their age, to the man's utmost delight - and those who haven't, well, they get a preview of feeling very, very good from having their genitals fondled, then swelled gloriously, from very, very expert fingers, lips and tongues, and of course, the almighty adult's penis, and willingly squirt uncontrollably nectary droplets of clear, seedless fluids mixed with virginal pee, interspersed with surprised peals of laughter and squeals because they hadn't experienced such sexual release and joy before, for the man to partake, savour and enjoy, gulp by gulp.

At one point, the Grand Patriarch decided to get some exercise done, because what would summer at the beach be, if one didn't sweat a little? He made the four boys stand in a line, arms akimbo and legs spread out nicely. They were instructed to do a little warm-up exercise, by working on their pelvic tendons and ligaments. Up and down, up then hold--- and down, he barked out with rhythmic claps with his hands, and the boys obeyed with discomfort and a tiny bit exhaustion on their faces, because their penis had to jerk up and down according to the beat, and their balls received a generous workout for lifting up and loosening down. Their stiffies energized with boosted blood circulation, they were then made to form a circle; two boys on all fours, alternating with two boys lying on their backs, so that their faces were comfortably and snugly in contact with each other's crotches. All together now, the Grand Patriarch started to circle the boys and clapped his hands following a rather upbeat Gusu nursery rhyme; with each syllable, the boys sucked each other's erect penises and used their fingers to drum on one another's scrotum until little plump boy-balls bounced and swayed, alive and animatedly to the singalong tune. Some would falter mid-way when intense tingles erupted with very inappropriate sexy moans, others started grunting and shaking uncontrollably when wrecked by orgasms meant for adults that their tiny bodies couldn't contain, but they kept on going, until the nursery rhyme was completed, and to the Patriarch's utmost satisfaction. Later, he lay on his lounging chair soiled with boys' pee and juice, and showed his monstrous giant veiny and foreskin-heavy penis to the boys in broad daylight; he told them to practise again unto his excited, and expectant sexual organ, and then stretched his limbs and put his hands behind his head, sunglasses down and sunlight warm on his face, and he enjoyed a light nap - with four boys working hard to the beat of their favourite nursery rhyme, flirting, stroking, licking, kissing and sucking his hairy penis from head to frenulum then along the impressive over-six inch length to the base and back again, and his very happy filling-up wrinkly testicles that spasmed from every loving circular touch of children's tongues and kissy lips.

The Grand Patriarch spends an inordinate amount of time in the company of little prepubescent boys, his face always dipping eagerly in the children's crotches, eliciting squelchy wet sounds and involuntary nnnh-inducing tremor in shaking hips and thighs, his hands greedily grasping every inch of baby-soft skin, plundering innocence to sate his overpowering desire to rape and abuse every penis-bearing child within his arm's reach; he graduates each patiently, one by one, into adulthood with his finesse in pedophilic lovemaking, filling their cute adorable rectum boy-fruits and sometimes into their thoroughly yet tenderly abused and stuffed cocks, pumped hard and full with his virile masculine seed that they can bring back to their little sisters and make more babies in the Patriarch's name.

“ Lao gong , lao gong ,” the wife calls out sweetly not too far away. Lovely Wei Ying has a fascination for little girls for the time being - call it a passing fad, which will soon be exchanged with the obsession to abuse children of the other gender -, and he waves enthusiastically to attract the husband's attention while his face is stuffed with a ten-year old girl's spread-open pussy. Wei Ying is such an affectionate and generous Grand Matriarch, for opening up his tropical wonderland for the husband to enjoy his loins and propagate his genes, so to speak. Wei Ying has spent a few minutes preparing a virgin daughter for the husband to sexually attack, by performing an adult's cunnilingus upon the girl's blossoming genitals, until her flowerbud blossoms into swollen pussy lips, a protruding clit as the cherry on the icing to be popped soon, accompanied by a wet, very welcoming and squeezezy, convulsing vagina that has been thoroughly exercised and licked by Wei Ying's demonic forked tongue, awaiting to be deflowered by the girl's naughty, horny and lustful stepfather.

Wei Ying had caressed the girl's hymen to excite and loosen that stretchy and barrier-like membrane, then using the tip of his elongated tongue, punched a small hole through - thus, it was Wei Ying who theoretically stole his daughter's virginity after all - and the slime-coated tentacle-like appendage gleefully pummeled through. He lashed his tongue energetically, vibrating the phallus-like invader so much until the girl cried out with unbridled pleasure from being ravaged between the legs, and she had no idea nor defenses to resist, other than to spread her legs wider, trained her pelvic muscles to relax - because she's been taught relax, relax, and let Uncle rape her pussy - and let the evil man do what he loves to do to little underaged girls' flowerbuds. Wei Ying had all the time in the world to explore the girl's ruined innocence, deceptively covered by the rather intact hymen - however, he's not inside her to taste her feminine fragrance and female juices, yet.

He knew this particular daughter would start menstruating soon, but he couldn't wait to serve her to the husband, not when they're having their family holiday that day and can spend all day making babies inside all tasty, naked daughters freely available in the tropical paradise. So, he shoves his tongue through, slamming the cervix like wolf-rapists pounding the door and rattling the doorknob to break open into a house full of delicious succulent virgin lambs that are meant to be sexually devoured. The girl sobbed at the throbbing pain caused by the man, but she bit her lip and forced herself to relax, relax, let the stranger in, let her inside be invaded by foreign things, let her most sacred and innermost innocence be taken, with or without her willing permission. Wei Ying smiled when he broke through and entered the uterus chamber - juicy, filled with blood-engorged and swollen flesh, ripe for the taking and to transform into moist, warm nests for growing fetuses - however, Wei Ying has a single-track desire to attack and pillage where it matters most. His tongue continued to wiggle and crawl further in, slithered like a snake that had infiltrated a bird's nest filled with yummy eggs and baby chicks to be swallowed alive. All the while, the girl squirmed, sometimes moaned with discomfort, sometimes jerked her hips when unwelcomed nice feelings welled up from being molested from the inside, and Wei Ying did not hesitate to reach overhead to grope her breasts - because his daughter's body belonged to him, so he had every right to enjoy its softness and firmness - and grabbed them roughly in milking motions, before letting his greedy fatherly fingers roam her ten-year old's underdeveloped body hungrily, savouring the stimulation of body-warmed preteen feminine skin against his.

Wei Ying's tongue forked, as expected, and each branch propelled deeper like springs and into the girl's Fallopian tubes, worming their way through like a vile parasite, violently filling up her sexual organs until they bulged unnaturally from the invasion. At the ovaries, the tips of the forked tongue started to lovingly lick up and down, circles and gentle prods, massaging the helpless egg-producing factories; just like the result of tickling babies' bellies, the pinkish masses that made up the ovaries bounced a bit in their cavities, akin to giggling babes and bubbly tots, yielded to the coaxing, spasmed from the alien sensations of being shaken and stirred to release their forcibly ripened fruits before their time. One, two, then multiple pearls of eggs tumbled out, squeezed out of their cradles before they were prepared for insemination, and they rolled gently, gently, along the undulating forked tongue, and collected into a crevice-like dip in the center of the uterus.

No, no, Wei Ying murmured, and the vibrations sent mini-orgasms sizzling and electrifying into the girl's insides; she started to hump against Wei Ying's face while her smooth, hairless cunny was getting eaten out, so much so that the little basket of eggs rolled down, down further until they settled at the entrance right next to the cervix.

Mmm, just right; Wei Ying withdrew his tongue then, with a wicked, amused grin, since the girl had been properly prepared for impregnation by her stepfather, that is, fondly called 'Uncle Lan'.

"Uncle Lan, Uncle Lan," the girl calls out softly on her lounging chair, sweating and wheezing from the wonderful oral sex done by her man-mother, "Mama said that my eggs have descended and I'm ready to get pregnant, but I'm a little afraid because this is my first time having full p--pene-- pene... tration sex. Can you be gentle and squirt your sperm nicely into my vagina?” she asks brazenly, while holding her pussy lips wide open for the stepfather - now standing between her legs with a terribly excited, twitching hard-on - to marvel and grow exceedingly aroused by the sight of a virgin prepubescent girl offering herself to him.

“Mn. Do not be afraid, little girl. Uncle Lan will be very, very gentle inside you, so that you’ll feel very, very nice - and loved.”

“That’s right, girl. Open your thighs wider and keep your muscles relaxed. Squeeze ‘em just like the way I’ve taught you many moons ago, when Uncle is fully inside and moving vigorously in and out - it’ll feel wonderful for the two of you, and take your mind off the pain. Your eggs are at the cervix, and Uncle’s awesome giant penis is long enough to punch through into your womb. You know what happens when he does that and cums directly into your uterus, right? Your naked eggs will be coated by Uncle’s sperm, and you’ll be a mama... just like me!” the other half-father grinned sleazily, his words painted with white lies, of course.

Wei Ying’s narrative has probably no educational value whatsoever, because Lan Zhan had already mounted his stepdaughter like a lustful animal in heat by then, tearing her hymen with such lust and greed in a single audible rip, then rutting deep into her until he was fully sheathed with each powerful fucking thrust, breaching into her womb at the first deflowering fuck; the ten-year old shed a tear for her lost innocence and she gritted her teeth at the flaring pain of accommodating the girth of an unwelcomed man’s penis that her body was unprepared for. However, it didn’t matter, because Lan Zhan was already soaring into his own nirvana in practising the ageless, timeless ritual of making babies inside adolescent girls - his stepdaughter, his lovely little girl will soon be carrying his grand-babies! He moaned and groaned with the twisted imagery playing inside his mind, and just in jolly time, the excruciating pleasures of hot, tight, wet muscles massaging his hardworking penis with such lethal precision and pressure began - the girl had been taught well, despite her torment and sexual abuse; she reached down with her hands and started rubbing her clit, just like the good girl her mama's trained her, because she was told that those wonderful sexy feelings heating up her spasming vagina gets transferred to her Uncle's penis, so Uncle Lan would feel very, very nice too. Lan Zhan's stepdaughter masturbated furiously as the step-daddy pistoned violently like stallion thunderstorms raging through a fertile garden of an underaged maiden, and she played many squeeze-squeeze with that twitching rod of manly flesh, that continued to pound lustfully, angrily, at her tattered innocence, causing her pain - but pain, her mama said, that she must endure, because the ten-year old's no longer a girl, but a woman, after experiencing that sort of pain, and as daddy's new woman, she has to bare her pussy and let her daddy sexually attack her devirgined flowerbud and spill his creamy milk inside her, then father lots of babes inside her womb, where those fat smelly tadpole sperms belong to, where incestuous children are made, all inside the little girl's fertile cunny.

Uncle Lan felt the first waves of molten liquid pressure boiling up from his loins; in his lust-hazed state where his hips moved and fluttered in and out on their own, his arms reached down to clutch, grasp desperately anything, anything that he can teether to, knowing that his palm could easily cover the girl's face and mouth so that she'd stop making pained noises from being attacked so violently between her shivering legs, and those palms reached for her drool-worthy white-porcelain breasts that had just started developing, tiny nubs sitting atop gentle, rolling mounds, and those rough palms crashed unto them and fingers curled and raked back and forth cruelly, squeezing those milky buns until bruising fingerprints were left, as spikes of scorching-red good feelings drove the man to animalistic heights that a father would rape her daughter in broad daylight so boldy and with such glee; so he picked up his pace, rocked himself harder and slammed deep into the welcoming, screaming battered and deflowered vagina, to breed the girl that would become the mother of his children before her time.

Wei Ying sighs at the two mating individuals, rises from his spot at the beach and saunters off with a glass of alcoholic cocktail - his preferred beverage - in his hand. He heads off to find more underaged daughters for Lan Zhan to have kiddie sex with, in this awesome sunny tropical paradise full of naked males and females.

(Eventually, with time being sped up or slowed down deliberately with the use of Dark magic, and selected, desirable, breedworthy specimens cloned and replicated recklessly for the husband's sexual pleasure, the population inside Wei Ying's fertile, thriving underground kingdom boomed. There's a healthy genetic mix of sons, daughters and further offspring bearing lineage from the Great Clans, with an assortment of contributions coming from Wei Ying's concubines from numerous different families and clans that he rather not keep track of and document. Wei Ying is a cold, calculated mastermind to create his greatest empire of diversities and unparalleled capabilities. Lan Zhan, on the other hand, simply went with the flow and enjoyed fucking males and females to sow his wildest, most virile seeds into them and their descendents, in batches of two seconds, two minutes, twenty-four thousand climaxes each, at the wife's behest, of course.)

.

Their journey took them across northern, central and western regions of the Middle Kingdom. They avoided major routes and cities for fear of getting caught in the middle of intense civil and inter-species war, and also treaded carefully when nearing outlying or remote settlements that could easily camouflage a hidden military base of the Imperial or Tao nature. They had a few close brushes, though their luck held out because there were marauding bands of higher-evolved yaoguai who helped by directing them away from road patrols and booby-trapped villages.

After a couple of days on the road, they reached a safe haven for yaoguai called the village of Gui Shan (literally, ghost hill). The inhabitants are staunch followers of the new world order, and the moment Lan Zhan set foot onto its cobbled paths, he knew that he wasn't on human's land anymore. Yan Li knew a little background about the village, gathered from her ancestral memories of yaoguai -kin, and shared what she knew. There should be a small market near the center of the settlement, she said, that sells demonic groceries that she craved; such as blood potatoes that taste sweeter when boiled in bone soup, ghost cabbages that remain crunchy and juicy even when stir-fried, and vampiric chickens that must be slaughtered using unholy rituals before their the curse inside the zombified flesh would turn succulent and nutritious for any new yaoguai mothers.

Wei Ying has a fair knowledge of yaoguai cuisine and like any housewives, great A.S.S. skills - in reverse, A.B.S., that is, A wesome B argaining S kills. However, unfortunately, he had two babes to take care of while his shijie was fully occupied with another two in her arms - therefore, it was up to the novice husband to go to the market and buy some much-needed grocery without breaking their bank account and with judicious judgement to select only the best and highest quality foods on display on the shelves.

Tsk, tsk, the younger half-father of the quadruplets said, there's no money involved because yaoguai barter and trade involves exchange of goods and services, such as sex. "How much for a basket of blood potatoes? How do they look?" the studious husband asked, and he furiously took down notes in preparation for his maiden trip to the market. Jiang Yan Li smiled sweetly and described the vegetables, because she's had a few of them in recent meals after all. Covered in crusty blood and red in colour all the way through the skin and into the starchy tuber, because they're spawned from fresh corpses inoculated with special wholesome curses and potato seeds, then watered regularly with human blood from ritual sacrifices for seven days and seven night during the full moon phase, she explained, and they're a bit rounded and stout, spongy to the touch like a human heart - but don't press on them too much, lest the seller accuses you of bruising his vegetables and forces you to buy ‘em up.

“I see,” the husband nodded gravely, because he was feeling a bit anxious knowing that he was buying something that he’d not seen before, let alone tasted one, which sounded pretty unappetizing and grotesque, “Then, how much does a basket cost? Two silver pieces or three?”

Tsk, tsk, Wei Ying clicked his tongue in slight annoyance at the husband’s slow-wittedness. Maybe two fucks, if the merchant finds you attractive from a demonic sense, or three, if you’re unappealing and don’t smell convincingly good for their taste buds, he added. It’s all about coming to an agreeable value of exchange, Wei Ying chortled and waved his arms excitedly like an overzealous teacher teaching a student about the basics of conducting business - and his babes slid off his swollen breasts because those warm manly arms had left, and the two hungry, still feeding, younger ‘uns started to cry. Excess milk trickled down from Wei Ying’s nipples, like sweet opaque syrup glistening in the sunlight, scented with a man’s musky stink and pheromones to boot.

Lan Zhan took a deep breath to calm down, partly because he nearly, instinctively, lunged forward to claim what should be his and steal a mouthful of his wife’s milk. Anyway, about using sex as currency - for Lan Zhan, he’d seen it before, done it as well. Well, at least Wei Ying did, judging from what the man went through whilst he whittled his time away at the Soul Restoration Cave not too long ago. His new 3d-enhanced biscuit body was built to withstand infinite and endless rounds of sex, so surely, he could do his grocery shopping and survive with his loins intact - he hoped.

“Mn,” he finally remarked, after getting enough tips from both wives - one man, the other woman - for his shopping trip. By then, all four infants had drunk enough for the moment until the sported milk coma-like drowsy looks, and gurgled happily in their sleep by the bed. Wei Ying called the husband and told him to take his time, and shop wisely; meanwhile, Wei Ying wanted to take the opportunity of the downtime from breastfeeding to engage in sexual intercourse with his shijie because those babes tended to interrupt his incestuous sex with the sister throughout the day. Soon, Wei Ying already atop his shijie upon the well-used creaky bed inside the carriage, moaning out her name repeatedly in a dream-like state, and thrusting his hips eagerly between her welcoming open legs, then sharing kisses and whispers of how many babies does Xian Xian want to plant inside jiejie , and does jiejie like Xian Xian’s cute penis dancing happily inside her vagina, and would Xian Xian please shoot his happy milk so that their babies sleeping inside jiejie ’s fat and healthy womb can drink more and grow up strong and healthy, et cetera ad nauseum , and of course, the child-like Xian Xian started groping his shijie ’s breasts and declared those lovely huge milkjugs to be his and his alone, because Xian Xian likes to suck-suck jiejie ’s boobs while jiejie plays with his penis with squeeze-squeezes, while spearing her gaping flowerbud very, very energetically because it feels very, very nice, with those lovely fleshy folds kissing his penis and muscular contractions caressing his dick-dick, signifying her fertility and desire for orgasms by the lucky man, for Xian Xian to be loved and to be invited to stay inside jiejie ’s body for as long as he wants, and ejaculate his boy-semen hotly as many times as he likes.

Fair enough, the husband thought and inwardly snorted at the two lovebirds; he prepared by putting on his shoes, and a large empty basket hanging at the elbow; his other hand began to stroke his arousal furiously - he wore only a loincloth and nothing else, because yaoguai society had no technical use for daily clothes, really - masturbation was necessary to get himself ready and hardcore enough for conducting transactions, as well as to make him look more enticing, sexually flushed and lust-hazed to yaoguai who are seduced by the smelly sour-milk scents and the tasty heat throbbing from the racing heart of a sexually excited and horny man. He climbs down from the carriage, and closes the door behind him, but not before hearing pleased and satisfied grunts, roars and screams from lovely Wei Ying and the other wife-of-sorts, mother of their shared children.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 227

“Wei mama , Wei mama , you’re back! Did you make more cousins for me with Wen *yi*yi ?”

“Enn. We had a nice romp in *yi*yi ’s bedroom when Jiang shushu wasn’t looking. Well, we asked him to run to the store to buy some wood to make a new chair, and by the time he returned, mama made two more cousins for you inside Wen *yi*yi ’s belly. Oh, stop smiling like a silly girl, Jia Jia, you’re just nine-years old and about to reach ten, and you’re already thinking of having a big birthday party with all your cousins and relatives, aren’t you?”

“Ahh.. mama , of course! Here, let me help you to put the shopping bags away. Jiang mama said that I can invite as many people as I want for the party, as long as they’re born before that day. So, please, mama , make more sexy babies with Wen *yi*yi , the other *yi*yi s, and even daddy too!”

“You naughty precocious girl, who taught you to talk dirty like that! Give me that spring onion, they need to be washed before they go on the chopping board.”

“ Papa did, of course. This morning, after you went to meet Wen *yi*yi before everyone was up, papa climbed up my bed and pulled my jammies down. Then he licked my cunny like he always does every day and said it’s the best honey for breakfast! He said my cunny will soon be ripe for making sexy babies, and it sounded so cute!”

“Pass that bag of meat. Mama has to keep that in the chilled pantry below the ground. Oh, your papa is such a pervert, isn’t he? Did you feel good when papa ate your cunny? You’re supposed to start feeling good a whole lot more than when he first touched you when you were six.”

“Enn! Yes, papa made my cunny feel very, very nice with his tongue. It’s a bit slimy, I guess, but it’s warm and ticklish. He kept sucking my clitty until I woke up wheezing as though I just ran a marathon, and he kept playing with his mouth until I couldn’t hold back because my body felt really, really, hot, and I peed. Papa is so bad!”

“Oh for goodness sake, tell me papa put the bedsheets in the washing machine. Hand me that basket of eggs, won’t you? Be careful, don’t drop any of it.”

“Yeah! He even said ‘Sorry’ to my cunny and gave it a long nice kiss with his tongue circling inside, before he pulled out the sheets and put them in the machine. They’re out drying in the sun, actually. But papa kept touching me the whole morning anyway.”

“Hah, that fool. He’s learnt his lesson about doing extra household chores then. Mama ’s gonna start on a vegetable soup. Keep talkin’, tell mama what bad things did that Lan horndog do to you.”

“Well, as usual, I went to the bathroom to brush my teeth and wipe my body because papa left some of his dried gummy milk on my titties. I know it’s his, because I always smell and taste it whenever he unzips his pants and orders me to suck his wee-wee. Sometime last night, I remembered papa sneaking onto the bed, where he unbuttoned my blouse and groped my titties. He always says that he wants my titties to grow up fat and plump so that he can drink baby milk soon. Then he rubs his dancing wee-wee all over my titties, sometimes press them together like this... See? He says that it feels good to move his wee-wee between my titles tightly squeezed like this, though I don't know why he looks like he's in pain every time he does that... he yawns, he snarls and almost sneezes or something, and his body shakes like a madman's. Then he pees all over my titties with his hot white milk, and lets it dry until the next morning. He doesn't button up my blouse after that, so forgetful of him!"

"Uh-huh. Can you take that chopping board for me? Mama 's washing the rest of the vegetables now. So, what happened this morning? Did he flirt with you with kisses, stick his dirty finger up your cunny, or rub his penis all over your body while being alone with you?"

"Yeah. Papa did all of that. Even while brushing my teeth, he came up from behind and played games, like grabbing my cleaned titties from behind, nibbling my ear and lips, and pushing his wee-wee between my thighs after he told me to keep 'em tight together. During breakfast, we played the game of sixty-nine and tried our best to eat dumplings pastries, youtiao dipped in soymilk and fruits while making love with each other's crotches. I don't know what kind of love is made with licking papa 's smelly wee-wee, and it's even too big for me to swallow the whole thing."

"But you felt good, I'm sure of it, and that's what matters. Your daddy loves you by making your cunny feel good. That's why we call you a wench and a whore for your daddy, remember?"

“Oh, oh! You’re right, mama . I remember now, even from Jiang mama ’s teaching. She said that good little girls like me belong in happy families like ours, and that’s why I’m loved a whole lot more than everyone else!”

“Yes, dear. Wash these potatoes please? Mama ’s gonna add them to the soup. Did you practise the guqin and complete your homework of reading the book that I gave you?”

“Yes, I did, Wei mama . Papa made me sit on his face while I practised the song ‘Two Mountains and Valley In Between’, and he nibbled on my clitty pearl all the time. I did good, because I managed to play the whole thing without getting interrupted - although halfway, it was too itchy and hot, because his tongue went all the way in and started doing very naughty things inside, that I accidentally peed while strumming the strings. Papa said that my honey was sweet, because it comes from a pure little girl’s cunny! After that, papa praised my musical skills many times, and asked me to sing and dance without my clothes on. I did that too, and he danced with me and touched my buttocks and held my hips, then rubbed his wee-wee wherever he could, since he was also naked too. He taught me a few moves, like swaying my hips in circles and loops while performing squats - he said that when I become a woman rider, I should do that while straddling his hips. I don’t know why he said that, because I don’t think I’ve ridden a horsie before! Oh.. When I sang, papa was so naughty! He kept fingering my cunny and made me feel very good, because he makes this rub-rub and vibrating motion that I started to feel very hot when I sang the high notes! He spoiled my performance!”

“Ha ha ha! That’s your father! What about the books? Did you memorize the pictures like I told you? You need to make sure you can pose those sex positions perfectly when your dad takes your first night. It wasn’t easy for me to steal the Kama Sutra text from the library, you know.”

“Unn! I actually read it together with papa , and he practised with me too! We did it for a full hour, and it was fun bending my body and hands and legs in all sorts of directions. I almost fell a couple of times, but papa ’s wee-wee is very strong, and it held my balance up.”

“Oh hell no... did that man really put his penis in you before you’re ready? That’s a violation for having sex with a minor, consensual or not! I’ve scolded him before that he shouldn’t ruin your special day when you become his woman! Tell mama what that man did to your cunny!”

“Ah, mama , please calm down and stop waving the ladle angrily. The water’s boiling behind you! Umm... papa didn’t put his p-- pe-- penis inside me. He just kept rubbing at the cunny lips and stuck the mushroom head inside a bit whenever we tried some really nice positions. He said he could feel a mem... err... mem.. brane... a kind of skin fold, and he wanted to cherish it for our first night. So he just moved in and out a bit, made his wee-wee kiss my mem... mem... brain... many, many times, and papa again made those weird jerky movements with his body like he’s gone mad, he started biting my lips and shoulders with that really ugly scrunched grimace and face, his hands started to grab my titties very hard, and it was really uncomfortable because he kept pressing his body on my against the floor, and his wee-wee was very energetic... umm.. I don’t remember much, because I felt kinda good and I was in a daze, I guess, because I started talking dirty, like saying that I really want to be daddy’s wife, and daddy’s little pregnant girl, and umm.. daddy’s little whore, um what else... oh! I said that I want to make lots and lots of babies with daddy, and he shook like an earthquake, before squirting his thick milk into my cunny entrance, and some even landed on the floor and on my chin, because papa became too excited and energetic. It became messy, mama , but it felt very, very warm and nice.”

“Phew, I’m glad your virginity is safe, for now. Did Jiang mama help to clean you up?”

“Enn! She stopped by in mid-morning, and she was kinda amused by the whole thing. She grumbled that I’m a very naughty prostitute, selling my cunny to my daddy to keep the family well fed and safe, and that daddy’s penis should just stay inside my cunny where it belongs forever. I didn’t quite understand that, but she checked on me between my legs and confirmed that I’m still a pure little girl. She helped to clean up, and papa too, because Jiang mama is so heavily pregnant that she can’t bend down a lot. She went back to her room after that. Papa’s in Jiang mama’s bedroom now, should I get her and apologize for the trouble we caused?”

“No, no, they’re making more brothers and sisters for you right now, we shouldn’t disturb them. I can hear and smell them from afar the moment I opened the door to this house. I have an idea. Let’s make a small cake for Jiang mama for keeping papa happy, and as a pre-celebration for your upcoming birthday and of becoming a real woman soon. I bought eggs, milk, flour, butter and a whole bunch of baking ingredients from the market at the Lotus Pier, before coming home through the portal. What do you say, Jia Jia?”

“Yay! Thank you Wei mama !”

“Good. Mama will prepare the ingredients now, and we should have a cake in the oven by lunchtime. While doing that, why don’t you recite about how to become a real woman in our family?”

“Okay! First, Jia Jia is almost ten-years old, so Jia Jia is ready to become daddy’s woman. Jia Jia’s body is made partly from daddy, so Jia Jia belongs to daddy, and he gets to do whatever he wants with Jia Jia. I promise I will be daddy’s good girl, and after losing my vir... vir--gin.. ni.. ty, I will sleep with daddy in my bunny bed, because I’ll be his wife and he can sleep with me on my cute pink bed with many soft toys to play with. Everyday, daddy can make sweet love to Jia Jia’s hairless cunny, put his fingers inside and drink Jia Jia’s honey, because Jia Jia will open her legs like mama taught, and let daddy f--fuu... fuck...k... Jia Jia’s va.... va... gi--na, all day and night. Daddy can play with Jia Jia’s breasts, and massage them to become as big as he wants, as full of milk as he needs for our babies, and just for his fun and pleasure. We’ll play sexy games all day, we’ll kiss and hug and touch each other like boyfriend and girlfriend, and everytime he says that he loves me, it means he loves my cunny and my body, and he wants to play with ‘em very, very much - and that means he loves me too.

Second, Jia Jia will practise se... seduce... seducing daddy especially as her coming-of-age nears. Jia Jia will try to be naked as much as possible whenever she’s at home alone with daddy. She will also talk dirty and use words like ‘pussy’, va.. va.. ‘Vagina’, p.. ‘penis’, balls, when playing touch-touch with daddy. Oh, I forgot, Jia Jia will do whatever she can to make daddy feel nice from good touches and bad touches. Jia Jia will suck daddy’s wee-wee when he’s in the kitchen, play with his balls when he’s reading the newspaper, and we will kiss-kiss and touch-touch and pretend to play as prince and princess in a fairytale story whenever he wants. Jia Jia will also touch her clitty in front of daddy, and pretend to scratch her crotch to pull away her panties and let daddy take a peek into Jia Jia’s cute hairless sweet cunny, and let daddy put his tongue inside to drink Jia Jia’s maiden juice. Jia Jia also will act naughty, by dancing, swaying, sliding her hands and legs all over daddy’s body, but will also be kind and loving, like giving daddy a nice ear-cleaning, scratching his back and massaging his body whenever he wants, before climbing on top of him to rub my body against his, or if Jia Jia ends on up the floor beneath daddy, then Jia Jia will spread her legs and let daddy hump energetically into Jia Jia’s cunny lips.

Third, on the night of Jia Jia's passage to womanhood, Jia Jia will spread her legs like a good girl, and let daddy ram his wee-wee inside. The harder, the more ag... aggressive, the better, mama taught me that. It's important that daddy feels very, very nice inside Jia Jia, so that's why, Jia Jia has been touching... err... mastur... masturbate... masturba--ting her cunny every day to practise her muscles and squeeze-squeeze. It may be a bit painful to be fu-- fucked by an angry-looking daddy, but enduring pain is part of becoming daddy's sweet little girl and wife. So, Jia Jia will stay quiet and try not to struggle while daddy makes his first baby inside Jia Jia, and Jia Jia will forcibly relax her cunny to let daddy in as deep as he wants, then Jia Jia will also mastur... masturbate as daddy's wee-wee goes in and out, so that daddy's wee-wee gets squeeze-squeeze with lots of hot wet sounds, and daddy feels very, very nice. When daddy shoots his hot milk inside Jia Jia's womb, Jia Jia will count up to thirty and time the squeezes with each. Jia Jia will also masturba... masturbate faster and reach the peak, because it always feels best for daddy when his little girl is very hot, itchy and happy down there. Jia Jia will hold her hips high with pride and angle her hips carefully so that every last spurt of daddy's thirty spoonfuls of hot milk will reach Jia Jia's sweet womb, and inside, our cute baby will be made!"

"Oh, sweetie, you make mama so proud of you. Here, taste this vanilla custard filling that will go into the cake. It's as thick and sweet as the milk that the Lan pedophilic rapist man will pour inside you on the day you become a real woman."

"Enn! It tastes very good!"

.

In the mundane Mortal Realm of the past, where trade was conducted using pieces of gold and silver hammered then forged from the royal mints of the Imperial Court, Lan Zhan had very deep pockets sponsored by his sect - in the form of the fabled Jade Token which functioned like an unlimited platinum credit card with worldly privileges. In this brave new world where men had been substituted by yaoguai, Lan Zhan had Wei Ying to thank for, for not only to have speedy access to knowledge about how their new civilization and sociocultural aspects work, but also for his brand-new, advanced and upgraded body made from consuming Wei Ying's divinely special 3d-printed biscuit made from secret recipes; his body is insatiable in its lust as it is invincible and indomitable in strength and endurance, also as bottomless in terms of storage space and rechargeable energy, and incredible in its mind-boggling spectrum of blessed, awesome abilities including the art of lovemaking. In essence, Lan Zhan is the walking Bank of the yaoguai world, and a living, breathing, churning, sex-making machine that all yaoguai would love to have a taste of.

As soon as he approached the gates to Gui Shan village, two large golem guards standing over eight feet tall blocked his way. They were made of hillside rocks and forest wood, and pointed their primitive-looking, but still deadly overweight clubs and cudgels hastily fashioned from pine tree trunks, at him. Lan Zhan stood and raised his hands to show that he was unarmed and harmless, and that he wore absolutely nothing save for the piece of flimsy cotton to protect what little dignity he had left, therefore he did not hide any weapons. Several warriors, also in the nude except for tortoise shells, furred leather and scant prehistoric protective gear, with bows and arrows, and crude sharpened sticks ready in hand, carefully made their way across the dirt-covered village grounds towards him. Beyond the unfriendly welcoming party, Lan Zhan noted there were several huts and a couple of larger buildings, made from tree branches, straw, wood and stone, rather shoddy in their construction though they held up well amid the backdrop of valleys of rich, thriving natural surroundings and small farms, and of pleasant mild weather such as here in picturesque Gui Shan. Somewhere in the background, there was a constant melodious string of drum beats, of voices shouting, echoing off from one farmland on one hillside to another, and smells of smoke from fires and a hint of wild game meat cooking in a spit or two.

“F-- Friend... or foe!” one of the men shouted quite nervously, and his stick thrust closer to Lan Zhan’s jugular; he did not budge, but he did notice that the man, like everyone else, was tanned or with darker, brown skin colour, and sported colourful markings made from ruddy mud, natural grey mineral pastes and dried fruit juices all over their bodies. Behind, some younger ones jostled with their weapons and bodies, even tip-toed with wide-eyed curiosity mixed with fear, to marvel and gaze at such a fair-skinned visitor from the outside world. Lan Zhan vaguely recalled watching modern 21st-century documentaries on his holo-phone about tribes from the Far, Far West, some of which originated from a faraway strange foreign continent known as Feizhou.

The leader of the group - presumably, because he wore a silly hat made of straws and feathers sticking out in all directions atop his head, and had a nifty bone ring on his nose - Lan Zhan put on his bravest, most expressionless mask, and stated, “Friend.”

The group of men exchanged glances and hushed hisses that Lan Zhan recognized as the serpentine tongue of the Dark kind, though he couldn’t quite catch their words.

“P-- Purpose... or leave!” the next halted sentence was shouted. Understanding dawned upon the Lan man that these tribal individuals probably did not speak the language of the Middle Kingdom’s common tongue except for those who had some experience and exposure to the human world outside of the village - or what remained of it, these days. Lan Zhan knew that few powerful yaoguai had been around for aeons, and have evolved into higher beings such as demigods who wouldn't be seen living in such primitive dwellings as huts; so this community must have evolved very recently, and from little contact with humans - they were probably one of the handful of indigenous yaoguai that recently migrated from their respective home-realms, judging from the cleanliness of the small village that lacked litter, half-eaten corpses or skeletal remains typical of yaoguai culture and behaviour, the sight of recently-cut grass and chopped firewood, and from the quality of the air that remained slightly sour from lingering miasma of murder, resentment and hatred but nothing more.

Lan Zhan lifted an arm to scratch his chin, and that action triggered a sense of alarm, and suddenly, there were multiple sharpened edges pointed at him, including two huge blunt ones looming above his head, held by those golems. It didn't seem these yaoguai were terrific in their summoning and spellcasting powers, as otherwise, someone would have given more intelligence to those golems to not aim their weapons recklessly and risk casualties from friendly fire - or in this case, a smash to the ground into smithereens. He carefully worded his next, taking note to speak slowly and to make every pronunciation as clear as possible, so as to convey its right meaning and the nuances of non-verbal communication.

“Shhhhaawwwp-pingggg,” he drawled with raised eyebrows and with pearly teeth showing, as though he was about to devour something with his wide-opened mouth and O-shaped lips. It was comical, but it worked. More hushed exchanges between the group of men of shorter stature, then the leader lowered his weapon, and everyone else followed. The leader raised his hand with an open, grimy, sweaty palm, as though demanding for a payment. Perhaps a toll fee, Lan Zhan thought. Instinctively he reached for his sleeves, and realized belatedly that he wasn't wearing anything, and therefore, had no money stored there.

Well, not really.

Calmly, Lan Zhan bent forward and reached for his loincloth. With deft fingers, he lifted the cloth to the side, and his thick, hidden mighty penis sprang out and upward - over-six inch phallic meat gloriously engorged with blood and desire for friction, with a pearl of pre-cum oozing from the tip, fully aroused and iron-hard, angry-red in colour to match some of the markings on the yaoguai 's bodies, twitching energetically and raring to go.

Ten naked yaoguai male warriors bared their teeth in a warm, gleeful welcome at the presented feast, and some even hooted in excitement at a fresh throbbing sexual scent they hadn't smelled for a long while. All licked their lips in anticipation.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 228

Spending ten fucking fucks for ten fugly, sexually unattractive, smelly, primitive tribal men covered in dust, mud and grime, was like paying a hundred bucks entrance fee to walk into the only lousy supermarket in the neighbourhood to buy ten bucks' worth of groceries - it clearly wasn't a nice way to start his shopping. Lan Zhan blamed corruption, which he already knew was widespread among yaoguai culture, where every man was out there to grab an extra slice for himself; however, he really didn't have a choice - his caravan of a single carriage couldn't traverse dangerous war-inflicted lands, and they had to avoid major cities and even more established villages - and the wife was complaining for the need of more suitable nutrition as a new mother of four yaoguai babies. Thus, he had to steel his heart, fluff up and inflate his genitals, and walk straight up ahead like a real man, husband and father. Still, Lan Zhan ended up staggering with his still-empty basket, feeling rather poor and emptied in his loins - and he hadn't even started working down his shopping list yet.

Gui Shan is fundamentally a tiny village earmarked for future development in the center of a larger clearing of yaoguai -infested forested lands, and a fast growing one too. There is only a row of rickety shops at the so-called market area, surrounded by residential huts and other lesser wooden buildings for farming use. Many more huts are under construction further away, though still in their early stages. A council office, a village square and some gardens are even being worked on, from the sight of a handful of men wearing nothing but some safety gear, toiling the grounds, sawing wood and hammering mud-brick walls together.

Having lost his flimsy loincloth to those sex predators at the entrance gates, Lan Zhan strutted ahead as best as his battered pride would allow, with his dick bent because it was overused, voraciously sucked until it was stretched, then his balls were raped by triple-forked tongues again and again by smelly short dwarf men until every last drop of male nectar inside his testicles was vaporized from the swelling heat and inhaled out by those warty, puckered lips that covered dirty, rotten teeth, like dirty drug addicts smoking cigarettes off his balls. The residents of Gui Shan stopped what they were doing and stared rudely at him - a human foreigner dared to intrude their homeland, that is, a tasty delicacy of on two legs, walking past a street of hungry, probably malnourished demons living in the wild and seen as a threat, an invader, an unwelcome guest, and a source of nutrition, was an understatement. The unwanted attention felt twisted, perverse, even sickeningly erotic, because pairs of eyes kept staring at his fine young muscled body and particularly zoomed in on his genitals - and his fat, blood-engorged dick bobbed up and down with its foreskin peeled back, like a large glistening pink strawberry beckoning everyone around for an inviting taste.

Still, Lan Zhan was undeterred, and was adamant to make this shopping trip as enjoyable, if not as normal as any other errands he'd run in his daily life. He tried to portray a smile on his face and raised a hand to wave at his spectators, but they shunned away and pretended to busy themselves with household chores or picking ticks and fleas from their hair. He meandered a little and explored the back alleys and the front of people's houses - in the nude - as though he admired the greenery and urban landscaping.

True like a tourist's nightmare of being pickpocketed in a distant travel destination, he bumped into a small group of children - or rather, they pushed him to the ground. With plenty of shrill squeals and shouts, Lan Zhan was disorientated for a moment, as he rolled a bit from the fall, and found himself lying flat on his back on the dirt. One very naughty yaoguai girl, who looked absolutely like any ten or eleven-year old, naked, unruly and unwashed female brat, screamed with hisses and started to straddle his crotch eagerly. She must've been a very experienced thief, probably the gang leader of the lot, because she sat down aggressively and in a single slip, Lan Zhan's half-hard penis went into her wonderfully tight preteen vagina filled with little suckers and tentacle-like fingers, groping and massaging his throbbing tool into full bloom within seconds. There were plenty of squishes and squelches, and Lan Zhan Aaaaahn'ed with pleasure, when burning, rising heat skyrocketed from his reinvigorated loins, and the fact that he was having unwanted sex with an underaged child; the other children began to outrage his modesty by molesting his naked, defenceless skin, forcibly kissing his lips and nibbling his man-breasts, and fingers touched his waist, hips and hairy crotch inappropriately; the girl squeezed her thighs and locked Lan Zhan's wildly passionate penis in a death-like grip of undulating pussy walls, and she pistoned herself like a lethal fucking feminine machine with crude grunts and groans, while the helpless man pinned down by the weight of children claws the dirt and made many fingerprints on the sand because it felt really, really good to be reverse-raped by the demonic little girl.

Then, the inevitable happened - a tongue-like tentacle descended from her immature uterus, like a snake born of a fertile fruit, and it wiggled and caressed the overexerted, veiny penis that drilled deeper, deeper, closer, closer to the snake's elongated head; soon, Lan Zhan became giddy with lust due to the aphrodisiac scents emitted from the children, and his intoxicated body reacted by slamming harder until he was fully sheathed, in which lovely finger-like protrusions caressed and touched the shivering meaty organ tenderly, coaxing it to release its sweet seminal goodness, and that cursed tongue from the womb wormed its way through the gasping pee-slit, because the man had drunkenly thrust and entwined their crotches, both man and adolescent, as close as possible, and his penis was raped lovingly by the snake; the snake slithered and forced its way through the urethra, the prostate gland, and it continued to grow longer and longer, then forked into four branches, armed with spinning suction pumps, so that when each testicle was finally breached and infiltrated by two powerfully lashing tongue-tips, the poor man was emptied out within a couple of seconds until his balls deflated into wrinkly raisins; and then the girl above the moaning, howling man giggled and hnngh'ed, and she vaginally farted bubbles through her womb and through the long, long wiggling snake-like tube - and blew many, many lovely warm bubbles inside Lan Zhan's abused, bruised, and very ecstatically dying pair of viciously attacked man-eggs. A shiver ran through the man's spine as his penis was brutally savaged, and his balls shook violently from being eaten from the inside out, then, a tell-tale stillness in the trembling hips, the pelvis shuddered once, twice, faster and faster, a sudden wave erupted like a volcano that he was unprepared for, and his face locked into a half-yawn, half-grimace, his back arched upwards and he thrust high, high, oh to fuck that sweet underaged pussy and rape her babies inside with whatever little sperm he has left!

Lan Zhan ejaculated, thirty times powerful spasms inside the little girl and he howled at his loss - he was robbed, pickpocketed, had his one-fuck stolen from his penis by a gang of street brats. The girl rose after the last couple of satisfied, baby-fucking-licious throbs that left her pussy dripping with male goodness, and the demonic children crowded around to lick, to savour, to have a spoonful of the spent, virile loot to perhaps stave off their hunger a bit, being abandoned, neglected and unloved street children as they are. Semen devoured and consumed to the last finger lickin' goodness, the children squealed and ran off, leaving Lan Zhan in the deserted place.

He was left panting on the dirt floor of a back alley where nobody knew their touristy and flashy visitor had just been robbed of one fuck. It took a while to recover from the surprise rape-ambush by a bunch of kids, to regain his composure, to brush off the dust and mud on his back, and to gather his wits on how he would be able to complete his shopping in a village filled with sex predators both young and old, all wanting to steal his fucks from his all-day-buffet feast that is his tired, traumatized and shocked penis and balls. He stumbled on his way out, penis bent twice as much, and his dangling loose flattened balls rendered basically useless, drained, desiccated.

However, all is not lost for victimized Lan Zhan. Being a god in disguise, he simply found a hidden corner behind someone's backyard, then away from prying eyes he crouched in a ready martial-arts stance, legs spread apart and arms locked in a punching form. Next, with a soft rectal fart, he experienced a slight discomfort of an explosive qi deviation roiling from within, like a tsunami of gassy thunderstorms rolling out from belly to anus and desperately pushing the sealed sphincter walls to squeeze through and release all that smelly tension - at the last possible moment, he applied his ABS brakes, and converted that massive amount of energy generated from intestines and the colon, capable of lighting up solar systems, into standard recovery qi, and routed the glowing, storm-like wisps to his genitals. There was still a tiny bit of excess though, which escaped with a squeaky, high-pitched fwip!; the wild plants and someone's cabbage patch in the line of fire behind his rump immediately incinerated into smouldering ash particles and created a mini crater the size of a fart bubble, and Lan Zhan waved his hands behind his bum to clear off the residual smoke. He hurried off before anyone discovered the remains and suspected arson.

Lan Zhan realized that he shouldn't dawdle around like a tourist, because he was there to buy, and get out before he suffered too much damage sexually and emotionally. Thus, he barrelled across the main street and walked briskly towards the visible row of shops, never mind that he ran a gauntlet of stationary or pursuing yaoguai, nearly collided into pedestrians, and barely avoided other street brats trying to kidnap and rape him from the front of people's huts; yes, he felt hands groping his buttocks and groin whenever he passed small groups of interested yaoguai, and really, if he would return someday for philanthropic purposes, he'd be more than happy to have an orgy with everyone to feed their hunger - but for now, he needed to buy potatoes, cabbage and a chicken to make a herbal chicken soup for his wives, and if he managed to get any extra groceries, that would be fine too. As the first shop came into view, Lan Zhan was relieved to see that it had a large tabletop display of a variety of root and leafy vegetables, and a shelf of fresh meats, right in front of its entrance - he could just shop in that one building and leave quickly.

The man was an experienced home-maker, and he knew the good spuds from the bad ones. As he looked around first for good ol' potatoes, the local variety if possible since that should be cheaper than, say, imported ones, he started stroking himself - never mind that he was masturbating in public view, because he needed to get it hard so that it becomes as valuable as gold, in weight, at least. He touched a vegetable, then resumed jacking off, then touched another - he was one of those touchy-feely customers who preferred to pinch and press their vegetables before making their choice of purchase. However, his first monumental challenge appeared as a haphazard mountain of potato-like tubers on one of the tables, consisting of different colours, shapes and sizes, all piled up as one cluttered heap. He picked one strange round, ginger-coloured tuber with a bit of fuzz on its surface, and thought it was a spoiled one, and gave it a little pinch just to be sure - and it meowed. Immediately, he yelped and threw it aside, and the old lady shopkeeper who had very saggy breasts, a bent, almost skeletal body with a bloated belly, and a body full of warts and wrinkles, gave him an evil eye.

“Good potato! Don’t throw!” she snarled, and went to pick it up while shaking her head in disappointment. She wore a scarf around her frizzy greying hair and looked every bit like a witch with a crooked nose and bad teeth. “This pussy potato! You man don’t know! Girl eat, good for pregnant!” she squawked and pointed a crooked, knobbled finger at him, then at her own saggy bloated belly, below which was a very hairy trail of hair until her crotch that was covered entirely with uncombed, unkempt curls denser than a prickly desert bush. Lan Zhan immediately lost his erection at the horrendous and unappealing sight - he gasped inwardly and retched at the thought that he’d be paying fucks to this mummified walking corpse for his vegetables. His eyes went wildly up and down the pile, but he couldn’t find any bloody-looking potatoes because it was so colourful like a candy store and there was an assortment of colours, surfaces, shapes, even sounds emitting from the heap. None of the potatoes looked like it had been bleeding recently, so he thought he should try the layer underneath; after all, in shopping for vegetables, good stuff tended to be easily picked off the surface by earlier customers, so one should try his luck deeper inside.

The man murmured an apology, and stuck his hand into the pile to pull out another one. This time, it was a thin, undernourished elongated one, twisted and rubbery texture. “Skinny potato,” the shopkeeper growled, “Make skin young. Smooth. Beautiful. Girl like, boy like too.” Another try and he grasped blindly until he accidentally crushed one that felt like an overripe squishy fruit; disgusted, he retracted his hand and found that it was covered with black slimy pus wriggling with unidentifiable worms and maggots. Lan Zhan wanted to cry at that point and sealed his nostrils with magic, and fortunately the shopkeeper threw a ragcloth at him to wipe off the mess. “Undead potato. Make dead undead. Make old become young. Very good! You buy? One fuck only,” she tried to grin with her cracked lips and hissed hoarsely, but her mouth stinked so badly and that only caused the man to cringe and shake his head timidly. His penis shrank to the size of a pinkie by then, and he prayed for miracles for the potatoes to rearrange themselves the way they should be, sorted by type, colour, shape and sizes so that he could buy the handful he needed and be on his way; he was already thinking of shoplifting and simply running away without paying for his purchases, because he really, really didn’t want to have sex with a wrinkly smelly gritty great-grandmother.

Defeated and with shaky hands, Lan Zhan the house-husband lifted up his shopping list and showed it to the old lady. Alas, his renowned housewife-ly skills were undone in the realm of the yaoguai, and he truly needed outside help, whether or not if that meant sacrificing his loins to a horrible witch would hinge upon a miraculous divine intervention of sorts. The lady laoban was an astute trader, so surely she can help him find the right products professionally, and hopefully, without overcharging and cheating the poor man out of his loins.

“Mmmm. This for new mother’s chicken soup. Your wife birthed?” she asked with broken Middle Kingdom language after peering at the crumpled piece of paper. Lan Zhan found it difficult to understand, but after a few minutes of conversing, he was getting the hang of it. He felt a bit relieved that she didn’t chase him, a wretched human who preyed on yaoguai in other parts of the country, out with a straw broom, and in fact, she tried to help him - probably having been a mother herself -, emphasized his situation, and even spoke his language to bridge the communication gap.

“Enn. Four girls,” he sniffled and blushed, bowed and had to rub his nose out of embarrassment. It felt like a conversation between the next door aunt and the young, inexperienced husband of a young married couple.

“Good... good... I take blood potato for you. Ghost cabbage and vampiric chicken too?” she returned the slip to the man, and went about rummaging through her tables filled with messily arranged vegetables.

“Please, thank you,” he stood as still as a mouse, and let the laoban do his shopping. He watched as she brought out a small basket tray and started to pick spuds out from another pile of potatoes where blood-red ones were found, glistening in the sunlight with their wet juices atop the rest. Oh, Lan Zhan thought, and knocked himself in the head for his carelessness, he shouldn’t have been so impatient in shopping, and should have checked out the store’s goods first.

“You young man! Must learn more about making babies. And mother healthy,” she barked back with a laugh, as she picked one by one - she actually checked each potato to select what he hoped were the best ones - though Lan Zhan really didn’t know how one could differentiate one blood potato from another, because they all look like bloody hardened palm-sized disfigured organs carved out from a cadaver.

“Yes, I should. Thank you,” he nodded, and was also grateful for the lady’s kindness and attentiveness in customer service in picking potatoes.

“This potatoes, four fuck,” she looked back and then jiggled the tray lightly for the man to see. There were about four potatoes in there, rolling around wetly, leaving behind icky dried blood stains. Oh no, Lan Zhan thought, surely he couldn’t be raped and be losing an orgasm for one measly potato each? Was a man’s orgasm considered that inexpensive?

“One?” he ventured meekly, and even raised an index finger.

“Too cheap!” the old lady spat rudely on the floor, and to Lan Zhan’s shock, her saliva caused the ground to sizzle with acid before it smoked itself off, leaving a little burnt indentation, “Four fuck, I add crying carrots too, no extra charge. Your wife eat, then next babies born, cry loud, strong lungs!” She showed him a stringy-looking carrot that wriggled like a living worm, and yes, it made some crying baby noises since it was woken up from slumber from the tabletop. The laoban even beat her chest to emphasize her point, and Lan Zhan had to look away from swaying, shaking elongated sagging loose breasts that reached to her navel.

“Err... no need. Just the potatoes, please... for two f-- f--...?” he shook his head and showed her two fingers, and prayed, prayed that she would sell him that vegetables and he would pay with his eyes closed and have needles stuck to his sleeping meridian - so that he could sleep away the nightmarish experience of being raped by a witch - and walk away with a kink in his memory and crooked smile like a nice customer.

“You no want carrots? Too bad, they good. How about heichai ? It opposite bok choy, after eat, golden core become black. Twice better for new mother, than ghost cabbage you wanted. I give discount, very fresh! Just five fuck,” the old lady cackled with interest in trying to strike a bargain and sell more. She held a bundle of the said blackened vegetable that looked fit for composting in one hand, and a head of pale, almost translucent cabbage in the other, and she thrust the heichai into Lan Zhan’s direction. He backed off, because he thought he caught a whiff of rotten greens.

“Err... just the ghost cabb--” but he was cut off, when the old lady tossed the head of ghost cabbage back into the pile of other gross produce on the table; but that was one of the items in his shopping list, right - and wait, how much did the ghost cabbage cost, if indeed the heichai was worth twice the nutritional value? Auuugh, this was too frustrating, and Lan Zhan wanted to pull his hair and to just buy what he needed!

“You stingy customer. You also no want this blood tomato in front of you? I charge four fuck also. Easier to cook, very easy to eat, same-same nutritious. Potatoes boil longer. That why tomato more expensive, but I charge four fuck only. You want?” It was becoming a headache to haggle with the dense, or very cunning old laoban .

“Wait... I just want the pota--” Lan Zhan reached out to point at the blood potatoes at the top of the pile in front of her, desperately hoping that she’d get the message and just put four of them into her tray and bag them up for payment.

But fate did not smile upon him, and the shopkeeper moved seamlessly to another table, away from his precious blood potatoes. She dug her clawed gnarly fingers into a bamboo container of pearly white rice, raised her hand and let the grains drop like sand from the beach. “Oh, oh, you buy rice? Special rice to make porridge. Good for your four girls. I give toys, I sew cute dolls for children too! Buy together, I sell six fuck, very good healthy family!” she gave her brightest oiliest and rotten-toothed smile, and she waved an arm around her tables, not really indicating what was included in that six-fuck deal, before ending up with pointing inside her store, where Lan Zhan had his attention diverted for a moment to stare at more merchandise hung on display - straw dolls, lanterns, little handheld windmills, shiny sculptured rocks, wrapped sticks of candied tanghulus, and other knick knacks that his girls might find interesting to play with-- but wait, he should be buying vegetables and not be tricked into looking at other good he didn’t need--

“No, uhh... the pota--” he started again, but the old shopkeeper waved her hand in dismay, to the point Lan Zhan was afraid that he’d offended her.

“You so stubborn, only talk potatoes. Okay, this potatoes, three fuck,” she stated and pointed at the spuds, but she stood in front of the wrong pile of potatoes - the one that didn’t have those blood potatoes that he so really, really wanted, “That include one fuck for my boy, I give free, since you so handsome. So pay up, three fuck,” the laoban seemed to have concluded the deal and she raised her hand with palms open, and looked at him expectantly, as though she was waiting for him to deposit pieces of silver on her palm.

“Excuse me?” Lan Zhan was absolutely lost, one vein threatening to pop out of his temples and his hands balled into fists, not knowing whether he was buying the right potatoes, whether he was paying in cold hard cash or in fucks, and since when was the old lady's son part of the deal?

“My boy. He eat skinny potato, undead potato, many good vegetables that I sell, he eat. You want? One fuck for one boy. If three boy, I charge two fuck only. Very good, very young, very nice!” she walked off and entered her shop, where she started shouting foreign words in the Dark tongue, looking as exasperated as a mother working hard to man her business without any help.

“Wait, laoban , come back, I just... just wanted the pota--” Lan Zhan started to follow her into the shop, because now he's lost his potatoes and the shopkeeper that he was supposed to pay his fucks

“You young, have wife birthed. Auntie knows, see pussy potato, you scared. Ha ha! You not seen penis potato? Of course, only boy have penis potato! Here, here, come in, Auntie show you penis potato!” her shrill raspy voice was unmistakable, and the same goes for what greeted Lan Zhan when he stepped into a wonderland of tall aisles lined with a mind-boggling variety of vegetables, provisions, sundry goods of different colours, shapes, sizes and forms, wiggling and not wiggling-- then her three sons trotted out like good little boys, aged eight, nine and ten, she would announce later, fully naked and their bodies baby-smooth and fair as moonlight, very appealing to the eyes unlike the grandmother witch, and they'd skipped and hopped around Lan Zhan, catching him in a circle of three dancing naked underaged boys, their adorable pinkie-length penises jiggling eagerly in their energetic movements, then they thrust their hips in unison to show him their delectable plump grape-sized balls, then they twirled around and shook their bum-bums - oh so bouncy and molestable! - and seduced him deeper, deeper into the first shop in the row of stores in the middle of the mythical Gui Shan.

Lan Zhan learned a lot about the vegetables, and he received special lessons about penis potatoes - he'd be sucking one vigorously and have one each in his hand to stroke his new boytoys to completion, and they'd shower him with excited boy-squeals, trembling hips, arching squirts of pee and seedless fluids - the ten-year old did shoot out virginal cum, because it was his first time, when Lan Zhan devolved into a orgy feast of three willing little boys, spreading their legs for their Uncle Customer, begging him to play with their penises and suck their balls so that the lower testicle becomes longer, the higher testicle equalized in height and size from tingling swellings, then Lan Zhan joyfully stuck his over-six inch monster - that suddenly had a taste for gay sex and pedophilic boy-boy parties after having too much heterosexual relationships in recent times - into their cute pink puckered anuses. Only one fuck for one boy, three fucks for two, love the boys again and again and they will love you back too, they sang like an advertising jingle and swayed their boy-hips sexily like a porn advertising for male prostitutes, and Lan Zhan told himself that he is god, he is the richest man in the world, so surely, he can afford to pay three fucks for three boys, six fucks for twice the happy penis fun and soul-draining orgasms, inside the dark dingy-looking shop where no other customers passed by.

Notes for the Chapter:

Wishing everyone a Happy New Year!

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 229

It turned out that Lan Zhan overspent and paid more than ten fucks to the old shopkeeper manning the first shop in Gui Shan, that is, for a bunch of odd vegetables and for her boys' virginities. Then, she gave him coupons from the store next door, that is, he gets half a fuck off for every two fucks spent; being a housewife-trained house-husband, Lan Zhan couldn't not check out the offer, because how often does one get a twenty-fifty percent discount for all items on sale, right? The deal was sweetened when the old lady shopkeeper recommended that he browse around the next few stores, because surely, there are other lovely naked boys and girls, men and women, waiting to be sampled too - and if they're to his liking, and there are other things he wanted to buy, he could pay using fucks and support the local economy, which would be the right thing to do as a responsible citizen - and earn more coupons, because was Coupon Day, apparently.

He ended up buy a whole lot more, collecting more savings in fucks from the coupons to spend on more unnecessary purchases, that is, a bang for his buck and a bang for his fuck - such as ten straw brooms that he didn't need because there's nothing to sweep inside the horse carriage, but the price of each broom came with a precocious child's virginity and a coupon for a free bag of beans with his next purchase of above two fucks, but oh, that child could be a young teenage boy or a fertile maiden that he couldn't resist, so he made sure the store sold out of straw brooms that day, and hurried off to the next store with a handful of coupons to spend his increasingly exhausted and drained fucks.

The sun was setting and Lan Zhan still hadn't finished visiting every store in the row of shops, and he'd forgotten why he was there in the first place; because five carts of knick knacks, household items, fresh foods and groceries, provisions and other non-perishables sat idling in the dimming light and under the roof of the communal stables, which contained four blood potatoes, a head of ghost cabbage, a slaughtered vampiric chicken - that fortunately never goes bad since it was dead in the first place - amongst so many other things, and he was still paying fucks for things he didn't need to buy.

So, while busily humping against a giant furry white rabbit and his penis one-two'd so happily inside its tight, fleshy, very warm and spongy wet rabbit-vagina, he alternated with making love with a plant yaoguai whose gender-neutral sexual organs resemble a giant carnivorous pitcher plant's pitfall trap - because fucking that nectar-coated juicy vessel was ten times better than any little girl's vagina or a little boy's rectum, and it came with slick furred hairy bristles that sent his penis to heaven with each thrust of hips - before pulling out and having slime balls play with his exceedingly excited hard-on that it kept pumping out diluted watery one-two pee squirts, before ghostly figures, wisps and disembodied phantoms rushed forward to claim their turn, and rushed into his pelvis through his irritated, inflamed pee-slit like a garden hose fountain working in reverse, thus possessing and swelling his insides beautifully with swirling spirits and violent, vile viscuous, plasma-like black miasma, that his urethra and prostate gland spasmed and convulsed out of control, and his dying testicles bulged and bounced, brutally eaten and devoured from the inside out, and became filled with millions of ghostly tadpoles-like pulses of dark light from evil spirits that decided to take residence inside those bloated, bruised, hemorrhaging ruined man-eggs and make those eggshell-husks their playground of sperm-raping orgyfeasts.

Elsewhere, Wei Ying finally received a Fairy Messenger call after sundown from the lost-in-shopping husband. Lan Zhan's voice was raspy and croaky, filled with sexy panting and moans and uunh-uunh-uunhs in between words - but that was fine, because the couple already know what sexual horrors he'd face when shopping with fucks -, and he told the wife that he couldn't make it on time, and that they should start dinner without him.

“It’s okay, love. A-Qing jiejie brought deer and mountain goat meat from Lanling, and we’re having a barbeque later. In the meantime, you keep shopping and make sure to put away your bags and purchases into your body like how I’ve instructed earlier... oh, you didn’t? Do it now, before the vegetables go bad... okay, uh-huh, I’ll hang on the line...”

Jiang Yan Li reached out to her beloved didi, who had stopped moving his hips in and out while taking the call - because he’d finished ejaculating by then and had gone a little soft from the distracting call; his throbbing, satiated penis was yanked out of Wen Qing’s soaking pussy with a wet plop, and A-Xian didi was dragged to the side to face a spread-eagled nine-year old Jia Jia’s, where Wei Ying instinctively lowered his body and allowed the bed to dip from his weight, and he slipped his invigorated dick into the glistening, lubed hairless slit between Jia Jia’s legs without second thought - because what else can a man do, when he settles down comfortably between an adolescent’s smooth thighs, right? - and started thrusting passionately in and out of that fresh new de-flowered bud. Lucky for Wei Ying, the call was hands-free, so both of his itchy horny hands were free to grope the child’s breasts and body, and out of bad habit, he let his palms cup her developing soft cotton-white mounds, and started to squeeze them rhythmically, before naughtily bob his head between them to steal a suckle from those milkless teats.

Yan Li remarked, with her soft, assuring voice, that next in line was an eight-year old whose name nobody could recall because there are too many members in his awesome incestuous family - so Wei Ying shouldn’t dawdle even while during a Fairy Messenger call, and keep exercising his pelvis like he’s supposed to. It was hard work, for a half-father to breed his wives, his daughters, and his daughters’ descendents, without the help of his significant other half, on the king-sized bed. Fortunately, Yan Li was intelligent enough to count the number of times each female was mated, before nudging those sweet bouncing buttocks and tap on the tired bucking hips, to remind the man that he shouldn’t spend too much time with a few old favourites - because familiarity breeds contempt -, and try the newest additions to the family, that is, his great-grand children who'd mature sexually that evening and begged their Matriarch to spill his semen into their sweet, virginal flowerbuds. Wei Ying had long given up on who exactly he was impregnating, or trying to figure out why the age of sexual consent and sexual maturity was decreasing with each passing generation - as long as his happy penis speared wildly into his girls' flowerbuds and their welcoming body warmth, and he takes all the pleasures he wants from his females and sometimes, males too.

“Oh, you're back, lao gong . Five carts absorbed... really? What on earth did you buy-- no, nevermind. Oh, tone down will you, you're braying like an ugly donkey with each moan, and your shouts are harsh on the ears-- I know it's not your fault, because you're paying your fucks and it feels too good not to shout. Hey, your voice is hoarse, go get a pack of cooling herbs to make herbal drinks to soothe your throat, okay? ... Oh fuck, that feels so good, squeeze 'em, squeeze 'em around daddy, breeding your pussy like this-- oh, sorry, I was distracted. Go on. I don't know what kind of herbs, just ask the shopkeeper what they have... coupons? Sure, use 'em all, get all the discounts you can, and make sure you don't bring any of them back, 'coz we're not coming back here after today... Oh sweet baby Guan Yin, I'm cumming, I'm cumming, open up lil' girl, let daddy shoot his load into where it truly belongs!.... Sorry, I'm still having sex... err, what? To finish up the coupons, you'll have to stay out late? That's a scam! Whatever, lao gong , just come back when you're done. Me and the girls are busy making babies, twelve generations at a time, and having grilled meats soon. Uh huh. Okay. Mmm. Love you too. Bye!”

By the time the Fairy Messenger spell was cut off, Wen Qing huffed in dismay and closed her thighs, because she thought she'd have seconds - but her A-Xian didi had moved on to the eight-year old after A-Ying had been properly inseminated in record time over a casual Fairy Messenger conversation. She tapped on her wrist and the time was projected on the surface of her hand. “A-Xian,” she said rather sweetly, but Wei Ying really didn't like the way she misuses his nickname reserved for his shijie 's use, “A-Qing jiejie has to go now, because she has to go and fill up with Nie, Jin and Lan seed, and there’s a gangbang scheduled at nine o’ clock tonight starring me, the most beautiful Wen gu niang ever,” she said casually with a petulant smirk, and rubbed her pregnant belly; despite the slight animosity between the half-father and the clingy and overly-slobbering bitch in heat, Wei Ying had to respect her wishes and treat her as a rightful married wife of his, and pander to her whims and desires - including cheating on Jiang Cheng, letting her run loose with other men from distant lands, then bring back semen from various males from other clans to be shared and disseminated, and inseminated, into his burgeoning family tree.

The only man in the packed carriage filled with naked, hot fertile females reached over and gave Wen Ying a sweet peck on her forehead, and sent her off. Wen Qing grabbed a loose dress and climbed out of the creaky carriage in the middle of the forest, where she easily cast a Dark spell to open a cursed portal - an ugly tear in space-time - to step through and return to the North. Wei Ying paid no attention, and roared with glee, snapped his hips forward, and pressed so hard until he could feel muscles straining and pulsing very, very strongly as the first waves of ejaculations tore through his overjoyed pelvis and his toes curled with utter delight as well as a crooked, drunken, silly sexually flushed grin etched on his face - because he was happy to be shooting his virile semen deep into yet another helpless underaged girl pinned underneath him in a bed of cushions and soiled, twisted sheets. That unnamed pregnant eight-year old girl had streaks of other clans’ lineage in her, so adding his own collection into the bubbling pool inside her succulent pussy that stored other mens’ dirty tainted seed - because sometimes, she would make trips to distant places in the Far, Far West to breed with men of fair skin and strange blonde hair, or rough but very passionate wild barbarians from the Far, Far North -, would ensure that she will bear a litter of healthy mixed babes in a few days’ time.

“Wei Ying.”

“Hm?”

“Do you think we’ve strayed too far?”

“Huh... from what?”

“Our dreams? Our goals? Our relationship?”

“I’m still here, darling. By your side, to wherever fate takes us. We still make babies together. And we have lots of gay sex when the wives are too busy taking care of the kids and their other lovers.”

“Mn.”

Lan Zhan looked out of the carriage’s window with his chin resting upon a palm, and he fingered a token medal in his other hand. It was a shiny round coin-shaped medal with wavy, curly Dark-tongue scripts inscribed into the slightly scratched golden metal surface. It weighed little, and he knew it wasn’t made of any kind of precious metal - it could be a piece of wood that’s painted to look like the real thing, and if any, it looked more like a toy medal that kids get from winning games in fun fairs, amusement parks or something.

They could build those in Gui Shan, he thought, and the kids will cherish them. He penned that thought down inside his vast body-encased storage space, and instructed builders, architects and engineers to get to work. There were at least twenty generations of yaoguai children living in Gui Shan, sowed wildly from Lan Zhan's happy loins and their grateful, loving and caring multi-species mothers, so he was sure they'd appreciate some wholesome family fun in their daily lives besides the usual smattering of classroom studies, scholarly arts, poetry recital, memorizing family rules, and demonic cultivation that's offered as standard curriculum for children aged four to twelve.

That medal signified that he was elected as the mayor of Gui Shan, because he had spent enough fucks to buy the whole village. It basically stated that the holder of the medal is the one who holds the key to the fast-developing village, or something fancy to that effect - he wouldn't know to be sure, because he couldn't really read Dark-tongue. Thus, being illiterate in matters of yaoguai society and civilization, he accepted it without question after stumbling out of the last store in the row of shops, a little after midnight. There was a small crowd waiting in front of the store, and they cheered and applauded to welcome the tomato-red, heaving and panting, bow-legged man who nearly tripped every other step, because his loins had been donated to the village in its entirety. Lan Zhan believed he won a kind of marathon, and gratefully lowered his head to accept the medal around his neck, presented by the male warrior leader that allowed him through the gates to Gui Shan earlier that day.

Everyone in Gui Shan, whether male, female, animal or plant-kin, was his relative, lover, husband, wife, and child, he was told. Lan Zhan wasn't really thinking straight by then, since it was past his bedtime, and he was extremely relaxed and sleepy after working so hard to fuck an entire village, literally. So, with a hand over his heart as he was instructed by that male warrior leader, he read an oath on a parchment shoved to his face, and he swore to take ownership of the entire village and care for its inhabitants like his own, and race to develop and evolve the settlement just as any great man, yaoguai or god should in the eternal game of SimCity (or SinCity) - and promptly snored. Later, early next morning, worrywart Wei Ying found him lying on a huge blank slate of barren, featureless flat land that had been swept and cleared out, as though the village had been erased out of existence by a swipe of godly thunder strikes; Wei Ying grew anxious over what happened to their rustic pitstop destination, and he quickly rummaged Lan Zhan's inventory by sticking a hand into his navel - true enough, he found the blood potatoes, ghost cabbage and vampiric chicken that Yan Li wanted to cook, and surprisingly, he found the whole Gui Shan village intact, right inside Lan Zhan's tummy as well.

A quick download of changelogs from Lan Zhan's body, and Wei Ying understood what had transpired. "You've absorbed the entire village of yaoguai, their homes and possessions, condensed the huts, buildings and farmlands, and surrounding mountains, forests, rivers and valleys to fit into your unlimited storage space within your body, and now you're their mayor running the place! You're incredible, lao gong, because even I didn't think that you'll want to collect towns and cities inside your body!" he exclaimed, to which Lan Zhan didn't quite comprehend the implications, but he blushed nevertheless from the praise by his lao po. In short, Lan Zhan's awesome body not only contained stuff, but also civilizations - and promptly, Wei Ying's cloned siblings far, far away started transferring their motherships, continents, planets and galaxies into the Grand Patriarch, who has now become a convenient dumpster of surplus resources from the Kingdom. Lan Zhan felt an alarming rumble in his belly when Wei didi happily migrated the entire copy of the family's cloud drive, and the infinite amount of excess food, equipment, raw materials, minerals, farm animals, orchard trees, cruise ships, skyscrapers, spaceships and whatnots, straight into the space that wasn't protected with passwords yet.

"But lao po," Lan Zhan asked with a crease on the brows, and he felt a little nauseated from the sudden rush of matter settling down upon his gut, “Would that make me... fat? Would that mean that I must act with grace and purpose, to think ahead about consequences beyond, because my body will be the home of millions, so I shouldn’t behave unnecessarily and risk those precious lives?” It was such a broad question that answers would be impossible in such a short span of time; the impact to the couple’s daily life needs to be studied for a duration of time, before a more concrete conclusion can be offered.

Wei Ying laughed off Lan Zhan’s inconsequential concern, “Ha ha! If you think that by snapping your fingers, slipping on a banana peel, or performing vigorous workouts would affect the lives and objects inside your body, then you’ve nothing to worried about! My 3d-printing technology solved that aeons ago by putting in extra structural reinforcements and fatty padding in your abdomen. And if you’re worried about gaining weight...” in which Wei Ying naughtily slid across the couch and then placed his hands on Lan Zhan’s visible paunch, and started rubbing and jiggling the flesh energetically.

The belly massage turned out to be a little too much, plus the nauseating feeling of gas building up inside his tummy - and with no control over the passing of wind, Lan Zhan inadvertently farted - a long string of bubbly rumbles into the cushioned couch, fortunately fire- and destruction-proofed inside the carriage, and his belly flattened back to its original state. Wei Ying cackled, to the husband’s embarrassment, but not for long, because Yan Li called out for them to have a meal outside the carriage that she cooked over a campfire - and little kiddy squeal-y Wei Ying made a dash for it, followed by a comforted, reassured Lan Zhan.

Returning to the present - Lan Zhan fiddled with the medal for a bit longer, before letting it glow blue, then melted into an amorphous shape before getting absorbed under the skin. It was, in the grand scheme of things, another Achievement Unlocked, per se.

“Lan Zhan! Stop staring into space! I used my Superior Eye spell and pinpointed our next stop! It’s a city not too far from here, probably a couple of hours by horse!” Wei Ying waved his hands from a rocky outcropping at the cliffside, where they took a short break and to allow the horses to graze hillside meadows. Lan Zhan nodded and got off the carriage, because he would like to have a good look at the human or yaoguai settlement from a distance, before Wei Ying sends him off to absorb it into his body; the couple had been on a fun spree of mopping up farming villages, bustling towns and even wartorn cities filled with fighting soldiers off the map, to Lan Zhan’s detriment and to Wei Ying’s megalomania glee; fighting soldiers and cultivators slinging fireballs and lightning strikes at each other tended to give him stomach cramps and bad gas, but that was trivial compared to the monumental task of redrawing the map of the Middle Kingdom, now that mountain ranges, cavern networks, coastlines, lakes, rivers, glaciers, deserts, even islands and entire weather systems are voraciously devoured into Lan Zhan’s godly belly - whatever obstacles that hindered their journey and needed to be removed instantly, or whatever that tickles Wei Ying’s fancy -, leaving behind featureless landscapes of flat, sandy-brown dirt terrains that are as bland as a drying coat of new monotonous paint on the wall - or, in the lingo of videogame map-making, a blank tile.

Pregnant-again Yan Li was caught up in the excitement too, after depositing her newborns inside the trio’s shared underground kingdoms co-located into Lan Zhan’s belly - because there’s just so much more space in there. She approached Wei Ying and Lan Zhan with a basket of fruits and herbs she’d foraged from the forests, to be shared by all three and their driver, for a nice summer picnic under the blue skies, at the cliffside that would soon be turned into another slab of wasteland.

Notes for the Chapter:

Happy New Year!

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 230

Pssst.

Lao gong, lao gong, can you move a bit? Forward and back. Again. Forward and back. I'm trying to kiss A-Mian's womb, but you've gone soft inside her hairless cunny and I'm so far away.

Oh, yeah, I see her pretty pink cervix there. It's like a tiny penis-head inside her vagina! It's so cute, I want to kiss the pinhole slit! Move it, hubby, bring me closer!

Oh, A-Mian smells so appetizing! Tangy and citrus-y, she whets my appetite! And her walls are fleshy, full of ridges, rubbing sexily against me, mmmm it's so firm yet spongy. I'm so glad I named her after Mian Mian, because she's just like a ball of cotton, fluffy and soft! Lick, lick, daddy is flirting with A-Mian's cunny walls! Lick, lick! So tasty!

More, more lao gong, you need to grow longer, otherwise I can't reach her cervix that looks so kissable... Mmmh! Mmmh! I'm doing my part, I'm twitching, swinging, dancing inside her tight hot tunnel. Do you feel good, lao gong? Keep going, I can feel the blood pumping inside me, I'm growing larger by the second, and I feel very, very excited!

There! Kiss-kiss! Oh, A-Mian, daddy is kissing your cervix! Kiss-kiss! You're so cute, A-Mian, daddy wants to always wish your womb good mornings every day with these kisses! Oooh, A-Mian, you're sucking daddy in, daddy can't get out! Kiss-kiss!

Ohh... ha ha! Lao gong , you're getting very randy, aren't you? I'm bumping my face against our little girl's womb very energetically once every second. Luckily I'm fully aroused and inflated, full of bounciness and zest! Kiss-kiss! A little to the left... kiss-kiss! A direct hit, yay! More to the left, please lao gong , because your dick is kinda curved, and it gets squashed inside this very narrow hot tunnel... Aieeee! Too fast! I'm hurtling in too fast, and I've just grown more than I should! I'm gonna smash my face into A-Mian's womb!

Holy...! Woah...! I'm in! I'm in! I'm in heaven! I'm inside A-Mian's womb! It's ... so ... pretty ... ! I'm the first man to actually be consciously present and to see her insides! One small step for man, one giant leap for mankind, that's who I am! Oh, lao gong , A-Mian's womb looks so juicy, it's a paradise of pinks and reds, of fluffy cradles and gently rolling hills of cushiony beds for our future grandchildren! Can we stay inside here forever? Please?

Ack! My body's being massaged very violently, and her womb looks like it's cramping up! It's an earthquake! Is A-Mian orgasming around you--- oh no, I feel.. I feel.. urrrgh... my insides are churning, I think I'm gonna... urrrgh... I'm gonna puke... urrrrgh....

Lan Zhan woke up with a lovely good ol' nutting from the loins. Thirty pulsating ejaculations that felt very, very nice, radiating tension-releasing, relaxing vibes throughout his sweaty pelvis as his loins vacated themselves pleasantly into one-or-the-other daughters or stepdaughters of his. It didn't matter, those horny girls love to crawl over him day in and day out, and ride him till kingdom come and continue to ride him past sunsets and bedtimes. He let out a quiet, restrained moan because it felt too good to cum inside a little girl's vagina after all, and he didn't want to wake up the rest of his wives, lovers and progeny, and she played squeeze-squeeze with his helpless penis lodged deeply inside whilst dreaming of something very naughty kiddie sex scene.

He gently turned to the side, and with a wet plop, his twitching, sated and blood-engorged penis slipped out with a trail of cum trickling out from her stretched, elastic hole. Something felt amiss; he groped the bedspread and pillows, then realized that Wei Ying was gone. Probably outside taking a leak, he thought. Then he opened his eyes a wee bit, and in the glinting moonlight filtering through the curtained window of their carriage, he spied the sweet springy mounds of a boy's ass. It was probably one of his sons, or grandsons. Smooth, pale as moons, naked and a single puckered rosebud invitingly spread itself open then close, open then close, in tandem with the boy's gentle breathing as he slept. His penis twitched with interest, and jumped a little against his thigh, that yes, yes, the adolescent boy looks tasty for a nice midnight snack.

No. I don't wanna. I saw 'im take a dump in the river earlier, and he didn't wipe his asshole with leaves! He just waded in the water and opened up his butt, so it can't be clean especially without soap and a good scrub!

Lan Zhan yelped at the squeaky voices coming from his crotch, and jolted from the bed. All at once, there were several female murmurs, some sleepy, some with cracked voices, some annoyed half-snorts. "It's okay, just going out to take a leak. Sleep tight, loves," he assured his harem and quickly climbed out of the packed horse carriage, carefully picking his way through a tangled mess of naked, cum-stained bodies, breasts, buttocks, limbs, and sensitive but well-used genitals. It was still summer, but the night was chilly especially up in the mountains, and he didn't wear a single garment at all - he didn't have to, since his harem would tear his clothes off before he got to lie on the bed anyway and play gangbang with him until he snored from those good feelings throbbing from within.

Lan Zhan sprinted into a bush and stared at his crotch; the waxing full moon and clear night skies gave him a clear view of what went on beneath the light bush of pubic hair.

What? Haven't you seen a talking penis before?

Lan Zhan facepalmed and pressed his temples from an ongoing headache. "Wei Ying," he muttered in resignation to his loins. He didn't need to instruct the man-cum-penis to explain.

Through animated movements that only a penis can make, with its fleshy turgid length and the two swinging balls, Wei Ying narrated a hiccup in their shared Dark magic originating from the former. Each was having his own sexual fun while slumbering on the bed packed tighter than sardines in a can of warm nubile young bodies, and inevitably, Wei Ying turned to one side, Lan Zhan to the other, and their lips simultaneously bumped into each other. Nothing happened then, but Wei Ying shoved Lan Zhan away to the latter's side of the way, which resulted in someone's daughter or wife getting pinned against the wall of the carriage, and someone else's arm flung out and landed harshly to slap Lan Zhan's cheek. Yet nothing happened, still, until Lan Zhan reacted nearly instantly from the stinging pain, and he raised his hand and unknowingly slapped Wei Ying's cheek whilst sleeping - it was like a chain reaction of sorts.

The penis spun clockwise like a moving wheel, “And you know what? That slap of yours was painful enough to wake any departed souls,” then it spun counter-clockwise, “... and the next thing I knew, I opened my eyes just in time to see myself glowing blue!”

The phallus of cockmeat then made wiggly movements like a bendable gummy worm, and the two testicles swayed enthusiastically from their pendulous weights to illustrate just how much he'd glowed, and how thrilled he felt back then at the novel experience.

“I melted! I literally melted into a ball of light and I thought I was dying! There was a float-y sensation, I felt myself rise and I started to see things around myself, like a bird's eye view of everyone inside the carriage! I started to cry because I wasn't prepared to leave this place, and I tried to scream your name but my voice would come out...”

The penis drooped and shook with sadness, until its foreskin covered over its head like a hoodie, and it leaked out a few drops of pre-cum. Then, it stiffened and stilled dramatically, pointing straight up at Lan Zhan's face. Veins pumped liquid pressure into its bulk, causing it to swell instantly.

“And you know what happened next? I felt this rush... you know, like someone threw me up into the skies, then grabbed me by the balls and pulled me to the ground, slammed me through the earth and deep, deep beyond sex feet underneath!”

The hairy penis became very lively and shook wildly in all directions, from pointing skyward to the man's toes, and twisted itself and unravelled like a spring gone mad, that the pubic hair was left matted quite a bit from the drizzling pre-cum that sprayed everywhere during the excited conversation.

“Then, I was inside you! Hah! Can you believe it! You absorbed me and I became you! I’m your penis!”

The uncut penis gazed up, and its bulbous mushrooming pink head looked almost awestruck, foreskin fully peeled back to reveal its smooth, featureless face, with its slit stretched unnaturally horizontally into a million-dollar grin without the pearly set of white teeth. The hairy scrotal sac puffed up and both plump man-eggs waved at its owner in a cute, but also un-cute “Hello!” greeting.

“Lan Zhan! Your beloved lao po , Wei Wu Xian, has become your penis!”

The man named Lan Wang Ji started upwards into the starry night sky, and sighed so heavily, he wished rainclouds would appear and open up, then pour an ocean of waterfalls unto him and drown him from the ridiculousness that has befall upon his genitals.

Just then, Lan Zhan felt a twinge in his bladder sphincter.

“Go on, darling. I can feel it too, it’s electrifying at the back end and those spasms are setting off all sorts of uncomfortable warning bells. Blame the pot of pu’er tea you had before bedtime because really, teas can be laxatives if consumed in excess. Plus, the weather’s pretty cold up here in the mountains too... Brrr... you should quickly do it and get back into the carriage. Put on a pair of woolly boxers too, won't you? I'll shrink even further if the temperature dips!"

Lan Zhan couldn't fathom conversing with his lil' didi, and banished the absurdity of the entire situation, because first and foremost his bladder was screaming for release. So he hastily located an unfortunate shrub to receive his fertilization - bless the fact that he was in the nude, so there was no need to struggle with clothes in the middle of the night. Wei Ying squealed in his juvenile-ness, and he pretended to be a flexible meaty tube of machine-gun, where he could sense when the man's urethra was being loaded in a single stream, or several small streams, and he aimed at targeted blades of grass.

"Pew! Pew! Pssshhhh.... Rat-tat-tat-tat-tat! Pew! Pew!" he laughed and made extremely embarrassing sounds as well as wild movements; by pointing himself, that is the penis, to the left to bombard the grass with drizzles of hot pee, then violently whiplashing to the right with a flared-up slit such that the man peed like a flamethrower, then the penis curved upwards where it deliberately squeezed himself in rhythmic pulses so that the man urinated golden pearlets into the air and splashing quite a bit onto his six-pack abs, before pointing downwards and spinning at insane speeds like the rotor blades of a helicopter to strafe an entire shrub with pee.

"Wei Ying. Please, stop," the owner gritted and grimaced at his penis' performance and looked away, cheeks red with shame.

The physiologically required act done, Lan Zhan finally relaxed his muscles, and curiously, the penis yawned in the way that only the phallus can yawn - its slit opened wide and made an 'aaaahhhh...' sound, the meaty stick rose up then unhurriedly descended, lower, lower, and began to soften and shorten back to its limp, unerect state, covered by its loose foreskin - until it could tuck itself nicely beneath the bush of pubic hair, resting gently upon the bobbing balls that seemed to twitch very slightly to the man's slowing heartbeat. Lan Zhan figured out that his penis was behaving in tandem with what the rest of his body felt - which made sense, really.

After a wipe with a washcloth, Lan Zhan climbed back into the carriage and this time, he slept facing a wall so that no one would sexually assault him and risk waking up the monster that now lived inside his lil' didi . To placate and fulfil his promise to Wei Ying, he slipped on a pair of woolly boxers as requested, and it did feel quite snug and nice to have his penis kept warm and fuzzy throughout the night. He told himself that he'd figure what to do - tomorrow. Minutes later, he was fast asleep.

.

One would envision a hilarious sex-adventure of a man and his talking penis, going through a disgusting amount of penis jokes and comedy situations that involved penises saving the day, or breaking the day - however, since Lan Zhan and Wei Ying have been married for so long and knew each other's bodies so well, it turned out to be pretty mundane after all, to Lan Zhan's relief.

Having Wei Ying babbling from his pants - sometimes without -, during washing the dishes or wiping the furniture, or when bathing in the river or simply sitting down while reading a Cultivation Times magazine - felt normal, actually. It was as though Wei Ying was always by his side, minus the physical presence, and there was room for another inside the carriage. His harem of wives and offspring were disappointed, however, because half of their sexual fun was missing from their lives, and yet, they can hear his speaking voice - so they pleaded with their Grand Patriarch to resolve the problem for the sake of their yearning hearts and flowerbuds both male and female.

Wei Ying didn't complain as much as he initially feared. Besides the constant chatter, Wei Ying spent time inside his infinite storage space tending to the new arrivals of an assortment of landscapes, cities, towns, villages and inhabitants kidnapped and forced into serving their new master - the Grand Patriarch of the Kingdom of Lan and President-Founder of Wangxian Co. Ltd. -, for example, overseeing the construction of new supermarkets and installation of 21st-century technology, engineering and architecture into Gui Shan that had taken root inside of the husband, including fun fairs and amusement parks that give out gold medals, of course. He also developed systems to secure the space-time bubbles that had mushroomed inside the husband's body by implementing password protection, and set up a large, capable management team and designated armies of their Kingdom's officials to run the multiverses being created and populated within; of course Wei Ying's cloned-siblings, the Regent's family and other elite Council circles of the Kingdom and company were granted special access and given responsibilities to manage Lan Zhan's incredible bodily ability, so that the old-fashioned fart didn't need to bat an eyelid and worry about wrongly absorbing something and then having to pump it out using an enema or two.

Putting that aside, Wei Ying spent the next few days simply enjoying the company of his beloved darling man in the most intimate sense. In particular, he enjoyed observing and actively participating in peeing sessions (oh, the shame of peeing off target from the urinals, because the penis refused to listen to his orders!) or when the man took a dump (Wei Ying's humorous and snappy sports commentator-like broadcasts left the man absolutely aghast and nearly suffered from constipation when he initially refused to let go of his turd; the only option was to jack himself so that Wei Ying faced the front and upward, but it was distracting, even unsettling to be pooping while feeling aroused with a full erection); and Wei Ying really, really liked it when Lan Zhan made love to many men and women, boy and girls, because he would be the first to pop the cherries, feel the squeeze-squeezes, and savour the wonderful warm, tight insides of their shared lovers, mates and wives - until the man orgasms and ejaculates thirty times, which in turn, meant that Wei Ying vomited the equal number of times too, to the younger man's distress. Soon, even Wei Ying complained that he should return to his body soon, because Lan Zhan's insatiable sex appetite was giving him perpetual stomach disorders, so to speak.

After a handful of lands, cities, towns, villages, clans and provinces absorbed, their humble caravan of a sole carriage arrived at a shaman's hut. It was run by a yaoguai, whom A-Qing jiejie said that there were rumours that the shaman was an expert on body possessions. Lan Zhan was much more prepared this time, knowing that yaoguai would not hesitate to demand for fucks in exchange for goods and services. Desperate, especially after seeing who crawled out of the rickety hut on top of a large gnarly century-old tree - a wrinkled grandmother holding a walking stick carved with a beast's head, wearing only a grass skirt that didn't hide her sagging breasts and loose private parts, which by the way reminded him of the old lady shopkeeper in Gui Shan -, Lan Zhan immediately placed a hand on the tree's gigantic trunk, closed his eyes in concentration, and the entire structure, including foliage, hut and the said yaoguai shaman, was turned into a shiny ball of light and absorbed into his skin. He whispered an apology for devouring what could've been a noble and kind-hearted healer, and immediately set to work by digesting the shaman still grappling with the strange, shocking situation of being swallowed whole inside the stomach of a stranger. Soon, Lan Zhan gained the knowledge from the shaman, as she liquefied into what seemed like thick, demonic blood wine and her essence flowed into his veins.

Ah, Lan Zhan told himself and to his grateful penis, the concept of body possession is one that is logical and can be reversed if opposites are applied. Since Wei Ying was absorbed when he accidentally slapped the younger man with such strength and pain, the opposite must happen to undo the effect. After consulting using ErNet with his Council, Lan Zhan was advised to do the necessary, and without delay - because Wei Ying was starting to whine and complain a whole lot more, that everything that resided inside Lan Zhan's body began to feel annoyed at the constant droning of a young man's voice like mindless chanting over loudspeakers twenty-four seven.

So, in the end, Lan Zhan found a quiet spot fit for meditation, inside a shallow cave and away from prying eyes. He performed a bit of gymnastics then, by bending himself into a ball and masturbated furiously until the penis grew hard and long enough. Wei Ying was excited and quivered back and forth. Patience, the husband ordered the wife-in-penis, and he leaned forward to try and self-fellate; he had to make sure his penis grew long enough to reach his face. Lan Zhan kept trying, jacking himself, edging for hours if he had to, to pump so much blood from his veins into his boner until he felt a little dizzy from the crazy racing heartbeat and from the loss of blood from his vital organs. He grew from six, to seven, even barely touching eight inches - but it had to be sustained for long enough for the act to work. He lay on the cooled cavern floor and raise his hips until they were nearly above his head; the heavy, leaded, fully swollen penis and balls hung like dumb bells on top of him; gravity helped his cause and soon, his penis grew a bit longer, and Wei Ying kept huffing and puffing zealously to keep himself, the penis, completely and maximally bloated into a gargantuan set of male genitalia that would set hearts aflutter from the size and girth. To increase the sensations and sexual excitement, Lan Zhan fellated himself, sucking Wei Ying's face to bring forth surges of white-hot pleasure spiking into the ballooning loins - until finally, the couple agreed that the penis was long, sturdy and healthy enough for a painful, shameful act.

“No, no, lao gong , don't think bad about the act, otherwise you'll wither and our efforts will be for naught! Think of good and happy things, like having me by your side once again, touching and caressing each other, feeling our skins rub and warm on one another! We can make sweet love all day and night, with me screaming your name while lying in your arms! You can plant many fat and beautiful babies inside my bum and my male-pussy at the same time!”

That did it. Lan Zhan Hnnnngh’d so loud and tightened his abs, that he farted a little squeak from the tremendous effort - then, with a mighty heave, he swung his hips to one side and slammed to the other side, and his massive, pendulous hard-on whacked his cheek so hard that it stung and he nearly cried from the bruising pain and maybe injured himself from biting the inside of the cheek - and the next thing he knew, Wei Ying’s soul was shoved out of his penis and he re-materialized into the real world, thus he was whole again, lying next to him, full bodied and in the nude.

“Wei Ying...” Lan Zhan cried from the pain and from missing his lao po . But Wei Ying placed his hands on both of the man’s cheeks, one throbbing badly, of course.

“I love you too, Lan Zhan,” Wei Ying murmured happily with a silly grin, and leaned forward to exchange a kiss, because between loving old married couples, Sorrys and Thank Yous never needed to be said.

After that, Lan Zhan learned not to hit Wei Ying unnecessarily, by accident or even out of spite for trying to discipline his errant and obnoxious wife, lest he would have to suffer living with that said wife taking up residence in his genitals, of which the cure would be to shame himself with his own penis slapping himself on the face.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 231

“Hello sweetie, daddy’s coming in. Good girl, you didn’t lock your bedroom door, but daddy will lock it for you with the two of us inside. Don’t worry, sweetheart, no one’s gonna hear us. Your mom’s at Jiang shushu ’s place because she has to attend an official banquet, and your Lan diedie has gone out to buy groceries. So Wei papa will accompany you tonight, isn’t that great?

Such a pretty girl you’re growing up to be. Come on, strip and do what you’ve been taught to do, like daddy’s good little girl. You were born to make daddy happy, and you belong only to daddy, you hear that? That’s it, come, unzip daddy’s fly and suck it. Good girl, such a good girl you are. Oooh, sweetpea, daddy loves your adorable little trap, lick it, lick it the way daddy taught you, right underneath that sweet spot... that’s what little wenches like you are good for, you know? Your sole purpose is to pleasure daddy, and you use your entire body to make daddy so proud! Mmmmh, I’m so gonna fuck you into the bed tonight, honeybun-buns!

Oh sweet baby Guan Yin, your mouth is so hot, daddy’s gonna make sure he creams deep inside you all night. You don’t like the taste? Nu-uuuh, you have no right to say that. If daddy says it tastes good, then it’s good, got it? Now don’t start crying on your knees like that, you’re a big girl now, you’re nine-years old and you’re already daddy’s woman. Wimmen’ don’t cry, not when they’ve been whored out to their daddies and sold their maidenhood for a cupcake, because those tears are way, way too late when you’ve lost the only precious thing you have between your legs to your daddy, ain’t that right?

You remember, don’t you? The last time you bawled big time. That was when daddy brought back home a candle on a cupcake for your eighth birthday. Oh you were such a sweet buttercup then, such a tiny tot pinned down by daddy's big arms when you received daddy's biggest surprise present ever. You liked it, didn't you? You liked it so much and so rough, you cried tears and bled down there, when daddy ripped your bunny panties, then pushed his sexy candy stick in and out of your hairless cunny before you were fully prepared, and fondled your titties until they swelled up with daddy's fingerprints, and you didn't know how to react because you've never been molested and had your breasts groped by men before. Your hymen was so sweet, darling, daddy made sure to insert his fingers and pull the useless blood-stained flap out of your cunny and then eat it in front of you, even as we practised making babies for the first time that night.

That day, daddy took your virginity and stole many rounds of pleasures from your cunny, from sundown to sunrise. Those tears ain't gonna work, sweetheart, coz you can cry all you want but nobody's gonna save you from being raped by your daddy, you know that well. You were such a princess at a tender age of eight, crying and whining from the pain throbbing between your slutty legs, while shaking, kickin' and punchin' wildly as daddy unloaded many times inside your sweet clenching pussy. Hah! You struggled and fought like a feral cat, but in the end you should've known better than to try and push your daddy away from mounting your sweet cunny. You can't beat daddy, so drill that into your head, dumbass. Daddy owns your body and your cunny forever, and you're bred to make babies for our family, that's the miserable fate you have to live with and you can't change that, ever. I should've knocked you up back then when you were eight, and you'd be your own mama by now, and we'd be making more babies inside your young juicy womb while it's still fresh.

You don't like being raped? Well, tough luck, lil' girl. You're living with a man you call daddy, and this daddy loves raping you because your cunny is so irresistably sweet and tight, that daddy's taken a liking to it. That's why daddy works hard to put food on our tables so that he can spend hours inside your cunny every day since your eighth birthday. Don't worry, we do it every day, and we'll be doing it a whole lot more when you grow up. You'll eventually get the hang of it, and you'll even start feeling good with daddy's candy stick fucking your used flowerbud and having your titties sucked hard until they actually squirt milk like a cow's teats. Look forward to it, whore, ha ha ha!

Don't forget daddy's hairy balls. Little girls like you should learn better to play with men's testicles, you hear that? Do it like how yo' mamma taught you from watching those porn videos. Those balls have lots of man-juice that'll go straight into your pussy, so you better heat them up nicely. That's it, oh yeahhhhh, lick 'em , lick 'em in circles... ooooh, my head's spinnin', you're really good at sucking men's balls, you know that... now, swallow 'em... no, I don't care if those hairs tickle and choke your throat or if they smell bad... swallow 'em, bitch. Uuuuuh, fuck, that feels... oh fuck...

Okay, that's enough, bitch, let go of your mouth. Daddy's hard enough to stick it into any hole and punch through it. You're a damn fine slut, you know that? Making men like daddy aroused everytime you walk by and sashay your fine ass and fertile hips in the house, then letting daddy grab you by the waist and pull you down for a frisky quickie. When are you doing to start having your periods, you hoe? I see you riding Lan diedie and your brothers and cousins everywhere in this house every time I was out, you didn't think I'd know, did you? I've got Eyes Spells everywhere, bitch, and I'm eyeing on your cunny so that your first baby will be mine. You'd like that, don't you? Your daddy's gonna be your baby's first father, and that'll be the start of a new wonderful beginning for us as a incestuous couple, yeah?

Don't complain, little girl. Yo' mamma has taught you to spread your legs for your daddy since the day you started walking, and your womb belongs to this daddy of yours. Lie back on the bed, wench, and do what you're supposed to do, because daddy's going to pump you full of his sperm in there, where it belongs. That's it, reach down there and pull open your cunny lips. Keep 'em there coz daddy loves watching your hole opening and closing, like making kissy lips each time you breathe hard. Oooh, sexy mama, you really made daddy horny now. Say it, love, say that you want to be fucked by your daddy and have incestuous babies planted inside your fertile garden of love.... Louder, I can't hear ya...

Sweet, you've given consent. Do you know what that means? It means no matter what happens, it's perfectly fine for daddy to rape you tonight, because you've given permission, you got that? You can't refuse me, it's against our family's rules, and you've already memorized that into that dimwitted head of yours. So, we're gonna have consensual sex, and it means I can do whatever I want with your body and you've gotta say 'yes'.

Oh sweet baby Buddha, your cunny's so awfully tight today! Squeeze it, squeeze it baby, while daddy's going in right till the hilt. Ohhhh, fuck, Guan Yin, that's awesome, do it again, daddy's gonna start fucking real hard and fast, because you asked for it! It's your fault for being so sexy, you prostitute! You're to blame for seducing daddy to make sweet love when you're a tender nine-year old girl who hasn't started laying her eggs yet! Take it, uuunh! Take it, uuunh! Fuck, you're so tight, you're sucking me in, you lustful wench!

Rub it! Rub your clitty while daddy's fucking you. Oh sweet fuck, you're squeezing the lights out of daddy's candy stick! Are you cumming soon? You dirty hoe, how can you even orgasm at nine-years old? Do you play with your cunny whenever daddy's not around, fantasizing about daddy's candy stick spurting sperm into your womb? Ooooh... uuuh... aaaaah... that feels so good, daddy's can't stop moving his hips! You devil witch, you make daddy feel too good between his legs, and my balls are gonna milk everything out for you, sweetheart! I can't think straight anymore!

Uuhn, uuhn, uuhn, oh yeah, oh yeah... mmmmm.... MMMmm...
Uuuuhh... gonna cum, gonna cum... drink it, drink it with your lower mouth, you whore, drink everything that daddy's gonna spill into your tight pussy, you deserve it, drink every last fucking drop!

Ahhh... that reminds me, watching you spread your cunny like how you do splits in gymnastics classes at school with a man's hairy penis drilling in and out so tastefully... daddy's been checking on your panties when you return from school... Ooooh, yeah, that hit the spot, squeeze daddy's penis s'more, sweetcakes, daddy's feeling really good... Right after you changed and walked into the bathroom, daddy took your bunny panties from the laundry basket and noticed there had been wet stains on the cotton... Oh fuck, daddy's speeding up and it's your fault, you hear? Your hairless slutty cunt feels too good! Feel daddy's dick penetrating your deflowered vagina, you dirty harlot!... Have you been a naughty girl, flirting with the boys in your class and letting them finger your cunny? You horribly precocious child, I even smelled the stink of men on those stains, did you let your teacher lick your privates too? Or did you let him rub his penis against your clitty while you cry his name then grind hard against his hairy crotch, and let him squirt his sperm straight into your hole because he accidentally slipped inside your juicy pussy? No? Don't you dare lie to your daddy, because he doesn't believe in hoes like you!... Unnh, uuunh, uuunh, that's so hot, why the hell are you so fucking tight and hot! Blessed Buddha be damned!

Oh sweet Guan Yin, mother of Buddha, I'm cumming, can you feel it, sweetcakes? Lovely pulses swimming through daddy's thick fat candy stick and spilling into your nine-year old vagina, tearing into your underaged womb! I'm raping my lil' baby girl's eggs, oh my god, I'm raping my baby girl and making her mine, it feels so good to fuck mah lil' girl's eggs, ooooh... ooooh... Hnnngh! Uuungh! Nnnngh! I'm making babies inside my sweet cupcake daughter! ... Oh yeah! Feel it fly! It's so hot, it's melting! ... Uuunh! Uuunh! Hahhhnh! Bear my children you wench! Be their mother! Put more buns into the hot fertile oven for your daddy! ... Oh god, you feel so good, daddy loves your cunny so much! ... ooooh, ooooooh, uuuuuuh ... get pregnant, lil' sweet girl o' mine, make sure you have fat and healthy babes popping out in a week's time...!

Hahhh... Hahhh... sweetheart, look at you, why are you crying again? Was it too overwhelming? ... Painful? Silly girl, of course it hurts to have a man pounding wildly between your legs, that's why you have to be a grown-up adult woman and hold back those tears. When a man feels too good, that's when it hurts, because it's your fault for being gifted with such a fine young fertile pussy that gets daddy a little crazy each time his candy stick fucks the narrow elastic cunny tunnel of yours, and you start squeezing your vaginal walls so well exactly the way you've been taught. You're a good girl, you did well, you made daddy very, very happy the first time tonight, and you made daddy feel very, very nice making sweet love with your cunny.

Here, let daddy cuddle up and kiss your forehead to make it feel better. Daddy's penis is kissing your flooded cunny too, can you hear it? All that squishy and wet bubbly sounds, daddy's left his spent passions inside you, so that you'll have a child growing inside your flat belly starting tonight. Squeeze your cunny and thighs a bit more, we can't have daddy's hard-earned semen spilling out, yeah? That's it, good girl, keep 'em in... ooh, sweetpea, that feels so good, massaging daddy's softened candy stick. It'll grow hard again in a few minutes, then we'll have more sex okay? Don't worry, don't cry, daddy loves you, daddy loves your cunny even more, you'll feel so good that you'll forget tonight has ever happened. Now, show daddy your tittes, raise up your chest a bit, daddy wants to suck your tits and molest 'em sweet juicy fruits to relax before our next lovemaking...

Oh, no, no, daddy's not going to pull out, not when your cunny is soaked and foaming inside, filled with daddy's vigorous and lively sperm. Daddy's got to keep your cunny locked and safe with his penis, so that every one of his handsome sperm gets to swim to its finish line and rape your eggs. Daddy wants his sperm to penetrate every egg you'll have for the rest of your life, ain't that great? That's the reason you were born into this world, sweetcakes, to conceive daddy's babies and live happily ever after in this house. Oh yeah, keep those milking motions coming from your cunny, and keep moving your hips back and forth. Sweet mama, that's fantastic! Keep pushing your vaginal walls like a good girl you are, so that your kissy cervix drinks up the sperm that daddy's put inside you... Unnnh! Feels damn good, wench! Daddy's handsome seed will take root in your womb and it'll get you knocked up properly, okay? Don't cry, honey, it's going to be okay, now let's make daddy feel fuckin' good again, yeah... aaahhh..."

.

The promised trip from Qinghe to Yunmeng wasn't as straightforward as initially thought, but then again, none of the couple's adventures has ever been that way. There were plenty of diversions and side adventures, but eventually they did reach the Lotus Pier, thus securing Lan Zhan's freedom from cursed brotherhoods, and more recently, the curse of daddy-wife-daughter relationships.

"Oooh... oooh... after all these times, Xian Xian still likes shijie 's pussy best!" Wei Ying grunted and his body shook uncontrollably, as he pounded into the spitroasted, heavily pregnant Yan Li on the rather soiled, soaked king-sized bed. Once, twice, thrice, his hips slammed to her bouncy bubble buttocks until he was fully sheathed, balls slapping her naturally hairy crotch; at the other end, Lan Zhan groaned and scrunched his brows, because he also propelled his pelvis forward and back, fucking the woman's mouth and deep into her throat until he found himself hopelessly sucked in, trapped forever into that sinister cavity that drain men like yaoguai -stinked abysses more than as just plain oral sex for pleasure. Admittedly, he's come to appreciate, even have a fondness for having sex with women, now that he had performed various acts of fertility countless times with the opposite sex as dictated by the wife-y, enjoyed, and now, became rather addicted to those warm, soft, cuddly and impulsive breedworthy feelings that females tend to give off - but still, nothing beats mutual lovemaking with one's soulmate; Lan Zhan leaned forward simultaneously as Wei Yings, because both men instinctively knew and wanted to share a moment for themselves, a private I-Love-Yous and I-Love-You-Toos; so, above Jiang Yan Li's back while she was on all fours, both lover-men engaged in sexy kisses and tongue play to share so much more deep, intense and meaningful feelings compared to the strikingly pleasurable though short-lived physical gratification happening in their happy crotches; Wei Ying orgasmed beautifully inside his favourite shijie 's pussy, and Lan Zhan was drained to the last drop until his testicles deflated with joy.

It was good enough that Wei Ying's shijie was led to believe that she still held the pole position in Wei Ying's racing heart - which is theoretically true, at least in the books, because in the eyes of his clan, a coalition of Jiang and Wen, now allied with Nie, Jin and part of Lan, the man named Wei Wu Xian had wedded Jiang gu niang and holds royal privileges due to his induction into the Jiang ruling family; any previous marriages, such as those marriage certificates issued by other human townships and later, recognized by the Imperial Court's Middle Kingdom, were rendered invalid though not annulled, since yaoguai do not respect the law of Men and vice versa. Thus, Lan Zhan spent a good number of days and nights pondering his future with Wei Ying - they were certainly still madly in love as a grand old couple, however, they wouldn't be able to romantically declare or express their feelings explicitly in broad daylight as they were used to, more so that Lan Zhan was merely an ordinary individual - sometimes considered as a former sex slave of the Venerated Triad depending on which rumour-monger to believe -, that had no direct working, familial or romantic relationship with the yaoguai -infested Jiang and Wen clans.

Fortunately, though, Wei Ying is smart and figured this problem ahead of time; he ordered, persuaded and convinced his growing family that Lan Zhan is a Grand Patriarch of sorts and should be addressed as such, particularly in the context of their internal family affairs. So, among his closest mates, wives, offspring, relatives and the encompassing circle of close confidants in this brave new world, they have essentially signed up to join the clandestine Kingdom of Lan, were employed by the company of Wangxian, and swore their loyalty to the royal couple as such.

After satisfying their loins with yet another row of heterosexual intercourse mixed with discreet homosexual connotations, the couple decided to take a break and let a sated Jiang gu niang off to carry her heavily pregnant weight through a portal - she was getting good at casting such Dark magic spells - to a hospital built into an underground kingdom located adjacent to Gui Shan somewhere in another dimension, where she would undergo a regular pre-natal check-up to examine the health of her latest quintuplets growing inside her belly - made from two loving fathers, mixed with a blend of high-quality semen from another three or more foreign Sect Leaders, of course -, and depending on the doctor's diagnosis, she may be given a lavage medical procedure to extract the Grand Patriarch and Matriarch's seeds left inside her to be distributed among the countless female yaoguai that now inhabit across the interdimensional realms for insemination purposes.

"Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, look, you can see the main hall of Lotus Pier in the distance, but there is so much wild undergrowth and trees blocking our path! It must've been months, maybe even years since I left, because I don't remember the trail out of Lotus Pier to be so neglected and untrimmed when I left to find you," Wei Ying exclaimed and pointed at the scenery of unkempt greens and browns. Lotus Pier looked rather small compared to what Lan Zhan remembered, and its fringes seemed to be abandoned, judging from the sight of emptied buildings and huts overgrown with thriving wild plants and dusty bushes. At least the flowing river was still there, the water clean and sparkling, reflecting clouds in the skies like mirrors built up to the banks; although, there seemed to be no boats traversing its waters, and there was not a single soul in sight. It was chillingly quiet, lending an air of mystery and discontent to the riverside town that used to be bustling with merchants hawking their wares at the pier, fishermen hauling in their catch, boisterous vendors in the streets and markets, and families and their children strolling around to enjoy the waterside view and fresh air.

The couple decided to wade their way through prickly shrubs and green forests. Lan Zhan absorbed the horse carriages, their faithful driver and the two horses into his body, and then one by one, under Wei Ying's guidance, he touched a number of plants with each step taken forward to erase them out of existence and clear a new trail to the riverside town. The husband asked, warily, whether the overgrown vegetable patches, algae-filled lotus ponds, weed-covered orchard fruit trees and ancient-looking chilli plants he was absorbing belonged to someone else, because stealing them would certainly be tantamount to petty theft. Wei Ying laughed at the innocent question and slapped the husband's buttocks - who elicited a nnnnh because it's been a while since he was slapped by the wife -, and declared that since he the only present Prince of sorts, with Crown Prince Jiang Cheng located on the other side of the country fighting for the yaoguai 's freedom, therefore Prince Wei gets dibs on staking his claim to the clan's vast sprawling estates of mountains, valleys, riverways and everything else under the Jiang ruling family's influence.

Lan Zhan pondered at the fact while absorbing yet another peach tree, and postulated that if Wei Ying is a prince, who already has Jiang Yan Li as the first wife, Wen Qing as the second - would that mean that he could also marry into the Jiang's royalty as the third spouse?

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 232

“Whoa, whoa, whoa... back up here. What’s that?” Wei Ying exclaimed with a hint of annoyance on his face, as he pulled up his pants after pissing at an unfortunate green shrub. He’d turned around so that his buttocks faced the husband, and saw something he didn’t quite like.

Lan Zhan was by Wei Ying’s side in an instant, still tying the drawstrings to his trousers, never mind he had to squeeze his dick muscles shut and stain his underwear with his own pee, because a family that stays together, pees together, and stands together as well. He was ready to summon Bichen out of his awesome body and blast the perimeter with his guqin, also to be yanked out of his chest if not his ass - and saw no adversary nor any signs of threat.

Peach trees swayed a little to the breeze, and the air was quite warm - it has been that way since many moons ago. Summer never really moved, nor left. Wei Ying blamed the husband for absorbing recklessly like an uncontrollable black hole roaming the Middle Kingdom, that its weather systems and the cycle of seasons had been catapulted into chaos, just as bad as the wars taking place in the North between the remaining free yaoguai and the zealot Tao humans. Behind the couple was an overgrown orchard that hadn’t been maintained for a prolonged period of time, that weeds and bushes had grown rampant and waist-level high, choking the peach trees that bore many fruits, mostly of low-quality and sour ones, that no one picked at all because there weren’t any farmers or gardeners around.

The husband turned to the wife, confused.

“What’s wrong?” Wei Ying remarked, replying to a statement from the husband that didn’t need to be verbalized, “What’s wrong, can’t you see what’s wrong?” he shook his index finger that pointed at the bunch of peach trees that lined the horizon. Then, that finger pointed to where they stood on the weed-infested ground, and drew a straight line to the direction where they came from.

Oh, the husband thought. He looked down and fiddled with the hem of his trousers, not really giving any answer. His feet shuffled a bit, trying to push the dirt aside and to nowhere except to the roots of the next unfortunate shrub.

“Stealing is wrong, and so is destroying private property. That’s one of the family’s rules,” the husband simply stated, and looked to the other side. Conflict wouldn’t bode well for their relationship, not when they were so close to Wei Ying’s ancestral home, and Lan Zhan’s future in-laws’ house. Avoidance seemed to be the easiest way out, but feisty Wei Ying wouldn’t take it without a sound argument.

The wife grabbed the husband’s forearm possessively, and dragged him onward to the Lotus Pier, disregarding the fact that the latter only half-peed and needed to pee out the rest to call it a satisfying release of tension from the bladder. They marched at a furious pace, with Lan Zhan actually having to half-jog to catch up with his wife’s broad strides.

“Talk. How is it stealing and sucking up those trees wrong if no one owns them? And how is paving a proper road to the majestic town of Lotus Pier against the family’s rules? Don’t clam up, I wanna hear it from you and your Lan-headed logic,” Wei Ying shouted from the front, clearly with his feathers ruffled.

It took a couple of seconds for Lan Zhan to compose his justification to his defence, in short and curt phrases, because he was thinking very hard.

“I tasted the air, smelled the spirits, and heard their voices. The Bushland Faeries live here, at the fringes of Lotus Pier. But we cannot see them nor touch them. They are one with nature - the grass, the leaves, the bushes, those peach trees. And you peed on one of their homes just now.

I talked to them, asked them to let us through. They were disgruntled, but they were reasonable, because we are half-human and ill-educated in the yaoguai ways, after all. The condition they gave was that we put back everything the way it was, and undo the trail as soon as we passed through. Those peach trees belonged to them, and they depend on the fruits for sustenance,” Lan Zhan explained calmly, though his fidgety squeezed thighs and erratic walking pace said otherwise.

Wei Ying braked hard and paused in his steps. He gave the harried and uncomfortable husband a vacant look, “Either my Dark senses are getting old, or you’re lying to me, because I’ve not heard of Bushland Faeries nor felt their presence while we walked through those trees. But I’m assuming you’re such an awesome husband with an even more incredible body that sees things that I can’t, so you must be right. How the heck did you re-plant those peach trees behind us without making a sound?” Wei Ying’s arms rested on his hips, waiting expectantly.

A distressed Lan Zhan placed a finger on Wei Ying’s lips to quiet the increasingly irritated man down. Then he gestured to him the ‘watch, and you’ll know’ signal, and walked briskly to a small pond. Wei Ying noticed that the husband actually walked around the shrubs and didn't bulldoze through like he did. Then, the husband bent down and talked to the pond water. After a few words, the water rippled, as though a fish or some frog swam by, and he stood up, then untied his trousers.

Lan Zhan breathed a sigh of relief, and let go of the rest of his urinal load into the unfortunate pond. And he farted too, though very, very softly with a cute squeaky brrp ! because really, how can one pee without farting to grant the body the ultimate release?

Then, magic happened. A whirlpool spun with generous wet, splashing sounds where Lan Zhan's pee landed, flushing the bodily fluid away. Little fairies made of glowing drops of water no bigger than a fingertip - oh, so those little flecks are the fairies! - rose from the waters and danced on the surface to make chittering noises, though whether they were happy or angry, it was impossible to tell. Wei Ying's eyes went wide with amazement when he witnessed the visible stream of fart - glowy swirling bits of light, imbued with the powers of a god, after all - course through the air behind the man, and particles descended, gently buoyed by the breeze; the moment a particle landed on the soil, it silently materialized and grew astonishingly fast into a full-grown peach tree - and soon, behind Lan Zhan was a clump of those fruiting trees similar to the ones they're pass by earlier and absorbed under the man's skin. Even the ground around those trees seemed to thrive with new, denser, higher undergrowth. Suddenly there was more chittering and excited rustles between the blades of tall grass and quivering weeds - hundreds, if not thousands of firefly-like specks floated and whizzed amongst the dense undergrowth, and made a beeline for the new trees.

Lan Zhan was fully relaxed, and he pulled back up his trousers.

“Those are duplicates of what I absorbed earlier. I learned that my body is a huge scanning, storage, processing, printing, and photocopying machine. The Bushland Faeries’ homes have been rebuilt from scratch. I assimilated higher-quality materials inside my belly, and farted out added extra floors and reinforced structures too for their dwellings. Extra fruiting trees have been donated to their cause, at their ripest stage, to compensate the cost of using their pond as a toilet. You should do that, Wei Ying. It’s only polite to pay a fee to trespass someone’s land, and to dump your bodily waste there.”

Wei Ying facepalmed and rubbed his cheeks rapidly before smacking them until they turned red, and his perspective refreshed with a new, more challenging understanding that dawned upon him. He took a deep breath, not really wanting to argue or respond with something clever, because he felt like a fool, really.

“Okay, lao gong . You lead the way, and let’s not disturb those faeries. When did they move in? Can you ask them that? And remind me not to come close to your ass when you’re about to fart. I know you pass destructive gases even while you sleep, but now that I know you also create homes and sustain life with it... I’ll need to think this through. It’s an unexpected side effect of my 3d-biscuit technology! And tell those faeries I’m sorry for peeing on their house!” he exclaimed, though his thoughts were in a bit of disarray because he was already engrossed with the new enlightenment of what the husband’s body was truly capable of. The wife then waved his hand to signal the husband to move on from the pondside so that he could follow from behind, because he was afraid that he’d ruin another unfortunate fairy’s property with the next step.

Lan Zhan took the lead, carefully picking his way through on a narrow path of barren dirt, and he continued to converse with the invisible faeries that Wei Ying couldn’t detect with his senses. The husband regaled the wife with interesting tales of how Lotus Pier descended into ruin since Wei Ying left aeons ago, as told by the myriad of faeries that now populate the surrounding area of the Great Lakes and its waterways.

.

The downfall of Lotus Pier was heartbreaking, but not surprising. After Jiang Cheng left with an entourage of Yunmeng Jiang's finest to attend the Conference of the Demonic Cultivation, there was no reason left to upkeep the place anymore. The entire town and generally the population of the province are made up of possessed people and yaoguai who had evolved into human forms, so Yunmeng had essentially fallen into demonic hands - and demons do not really need to work to earn a living, fish in the river for food, or farm the lands to cultivate rice, vegetables and rear farm animals. All they do is to control as much of the land as possible using aggressive or treacherous means, take their pleasures from its people and enjoy good food and wines stolen from the stores of the former human owners, pretend to live fulfilled lives minus the scholarly pursuits, before returning to their original realms when natural gates between worlds open during cursed times, such as during full moons. They have no intention to prosper the Mortal Realm, and seek to turn the conquered territories into transit homes, reaping all the benefits and robbing the lands of its precious resources, and leave behind a barren, desolate husk behind; some may decide to stay a bit longer, such as those living in Gui Shan, or those who found new, but short-lived purposes, such as the freedom fighters that join the war against the last bastion of Mankind, that is, the Imperial army who have also been corrupted by opposing factions of demon-led Tao priests. The Mortal Realm became the demon's playground, to be used for the yaoguai's amusement, and then thrown away once they were done.

To add insult to the injury, the faeries confirmed that a delegation of Nie and Jin warriors arrived many moons ago to recruit forces in their war against the Imperial Court. Needless to say, many signed up because there was nothing much to do in Lotus Pier other than to make babies, propagate, enjoy the pleasures of the flesh and of the material world, and roleplay their period-drama fantasies to pretend to be kings, queens, officials and actors and actresses of a false sect in its glorious, make-believe grandeur. As long as Jiang Cheng, the last Yunmeng Jiang elite still with a human heart and flesh, was alive, well and living in his illusory fantasies, his wish for yaoguai to remain in the Mortal Realm remains a valid contract signed in royal blood, sweat and tears, and an unshakable bond that invites evil to devour all that is good and living left in Yunmeng. Therefore, the yaoguai that had been summoned, or rather, invited by Jiang Cheng, would do anything to keep that fool happy and to keep his part of the bargain alive for as long as possible until everything is left in ruin - such as Lotus Pier today.

With human extinction on the cards, the local non-human wildlife and species have been quick to take advantage and colonize what had been abandoned - such as Bushland Faeries encroaching the fringes of the once-majestic riverside town, Water Spirits - cousins of the Waterborne Abyss that once terrorized the waterways - once again infesting the waters of the Great Lakes of their branching rivers, and Firefly Wisps appearing more often at nights drifting in the air due to the lack of human presence and interference. In some way, Mother Nature was taking back what had been snatched by men, and on all accounts, that was a fair way of dealing with the aftermath of human evolution, now extinction. Wei Ying didn't quite like the way those biased faeries spoke about the fate of humans, and the animosity towards mankind rubbed him in very wrong ways - but he kept quiet and didn't interrupt Lan Zhan's narration, since the husband was merely a messenger, and he doesn't shoot innocent messengers carrying out their duties. If anything, Wei Ying surmised that he should tread carefully even in formerly civilized lands, knowing that men are no longer at the top of the food chain, and they had new masters and new rules to follow.

While walking by a river and gazing at Water Spirits thrashing in the water without fear, Wei Ying asked Lan Zhan about the his belly - because he wasn't sure how the husband was feeling with regular intakes of inputs - absorbing all sorts of stuff until he suffered from bloatedness and gas, and ended up burping too, sometimes -, and now, as he just learned, regular outputs - creating duplicates or edited versions of what he'd absorbed or swallowed earlier. He wasn't too pleased with the fact that Lan Zhan didn't leave behind blank tiles in the wake of their journey from Qinghe to Yunmeng - being a selfish and immature Dark Arts grandmaster that he is -, but the husband assured him that what needed to be absorbed, had been absorbed, so there was nothing wrong in giving back to Mother Nature as repayment for safe passage.

“It's a bit like stealing from the rich - an act that you like so much - and then doubling the loot in smart investments - a respectable nod to your A.S.S. skills, built into your lao gong 's body - and your husband returns what was stolen to the poor - in which, the virtues of our family's rules are respected, on my behalf -, but keeps the portion that was stolen in the first place, because that belongs to the lao po ,” Lan Zhan tried to convince the spouse that his Lan-logic was fully aligned to Wei Ying's intentions, as convoluted as it may be, but fundamentally sound, reasonable and equitable, to make the wife-y happy. Wei Ying sighed and shrugged, because it was too complex to comprehend how profit could be calculated that way, and he simply left it at that, to Lan Zhan's inconspicuous relief.

One particularly gusty Water Spirit roared at the passing-by intruders ferociously, unfettered by the fact that cultivators could easily defeat it, because it no longer bore any fear towards humans; it screeched and slapped its fin-like tail and a huge splash was aimed at those unwelcome visitors. Lan Zhan immediately exuded an umbrella from his arms - like the opposite process of absorption, in which an amorphous shape of blue-white light emerges from his skin, then forms the object that is desired, and that said object materializes out of the matter-energy substance -, and shielded both of them from the splatter of muddy, churned-up river water. The husband's hand went around Wei Ying's shoulder, and the younger man was held tightly, even crushed, against the husband's strong, muscular chest, that Wei Ying could hear the strong, assuring heartbeat and smell the slightly ripe but oh-so-masculine scent of a man who'd been walking in the summer sun for hours with him, dedicated to protect their well-being and uphold their family values.

Wei Ying smiled, and realized again how lucky he is to be married to this man, regardless of the complications that arise from their tangled relationships and their ever-evolving bodily functions and powers. He leaned in and blushed, smiling from cheek to cheek in a sheepish, kind of shy, puppy-love way, and quietly thanked the husband for being there, loving him, always and forever.

.

The streets of Lotus Pier were empty, but not quite - a few yaoguai -infested individuals - identifiable from their unkempt appearance, messy hair, lifeless eyes and slackened, drooly jaws, and unsteady gait -, meandered about aimlessly, seeking shelter from the sunlight by hiding in rundown homes and dirty, dusty abandoned buildings. Businesses were shuttered, the floors were unswept, and weeds and wild plants flourished more than anything else - with glimpses of blood potatoes, ghost cabbages and a handful of other demonic vegetables growing in backyards and at curbsides. There were vampiric chickens too, though they stayed inside their coops or under baskets to avoid the sun and the hot, humid summer temperatures that swept through the land. The desolate, deserted scenery wasn't alien to Lan Zhan, because he'd seen thousands of such settlements, emptied out of human life, though it was rather disconcerting since this was Wei Ying's hometown.

(Lan Zhan was curious as to how a living vampiric chicken looked like. The ones he'd seen in Gui Shan were slaughtered, that is, headless, featherless and eviscerated then cleaned. Wei Ying tsk-tsk'ed at the inexperienced and less widely-travelled man, and strutted into somebody's chicken coop. He reached into the small entrance, grimaced, then pulled out one. It looked just like any other regular chicken, except that its claws were longer for a better grip on warm-blooded mammalian prey, it hissed and spat like an angry cat, and it had a full set of serrated teeth with a pair of inch-long fangs for obvious vampiric reasons. The chicken bit at Wei Ying's hand, but the man held on, because he wanted to show the husband what an authentic native vampiric chicken looked like - Lan Zhan shivered at the sight of a smiling chicken with a full set of pearly whites around its beak, and dismissed it with a shake of his head. No thank you, he wordlessly said, and they quickly left thereafter.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 233

“There, that’s Lao Jiang’s uncle. You know, that bully who used to be called ‘old ginger’, the one who molested Jiang Cheng when we were kids? His uncle used to run a stall collecting harvested lotus seed pods and selling them to merchants on boats sailing to further provinces upstream. The arid plains and plateaus of the northwest don’t have as many lakes as we do, and lotus turned out to be a profitable and highly sought-after venture for their family. Lao Jiang was never punished for what he did to Jiang Cheng, or any of his classmates, because his family was rich and helped to top up the coffers of our clan during times of need,” Wei Ying explained and nudged his hand to point at a bent old figure curled up in the shade against a basket of dried, desiccated and inedible lotus seed pod inside a storefront - the vendor uncle’s last shipment, probably.

Lan Zhan squinted from a safe distance to make out a mummified figure clad in rags, its body had gone stale, rotten and dehydrated in the warm summer temperatures, parched to the point where the corpse’s body was left with only skin, wiry muscles and bones. The husband appreciated that Wei Ying spent some time showing him around the town, which looked different from the last time they visited, lifetimes ago; back then, lots of buildings and landmarks had been destroyed in a wartorn version of the riverside port; this time, many features were left relatively intact and untouched, though some were rather worn out and unmaintained nor cleaned for a long while - there were plenty of dirt-covered surfaces and corners filled with cobwebs, a testament that the Pier was taken over in a rather amicable way, such as people being unknowingly possessed by sinister yaoguai and then gradually corrupted, then turned into demonic manifestations of human identities without causing widespread fear and panic.

There was a creaking sound, and the mummified body of Lao Jiang’s uncle turned to face the couple. He raised a sinewy arm that looked like a bone wrapped with beef jerky, and waved at them with a skeletal smile on his face, thin cracked lips and receded gums showing fully a row of rotten teeth, the eye sockets hollow and empty, the cheeks lacking any flesh and in fact, the whole head of the man was merely his skull with a layer of dried wrinkly skin and a few strands of hair at the top. Lan Zhan shivered with disgust, and bowed quickly, before heading off. “He’s still kickin’ and alive, that old coot. I can smell with my Dark senses, he’s been having a good time with the succubus living around here, no wonder he looks so dead on such a beautiful day and more so, between the legs!” Wei Ying laughed and waved back at the mummified remains, noting that the figure wore a shirt and a pair of pants to cover the extensive damage wrought to his loins, and his body and soul, obviously.

They walked through an empty market, more rows of abandoned houses and shops, and soon, they reached the town square where the memorable fountain stood. It wasn’t running anymore, and the water that pooled beneath the lotus flower-like structure was opaque, stagnant, covered with algae and flying insects. There was a putrid stench, and Wei Ying remarked that probably somebody died and drowned beneath the fountain, and was left there to decompose and fertilize the landmark. Lan Zhan gagged a bit, covered his nose, and moved away.

Just then, Wei Ying waved his hands energetically - a ghostly apparition appeared briefly before disappearing a short distance away. It was a female spirit, Lan Zhan could tell, based on her flowy garments and the way she tied her hair with ribbons and some flowers, and she lacked legs too because none of her feet could be seen walking on the ground. The ghost blinked in and out of visibility, but did not respond to Wei Ying’s greetings. “That’s A-Hua jiejie ! One of the girls I used to date back when I was schooling ‘round here,” he exclaimed, and that drew the ire and a look of jealousy from the husband, “She doesn’t seem to recognize me although we exchanged flowers and notebooks once, and one summer, she actually asked me to touch her breasts and stick my fingers into her pussy when we played hide and seek, behind the tall corn fields in her father’s vegetable patch,” Wei Ying giggled at some fond memories, and Lan Zhan’s ears reddened from listening to such salacious stories.

“Are all Jiang descendents such lustful people?” Lan Zhan wondered aloud, to his irritation, and Wei Ying signalled the husband to follow him, because the young man wanted to see what the ghost was up to. “Nah,” Wei Ying whispered, while keeping an eye out to make sure that they weren’t caught tailing an undead gu niang , “We’re pretty normal especially during our vibrant, lively youths. It’s just you Lans who are stuck with such cold, boring and rigid lifestyles while growing up, that’s all.” The husband snorted with scorn, and continued to observe the ghost.

The female apparition ducked into a dark, unoccupied building, and the couple watched from the doorway with morbid interest; she floated into the center of what used to be a teahouse, with its tables and chairs messily pushed to the sides, cutlery and decor broken and littered on the floor, to leave a large empty space in the middle. Then, without warning, bodiless tentacles as thick as a fully-grown man’s legs, rose like spectres from the wooden floor, glowing eerily with a greenish-blue light of the afterlife. Those tentacles resembled an octopus’, and had numerous slimy suckers on one side; the slime dripped generously to the ground, although strangely, they did not leave any puddles of sorts, which indicated that the tentacle-creature was also a kind of disembodied phantom too, and did not possess any physical, tangible body. It was akin to watching a sick horror porn flick on screen, literally.

“A-Hua jiejie , it’s A-Xian, do you remember me?” Wei Ying called out carelessly from the door, and Lan Zhan turned pale as a white sheet. The female ghost looked back at the spying voyeuristic couple, but did not react; instead, she undressed her robes, and naked as a maiden who lacked feet from the ankles downwards, she gingerly picked her way through the wiggling tentacles, even caressed them with her fingers, before finding a nice spot in the center of the bunch of appendages. There, she sat down and spread her legs like a whore, and Wei Ying scoffed out loudly, “Can’t blame that wench, she’s been devoured by the monster and now she’s nothing but its sex slave, feeding what little qi she has left to that horrible creature every day like a snack on a plate. C’mon, lao gong , let’s go, there’s nothing else to see.”

Wei Ying tugged at the husband’s arm, but the latter couldn’t tear his eyes off the ghoulish and gruesome scene of many tentacles raping a maiden in the middle of the rundown teahouse. Slime-coated flesh molested her face then went into her mouth in suggestive in-and-out motions, and some left sucker marks on her nipples after energetically doing what suckers do to female breasts; the ghost moaned wantonly and audibly, and seemed to be deliriously relishing the twisted, perverse love given by the monster. Tentacles wrapped around her chest, waist and hips, as well as her limbs, maneuvering her like a sex-doll puppet by lifting her above the ground and nimbly pulling apart any defenses; it goes without saying that those kissy-suckers excitedly crawled in and out of her orifices, whether her pussy or her asshole as those tentacles scissored, pistoned and wiggled vigorously into her; her belly bloated and squirmed visibly with grotesque-looking worm-like things poking and prodding from the inside, suggesting what the monsters’ tentacles were doing to her insides while she was violated with very sexy groans and grunts. When she finally cried out with a half-smile and half-grimace, just as her body seized and bucked wildly, one could see streams of bluish lights stream from the tentacles’ suckers both in and outside her body to the roots of those appendages, indicating that she was being milked for whatever life force that’s left; still, the ghost continued to tremble and shudder uncontrollably in the throes of its undead ecstasy, until the last drops of undead qi was drunk by the horrendous creature from the dark, and it slid back beneath the wooden floor panels, leaving the heaving, panting female ghost in a precarious, perilous state - her body seemed to fade away from view, and her torn bra and panties seemed to blow away from a breeze unable to find any traction or cling onto the immaterial body any longer.

Lan Zhan left only after getting an eyeful of how human ghosts were consumed by the yaoguai , and he trotted off to catch up with his wife, who knew all about the bestiary of this fascinating race and the mechanics of how they torture, devour and find nourishment in men and women.

“Was it fun? I could tell, your pants have tented quite a bit... oh, don’t be shy and hide that away, your lao po knows you better than you do, so keep it there,” Wei Ying laughed when they found a bench to sit on, under the shade of an overgrown tree at the town square. So, while they talked, Wei Ying slipped a hand into the husband’s pants without asking, and gave him a nice handjob to finish the latter off, after watching such a perverse scene. Fortunately for the husband, there was no one around during mid day.

“That’s one of the Dark creatures, the tentacled kind that you always read in erotic horror stories. It usually lurks close to the seaside and frequently snatches fishermen’s wives and daughters during violent storms, dragging them down to the dark churning waters to rape them and sate its lusts, before eating them whole to quench its murderous thirst for blood and fill its belly with fresh, warm meat from the land. If you check with your relative, the Dragon King of the Seas, he could tell you if he’s lost any of these creatures from his menagerie, and send some back-up to capture and take it back to the Eastern Coastal Seas.

However, this individual must’ve crept its way here through the Great Lakes and its riverways, since corruption is widespread from east to west resulting in the weakening of natural barriers for demons and vengeful creatures to find their way here, in the heart of a human settlement. It must’ve befriended the Water Spirits to have reached this place, who also hate humans by the way and would gladly assist it to climb on land, and found the Pier to be full of tasty morsels for its taking.

Creatures of the land can run and escape from its tentacle-y grasp, and this individual can only emerge, ambush and snatch victims when they're immobile, or better yet, willingly presented for consumption. If I'm not wrong, this creature could have sought the help of the yaoguai that infiltrated the town early on, and brought many fine maidens to the teahouse, where it has made its den. The maidens would have their feet sliced off by blade-like teeth hidden inside the suckers, then injected with mind-altering poisons not unlike that one afflicting my brother right now, and they would spend days being raped and eaten by those tentacles until their life energies have been depleted and their bodies ravaged until only ghostly apparitions are left. Even so, the Teahouse Monster does not let its victims go, and continues to summon them whenever there is hunger and vengeful feelings welling up from within, that must be sated by the flesh of maidens.

That's why, the ghosts, like poor A-Hua jiejie are a shadow of their former selves; the tentacles have completely sucked her brains, consciousness and intelligence, so she doesn't remember me, let alone being a human anymore; she lives on, barely, as a spectre that passively absorbs qi during the day only to be called back to the teahouse periodically to have her life-energies milked out to feed the demon, so she exists solely to serve food to her master, the Teahouse Monster."

Lan Zhan groaned in having his penis stroked wonderfully by expert hands, but managed to ask, "That's a sad, meaningless existence. Should we do something about it?"

Wei Ying stilled in mid-stroke and gripped the angry-red penis so hard, that Lan Zhan saw stars in his vision because it felt too awesome to be pained, and pleased from having his surging ejaculation and those marvellous cresting sensations stopped and squeezed of their living daylights. “What?” he remarked with ridicule, “And deprive you of a source of porn? Of course not! Let the yaoguai and the local demons do what they want to do, this is their world now, not ours. We’re here to be entertained and to enjoy their fruits of pleasure, if anything,” then, without warning, Wei Ying shoved the husband’s trousers to the dusty ground together with his underwear, and he eyed at the bouncing turgid, very, very hard organ that pointed to the sky, “Now sit back and relax. Your wife’s gonna have his fair share of nom-noms after catching the husband watching a dirty porn flick,” he added.

Lan Zhan sighed and decided to let things slide, since this was Wei Ying’s hometown, and the wife knows best. So he leaned back, tilted his head upward to count how many brown leaves on the tree’s foliage, and drying fruits still clinging onto the branches, while getting a fantastic blowjob that promised to unload his swollen loins of a few more spoonfuls of man-milk, interspersed with howls of utmost pleasure, and shouts of curses in seven Gusu dialects.

Not too far away, a few more gu niang without feet and shoes drifted past and made a beeline for the teahouse, while in a back-alley, one could barely catch glimpses of succubus dressed in normal everyday clothes riding on helpless, squirming mummified naked male bodies on the dirty littered ground, and elsewhere, there were cries of men and women that were soon drowned out by the sounds of summer cicadas and the drone of flying insects from the festering fountain pool.

.

“Lao gong , lao gong , look, Ernie’s taken some pictures using his virulent particles at the hospital’s maternity ward. Shijie has given birth to four healthy baby girls and a boy! They look just like you and me, with a bit of her... and I think A-Yao gege too?" Wei Ying said as he proudly showed his holo-phone to the husband. Lan Zhan fed the younger man a piece of grilled chicken with a pair of chopsticks, and at the same time, the wife popped in a piece of fried tofu on a fork, dipped in plum sauce, to the husband's waiting open mouth.

The couple dined like romantic lovers whenever none of the women were around to cook for them over a campfire stove, such as that day; the sun was setting and they still haven't explore most of the western district of the Pier, because Wei Ying was keen to show the husband the various famous buildings, landmarks and people that were still alive in one way or another, and eventually, they strolled into an empty inn to stay for the night. The inn has a no-cooking policy in their rooms, and Wei Ying didn't want to start a fire and accidentally burn down the rather historical, centuries-old building inherited from the Jiang forefathers - so, after Lan Zhan whispered to the air around the reception, there was a brief shrill sigh and a series of reluctant moans, and ghosts appeared to float out of the lobby. Wei Ying remarked that he felt some strange presence, such as eyes peering at them from afar, and thought the place was haunted - but it was his first time witnessing the husband politely asking the resident local spirits to vacate the place for the night, after negotiations that involved donating a few jars of blood wine and demonic vegetables from Gui Shan village to the homeless, marauding spirits; the couple watched, quite mesmerized, at the sight of wine jars, and a handful of fruits dripping with blood, lettuce and turnips that squeal and shriek cursed words, and a whole deep-fried vampiric chicken drifting out of the inn's doorway, one by one, until everything and everyone left, leaving the two in peace.

Dinner was a couple of Wangxian's self-heating ready-to-eat meals, with rice and chicken for Wei Ying, and noodles with vegetarian dishes with egg for Lan Zhan; the first thing they always do on romantic candlelit dinners like this was to exchange their mealboxes, and feed each other lovingly as they chat about the day's events, scroll through their holo-phones to catch-up on personal mail and feeds, or watch a sappy movie together.

“I thought Ru Lan is celebrating his eighth birthday this weekend, and he has younger brothers whose birthdays are spaced in-between almost one per week. Is she still trying to make more of him?”

Wei Ying shrugged and swallowed the grilled chicken piece; it was a bit chewy due to being heated up for too long in the steaming meal box, but the seasoning was good and the taste was chock full of umami goodness. “Beats me. She keeps complaining that she's disturbed by dreams of Jin Ling in her sleep, because those memories derived from Jiang Cheng are pretty vivid and strong. No matter how many births she's had using Lianfang Zun's seed, she can't seem to make the Jin Ling from her dreams, apparently,” he said, and habitually, checked their surroundings for any flying insects; mosquitoes and biting bugs are common in the outdoors during summertime, though he had already cast his special bug spray spell mixed with an enclosed bubble of the husband's sandalwood incense to keep the suite room clear of such annoyances.

“That's logical,” the husband murmured, and opened his mouth to wordlessly ask for a chunk of hard-boiled egg, in which the wife casually picked one sandwiched with bean sprouts stir-fried in soy sauce, “Jin Guangyao is made of memories from my older brother, who didn't have much in-depth interaction with Jin Ling even while he was alive. His seed wouldn't yield a real true-blooded Jin descendent inside Yan Li, much less one of the late Jin Zixuan's. A-Yao gege 's relation with Zixuan isn't that close as well, so the chances of anything born with the latter's features is extremely slim.” Wei Ying barked out a rude laughter - a couple slivers of half-chewed chicken flew out -, and snickered something about a peacock and its progeny going extinct from being hunted by carnivores.

Lan Zhan dabbed a napkin on the younger man's mouth, but he ignored that and instead, placed a fisted hand on his heart, "You know, it pains my heart to hear that my shijie is cheating on me... but then again, I'm cheating on her every night too, right, lao gong?" Wei Ying leaned forward and gave a lightning-quick peck on Lan Zhan's lips. Mmm, grilled greasy and over-salted teriyaki flavour. Delish, the older man licked his lips in automatic response.

The husband was combing through his mind for clever comebacks to the wife's flirtatious remarks, when Wei Ying's floating holo-phone sounded a familiar ding ! Wei Ying excitedly swiped a finger through the holographic panel to scroll past a number of posts, files and media attachments, having forgotten to feed the husband his next bite. Lan Zhan sighed, and put down his chopsticks because he knew that their mealtimes are often interrupted especially when Wei Ying has his holo-phone switched on - someday, he thought, he should write a new family rule to ban the use of holo-phones at the dining table.

The inn's suite room was dark except for a couple of candles and a lamp at a corner - there were no other occupants, there was no running water nor any source of heat and light either; fortunately Lan Zhan came fully equipped with his own home, so they have a Water spell-powered showerhead imported from Jinshan, a bunch of Fire spell-powered torches ready on hand, and more snacks and cup noodles direct from Jinshan supermarket that he'd built inside his body - at least a duplicate of it. He was ready to summon any furniture to the wife's liking, however, Wei Ying remarked, after checking the room's condition before moving in, that the king-sized bed and a table and some chairs, with lotus-themed decor, plus an attached bathroom still with its soap and shampoo and towel set, was sufficient for a night's stay.

“Oh! Look, Ernie’s just sent another video feed,” Wei Ying bounced on the floor and nearly knocked over Lan Zhan’s vegetarian mealbox, his face lit up with greenish and bluish hues from the holo-phone’s screenlight, “Wow, Wen Qing’s scored three girls and three A-Yuans this time. See? The nurses have put pastel blue wristbands on the boys, and they all spell ‘Lan Si Zhui’... that’s crazy! I don’t quite like her in bed and her impulsive, clingy attitude in general, but she’s really having a blast blowing up the yaoguai’s population here.” Lan Zhan had to admit, the infants all look the same to him - wrinkly, red, squashed, chubby, and quite a handful.

“A-Yuan’s eleven this week, and I heard rumours that he also has younger siblings. There’s still more?” the husband responded, and pushed their half-eaten mealboxes aside, because they were getting cold and surely the wife wouldn’t find cooled foods appetizing; so he reached into his sleeves out of habit, and pulled out a tray of warmed baozi and rice dumplings containing a variety of colourful and sweet and savoury fillings, that is, fast food of the Middle Kingdom circa 2000 B.C.

Wei Ying snatched a yummy dumpling as large as a spoon and ate it in a single bite, and he scoffed, “Huh! Ask your older brother, dear husband o’ mine. My second wife must’ve picked up vibes that I still missed A-Yuan, but for her to seduce then whore herself out to Zewu Jun and to keep trying making perfect A-Yuans to match my memories...”, he shook his head in bewilderment, “That’s just plain creepy, right? I mean, sure, I keep sending signals that I don’t love her as much, but now she’s using these adorable A-Yuan wannabes to steal my heart by forcing your older brother to bed her!”

Lan Zhan nodded in vehement agreement. He didn’t like the idea of holding the Lan brothers hostage by forcing the older of the Twin Jades to father children inside a woman that they do not love, then threatening the woman’s target of pursuit to accept those children for the sake of the man’s memories of a sweet child, and the said man’s relationship with the Lan, particularly the younger brother. It's a vicious cycle multiplied by many evil sins, and in the end, no one was comfortable with the entire arrangement, with innocent A-Yuans in the equation or not.

Nevertheless, Lan Zhan was curious of how the latest progeny of his elder brother looked like, so he peered at the phone's screen closely, while taking a bite of a meat dumpling. "They don't look like Si Zhui," he concluded in dismay, "They may be as calm as my older brother and not bawling like the girls, but their faces do not match with the original person's appearance. I raised Si Zhui on my own for sixteen years, so I know how he looks from a little child till a grown-up." With that, the husband abandoned the screen and focused on a baozi with sweet bean filling. There was no real love between human parent and a child of yaoguai blood, not when such children, famous or not, have been mass-produced to the point of absurdity, where names are alike and so are the faces, that those babes might as well be sold as commodity and no one would even bat an eyelid.

"She's desperate, I guess," Wei Ying kissed Lan Zhan another time on the cheek, for no particular reason other than, in Lan Zhan's belief, a gesture of gratitude for holding on during those tough sixteen years as a young single father, "She thinks that as long as there is Wen blood in the child, mix it with any Lan da ge 's, then there's a possibility he'll grow up to be A-Yuan. She forgot that there should be a bit of Wei niang niang in there, besides a Lan er diedie ." A crease in the eye, and a wink. If it wasn't for the scent of sandalwood which brings up boring sentiments and memories, Wei Ying would've dragged the man to the bed and have a frolicky good time in-between dinner bites.

Lan Zhan looked away and tried to hold back a silly lovestruck grin. His ears turned red as beets, and he gave an indignant snort to protect whatever manly and husbandly pride he still has left. He held out a steamed minced pork dumpling with pickled vegetables in it.

Wei Ying made a rawr noise with his pearly whites bared, and bit into the morsel heartily.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 234

“Wei Ying... is this... is this necessary?” Lan Zhan asked the next morning, as he shivered in the nude; his pants had been stolen again, inside the bathroom. Wei Ying gladly peeled off the rest of the husband’s pyjamas, and cast it aside to where the semen-smudged garments were, in a messy pile - the couple had a wonderful gay lovers’ tryst overnight, which resulted in Lan Zhan becoming absolutely relaxed, complacent and unaware that there was an intruder in their midst until it was too late.

A couple of steps away, Wen Ning grinned and carried the pile of soiled clothes in his arms. “Lan er gongzi , you don’t have to worry about anything! My jiejie has made arrangements at the Jiang family mansion, so as long as we arrive as scheduled at sundown, the ceremony will proceed smoothly!”

Lan Zhan would willingly entrust his pants, even his life, to this kind fierce corpse, were it not for the double-irises that appear on the eyes, and now he was fearful that he’d never see his pants, nor the light of another day. The man truly believed that Wen Ning arrived unannounced at the inn as part of a heist to kidnap him, with or without his pants, to a cursed, Dark ritual that he wasn’t too keen on.

Wei Ying, on the other hand was too busy to answer every anxious question thrown from the husband - because his response would be obvious anyway -, and his bright smile said it all. “Just follow what Wen Ning tells you to do! He’s been through a similar experience with his sister’s wedding, and knows the Jiang family’s marriage customs well enough! It’s an honour to welcome you to the family this way, so just go with the flow!” he called out from the bedroom as though the entire situation was another game to play, then drew a vertical line in front of him, as tall as a man in height, leaving a golden slit floating in thin air. With a gentle push, one side of the two-door portal opened, like parting a piece of thick curtain, and Wen Ning strode through with that armful of dirtied clothes and pants.

“Wen Ning, put those away for tonight’s ceremony. There are shelves in there, so just pick one that’s empty. While you’re in there, can you look into the other shelves, and pick out some jeweled accessories, nice hairpieces, and other matching bracelets, necklaces, rings, earrings and all that, of the colours red, purple, gold and silvers? Just like how it was, during your sister’s wedding,” he dictated a list of things he would like to see for the ritual, and Wen Ning responded with a gleeful ‘Enn!’ from the inside of the portal - actually, an extra-spatial closet and storeroom. This was followed by sounds of clanging pots, rustling of fabrics, tinkling of glass pieces and other fragile items, even the grinding noises of metal and rock scraping against each other - because Wei Ying’s underground closet was as cluttered and messy as any other young bachelor’s in those day and age.

Back in the bathroom, Lan Zhan was both embarrassed and horrified when another intruder warped in without making a sound - the presence was heavy with ill-intent, mixed with the acrid sourness of psychosis. Huaisang, who appeared from behind, lifted up the showerhead, and with a quick activation of a Water spell, a mini-rainstorm fell from above. He laughed like a hyena and made sure Lan Zhan choked and coughed at the sudden onslaught of powerful jets and bucketfuls of lukewarm water dunked onto him; and before he could ask the crazy lunatic to stop, suddenly he was attacked by fingers and sponge scrubs; it was ticklish and Lan Zhan had to instead stifled his screams and laughter. “Lan er gongzi , please let A-Sang clean you! A-Sang loves to clean men! If A-Sang doesn’t clean, gege will clean A-Sang’s brains again! Ha ha ha ha ha!” the shorter man yelled with such anger and yet he continued to guffaw with such torment in his hiccupy, crying voice, and for the second time that morning, Lan Zhan was fearful for his life.

Then, a complete ricochet of mood swings happened, and Nie Huaisang, who was completely soaked by the wildly spinning showerhead hovering near the ceiling, calmed down. He sashayed to the front of the panic-stricken man, then fluttered his eyes and smiled the most crooked smile he'd ever seen. He moaned in a very unmanly way, “ Er gongzi , it's your big evening tonight, and you must look as prim and proper as best as you can, as a man and later atop the creaking bed.” Lan Zhan held his breath, partly to avoid inhaling water cascading from the top, and from staring at blackened eyes that had no irises. He scanned the rest of Huaisang's body, garbed in standard iron greys and matted browns, and realized both sides of his cranium bore the scars of ugly gashes. He probably paled at that point, because Nie Huaisang was essentially brain-dead.

Then, Huaisang whipped out an unmistakably glinting, pocket-sized shaving blade from his soaking wet sleeves, and whispered, “... That includes getting a good shave down there ...”

(there was a brief blood-curdling “Aiieeeee!” , but by then, the bathroom door had closed by itself with a crispy click! , and the shower was turned up to the max, and all other sounds were drowned out by echoes of splashing waterfalls.)

Outside the bathroom of a man and a crazed killer, Wei Ying busied himself by packing a knapsack of his personal possessions. He'd receive an urgent Fairy Messenger call at daybreak, that Jiang Yan Li and Wen Qing had returned from the maternity hospital to the Jiang family mansion the night before, and somehow, the entire family decided to throw a larger, more revelous welcome party of sorts instead of just a plain reunion dinner upon the scheduled arrival of Wei Ying and Lan Zhan. The two ladies made it clear to the Jiang grand-patriarch and grand-matriarch that the two men were deeply in love, because they'd seen with their own eyes how faithful and loving they were to each other, despite of the many family members and other lovers surrounding them - so, surely, a festive event to commemorate and to celebrate their relationship was in order. After that, there was a flurry of Fairy Messenger calls and messages sent back and forth between different parties located in different parts of the country, and Wei Ying had been engrossed in coordinating the needed activities, leaving the husband a little lost right after a simple breakfast of bread, eggs and soy milk on the bed.

“Wei gongzi , look, look, what do you think?” Wen Ning rummaged the closet within the portal, and came out with arms filled with embroidered treasure boxes and jewelled accessories - including the set that Lan Zhan had bought lifetimes ago from a Silk Road caravan that costed them two gold bars in their early blissfully wedded days at the Burial Mounds - the gongzi ’s face melted into a giddy smile, and Wen Ning remarked that ‘this very beautiful and precious set must’ve been gifted by Lan er gongzi , because I know you’ll not spend on such fancy and frivolous things on yourself, and only the er gongzi will, only for you - so you better wear this tonight as a symbol to cherish your love, and look your best at your wedding night!’. Wei Ying couldn’t agree more, and ordered Wen Ning to put them into the knapsack, where he’ll bring over to his family mansion and prepare for his big evening with the help of his two existing wives.

“Also, the Bushland Faeries, our new neighbours, have commissioned their talented grassplains spiders to weave the most beautiful wedding dress, the Water Spirits shall dig up precious gemstones from the riverbed to adorn the ceremonial grounds, and the succubus are making the most elegant headdress with the help of a many-tentacled friend from the teahouse. It’ll be perfect!” Wen Ning quipped and clapped his hands in pure unbridled joy.

Just then, there was another set of fwip! ’s, and the Venerated Triad warped in with such grace, that the air remained relatively still in the room even with the introduction of those three very powerful individuals. They were in their full military armour, uniforms and regalia, and for a brief second, Wei Ying, still in his jammies, felt very underdressed - but there was nothing to worry about, because soon, they would be, formally, one great big happy family. Somewhere in the far distance, the arrival of the triad triggered its own weather system, greeted by a deafening crack of lightning and thunder outside of the Pier.

Wei Ying made an exuberant ‘whoopie!’ with fists pumped up into the air, because everything was falling into place as planned. “The bridegroom’s family is here... good, very good!” he exclaimed and from the floor, he picked up the ornate basket that the Venerated Triad had presented to him and Jiang Yan Li aeons ago as a symbol of alliance between the two yaoguai factions of the East and West; it was empty since the contents had been hand-delivered by his shijie when their return trip too took long, and Yan Li had the ability to travel through vast distances in space instantaneously anyway. “Chifeng Zun, Lianfang Zun, Zewu Jun,” he bowed energetically with the basket in hand, “Wei Wu Xian greets you a marvellous day on this auspicious event for our families’ union!”. Wen Ning peeked from behind and grovelled to the floor, Huaisang did the same too when the bathroom door flew open, and the crazed man dropped the spongy scrub, while Lan Zhan was clueless as to what to do, dripping and soaking wet in embarrassment in the nude inside a wooden tub with his pubic hair half-shaved, and an activated showerhead hovering and spinning above his head.

“At ease,” Chifeng Zun muttered and barked out a laughter, “Let us gege take care of the matters here from the bridegroom’s side. Wei Wu Xian, you’d best make haste to your family’s home and wait for us at sundown, dressed in your finest and as red as the blood that shall unite our families!”

“Ah, you have the basket, just as what your Fairy Messenger spell said,” Lianfang Zun smiled broadly and took the said woven container from Wei Ying's hand, "We'll fill it with dowry gifts fit for princes that are wedded to distant lands, and shall meet you with pomp and fanfare with an entourage of merrymakers steeped in the cultures of our clans." The short, though slender and elegant-looking man raised his other hand to show a large, heavy and richly-embroidered bag with sabers and peony patterns stitched on the cloth.

"A-Zhan, oh, look at you, you poor thing," Zewu Jun was already at the bathroom's doorway, having not met each other for a while, "Huaisang, that's enough for now. Prepare the towels and the attire for the ceremony. A-Yao has brought the royal bridegroom clothes for him and he must be properly prepared and dressed for the occasion. The three of us shall make sure A-Zhan will be cleaned and purified from the inside out, as dictated by the traditions of the inter-sect unions." The showerhead was deactivated, and fell to the tiled floor with an empty thud.

The Venerated Triad crowded around the poor naked husband and they started to undress too, eager to take a bath with him and quietly, complete the shaving of the poor victimized man's - the groom-to-be - frizzled pubes.

Wei Ying wasted no time, because he knew that he also needed to go through some Jiang family rituals back at home in the Lotus Hall, and put on garments, ribbons and robes donned with glittering reds, purples and golds. So, he quickly excused himself and made a dash to the room's entrance door with his filled knapsack, but not before sending an embarrassing flying kiss at the direction of his dripping wet, half-shaven husband. Then, at the doorway, he called out to his best buddy and wingman, "Wen Ning! Make sure you also pick out some presents for A-Yuan and A-Ling and put them in the basket too, we'll also be celebrating their birthweeks, so I want to make sure there is reason for double celebrations!"

“Ho, ho ho! Make that triple!” a shirtless and tremendously muscular, masculine, hairy-chested General Nie announced as he brushed his moustache and stroked his beard, to everyone’s surprise; even Wei Ying stopped in his tracks and turned around to tune in to the greatest of the three, “Just yesterday, we’ve liberated Gusu, so that makes three provinces that have fallen to our hands thus far - Qinghe, Lanling and Zewu Jun’s hometown. We’ll be bringing cartloads of blooded rice wine from my city, tons of gold and diamonds from A-Yao didi’s hometown as part of the dowry, and huge jars of Emperor Smiles freshly loaded from Gusu, so tell the Jiang family to bring out the cups, for we shall celebrate until the moon is drunken with the stars!”

“Woo-hoo!” Wei Ying cheered in exuberant joy and agreement, as he left the room. Happy Huaisang wiped himself dry with a towel and joined grinning Wen Ning at the dining table in their victory jigs in anticipation of the best night of the never-ending summer. Shortly after the excitement died down - because there was much to be done! -, the two worked hard to sort out the bag of goodies brought by Lianfang Zun - there were many sparkling and glittering pieces to be sorted out, and they had to prepare Lan Zhan’s bridegroom suit and robes so that indeed, the man would look his best that memorable night.

With the two servant-like men handling the bulk of the chores, the Venerated Triad enjoyed taking advantage of their didi, whom they’ve missed since he left the Nie stronghold fortress many moons ago. Lan Zhan couldn’t really speak although he wouldn’t mind applauding for the cause for triple festivities, because soon, he was forced to go through what he had experienced earlier that season, that is, having his loins violently raped and overheated by a terribly talented blowjob with a forked tongue by Lianfang Zun at the front, his buttocks parted and his innards speared lovingly by his real blood- gege from behind. When his legs turned into jelly within moments from the very familiar, instinctual tasty sexual assault that he had to endure in the bathroom, and he couldn't stand properly in the splashing wooden tub, Chifeng Zun lent a hand to carry him up and spread his legs wider, then letting the two younger members of the triad sensually attack his genitals until Lan Zhan grunted Unnhs and Aaahns, whilst the oldest, wisest and strongest, captured the man's lips and soon, his puffed-up nipples were groped and molested like a real man's.

Lan Zhan drowned, drowned in the pleasures of mens' love, three at a time, triple the climaxes, and thrice the incredible, explosive orgasms from his shuddering body, to the rhythm of 'A-Zhan, A-Zhan, open up, open, let gege clean you from the inside out, drinking your sweet nectar until not even a drop is left'. The man gradually regressed to the A-Zhan that the triad loved and missed so dearly, and soon, he was crying out with mindless pleasure, because when his gege started fucking his ass so fast and deep, it was too much, too hot, that he started spilling pre-cum recklessly like pee, so he thrust his hips to the fore to lessen the abuse in his ass, and then Lianfang Zun gleefully welcomed the wildly-jerking organ deeper into his massaging throat, and lovingly shoved the quadruple-forked tongue through the defenceless pee slit served straight into the demon's palate. A-Zhan's eyes rolled to the back when his prostates were vacuumed out in seconds by the four-piston engine that powered the tongues, and soon, his balls were purified too, with two tongues each, until they shrivelled into raisins, then gently filled up foamy bubbles, sucked to the last drop again, then filled up once more, and doused with swirling poisoned saliva like a spinning washing machine with extra detergent, before every last drop was sucked and swallowed one more time, and those dying testes became mere leathery husks, no longer fertile nor functional. Chifeng Zun commented that A-Zhan really missed his gege s so much, because he's been quiet and docile ever since they arrived, and obeyed their commands very well.

"There's a bed over there, brothers," General Nie groaned because he had slipped his own arousal into the man's over-stretched ass and jostled well with Zewu Jun's dick for some breathing space inside the hapless man's rectum, and it felt heavenly to be squeezed by A-Zhan's warm, pulsating rump, “Let’s dry him up and make sure we clean his insides and give him a wipe-down”. A-Zhan, now incoherent, semi-conscious and incontinent as a fool - because even as they carried him to the bed, Lianfang Zun happily continued to drink and blow bubbles with his lips still vigorously bobbing between the man’s legs, and A-Zhan couldn’t help but let go of his bladder because he was already numb to the gangbang sexual assault, and he’d lost control of all muscles in the lower part of his body, from shuddering hips, peeing penis that pulsed with explosive orgasms one after the other, balls that kept rising and throbbing from excruciating soul-draining orgasmic pleasure then drooping lifelessly after that, paralyzed and in testicular coma, thighs that shook involuntary with each powerful deep thrust of gege s’ penises, toes that curled and uncurled as fast as he tried to catch his breath.

Once the three brothers and their lovely didi were on the bed with plenty of tasty moans, growls, and creaking mattresses, the silky curtains that hung from the canopy above were drawn in to block out the light, so as to let the triad have their delicious way with their prey, undisturbed inside the deserted inn’s most opulent and luxurious suite. Delirious, A-Zhan wondered distantly if there was a wedding ceremony he really should prepare for, but that thought was thrown out out of the window, literally, when Chifeng Zun cast a space-time bubble around them, foretelling a wonderful orgy that would last for twenty-four thousand orgasms for each two, whether seconds or minutes; it didn’t matter, the three Generals had all the time they want to play with A-Zhan’s genitals and make sweet love to the beloved didi until sundown. Certainly, A-Zhan would be thoroughly cleaned and sterilized from the inside out, thus meeting the requirements for a purified man to be wedded during the most important day of his life.

There would be plenty of whispers of “Oh, didi , you feel so nice around this gege ’s dick, your cute puckered anus squeezes gege so well, so let gege take your manhood as many times as gege wants now, before he hands you to your new family,” “ Didi , shoot it out, shoot out all that you can, because after tonight, gege cannot freely taste your seed anymore unless you sneak out of your bedroom on rare occasions and the three of us shall wait patiently for your lovely voice to bed you once again,” and “Sweetcakes, shake those hips some more, shake your body and scream like a real man with the Venerated Triad’s triple penises lodged deep inside you, spurting our passions endlessly inside your male garden, because gege knows you feel very good and your face looks so silly, you’re really enjoying this, aren’t you? After this, you may be living with your new family, and you won’t be able to go wild like this... so didi sweetcakes, let gege hear you moan like gege’s lover...”

A-Zhan would be lovingly prepared for his wedding by his three brothers, who represent the bridegroom’s side of the family, along with two male servants. It is, they say, a way to celebrate the couple’s return to Yunmeng in a grand way, in conjunction with other auspicious events - a formal ceremony to solidify the ties between Wei Ying and Lan Zhan in the eyes of the yaoguai society, the joyful birthweeks of two particularly precious yaoguai sons, and now, a victory celebration on the latest string of triumphs for the movement of the free yaoguai .

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 235

It was a good thing that Lan Zhan was fed with some Emperor Smiles, as suggested by the sly Lianfang Zun, before he was hoisted and piggybacked all the way to the Jiang family mansion on his brother, Zewu Jun's back. In his inebriated state, drooling on his gege's shoulders like a drunken baby, grinning with hooded eyes like a vampiric chicken with its full set of pearly whites, he was very docile and tame, and very willing to listen and carry out instructions as given by everyone during the ceremony. The entire scene played out like a nightmare, with parts blacked and blurred out, whilst others, simply made no sense, but he played along anyway because he was intoxicated to the bone. It also helped that his useless loins felt lighter than a feather, so he felt float-y all the way, with nary a worry creasing the brows or a blip of nervousness on his face on his big wedding night.

The traditions of the marriage ceremony resemble that of the ancient Middle Kingdom, however, certain rituals are twisted or perverted by the yaoguai to suit their culture and practical needs; one must remember that the yaoguai will never respect the laws of Men, thus, they gladly corrupt age-old customs with impunity.

Wen Ying spent a good amount of time sprucing up his looks in his old bedroom, helped out by his wives and daughters, such as to comb his hair, to put on the elegant headdress made hand-made by the Teahouse Monster and the succubus *gu niang*s, to don the beautiful, princely wedding robes with rich layers of reds and purple, adorned by the set of jewelled accessories gifted by Lan Zhan many lifetimes ago, to put on gem-encrusted shoes gifted by the Water Spirits who also scattered gemstones and precious metals all over the Jiang family mansion grounds - it was an opulent ceremony, Yan Li commented, though Wen Qing's was far more elaborate and grander in scope - the latter hmph'ed with arrogance and started to regale the others in the room about her own wedding stories, to no one's attention.

Jiang Fengmian and Madam Yu knocked on the door and checked up on their stepson's preparations. In this altered reality where yaoguai resurrected deceased persons of the past and take control of their identities, the two behaved like any cookie-cutter grandparents - they're nice, pleasant and sometimes forgetful, thus they rely on the servants to do their bidding, and they have absolutely no knowledge about the events from sixteen years past, because the Jiang Sect Leader previously wished for 'I just want a happy family' with no other details given when wishing upon a yaoguai star, so to speak. If anything, the old couple merely stood around to watch the procession, to give their blessings and to make sure everyone in the family mansion remained happy, as superficial as that may sound.

That made Wei Ying happy, of course, because Madam Yu wasn't the fierce old lady who threw plates and sticks at him, and Jiang Fengmian didn't need to make any tough decisions for the family - that was Jiang Cheng's role -, so he merely kept an eye out for any flaring tempers and would gladly order any rebels or protestors to keep their mouths shut. Madam Yu fussed over Wei Ying's hair, and asked the two wives to go and see to their own children so that she could put some finishing touches on Wei Ying's make-up - red needed to be painted on his lips, and shades of reds and exotic purples on the eyes as well. Jiang Fengmian laughed with his deep baritone voice at his wife's antics, and remarked that the entire protocol was reversed, in that Wei Ying and Lan Zhan had been happily married since the beginning of time - metaphorically speaking - had children of their own and lived their own lives, and now, they were to be formally wedded with Wei Ying's stepmother still fussing over the son's - the bride's - looks. Madam Yu shushed her husband and said that sarcasm and snarky comments were prohibited on auspicious days like this, but Jiang Fengmian simply laughed that off and continued to entertain the people in the room with his light, frivolous banter. More servants filed into the bedroom, with beautiful cloth pieces, more accessories and other things necessary for the upcoming rituals.

(In the meantime, Yan Li and Wen Qing went to the next bedroom to check on A-Yuan and A-Ling. They were rather annoyed that the kids were still practising making babies with their older sisters instead of bathing and dressing up. However, seeing how their jiejie s, who sleep in the same bedroom as them although born of different half-fathers - and have been playing with and sensually touching the boys' erogenous zones and genitals since birth -, patiently teach the two adolescents how to insert their weewees excitedly into the girls' waiting, wet, tight eager flowerbuds, then guiding them to perform the right techniques of moving their hips at the most pleasurable tempo - a group of jiejie s and meimei s waiting for their turn to be bedded by the two lucky boys clapped their hands to the rhythm of a nursery rhyme, to help the boys do their in-outs in perfect synchrony, like an aerobics class -, and at the perfect angle of attacking fucks - soft, delicate feminine hands held the boys' waists and gently pushed their hips down, then grind a few circles clockwise before going counter-clockwise, then pulling back up with a wet, satisfying plop, while murmuring 'remember to keep doing it like this, don't be naughty and start drawing strange circles and stars with your wee-wee inside jiejie , okay?' -, after that, enjoying a few rounds of adults-only heavy petting and mutual masturbations with those lovely no-longer-innocent boys.

It wasn't uncommon to find the boys lying on the bed, enjoying erotic kisses on the lips, lewd nippleplay with tongues, and have at least three young girls servicing each exposed, defenceless penis, one sucking the length, and the other two pleasuring the testicles at one each until those child-eggs spasmed because there is nowhere else to hide from those savagely sexy jiejie s, and they're forced to unwillingly milk themselves empty in tasty testicular orgasms that young boys shouldn't experience at such a tender young age. The pedophilic harem engaged in erotic games and sexual intercourse that the boys have the privilege to delight in before their bodies were ready, that their penises jerked wildly inside those tight fleshy living female cocksleeves, while moaning and grunting very inappropriately, as they mounted their jiejie s missionary style just like they were taught by their sisters, with their tiny hands grasping desperately at growing mounds that would soon lactate and squirt sweet milk.

The two boys huffed and puffed tirelessly, and let marvellous tingles run up and down their spines and trained their convulsing pelvises to savour what it's like to 'orgasm' inside fertile jiejie s for the first times in their tender young lives; until one of them accidentally slipped out with a cry - because that boy is a crybaby and wants his penis to always feel good -, still shooting seedless clear fluids that only eight-year old boys make for their older sisters. So, one jiejie grabbed the helpless organ from behind and simply peeled back the foreskin of that shuddering penis to reveal the prized strawberry, gave it a sweet drippy kiss of 'you've done well', then another girl kissed the boy's cheek to make him feel better with a whisper of 'you're a good boy, but it slipped out because it felt too good, didn't it? So you must be brave and put it back in, and keep pumping your hips, just like a good boy that you are, okay?', in which the hiccuping, tearing red-faced boy 'Enn's cutely with a nod, while in the throes of his interrupted climax, and one of the girls slipped that very hard, twitching pinkie-length penis back into the boy's lovergirl's cunny, to complete his orgasm, all twenty powerful twitches and pulsing shots, inside the juiciest, freshest and tightest hot preteen vagina, where it belongs, close to kissing a descending, pulsing hungry womb.

On the other side of the bed, the sexually-flushed eleven-year old was more experienced and had started fathering babies since a couple of years ago, so he had no problems of slipping out, and kept orgasming sweetly with child-like roars and howls as he ejaculated his twenty rich spurts to claim yet another cunny as his own, and another bun baking in the oven. He grunted energetically, full of vitality and youth, and shortly after he withdrew - still hard, wanting and leaking virginal semen -, he effortlessly shuffled to the side to find another jiejie lying down on her back, waiting with her thighs spread, her hands rubbing her pea-sized clitty while fingering her cunny to make it juicier, welcoming and warm for the horny, lustful and sex-hazed boy, beaming with drunken smile. She moaned, ‘come, come little didi , you look like you haven’t had enough yet. Come inside this jiejie and let jiejie squeeze-squeeze to keep you feeling good. You like to feel good down there and squirt your white pee inside jiejie ’s flowerbud, don’t you?’, in which the eleven-year old boy ‘Enn’s cutely as well, and settles down between her legs, to the soft cheers and kisses peppering his cheeks and body from the other sisters on the bed, as they celebrate the boy’s yet another deflowering, fingers snaking down to play with his tired grape-sized balls until they convulsed in mini-testicular orgasms, and even slid fingertips into his well-rubbed anus to massage that lil’ walnut gland until the boy groaned so lovingly, his face molested by rising and kneaded soft mounds of sweet milky breasts, that he opened his mouth carelessly and stuck out his tongue like a wild horndog, and was fed by one of the jiejie ’s titties and he suckled, oh he drank so hard from the pink puffy nipples while electricity danced along his penis, endearingly grasped, milked and played by jiejie ’s thick, tight hot vaginal walls, sucking him in deeper, ensnaring him hard against the entrance to her underaged but fertile womb, coaxing the boy to shoot, shoot again his newborn sperm boiling up from his excited, pleased, contracting testicles.

The two mothers sighed heavily in resignation, and summoned more of their daughters to aid the incorrigible sons who had become addicted to the taste, smell and sight of females and their flowerbuds before fully reaching puberty. They needed to get the lust out of the boys’ systems so that they could properly prepare themselves for their birthweek celebrations, after all, one being a charming mature eleven-year old and the other, a lively precocious eight. A bit later, the mothers got horny from watching their boys engage in orgies, and decided to take matters into their own hands - because mothers know best of what their sons want. They ordered the girls out and bedded their own sons for another few hours, making sure to milk their tiny dicks using hairy large and well-muscled vaginas, while using salacious stories of ‘you like making babies inside momma, don’t you, sonny boy? Squirt it out, son, squirt everything out so that you’ll feel better in having sex with a real woman like yo’ momma. Work that dick, work it for momma, oh yes, push it deeper, harder and faster, I can feel it twitching like crazy, you're really creaming momma's cunt! You've always said that you wanted more sisters, so you gotta work your dick in and make momma pregnant with your sisters, alright? Sweetheart, that's it, don't stop thrusting your baby hips, do it again and again, momma won't be satisfied yet until we make triplets for you, okay?")

There were lots of merrymaking and babymaking, even before the ceremony started, because Wei Ying appeared especially handsome and desirable in his regal robes of sexy reds and royal purples, that he had the pleasure of sitting on a throne with his legs splayed out like a laoban, and one by one, his wives, daughters and other people's daughters took their turns to congratulate him on his auspicious day, and then played lap dances to seduce him, before riding him to very nice orgasms and prematurely ejaculate his fertile passions into waiting wombs without ruining his clothes and make-up - though he did leave quite a few hickeys on the girls' alabaster skin and handprints on plump teenage breasts, because a virile young man can never resist leaving his marks on his women while climaxing wonderfully inside his wives, daughters and other lovers; as a yaoguai custom, the bride and the groom need not wear underwear or pants, after all.

Putting those accidental and intentional acts of fertility and fun aside, preparations for the ceremony were well underway throughout the day. At sundown, the bridegroom's family arrived with lively flutes, blaring trumpets and drum beats, with the Venerated Triad leading the way - General Nie proudly held the banners of the three Great Clans, General Jin with a large basket overflowing with goodies, and General Lan with his didi - the groom - piggybacking on the back because he was too drunk to walk, followed by A-Sang and A-Ning, who played musical instruments and danced and skipped happily to the joyful tunes, and behind them, a long line of servants marching with more boxes of presents, rolls of expensive fabrics and pulled cartloads of good food and wine for the felicitous occasion.

The entire Jiang family mansion was brightly lit with torches after sunset, being the only building in the vicinity that was well-maintained, decorated and filled with the buzz of activities in the entire Lotus Pier. The grounds were covered with carpets of blood-red flower petals and riverbed stones and gems of similar colours, blinking lights strung from tree to tree, creating a dazzling kaleidoscopic festive display fit for such a grand celebration. Upon entrance, the gifts, consisting of presents for betrothal and dowry all rolled into one easy gift-giving instance, were presented from the Venerated Triad to Jiang Fengmian and his wife, surrounded by an applauding crowd with plenty of whistles and lit firecrackers. There was also a ritual for Lan Zhan to step over - or rather, carried over by Xi Chen da ge ala bridal style - a burning brazier containing the clothes from that morning - unwashed and semen-stained pants included - to burn out past sins and filth, to start anew from that night onwards.

Inside the main hall, decked with lights, and scattered auspicious items such as demonic sweets and fruits, jars of various types of blood wines sourced from all over the Middle Kingdom, and precious stones symbolizing the couple's happiness - and more importantly, the united clans' longstanding peace and harmony -, the two wedded men - one dressed with reds and purples, the other with reds and a multi-coloured suite of blues, golds, greys richly embroidered with clouds, peonies and sabres with matching but beautiful headpieces and headdresses, and adorned shiny jewels from head to toe - were brought to the throne room, Jiang Fengmian gracefully holding Wei Ying's hand, and Lan Xi Chen steadying a tipsy Lan Zhan's forearms. Around them, was a crowd that mostly consisted of family members, close friends and servants, and there were plenty of whispers and praises of "match made in heaven", "don't they look so lovely today, dressed in their best and for what lies ahead?", and "the bride's unparalleled elegant beauty compared to the groom's slacking behaviour, even though both are pantless and in the nude underneath, but that makes them more endearing, doesn't it?".

Lan Zhan continued to sway dangerously in his steps, pantless and all, as Xi Chen placed a hand on the man's head and pushed him down to a kowtow on the floor, three times, at a smiling Jiang Fengmian and a pleased-looking Madam Yu, who was thrilled to have pantless men bow at her. For the couple - or at least Wei Ying who was more conscious than his significant other -, it was a momentous event, as this was the first lifetime they sought Wei Ying's adoptive parents for their blessing for their marital relationship - nevermind that those adoptive parents were yaoguai s in disguise, because looks can always be deceiving -, so he ordered Ernie to take a video of the entire ceremony and upload into their family cloud drive, for the benefit of the entire Kingdom and its subjects and company employees, who had declared the auspicious day a national holiday multiverse-wide.

After the first bow, then the couple faced an altar built in the hall to pray to the heavens and earth for an eternal blissful wedded life (essentially, they were worshipping themselves, but this was merely a ceremonial token gesture, really) - and again, three bows to the gods and goddesses that govern their daily lives (again, a customary sign of respect to their employed army of deities that serve the Kingdom). Then, with a bit of clever maneuvering, the two men bowed to one another to wish that one would take care and love the other for the rest of his life, as soulmates and an inseparable bonded pair for this lifetime and beyond. Wei Ying shedded a few tears, along with the rest of the Jiang family mansion residents, and Lan Zhan rudely burped and hiccuped in his drunken state, and Wei Ying took that as a sign of 'Yes, I Do', then flung himself to the husband's arms and bawled like a baby in front of the hundreds of wedding guests in the throne room. The Venerated Triad too, wiped their tears, because their didi had graduated to become a real man, and Lan Xi Chen had a hard time leaving his hands off his younger brother to relinquish the drowsy, unsteady man to his newly wedded wife - but he did, eventually, after listening to A-Yao's persuasion that it was time to let go, and let A-Zhan live his happy ever after with his mate; the moment Xi Chen gege released the forearm, Lan Zhan tumbled to the floor with Wei Ying crushing him with his fortunately light weight, and the two rolled around in a pair of drunken, glazed-eyes, laughing and crying fools, rubbing their crotches merrily in their pantless state.

After that, it was time to feast until the next sunrise, and the fine wines and cartloads of food from the Venerated Triad were put to good use. Many halls were opened throughout the Jiang family mansion, with tables and chairs spread across courtyards, gardens, picturesque pondsides and pavilions. There was a great deal of mingling between members of different clans and of different genders, with lots of chit-chat, serious discussions, plans to take over the world, family planning, talk about babies and raising children, and so on. At some point, the birthweeks of the next princes-in-line was announced, and shy A-Yuan and flushed-looking A-Ling took to the podium to receive presents from their beloved relatives amidst boisterous cheers, cake-cutting ceremonies, and lots of sweet kisses from their jiejie s and half-fathers. The triad also made a formal announcement about their victories in conquering the country to free up more land for yaoguai , which was met with great enthusiasm and plenty of encouraging words. Toasts were in order, and soon, most of the guests had gotten quite drunk on the endless flow of demonic blood wines and expensive human meat dishes that servants served non-stop at the tables, their joyous celebrations watched by the moon and its many stars throughout the night.

Thus, when a not-so-sober Lan Xi Chen grabbed A-Yuan by the waist, and told the boy that since the adolescent fathered many children and had grown up quite a bit since they last met, weeks ago, and that as the official half-father who hadn't quite had the chance to talk to the son, man to man and heart to heart, due to warring engagements in the north and east in fighting off the Imperial army - Xi Chen asked if they could adjourn to A-Yuan's bedroom to get to know each other better, and he even opened his mouth to show his brand new forked tongue, with six branches no less - because he evolved very quickly amongst men-turned-demons - and asked the boy if he'd like to see how it works, and how it feels like. A-Yuan nodded and smiled brightly, because he'd spent most of his time with his mother and sisters, so it was quite a refreshing and much-anticipated change, plus he hadn't grown such a strange and fascinating tongue, so he 'Enn'ed excitedly since he was curious to know what it feels like, without knowing where the tongue usually goes, inside little boys, that is. As Xi Chen da ge walked past Wei Ying, he gave a questioning look. Wei Ying simply waved the man off, and muttered that it was fine for the half-father to bed his boy on his special birthweek even though Wei Ying has fond memories of the original A-Yuan. "Suck his dick until he cries daddy, seed his ass because he's your boy, and turn him into a real man tonight, yeah? And congratulations on the forked tongue, brother-in-law, you've earned it!" Wei Ying said while toasting to the brand new incestuous couple with his jar of Emperor Smiles, and winked back. Shirtless Wen Ning did not even recognize the boy, because in his complete yaoguai -possessed state, with double irises that drew the sexual attraction and seductive attention from many young yaoguai ladies on site, his memory had been altered and he'd forgotten the A-Yuan that he'd loved and raised long ago.

Later, a cunning salivating Jin Guangyao sneaked his snoring eight-year old boy into his arms, having fed him a spoonful of fruit juice spiked with blood wine. It's a bit late in the hour, he said to the servants, this boy's gotten quite tired after all the partying, and he was directed to A-Ling's bedroom. Wei Ying glimpsed the face of the yaoguai half-father, who licked his lips and couldn't resist kissing the unprotesting boy's rosy cheeks as they darted off, and he knew what dastardly and lewd things that half-father would do to his son, beneath crumpled blankets and pillows strewn everywhere, where he would lovingly use his four-forked tongue to his heart's content, and make sure the little boy would be emptied out in the loins and inseminated in his unprepared rosebud by the next sunrise.

Nie Mingjue was introduced to a boy who was said to resemble Lan Jingyi, and he thought the boy did look a bit timid, a bit too thin, a bit tasty, just like how he'd remember his didi in the early days of the rise of Qinghe Nie last Spring. He wasn't a courteous man, not when it came to matters pertaining to lust and love, and he'd taken a liking to the preteen, so he simply hauled the boy over his shoulder and walked off with the boy kicking and screaming and buttocks bared for the guests to see; the burly man was eager to blossom the boy's rosebud until he bloomed into a wonderful young man fit to join the ranks of his army. A-Sang waved and cheered him on with two thumbs up, happily chewing into a whole roast chicken using his clumsy bare hands like a zombie of sorts - he wasn't interested in the females in his mentally handicapped state, and kept his focus on the sumptuous buffet instead.

Wei Ying sat alone in a corner as the festivities went on for hours. He turned to the side, where almost naked Jiang Yan Li and Wen Qing vied to molest, seduce and ride the pantless, semi-unconscious husband to multiple orgasms upon an unfortunate sofa chair that doubled as a king-sized bed - it was a ritual for the first and second wives to teach the newcomer third wife, or husband in this case, about the rules of the house, the two ladies said. Wei Ying agreed wholeheartedly, because this was a matter for the wives of his harem, that is, his spouses including Lan Zhan, so he left the trio to fornicate in public view and didn't bat an eyelid when his daughters and other people's daughters rushed in to start an orgyfest with the wedded bridegroom; in fact, orgies were popping out everywhere in the mansion grounds close to midnight, when the raucous sounds became almost unbearable, with inhuman roars and grunts starting to drown out intelligible conversations, where sliding, humping and pumping sweaty naked bodies and scattered clothings and littered food outnumber any decently-dressed guests who still ate their foods with spoons or chopsticks, and of monstrous-looking phallic organs twitching and squirting gooey, miasmic substances, and penetrating into slimy orifices armed with fleshy folds and serrated teeth when clothes were unbuttoned and tumbled down in drunken joy, and when the first signs of yaoguai manifestations appear due to their inability to control their bodily functions in extremely inebriated states, such as seeing fangs, claws, wings, carapaces, tails and whatnots appear out of the blue - Wei Ying grabbed one last jar of Emperor Smiles, and walked out of the mansion and into the the darkness of the deserted, lifeless, dusty streets of Lotus Pier.

(Wei Ying did ask, where was Jiang Cheng. Apparently, that last human being left - technically - was the only person who wasn't 'yaoguai enough' to cross the Dark energy-powered portals. So, he had to be left behind somewhere between Qinghe, Lanling and Gusu, in a camp and all alone, facing a wall. There, A-Yao had been kind enough to cast a mind-bending spell, and populate his mind with illusions and fantasies. He would talk and interact with that wall, trapped in an imagination that he chaired the ceremonies and presided over the rituals for Wei Ying's wedding to Lan Zhan, the boys' birthweek parties - whose names had been erased so that he would never suspect his dearly-missed and late Jin Ling to be walking around in the flesh -, and a celebration of the Triad's recent victories. He would toast with an empty cup many times that night to the wall, until he knocked the porcelain over and smashed it into the surface, and he would still raise his fisted hand to the moon and stars to proclaim that indeed, it was a memorable night for him and everyone else.)

.

The next day, Wei Ying sneaked back in before five, and dragged a girl-juice and semen-coated Lan Zhan from a pile of sleeping, snoring yaoguai s who hadn't yet transformed back to their human forms - banish the thought of Lan Zhan getting skewered by centipedes or octopus tentacles, or being forced to stick his dick into giant black widow spiders or white female rabbits' pussies -, and hauled the man's ass to his old bedroom - their bridal chamber, which was fortunately, left relatively cleaned and intact from the preparatory day before. There, Wei Ying wiped down the peacefully slumbering man with a moist warm cloth, and made sure he was properly undressed, and he even applied some ointment on insect bites on his thighs, legs and even the groin area because he was pantless the entire night and there were always mosquitoes and other biting insects buzzing around during warm, humid summer nights. Then, Wei Ying also freshened up himself and kicked away his shoes and the rest of his garments, and took a handkerchief from the bedside table drawer. He bit his finger until it bled a little, and smeared the blood at the centre of the flimsy piece of silky cloth.

Right on time at six, suddenly the bedroom doors flung open and Wei Ying's adoptive parents and the Venerated Triad busted in to wish the new couple an energetic and heart attack-inducing good morning. Wei Ying pretended to wake up with a shrill cry, and waved the handkerchief like a white flag of surrender; with that, Xi Chen da ge proudly announced that their relationship had been consummated, to a roaring applause from General Nie and General Jin. Even Madam Yu was touched, because she placed a hand on Wei Ying shoulder, and told him to 'be strong, because your man has taken your virginity, so he's fully responsible for you from now on, and you too, must be responsible for him and for your shared love.' Wei Ying sniffled at the touching words, and he was lovingly hugged by his adoptive parents, while Lan Zhan was rudely pulled out of bed in his birthday suit, then lifted and bounced up and about by his brotherhood of three gege s, until he screamed in horror, fully awake and with a pounding headache from the hangover, as though he was being carried off to a cannibalistic sacrifice ritual in the nude, because all he kept hearing was chants of 'Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!' that never really left his nightmares.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 236

Five fingernails on each side of his broad, muscled back. Then, it begins. Down, down, scraping the skin lightly, scratching that itch away. Until the waistline. Then back up, up. Nnnnh, again, please.

“ Lao gong , lao gong , has it really been a week? Or two? Or more? I can't seem to keep up with the time anymore. Everyday feels the same, it's like the summer holidays that keep going on forever and ever. What do you think?”

Lan Zhan leaned into the wonderful sensations blossoming on the skin on his back. He simply moaned a ‘Mn’, because he wasn't able to think rationally, not when his loins had been emptied either by two-minute sexual attacks by the Venerated Triad that decided to stay at the Jiang family mansion for a vacation, or two-second trips into the tropical paradise of his new family's harem - in which, Wei Ying's concubines and expanded family became his in-laws, relatives, sisterhoods of wives and daughters who freely share their love and make incestuous babies with him, and there are more than enough cute men and boys to sate his gay desire, whenever he feels the urge to switch his tastes for a temporary bit.

“ Die and niang have been very nice to us, haven't they? I still remember the day after, when you woke up in shock and acted rather unruly because of some headaches and nightmares that wouldn't leave you, but still, you were invited to join them for a breakfast banquet with the closest family members. Niang made herbal tea to calm down your throbbing headache, and die gave some sage advice about dealing with nightmares, especially about being married into a family of yaoguai and yaojing . Do you remember the videos I showed to you after that, thanks to Ernie's awesome nano-particle spycams, depicting how much you enjoyed being the third spouse of the prince of this house? You naughty rascal, you really abused your position on our wedding night, and usurped shijie and Wen Qing's lead by being the most prolific male ever in their society! Hundreds of thousands of fertile eggs were laid, almost every second, for the subsequent days and weeks!"

Lan Zhan gave an indignant snort and his ears reddened in shame. Fortunately, the lao po pacified the man's sour mood by drawing wide circles to scratch every bit of last itch, and those circles moved up and down, to pander to the un-verbose man's whims. That snort, became a nnngh, soon thereafter. Lan Zhan had settled down much better since the morn after the wedding, once he'd come to terms of what carnage and horrors transpired the night he, in his intoxicated state, bedded with non-human creatures amongst humanoid ones, of all clans, tribes, forms, shapes and sizes, never mind the gender because that is purely superficial in yaoguai physiology and anatomy. A plaque sat on a display shelf in Wei Ying's bedroom - their shared bed chamber -, which stated that Lan Zhan was formally recognized by the Realms of the Demons, co-signed by the Lord Of Hell (with a smiley face etched at the end - oh god, the shame), to be the universal record holder for fathering the most offspring from a single fantastic record-shattering night of orgy with creatures of the non-human kind. The plaque also came with marriage certificates issued by the lords and administrators of demonic realms which officiated their relationship; Wei Ying made sure they kept those certificates carefully, because they were only issued to those two men after Wei Ying made a discreet application on paper, and he didn't submit any for his first and second wives, for obvious reasons.

"Putting that aside, I'd thought we could have a more interesting summer holiday here, at the family mansion. Too bad, everything's closed and after the ceremony, pretty much every yaoguai went back to their old ways, that is, to scour the lands for human prey, to hide away from the sunlight, and to come out at night to party with all seven sins in play. Shijie , A-Qing jiejie , and the rest of my harem haven't been making as many daring approaches towards you as in the past, probably because they spend a lot more time with the Venerated Triad holidaying here...”

“... or with my clones,” the older man cut in, a bit tersely, because Wei Ying’s nails grazed a particularly sensitive spot - an insect bite, curse those flying bugs that infest the Lotus Pier and its waterside ports every summer, and Lan Zhan’s tendency to want to sleep in the nude because every female in the Jiang family wants a piece of him all day and night. The younger man took out their favourite jar of medicinal from the bedside ointment, and with an apology, he rubbed some onto the inflamed bump on the skin.

“How much longer?” Wei Ying asked, when he was done with the ointment, and patted the husband’s legs. Time for foot massage, the silent coded message said. Lan Zhan rumbled like a happy caveman and maneuvered himself on their king-sized bed, so that he lay across with a pillow below his head, hands stretched above to relax, and his legs on Wei Ying’s cross-legged laps, toes wiggling with expectant joy.

“Nnnh. A few more days. This 3d-printed biscuit made body is fast and efficient for everything, except to create a copy of itself, which takes time. I’ll make a few more for each of your wives, my sisters-in-law, that is, and a handful for Nie da ge , Jin da ge , and my elder brother, before the end of summer.”

The firm pads of thumbs started to roll in head-spinning circles on the balls of the man’s feet, and Lan Zhan moaned sexily, the tension in his body released almost instantaneously.

Just then, there was a knock on the door, and three boys peeked in with respectful greetings of ‘good morning Grand Patriarch and Grand Matriarch’. “Why, if it isn’t A-Yuan, A-Ling, and Jing Yi! Or... are you their siblings? Or siblings’ siblings?” Wei Ying remarked cheerfully because the boys were so polite even though they spend their time inside the mansion - with nothing else to do but to procreate as mindless yaoguai - stealing jiejie s and gege s from the adults; many times, Wei Ying complained that there were less daughters in his harems recently and after a bit of searching around the mansion, he found his lil’ girls inside the boys’ bunk beds, with pregnant bellies that weren’t his own. Lan Zhan advised the man to start giving names and recording, even registering their identities properly, so that he could keep track of who went where, but Wei Ying was such a lazy father that he’d made too many and simply let those brats run around without pants or panties on.

“Um, um... Grand Patriarch, I’m twenty-ninth of A-Yuan, that is forty-sixth of A-Ling, and he’s eighty-ninth of Jing Yi. We wanted to check if our order is ready? We’ve been waiting for days, and many of our jiejie s don’t want to play with us anymore because they’re either reserved by the adults, or they’ve received their orders... so...” the boy nicknamed A-Yuan shuffled in and looked down sheepishly, like the poor orphan who had a bowl of soup and raised his hand sadly to ask for s’mores. The two smaller boys stood behind him and nodded.

Wei Ying sighed, and kneaded his darling man’s foot arches with such finesse, and with pinpoint precision using the science of foot reflexology and master-skilled acupressure, that immediately sent Lan Zhan snoring and unwary of what went on inside the bedroom. The young man gestured to the boys to come in, and he placed a finger to his lips.

“Shhh. Grand Patriarch is resting,” he whispered, then using an index finger, he drew a vertical line in the thin air to open up his inter-dimensional closet. “I have extras, and you can take one first. Now hurry along, and don’t disturb us, okay?” he winked at the boys, simultaneously, one perfect Lan Zhan crawled out of the rather small portal from the subterranean kingdom in the nude. The boys became energetic balls of excited whispers and they crowded around the mirror image of Wei Ying’s darling man. Wei Ying waved and dismissed them like a queenie, in a ‘you may go now, peasants’ fashion, and watched as that cloned Lan Zhan was led by three very happy boys who received their present, and they cutely kept bowing and saying Thank Yous as they made their way out of the doorway, before the door closed with a crispy click !

Through the window and outside the bedroom, Wei Ying spotted a surreal scene of the Venerated Triad and a few women - his daughters, probably - chasing after a group of similar-looking Lan Zhans in the gardens beside the living quarters. It was a classic game of tag, usually played on hot summer days like that day, with men and women chasing after their prized targets. Sometimes, a Lan Zhan is caught, and a bunch of ravenous and lustful individuals would descend upon him like a horde of bloodthirsty. It didn’t matter if he had sex with males or females, whether there was a dick or many dicks fucking his ass, or whether his cock gets to taste and breed many lovely young girls, probably of the same lineage, or whether they shared many kisses and touched each other until they climax in unison - there’s plenty of laughter and shrieks, of family members having a wonderful time out in the sun.

“Another hour, another happy family, another happy Lan Wang Ji,” Wei Ying smiled and continued to work on his darling man’s feet - he made sure to bathe, soap and rinse his man each time he returned from his two-minute and two-second trips, so that his feet was always moist and soft to the touch, and very malleable for massages. Inside, he wished the newly-donated Lan Zhan a wonderful life ahead, bedding little boys that he loved so much, and magically creating jiejie s for them to play with all day and night, fathering children together inside juicy tight wombs, and starting their new wonderful pedophilic families in a corner of the increasingly over-populated Jiang family mansion.

.

Wei Ying was a little sad to let go of his ancestral home. He enjoyed having grand meals at the dining table, circled by family members, his shijie, his confidants A-Ning and A-Sang, begrudgingly Wen Qing too, his adoptive parents who treated them so well and cooked their favourite foods every day. They spent their time doing mundane everyday things at daytime when they're not too busy raising children, and have parties and good food and wine at nights if they're not too busy making more babies; they also went on family summer picnics at the abandoned town square, at the riverside, made friends with the new locals in town, and visited other landmark locations around the Pier; it was such a joy to be with the juniors - A-Yuan, A-Ling and Jing Yi - from conception till birth, to watching them grow up into fine young fathers and soon, leading troops in the war against the Imperial armies. The Venerated Triad who stayed on, also accompanied them and became very close friends to the Jiang and Wen families; they always shared good news about new territories subjugated by the free yaoguai - the race that Wei Ying had come to call his own - which became regular reasons for festivities and orgyfeasts throughout the endless summer; those three legends even taught a few new tricks to fledgling yaoguai and entertained everyone who sat down to listen to their heroic tales from during peace and wartimes of the past, particularly about the history of men and especially yaoguai and their fabled conflicts.

So, one fine morning when Lan Zhan had fulfilled his promise to gift one of his clones to every deserving group, tribe or family of yaoguai, they decided to make a move whilst everyone was busy having sex and orgies inside the now-ruined mansion - because yaoguai sex is admittedly violent and destructive, deprives the locale of essential qi to maintain its existence, besides contaminating the air, water and soil quality in the vicinity -, whose residential population had spilled and spread to nearby areas of the Pier like a pandemic disease. Lotus Pier was turning darker by the hour, as seen from a visible corruption, even desiccation of space, like a smouldering grey veil descending upon the land that little or no sunlight can penetrate - because once there are too many yaoguai , there is imbalance, and the very fiber of reality begins to break down and disintegrate, where all forms of matter, whether living beings or objects, would eventually cease to exist. That darkness was spreading like a plague from Yunmeng to the east towards Gusu, and north towards Lanling, Qinghe and Chang'an.

“At least they’re safe when they’re stored in the family’s cloud drive,” Lan Zhan calmly reassured his wife, and placed a warm hand around the smaller man’s shivering shoulder. He’d touched a blade of grass to send a master code into the fiber of reality, and commanded the core programming of this world to download its data before rebooting. Everything in sight should glow, he’d said, but due to the extent of the corruption from the exceedingly high concentration of yaoguai presence, that glow of absorption could hardly be seen; one by one, objects wavered in the fabric of space and time, the dissolved into liquefied amorphous shapes, before fading out of existence, first the main halls of the Jiang family mansion, then the annexes and smaller buildings, the manicured gardens and lotus ponds, and soon, the series of disappearances extended to beyond the entrance gates to the main town of Lotus Pier, and beyond.

“They’ll not feel any different. Life will continue for them as it is, in a different reality. There, the growing corruption will be stabilized by ErNet’s supercomputing powers and artificial intelligence, and will be allowed to thrive without jeopardizing our Kingdom and company’s interests,” Lan Zhan said, then patted the shoulder of his spouse with ‘there, there’s, “-- So, you can visit them anytime, make changes to their reality and that world’s core programming. You can always live, enjoy and be with your lovers, families and friends over there, according to your wishes. It’s good, isn’t it?” Lan Zhan lowered his head and gave the crying man a sweet kiss on the forehead, hoping to pacify his misery, whatever that may be. He called out the man's name, twice, and wanted to hear the wife's answer.

Wei Ying sniffled and rubbed his nose, "It's... it's not just about that, lao gong . For sure, I'll want to have dinners with them, go on holidays in Lotus Pier, and grow my harem and the number of my descendents," he had to chuckle despite the tears streaming down the sun-kissed cheeks, "It's just that even after four and a half billion years of planning and waiting, the end of the world still happened anyway. All my hard work, wasted, gone down the drain for nothing. I almost attained what I've always wanted, that is, to be with my family from the past and present, to have everyone alive and around me, living peacefully and harmoniously with our happy endings, to be the winner of all things that any man would want to win, in this lifetime... you get the idea." Lan Zhan placed another endearing, intimate kiss, this time on the shell of an ear, until Wei Ying squirmed adorably a little.

"Life is never fair, Wei Ying," the husband murmured, with a little bitterness in his voice, because he too experienced the dark sides of life sometimes, with one example spanning sixteen years of his earlier life, "Perhaps it's written in the books of our pasts and the stars of our futures, that one can not have everything in his grasp, and should simply enjoy with what he has at present, and live in the moment." Lan Zhan should know, because he's lived through lifetimes, through births to the ends of universes, through cycles of life and death, and of eternal love and eternal slumber - but he wouldn't say. Wei Ying too, did not pursue for a more tangible answer, because nothing is ever written in stone, and that life is a gamble of one's fortunes - anything is possible, and possibilities are everything.

Wei Ying shook his head to clear the air inside his mind, then grabbed Lan Zhan's arm sweetly as though they were dating, and he rubbed his face into the larger man's biceps, for no particular reason. "You sound like your brother," he muttered, and Lan Zhan smiled faintly.

"A-Huan gege will be fine. He has a few of my clones living in his bedroom in a rebuilt Cloud Recesses of that world. That reminds me - what of your brother, Wei Ying? We haven't decided what to do with him, and he's still talking to the wall somewhere on the other side of the land."

Wei Ying raised a brow. Oh, he thought. Then, after a few moments of consideration, Wei Ying grinned and said, "Do what you want. Put him in cold storage, if you have to, he was never really part of my equation of a happily ever after in this lifetime." Lan Zhan looked relieved at the spouse's improved mood, and he obeyed without a question; a twirl and snap of fingers, and the task was completed, whatever that was.

"So, what next, and where to?" the husband asked. Both men were dressed in their usual attire - cloud whites for Lan Zhan, and jazzy blacks and reds for Wei Ying, which both dug out from their closets prior to leaving the place and activating the reboot. The mass erasure was spreading like a wildfire, and they stood on so-called blank tiles - featureless, dirt-packed squares of land, like pixels on a landscape, that had little grass, few gravel stones but nothing else. Thanks to their infinite storage ability, this time, Lan Zhan didn't need to pull any carts, and if they need anything, they can always pull out something from their sleeves.

Wei Ying walked ahead and pulled the husband's wrist so that he'd tag along at his pace. "First, I'm working on a new, improved 4d-printed biscuit for you. Once my recipe's done, we'll have it baked and you'll have to eat what I serve on the plate. Next, since we're already here in Yunmeng, I feel a wave of nostalgia washing over me, and have an urge to check out our old home in the Burial Mounds near Yiling. D'ya think it's still there? That little cave-home we had long, long ago?"

It was Lan Zhan's turn to chuckle.

"Mn. We can always go there and find out."

.

Two men strolled up a hill that had been stripped bare of trees, rocks, cliffs, bubbling springwater brooks and everything else except for a thin layer of grass and plenty of barren dirt. The skies are clear and blue, with hardly a cloud in sight, because the atmosphere was being absorbed too. There was, however, a slight dip in temperature, and it wasn't as warm as it used to be, say, compared to a few weeks ago. The sunlight at an angle and the dimming chirps of insects and birdsongs heralded the end of summer, and for the couple of men travelling on foot below, a new beginning to a never-ending story.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 237

4:30 am

A single dim golden vertical line appears in the dead of the night inside the shared bedroom. Like those cheap, flexible and foldable non-woven fabric wardrobes, the line unzips itself from the top to bottom, revealing an open flap - a doorway to another world, or another closet. Lan Zhan gingerly climbs through, and he's careful to keep the flap as close as possible so as not to let too much distracting light out from the other side and wake up the wife. Wei Ying wouldn't be happy to know, but tolerates, the fact that his husband sneaks out every night after bedtime for tasty trysts, midnight rendezvous and orgy parties on the other side - with men, women, little boys and girls, both family and strangers, for two seconds or two-minute intervals, and as frequent as his loins demand - so he makes sure to only step through the portal after seeking proper permission, that is, a vaguely coded request of 'May I take a leak outside?', and the wife would have to say 'Yes' in no dubious terms, before the husband is allowed to father more babies inside fertile females, bed more boys, and enjoy the fruits of his loins outside of the wife's knowledge.

He makes sure to return before sunrise. Their bedroom is sparsely furnished - a creaky king-sized bed tucked into one side of the room equipped with ill-fitting bedspreads and a smattering of colourful, though well-used pillows and cushions, a worn-out bedside table and a couple of old chairs against the other wall, and a few cupboards of different heights and designs in the corners, as though the furniture ensemble was curated and purchased from various flea markets, except that they were carefully picked from the various locations the couple had visited in the past, whether Jinshan from the recent times or the Cloud Recesses of the previous lifetimes, even a hint of the original pieces from the Burial Mounds aeons ago. Wei Ying's taste in interior furnishing is as strange, thrilling and exciting as opening a box of chocolates, because one never knows what he's decided, in his wildly imaginative, rebellious and creative mind, on what people are going to get.

Lan Zhan tip-toes back to the bed, and it sag painfully, obviously, when he places a knee upon it. Wei Ying nnnghs and the sound alarms the husband a bit - has he been found out? - but then the wife simply rolls over to face the new arrival on the cold side of the bed, and to Lan Zhan's penis-warming delight, Wei Ying's wide-open crotch, because he's in the nude in bed, and so is Lan Zhan. Lan Zhan takes it as a sign of a welcome-back, so he lurches forward rather gently and cuddles up his soulmate with a warm embrace, placing a sweet kiss on the younger man's forehead while pushing away errant strands of unruly hair, whispering, "I had a good pee," - their vaguely coded phrase for indicating that the husband had emptied out everything in the most pleasant ways - bladder, testicles, prostate gland, urethra and everything else that constitutes a man's loins in general.

Wei Ying yawns a bit, eyes still closed. "Did'ja have a g'time?" he slurs in his speech, regressing to dialects in his drowsiness.

"Mn. Enough to last a long while. This 4d-printed biscuit-made body too... the new clones are much more capable and are self-replicating. There's more than enough of me going around for our families and friends. Across worlds and civilizations. For brothers and sisters, including in-laws. Sons and daughters. Wives and concubines. And grandchildren. And--"

Wei Ying returns the embrace and slides snugly against the husband, skin to skin, hairy crotch to hairy crotch; the latter's had grown back shortly after the bad shave on their wedding day, bless Lan Zhan's infinite male hormones. "Shhh," he hushes the man up, because there's no way anyone is capable of processing such detailed information at four-thirty in the quiet morning, “I asked a simple question, and you only need to say ‘Yes’, darling,” a sweet peck from the sleepy wife to the nervous husband’s cheek, because the wife knows that the husband tends to reveal too much whenever he feels that way, like a boy having his papers graded by the teacher. Hands roam around the husband’s broad back - there are few residual scratch marks and hickeys leftover from the husband’s babymaking, fertile frolicking, but Wei Ying isn’t deterred, plus it’s too dark to see anything in the unlit bedroom -, and the wife gives the husband a nice back-scratch for returning to his arms after a night’s worth of honest work done for their Kingdom and company.

Blessed with yet an improved, upgraded body from Wei Ying’s biscuit-making home bakery - for the husband -, and awesome infinite powers from mastering already the grandmasterhood of the Dark Arts - for the wife -, the couple wanted to move on from being saddled with too many roles and responsibilities of a thriving empire and a profitable business, of overseeing and nurturing multi-racial families that continued to propagate like virulent particles of pandemic proportions, of becoming gods and creators of new worlds, galaxies and multiverses that create, destroy and alter the fates of many according to their whims and desires - a staycation break back in their old cave-home in the Burial Mounds, Qishan province, was in order. The Mortal Realm, at least the continent that housed the Middle Kingdom, was in constant upheaval and hard drive reformatting due to the grand reset, and thus, was rendered inhabitable for the time being, except for a floating island of land in the middle of sandstorms that is composed of the cave-home, and its surroundings of a mini-waterfall that supplies warm springwater streams in the backyard to an adjacent piece of farmland filled with vegetables, orchard fruit trees, a barn of chickens, rabbits and other farm animals, even a lotus pond, which then falls off a steep cliff into the unknown.

One naked thigh slides up the husband’s shins, then hips, and finally hooks behind the small of his back. Lan Zhan knows it takes quite a bit of agility for Wei Ying to do that, curving his body like an acrobat - and it secretly thrills him to know that Wei Ying's still such a lovely, youthful man after so many years, even centuries and millennia, and to have his crotch rubbing against his, and soon, his hardening flesh feels the curve of someone's hairy balls, then, just a peek of that someone's smooth, bouncy bottom gliding against the underside of his rising erection - and he twitches with renewed interest; no matter how much wonderful fertile feats he'd done that night, he promises to keep at least a spoonful or two for his lively wife.

Fingernails graze lightly on the husband's muscular glutes, coaxing the man to move it, push it in, shove it up into a waiting puckered rosebud. The wife's shemale days are behind them, since he's birthed enough to last many lifetimes - but still, the husband is still keen to explore the sensual pleasures of a gay couple's anal intercourse, no matter how many times they'd done it - Lan Zhan does not tire of Wei Ying's sweet tight ass after all these years, and like a grand old couple who are comfortable in their own and each other's skin, having loved and fallen in love with each other in his entirety, including endearing flaws, cute warts, adorable wrinkles and all - Wei Ying grunts something incomprehensible, but sounds a bit like a colloquial 'fuck me, slave', with a tongue licking on the lips even whilst in a semi-awake state, and it must be because Wei Ying's dreaming of good food and wine with sex on the side; the husband simply "Mn", then hugged the wife tighter for no other reason than to lock their lips in a drowning kiss, slide their limbs around each other like entwining lover snakes, and to allow that biggest, throbbing and most delightful serpentine organ between the legs to fully sheath itself into the wife's welcoming tunnel of heartwarming love.

"Do you still want to have a good time, love?"

"... it's almost five. But a quick one should be fine. The floor needs sweeping, the laundry from last night needs to be hung to dry. You were drunk last night from downing more than five jars of Emperor Smiles at one go, and left a mess on the dining table and your clothes. I should be able to mop the floor one more time while preparing breakfast. We have fresh bread, dumplings, youtiao , organic nuts, seeds and fruits, and stove-warmed soymilk, it won't take long. There's farm work to be done, but that can wait a bit until sunrise. We should send out those email holiday greetings to your clone-siblings before that, otherwise it'll be past bedtime on the other side of the world. I have to conduct a performance appraisal for the Regent later this week, and it's time to promote him to--"

"Lan Zhan."

"Mn?"

"Do you?"

"Mn. Yes, Wei Ying."

.

4.45 am

Making love with Wei Ying used to be violent and abusive, done in the heat of the moment, ferocious in strength and intent, sometimes punishing in its resulting throbbing pain and pleasure, such as the initial romps in the prickly bushes, behinds the trees, when the husband pushes down the wife in uncharacteristic triggered anger, and they rolled to the ground after he was teased a bit too much.

Making love with Wei Ying, now, is like enjoying a holiday at the tropical beach. There are lots to savour, such as juicy kisses for the lips, and milky sparse man-breasts to suckle; their gentle grinding and fucking motions hip-to-hip mimic that of the waves lapping at the waterside, in and out, in and out, wet, foamy, smooth and lubricated. Wei Ying does not try to tease the husband, save for a few silly comments about how mellowed the husband is in their baby-making, because the wife isn't running away and playing hide and seek like he used to, so there is no reason for the husband to keep chasing for the divine climax like a stallion rushing through crashing waves. Instead, they couple simply glide their way higher, and higher, soaring slowly but gradually up the cresting waves, spiralling, enticing, exciting each other with sensual touches, wordless I-Love-Yous to reddened ears, ticklish nibbles from head to toe then back again, and fingers curling erotically into fur-pawed kitten rakes to tell the other that there's still a couple of spoonfuls of semen that the husband really wants to unload and spill with wild abandon inside the wife's sucking, squelchy womb, before they wake up from the dream-like sex.

At one point, the husband practised his much-loved 'nine shallow dips followed by nine deep gouges' move, pistoning his very, very turgid and delirious, angry-red mushrooming penis according to the beat of an old Gusu nursery rhyme. The shallow dips leave the man breathless and sexually flushed, tight fleshy folds sucking his cock endlessly like a pair of fine luscious lips, just as the radiating heat pleasures the jerking organ when it receives heavenly wet friction along its pulsating length; the searing hot gouges forces the man to cry out in pleasure, because he slams through as unhurriedly as he can, before withdrawing until the last point, in which the anal sphincter barely clings onto the gasping pee-slit, and the cycle repeats; after the third set or so, Lan Zhan accidentally pulls out way too far in his haste to achieve more good feelings running through his pelvis, and slips onto the bed, heavy and engorged with blood, and straining for want of Wei Ying's rectal sensations, heartbeat racing to incredible speeds. The husband wordlessly begs for help, through kisses and nibbles on Wei Ying's neck; the wife responds by raising hooking his leg higher behind the husband's back, widening his well-fucked entranceway, persuading the husband to try again, be a brave boy and put it in again - Lan Zhan presses the penis-glans and slips again, overshooting its target and sliding against the curve of the wife's bouncy ass. A little more to the right, dear, you're almost there, said the wiggling buttocks, and the husband tries, encouraged by the wife's playful unspoken banter. He angles his penis a little more to the right, and shoves it - but it slides again and gently slaps against the wife's hairy testicles. Uunh, dear, be careful, they're sensitive fragile eggs, so please, to the left a bit, said the wiggling buttocks. The husband sighs inwardly with an 'Enn!', and takes aim one more time, this time letting his penis crawl up until the doorstep into the butt-heaven, before pressing in - and success! He's back in action! Good boy, you've done it, you've inside your wife's womb! the wiggling buttocks cheers the man, and then, Where were we? The fifth of the nine deep gouges, right? Push it in, baby honey, push it real deep into your wife where it belongs, dear, your wife will squeeze-squeeze you to nirvana and beyond.

"Ahhnnn...!" Lan Zhan moans and suddenly seizes when he is embedded into the deepest parts of the wife, and the cracked, girly voice catches Wei Ying by surprise. Perhaps Wei Ying has been training on his Kegel's too well after the spate of childbirths, that he unthinkingly worked his inner muscles to massage the very, very happy penis sawing in and out, in and out of his blossomed anus. The first penile pulses fire rapidly, Wei Ying squeals in delight, relishing in the sensations of a wonderful husbandly payload being delivered right through the doorstep.

The wife embraces his darling man, reeling him like a tasty prey and makes sure he gets all thirty, heated, very excited ejaculations inside his waiting tunnel of eternal love. He pats the larger, broad-shouldered man's back, whispers sweetly to the red-tipped ear and the flushed skin surrounding it; telling him what a good boy he is, saving his bests for the last and giving them willingly to the wife, like how the servile, useless husband hands over his monthly salary to the controlling spouse on payday - and that kind of nonsense that sends the husband to sadomasochistic highs. Lan Zhan merely grunted rhythmically, making tasty incoherent but interesting sounds of “Ennnh... Uhhnnn... Aahnnnn... Oouhhnn...” as his thrusts become erratic, uncoordinated, clumsy, akin to a fucking machine that has short-circuited from its own dying orgasm.

Lovely Wei Ying continues to milk the man for what he’s worth, long after the climax subsides. The husband shivers in pleasure, and shudders in involuntary discomfort, because the continued torment spikes his body with such uncontrollable joy, that he starts to unintentionally - the fault is not his -, briefly, squirt out shots of pee when there is no more sperm left to offer from the thoroughly drained loins. Wei Ying giggles, and tells the husband to make sure to add the bedsheets to the laundry list that morning.

Lan Zhan nnnnhs as he experiences his third, maybe fourth or fifth orgasm from Wei Ying’s exceedingly skilled sexual ministrations, and cannot hold back. He becomes the incontinent fool, his plumbing abused and broken lovingly by his wife - and he smiles, aaahns and ggaahhns, interspersed with Wei Ying’s name in the most shamefully mispronounced ways, moaning continuously like a drunk, swaying his hips and arching his back again and again, in the darkness of their unlit bedroom.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 238

The cave-home sits on a floating island, surrounded by a narrow strip of arable land in a vast ocean of sandstorms. It's not the authentic structure or the original location, because the couple wasn't able to reach there in time before the sand and dust-filled timestorms hit and rebooted the entire land. Being the heroic husband, Lan Zhan cast a space-time bubble for them to take shelter from the devastation that is worse than, say, the Great Fires that used to burn and renew the world; although, Wei Ying complained that he couldn't possibly survive camping out on a blank tile with zero entertainment and one hundred percent boredom, so the husband took to the wife's initial wishes, and made the space-time bubble into the said floating island in a sea of nothingness.

Similar to the couple's old home but with a wee bit modification, there is the bedroom, a study room that doubles as a neat and tidy workshop - thanks to infinite ad hoc storage spaces enabled by near-61st century technology which nicely stows away Wei Ying's creative trash -, the kitchen equipped with cookwares, utensils, stoves, hidden pantries and solid countertops - because they make great horizontal, waist-level surfaces for having wild sex as well as to put pots of cooked food -, which adjoins to a dining room enough to hold up to ten guests when its space-time mini-bubble is activated, and a living room furnished with a three-piece sofa set derived from various designs and lifetimes with many unseen compartments, a kaleidoscopic and colourful collection of furniture and decor from different locations and dimensions, and yes, the floor mat is there too, right at the doorway - though its former occupants have since moved out, one to the husband's lush crowning glory on the scalp as a strand of gloriously greying thread, and the other taking up residence amongst the wife's greasy, curly pubic hair.

It's a small cozy home, with plenty of technology and magic built into it for modern, comfortable and convenient living. For Lan Zhan, it is the home where his heart is because his wife lives there with him. For Wei Ying, it's everything he'd ever wanted under the same roof, and more importantly, the man he calls his soulmate being part of the packaged deal that he'd signed up long, long ago.

.

5:00 am

The sun still rises from the east and sets in the west. It's only the land that is being reorganized, reformatted and rebuilt from scratch. At this hour, however, the sun has yet to break the horizon, which is a large swathe of a vertical tower of dusty sands, that is, the sands of time. Therefore, it is still dark and the waxing moon is still up above, lighting up silvers and greys upon passing clouds; Wei Ying knows, Moon Goddess Chang'e watches over them from her golden perch with her pet rabbit; he had sworn that he'll make barbecued rabbit skewers if she dared to broach his paradise of a defenceless world without local deities and demi-gods whilst it was being rebooted, and so far, she seemed to have taken the threat seriously - he hadn't seen any bug-eyed moon aliens invading his turf to date.

Lan Zhan rises first, rustling and pushing the blankets away, and he starts picking up the pillows and cushions scattered all over the bed and the floor - including the glaringly ugly purple one that has, admittedly, given the couple much joyous ergonomically-friendly back support for intensive sex and baby-making, and deserved a medal of honour as such.

But Wei Ying wants his five more minutes. He nnnnghs like a spoiled babe, and flings open his arms, even while his blankie is being folded away by his butler cum housekeeper cum man-nanny. “ Bao bao ,” he whines, his eyes still closed and his lips pouty, “ Bao bei wants bao bao !” The air is chilly, and there is no light other than the faint silvery moonlight filtering through curtained windows, so Wei Ying certainly wants his bao bao as soon as possible to stave off the cold.

Lan Zhan sighs at the irredeemable forever-twenty two-year old man, and drops whatever he was carrying to the stone floor. He snaps a finger to activate whatever robots, golems, Invisible Hands, Dark Wang Jis and giant cute furry caterpillars that are needed to start the household chores; he’s the laoban of the house now, so he calls the shots, and he doesn’t mind modernizing his lifestyle a bit which is a privilege of living like a king; even if it means tolerating the presence of a spinning washing machine with dryer functions included, Dustless Broom units zipping back and forth across the floor, Wangxian’s automated multi-cooker with robotic arms attached starting up a sumptuous breakfast for two, digital messages being fired off into ErNet to place online orders for whatever needs to be stocked up in the pantries, and a Happy Holidays greeting e-card sent halfway around the world, in which instantaneously, Lan Zhan’s holo-phone ding !’ed back with a ‘You’ve Got Mail!’ ringtone.

The man smiles, a calm, serene upward curl of lips that he only gives to his beloved, at five o’ clock in the morning. He reciprocates the lover’s widespread arms, and falls, falls gracefully onto the fluffy bed, and into Wei Ying’s waiting arms.

“Mn. Bao bao .”

.

(Wei Ying naughtily used his big toe to draw a vertical slit in the air, and with the help of the second toe, he peels off the flap like pulling off a light velcro sheet. The husband doesn't notice the crackly sounds, so the wife manages to jab a red circle hidden beneath the flap with his pinky toe. With a soft giggle, as he hugs his dear hubby, a two-second space-time bubble emerges from the thin air and envelopes the couple. They fwip ! out of existence, like a blip in time in a blink of an eye, for two mere seconds, and for many more two-seconds as needed to distant sexy wonderlands and even tropical paradises with little children playing at artificial sandy beaches, for Wei Ying's five more minutes.)

5:05 am

Invigorated, refreshed, and drained enough in the loins to start a brand new beautiful day. Naked Wei Ying holds a large woolly towel and stands shivering at the poolside in the backyard, which connects to the bedroom for the lovers' convenience. Just a few strides away, a small waterfall, lit by a few torches here and there, cascades from a rocky outcropping, sending out steamy mists into the dim surroundings and to the tune of nighttime crickets, like a fabled scenery from fantasy novels. Like before, the warm pool serves as a bathtub, a shower, a toilet and even a washbasin, all rolled into one.

Wei Ying tugs out his tired, sleeping penis from the bushy curls, and nnnghs his muscles - he pees into the pool to relieve the tension building up in the bladder since five minutes ago.

“ Lao gong , can I have a sperm bath?” he calls out lazily, and yawns. He knows the husband is in the kitchen because there is light coming from its window, so he should be able to hear.

“No, Wei Ying. You had that last evening. Give them a chance to rest.”

“But it’s just asking your clones to stick their penises into our company’s showerhead inlets, then turn ‘em on in reverse with an added jacuzzi vortex function. It’ll be fast, like a vacuum cleaner. A tablespoonful each, multiplied by millions of individuals, will be enough for a quick shower.” The grin beams its A.S.S. million-dollar smile, though it is hard to tell if the husband actually notices that in the dark. It’s pretty please with icing on the cake, and convincing enough with the use of evidence-based science, because Wei Ying knows firsthand that spinning, sucking vacuum cleaners can make men ejaculate in a short span of time.

“Wei Ying, it’s wrong to steal other men’s sperm. Those are for their own wives, daughters and family members.”

The young, horny man doesn’t give up that easily. He wants a gooey, body-warmed nutritious sperm bath after all, and nobody can deny him that right, “Can’t we call it a charity drive, say, for the Grand Matriarch’s cause? That’s legit and it’s perfectly legal for royal family members to solicit donations from the public.”

“...”

The wife has finished peeing, and the pungent yellow shade on the water surface quickly dilutes and flows downstream towards the farms and the lotus pond. “Hmph. You’re such a stinge. I’ll ask my harem of Lan Wang Jis in my underground kingdom, then. They’re superior specimens compared to you and your clones, and they worship me as a goddess. They’ll never say no to offer a tablespoonful of their semen each, as prayer offerings,” he states his proposal, pompous, standing tall and legs slightly parted, with his towel draped around his neck and hands on the hips, like a Superman turned pervert, because his limp hairy penis still drips residual dribbles of pee on the floor.

“No.”

“Lan Zhan!” What a spoilsport, the voice added. A chilly wind blows, and the younger man’s teeth begin to chatter from the cold, goosebumps rising all over the skin. He quickly takes the towel and wraps it around his body like a grandma does with a knitted sweater.

There is an audible sigh coming from the kitchen. The husband walks out of a side door to the backyard, shirtless with only a pair of loose pyjama pants, sweaty, slightly bronzed skin looking absolutely man-licious and sexy for roving eyes - except that he holds a bloodied chopping knife in hand and there is a large bloody smear on his broad chest; Wei Ying would’ve jumped with a girlie scream and make a dash for the bamboo clumps, if he didn’t know that the husband was prepping the pork ribs for a pot of lotus root spare rib soup for later that day; the robots in the kitchen can do everything but they lack the intricateness in the five-star chef’s department and cannot carve meat and bones as well as the husband does. Lan Zhan has his other free hand shaking vigorously beneath the drawstrings of his loose pants, and he is masturbating furiously for the wife to see, because the bulging outline of a mushroom with a wet stain at the tip, is clearly in sight - oh, what an eyeful it is!

“Let me finish cutting up the meat, and I’ll give you a personal golden and silver shower,” the husband relents and hands out a peace offering to keep the wife by his side, and not seek other men’s pee (the gold) and semen as (the silver) as his plaything to dive in, swim and go snorkelling.

The memory of Wei Ying doing backstrokes in a bathtub of pungent gooey slimy grey-white opaqueness drew the ire of the husband because it was an uncalled-for scam; the wife had pretended to have fallen ill of a strange emotionally-disturbing disease in which seminal fluids was the only cure, according to the wife - the husband fell for it in a fit of panic attack, because Wei Ying went wild with his tempers; later, the wife was seen to be cured, swimming happily in a hastily hand-constructed bathtub carved out of a huge century-old tree (thank you, hubby, now go fetch my bikinis, the wife said), and obnoxiously, kept opening and closing his legs then used his hands to reach down and spread open his asshole - and worse, his gaping matted man-pussy when it magically appeared at the his behest; watching frothy thick bubbles welling up to the surface of the semen-bath as virile liquids drained from millions of healthy clone-Lan Zhans flowed eagerly into Wei Ying’s fertile womb was, to say the least, extremely enviable until the husband turned green on the spot.

A personal shower promised and shall be delivered, the wife raises his arms in victory with a childish “Yay!”.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 239

5:30 am

It was most embarrassing to be filmed on Wei Ying's holo-phone then streamed to the entire Kingdom, of how a man uses his overheated and exhausted thick, over-six inch penis as a garden hose to spray cum and pee all over his spouse in the pool water, and that spouse acted like a porn star in a soft drink commercial on a hot day, swaying his nude body while gratefully, orgasmically, moaning how nice it is to have one's thirst quenched, including having his eyes closed while making lewd moans, dew-dropped hands caressing his own chest and abdomen to rub the liquid fully into the skin, and a wide gaping mouth to collect and drink whatever that landed - even a few stray strands of slightly curled pubic hairs too, poor Lan Zhan must've jacked off real hard to achieve such a spectacular explosion from his loins and bladder. However, with Wei Ying's desire granted, the husband finally settles in the pool with the very happy wife for a morning skinny dipping.

(Never mind that the sudden increase in fertilizer and food particles in the water attracted voracious fishies, shrimps and other pondwater life from the lotus pond to the pool. Wei Ying giggled hard when eels and small fishies swam up to violate his asshole - because there's just too much milky goodness leaking out from spent passions left from the night before -, and little shrimps swarmed around his bobbing testicles like a large fruit left out in the open to attract buzzing fruit flies. The husband used a stick to beat the water and chased the creatures away from making Wei Ying their seafood extravaganza of sorts.)

As they scrub each other's body and back with soaps and shampoos that automatically refill in their slots by the poolside, floating in perfectly warmed waters that can reach to their neck when one lounges on the poolbed, washing away the night and early morning's sweat, grime, smell and reeking passions - Lan Zhan informs the wife that since it's just the two of them, he's prepared a simple menu for the day. Breakfast with Wangxian branded premium-range of ready-to-eat foods taken from its Ancient Middle Kingdom selection of cuisines - mostly store-bought dumplings - plus fresh homemade breads, lunch with the aforementioned lotus root spare rib soup, and dinner with pork roast cut from the same meat he'd bought from the supermarket the day before, stored well in the chilled pantry in the kitchen.

"I reeeeeeally don't get what's so nice about cooking your own food, when yooooou can pick 'em up from the supermarkeeeet and stuff it into the microwave ooooooven," the younger man drawls languidly, apparently feeling drowsy shortly after waking up with good sex. Sex relaxes every part of a man's body, it's an irrefutable fact, he'd claimed. Plus, the swirling, hot springwaters drawn from volcanic soils are a godsend in this floating island - the source is untraceable, but the waters loosen every fiber of one's tense muscles like a self-generating natural outdoor jacuzzi, especially with spiralling jets aimed at one's sensitive genitals and between the butt-crack, besides the usual rolling muscled surfaces of one's back, torso and abdomen. The husband does not reply, because there's no need to, and he bridal-carries his slouching, boneless, post-orgasmic wife to the poolside after they're done rinsing off the suds.

"And I reeeeeeally don't understand why you'd waaaant to grow our own vegetables, harveeeest our own fruitssss, rear our own chiiiickens and catch our own fiiiish, when we can buy eeeeverything, cooked in all sorts of cuiiiisines, at the supermarkeeeet," the babied man let the husband pat him down with the towel and dry his unruly hair. The husband, again, does not respond to the drunken accusations, because Wei Ying is getting very sleepy, and wouldn't be able to comprehend a complete post-mortem of their new lifestyle living marooned on a floating island. Perhaps it's a derelict legacy from lifetimes past, but Lan Zhan always had a penchant for hoarding stuff, even when his pantries are well-stocked. Having an infinite storage space inside his new 4d-printed biscuit baked body helped to fuel the obsession to keep collecting and keeping surpluses even when he already had universes filled with kitchen goods, provisions, household items, foodstuff, and other housewife-ly and househusband-ly inventories.

“I still go to the supermarket when there’s a sale, Wei Ying,” the husband gives a logical reply, one that doesn’t require brain cells to process, “But it’s better not to overspend, and besides, growing and cooking our own food is much healthier.” Wei Ying is vaguely aware that he’s bridal-carried again back to the bedroom, and deposited gently onto a newly made bed; the servants are truly efficient in making sure every crease is smoothed, every piece is cleaned, and everything smells fresh and nice.

The young man stretches like a lazy cat and yawns - in a sea of well-arranged pillows that smells of the husband, and with his jammies on - because there’s no need to be in the nude when there’ll be no crazy monkey sex -, and slowly, a blanket is drawn over his body already comfortably warmed up by hot springwaters, until that blankie covers his neck, snug and nice. It’s time for his second nap, one that takes place after waking up at five in the morning, which is by the way, too early for any sane man to start the day, according to his unchangeable body clock.

“Healthy? Hnn... you’re getting faaaat, that’s how I seeee it, laoooo goooong ,” another slurred sentence, and he streeeeetches the other side of his back. It feels too good and he’s slowly sinking lower, deeper, into the most important part of his sleep cycle - the one that’ll last from dawn until around eleven o’ clock in the morning, that is, about six hours later.

Lan Zhan leans forward and gives a sweet kiss on Wei Ying's rosy, cheerful cheek.

“Mn. And you too, my beloved fat and chubby lao po .”

Wei Ying snores loudly with a trickle of drool hanging from the edge of his lips, threatening to spill onto the husband-smelly pillows. Lan Zhan smiles, faintly, conducts a final check in the bedroom, before walking out and closing the door behind him with a faint, crispy click!

6:00 am

The day starts proper for Lan Zhan. He puts on a light blue tunic and a pair of brown working pants, because they may be biting creepy crawlies in the outdoors, as otherwise, he'd be happy to stay naked all day on their island. Wei Ying sleeps undisturbed, while the husband goes off to practise his cultivation moves in the front courtyard and work out quite a bit of sweat before having his breakfast - which Wei Ying will probably miss anyway -, followed by sharpening his scholarly arts of calligraphy, painting, playing chess with himself and a guqin practice session to calm his spirits, in the study room. He rounds off his early morning routine with meditation, by sitting in a lotus position and quietly chanting mystical scripts inside his head.

Meditation on the couch in the living room boosts his lifespan and vitality, raises qi level and allows him to attune to the needs and wants of his mind, body and soul. He's already an Immortal with the strength, stamina and endurance of countless gods, and his qi is infinite when considering he has the most up-to-date 4d-printed biscuit made body ever in existence. Therefore, he spends time to control his breathing and to circulate energy flows between areas of fiery fury, exuberant feelings and raucous youthfulness - the loins, and the dirty thoughts in his mind, for example -, and the areas that are cold and calculating, calm and gentle, and rigid and immobile - the stubborn tent in the pants, and his out-dated mindset and beliefs, for instance.

Full revitalized, it is time to go outdoors to welcome the glorious sunrise. By the time he trots off to the narrow strip of farmland outside across the front courtyard, he is pleased to see his laundry hanging out to dry in the first rays of sunlight - mostly bedsheets, towels and a few undergarments that are soiled frequently by his or Wei Ying's semen.

7:00 am

The weeds have been plucked, the fertilizer applied, the plants watered, the chickens, rabbits and other farm animals fed, and a fresh batch of chilli seeds have been planted in newly tilled soil. All fresh harvests are bagged and humanoid golems rise from piles of rocks to take them away, to the storage shed attached to the couple's primitive residential dwelling, or inside the home, where the goods are sorted out systematically, by alphabetical order and date, to be kept in proper shelves in the pantries or other hidden compartments located throughout the cavernous abode.

Lan Zhan stands at the edge of his property, just beside a trench where water from the lotus pond flows out and over a sharp cliff into nothingness except a wall of ruddy brown sandstorm that filters out the rising sunlight from the horizon; strangely light still illuminates from above, as though the island is blessed with a pillar of light despite being surrounded by the vortex. For their safety, he'd fenced the island using bamboo sticks so that nobody accidentally topples over and falls into the unknown.

He takes his shovel and digs up some loose earth at the edge, then nudges the soil forward into the whirling storm. The soil from the island does not mix with the storm's, and where it tumbles ahead, a new patch of land miraculously grows measuring a few square meters in coverage, thus expanding the surface area of the island a bit more; the space that was previously whipped by the ferocious winds clears up, as those winds receded from that patch of newly-conquered area. This way, he creates more land for farming or other uses, as he wishes - however, he is careful; he breaks off a small old branch from an apple tree with some leaves on it, and waves the branch about in the new area. Nothing happens, thankfully, until the tip of the branch touches the bordering stormwinds. The brown leaves immediately transform into an explosion of fresh green foliage, before growing smaller until they transform into buds, and melt off into its primordial non-existence. He sticks the branch deeper into the churning dusty air, and pulls out just in time for a handful of ripe apples to have reverse-grown from knobbly twigs where those same fruits had been harvested just days before. The apples are plucked and put into a bag, and the branch kept aside in case there is a need to fill up his pantries with apples from the last season, as long as the sands of time continue to do their work in rebooting the landscape outside of his floating island paradise.

In any case, he plants a handful of new seeds in the new patch of land that sticks out like a sore thumb close to the new borders with the sandstorm, which the couple sometimes fondly labels as a timestorm. He adjusts the fencing and prays that the sands from the timestorm do not invade his home grounds - he'd be superbly heartbroken if his laundry is covered with brown specks -, and carries the bag of apples back to the cave-home, and arranges them in a bowl upon the dining table, to make sure that Wei Ying gets to have juicy, perfectly ripened fruits when he wakes up later that day.

7:30 am

The house is cleaned, the front courtyard is swept, everything is put back to where they belong, and nothing is out of place, thanks to the discreet, unnoticeable servants, both technologically and magically powered. The husband wipes off sweat and takes a seat at the sofa with his legs placed up on a cushioned footrest. He opens up the day's periodical and the latest edition of Cultivation Times, a pot of pu'er tea by his side on a table, a couple of vintage Ancient Middle Kingdom-era porcelain cups, and a plate of slightly salted and sweetened toasted mixed nuts served by Invisible Hands.

After a few minutes of reading and sipping his tea, he grows restless. His feet begin to tap against the footrest, his fingers flicking between pages although his mind is elsewhere, so nothing is read, really. The teapot is empty and he fidgets. The husband sighs as he looks at the clock - a projection of his holo-phone, really, that appears on the wall in the direction of his gaze -, and starts to dictate his first order of the day in an online menu, also embedded in a convenient app inside the said holo-phone. He speaks through his mind, and the app automatically translates into text, that he'd like a breakfast set of one female Wei Ying in her teens as a tangy, energizing appetizer (because he's addicted to the Wei Ying he's met since the days of studying together in his ancestral hometown), one Jiang Yan Li as a healthy starter salad option, also aged around sixteen and above (because he doesn't like clingy Wen Qing, and there aren't many kind-hearted, sweet-smiling female options around), two fresh male Wei Yings aged ten and perfectly taken out of the oven just before they've gone through puberty - his main course, really; and for dessert, a variable choice of five to seven little prepubescent girls who can be his daughters or granddaughters - like a bowl of sweets in an assortment of colourful wrappings and exotic flavours. He also ordered another pot of hot tea to go with the order, so that he could cleanse his palate before returning from dining out. For delivery options, he opts to save some money and trouble with the wife snoring in the bedroom, and selects take-out.

Then, Lan Zhan folds the periodical and places the magazine back on a shelf, and walks to the floor mat at the entrance. He tells the smart-home artificial intelligence program to keep their residence safe, while he goes to pick up his meal - a snack, really.

With a tap on the foot against the rough, woven surface of the mat, Lan Zhan zips out with a fwip ! and disappears from sight in a blur. He collects his order from his favourite whorehouse - actually, a fast food restaurant that specializes in serving sex and whatever the flesh desires, for the Kingdom's faithful subjects, but of the particular quality and quantity dedicated solely to the Emperor's desires, that is Lan Zhan's personal baby-making factory. Then, with his brief, temporary harem, he takes them to a park in another of his playgrounds where they have a picnic together - with a bladder already full from his first pot of tea, thankfully, because he'll need it -, and enjoys orgyfeasts and great acts of fertility and procreation, though he makes sure to return two seconds later, with his pre-ordered new pot of tea to wash the stink of virginal cum, female juices, pee and pubic hair from his mouth.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 240

7:45 am

Just like how some people habitually need a cuppa coffee before work, of which Lan Zhan clocks in at eight, he makes a last stop at the bedroom to check on the wife. Wei Ying has performed acrobatics on the bed, with blankets and pillows thrown carelessly everywhere in the room in a very haphazard manner. He sleeps lying face down on the belly, with his hips raised and pointing toward the ceiling, and his pillow is soaked with drool - with the purple cushion somehow finding its way to support his crotch, and becomes a humping post for the man that dreams of having naughty sex with his shijie, his children, or occasionally an air-brushed, gleaming, misty and sexy version of the husband.

The husband sighs and makes an effort to put everything back in order, including rolling the wife back to where he should belong - facing upward as though he sleeps soundly in a coffin, upon the poor bed destined to be made multiple times a day. Then, the husband whips out a plastic straw from his sleeve - a new invention from the 31st century -, and with a press of a red dot near the tip, it activates to unmask a forked tongue with multiple tentacles at the other end.

Lan Zhan inserts the straw into Wei Ying's swollen and congested penis, which was hardened after a good hump against the unfortunate purple cushion. The young man squirms at the sensation of lovely tongue-like tentacles crawling in and out of his dick, tickling and scratching the itches along the inner tube of the phallus, stirring lumps of unejaculated semen and robbing innocent sperm of their chance to see the light of day. He scrunches his eyebrows and mumbles something about peeing backwards and reverse orgasms, his pelvis starts to rock clumsily sideways, back and forths, and grinding circles, because he's desperate to eject the foreign objects out of his dick, but he can't seem to pee 'em out no matter how hard and how fast he squeezes his inner muscles. The artificial forked tongue continues its descent into Wei Ying's innermost sanctums and colonizes his prostate after conquering the base of the penis. At that point, Wei Ying shudders and moans uncontrollably, gripped by a nightmare of wanting to evacuate his gonads to escape the invasion, but those lovely tongues continue to lick and caress the walls of his sex organs, squeezing tiny lil' vesicles, bulbs and glands to milk every last drop out, leaving them trembling and oversecreting viscous male nectar in their unwilling excitement.

Soon, the tongues reach his testicles, gently plundering those plump eggs with placid rocking in-and-out motions, dipping repeatedly into the broken, violated eggs to stir the yolky contents inside, spinning the lumpy oatmeal of unborn sperm and their nourishing fluids like a washing machine cycle, clockwise ten times, counter-clockwise ten times, then sonic vibrations radiating from the inside out, and from outside in; until only husks are left, because the shaken sperm-y milky cream congeals and is inhaled out of the pillaged man-eggs, each time the husband hollows his cheeks and vacuums up the musky, Wei Ying-flavoured liquid snack with strong, heartfelt sucks.

Wei Ying sweats, groans about wanting, yearning to cum hard in a nightmare of being attacked by succubus shijie s, and he thrusts his hips erratically as the forked tongue worms their way deeper, his face flushed into tomato-reds, and pinkish shades blossoms from his chest upwards in the throes of sexual ecstasy of a man orgasming very, very excitedly, with plenty of nice convulsions running through the pelvic area - and yet, yet, he's not there yet -, his fingers gripped and clawed the rippling bedsheets to demand completion, alas to no avail - he can't seem to climax, not when his balls shrink violently into wrinkly raisins sitting at the bottom of a dangling, loose scrotum, and seed is forcefully stolen without leaving any good feelings to the man who had to lose his baby sperms to the thieving husband; thus, Wei Ying lost his tablespoonfuls of unejaculated semen, those lovely thick volleys of creamy milk pulsate through the forked tongue instead of his dick, and he never really achieved his orgasmic peak in the waking world no matter how much he shakes, arches, and shudders his helpless body pinned down by lucid dreams.

The need for the cuppa satiated, Lan Zhan licks his lips and swallows the last drops of stolen honeyed nectar. Mmm, delish.

Time to get to work.

~~~@#@~~~@#@~~~

Wei Ying dreamt of having sex with his family members, including sweet shijie . But then, one night, when he crawled into her bed sneakily expecting another round of incestuous baby-making, his shijie multiplied into a group of ravenous succubus beneath the blankets, and they attacked his dick and balls.

He cried out in pain and pleasure as his dick swelled into enormous lengths and girth, while his testicles ballooned then deflated repeatedly, as his genitals were swallowed and injected with aphrodisiac poisons by those accursed female monsters - and he prayed desperately for a miracle, such as, to live in a dream where he wouldn't be harassed by females, human, succubus or otherwise.

Then, he blinked and found himself crouching on a dirty street. He checked himself and realized he was about five years old then, the age when his parents never returned home one fateful day. He remembered receiving a letter in the postbox of their rented room, but he couldn't read yet at such a young age; although he recognized the names of his tie and niang at the top, so he guessed that something must have happened to them. He handed the letter to the landlord, hoping to glean more information and the whereabouts of his parents, but the evil man never returned the letter to him, let alone shared what was written inside. Instead, three days later, the landlord sent servant bullies to kick him out of his family's rented room, citing that the rent was due but of course, the boy had no money to pay.

The bullies took everything of value - which wasn't much for the poor Wei family -, and bagged them up for sale, then kicked and destroyed everything else that they couldn't take, because, according to the head of the bullies, a new family will be moving into that room later that evening. They even beat him up when he tried to protect a box of his parent's memorabilia, which the thugs stole while laughing maniacally - because apparently, there were some jade pieces from his tie and niang's wedding, long ago. So, at sunset, Xian Xian was left crying alone in the street, with nothing but the rags on his back and bruises to his face. He hadn't eaten in three days since he last saw his parents walking out to buy some groceries at the market, their last words being to be a good boy and stay indoors because there are a lot of bad people out there waiting to catch delinquent children and sell them elsewhere. The landlord and the neighbours, also poor servants and peasants themselves, refused to take concern for a child not of theirs, or even spare a baozi or two, despite the child's repeated pleas for food - so he was very hungry by then.

At nightfall, having nowhere else to go and shivering in the chilly darkness with a rumbling stomach, he had no choice but to walk to the market, where he last heard his parents were. As if to add to his misery, the dark, cloudy skies opened up, and he was drenched to the bone. His face was throbbing from the bruised swelling, his legs were weak, he was coming down with a fever, and he was thirsty and starving in the cold. The market was closed at night, and the entrance was fenced up, so he couldn't climb in even if he wanted to. The untimely rainstorm forced him to look for shelter, however, all shops were boarded up, and all houses had their door locked. He struggled to pull a piece of woven bamboo that was part of a wooden cart from the dumpster, and thought it would make a roof above his head while he sat out in the rain. As the large square piece of thatch finally relented, and the boy was exhausted after exerting himself on an empty stomach, his eyes sparkled when he found soggy, soaking wet food waste inside the dumpster that was hiding beneath the thatch. The breads were stale and moldy, the meats smelled funky, the discarded rice and grains had stuff growing out of them, bits of rotten vegetables were strewn all over in a disgusting soupy mix, and the expired candies had stewed in the smelly leachate liquid at the dumpster's bottom, so he knew those were inedible. However, he found some fruit peels at the top of the pile, which didn't look or smell weird, so he collected them gratefully; then he trained his eyes to look around the corner of the market where vendors sold fruits, and found more watermelon rinds, apple cores, half-eaten bananas and other food waste that he could scavenge in the dead of the night - never mind that some of them had footprints on them, or were left soaking in muddy puddles in potholes in the streets, because he was so famished that he didn't mind sitting under a tree, with the thatch balanced precariously atop his small head, while he had his first meagre meal of discarded fruit peels in three days.

After eating what he found - carefully, because it hurt to even open his mouth due to the bruises and cuts on his cheeks -, he felt very tired and wanted to close his eyes, because his fever had caught up and he was disoriented, shivering, and coughing. He didn't know what to do in a dark world where he had no money to see a doctor, no friends to help him, and no one to turn to in his hour of need. Xian Xian sobbed and cried for his miserable fate and wished that he could just forget the bitter, biting cold and sleep without a bed, pillows and blankets, and prayed that he'd wake up bright and early to see his parents, wherever they may be.

Just as he was nodding off, a street brat with a straw rain-cape walked by. He was no taller than Xian Xian, and he peeked beneath the thatch curiously. “Oi, are you alive?” he asked, and used a dirty stick to poke at Xian Xian’s wounded cheek because they looked so pale that he might as well be a ghost lying in wait under the pouring rain. Xian Xian only grunted from the stinging pain, and made an incoherent sound, because he was delirious and too weak to respond. He averted his gaze from the street brat, because it was only his third day in this cruel, miserable new world as an orphan, and he didn’t know if he should trust, or even respond to strangers outside of his former home.

“Ya look new, and you look beat’n up. If ya want, f’llow me ta th’ back alley down th’ road,” the boy gruffly said in a smattering of dialect words, and pointed in a direction that Xian Xian couldn’t even lift his head up to see, “Th’re’s an uncle payin’ a silver piece ta’ each boy to feel good, in exch’nge for strippin’ down th’ pants. Ya ain’t have much in ya birdie, but yer young, and tha’ silver piece will get ya a bowl of hot congee to last ya for th’ night. Ya’ll die early if ya gonna stay too long in this freezin’ rain, ya know?”

The brat tapped his foot impatiently for a few seconds while waiting for the rather unresponsive other boy curled up under the tree, and then decided that even he couldn’t stand in the downpour for too long. “I cain’t be watchin’ over ya, yer own yer own! I don’t wanna be seein’ yer bodybag tomorrow! Remember, th’ back alley! If the kids there like ya, mabbe ya can join our gang too! See ya... or not!” the street brat called out and ran off towards the back alley not too far away. The disappearing pitter patter of feet in woven slippers was unmistakable - at least that boy had shoes on his feet, whereas Xian Xian had none and had to go bare feet; there are swollen and infected cuts and blisters on his soles, because he’d walked quite a bit around the market’s dirty, polluted grounds.

Xian Xian was too afraid of rascal boys, and with the brat finally gone, he blinked his eyes blearily and squinted in the direction that the latter dashed off to. He couldn't remember the conversation that had transpired due to his feverish state, but that bowl of hot congee sounded tempting. He shifted and fidgeted, wanting desperately to quell the still-gnawing hunger in his unsatisfied stomach, and hoping that perhaps, just perhaps that uncle may find him likable and take him to a home with a bed and warm blankets. He only had to strip his pants down and 'feel good', correct?

Just as he rose to his feet unsteadily, and dropped the piece of heavy roof-like thatch in preparation of another long, painful walk without shoes in the rain, towards the back alley, he heard rustling sounds from the opposite direction. A few steps thudded wetly in rain puddles.

“Wei Ying.”

Xian Xian turned towards the voice, because that was the nickname that tie and niang used to call him. There were four individuals, standing in a line from the shortest and youngest at the left, to the tallest and oldest at the right end, all dressed in majestic heavenly white robes with layers of baby blues, each holding an umbrella.

“You're hungry. We have plenty of home-cooked food to share with you. Baozi , fresh fruits and vegetables, meat roasts, even hot congee and soups - whatever you desire - without having to give up anything precious from your body.”

“You’re in pain. We have ointments for your cuts, medicines for your fever, and a soft warm bed for you to sleep in, covered with loving hugs and blankets to keep out the sadness in your heart.”

“Wei Ying, you’ve suffered much hardship at such a young age. It’s time to leave this place, and be where you truly belong.”

“Wei Ying, come back to Gusu with me.”

At the tender age of five, he knew nothing about the cruel, harsh world, much less one that’s filled with bad people waiting to catch delinquent children on rainy nights and sell them elsewhere. However, the appearance of four angels from heaven left him bewildered, and when one umbrella was offered above his head to shelter him from the heavy rain, one hand grasped his tiny fingers to reassure him with the warm and strength of another, and one man embraced him fully by the body to offer him sanctuary and protection, and the kind of love that instinctively told him that Everything’s All Right - Xian Xian broke into tears and nodded eagerly with cute, squeaky ‘Enn!’s, even as his vision is clouded in swirling white cloth decorated by cloud patterns, his senses spinning from the scent of woody sandalwood, and soon, he was buoyed upwards and carried in someone’s arms like a bride, that he was no longer soaking from the rain and there was warmth everywhere, even his ears reddened from fever and from listening to a strong, calming heartbeat--

The youngest of the four looked at him, and Xian Xian realized that the boy wasn’t that much older than him, probably, and that he looked really handsome and attractive.

The boy, who wears a white forehead ribbon like the other three, introduced himself as--

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 241

8:00 am

Lan Zhan works as the Emperor of his Kingdom, formally and formerly known as the Kingdom of the Qishan Lan - and technically, since the floating island where he's living in is based in Qishan, or close by, hence the title seems viable for the time being -, the President and Founder of Wangxian Co. Ltd. mega-conglomerate corporation, the Supreme Leader and Grand Patriarch of the Council of Lan - that is, referring to his branch of the diverse Lan family tree, specifically growing its roots since the Qishan Lan was founded -, and holds many other roles and titles that he, in reality, does not try to remember anymore.

He lets his alter-ego, a superior cloned version of himself, do his job nowadays. The Regent, currently residing in the Heavenly Palace in the Heavens, which is a part of the Realms of the Gods, has performed to Lan Zhan's satisfaction and was promoted not too long ago to take over completely in leading and managing the day-to-day operations of Lan Zhan's portfolio. Lan Zhan no longer spends time performing his duties as the King Of Gods, creating new worlds and races, directing gods, demi-gods and deities to earn merits, prayer and worship from followers, preside over press conferences or launch new products for the company, or dictate and advice the Council on matters related to the family - amongst an assortment of other more mundane, ordinary commitments and obligations. Therefore, the man is free to spend his entire life focusing on what matters most - the patriarch of his core family, particularly as husband and lover for his lovely, blissfully wedded man-wife, Wei Ying - and pursue his hobbies and interests because he still has his grassroots as a (former) mortal who has such indulgences and desires.

However, the husband has a habit of following routines, because routines keep him organized, purposeful, satisfied and sane. He still clocks in at eight, and starts off by checking his holo-phone for the latest - the latest news, the latest emails, the latest WeiTube videos, the latest WeiChat messages, the latest ErNet developments, and so on. Letting go of control had been hard; he remembered his first few days of fully going hands-off after submitting a formal letter of retirement and to appoint the Regent as his successor - he couldn't completely cut himself out and still dabbled and interfered in matters taken care by his successor and the officials and managers of his legacy, until the wife got angry because he'd been dying for crazy monkey sex after the floating island took form with boredom setting in, and Wei Ying barged into the study room to confiscate his holo-phone then pulled him by the ears while he was having a video-conference with the masses, then gave him a good sloppy wet kiss peppered with affectionate nibbles before devolving into a scalding round of good scolding, and then dragging him to bed to have the said crazy monkey sex that left Lan Zhan sexually dysfunctional for a long while - and he finally appreciated that his world, his Kingdom and company, his multiverses continued to run on their own even as he spent days and nights inside lovely Wei Ying's ass (and man-pussy, as a bonus) - so he went cold turkey on work, allowed the wife to lovingly manage his withdrawal symptoms more overdoses of crazy monkey sex in their lil' cozy cave-home, until he proudly declared himself with a clean bill of health, while having crazy monkey sex during former working hours - he could already state, in unequivocal terms, that their crazy monkey sex starring the finest of Lan Wang Ji, would put to shame the performances from the kama sutra, hardcore porn stars, renowned erotica writers and the ilk.

Still, routines are routines. Having checked his feeds, he reviews his portfolio just like how retired investors continue to keep an eye on their golden nest-eggs; once he's satisfied and after shooting off a few generally unnecessary emails to keep his subjects and employee on track, he twirls his fingers and the holo-phone fwip! 's off.

At eight-thirty in the morning, he hears soft sniffles and sobs coming from the bedroom.

.

8:30 am

“Wei Ying, here have some warm chicken congee and some calming tea. You probably didn’t dream well because you were hungry and thirsty... it is quite late in the morning too.”

Wei Ying sniffles like a spoiled babe, eyes still closed and wet from tears, and opens his mouth wide to be fed by a spoonful of the tasty congee - which the husband immediately summoned from a 51st-century hypermarket with instant teleportation delivery services -, that has been blown at least thrice by his darling man. After taking in a gulpful, he continues to sniffle and hiccup.

“Wuuu... Wuuu... I was so happy and sad, I couldn’t control myself in my sleep... Wuuu... Wuuu...”

Lan Zhan peppers sweet kisses on Wei Ying’s cheeks, and hugs him hard against his broad chest; it is perfectly fine for his shirt to be stained with drool and tears from his beloved man.

“Lan diedie made sure I grew up healthy, smart and strong, by cooking my favourite dishes every day served with herbal soups, and he taught me how to read and write in the mornings, then lets me play all day in the afternoons, and sometimes we go hunting for jungle fowls together.

Lan niangniang promised that I’ll never feel pain and sadness again, so he kissed away my tears when I was asleep, woke me up with body massages and footrubs, and he sewed nice and warm clothes for me to wear all day, and gifted toys and jewels for me to play and wear during festivals.

Lan er gege became my older lover, brother and senior, he taught me how to fall in love, how to make love, and how to give and accept the Lan family’s love. He was such a romantic at heart that I cried shameful tears of joy when I first came with him deep inside of me, long before I experienced my first wet dream.

Lan didi was the boy I was betrothed to, and promised to wed when I was five. He was my best friend in school, my confidant and soulmate at home, my matchless peer in play fighting, and we were formally engaged at seven when Jiang Fengmian knocked on the door to meet us. He said that since he was my late father’s employer, he felt obliged to give consent on my behalf to accept Lan didi ’s hand in marriage. Oh, I felt so joyful for my happy ending, yet bittersweet for the inevitable pains I had to go through to reach that point, that on the night of my wedding, my husband and his three elder brothers make such wonderful love to me, that I lost my mind from the pleasure and woke up in your strong arms, and with a rumbling tummy, lao gong .”

Lan Zhan couldn’t help but to give a quick peck on the man’s lips before serving him the last spoonful of congee. Lovely Wei Ying is so precious, the inner voice tells him.

With a stomach filled with warm food, the tears dried after having been kissed away, the snot blown into tissue papers and crumpled then thrown away into the trash bin, and the man's shaken composure finally regained, Wei Ying settles down to resume his nap in the husband's comforting embrace - in which he slides his feet to the corner of the bed to press a hidden red circle, which then fwip! 's the couple and spirits them away to a faraway, sensual sexual paradise, before returning two seconds later fully drained, fully relaxed, and fully sated from head to emptied loins to toes - and Wei Ying finally nnnghs and curls up into a ball in the hubby's arms, then snores rudely while letting out a long, satisfying fart.

.

Dreamy-eyed and sex-coma'd Lan Zhan sends some messages to his royal subjects to create new lifetimes based on such touching, awe-inspiring, dramatic and sexy premises as narrated by Wei Ying, though his message is hard to decipher due to the inordinate amount of typo errors and bad grammar, due to his brain isn't functioning correctly after too much orgasms during that two-second period. In any case, he doesn't have to direct the movies, since he merely sponsors his people by providing ideas and unlimited funds to make new worlds and playgrounds for the couple to play in, in the far future - and he gets dibs on premieres and enjoys the fruits of his loins and hard labour.

Later, a snippet of conversation between the two lovebirds:

“Wei Ying, today you dreamt of an alternate past of your childhood. Yesterday, it was a different spin on how we met and befriended each other while studying at the Cloud Recesses. Is there something that you wish to explore further in a different lifetime?”

“Emm... too much work. I don't wanna die again and wait sixteen years to confess my feelings to you.”

“... what if we skip that dying part, and confess our feelings much earlier - say, during our teenage years or when we were smaller? Then chart a different course in the journey of our lives.”

“Eww, that's sick. You'd be a pedophile and I'd be your child-bride! We'll be wedded at a time when we're too young and probably below the legal age of consent! You hideous monster, scheming pervert, child rapist, you've been thinking about this for a while, haven't you?!”

“... Wei Ying... I...”

“C'mon, you horny lustful demon. I'm spreading my legs now, you wanna fuck me? Fuck me now, I'm your eight-year old little girl with fertile wombs waiting to be injected by your creamy fertile seed. Knock me up daddy, put your fat dick inside, I want you to father many chubby and healthy babies inside, do you want to impregnate me while feeling my squeeze-squeeze cunny play touch-touch with your sexy stallion penis?”

“... Wei Ying... Hnnngh!...”

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

9:00 am

Wei Ying is pacified, silence reigns and pervades the cave-home once again, a pot of soup is simmering lightly in the kitchen, a flying robotic drone with mechanical arms has washed the dishes, dried them and put them in their respective racks, a golem is baking chocolate cakes, sweet biscuits and salty snacks using the oven, the floor is clean and waxed by Dustless Brooms, and his daily one-hour of paid work is done. Lan Zhan clocks out and receives his daily paycheck - a meagre stipend of enough gold and silver to last a lifetime; and as a purveyor of frugal lifestyles, living minimalists and simple living, he deposits and invests ninety-nine percent of his salary into his bank accounts, various blue-chip stocks and long-term investments, leaving the one percent for his daily shopping needs. All is well, and it is time to take a break outdoors and wind down from the pressures from the work-from-home arrangement - which is hardly any.

(Sometimes there are after-work calls or videos to take, which is fine, as long as the wife doesn't complain - which is why he prefers to get his work done in the morning, because he knows that when Wei Ying is awake, chances are his loins won't be getting any peace and quiet, let alone the focus and concentration needed to negotiate trade deals with distant alien civilizations, to genetically design an improved version of the perfected Homo sapiens wangxianesis , or to remotely attend a ribbon-cutting ceremony to officiate a new planet-wide branch office in some galaxy or nebula cluster.)

He is back in the courtyard, getting his daily dose of good quality vitamin D as the sun rises higher until it peeks over the timestorms - and a good time to dry the chillies and other produce that needs to be baked under the sunlight. Due to the unabating timestorm, their cave-home gets actual unhindered and unfiltered light from the sun around the hours between nine and three; beyond that, the sun sinks behind the wall of lashing sands, and it gets dark pretty quickly after that. With a more energized body, he carries out more intensive farm work, such as digging irrigation drains for the farm - the new patch of soil where chilli plants are sprouting will need some; scrubbing the backyard pool clean from scum buildup and marine predators lurking in the corners to ambush and violate Wei Ying's anus each time the young man takes a dip with an ass full of their spent passions; milling grains for the chickens and later, playing with the bunnies when he needs a break; building and fixing stonewalls to properly segregate small parcels of land according to use, whether for farming, for extending their cave-home, for building a new shed, for the farm animals to graze, and so on.

However, the island is simply a relatively flat, uneven circular platform of earth with the cavernous dwelling in the middle; with a courtyard at the front good for hanging laundry, drying goods in the sun, perform exercises and cultivation where a clear, empty space is needed, and to have picnics and outdoor romantic candlelit dinners under the moonlight; a strip of farmland further ahead that is nearly fully utilized, forming a semi-circle around the front-facing part of the island; the backyard waterfall and pool behind the cave-home flanked by several outdoor buildings such as sheds, storehouses and underground bunkers containing food and weapon caches; further to the back are relatively undisturbed undergrowth, bamboo clumps and a wee bit of wilderness that forms the other half of the circular island. Thus, due to the small size of their property, everything that needed to be done outdoors could be completed within minutes or at most an hour or two.

Soon, golems emerge to take away the dried laundry and Lan Zhan eagerly joins them to fold the bedsheets and garments on a picnic table and bench located at one side of the courtyard, beneath the shade of a large fruiting tree. There is something absolutely therapeutic about folding large rectangles into smaller ones, and dividing large pieces into equal and smaller portions, and then building a perfectly aligned stack, like a mini-tower of sorts, and putting them in cupboards, drawers and cabinets where they belong.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 242

9:30 am

Most of the servants have returned to their bases or teleported back to the charging stations, which means that the day's household chores are more or less completed. Lan Zhan takes an empty bamboo basket from the kitchen countertop, exits through a side door through the backyard, and heads straight for the bamboo clump. He counts carefully, because between the ninth and the tenth bamboo stalk from the left, there is a hidden dimensional portal; there is no need to expend any energy to unzip doors from the thin air, since these portals are pre-built into the island's construction and are considered as naturally occurring phenomena. He parts the ninth and tenth bamboo trunks - a breeze blows by, it is quite cooling due to the shade offered by the dense foliage of the grove -, and he takes a step through. Lan Zhan fwips ! out of sight.

Armed with his daily spending money, the husband goes on a shopping spree in a large supermarket that connects the upgraded malls of Jinshan, Nieshan and even Gui Shan housed in a different dimension. He does not reveal what he buys - other than the fact that he buys much more than he needs due to his hoarding tendencies and an innate fear of going hungry with a family that depend on him as their sole breadwinner - and his shopping list is never known because that kind of information falls under the Official Secrets Act of the Kingdom's laws. He does not push a shopping cart, because his 4d-printed biscuit made body is a walking infinite storage space; thus, whatever he picks from the shelves and approves the purchase, is automatically deducted from his checking account containing that one percent of his paycheck, then he absorbs the purchased object into his skin, and the transaction is completed.

He returns two seconds later, and counts the bamboo clump again. Between the sixteenth and seventeenth stalks, lies another portal. He does not hesitate to walk through the narrow space in between, and ends up in a large forest in another world, or some faraway terraformed planet that supports a huge biodiversity of life that resembles Planet Earth's, probably. There, he goes foraging for edibles, herbs, exotic creatures and minerals that he might need - but that's unlikely because he has more than enough stored inside his body; so he convinces himself that Wei Ying might need for, say, making extra special talismans, powerful potions or even tasty broths - because he finds himself catching frogs and snails, or dragging out centipedes as large as a truck from their burrows, wiping an entire mountain clean of flowering weeds in the hopes that some plants may have medicinal value, and carting off crystal caves because there are many shiny bits inside that one can easily mistaken them as Twisty Crystals - though in actual fact, Lan Zhan does not know why he needs to forage across worlds and planets, if not to satisfy that innate hoarding desire to collect, keep and secure using his newfound ability, that is his utilizing the amazing all-in-one body made of 4d-printed biscuits.

He returns when he thinks he's cleared out a patch of forest - actually, a large swathe of a galaxy, causing mass extinctions across planetary systems, but he does not realize that -, before gnawing on his finger, thinking far, far ahead of 'what if I forgot something' and 'what if there's something I need elsewhere' - so he travels back to the bamboo clump and visits another portal tucked in between bamboo stalks, several more times. Soon, his basket is full of perfectly normal stuff - a collection of wild plants, shiny rocks, a handful of berries, and maybe some kind of insect or amphibian lying dead somewhere inside -, though his inside does not feel like he's squeezing his lungs out from any lack of space. He reasons with himself that the act of harvesting nature's goodness and resources is a survival behaviour, because on the floating island, there are hardly any non-domesticated animals, that is, there are no wild predators or fire ant anthills to pursue and track down, no pesky squirrels that eat his stored fruits or nesting crows that steal people's underwear from the clothes line, and that the island runs on a very lean, optimized ecosystem, so to speak.

.

Wei Ying dreams again. This time, he's just moved into the Burial Mounds with the Wen survivors after rescuing them from the slave mines. He's a bitter and angry man, having been betrayed by those who claimed allegiance initially, and then, behind his back, acted just as bad as Wen Ruohan did by taking advantage of the weak and defeated, treating the innocent as slaves and fodder for the powerful. The lines between black and white blurred, because the good had turned their back on what was virtuous and noble, and the black is found innocent, never guilty, after all this time.

However, in the desolate, perpetually black-misted 'Mounds, at least he can still break into a smile, as he watched how the survivors form a closely-knit community to rebuild their lives in a place abandoned by Mankind; their resilience taught Wei Ying what it truly means to find light in the darkness, although he himself was enveloped in pure darkness that spews hatred and vengeance whenever he, in loose terms, loses his marbles and control over the Yin Metal embedded within his blackened heart.

Some of the Wen villagers returned with pockets filled with wild fruits after a day of foraging, and Wen Qing oversees a group of younger men to plough a plot of land and plant potatoes and some vegetables. A-Yuan seems to be the only child, and he plays alone outside Wei Ying's cave - his headquarters filled with ancient mystical writings and bloodied curses etched on the walls, and in one of the many cavernous chambers dimly lit by candles, a body lies on a raised stone platform, swaddled with dirty cloth, talismans and bloody writings invoking evil Dark magic-inspired curses for resurrecting the dead. The Wei gongzi is still in the early phases of his Dark experiments to bring forth one of the greatest creations under the influence of Darkness - in those days -, when several villagers cry out in alarm because an intruder appears in their midst in the form of a flying Bichen almost crash landing in front of Wei Ying's cave.

“What are you doing here? You're not invited! Get out! You do not help me, therefore you are not on my side!” Wei Ying shouts at the unwanted visitor. Wen Qing arrives in time to get the villagers out of danger, and everyone runs for the dark, gnarly and curse-stinked trees for cover. Even a crying A-Yuan is picked up by Grandmother Wen and they disappear into the tall grasses.

“Wei Ying, listen to me, please.”

“Why should I? The night we parted, you did not say what you should have, so I have the right not to listen to your words! You allowed me safe passage during that instance, so I will give you a chance to take flight and never return! Who knows, you might even be a spy and reveal this location to the outside world, and put my Wen friends in grave danger! Leave, before I go into a slaughter frenzy and leave blood on my hands!” he replies with such raw anger in his voice, that it becomes hoarse, cracked, because his throat felt constricted, his eyes prickled with tears of disappointment, and his fingers balled into furious fists that wanted to pound the pillars of his cave into dust.

Bichen remains unsheathed after it was drawn back from its flying mode. The visitor takes two steps forward, Wei Ying backs away two paces, bristling with a frightening mix of fury and fear - because he really didn't want to pull out his flute and bring upon more suffering, not especially to this man, whom he held special memories from the day they first met in Gusu, even hints of interests, and plenty of misunderstandings since then.

“I... yield. I’m on your side. I’m with you, Wei Ying.”

Wei Ying couldn’t believe what he heard, so he holds up his flute and points at the intruder in anger and aghast. Sweet whispers begin to ring inside his head, those terrible seductive voices telling him that lies, lies, everyone in the world was against him, therefore, it is all lies, lies.

“You’re lying! You’re going to kill me the moment you’re within an arm’s reach! Don’t you dare! Go away! Liar! Traitor!” It’s getting difficult to breathe, much less to keep his thoughts coherent, when those voices rise in volume and pitch, and drown out the real sounds from his surroundings. He shakes his head violently, sweating profusely from another of those Yin Metal psychic attacks, and tries to steady himself against the doorway to his cave lest he loses his footing and stumbles.

“Wei Ying, you’re in pain. It’s the Yin Metal, it’s hurting.”

“It’s not! You’re lying! You’re just like the rest of the cultivators, trying to steal this power for your own use, you selfish bastards!” He was clearly becoming psychotic, and he trips over his own feet; fortunately, his hands are flat against a wall, and he remains standing, defending his position, his integrity, and his philosophy, no matter how Dark it is.

“Wei Ying, you will not be returning to the path of light. So I have decided to walk with you in the path of darkness. Please, let me into your world. I will share this pain with you, this Yin Metal, and we will hurt together. For your sake, and mine.”

It is too much, the voices telling him that Lan er gongzi is lying, and yet he offers an olive branch that he truly wanted to grasp as his lifeline, and be taken away to safety. He lets out a painful howl while gripping his head, because it hurts, it hurts so much, oh if only someone would take it away, away--

Wei Ying falls forward when he suddenly loses his balance, and he squeezes his eyes, cursing under his breath and bracing himself for impact and probably a slight concussion if he's unlucky enough. But that strike to his head never happens.

He opens his eyes after what seemed forever, carried and buoyed by someone's strong arms. He finds himself staring upwards, somehow, and that Lan Zhan caught him just in time. The skies above are dark and gloomy, casting shadows on the er gongzi's handsome features, and he has such a pained, sad look on his face.

It hurts, Lan Zhan, Wei Ying whispers inside, and he wasn't sure if the other man heard it at all. The misery of living as an outcast, of not having to eat at nightfall and yet there are mouths to feed, of trying to be brave and put up a confident facade when everything is in shambles, of not knowing what will happen in the future but with a group of weak, tired survivors from enslavement, and a nearly-dead body that he works so hard to rescue from the brink of death, the pain of being the only one treading upon the path into the unknown because his instincts tell him it's right, but the whole world turned its back on him and pushes him to the precipice of destruction-

-

“I know. I hurt too. But I’ve made my decision from this point onwards.

I’m here (我在). Always.”

Wei Ying sobs. Hard.

.

10:00 am

Lan Zhan returns from his outing and is busy unpacking the stuff he’d bought and brought back in the kitchen. He’d bought more than he should, as usual, because he’d fallen into the trap of promotions, coupons and vouchers - those buy one free ones or buy one free twos, free gifts for purchases above a certain amount, purchase this for a discount with another purchase, and the ilk - but that’s fine, because Lan Zhan’s body can fit countless supermarkets and their warehouses if need be. Just as the last package for the kitchen’s pantry is exuded out of his body and delivered like a heavy sack of grains into a golem’s waiting arms, he hears some disconcerting sounds from the bedroom. He sends a psychic instruction to the golem, and hurries off.

Later, Lan Zhan has Wei Ying cuddled in his arms again, and his eyes never leave his wife’s teary gaze. It must’ve been exasperating to take care of a crybaby, but Lan Zhan knows better. In the hours between the dead of the night and the mid of the day, Wei Ying creates wonderful lifetimes and realities, as sad, pitiful and painful some may be, and there is an equal number of silly, ridiculous and even bewildering scenarios as well. He blames it on the congee he fed the man earlier that day; he did add some extra pepper for seasoning - which is bitter by nature -, and it must not have gone well with Wei Ying's tummy. So, as they snuggle up under a layer of blanket, the husband places his warm hand on the wife's belly, and starts to give the latter gentle belly rubs, while Wei Ying babbles about his latest adventures - that started with a bitter note, that is.

“ Lao gong , did you know how fearful and paranoid I became, when you joined the Dark side? I spent many days agonizing over your decision, because I wasn't sure if you'd drop dead the next minute from holding the Yin Metal with your bare hands, or if you'd be swallowed up by the cursed voices and drive a blade through my heart from behind! I was so worried about you and for my safety!”

“Mn. That's because you've always shown concern for me, even in the most subtle ways.” One peck on the cheek.

“ Lao gong , I dreamt that you became a very brilliant, merciless and powerful General, and a very dangerous man filled with vengeance and unbridled emotions. It was hard to guess if you wanted to greet me or murder the entire hall of Wen survivors that you'd turned into fierce corpses! You were ruthless! You didn't even spare the lives of your former allies, and made us into a formidable force from the West - even the Lanling Jin and the Qinghe Nie withdrew their troops, and you battled your elder brother without hesitation!”

“Mn. It was because of you, Wei Ying. I would've done those things for you.” Another peck, on the other cheek.

“In the end, it was bittersweet. You and I ruled over the cultivation world with blood soaking the grounds from our enemies’ defeat. The Wens were transformed into the greatest Ghost war generals and warriors to rule all living Men. Wen Qing became their symbolic queen, and Wen Ning, the king, while A-Yuan rose to prominence as a crown prince because I gave him preferential treatment. We became rich as hell, and whatever A-Yuan wanted to buy from the toy store at the markets, or whatever he wanted to eat in the restaurants, we could afford everything for him!”

“Mn. You’ve always had a soft spot for families and for justice. That’s what drives you to make the right decisions.” A smooch, this time, a feather-light touch on the lips. Wei Ying continues to narrate his wonderful adventures in an alternate reality where evil triumphs over good, while laying his head against the husband’s comforting chest - and it wasn’t too bad, considering that both he and Wei Ying tied the knot anyway with massacres and bloodthirsty fighting going on. Lan Zhan sends a quick message to his royal subjects via ErNet to put yet another series of amazing stories into production.

Fifteen minutes passed, and Wei Ying snores again, because it is just too comfy to be cocooned inside the husband’s cuddle.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 243

11:00 am

Wei Ying's holo-phone alarm clock rings, but he wants his five more minutes. And Lan Zhan delightfully gives him that five minutes.

Wei Ying dreams a lot more between the hours of midnight and the hours of midday, though usually one or two will stand out compared to the rest. Lan Zhan knows this, because he can tap into Wei Ying's psyche through their soulmate bond, though knowing Wei Ying and the amount of Wei Ying-ness that occur rampantly inside that juvenile trapped in a man's body, he usually steers clear unless he needs to intervene. He's watched, with a tub of popcorn in hand and a extra large cup of soda by the side, movies about how they reincarnated sometime four thousand years from now, in a 21st-century worlds where they were supposedly superstar celebrity actors acting out their life stories for the masses to pay and watch, and they found each other's arms behind the stage; there was also one where they lived in modern times, where he worked as a cool-headed teacher and Wei Ying as a feisty loudmouth bartender, and they met one day when he was down in the dumps and sought refuge in alcohol, then met Wei Ying and they fell in love, then had crazy monkey gay sex behind the bar counter, following that, a whole trashy novel of gay drama and relationship issues ensued, et cetera ad naseum ; even better, there was one in the far, far future where they were generals of their own spaceships from competing clans in an arms race to conquer a galaxy, and after years of thrilling space opera-esque drama and angst oozing sex appeal and smouldering stares at the screens, they found themselves trapped in a planet after their ships crashed from some lame excuse, and they learned how to live with one another in a desolate world, and finally, have crazy monkey gay sex inside caves while feasting on grilled alien chickens, et cetera ad nauseum .

In this case, Lan Zhan was curious to learn what made Evil Wang Ji tick every checkbox in Wei Ying's list of must-haves for an intensive and very desirable lovemaking session - because unknown to the younger man, he was moaning Lan Zhan's name in a very hungry, desperate manner until he wetted his jammies with pre-cum and his meatstick twitched wildly inside the tented pants that it slipped out of the drawstrings, even while crying and cuddling the hubby. So, after holding his breath and sinking himself into the wonderful perverted and twisted world of Wei Ying-ness, he managed to stave off an oncoming train wreck of headaches and facepalms, and watched yet another strange vulgar movie starring himself in the most unflattering ways.

In that alternate scenario, Evil Wang Ji, whose powers quadrupled with the absorption of Yin Metal's Dark influence, became psychotic, aggressive, abusive and very cruel, except to his beloved newly wedded wife, the man named Wei Wu Xian who was even surprised at the corrupting metamorphosis of his confidant, his soulmate. Lan Zhan smiled a very evil smile, and pinned his bride upon their new blood-red king-sized bed, and easily pushed apart those milky white thighs and without much preparation nor warning, pushed his awesome eight-inch monstrous, Yin-infused dick straight into Wei Ying's defeated, penetrated rosebud. That Dark version of Lan Zhan did everything by the book that Wei Ying loved - bruising kisses, rape-y rough manhandling, scratch marks and hickeys left everywhere out of pure lust, nipples nibbled so greedily until those nubs nutted with trembling, swollen joy (thus, the introduction of the term 'nipple orgasm'), roaming hands leaving no inch of skin unmolested, tasty navel licks, loving testicle fucks and sucks with plenty of testicular orgasms, brutal oral and handjobs, butt-gropes that leaves handprints to display the assailant's possessiveness, grazing the sensitive thighs and licking erogenous spots on the flailing, helpless limbs until they claw and rip bedsheets, and giving tender footrubs while having sex that Wei Ying suffered lapses in concentration and fall asleep whilst getting fucked in the ass in more ways than the Kama Sutra text has illustrated, all over their castle in that they had crazy monkey gay sex up against walls, bent over furniture, grinding on the floor and hanging upside down from the ceilings too - whatever Wei Ying wanted, that Lan Zhan gave - which wasn't really a tall order, because Lan Zhan could do that to the younger man if he asked - until he noticed an extra detail: that massively homo-sexy man not only packed the punch of a hypermuscular bodybuilder who sports bronzed, tanned and shining sweat-sheened skin at all times, but also he was able to fuck Wei Ying for an amazing seven days and seven nights without taking a break.

The lethal and rhythmic, unceasing in-and-outs that continue at a precise, controlled pace, despite how much Wei Ying cried and moaned and begged to be pounded into the king-sized bed and slammed into the wall with that awesome dick, no matter how many times Wei Ying came, ejaculated like an incontinent fool and fluttered his man-pussy and rectal walls around because he went crazy with too many orgasms and that damn turgid dick continued to sweetly grind and massaged its in-and-outs against his prostate gland, until that gland shut down permanently and yet it was pleased and shaken then stirred into jolting wakefulness, that Wei Ying screamed until he had no voice left, his cum dribbled wildly like a fountain of pee until there was nothing else to shoot, so he shot out penile farts - that is, urethral and pelvic muscles convulsing insanely and erratically, because it felt very, very good to be fucked, in-and-out, constantly by that god-awesome dick, until vacuum space is left and that airless space is squeezed out anyway from his insides, rumbling out as bubbles of farting sounds out of his penile pee-slit; and still, the maddening in-and-out movement of a dick through his blossomed and blooming anus remained in operation although Wei Ying's mind had shut down by then, and he needed a break from spasming too much, for too long and too hard, that he climbed off the bed, tried to crawl away on all fours, pulling on doorknobs and banging on windows desperately, shouting soundlessly for help because the large lover-man continued to loom from behind, grip his waist and hips and drilled in-and-outs again and again, until Wei Ying was broken, he peed uncontrollably from the marvellous delicious pleasurable waves that rocked his body and attacked his loins and genitals, that he farted through the hole he was fucked, farted through his penis, and farted through his nipples too, and he became one metaphorical human phallic organ whose sole purpose was to lie down on the bed, to be fucked by Lan Zhan's evil dick in-and-out again and again, attacked relentlessly, spewing tears, cum, pee, fluids and farts simultaneously, for seven days and seven nights non-stop.

Therefore, at present, Lan Zhan stretched one leg whilst cuddling his lovely Wei Ying, and reached with his toes towards an invisible red circle. That toe pressed the red button device, and the two warped in-and-out, in-and-out, of the current reality, in which, for each instance, the couple is teleported to a distant tropical paradise, where Lan Zhan fulfils Wei Ying's depraved fantasies and behaved like that Evil Wang Ji, and sexually ravaged Wei Ying's nubile body until he is inseminated, drained, orgasming everywhere all over the body even while the latter is asleep - because he wants his five more minutes, and so, Lan Zhan fucks his in-and-outs into Wei Ying's lovely tight asshole for seven days and seven nights, multiplied by the in-and-outs they made together as they travelled through space and time; in the end, Wei Ying's ass became loose, overly abused and stretched, gushing with semen like a overfilled cup, and became as sensitive, well-moulded and shaped to fit Lan Zhan's in-and-out penis, akin to a vagina - and when the five minutes are up, Wei Ying is totally savaged, and lets out a long string of farts from his ass and elsewhere, until he is thoroughly satisfied, deflated, used, boneless and pumped empty of any fluids, gas and at last, his sated lust.

.

11:05 am

Wei Ying nnnngs and stretches, then yawns. He keeps his hands lifted up, because he feels a moist washcloth wiping him down, and it feels invigorating to be pampered first thing in the morning - his morning, that is. He gets a full-bodied massage, is kneaded like a dough from head to toe, and around the arch and balls of his feet until he naps again in-between, then receives a wonderful back scratching session to restart his engines, in which he rolls over after that and is presented with loving kisses, good mornings to him and his baby Wei Yings, and soon, fingers dance along his torso, perky nipples, shivering abdomen and down, down to his naked crotch, where he gets a nice blowjob, or maybe that's a handjob - his mind is floating in a sea of cotton candy -, and his testicles, already dried wrinkly husks with no baby sperm cells left, are licked and sucked and made sweet love to, until he throbs, pulses, and weakly crests over his testicular orgasms, though nothing comes out besides a drop of pee, because he's been nicely emptied out just moments before and his balls are deserted as deserts. That precious droplet is stolen by the husband, pungent with a hint of musky Wei Ying-ness, and the soft, penis-glans gets a wake-up call in the form of tongue-polishing and deepthroating, in which Wei Ying nnnnnhs loudly, thrusts his naked hip into the welcoming heat like any wanton male receiving wonderful stimulation in his loins first thing in his mornings, and nngaahh, uuuhnn, and aaahnn incoherently, veins not really pumping enough anything to keep that organ hard - because they've been overheated and the nerves were singed in the scorching pleasure -, as he rides out a very, very weak climax and there is no more pee left to squirt, so he lets out a soft penile fart instead through fluttering convulsions in the urethra, to declare that his loins have really, truly, closed down for business.

With that, Wei Ying finally opens his eyes, sexually flushed and gasping hard, and he gets breakfast in bed on a tray, which is lunch for Lan Zhan. Wei Ying greets his husband with a sweet peck on the lips, and digs in to the much-needed nourishment after such a draining night until midday.

.

The couple indulges in mushy gestures expressing their love for one another, whether gazing into each other's eyes while munching on a shared strand of wheat noodle, feeding each other pieces of juicy fatty pork and sliced lotus root, or stealing a half-chewed cake from the other's mouth, then engaging in deep-french kisses to roll that morsel of shared food between tongues, and leave a sweet, delectable aftertastes in their lips and palate, one tasty bite at a time. The husband makes sure there are appetizers, main courses and desserts, and a pot of tea to wash the sumptuous meal down, a total of eight courses at least, and two very satisfied men after lunch.

Having overslept enough, Wei Ying is wide awake and raring to make the best of a bright new day when the sun is already high in the sky. He goes to the backyard pool-cum-bathrom for a quick dip and takes care of his personal needs and hygiene, then changes to his usual clothes - usually a dark-coloured tunic and a pair of comfortable pants suitable for the outdoors. The robots, golems and Invisible Hands whirr back to life, cleaning up Wei Ying's aftermath, whether in the bedroom (the amount of bodily fluids on every surface - including the ceiling - is staggering), the study room (he rummages for stuff in hidden pockets lying in wait inside his private workshop, and leaves nuts and bolts, sharp pieces and fragile ones, fluttering talisman papers and lint everywhere all over the floor), the kitchen (he grabs some snacks as an after-dessert - a new term he coins for himself - and does not wash his hand, so he leaves handprints and containers that aren't closed properly), and the living room (footprints, handprints, dirty marks, nose boogers, mucus and snot projectiles - the list goes on, but nothing that the servants cannot handle). He disappears beneath the floor mat for a tiny wee bit - it's a speedway to their shared underground kingdoms, and he likes to check on things, especially on false manifestations of his shijie , many wives and daughters and countless offsprings - makes sure to bed a few more, make a few more babies, enjoying the fruits of his very happy loins, and if he bumps into his premium collection of superior Lan Wang Jis, he'd also conceive and birth some to add the count to the leaderboard. Fortunately, their cave-home is cozy and small, fit for simple living purposes, so everything is back to where they should be thanks to the efficient housekeeping services, when Wei Ying leaves their home a little before noon.

.

11:55 pm

Wei Ying creeps towards the bamboo clump near the backyard pool, with a bunch of reusable woven bags and sacks that Lan Zhan likes to keep for shopping purposes. Like a scene from spy movies, he looks to the left, then to the right, and when the coast is clear and nobody is around - because Lan Zhan is at the front courtyard either sweeping fallen leaves away, checking on the various harvested produce being sun-dried on the ground, or feeding the fish and crustaceans, both of fresh and saltwater origins, thriving in their magically enchanted pond, with leftovers from lunch so that their source of seafood, and the fertilized farms that draw water from that pond, can triple in growth by the next day -; when the husband isn't peering at his direction, Wei Ying sprints across the mown grass and aims for a particular sliver of space between bamboo number twelve and thirteen. He leaps, spins in the air like a graceful acrobat, hands held tight to the sides like an aerodynamic torpedo, lunges straight at the target, and fwips ! out of sight the moment he crosses between bamboo number twelve and thirteen.

.

12:00 pm

“Look what I’ve brought for lunch! A wild fox caught in a wire snare, a knocked-out python, a small wild boar, a couple of wild pigeons and their nest of eggs, a bunch of wildberries from the meadows, and an armful of succulent summer fruits stolen from someone's orchard!" he crows.

"Wei Ying, you already had your lunch when you woke up. We'll put these in the grill for dinner," the husband appears in the kitchen to greet his wife and tries - but fails - to look astonished at the bountiful catch. Everything's been bagged up, so the husband simply arranges the sacks on the countertop for collection by the golems later - some of which are still moving and making clucking, hissing, growling and squealing noises, because Wei Ying doesn't bother to, nor wants to, slaughter the animals and leaves the dirty, messy, bloody job to his darling hunky man.

Wei Ying, in response, tries to appear insulted and livid, but miserably ends up laughing, "Your lunch was my breakfast. And I'm right when I say these are for lunch! My lunch!"

Lan Zhan gives a look that says 'we've been married forever, and we don't have to argue over this', and Wei Ying stiffens his gaze that replies with a challenging 'oh yeah, try me'.

"Mn. Lunch, it is. They're wild animal meats though," the husband turns his back and hides a snort - also, an endearing smile, because a couple that picks on each other, loves each other -, and insinuates to the younger man that he'll probably not dine on those gamey meats for an unshakeable dislike for unsavoury tastes, and also unsavoury effects on his qi levels.

"Ha ha!" Wei Ying grinned sleazily, "They're not wild, they're from our backyard. You know, err... those bushes behind the backyard pool where you never wanted to set foot on, because you said there could be creepy crawlies hiding in the tall grass, and that you'll only agree to fly over that spot on Bichen. By the way, there's a huge pile of unsorted trash there. Maybe the timestorm's been blowing stuff and garbage to that corner of the island." He checked his fingernails and casually dropped a hint, or a (click)bait; but the husband hasn't revealed to the wife that he's steeled his nerves since they moved to the island and has been catching creepy crawlies daily for the sake of his wife's hobby of making potions and soups out of them, thus breaking the stereotype of a fine, elegant Gusu Lan man that holds disdain and irrational fear over anything that's creepy and crawls, and generally icky and filthy in nature. The last bit though--

When Wei Ying's gone out of the kitchen, Lan Zhan couldn't resist picking up the trail divulged from Wei Ying's little lie, because there's that treasure at the end of the rainbow, that is, a pile of trash that he must, absolutely must, for the sake of his perfect life and the inherent need to clean up garbage and put things into where they belong - and he trudges out through the side entrance and past the backyard pool, with a straw broom in hand, his gaze hardened in determination to rid the last unsanitary and unclean spot off his island. Elsewhere, Wei Ying hides behind a curtain and waits for girlie screams and tap-dancing in meadows of tall uncut grass - which never really happened.

.

There's no mound of filth further behind the bamboo clump, although the place is rather messy like the bushes one finds in construction yard - filled with tall grass, some leftover wood and rocks, maybe a few discarded packaging and plastic materials that could be recycled and upcycled - which does not necessitate a full-blown clean-up operation with a straw broom. A huntsman spider larger than a man's palm did land on his hairpiece and crawled on his scalp - but after lifetimes of studying Wikipedia articles and watching WeiTube videos, he knows the arachnids are not bad and help to keep out pests and insects. So, he simply gently peels off the spider from his hair - eliciting a dismayed whine from Ni-er hiding there because she wanted to nom-nom that omni-legged critter as a snack - and places it on a rocky outcropping, before wishing it a good day with a slight bow.

When he returned to the cave-home, Wei Ying was gone again. The husband has superior senses to detect his wife's whereabouts, and sniffs out the man's escape route, which is between bamboo number twenty-two and twenty-three. Ah, he thought, that leads to a black market that deals in contraband and prohibited goods, so he guessed that the wife had grabbed the sacks from the kitchen to fill up his illicit hand-crafted wares stowed in the study room, before making off to that market which Lan Zhan had explicitly told the wife that No, he may not go there, because there are assassins, murderers, rapists, smugglers, pirates, drug dealers, pimps, gigolos and prostitutes making their living in an underworld crammed between bamboo number twenty-two and twenty-three.

It would be straightforward to just follow Wei Ying's elusive trail, teleport out, and haul him back by the ass or by pulling on the man's ear - but Wei Ying is clever and not easily outsmarted. The sacks were stolen, of course, and that meant that whatever that was inside those sacks were set loose and left to run rampant around the house. Lan Zhan could deal with fleeing cackling foxes, the odd python, charging wild boar and fluttering panicked pigeons - however that was a whole new level of farce, and instead, he was left, horrified and paled, at the sight of pesky squirrels that raided his fruit baskets, crows that flew around to pick up and drop stuff everywhere, poison-spitting vipers, vampiric evil rabbits and other pests that he really, absolutely, truly hated. They are nimble and fast, and they evade him just as much as they ruin the home and terrorize his belongings.

Lan Zhan roars in uncharacteristic anger, when he finds out that a bunch of harvested peaches since that morning that was left on the dining table had rodents' bite marks on the now-bruised fruits. The grip on the straw broom tightens immensely, steam billows out from his back, and he raises it in a fierce warcry to battle against his arch-nemeses.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 244

Just as Lan Zhan spent half an hour in shopping sprees driven by massive sales promotions - which translates to a long duration spanning to days, weeks, even months in otherworldly timeflow -, Wei Ying enjoys the same in his favourite hideout where he is free to buy and sell anything that is illegal and prohibited, cursed and evil, banished and exiled, frowned upon and deemed impossible, without a pair of jealous and upset husbandly eyes following him wherever he goes. The husband will be busy chasing after squirrels nibbling at harvested orchard fruits, for example, and Wei Ying sets his timer to go off in about half an hour's time so that he can return and face the music, but with a satisfied and happy heart. He convinces himself that he deserves as much, because in a loving couple relationship, both should have their fair shares of indulgences and happiness.

In a dark, dingy street that connects to the portal located between bamboo stalks twenty-two and twenty-three, Wei Ying saunters past diseased beggars asking for alms, alcohols and substances to inject up their nostrils or veins, assassins announcing that they're open for hire, dodgy merchants selling fake and contraband goods, dealers hawking illegal stuff such as guns, drugs, exotics and prohibited magical talismans and gadgets, and scantily-clad men and women offering pleasures of the flesh and slaves in cages, in exchange for cold hard cash. Money, in this world, isn't mere gold and silver pieces minted by some sovereignty, and instead, takes a multitude of more intangible and harder to earn forms because as a trading hub of all things cardinally sinful located smack in the middle of interdimensional trafficking crossroads and where seedy labyrinthine back alleys eventually wind up in, to survive it must be able to accept, and welcome interested buyers and sellers from different races across the realms.

Wei Ying has a black cloak draped over his body made of cold black things, and it helps it to carry his luggage, or rather, his merchandise. Still, his arms are filled with sacks of big and small sizes - treasures he'd gleamed and pilfered from spaces between bamboo stalk number twelve and thirteen, including very rare specimens of near-extinct animals and plants, radioactive and toxic gems and minerals, and captured sentient life-forms such as kidnapped faeries bound in cloth and ropes like burritos, famous demonic celebrities stored in magical gourds or the bones of legendary corpses that can be resurrected to serve new masters with a touch of evil, foreboding blood-letting rituals.

He blends quietly into the crowd of colourful, mostly dark or dirty customers, each with the intent to trade in sins despite their variety in forms, shapes and sizes; he walks among trolls and zombies, goblins and brutish orcs, some garbed in barbarians' furs, others in metal armours with toxin-laced spikes, and still more in robes bearing sinister designs, ghostly veils that mask faces, and like him, cloaks to hide the wicked and ill-intent from the attention of many. The black market spans across several blocks and criss crossing streets, thronging with people with two or six legs, of hands or bat-like wings, grinning with their latest successful bargains as much as showing fangs, claws and lashing out scaly tails in annoyance, anger or disappointment when one-and-only items are sold out to other eager buyers who are willing to pay more in blood, sin and the weight of souls in return for something that controls, corrupts, spawns evil and causes pain and destruction.

In what looks like a shady-looking tinted-glass pawnshop tucked between neon-lit massage parlours masking as brothels with their call girls' numbers posted on the storefront, and a shop with brazen advertisements of hiring sexy sales assistants to sell spiked wines perfect for use by hitmen and booze addicts - business is always brisk, though the customers and laoban do not talk about their profits -; Wei Ying squeezes in-between a haphazard queue of impatient customers waiting to get in while balancing his gait with his heavy baggage - fortunately the bouncers recognize him as a regular and let him through without needing any interrogation -, then into inside a dimly lit chamber. There, several high counters equipped with metal grills and patrolling bodyguards greet him, and he gingerly approaches one that doesn't have waiting customers.

A man with no hair except for the underside of his face, quite rotund in shape and size, wears thick glasses and dressed in a plain working shirt hunches behind the counter. He squints his eyes and adjusts his spectacles, before mumbling, "It's you again."

"Laoban , d'ya want to see my identification papers or can I delight you with my day's catch?"

The unfriendly, bearded man does not react to the sarcasm and raises a hand to call a passing-by guard. Apparently, Wei Ying is so well known to have brought sacks of goodies frequently, that there's no need to check his background, and the staff in the shop knows what to do.

"I don't run this establishment but I fail to see why you keep visiting this trading post - not that I mind - when one of your relatives owns it. You could've just pestered your kins or steal the required amount, and there's no need to hold up the queue like you always do, which is an inconvenience for the staff manning the counters in this shop. Also, there's nothing delightful in dealing with unrepentant criminals like you, because it's just a business transaction," the man replies with a no-nonsense voice, and the burly-looking guard starts taking the sacks off Wei Ying's hands. Next to the counter is a weighing scale - a rather large, ornate-looking one with dreadful and devilish designs carved onto the weighing pan. Wei Ying knows how the devices work - simply place an object to be exchanged, and the magical scales weigh the amount of sin accumulated through the history of the object and its present owner until the moment it is offered for sale. Unfortunately for the young man, he always arrive in this world with zero balance in sins, because he lives in an isolated floating island where he is always loved, cherished and forgiven no matter how many lies he's told, how many times he cheated his darling man or how much pain and suffering he's caused.

“ Laoban ,” Wei Ying calls out, ignoring the bearded man's grouses, “It's more exciting to earn my own sins and commit my own crimes, than to rely on others, even siblings, to get the dirty job done.” He adds an A.S.S. million dollar smile to emphasize his charm, though the clerk does not appreciate the oily gesture.

The clerk sighs, because they've had this conversation, and there is nothing that'll change Wei Ying's beliefs and perception when it comes to living in the fast lane of mischief, crime and wronging others. The guard places a squirming sack of something that's still alive onto the pan, and a panel in front of the weighing scale begins to calculate the weight of suffering, wrongdoing and malevolence. The number climbs from single to double digits. A bag containing the last winged unicorn foal of its kind in its homeworld, poached from the wild and destined to be made into some disgustingly rich man's steak on a dinner plate, and a nice shiny pen holder made from its ivory horn, is worth that much; but it is still paltry in comparison to the prices of really sinful things up for sale in the black market. The neigh'ing sack is crudely thrown to a pit behind the counter, and the guard works on the rest of the pile of bagged goodies on the ground.

“You should start looking into diversifying out from dealing with commodities like these,” the clerk murmured, as both men watched the guard weigh another sack, this time containing demons that, once released and bonded to a new master, could be ordered to rampage across continents and turn the living into the undead, and from land to ashes - perfect for those in quest to pillage cities and take revenge. The number remained at a miserable single digit, and Wei Ying let out a “Ehh?” of dismay. “These are too common. We run an exchange according to the laws of supply and demand. Right now, there's plenty of people looking for ways to hurt one another, in as many creative ways as mortally possible, and yours is just a drop in the ocean of sins, xiansheng," the clerk scoffs and jots down the numbers on a piece of receipt paper with an ink-brush.

Quantifying sin - in the broadest term to encompass all that is evil and malevolent - is a subjective topic, and although Wei Ying knows that the numbers add up to the equivalent of present-day cold hard cash, he doesn't quite comprehend how they are valued in the first place because he isn't well-educated in the economics of such exchanges involving morals and behaviours. Thus, he's been trying to sell whatever mischief his creative mind comes up with, what nice things he can put his grubby hands on and pilfer with pride, and what evil plans he can hatch and carry out to inconvenience or even hurt others, to find the most satisfying, easiest and most valuable ways to earn currency in this world, and pay for what he would like to purchase.

The sacks weighed and binned into the pit - including majestic specimens robbed from their native habitats, powerful relics and enchanted precious stones, and imprisoned sentient non-human individuals; the clerk taps his abacus to finally reveal the total rung up at the till that he jots down on the receipt. Not even a hundred, Wei Ying whined as he grasps at the slip of paper, appalled at the meagre earnings; even a rooted WeiStation X or Weitendo gaming consoles, stolen from their high-security product development labs and hacked to ensure the player wins in every game, costs at least two hundred each, the man whimpers and then curses the inflated prices found in the black market.

Wei Ying leans forward and his cold black cloak drips with poisonous glee, and asks, "If I add a couple of my daughters to the scale, how much would that yield? They're sweet young things aged sixteen and below, and I can even get those as young as ten, eight and six! They're ideal for warming beds for men and their dicks too, oh... and they're still virgins!" He adds his A.S.S. million dollar grin with a sly wink and a wiggle of eyebrows, hoping the clerk would find the idea of trading in flesh and virginities to be a profitable one.

Instead, the clerk gave Wei Ying a bored look. He tilts the abacus to the left, and rumbles, "We operate next to a whorehouse, xiansheng , and some of your girls work there. I ate some of your daughters for lunch earlier today," before going back to his paperwork of finalizing some proper documentation of what had been binned into the pit. Wei Ying gasps and he went as still as his eyes went as wide, because how shameless can his girls be, opening their legs and losing their precious flowerbuds to old, bearded and boring men like the clerk instead of their super sexy incestuous father! Why, that could even mean that the babies inside their bellies belonged to smelly, wrinkled old grandpas, and as he tip-toed to have a better look at the clerk, mmm-hmm, overweight and fat balding men too. He'll need to have a word or two with his offspring later and get their priorities right, he told himself.

"Xiansheng , you should know that common things will net you single-digit amounts of sin. Rare and exotics that are hard to acquire and infrequently come by, rake in for twice as much. One-and-onlys, firsts, once-in-a-lifetime, and that sort of stuff may be worth up to a hundred," the clerk explains, rather exhausted from dealing with such an annoying customer who isn't worth his time in sin, as he pens down the ten items that Wei Ying has sold.

"Such as?" Wei Ying's question doesn't skip a beat.

“Hmm...” the clerk murmurs, and scratches his beard with the handle of the ink-brush, “Like your first forbidden love, your first time getting deflowered or getting sinned, your first evil deed done unto a loved one, or something life-altering that will not happen again. We trade in memories and experiences too, by taking events from the past and channeling them to prospective clients in the future, then exchange them for currency. You’ll lose something in the process, of course, and you’ll end up being a different person because you wouldn’t have gone through that event and experience, but that’s how transactions work, xiansheng .” The clerk taps on the paper a little impatiently, gesturing to Wei Ying to either conclude the deal soon or get out, because there’s another customer queueing up behind him.

“This establishment works like a pawn shop too. All goods, including intangibles, can be loaned out to other clients and returned to the owners at a later time at a higher resale value. So, essentially you pawn off your stuff and collect the funds first, and later, you must return to purchase back your belongings at a higher price, and those belongings are generally already used by others, thus of lower quality for you. We advise customers to do this if they think they’ll have a change of heart about selling off their precious possessions - at an expense, of course. But that’s just business, xiansheng .”

Wei Ying thought that he wouldn’t want to sell of his precious A-Yings, A-Mians, Jia Jias and the rest of the unnamed population of virginal daughters and grand-daughters to dirty old men, not when they’re still living with him, sleeping with him every night and keeping his penis warm, snug and pleased to baby-making heights. He also doesn’t want to lose his precious memories and experiences, not when those momentous events defined his identity and path in life, especially his endearing, unforgettable, beloved feelings and recollections about the insufferable husband that he was sure nobody would want as secondhand anyway. There is only one original Wei Wu Xian in his omniverse, and one Lan Wang Ji that is bonded to his mind, body and soul, forever and beyond - and he wouldn’t trade anything, much less let others use what's exclusively his, for anything in the entire lifetimes of multiverses.

However, that still begs the question - how can Wei Ying sell enough to earn at least triple digits of sin to buy what he wants from the black market today?

A light bulb pops above his head, and instantly burns out from its dazzling brightness.

“Ah... Mister Clerk, do you take Dreams? I have alternate personas and universes, memories, events, treasures and material wealth from my nightmares at nights, and my daydreams during waking hours. They're of very high quality, and some are original, never seen nor thought before, and they can materialize into the world according to my wishes, like in the flesh and as real objects,” the third A.S.S. smile is a little forced, and Wei Ying's cheek muscles are starting to cramp up.

The clerk lights up with intense scrutiny and curiosity never seen before on his jaded, unsmiling face. His face perks up, and his fingers start to drum restlessly on the document listing the ten items sold so far.

“We don't get many Dreams around here, in a dark world filled with sins, misery, and hopelessness. Show me your wares,” the clerk leans in until his forehead almost touches the metal grill that separates him from noisy, persistent customers. The burly guard too, shows interest and wipes the pan of the weighing scale eagerly with a washcloth for its next victim.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 245

Wei Ying was glad that he brought his tools of trade from the study room. One would be led to believe that he'd sell his greatest inventions and ideas for the forces of evil and the corrupt, however fortunately or not, his incredible, godly and universe-bending creations are half-constructed, and the ideas are half-baked, because Wei Ying can be the laziest sloth of them all if he doesn't put his heart into his efforts. He had the nuts and bolts, the papers for writing spells and talismans, the hammers, nails, screwdrivers, spanners and wrenches, and all the needed equipment in his sleeves - for when he lies down at a lounging chair that has in-built massaging functions that charges one sin per sitting, and he dreams out some quick and witty, even humorous creations that aren't perfect but served their evil functions well enough - whether a talking, flying penis that rapes and inseminates people in the night, a mirror that opens up into other people's vaginas and rectums for one to take a visual tour through, including tactile and gustatory experiences if one pokes a finger and prods with a tongue through the shiny surface, or even a multi-purpose drawing board the size of a rice paper notebook where one can use an ink-brush to draw, then tear the page off but burn it into a flame, then from the ashes, whatever that's drawn will transform into a living servile creature to carry out its master's evil wishes. These small achievements do not cost much, however, Wei Ying's amazing, versatile dreams are infinite and splendid, and they keep tumbling out into his arms non-stop and straight into the weighing scale.

He eventually pockets enough to buy what he needs.

.

12:30 pm

“Lao gong , lao gong , please hit me with the feather duster? Xian Xian is wrong, and shouldn’t have made a naughty boo-boo... please forgive Xian Xian...” Wei Ying coquettishly whines and wiggles his ass, bent over the dining table where delicious smells waft from a bubbling pot of meat broth.

Contrary to the man’s expectations, rather than having to bite his lower lips and endure stinging whacks of bamboo against his bouncy milky buttocks as punishment for the juvenile tricks played upon the hapless husband, the feathered part of the terrorizing tool was rubbed vigorously over and over his underside; the feather tickle and scratch the underside of his bobbing penis, made his testicles tighten from the feathery, windy sensations, and licked like what a bunch of pre-cum slicked feathers do to lovingly lick his perineum, so much so that his lower groin becomes itchy, restless, very, very horny and wanting, and his man-pussy magically appears like hairy cunny lips of a fertile maiden just behind the balls; it gasps and wheezes, puffing up, engorged with blood, convulsing with excitement from kisses as light as feathers, demanding for more friction and tactile stimulation.

“Wei Ying,” a flushed, very aroused Lan Zhan growls into the wife’s ear, when he leans forward and holds the latter’s back tight to the chest, so that the wife could feel just how lustful the husband is, penis to butt-crack, and slipping lower, sliding between those tasty man-cunt lips, “I managed to catch the animals that escaped. A fox, a viper, a wild boar. Wild pigeons and crows, even wild rabbits and three doomed squirrels that ate the fruits in the fruit bowl. Now, they’re in the pot on the stove. I’ve had a taste to make sure the seasoning’s perfect. It’s very delicious.”

There’s a thrilling grunt, a tongue licking Wei Ying’s shell of the ear, nibbled on his nape and down the neck, and calloused hands grope his front after sliding beneath his chest and sandwiched against the dining table - his breasts are greedily molested and groped. Wei Ying knew he should've taken the front entrance rather than the kitchen's side doorway, but no matter and there is no point in crying over spilt milk - or in his case, over milk that will be spilled again and again and it's not even past midday yet. He was yanked off the floor and slammed quite painfully against the unfortunate table, rattling bones and bruising skin - but all protests died in his throat when his pants were ripped into shreds and he realized that the husband was in a similar state of undress; wild game meat broth sure does wonderful and crazy things to the husband, after all.

The husband's penis slips into the anus with little effort to penetrate that puckered sphincter; it is that hard, now exceeding seven-inches in length and monstrous in its veiny girth, throbbing hungrily with racing heartbeats for a wild taste of Wei Ying's flesh. A couple of strokes of in-and-outs, and Wei Ying couldn't resist letting out a squeal and flutter his squeeze-worthy rectal walls, before the penis withdraws fully, then, to Wei Ying's aghast and delirious joy, slips into the man's self-lubricating hairy pussy unhindered, where babies are always made with wild, filthy, lustful love between the two.

Something clicks inside Wei Ying's sex-hazed mind, as he too, begins to twerk his ass and pleasure the older man with seductive jerking moves.

“ Lao gong , there was a legendary nine-tailed vixen in the bag, and you actually slain it then... cooked it? What does the fox say?”

“... Mrrreow!”

.

Later, the husband found out that the wife had illegally bought a very special device called a Penis Multiplier with a set of extension cords included in the package. Such deviation from the normal course of evolution and biology is disallowed by the laws of nature, sinful in the eyes of the gods - not that the husband has anything to do with the wife's choice -, and cost two hundred of that sinful currency which Wei Ying managed to pay off by selling his Dreams. Whilst having crazy monkey sex on the dining table, Wei Ying wiggled his eyebrows and beamed with pride when he whipped out the newly purchased instrument of terror from his sleeves, deemed to be the worst, most vulgar and lewd for that year's annus horribilis , even more despicable than pedophilic incestuous rape (which is normal amongst mammals) and sickening pandemics (which is also the standard way of keeping populations in check).

The husband stares, mesmerized, as the elephant trunk-like spongy, swinging thing is worn around his junk, akin to a loose, used condom. Lo and behold, with a blink of an eye, another authentic and real-feel husbandly penis appears slightly below the original one, fully erect and matching in texture, colour, shape, curvature, and size as the man's first penis. Double penetrations take on a new meaning, when Lan Zhan happily fucks his cuntboy wife in the ass and in the hairy pussy. Another blink of an eye, and he sports many more penises sprouting from his pelvis - what a frightening sight indeed -, and with another blink, those surplus penises grow out of extension cords like tentacles with penis-glans at their tips, and Lan Zhan becomes the nefarious star of B-grade porn fantasy movies featuring the much-maligned Penis Tentacle Monster.

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

Midday

Time has no meaning on the floating island that the couple calls as their home sweet home, while the world is being rebooted - and it's taking an awfully long time, the wife complains. The husband explains that the diurnal cycle is more like an ellipse, rather than a circle. That means that daytime is stretched, because the husband wants as much sunlight and low humidity as possible to hang the laundry (another set of bedsheets, pillowcases and clothes are drying in the breeze for the nth time that day), to make naturally dehydrated ingredients which are healthier and tastier than packaged processed foods (more dried chillies, corn, grains, salted meat, fish and shrimp, and even candied fruits, green and yellow gourds and sun-dried tomatoes are arranged like a jigsaw puzzle of colourful canvases at the front courtyard), and to boost the growth of vegetables and trees in their farmland.

The couple reaps the benefits of an extended daytime, that is, the hours of midday lasts for many more, and calculated using mind-boggling manipulation of mathematics, astrophysics, and the bizarre science behind the orbit of the Sun around flat worlds still in gestation.

With so much time to spare, second lunches served and feasted (Wei Ying's real lunch, this time), baths taken together, and mutual ear-cleaning and masturbation done simultaneously (with the dexterity and finesse of divine origin), and plenty of crazy monkey sex achievements under the belt (using Penis Multipliers and other sexy tools at the couple's disposal), the wife has nothing else to do but to laze and roll around the waxed, cleaned stone floors of their cave-home because it was getting quite hot and sunny outside, he doesn't want to tan anymore, and it's nicer to stretch and pretend to be a starfish on the chilled smooth surface in the interior of their home than to face the dust, sand and ultraviolet rays outside.

The husband loves the wife very much, but certain limits are imposed, physically, mentally, emotionally and spiritually - also humanly; thus, when the wife starts to sing nursery rhymes using the husband's names, nicknames and all sorts of manners that the world addresses him, whether Lan Zhan, Lan Wang Ji, Lan er gege , Lan er gongzi , Hanguang Jun, Wang Ji xiong , and its countless iterations in seven different dialects from each clan, even one of Gusu's that the husband finds goosebump-inducingly cringeworthy of Lan er dada , that he murmurs 无聊 and goes off to find the straw broom to try and sweep the defiant young man back into proper etiquette and manners (with lots of angry chasing and mocking laughter, tapping the man's buttocks to make him stop chanting the rhymes using his names inappropriately, and trying to drag the man from under the sofa and bed when he rolled underneath the furniture). At his wits' end, Lan Zhan finally yields, and claps his hands to call for the wife's attention. Let's go for a daytrip, a couple's outing, somewhere far and away from the dreary house that's testing the limits of both men at midday - and Wei Ying "Yay!"s.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 246

In an alternate scenario still in the works, because Lan Zhan's subjects need more time to finetune the scripts, dress up the mob characters, put on the finishing touches to the set, record and sync the filming with a smattering of sound effects, background music and dubious dubbing, and so on, the couple met once again at the entrance of the Cloud Recesses one beautiful cloudless night with the full moon as their witness of a reunion match made in heaven.

Their first encounter at the gates to the Cloud Recesses remains awkward, with Wei Ying gawking at a passing-by Lan er gongzi with sighing, nearly fainting, and rosy cheeked girls in his wake - and that awfully ugly dead body covered by a white cloth following not too far behind. Lan Zhan couldn't possibly stop, lest he arouse the suspicions of his so-called fangirls, his future brother-in-law, and future elder sister-in-law. So, as usual, Wei Ying went off downhill to find the Yunmeng Jiang troops' missing invitation card in that inn where they were previously kicked out by the arrogant, pompous and super-wealthy Lanling Jin pricks, and had his first staredown with his arch-nemesis, his shijie's fiancée. When he returned with a couple of jars of Emperor Smiles in hand, he was taken aback by the sight of the er gongzi standing just behind the gates' force field despite the time being later than nine o' clock at night.

Lan Zhan didn't really want to draw swords with his then-future wife, nor perform dangerous acrobats leaping across roofs and slippery roof tiles across starless skies, in which the lack of lighting reduces visibility and increases the risk of landing on perilous places atop buildings, spraining ankles due to slamming into hard concrete surfaces, or tumbling into the bushes two storeys down - a common workplace hazard for cultivator swordsmen that have caused more mortality and morbidity than reported in the press. So, he merely holds up his Jade Token like dangling a kitty treat, and Wei Ying is asked to sit down and say the password.

“Whatever that’s yours is mine, whatever that’s mine is also mine.”

Sixteen-year old Lan Zhan actually smiles, barely, to acknowledge that this young sixteen-year old boy is indeed his then-future wife. So he grasps the Jade Token and gives it a spin, and since it also belongs to Wei Ying due to their otherworldly holy matrimonial bond, it responds and the force field is temporarily deactivated. Wei Ying gleefully rises to his feet and skips through the gates, but not before stealing a quick kiss on the then-future husband’s lips with a wordless ‘Thank You’ - because in a blissful wedded relationship, such words need not be said, after all. Then, alone in a rather deserted Cloud Recesses because it’s past curfew time, the two hold hands romantically and take a leisure stroll towards the dorms designated for disciples from visiting clans for the upcoming classes. Wei Ying remarks that Lan Zhan is very handsome indeed, even as a teenager, and he regrets the time when he didn’t realize this earlier, in a past lifetime. In response, Lan Zhan curtly comments that Wei Ying is always the one and only soulmate across time, worlds and lifetimes, and that his lao po has always been this beautiful. Wei Ying blushes, and nibbles the then-future husband’s ear, leaving them red as chilli peppers that the then-wife loves so much.

The first order of that evening isn’t so much as to stick to the script and rest for the night, or to spend those precious hours together alone, exploring gay sex for the first (not) time of their tender sixteen years of life. Wei Ying has seen the body of a man with black veins and white eyes being carried on a stretcher through the gates earlier with his clan - so he does what he should’ve done like any law-abiding citizen and steer clear of heroics and vigilantism.

Once Wei Ying is in an unoccupied room as shown by Lan Zhan, he casts a Fairy Messenger spell - a common phone call in modern times -, and waits while staring at the pulsating ball of amber light that costs him one talisman.

There is a crispy click! , and the line briefly lights up in blue-white to signal that a connection is made. A manly gruff voice speaks from the other side, “Hello?”

“Hello? Imperial police? I’d like to report a case of murder and a possible abuse of Dark magic, please,” Wei Ying says to the puffball of amber light, and he gestures to the then-future husband whether those Infinity Gauntlets have been returned to the Emperor of Chang’an and Grandmaster Gao; Lan Zhan nods - this was important for the plot, because there’d be no way those Imperial buffoons would be able to fight against the tide of fierce corpses and Wen Ruohan’s mastery of the Yin Metal without those incredibly powerful, limited edition power tools that can only be ordered at a jaw-dropping price from Magics ‘R’ Us megastores nationwide. Plus, use of Dark magic is generally prohibited and frowned upon across all major cultivation circles including the Imperial Cultivators, so investigators, prosecutors and lawyers will be more than happy to look into the case, particularly because the Qishan Wen’s meteoric rise in fame, influence and riches have been attracting lots of undesirable attention from friends, foes and the tax authorities housed within the Imperial Court.

The historical anonymous call made, Wei Ying bids good-night to his then-future husband because he should meet with his beloved shijie and adoptive brother, who are probably worried sick about his disappearance, and not cause any ruckus within the Jiang family. He carries both jars of wine back to the dorms, and thinks about whether he should share one of the jars with Jiang Cheng to get him dead drunk, and maybe get his shijie tipsy as well, before settling down on a shared bed, then taking his place on top of an undressed and drowsy Jiang Yan Li and between her smooth, slender legs, pillowed by her milky breasts and voluptuous, soft body, while leaving the drooling, unwary and knocked-out A-Cheng lying on the stone-cold floor.

Lan Zhan sighs and returns to the Jingshi. It's already way, way, past his bedtime too, and he worries that Huan gege may be looking for him. Fortunately, in a deliberate twist of fates, Lan Zhan had stayed out too late, and Huan gege had conducted the initial investigation and discussion with Master Lan Qi Ren on the dead body that appeared on their doorsteps - with growing rumours that more dead bodies may be found, bearing similar marks of blackened veins, cracked skin and white eyes, in the towns beneath the mountains of the Cloud Recesses. With him out of involvement from the investigation about the dead body, Lan Zhan was able to sleep well that night.

“Well, this is interesting,” Wei Ying mumbled sarcastically in dismay, and yawns, because it's just slightly before seven in the morning, and it's way too early for him to wake up to find breakfast unlike the rest of the teenagers and young men and women around him. According to official sources, that is, a large parchment pasted on the stone wall close to where the Lan family's sculptured rules are located, all classroom lessons, both ongoing and planned, are cancelled and postponed for three days, pending a serious investigation involving the clans present in the Cloud Recesses. All disciples are required to stay in their dorms unless they are instructed otherwise by seniors and their teachers. Wei Ying and his two siblings mull around the noticeboard along with the other disciples, each speculating what's going on, sharing gossip and informative tidbits with one another.

“Did you know? Last night, Sect Leaders and people of the elite circles within the Grand Cultivation Council received urgent messages that something had happened here, in the Cloud Recesses! My father told me in a Fairy Messenger call this morning! He said he couldn’t share the details, but he ordered me to obey the seniors, teachers and officials, and not to trouble anyone! Three days will pass very quickly with reading, indoor cultivation practice and meditation, he said.”

“Officials, you say? My uncle works in a military unit in Chang’an as an official, and he sent me a message too, saying that he’s headed here by later this evening on FeiEx flying swords. Something’s brewing and it’s top secret. But he assured me that it doesn’t concern us disciples, so it sounds like they’re coming here, have some kind of meeting, and then leave in three days’ time. He advised me to focus on my studies despite the lockdown situation, and not to fail the next exam.”

“Wow! First class FeiEx swords, they’re not kidding! It must be big! Has there been a scandal? A theft of priceless relics? Of important persons gone missing? Or is there something happening between the Council and the Imperial Court? My aunt works at the ticketing office of FeiEx flight services, and she told me that she’s seen a sudden rise in orders for flights to the Cloud Recesses scheduled for arrival this evening too, and then departing for the Carp Tower in Lanling, where the Council is headquartered, in the morning of the third day from today.”

Barely a few minutes after everyone gathered and had a good look at the latest announcements, a few seniors arrived and ushered the disciples to the dining halls to have their breakfast. Jiang Cheng is as excited as any fidgety kid in a novel situation, because the parchment stated that in case disciples are summoned to assist in investigations, clan representatives will be called to the main office - and Jiang Cheng is designated to represent the Yunmeng Jiang clan. In addition, Jiang Fengmian contacted Jiang Cheng at dawn with a short message that he will be at the Cloud Recesses later that day, with little information provided. A-Cheng becomes the next peacock in Wei Ying's books, because the teenage boy, nearly fourteen years-old and cocky as hell, started to parade around the dorm and barking orders, making sure that the Wei gongzi and Jiang gu niang toe the line and follow the rules set by their hosts. Wei Ying would love to give A-Cheng an earful, were it not for Yan Li's timely interference and distracting, "A-Xian, A-Xian, leave him be. Let's just be good children during these three days, and it'll pass soon," not realizing that Wei Ying has plans to bring in enough Emperor Smiles to share with his sibling using the tried-and-tested strategy, and bed his shijie at every opportunity being cooped up in the same, sex-stinked room - so, with a fake exasperated huff, he lets A-Cheng go and respectfully dismisses that prick's arrogant strides.

Breakfast is bland, though Wei Ying doesn't complain as much because he is used to the cooking lifetimes ago - however, he wishes that Lan Zhan was by his side, so that he can pick out the icky floppy boiled greens and flavourless tofu from his bowl and put them in the husband's, because Lan Zhan doesn't mind finishing up what the wife dislikes at meal times. Seniors Lan disciples monitor each dining table to make sure that rules are followed, including no talking while eating, not eating more than three bowls of rice in one sitting, and the ilk. The canteen-like setup is nostalgic, at least for Wei Ying, because he'd have to queue up politely with a tray to collect the dishes that are arranged in perfect rows and columns on a large countertop, supervised by Lan gu niang s to make sure that there are no overt displays of greed and gluttony - a cardinal sin in the Lan family's eyes. Fortunately there is a variety of dishes including a choice of congee, breads, sweet and savoury dumplings, rice and noodles with vegetables and slivers of meat, though mostly under seasoned and quite lacking the punch of spiciness that Wei Ying craves. If he needed more, he'd have to line up again quietly for seconds.

Shortly after seven-thirty, all disciples adjourn to their dorm rooms, and patrolling seniors make sure the doors remain closed. However, it isn't totally like living in a prison, since disciples can request to go out for a while, such as to do their laundry, to take a bath and use the public toilets, even to go to the Pavillion Library to borrow some books or musical instruments to pass the time, and take a number to wait for their turn to use the courtyards and gyms for cultivation and martial arts practise to maintain one's health and well-being - however they must be accompanied by seniors at all times, and they are placed under watchful eyes from guards at the watchtowers.

While the morning sun's shining brightly, the Yunmeng trio decides to exercise after their rather unsatisfactory meal - at least from Wei Ying's perspective, because he knows how to cook better food than what the Gusu Lans are offering in that canteen. Everyone dons their Gusu Lan white uniforms, which feels nice and cool to the skin, a mix of cotton and other durable, soft fibers that eases movements and lets the skin breathe easier when sweating. Jiang Yan Li watches from the sides under the shade of trees, and makes a few new friends with some *gu niang*s from other clans, and forms a sisterhood of some sort, because females bond with each other so much easier than men, after all. It felt good to practise a few martial arts kicks and punches to work out one's digestion and burn up some excess calories, and Wei Ying was once again cheerful and spirited in his mood while play-duelling with Jiang Cheng - until, of course, the arrival of the Lanling Jin group who also wanted to stretch their toes and, in all likelihood, show off their clan's signature moves like a bunch of peacocks on display. Were it not for Mian Mian's presence, and Yan Li's alarmed calls of 'No, A-Xian, don't!', Wei Ying would've started an inter-clan war and leave Jin Zixuan with a black eye. There were some posturing and trading of light barbs in between; Zixuan not really giving a shit about Wei Ying's incessant animosity because he only wanted to exercise with his clanspeople like everyone else, while Wei Ying kept shouting across the courtyard to dare that late-teenage man garbed in special gold layers under the golden sunlight to man up, then challenge him to a duel that fortunately never materialized, and Jiang Cheng looked absolutely helpless, irritated, unsure of what to do or whether he should interfere, and not wanting to do anything that would seem disgraceful in the eyes of others in the surrounding area. In the end, Yan Li dragged both of her brothers back, each hand holding one of her brothers' wrists, and she felt embarrassed at causing a scene witnessed by curious onlookers, bad boys wolf-whistling and cheering on for a fight, and gossipy girls that giggle as she rushed past them.

By mid-morning, the trio settles down after a good but loving scolding full of understanding and compromises, of 'Xian Xian won't do it again, unless that Jin peacock shows up his face once more!' and 'A-Xian, please, just ignore them'. Jiang Cheng decides to do something useful in the dorm, and tries to memorize some of the Lan family rules - which is part of the study curriculum and contributes to one's overall grades, and he wants to get ahead of his peers by studying during such lockdown 'holidays' - though he ends up singing nursery rhymes out of those thick textbooks, with very little being absorbed into memory and the rest, as the saying goes, goes out of the ass like passing gas. Wei Ying, who has regained his composure after getting 'be a good boy' smooches on the cheek, becomes the lovable A-Xian and entertains his shijie with an animated Paperman giving flying kisses to Yan Li before climbing all over her to leave more kisses, hugs and sweet rubs of crinkly paper against her cheeks - which leaves Jiang Cheng constantly distracted and rolling his eyes with disdain expressions of 'that's so booo---ring and a waste of time'. Yan Li indulges in Wei Ying's playful antics and lets the didi slip the yellow Paperman - unnoticed by A-Cheng - into her dress, sometimes sliding into her bra to touch the curves of her milky plump bosom and steal kisses from her nipples, in which the shijie thinks it's just her didi being a naive, naughty boy, and lets him get away with it - because the Papermen kept squealing, very, very faintly, ' didi ai ni ' with each sweet kiss to her ample titties.

A senior disciple from the Lan clan knocks on the door, and Jiang Cheng rushes up to greet him. When the senior informs that A-Cheng has been summoned to the main office to assist in investigations, he is more than thrilled and excited - as evidenced by the bounce in his steps, the swell of pride in his chest, and that his nose grew a few inches longer when he waved at the remaining two siblings with a grin, and stepped out of the room. Wei Ying sighs in boredom, because he knows he is, again, not the protagonist in this story, so he doesn't get into action-packed scenes with gratifying mystery, suspense and thriller shots. Thus, a couple of minutes after A-Cheng left, Wei Ying discreetly twirls his index finger, and his shijie slumps on the floor, unconscious. It doesn't take long for him to haul her to her feminine flower-scented bed after one night's sleep, because he is quite a lean, well-muscled, tall and handsome boy for his age. Another twirl, this time symbolically with the middle finger, and Yan Li's silky pink dress comes off and her panties float to the air to land on Wei Ying's sleazily grinning face. He inhales the pheromone-soaked material deeply and unbuckles his belt, while making a speed-dial reserved for loving soulmates.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 247

Lan Zhan, can you hear me? Sweet. Where are ya now? Huh... Jingshi? Booo---ring. Play some guqin music for me while we talk, I kinda like that relaxing background music while I'm fucking my sleepin' sister with her legs spread, and making the both of us cum.

Oh, no worries. Jiang Cheng's on his way to Master Lan Qi Ren's office. Do you know how long the interrogation will take? I'm hoping to sow my brotherly seed and plant some babies before he returns. Yeah, seems he's the one of the protagonists, so all eyes will be on him, and I don't want to be in the limelight when he's back, with my dick shooting sperm all over my sister's womb, and me lookin' like an incontinent fool in front of the cameras! Ha ha ha!

One hour? Okay, that sounds doable. Thanks, hubby, I owe ya one for the insider info... Aaahhnn... Sorry, keep talking. I just busted shijie's cherry again and it feels so damn good fucking her hot tight cunt when I've the libido of a sixteen year-old.

Eh? Did I say that many times? Really? You want one too? Okay... didi ai ni ! Er gege, didi ai ni ! How's that? Ha ha ha, I can imagine you're red as a tomato right now, darling!

Oh, mm-hmm, mm-hmm, yeah, I read that too. Our notes match. From what I heard, the Imperial forces are arriving this evening, and I'm guessing the star players of this storyline will make their way to the Carp Tower in the next couple of days to follow the clues... Oh fuck that feels good... 'em girls know how to squeeze a boy's dick even while sleepin'!... Shit, I'll bust a nut soon, gonna ejaculate prematurely as a hopelessly pining sixteen-year old, can you believe that... So, Lan Zhan, what should we do next? I'm stuck in the dorms till then.

Really? I'll also be invited to dinner with my adoptive dad and rest of the elite cultivators? Awesome!... oh fuck, uunh-uunh-uunh... mmmmh, nnnnh, hahhnn... Yeah, sorry, I'm picking up my pace and don't stop if I get quiet, you hear that? I'm always listening. Let's have a rendezvous behind the bamboo grove during dinner if they start talking politics. You know, the one next to the classroom. Yeah, the usual, I'll say that I need to go to the loo, then you'll follow up next, 'kay?

Oh sweet baby Guan Yin... gonna blow...

... ngggghh... nggaaah... fuck fuck fuck that feels so good...

... uuuuh... oooh... aahhnn... oh yeah, oh yeah, yeaaaah, squeeze mah dick, wring out tha' last drop, you cunt... unnnh... phewwww... hahhh...

Yeah, I'm... back to the land of the living. Feels so good cummin' endlessly. I'm still hard and unloading my sweet teenage balls into her. My head's in the clouds. Can't wait to let you fuck my ass, it's kinda lonely there, waiting to taste my first sixteen-year old man. Being a heterosexual man again just doesn't cut it anymore. Mm-hmm. I know, your dick is still the best. Yeah, love you too. Talk later. I'm drained, but I hafta keep goin' while it's just me and my sis in the room. Gonna milk her pussy for what she's worth, then claim the baby in her belly for myself, and kick that fiance's barren ass out of the picture. That's what he gets for kicking us out of the inn's room in the first place, yesterday in Caiyi!

.

Wei Ying makes sure he whisks the baby batter deep inside the flesh, warm oven for the bun to bake faster; his nearly six-inch penis does the work justifiably well, considering that size doesn't really matter when the female experiences intense pleasures, shuddering orgasms, moans in her sleep, her curvaceous fertile hips shake as excitedly as his dick dances within until he had to grip her waist to hold her down, and her womb naturally descends to dip into the pool of spilled semen repeatedly until everything's sucked in, to where it belongs - many, many times during that hour. Five minutes before the time's up, he puts back her clothes rather clumsily - it's a bit hard to hook the bra from the front, but he enjoys giving those sweet mature mounds one last suckle, a heartfelt grope with both eager but satisfied juice-slicked hands, and lay his head between the breasts one more time to enjoy those soft natural pillows that smell so fragrant - before covering them up.

Jiang Cheng returns eventually, baffled at the scene of the older of the Twin Heroes lying down with his head on his sister's lap and on her bed - it is unbecoming of the Yunmeng Jiang trio who represent the pride of the clan by studying in the Cloud Recesses as part of an exchange programme; there shouldn't be such pampering and childishness, at least not when strict discipline and noble virtues are the values expected while staying in the grounds of the renowned Gusu Lans.

“ Jie , don't tell me you've been giving him another ear-cleaning session. Look at that shameless man, snoring soundly on his shijie 's lap like a toddler, and he's drooling on your skirt too!” Jiang Cheng accuses with a pointing finger. It can't be helped, Wei Ying thought, while pretending and really, falling asleep, because sex feels very relaxing and makes his whole body soak into a tub of happy weightless pink cotton candy, especially his blissfully emptied loins when he knows that his lively babymaker sperms are on their way, swimming vigorously and with enthusiasm towards his sister's eggs where they truly belong.

"A-Cheng... hush, don't wake him up. He's a good boy and hasn't caused any trouble while you were away. I don't really know what happened, because I seem to have taken a nap too after that heavy breakfast. When my eyes opened, we were already like this on my bed. I--"

Jiang Yan Li made an uncomfortable face and squeezed her thighs, because she thought she felt something wet and sticky dribbling out between her legs - again since waking up that morning. Fearing that her period had arrived - but her menses just ended about a week ago - or perhaps some natural clear or milky vaginal discharge had left her panties stained - her mother did tell her about such phenomena in some especially active and healthy young girls -, she quickly excused herself to the ladies' toilet. Wei Ying was rudely pushed to one side of the bed as she hurried off, leaving A-Cheng even more confused in their dorm room.

Their dorm room isn't too small, but it isn't too spacious either. There are four single beds arranged with two against each wall, which is a standard design, and there is furniture typically found in most sects' dorms, including tables, chairs, cupboards and cabinets. Each bed has a set of curtains that can be drawn, in case privacy or added noise reduction is needed. The rooms are predominantly used for sleeping, studying and hanging out indoors, so other personal luxuries such as toilets, showers and kitchens aren't available and need to be shared communally; although there is a small bathroom for light showers, personal hygiene use, and a waste bucket for collecting body wastes which occupants need to dump into the farms and rinse with water on their own. However, there are empty buckets and small clay stoves stored in each room, so disciples can fetch water from the wells themselves or light some charcoal to heat up pots of tea and food, or cook simple meals. There are rules prohibiting reckless use of water and fire elements indoors, naturally or by magical means, for safety reasons, and all rooms are equipped with some kind of basic elemental disaster-sensing magic akin to modern smoke alarms.

Lunch is a breeze, as disciples are allowed to go out in staggered numbers, escorted by designated seniors, to the dining hall. The crowd control proved effective, true to the Gusu Lan's superior skills in managing chaos using orderliness and discipline, so everyone was able to pick up his or her meal, eat in relative silence and with some chatter allowed, then wash up and return without a fuss, without wasting time. Some disciples took the opportunity to get some fresh air, because the Cloud Recesses is situated in the mountains, and the misty, chilled air and the wide blue cloud-dotted skies rising above a landscape of steep cliffs, mountain forests and cascading waterfalls, are a welcome change for those who've lived like Young Masters and cannot tolerate the claustrophobia of being packed within four walls all day.

Wei Ying continued to scan around to tune into more hearsays and interesting stories from the grapevine. Some of the more prestigious and elite disciples have had more contact with their families and clans, and had more news to share. For Jiang Cheng and his sister, it was quite exciting to see the investigations develop, as clansmen exchanged information about their interrogations, and the little bits and pieces gleaned from conversations with tight-lipped Gusu Lan seniors, guards and councillors. Wei Ying didn't really need to listen in too much, since he was the one who anonymously tipped off the police and kickstarted the flurry of investigation activities in the first place.

In any case, the Yunmeng Jiang clan, headed by Jiang Cheng, does not have any useful clues to present to the investigation team currently headed by Master Lan Qi Ren and a group of other elders. They saw the face of the dead body, but that was it - the admittedly dull-witted Jiang Cheng didn't have any ideas of what might have caused such a grotesque, despicable death or any knowledge about the rumours surrounding more cases reported in Caiyi since he is a fairly newcomer to Gusu.

“There's been a murder case, and the mysterious dead body we saw yesterday is the cause of what's happening in the Cloud Recesses right now!” the Jiang gongzi exclaimed, barely restraining his voice while slurping on his noodles for lunch. Yan Li tried her best to calm down her brother by telling him to finish his food and that they should talk in their room later. “I must tell Father about this when he arrives this evening, he'll need this important information to be able converse with the other Sect Leaders, and avoid any disgrace and dishonour for our clan!” he added and even lightly slammed his hand to the table with a newfound sense of mission and urgency, and Wei Ying scoffed into his chicken rice. The upset princely gongzi was about to say something witty and similar to ‘What are you mocking at? You don't even know half of this exciting story and the important role that I play!’ but luckily, Yan Li was there to mediate between the two. Wei Ying rolled his eyes and swallowed down the rather dry, overcooked meat with little flavour and too much chilli paste he'd dunked onto the food out of desperation for his crying palate.

“Ah! My brother, Sect Leader Nie Mingjue, will also be attending tonight's dinner,” a squeaky voice cuts in shakily from the opposite table. Without waiting for permission, the short boy garbed in grey robes and next to him, a similar wide-eyed, meek and servile follower, hurry across the floor and bring their food trays with them. “Gongzi,” the senior of the two made a respectful bow with folded hands at the front, “Is it true? There's been a murder here in the Cloud Recesses? I'm so scared right now, I came here only yesterday because my brother forcefully signed me up to listen to the lectures of the Gusu Lan, and I don't want to end up in a coffin! Did you manage to get a good look at the victim's face? My neighbouring roommate said that it looked gruesome, with the skin drained of blood, poisoned veins sticking out all over the neck and chest, a snarl etched on the face as though the victim died of hatred and resentment, and fingernails as sharp as a tiger's, and it actually sat up and hopped around! it's the sign of the return of the jiangshi (僵尸)!" The boy and his follower sit face-to-face with Jiang Cheng at their rectangular table.

"Wow! Where did you hear that from? We saw a body being carried up by Lan disciples through the gates last evening, so it wouldn't have originated from here, but from one of the towns at the foot of the mountains. They... hopped? Please, tell us more, in the name of the Yunmeng Jiang Sect that I proudly represent!" Jiang Cheng becomes excited and pivots from his bowl of noodles to the new comrade-in-arms, because he instantly feels an affinity for Successors Of Sect Leaders - a bigot class of their own, Wei Ying realized with a frown. Wei Ying quietens down and makes sure to gradually withdraw his presence, because he doesn't want to be the third wheel and add into the animated, almost rowdy discussion that could attract stern-faced seniors anytime. He sandwiches himself between the overly zealous Jiang gongzi - who is energized to find peers of comparable prestige and stature - and his shijie , who, like most non-schooling females participating with clansmen that signed up to listen to the lectures, are merely there to help take care of the disciples of their clan, and sadly, made to look attractive, pretty young things to keep those unruly teenagers in check (because remember, this is the era of 2000 B.C. where many females do not get proper education, and are expected to shoulder household chores and caring duties for their male family members from a young age; although she may be allowed to join some elective classes held by exclusive female circles, however limited to domestic duties, such as cooking, sewing and embroidery, and housekeeping.)

The two new acquaintances, formally introduced as Nie Huaisang and his follower, Meng Yao, exchanged greetings over lunch with the Yunmeng Jiang trio, although conversations were mostly dominated by Jiang Cheng, who prioritizes saving face at all times though doesn't like to be embroiled in unnecessary drama and theatrics - but he does it anyway -, and Huaisang, who is rather reluctant and unambitious but is dragged into the mess anyway. Wei Ying caught Meng Yao giving curious stares at him and Yan Li, but the timid man simply looked away when Wei Ying tried to approach him with some light banter, in which Huaisang downplayed as 'No need to trouble this man who's like a second elder brother to me, but he's extremely obedient and does the chores as needed, and hasn't anything of value to share about this mystery anyway' - truly spoken in style like a elite, and Jiang Cheng toasted his cup of tea with his seal of approval towards the Nie boy to, in some way, celebrate the coming together of two prominent sects, on their second day at the Cloud Recesses.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 248

Afternoon rolls by, and Wei Ying is itching to hump the bedpost and ready to have crazy monkey sex with anything, be it a man, woman or a hole in the ground - even the teapot without its lid looks tempting - because he is bored out of his wits, and he can't just pull down his pants to masturbate in broad daylight, not when distinguished guests from the Nie clan lounge around in his - their - dorm unit like teenagers hanging out with their buddies on a lazy afternoon. There's no way to sneak out to go hunting for jungle fowls in the thick mist-blanketed forests, fish in the rivers flowing in those picturesque gorges in Gusu's finest mountain ranges, or catch fighting crickets that roam around the damp undergrowth and below rotting vegetation and logs in early Summer daytime temperatures. He watches, drowsy and unhappy, as shijie sews a tear on one of Jiang Cheng's pants; she also puts a covered tray of pastries she'd graciously asked from the kitchens on a table - snacks for the everyone -, and a pot of tea upon the clay stove, since she's the eldest of the host clan.

Nie Huaisang brought his caged birds - at least three of them - to entertain his new friends. Pets aren't generally allowed in the Cloud Recesses, however, for aristocratic sons and persons of special status, such as the younger brother of Sect Leader Nie, he was allowed to keep them in the dorms, though he was warned not to let those pets stray to, say, the classrooms and other restricted areas where the Lan family rules and discipline are upheld. Meng Yao was sent off to wait at the main office lobby in case there were further instructions for the Nie clan, and Huaisang remarked that the man in his late teens was especially delighted when Lan Xi Chen, the superstar and older of the highly acclaimed, eminent Twin Jades, invited him into one of the annex rooms have cooling herbal tea instead of standing outside in the hot sun.

The Nie boy proudly shows how he trains his birds to sing Nie folksongs and perform simple tricks, like picking out a card from a deck, and flying to one's open hand when called with whistles and irritating kissy sounds. Even Yan Li is amused, and she plays with the birds with a perplexed Wei Ying - because all he knew was to command evil crows to fly around and cause bloodshed and misery - including stealing people's underwear from the clothes line -, and not to pick toasted mixed nuts from one's palm or interact with human handlers using cute chirps and tweets. Jiang Cheng keeps harping on matters important for that night's dinner, such as getting their facts right about the mysterious murder case, and preparing their thoughts for when their respective Sect Leaders arrive at nightfall, though Huaisang isn't as keen as long as he can get through the night safely and without further unease since the great War General Nie Mingjue will make his appearance at the meeting halls soon.

“Nie gongzi , the birds look tired after being played by the three of you. Should you give them a rest and we do some study revision together? The teachers expect us to have read up at least the first couple of chapters in History and Philosophy by the time we attend our first classes in a couple of days' time.”

“Eh... ehh? Really? I didn't know (我不知道), I really didn't know! Oh no, I haven't been studying today as I've been busy with the investigations, and trying to make new friends -- like you, Jiang gongzi ! You're my first friend, here, in Gusu! You'll help me, won't you?”

(at that point, Wei Ying rolls his eyes skeptically, because fifteen-year old Nie Huaisang is, in high school lingo, a loser whose head is always in the clouds, aces in failing his exams, daydreaming of playing with birdies all day, and enjoying anything not related to school and violence. But he does have sweet and polite words to appease anyone who finds him vexing and clueless with his trademark I-don't-knows.)

Jiang Cheng's chest puffs up with pride again, like the second peacock that Wei Ying really didn't want to see with his own eyes. "Of course, Nie gongzi , we're buddies and I've started on Philosophy this morning by memorizing the first few pages of the Gusu Lan's disciplinary rules. In fact, I'm thinking of going to the Library to borrow a few more books, especially those that help beginners to map shortcuts in memorizing that awful lot of text." He takes a swig of heated tea from his cup and a hearty munch from a bean paste pastry that Yan Li had prepared.

"Oh! That's so smart of you, Jiang gongzi ! Reading up books on how to memorize more books, that's so clever of you!" Ah, that greasy smile and crinkle at the edges of the eyes, Huaisang sure knows how to butter up others especially when he starts fanning himself energetically with his traditional Nie paper fan, to indicate that he shares the same sentiments too.

"What about you, Wei Wu Xian?" the younger of the Twin Heroes ask, and Wei Ying resents the fact that Jiang Cheng continually refuses to use a more familial name to address him, "I haven't seen you flip any pages of the textbooks in the bags that the seniors placed on our beds last night. Are you so confident that you'll survive the first day in class, or shall I also borrow these 'how to study smarter' books for you too? You've seemed to be a bit out of things and indifferent to the upcoming lectures since the lockdown started. Don't forget, tie pays for our living expenses during our stay here, he'll be angry if he finds out you haven't been doing what you set out to do with us."

There, again. The words 'our', 'you', and 'us', it almost seems as though he's being treated as an outsider of the family - sometimes. Wei Ying sighs and rubs one of the birdie's neck and strokes its colourful green and blue-feathered body to the sound of contented chirps, perched to his wrist.

“Ahh... I feel lazy after bumpin’ into that Jin bastard this mornin’, ya know? Seein’ his face kinda spoiled my mood to study for th’ rest of the day, and mah’ legs are like lead, and I just wanna roll on this chilly wooden floor to ward off the heat outside, an’ all that,” he drawls out lots of excuses in his clan’s dialect, with a whiny tone in his voice, then languidly starfishes himself on the floor, causing the bird to hop away to Yan Li’s arms. That is the cue for her to save the conversation.

“Ah, A-Cheng, why don’t you and Nie gongzi take these birds back to the Nie clan’s dorms, and go to the Library together? A-Jie thinks one hour of playing with these feathered friends is more than enough, so thank you Nie gongzi,” she says and Nie Huaisang bows almost with a blush on his cheeks at her politeness and kindness, “Like you suggested, A-Cheng, please borrow a couple more books for A-Xian since there’s still time to do your study revision.”

Jiang Cheng snorts, and Huaisang quickly collects and puts his birds into their cages, and they leave the dorm room. Huaisang asks, “What’s with you guys and the Jin clan? I saw some commotion this morning at the courtyard when I was about to take a walk in the sun too--” in which Jiang Cheng puts a finger to his lips and hisses out a “Shhh!” because he would only talk about that once they’re out of earshot from the remaining two people in the dorm room; Jiang would be fine to share his family’s less favourable tales with his new friend, also future successor of a famous and celebrated sect, and an unrivalled peer to join him as brothers-in-arms, at least in the Jiang gongzi’s mind that is sensitive to matters related to rank and political relations.

(As for Wei Ying, well, he already memorized the entire curriculum lifetimes ago, so there’s no need to re-read the books and do any group studies - but he’ll play along, if he feels like he’s up for some nostalgic challenge.)

Wei Ying acts like a spoiled brat and a bit of a mouldy couch potato under lockdown conditions, which Yan Li finds endearing, which Jiang Cheng finds irritating but it does help his smugness since he thinks he's 'smarter' than his older brother, and in which Huaisang finds rather comforting because perhaps there'll be someone else scoring zeroes in examinations that he can buddy-up to. However, such trivial stereotyping didn't really matter for Wei Ying, because once the two are out of the way, at about a little after two o' clock in the afternoon, he twirls his fingers and casts Silence spells on the doors and windows; Wei Ying's advanced, modified version of the classic spell affects non-living objects too, and renders all soundwaves silent the moment they try to radiate out of the dorm room.

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

With passing guards not hearing any strange noises when they patrol the dormitory compounds, and with everyone else hunkering down indoors from the sunny afternoon sunlight and find something interesting to pass the idle time, Wei Ying once again enjoys his shijie 's softness and spears excitedly into her flowerbud many times while making a secret phone call via soulmate bonds to his hubby. He decides to start off with doggie-style lovemaking, because it feels so nice with a different angle of attack, and he gets a broad view of her prone position, that smooth flawless back and lovely curvy hips, plus, he loves to lightly smack on her buttocks just to feel the bounciness. When he leans down tight against her until he practically grinds deeply skin-to-skin, he can inhale the fragrance of her hair, reach down and around her enticingly soft body to grasp and grope the eighteen-year old's womanly milkjugs and play with those lovely nipples by pinching, pulling, rubbing and fiddling the nubs, while listening to inappropriate grunts and moans that sleeping maidens should not make.

His imagination runs rampant, that his penis kisses the entrance to her juicy womb with each, defiling, deflowering and hymen-breaking thwup , with each hip-shaking thrust that sweetly sheathes his penis until the base and could shove no further, until his balls slap wetly against her pussy, the veined flesh pulsing lovingly with warning shots, and then, taking its sweet time to convulse fifteen times each by shooting jets of thick, viscous, volatile sperm boiling up from his tightened testicles, painting her womb with passionate spurts and with wild abandon because no one is watching and no one can stop him - therefore, he keeps fucking that lovely fertile pussy, and when he tires a bit, he grinds in circles or simply rests upon her flushed body, feeling her squeezable ass pillowing his wheezing belly as he moans, Oh it feels so good, it feels good, get pregnant, you, oh fuck I'm can't stop cumming, oh yeah, unh, unh, unh, yeahhhh - and letting those feels-so-good penile contractions run their entire course from electrocuted brain to arching spine to spasming loins to curling toes, then staying inside her as much as he wants, an inserted key that doesn't want to come out of its lock. He believes that her womb still contains semen from that morning's rape, so, if he pumps his penis and lets his manhood enjoy the sweet, tight and hot taste of a freshly bedded maiden, then spills more of his seed into her again and again, then certainly, if she hadn't conceived during yesterday's drunken tryst, then by today, surely, he'll have fathered at least a child inside her during her most fertile window of her cycle - if not fat, healthy twins or triplets already baking in the oven.

Later, after a couple of invigorating rounds and a few spoonfuls of sperm lighter in the loins, Wei Ying flips his shijie carefully, and pushes her legs up to uncover the arousing view of a maiden with her hairy bush fully spread wide - he'd even run his fingers through her pubes and played with the exposed pea-sized clit from under the hood. He spends the rest of his available time with her with his favourite sex position - missionary - because he just likes to pound into her sweet vagina rhythmically, top-down, thwup, thwup, following that ageless, timeless lovemaking beat, and take her innocence again and again without her consent, then murmuring didi ai ni in as many times as he ejaculates in the throes of ecstasy, with lots of squishy and squelchy sounds each time their hips entwine and slam into each other to the hilt. He floods her womb abundantly with torrents of brotherly love, soiling the bedsheets with roars of pleasure as he bends and bows his back while bucking his hips excitedly during climaxes, never mind that he probably looks silly like a crazed man should be, rutting a fair maiden and robbing her firsts whilst she's unconscious.

Excess thick milky semen and female juices squirt out with each energetic thrust because Wei Ying had cummed too many times and plugged the tunnel of love. Jiang Yan Li's vagina hasn't quite learned to accept and drink every single last drop given by the future father of her children, so her vaginal walls continue to flutter and squeeze in discomfort and forced pleasure, and she experiences lucid dreaming and orgasms in her sleep because Wei Ying also knows how to pleasure the woman by rubbing her clit with his calloused fingers. The teenage boy enjoys, with satisfied howls and roars of how a woman should please a man's penis with electrifying jolts of rolling massages along a pistoning, angry-red turgid and throbbing length. He'd mount her a few more times that way, relishing in the way his shijie's face scrunched in discomfort at having her pussy plowed and ploughed like a fertile garden, and seeds sowed carelessly that Wei Ying's wide girth caused her to cry out in pain-pleasure from the stretch and fullness she experienced in her sleep, that she accidentally peed a bit when her thighs tremble uncontrollably, her clit rubbed raw, and she squeezes her rapist's incestuous penis wonderfully with her undulating body, to the delight of the teenage boy. His hands never left her hips or her breasts as they squeeze harder whenever he quickens his hip-pumps with excitement, his lips violating hers to taste the floral fragrance of a woman's saliva through deep french kisses, before leaving trails of nibbles and bitemarks all over her jawline, the smooth neck, down, down the vulnerable naked shoulders, attacking particularly joyfully at her breasts again because he wants the swell them up like lactating titties to be able to feed their babe, and steal some of the baby's milk, once she's pregnant - and she probably is.

Wei Ying slips a small cushion beneath her hips and leaves her lying on the back upon the sweat and juice-stained bed. That would ensure that the overflowing pool of his babymakers bottled up inside her vagina will continue to drain into the deepest recesses, past the breached cervix and straight into her cum-stained womb, so that those millions of wiggly, lively sperm cells only need to swim a short distance to locate, surround, then lovingly attack her juicy, al dente eggs until every viable one is thoroughly penetrated and inseminated. To give baby Wei Yings a better chance, he plays with her pussy one last time, using his middle finger to finger-fuck the soggy, cum-soaked cunt until she orgasms while dreaming of something very lewd, that her vagina convulses and sucks in more ejaculated semen towards the cervix that has dilated quite a bit out of the vigorous lovemaking and excited feelings welling up from inside her, and her womb drinks up just as how has been trained, until the last drop of Wei Wu Xian's seed slurps into her inner cradle for that man's babies.

(Five minutes more, he tells himself as he yawns, because sex feels very relaxing and he is boneless, limbs moving like jello weighed down by lead. Watching her cunny convulse and throb in climax gave him goosebumps and that insatiable itch that needed to be scratched deep inside his emptied loins and tired, aching pelvis. So, he lies atop her and settles between her legs again, and allows himself to nap while tucked nicely inside her, because it feels very, very good to have his sleeping dick kneaded and loved by the beloved shijie as she too, spasms and ooh yes, clenches, from her aftershocks and continuations of very lewd dreams. Five more minutes, inside of her, fully relaxed and in heaven while still being pleased by fragrant female flesh. Five more minutes of being loved by his adopted sister, indeed.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 249

Interlude:

"Lan Zhan! Lan Zhan! What is this? I found this in your room some time ago, but I'd forgotten all about it until I took my clothes to the laundry."

"..."

"Eh? Is it a song? Did you write a song? Wow, the lyrics are quite meaningful... eh? It mentions your home, and my flute... and... hey, some of these words are familiar, like snippets of our past conversations-- HEY! Not so rough! You'll tear the paper to pieces with that hand-grab!"

"... Do not read."

"Huh? Why are--"

"Do not."

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

闻笛声独惆怅
云深夜未央
是与非都过往
醒来了怎能当梦一场
红尘中毁誉得失如何去量
萧萧血热刀锋凉

山高水远
又闻琴响
陈情未绝
卧荻花月如霜

煮一壶生死悲欢祭少年郎
明月依旧何来怅惘
不如潇潇洒洒 历遍风和浪
天涯一曲共悠扬

穿万水过千山
路尽人茫茫
是与非都过往
醒来了就当它梦一场
红尘中毁誉得失如何去量
萧萧血热刀锋凉

山高水远
又闻琴响
陈情未绝
笑世事多无常

煮一壶生死悲欢祭少年郎
明月依旧何来怅惘
不如坦坦荡荡 历遍风和浪
天涯一曲共悠扬

天涯一曲共悠扬

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 250

Wei Ying politely asks a senior to let him through, and shows the older boy a couple of textbooks he's brought with him, safely stowed in the robes. "I'd like to visit the Nie clan's dorms, Sir, to study in a group for our first day in class," he said with pretty fluttering innocent eyes, books full view, and the senior allowed him to pass. Wei Ying knows that Huaisang and Jiang Cheng probably never made it to the Library - because if they did, they'd have returned in an hour or two, but they didn't and that left Wei Ying alone with Jiang Yan Li to make enough babies for the day. So, he makes a beeline to their planned first stop, which also became their last destination for a while, and finds the two crouching in Huaisang's room bereft of any other disruptive presence such as a servant or a follower by the name of Meng Yao. Jiang Cheng was pale as a ghost and livid as a man caught with his pants down, literally, and Huaisang turned tomato red while trying to put on his underwear, when Wei Ying forced open the door without giving a knock first.

"A-ha, found you!" Wei Ying chortled as he strutted through and closed the door behind him. The two were, unsurprisingly, reading dirty pornographic comics on the floor beside the Nie boy's bed, and engaging in circle-jerking after all! Wei Ying acted like a mature young adult for his age, and grabbed the illustrated tome, then flipped a few pages before snorting in glee at the boys' shame and embarrassment, and dropping it back to Huaisang's grasp. Lifetimes ago, he would've also crouched together like juvenile adolescents that found secret treasures in each other's rooms, then poured over those vulgar drawings with eyes as wide as saucers, and beat his sausage meat and breathing hard and fast like horny fourteen to sixteen-year olds - but this time, he's already eaten his fill with a real woman in the flesh in multiple sex positions, forced himself inside the shijie without her consent, and orgasmed inside that lovely penis-warming cocksleeve pussy many times that his lustful flames had been happily sated. Therefore, drawings are nothing compared to real life's sexperience - he could confidently say that, though he keeps that achievement and knowledge to himself, for obvious reasons and especially with Jiang Cheng giving him a really evil eye with one hand on his tiny stiff dick, and the other trying to pull up his pants to cover his ivory-white ass.

“Wei Wu Xian! How dare you!”

“W-- W-- Wei gongzi ! How did you... ah, oh no! I can't-- I'm gonna... I'll...! Aaaaaah!”

“Nie gongzi , wait wait wait wait wait, let go of the book, you're gonna dirty it...! Ahh! Why did you shoot at my face! My hair! No, No, NOOOO! Hnggk-- my nose-- can't breathe---!”

Wei Ying rolls around like a chunjuan (spring rolls) all over the Nie gongzi 's dorm room, at the sight of Nie Huaisang cumming accidentally from the fright of being discovered, soiling his erotica collection - there's more than a book lying nearby, apparently, along with littered peanut shells everywhere on the floor - resulting in poor Jiang Cheng covered with icky streaks of explosively, gracefully, flying cum flavoured with peanuts, assuming they jacked off with the same hands that cracked those peanut shells too. Busting a nut has never been funnier, in Wei Ying's mirthful eyes.

(Wei Ying evaluated Nie Huaisang's performance, and thought, “Not Bad,” for a short guy said to have no courage and therefore no balls, but he did have an impressive six-inch dick after all - probably a saving grace from having Nie genes in his blood, if his older brother is anything to go by with respect to penis measurements. If Huaisang were to experience another growth spurt with good food, adequate body-building exercises and by adopting a healthy lifestyle, it wouldn't be far-fetched to say that the little brother may be a rival to his older sibling someday.)

A few minutes later, Wei Ying is hard at work in weaving Water Spells to draw water from a well behind the Nie dormitories, through an open window and straight into a couple of empty buckets taken from Huaisang's cupboards. His room's design and furnishing are similar to the Jiang's, and probably everyone else's, although he gets the privilege of sleeping with Meng Yao in a room for four, thus he gets three beds for himself, actually.

As the two boys, one aged fourteen and the other fifteen, desperately scrubbed their faces and bodies with washcloths and tried their best to salvage Nie gongzi's dirty comic books by dabbing off drying, crusting semen with the woolen material, Huaisang remarked that Wei gongzi is talented in cultivation magic. The fact that they have now seen each other's dicks and jerked off together - never mind that two boys aren't too interested to see the oldest's, because how different can one penis be from another, in a heterosexual male's eyes anyway? -, they're as close as any bromantic buddies can be, following an old adage cited from unverified sources that Real Men who cum together, stay together. So, after calming down and putting away the dirty books, the two boys worked on cleaning themselves up with Wei Ying's help.

“Wei gongzi, your Water Spell appears to be a Level Three, is that correct? I've seen my older brother wield the same in the training grounds, although at a much bigger scale. You can draw water, maneuver it across space and mould its shape to mimic a running tap's, and you even mask it with Invisibility elements so that the seniors outside won't be able to spot the water spout. That's impressive for a young, accomplished gongzi at your age!”

“Hmph! Told you, my bro’ is cool in using swords and magic for fights. That’s why he’s with me, and together, we’re the unstoppable Twin Heroes of Yunmeng!” (cue “waaaah!” from sparkly-eyed impressionable Nie Huaisang, and his paper fan shifts gear to flutter even more energetically with excitement.)

“What about your sister, Jiang Wan Yin? You told me about your family’s background, and the issues surrounding her and the Lanling Jin sect. I don’t really know Jin Zixuan or his kind other than a few not-so-favourable descriptions our elders say about them, but they’re filthy rich and no one dares to challenge them in the open. Moreover, Qinghe borders with Lanling, so to my clan, they’re pretty much the kind of neighbours who build higher castles and bigger gardens, then look down upon you, and you really don’t want to antagonize them lest they call the cops on you and have deep pockets to hire lawyers to sue your ass to jail!” (more nervous and deprecating laughter, more disparaging insults thrown around, because it seems every clan has a bone to pick with those Jins.)

“Yeah, it’s like, isn’t it? I wish my sister had a say in these things, but she was betrothed even before I was born, and we can’t change our parents’ wishes. It’s for the good of the clans, if everything goes smoothly... except that it doesn’t. It almost seems like the Jins are reaping the benefits of stealing other clans’ women just because everyone’s cowed by their demands and show of power! Speaking of which... hey, you, how’s A-Jie? Did you leave her alone in our room? You better not cause her anymore trouble after this morning’s embarrassing show!”

Wei Ying had been cracking leftover peanuts on the floor and munching on them, while crouching like the other two beside Nie gongzi’s bed like rowdy, rude gangsters, absorbed in their fascinating and agreeable conversation. “Eh? I... err...” he stammered and quickly flipped through his book of lame excuses, “Oh! I gave her an ear-cleaning when there was nothing else to do, and you didn’t return with the books. She said there’s some itch goin’ on in there, so I scratch ‘em real good. I did a good job there, she’s totally relaxed now, and she’s fast asleep on the bed.” (cue another “waaaah!” from the Nie gongzi , and Wei Ying grins smugly for reasons not the same as what the two other boys believed.)

“Ohhh... ear-cleaning! If someone gave me one, I’d also fall asleep too. My mother used to do that, until I started schooling. D’ya think my older brother would... oh, no no no, he’d skewer my brains through the ears with his saber first, that’s for sure-- Ahh! The books! We should run to the Library and grab those ‘how to study smarter’ books before it closes at four thirty! Jiang gongzi , I didn’t mean to waste your time by showing you around my room and... err... my collections. He he heh, how fast time flies...!” (that adorable sheepish grin, those roving eyes, the slight downward bow in his head, how could one want to smack that boy for sharing dirty stuff with an esteemed son of another clan’s leader?)

Five minutes too late, actually, Wei Ying interrupts the Nie gongzi . He’d taken a look at his holo-phone before leaving his room with the blissfully asleep and sexually sated Jiang Yan Li on the bed, and his body felt too good in the loins to jog to the Nie’s dorms, so he opted for a brisk walk instead. Calculating point A to point B meant he was five minutes too late, and the accumulation of one disaster after another, including catching the boys off-guard in their state of ejaculations, then cleaning them up with buckets of water, ya da da da-- the Library was closed by then.

Thus, by late afternoon, Jiang Cheng’s ahead of the group study as far as he’s concerned, Nie Huaisang hasn’t opened his books yet and is doomed to score zeroes for the next examinations and quizzes, and Wei Ying doesn’t give a damn. The trio go out anyway because they dislike staying in a sexstinked room, and Jiang Cheng excused himself to a corner to rub one out, in all fairness because he was hard too after reading those dirty comics, Wei Ying scratched his head and shrugged “Well, that’s that”; Wei Ying asks the seniors in the vicinity if there’s anything they can do outdoors because the weather is lovely, the sinking sun wasn’t too hot anymore, and ‘You know, we’ll all be attending tonight’s dinner with the elites and elders, it’ll be boring as hell, so can we do something to keep our spirits and energy up before that?’ with an A.S.S. million dollar grin that convinces the seniors to help them out.

.

The boys got to work out for another hour, whether playing a game of handball in the courtyard, practising their martial arts moves, hanging out with boys from the other clans, sweating it out by carrying buckets of water from the wells to the farms, or just strolling around those farms to enjoy some much-needed fresh air - all done under the watchful eyes of the guards and seniors. The initial apprehension heavy in the air had more or less dissipated by the time the sun started to set, because the youngsters had gotten used to the whole strange, foreboding situation, and even felt a little thrilled that something was going on besides the expected boring lectures at the classrooms - that something could be an experience of a lifetime for some of the disciples from faraway lands, and many made new friends with diverse backgrounds, bound by a common theme that they had to endure such prison-like life at such a young, innocent age.

Then, another string of controversies and clan violence struck. Without warning, Jin Zixuan tumbled to the courtyard, battered, bruised and his majestic gold-layered robes smudged with sand and mud. On the other end, the crowd gasped and started throwing shouts and wolf-whistles at the appearance of his assailant, who was none other than Meng Yao, and who looked absolutely terrified standing in a corner beneath a staircase with many surprised onlookers staring at the latest confrontation.

“H-- He fell off the stairs! I didn’t...!” Meng Yao cried in fear, and gripped the panels of the stairs. His face was stained with grime and something slimy as well, mixed with sweat and probably tears of terror.

Zixuan rose to his feet, cheeks flushed with fury against his fair-skinned complexion, and he staggered towards the man who was nearly the same age as he, and he drew the legendary and magnificent gilded Suihua from its scabbard, with a look of rage in his eyes, and a trickle of blood from an open cut on the lips. There seemed to be unbridled anger, and determination to battle it out in a duelling skirmish with the servant of Nie.

“No! Jin gongzi , please don’t! It’s a misunderstanding!” Jiang Yan Li appeared from behind Meng Yao and reached out, as though she wanted to stand in-between the two and use her bare hands to stop the face-off. Alas, she was pulled back by some Nie female disciples due to the concern for her safety - she had made some friends with the Nie’s earlier that day - and male disciples rushed in to take Meng Yao’s side for unclear and whatever reasons - because everyone has a bone to pick with the Jins, after all. In response, suddenly, Jin Zixuan’s presence was bolstered by a formation of equally tough-looking Jin disciples, each wearing proudly his or her gold-layered robes, including Mian Mian with her fists raised and her legs spread in a battle-ready stance. Cheers erupted amongst the spectators of different clans and backgrounds, insults and curse words are thrown from all directions and particularly towards the Jins; the bets are on, and guards and senior Lan disciples are called in to break up the sudden commotion, but there are just too many young, excited, curious and thrilled disciples blocking their way, thus delaying their arrival to the spot where a showdown was inevitable.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 251

It was a free-for-all brawl sowed by chaos and confusion with both sides beating each other up wildly and getting beaten up by friendly fires and back stabbings. To make matters worse, several groups - more like, gangs - drew weapons - a prohibited act under the rules of the Gusu Lan at their sacred grounds -, and so injuries were unavoidable. Some clans took the opportunity to behave like gangsters, and clobbered members of other sects freely either for fun after a day of being cooped up, or for revenge; old wounds from past conflicts were reopened, grudges were laid bare, tit-for-tats were aplenty. Things escalated quickly and the fights that broke out all over the courtyard became a whole pile-up of ugly, nasty mess.

Nie Huaisang ran to seek refuge with Team Nie and his clansmen, who have much more superior saber-fighting skills than their paper fan-holding figurehead leader, and people took that to mean that the Qinghe Nie were serious in protecting their precious Meng Yao - because how dare the Jin stoop beneath human decency and take it out on lowly servants of other clans - and took up arms against the bullying Lanling Jin. War cries were issued left, right and centre; not wanting to lose out and lose face while other clan representatives led their teenage warriors to thrash each other, Jiang Cheng was peer-pressured to rally his own sect to join the fray - so he raised a fist and shouted his corny line of “This... is... YUNMENG JIANGGGG!... To battle and to victory!” (pun intended to mimic This Is Sparta) without indicating who was the enemy, and Wei Ying watched, with morbid bloodthirsty glee and a sinking horrified feeling in the gut, at how Jiang boys and girls simply ran screaming like headless chickens with pummeling fists, slashing swords and even a fireball and lightning bolt or two thrown recklessly somewhere in-between at some nondescript direction.

Wei Ying laughed at the insanity of youthfulness, and dived into the heap of tangled limbs and blades for his share of crazy summer fun - an hour before six in the evening, when everyone's sect leaders and big bad daddies finally arrived at sunset to sort out their kids' disorderly manners.

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

There are different accounts of truth, none of which could be substantiated with enough justifications, and some, are mired with conflicting evidence.

Meng Yao's struggles against the mighty princely Jin Zixuan becomes the stuff of legends. It is said that a small accident, say, of him bumping into the Jin peacock whilst carrying an ordinary basket of clothes - because Meng Yao is a poor lowly servant hurrying to do his master's laundry -, that led sent the peacock tumbling down the staircase, and that peacock was furious, unforgiving and spat on poor Meng Yao's face in disgust (nobody saw any spitting, but frivolous details make the story more exciting, anyway) - and the altercation started because the Qinghe Nie's are a proud and noble clan who do not tolerate having any of their men, even servants, spat on by arrogant, haughty pompous fools.

Another account tells of Meng Yao stopping by at the Yunmeng Jiang's dorms while looking for his master, because the latter had been spending excessive time hanging out with the Jiangs rather than studying, and brought a change of clothes to prepare his master for the dinner with the elders that evening. However, upon opening the door, there was only Jiang Yan Li and no one else; she was sleeping fitfully and shockingly, sprawled naked on her bed. Meng Yao is a true-blooded man just like anyone, and how can anyone resist the sight of a naked beautiful maiden ripe for the taking, particularly when Jiang Yan Li's beauty is renowned even among her unsuccessful suitors, and often described as seductive, sensuous and alluring. She must have woken up with a scream, because she woke up to a nightmare of a man's face slurping greedily between her spread legs until his face was coated in a sheen of slimy, sticky substance as observed by witnesses later - and in one particularly downright filthy version of the story, that Meng Yao took advantage of her nudity and helplessness and raped her right between her spread alabaster thighs; no matter what happened, the outcome was that her pained, and terrified screams attracted valiant Jin Zixuan to the scene, who also happened to be passing by, intent on inviting her like a gentleman to the dinner that would take place later. The two men fought over Jiang Yan Li's lost dignity and innocence, it seemed, and that led to the brawl later seen in the courtyard.

Yet another spin puts Meng Yao in a better light, in that, he did walk into a shameful scene of finding a naked gu niang waiting for a man - implying that the gu niang too, was shameless for prancing around in the nude when she was alone in her room -, and wanted to take his master's dinner party robes to cover her body, and protect her dignity. However, Jin Zixuan entered the room at an inopportune moment, and thought that the short man was about to rape his fiancée, so without thinking, he started trading punches, bitemarks, raking fingersnails and upper cuts with the other. Meng Yao, being the weaker one with little knowledge about self-defense, slipped and fell on the bed with a shrieking gu niang cowering at the sight of two men looming and fighting above her; there were already some sticky, milky fluids that soiled the bedsheet and Meng Yao's face unfortunately fell flat on one such puddle and he gagged at the smell and texture - implying that Jiang Yan Li had her modesty outraged by someone else prior to this, or better yet, engaged in sluttish behaviour that she invited other men to her bed when her brothers weren't around -, that Meng Yao was an unlucky visitor, and Jin Zixuan, a rude, hot-headed ruffian unfit to be a prince of his clan.

There are many more variations with subtle and overt differences in-between, with name-shaming and name-calling peppering all over, as reported by those involved directly in the squabble, and those who watched from the sides and passed on tasty gossips seasoned with more salacious and frivolous details, to the next person within an earshot. True to the spirit of conscientiousness of the Gusu Lans, each and every story was painstakingly documented, and people on the scene were duly apprehended then interviewed, and the rigours of separating fact from fiction and feelings were conducted - so that by six, when the sect leaders arrive, all disciples invitees were sent back to their padlocked rooms or, for those with injuries, to the medical halls, under strict martial law-like rules, with dinners provided as in-room service trays. Thus, those arriving sect leaders had another problem piled upon their ruined dinner conference plates with stacks of documentation meticulously prepared by the Lan seniors served as side dishes, much to everyone's chagrin and disrupted appetites - because really, what face-saving, righteous and esteemed exemplary noblemen would like to meet over dinner to contemplate about their shameless, unthinking, hot-blooded youths found guilty of letting their hormones run wild in someone else's home, which becomes the bane of every leader, father, brother and elder of their clan.

Wei Ying fought damn well, slugged it out and avoided every punch and kick thrown at his direction, because he's a grandmaster at hand-to-hand combat by then - still, he suffered a bruised lip after someone threw a fist from the side while he was bulldozed by three brutish Jin boys, and far away, Lan Zhan deliberately slipped on a banana peel and sprained his ankle in the hallway - so that the two could meet, hands holding each other, in a private ward reserved for two, upon the uncharacteristically demanding request by the Lan er gongzi . The harried Lan nurses didn't want to deal with anymore fussy princes - Lan or otherwise - because the medical hall's sickbeds were overflowing with moaning and groaning patients - so they just let him be; despite the fact that the er gongzi was known to have been a good sixteen-year old boy, staying in the Jingshi nearly the whole day to study the scholarly arts like a reclusive, ascetic monk.

Nearly half of the disciples from other visiting clans purported to be on site to listen to the Gusu Lan lectures had been hospitalized in the medical halls or received treatment in one way or another, with some individuals suffering more grievous wounds than their peers; however, fortunately, there was no casualty and the Lan seniors were lauded for their timely intervention of throwing hunting nets and using wide-ranged musical instrument attacks at the rowdy crowd to stun as many and bring everyone to the ground; those who were still trying to break free and acted truly unbecoming of virtuous cultivators, were brought to book and given stern warnings that could warrant expulsions from the Cloud Recesses.

“Jiang Cheng’s suffered a concussion, I heard, so he should be snoring in a bed somewhere in the medical halls with his egghead wrapped up like a silkworm cocoon,” Wei Ying remarks casually and opens his mouth wide; it’s nice to be back in the husband’s arms and being spoon fed with fatty pork braised with black sauce and grilled fish with sweet-sour dips, “Shijie’s undergoing additional examinations by the female nurses. She must be traumatized to wake up with another man in her bed, and she must be crying right now when those nurses tell her that her hymen’s broken and that there are fresh signs of stretching, bruising and streaks of a man’s seed inside her private areas. I’m interested to know if Meng Yao just ate her pussy or if he really took his pleasure from her and rutted deeply inside. Do you think there’d be any medical advancements or magical spells to identify the culprit that left his DNA inside her?”

A piece of chicken nugget coated with plum sauce pops in, “On the other hand, I overheard one Nie clansman saying that Meng Yao’s had his ribs broken and a lung punctured by Suihua, while that bastard Jin Zixuan got what he deserved - a kick in the balls and two punches in the eye that left him with a panda bear’s face, thanks to one of the angered Nie ladies who befriended shijie earlier. I can’t say if Huaisang got off any better than the rest - apparently he tripped over a rock, and fell to the ground, then duly stampeded by rampaging disciples, so his entire body was bruised and covered with aches and abrasions. He should be somewhere in another ward, looking absolutely like a gauze-covered mummy.”

Then, Wei Ying smiles and wants to ask about Lan Zhan’s banana peel slip, and he grimaces - the small cut on the edge of his lip was trivial, but it stung hard where the skin cracked.

“Wei Ying, less talk, eat more,” the husband anxiously placates the boy with a dab of cooling moist cloth on the injured, swollen part on the wife’s face, before picking a sliver of kailan and a piece of ginger, known to reduce pain and inflammation, for the latter to gobble up in the most endearing, cutest and careful way to avoid the split lip from throbbing any further. When Wei Ying acquiesce and takes a bite, he gets a sweet kiss on the cheek that says either ‘Well done on finishing your dinner’ or ‘No matter what you’ve done, or what people speak of you, I’m always by your side’. The sixteen-year old male-wife is indeed blessed to have such a generous, patient and loving husband by his bedside, indeed.

.

In the Arcus Cloud Room, one of the many chambers annexed from the main meeting halls, an extraordinary but grim meeting with Four Great Clans’ leaders took place for an hour or so, thus delaying the rest of the conference agenda about the mysteries of the dead body accordingly - but no one’s complaining, not when sect leaders arrived and were welcomed with reports about the idiocies and rule-breaking committed by their own disciples in the Gusu Lans’ sacred grounds, barely an hour before they disembarked from their chartered First Class FeiEx flights at the entrance to the town. Wei Ying’s Paperman spied the proceedings inside the Arcus Room, hidden behind some fancy trinkets and decor, and even Lan Zhan tuned in like watching the primetime news, thanks to their shared soulmate connection.

It didn't take long for Jin Guangshan, garbed in his finest, and most imposing golden robes and Lanling Jin regalia, to brazenly conclude, after merely leafing through a few pages of the reports, that Jin Zixuan wasn't at fault for walking into a scene of man that had already outraged the modesty of his so-called future daughter-in-law.

The youngest of the sect leaders, War General Nie Mingjue in his mid-twenties, slammed his fist on the round teakwood table and rattled even the chairs that everyone sat on, but fortunately, he did not grab anyone's collars or draw out his saber due to his notoriously fraying temper. He countered that Meng Yao was innocent, and merely wanted to bring his master, that is, Mingjue's younger brother, back to the room and dress him up to prepare for the dinner party that never materialized, because of Zixuan's delicate male ego and rash behaviour in striking others first without proper investigation.

Master Lan Qi Ren, who chaired the meeting, allowed Lan Xi Chen, future successor of the Gusu Lan sect's leadership, to speak up his mind - and Xi Chen was adamant that Meng Yao wasn't in the wrong. He did, after all, advise the man to leave the main office close to five to do exactly just that - to bring a change of clothes and get Huaisang to prepare for the official appointment at dinnertime. Xi Chen even hinted that he knew Meng Yao well because they are close friends despite the difference in their status, and he vouched for that man's good behaviour, and that he'd never put his hands on any women because he's really that timid and kind. If any, Xi Chen stated with undeniable confidence, Meng Yao intended to put Huaisang's robes onto Jiang Yan Li's body to protect her dignity while she slept in the nude.

Then, what of my girl, Jiang Fengmian asked, red-faced, ashamed, crestfallen and heartbroken - Does anyone know what happened to her, and what will happen next? he shed a tear of loss for his beloved eldest darling. His humble but presentable and practical purple robes weren't as showy and flashy as Jin Guangshan's, nor as both heroic and frightening as the beast-themed greys of Nie Mingjue's, and didn't match the elegant simplicity of the cloud-patterned Gusu Lan's flowy white and blue layers - his unassuming and sincere appearance drew few looks of pity from the other three clans' leaders.

The question must've been directed at Jin Guangshan, because he replied almost immediately with no emotion in his voice, and unfeeling as the most ruthless of the Great Clans' sect leaders is renowned for, "The Crown Prince of Lanling Jin does not take used goods. I refuse to allow the elites of my family to be further involved in this scandal." Period, clear as day, the wedding between 'used goods' Yan Li and her fiance seemed to have been called off with a single statement from the almighty Jin Sect Leader.

Master Lan Qi Ren was quick to put the crux of the issue back on the table, because it needed the sect leaders' cooperation to come to an amicable solution; it is certainly not a one-sided problem. "She is with child," the low, slightly raspy wizened voice said, and the room fell silent. The evidence is obvious and damning, and the Gusu Lan's medical skills are unrivalled that it can diagnose conception even within hours after the deed is done.

"That does not say who the father is," the Sect Leader, and the most senior one amongst those at the roundtable, seemed interested to cover his own sons' mistakes - illicit or not -, and did not seem keen to pursue the matter further.

“And Meng Yao is not mine,” came the thinly-veiled rebuttal from the War General, even that shook the Jin sect leader slightly in his seat. Their cups clinked gently when Jin Guangshan inadvertently knocked on one of the table’s legs, caught unprepared by the statement.

There was a staredown of sorts, accompanied by bulging veins and fingers curled into fists, between the tall, imposing and regal Jin Guangshan and the even taller, more broad shouldered, ‘I-eat-men-for-breakfast’ type, Nie Mingjue, whose moustache twitched in hidden fury and dismay. Lan Xi Chen was alarmed because he thought the room would explode from the tension in the air, watched helplessly by the Jiang man who lost the most in this bitter, vulgar exchange of words and the defilement of his precious baby girl’s purity - so, Xi Chen thought a bit and said his wisest words yet, “Jiang Yan Li is innocent in this entire situation. Even I have met and talked to her, and know her in person as a matchless beauty among my peers. She’s a young woman admired and respected by everyone even beyond the Great Clans, and that she is a fine maiden who we agree should not be sullied further, although she is unfortunately embroiled in this scandal caused somehow by our conflicts - that can only get worse if we do not agree on a way forward that helps her and repairs our disrepute.”

Everyone at the table nodded sagely and murmured in their own dialects about how right the Gusu Lan man was, how they should not be blinded by their own selfishness, and that they are leaders, fathers, brothers who should set a good example despite their own reservations and grievances about each other, for the sake of the unity of the glorious Grand Cultivation Council.

With a heavy sigh, and a heavy, reluctant heart, the Sect Leader and self-claimed chief of all attending sects finally stood up and did what he admitted he should've done long ago, were it not for his rather unsavoury loose morals and loins that had become the talk of the town in some dreary days. He announced that Meng Yao to be returned in service of his original blood-clan, the Lanling Jin, and to be reinstated as a lowly illegitimate son of Jin Guangshan granted the privilege of living under the same roof as his blood-father; the reason for such an extraordinary fate granted to an unknown offspring of the Jin Sect Leader was simple - for the sake of the continued good relations between the Great Clans as directed by their forefathers who served the Grand Cultivation Council over centuries and generations; that Jiang Yan Li shall be betrothed to Meng Yao, soon surnamed Jin, thus, silencing any naysayers about her pregnancy and to secure the legitimacy of her future children, that is, the descendents of the Jin and Jiang families, as originally intended and agreed between sects.

Jiang Fengmian beamed with a smile - a forced smile so unnaturally bright and clearly lacking gratitude, to "thank" the father of the suspected culprit for sparing a lifetime of shame for his daughter, thus saving her dignity. He thanked and apologized profusely to his future in-law for the troubles the entire situation has caused, but Jin Guangshan was an educated and cultured man - he simply folded his hands at the front to pay his respect to Jiang Fengmian, an equal in-law in the eyes of the traditional patriarchal family conventions, and said that he was already aware about Jin Zixuan's uneasiness about the getting hitched at such an early age, that 'it was probably an impatient mistake on our part to wed our children when they weren't prepared', and that he shall make sure that Crown Prince Jin Zixuan will find happiness elsewhere.

"In addition, I should be a happier patriarch to have recognized yet another lost son and bring him back under my wings, so that I can raise another fine Jin man to carry on our virtuous legacy, prosper our shared visions of peace and prosperity, and for the glory of our united, civilized society," Jin Guangshan diplomatically raised his cup of tea for a toast. He didn't say much else about Jiang Yan Li, which is a testament to what he thinks - poorly and lowly - of women, after all.

“I shall make arrangements with my younger brother to release Meng Yao from his bonded service soon enough, and ensure that the transition to his new and rightful family is seamless. Congratulations, Sect Leader Jin, on the delightful expansion of your family, and to have more tiny tots soon filling your hallways, each with a beautiful vermilion mark on the forehead and dressed in the finest clothes woven with silk and gold threads, plus, keeping your wives busy as always!” Nie Mingjue reciprocated the toast with his own cup - they were all having Qinghe’s best rice wine this time, brought from special cellars beneath the Nie stronghold fortress on FeiEx flying swords, as opposed to the usual local-made liquors.

“Ha ha, well said, comrade,” Jin Guangshan bellowed out a deep laugh out of politeness - and also for the refined tastes because he did like strong rice wines better than other kinds of brews, “I sometimes lose count of how many members I have in the family, especially these days, when I see more and more of my concubines and consorts carrying fat and healthy boys in their arms than I can remember from the nights before!” the crude, but joyful belly-deep guffaw was a little disconcerting, but everyone took it in his stride, because Jin Guangshan was that kind of person.

Master Lan Qi Ren didn’t seem pleased but he raised his cup anyway, and sent a harsh glance to Lan Xi Chen to do the same, lest they upset their guests. Jiang Fengmian was all smiles, although at the back of his head, he was terribly worried about how he’d break the sudden life-changing news to his family members.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 252

“Was that the right thing to do?” Lan Zhan wondered aloud, while spooning his beloved sixteen-year old Wei Ying rather eagerly with plenty of hip-grinds from crotch to ass. They were naked under the blankets, and the nurses were too busy to notice two horny teenagers fucking like married old gay couple rabbits upon a hapless creaking bed - even their emptied dinner trays left on the bedside were not collected, which indicated how busy the medical halls were in tending to the injured and the sick.

Wei Ying moaned wantonly and still managed to maintain a decent remote-controlled connection with his Paperman, who then fluttered and followed the distinguished leaders to the main halls to finally start their conference about the mystery of the dead body. There, a group of newly arrived Imperial cultivators awaited at the large marble meeting table, flanked by stacks of documents diligently prepared by the Gusu Lan, being the gracious and hard-working hosts as they are, and that said covered dead body lying at one corner, to be examined together by all present in the room.

As the husband’s penis drilled vigorously in those lethal in-and-out, that left the wife begging and breathless, the latter’s leg was lifted by a strong hand, and Wei Ying squealed shamelessly when his G-spot was speared and kneaded by that turgid twitching flesh that remained hard even after two consecutive orgasms, and a total of sixty rich, fulfilling and belly-bloating spurts spilled into his rump. Ah, to be sixteen again, and have sex like sixteen-year old teens!

“... right... thing?” he replied in a daze, his words interspersed with tasty uunh-uunh-uunhs and ‘oh god, harder, yes yes there there rub it there my prostate’s singing for you right over there’. “Of course it’s right to do it spooning while the nurses are still serving dinners in the other wards. Those jiejie s would die of heart attacks if they saw us going down on all fours on the bed without the blankets on! Lan Zhan, my darling lustful beast, be patient and wait until dinner service is over after seven, then I shall service your loins to your heart's content!" Wei Ying added with a smirk, before his eyes rolled back and his smile became crooked and he moaned incoherently again 'oh yeeeeeah, there there there' while his jerking penis started dribbling lots of pre-cum - because damn, Lan Zhan really knew where to grind his cock and play with Wei Ying's hot buttons.

Lan Zhan was very, sexually excited, having found new heights of sensitivity and vigour in his sixteen-year old form, at the peak of youthful perfection, at the same time, he also exuded utmost control of his body since discipline and self-restraint had been freshly instilled into him by his uncle and the family's strict upbringing and teaching - which was why he could survive being locked in his room with his books and a guqin all day, before releasing that leaking, very eager monstrous over six-inch erect penis out from the pants the moment they embraced in the hospital ward-like setting like lovesick fools and started rubbing each others' arousals and crotches like horny animals in the open. Hardly a few minutes after the last nurse jiejie left them with their dinner trays, Lan Zhan had his penis penetrating deeply into an overjoyed Wei Ying's super-tight anus, and his hands were all over the other boy, fondling every inch of skin including Wei Ying's teenage sparse man-tits and less-hairy-than-he-remembered groin. Due to Wei Ying's injury, kisses were, sadly, postponed, and Lan Zhan wouldn't receive blowjobs for a while - which was okay, since his dick is serviced by something better, peeking from between the sixteen-year old's springy ass.

"No, Wei Ying. I meant - what you'd done so far, here in the Cloud Recesses... was that the right thing to do?"

There was a moment of short-circuited ‘Oh father mother holy sweet Guan Yins and bouncing Buddhas, I’m cumming hard and I’m seein’ stars’, in which both boys orgasmed at the same time, with Wei Ying’s belly taking on yet another creamy load, and his less-than-six-inch dick unloading a watery puddle that could be mistaken as pee - but wasn’t, because it was simply the fact that he’d cummed too many times earlier that day.

“Oh?... Right. The thing is, by reporting the case to the Imperial forces, and as a result which we see right now, the sect leaders and the elders will have to answer what they know about the case, and reveal their dark pasts and in particular, the links between sects to Dark-infused powers, such as the Yin Metal - one of which, is located beneath the Cold Springs close to the Jingshi. So, I suggest you pack up and move to our dorms tomorrow before the Imperial goons start a massive deforestation exercise in your backyards and evict you with only the clothes on your back. How’s your ankle, darling?”

Lan Zhan was getting a bit exasperated because that wasn’t really his question, but he politely and truthfully replied that he appreciated the heads-up, and yes, the sprained ankle still hurt a little but it’d been bandaged, so he’ll heal within a few days with rest and with jars of anti-inflammatory ointments. Wei Ying gently grasped the poor unloved leg by reaching behind and below for the husband, then hooked that victimized limb over his hips so that the said bandaged ankle was in sight - and he gave the husband nice foot rubs to soothe any protests from that said foot, and Lan Zhan inexplicably grew hard again inside Wei Ying’s ass despite cumming just less than a few minutes ago. Wei Ying remarked that the husband is aroused by anything touched by the wife, and the latter simply “Mn” and leaned in until he began sniffing Wei Ying’s hair and nape from behind, and the engines that powered his hip-thrusts started again. Round number five... or was it seven, Wei Ying counted, to the rhythm of squishes and squelches from the overflowing rectum still being pistoned by that one angry-red steel-hard phallus symbolizing the indomitable male sexuality.

“Umm. Wei Ying, I actually wanted to ask - was it right to do what you did to your shijie ? Her fate has changed, though I’m not sure for better or for worse.”

Again, a moment of audible and heartfelt prayers with ‘Holy Lan Zhan, why are you getting bigger and harder, fuck me nicely and impregnate your sixteen-year old wife properly you stallion stud, I’m gonna carry your twins and triplets to term and they’re gonna have your handsome eyes and my sweet smile’ which instantly caused the husband to ramp up the speed of his tireless fucking machine. The bed was exhausted, as evidenced by the increasingly tormented creaking and shaking.

“For the better, of course! You should always see the glass half-full and not half-empty, you pessimistic persimmon!” Wei Ying answered with glee and started to grit his teeth when yet another flame roused to life within his pelvis and started licking at his pleasure spots from prostate to penis, from emptied balls to convulsing abs; the husband lovingly kissed his sensitive earlobes and the sweat away, and elicited a wanting moan, “She’s gonna marry a better man than that bastard peacock, who hasn’t shown an ounce of proper romantic attraction or care for her until much later when it’s, figuratively speaking, too late. Meng Yao will still be inducted into the Lanling’s hall of illegitimate half-princes and he’ll gain his proper standing amongst his half-brothers as a Jin member. The difference this time, is that he’ll be kind and nice, even subservient to shijie because he’s the kind of guy that fears his father the most, and the father will order him to care for shijie well and raise their children properly, born with silver spoons and golden riches of the Jin royal family - if anything, to avoid the loss of face in front of the other Great Clans. A-Yao won’t have the reason nor the means to oppress his father and find ulterior motives to harm his own family, or any others, because I believe shijie will be determined to stay by his side and correct his path, and their love will grow over time, that happiness shall overrule any bitterness they faced today. Uuhhh... a bit to the left please, lao gong , it's itchy over there."

"Mn. Does it feel better now? Your lao gong is scratching your itch inside your bum ... then... what about the baby? Is it really yours... and you're just going to... let go and give it away...?" the husband tried to reason the logic, to question about morals, and to fuck a little to the left to scratch that itch, using the 'nine shallow dips and nine deep gouges technique', and realized that multi-tasking is quite difficult when one is in the throes of his impending nth orgasm. At sixteen, Lan Zhan's penis is trigger-happy, and suffers from hypersensitivity and prolonged erection, not to forget, premature ejaculations too, because barely a few minutes into their in-and-outs, he was ready to blast off yet again.

Wei Ying simply laughed and mocked at the young inexperienced husband's distress, "Oooh, to the right, to the right, the itch has gone that way! ... Ah, Lan Zhan, you're such a fussy and picky person! Shijie is anyway going to be raped by that dirty old man Jin Guangshan on her wedding night, or even earlier as soon as she sets foot into the Carp Tower, so there'll be no issues on who will be the father of the child in her belly. It'll be crapload of Jins, and don't you dare start prattling about fathers and strangers raping babies in their wombs, because really, aren't you one of them too?" Wei Ying turned around a bit and wiggled his eyebrows, and imagined the husband's frozen face on Wanted List mugshots when one looks behind their past lifetimes, and realizes that indeed, Lan Zhan had been raping maidens and fathering children, then raping those children and fathering grandchildren out of them, and he indulges in selling his offspring to earn fucks to buy demonic vegetables in Gui Shan sometimes, or he buys others' children to have wonderful babymaking sex by using fucks as currency - so he has no merit nor the qualification to argue on that topic.

“Mn,” the husband sighed and his hips shuddered powerfully, pounding against Wei Ying’s bouncing bubble butt, “You’re right, lao po . The baby in shijie ’s belly isn’t our concern.” Fingers grappled the rumpled, sweat-soaked bedsheets and the wife’s pliant limbs, nostrils flared and the back arched. The sounds of rhythmic thwup thwup thwup became prominent and echoed throughout the empty ward, with heavy breathing crescendoing as the two boys raced to taste yet another sweet, musky flavoured orgasm filled with gay male pheromones.

The other boy laughed, “Of course I’m always right. Now fuck me properly, and let’s do missionary. The nurses have gone out after dinner service, so let’s have you enjoy making babies inside my sixteen-year old ass!”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 253

At dawn, while Wei Ying extolled the pleasures of emptying one's loins in the daytime and getting his butt filled at night to the crows of the roosters in the vicinity, and said good-bye to his love life with shijie as the sun rose, and gave a heartfelt declaration that the day before had been historic because he'd never have another like it ever - Lan Xi Chen found the two in front the the Jingshi when the older man thought of inviting his little brother to breakfast, and was pleasantly surprised to see Wei Ying, whom he wasn't acquainted to, helping precious A-Zhan to pack some stuff into a cart.

“Good morning, A-Zhan's gege !” Wei Ying chirped happily like an innocent, jolly sixteen-year old who hasn't seen the breadth and depth of the cruel, harsh world, and was about to embark on an adventure of a lifetime, “A-Xian is here to help A-Zhan load some personal belongings into a cart, so that he'll move to the dorms with A-Xian and his friends. Look at him, he slipped on a fruit peel last evening during that terrible brawl in the courtyard, and he's not able to walk properly without crutches at least for a few days. You can count on A-Xian! I'll take care of him according to the Gusu Lan principles that I'll be studying in the coming days, just like everyone else!” His A.S.S. million dollar smile was just as blinding and rivalled that of Huan gege 's.

Introductions were in order, with layers of white lies crammed like icing in buttercakes - yes, A-Xian is just one of the disciples from the humble, unassuming Yunmeng Jiang sect, and he was rather shy and preferred not to share his full name, “So, just call me A-Xian... at your service!” and add a cute little bow - which was fine, according to the social etiquettes of the era of circa 2000 B.C. According to A-Xian, he met A-Zhan in the medical halls when A-Zhan was alone, because the elder Huan gege was in an important meeting all night long and no details were divulged; so poor A-Zhan was left waiting, wondering, and soon, tightening his thighs in discomfort after dinner that was served with a pot of tea (Lies, lies, Lan Zhan hissed, because they met before dinner and started touching and groping each others' bodies like ravenous lovesick lovers before the entrée was served). A-Zhan called repeatedly for a nurse when he needed to use the toilet, however, sadly none responded because the entire medical hall was in crisis mode; so, he only had crutches to use, and didn't really know how to pee with both hands balancing on those wooden tools.

Fortunately, at the same time, A-Xian, who suffered from a minor sore injury on the mouth, happened to pass by, by the grace of good luck. He couldn't stand lying down in a room full of moaning patients in his cattle-class ward, so he had gone exploring around the labyrinthine medical halls when he found A-Zhan looking rather desperate, standing beside his king-sized bed and clutching his crutches. Being kind-hearted and generous, A-Xian approached the rather uncommunicative and distressed boy in a gentle, nice way, and A-Zhan finally relented before the dams burst. A-Xian understood the challenges of a male who had no free hands to pull down his pants, hold his penis, and to aim properly into the urinal, following the Gusu Lan sect rule number XXX. So, A-Xian unreservedly and happily did that for A-Zhan, and as they shared their backstories, they found that they were of the same age and of the rather same family background, in that they were orphans at a very young age, and so, they bonded over a mutual peeing session in the gents. A-Zhan instantly took a liking to A-Xian, in a bromantic and friendly way, and invited A-Xian to stay in the same exclusive ward restricted to elites of the Lan family, so together, they accompanied each other for the whole night.

A-Zhan's face was red and he looked away with his lips pursed; such a precious gesture, because he seemed embarrassed and even annoyed, and yet he still grasped A-Xian's arm for balance when they pushed a cart together, one palm atop the other. Huan gege clapped his hands and his eyes crinkled with glee, and he smiled brightly the way that A-Zhan could never do, and remarked that he was so happy that his didi had found a friend (what more, through a friendly touch on the privates!), which was one of his intentions of having the introverted A-Zhan join this year's summer intersect lectures and mingle with other boys of his age.

(Lan Zhan sent a psychic message to Wei Ying, "Must you always paint me in such humiliating light on my behalf? I can already pee on my own since last night without the crutches, but you kept touching my penis and we kept having sex all the way from the hall's recovery wards to the toilets, then you refused to let me go when I really had to, in front of the unoccupied urinals - did that inspire you to say such vulgar things about me?" Wei Ying merely chortled like a hiccuping monkey and he cut off the psychic connection, to the husband's discontentment. Because really, do they also want to dwell on the fact that Lan Zhan suffered from constipation, impacted farts bubbles in the colon, and excessive flatulence after sitting down the whole afternoon with the guqin, as evidenced by Wei Ying's unbridled delight when they made sweet love on the medical hall bed that evening and he kept hearing brrp brrp brrp s with each energetic thrust into his ass, or when they used the gents, they also took their dumps and Wei Ying had a brief episode of explosive diarrhea due to the laxative effects of Lan Zhan's overflowing semen, and Lan Zhan nnngh'ed for the whole half an hour because of that said constipation, and the toilet, fortunately empty of any occupants, was stinked up? Banish the thought, the husband grumbled, and disconnected the psychic call again.)

Huan gege thanked A-Xian for being there for his little brother, because he had been busy the day before mostly due to a dear friend that visited him in office (Huhhh... Wei Ying hums and raises his brows), and of course, the investigations that everyone's been briefed about (Not really, Wei Ying told himself, because the student disciples were told that something had happened that involved a rumoured murder, everyone's in prison lockdown mode, classes have been postponed even before any started, and the sect leaders that met up with Imperial officers last evening were all tight-lipped because, you know, gag orders, top secret, confidential information, and all that; Wei Ying didn't get a chance to talk to his adopted father because he was having crazy monkey sex with Lan Zhan on the hospital bed all night, and they didn't have any visitors, fortunately).

“Ah,” Huan gege was anxious for a moment, because he was also overseeing some student affairs - and he didn't know Wei Ying's true identity yet, “Students are advised to refer to the latest announcements at the noticeboard at breakfast time. Classes will be postponed until next week due to the untoward incident last evening. Some children had to be sent back because their parents are understandably worried, some need time to recover and recuperate in the medical halls - but worry not, A-Xian, because the Gusu Lan are famous for their medical skills, and besides, that gives you more time to study ahead of the lessons, and spend time with your new friends, like my dear little brother, does it not?” He smiled again, and Wei Ying nodded in agreement, keeping up his bright smile all the time.

Huan gege was glad that the two were discharged together - because the medical halls needed more beds with more critical patients streaming in from, say, infected wounds - and remained by each other's side. “I have a lot on my plate today, including rescheduling instructors' timetables, completing stacks of paperwork, and the fact that my dear friend has to leave for his homeland soon and I have to see to his departure arrangements... and... probably, take a week off to attend his sudden wedding-- oh, I'm rambling, aren't I? My bad,” Huan gege seemed a bit off as he spoke of the uncertain future. He scratched his head nonchalantly and grinned sheepishly.

Wei Ying decided to give the poor elder brother a break from such a stressful time because any capable leader could still easily crumble under the pressures of multiple crises detonating at the same time.

“Huan gege , let me secure A-Zhan’s belongings in the cart and prepare to push it to my clan’s dorms. We can have breakfast together, if you don’t mind. My roommates are still warded in the medical halls for more serious injuries, so I would appreciate the company of my new friend’s brother too, if you don’t mind,” a wink, and Huan gege pinked considerably at such a kind and welcoming invitation, “In the meantime, why don’t you two brothers chat a bit, and take A-Zhan to the bushes over there. I believe he hasn’t relieved himself since this morning when I knocked on the door to this rather quaint, serene building, and the journey by foot to my clan’s dorms, including crutches, will take some time. You wouldn’t want your didi to be caught in any alarming situations on the way, would you?” A-Xian mischievously pointed at the crutches that A-Zhan held, and gestured towards the crotch of his pants for inexplicable reasons. A-Zhan sent daggers at A-Xian’s improper suggestion, but his brows twitched and suddenly, he had that urge, and his legs fidgeted restlessly.

Wei Ying happily whistled an old Yunmeng folktune while doing what was needed, packing books, a guqin, some boxes and rather dusty old stuff into a handcart, and tying them with rope and canvas. The air at daybreak was chilly indeed, humid and left the landscape sparkling in dewdrops and blanketed with mists, because Summer had just arrived just like the tempest of clouds and drizzles heralding the rains that would nourish the ever flowing waterfalls, flourishing bamboo groves and pine forests, and paint the skyscape with vivid blues, clear puffy whites underlined with greys, and framed below by majestic peaks of snow capped mountains, towering stone cliffs and impressive river gorges beneath. The Jingshi was dark, quiet, now vacated, and Wei Ying almost wished he could take a photo of the picturesque, rustic scenery of the building and its bamboo-thriving backyard, with a pretty brook bubbling past and stone gardens and flowering bushes in the surrounding - before returning to the hustle and bustle of the cramped dorms. No matter, he thought, because he could always visit this place anytime he wanted at any point in his lifetime.

Not too far away, Lan Xi Chen attended to his brother's personal needs, hidden behind some dense bushes.

“ Gege has to apologize for leaving you alone yesterday, and this undesirable situation will likely remain until the end of the week when the investigations are completed, and outstanding matters are resolved. Gege unfortunately cannot share the details to those outside of the investigation, so please bear with me. Now, don't move, while gege untie your drawstrings.”

“Ah, gege is rubbing the sensitive, delicate spot atop your bulging bladder, it is really full. Did you have to hold back the whole night? Gege hopes that with A-Xian's help, at least you will be taken care of in gege 's stead, during these tumultuous times. Let it go, let it go, do you hear your friend whistling? Maybe that will help to relieve the tightness, and gege will press it down for you too. Ah, don't struggle and don't hold it in, that's bad for your health, didi .”

“My, my, didi 's pubic hair is growing more dense by the day! Running my fingers through them, they're a bit frizzy, aren't they? Such a virile young man you're turning out to be. Did you miss gege 's daily morning delights? You used to be such a cute didi , rushing to my room the first thing in the morning and stick your pee-pee at gege 's face. I miss those carefree days, when I'm not saddled with the work of a sect leader, and you had all the time in the world to stay in my room, cuddled up in gege 's arms, and we played with touch-touches all day. Ah, may I? Let's revisit our little morning delights today, as a token of apology for yesterday's boo-boo.”

“Oh, your morning stiffy's so adorable, it's red as a summer strawberry comb, straight as an arrow, and it's getting thick, maybe at three fingers' girth now. Such a healthy growth spurt this is! Let gege peel back your loose foreskin and have a closer look. Are you letting go yet? No? Come, and let gege stroke your pee-pee to persuade your pee to fly out energetically like a rooster crows in the morn!”

“That’s it, that’s it, such a good boy, you’re peeing with gege holding your pee-pee. Let it trickle out, don’t rush the flow, even though it feels good to squeeze your pee-pee with gege ’s vigorous stroke. See? Gege ’s fist is getting splashed, so control it, dear didi , and let it last longer. It’ll feel much better that way. Oh, what’s this? Your cute boy-eggs are rising and hiding under your pee-pee, that’s so cute! Don’t run away, lil’ hairy eggs, you musn’t hide away from gege , because you know gege will always love both of you just like the old days, when gege spent hours licking and sucking you until you swelled lovingly with gege ’s brotherly touch.”

“Here, let gege touch-touch your sensitive balls, you used to demand gege to do this every morning too. My, my, they’re heavy, and getting darker, filled with masculinity aren’t they? You need to release the pressure inside once in a while, Wang Ji. I’m studying medicine, and this is mentioned in the medical texts, so you can trust me on this.”

“Now that your yellow pee is almost out, let gege rub-rub your pee-pee’s slit and massage your eggs to release the bad toxins inside your balls. Keep your hips still, because your pee-pee is twitching wildly and we want to get every single last drop of pee out. Good boy, relax your bladder sphincter and squeeze those muscles, good boy... It’s not good to leave pee inside your bladder, you know that. That’s it... good boy, squirt every last drop of yellow pee into the bushes... ooh! That’s a healthy, powerful fountain! Your pee-pee must be feeling very, very good, right? Gege will stroke your pee-pee faster, we must drain the watery yellow pee out. The thicker milky white pee should go next. ”

“Oooh, stop squirming and hold onto your crutches tightly. Ah, gege forgot to bring a hankie to wipe you dry. Let gege clean you up the way you always liked. Stay, stay, good boy, and Nommmm... mmmf... Mmmf... Phwahh! Did you like that? Gege is playing with your pee-pee with his mouth, your number one favourite morning delight every time you jump onto gege 's bed first thing at daybreak! Let me do it again a few more times... Nommmm... Mmmf... Mmmmm... Mmmm...”

“Ah, your hips are shaking and your thighs are trembling. Be a good boy, hold your crutches and stand up straight. A real man pees yellows and whites while standing steady on the ground. Let gege suck your pee-pee a bit more and play with your eggs... ooh, it's jerking and it's so lively, let gege lick the skin and draw circles and lines along the veins, before swallowing you whole down to the throat and make swallowing motiong - you like that, don't you?”

“Mmm... good boy, good boy, cry out when you want. As a real man, it always feels good to pee in the bushes, when nobody's around and no one can hear you...”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 254

During breakfast, there is a considerably smaller crowd since many remain in the medical halls to receive treatments and are warded as in-patients. Wei Ying enjoys a light banter with Huan gege without revealing his identity, and for that Lan da ge , to talk as though there were no rank and barriers in between - it is a nice meal shared by two friends and an elder brother. Huan gege was kind and asked if Wei Ying - A-Xian - would like a healing spell to hasten the recovery, but the younger boy said that Nnn-nnn, it's alright, it's just a split lip that's just a little sore, but it doesn't hinder him to finish breakfast. A-Zhan remains relatively quiet and rosy-cheeked, because Huan gege is adamant to feed the didi with siu mai on chopsticks, a specialty from the province of southern Guangdong province, mouthful by mouthful, for the irrational fear that the didi may tire his arms if he ate on his own and should save his strength for using the crutches instead; at the same time, Wei Ying sits opposite Lan Zhan and they play footsies under the table, of one socked feet entwining with the other's.

Changes in rooming arrangements are common, more so after the brawl the evening before, and hence the paperwork to allow Lan Zhan to stay at the Yunmeng Jiang's dormitories is quickly done with a wave by Huan gege 's hand, and a nod by the dormitory administration office's clerk. Wei Ying praised Xi Chen's noble stature and appearance, speculating that he must be quite an admirable senior in the Cloud Recesses to be able to wield such influence with his magical wave of hands, and that made Xi Chen smile a little too smugly. However, their time spent together ended too soon, because Huan gege has to go to work even while the rising sun peeks through the horizon filled with bamboo and pine at the mountaintops; thus, with stomachs filled, the couple proper returns to Wei Ying's room and unpacks Lan Zhan's luggage.

The room has four beds, one for Wei Ying, one for Jiang Cheng and one for shijie . With the latter two in the medical halls, therefore Lan Zhan logically takes the last free bed. Upon reaching the bed, Lan Zhan puts away the crutches by the bedside and asks if he still has to pretend to suffer from a sprained ankle and hobble everywhere like a disabled man. “Well, going around in crutches does have its benefits, does it not? You got a free sexy hand and oral blowjob from your gege without asking,” the then-future wife winks and laughs, in which the then-husband snorts indignantly, his ears reddened again. Wei Ying orders the husband to blend in with the crowd and act as though he’s as injured as everyone else, and not to attract any unwanted attention. He also peels off the small square piece of adhesive medical dressing covering the wound on his cheek and lip, and shows Lan Zhan that the crack in the skin has healed, and the bruised swelling is gone - but he keeps it on anyway, for the same reason. “We may be Immortals blessed with superior insta-healing 4d-printed biscuit made bodies, but that doesn’t mean we should live like gods on earth,” Wei Ying remarks, and hubby Lan agrees wholeheartedly - living in simplicity is the way to go.

Wei Ying knows that the then-future husband prefers to do his unpacking in a systematic, methodical and uninterrupted manner so that he can perfectly map out which item goes where, which stack fits nicely in squares and rectangles, in his new, smaller single bed and its surrounding standard furniture of a study desk, a wardrobe cupboard and a cabinet. So, the then-future wife tells the spouse that he’s going to the medical halls to visit his siblings and maybe catch up with his foster father if he’s there. He hadn’t had the chance to talk to Jiang Fengmian yet thus far.

.

It was an uncomfortable, tense atmosphere, and a conversation told by a stoic father who wasn’t used to tears, yet Jiang Fengmian braved and bared his heart, and shared that he felt as hurt as his children - particularly the eldest - when they had been harmed, hundreds of miles away from home.

“A- Tie has wronged you, A- Tie shouldn’t have sent you to listen to the lectures here, in the remote mountains. Yan Li, forgive A- Tie ... A- Tie couldn’t save you...”

Wei Ying watched his foster father hug shijie , sobbing twice as hard as though he was making up for her lack of tears. Jiang Yan Li looked absolutely drained emotionally, chalk-white pale as a ghost because she didn’t sleep well, let alone eat anything since last night, and she was unresponsive save for her expressionless, bloodshot eyes, ringed by dark circles, framed by an aura of despair and wordlessness. She remained quiet, after having cried enough the night before when the nurses broke the news to her that she carried a child whose father could not be found, at a tender young maiden age just a few months shy of her nineteenth birthday. Perhaps she wasn’t heartbroken for being forced into motherhood before she was ready, because she has many peers who were already mothers in their teenage years; more likely, Wei Ying thought, Yan Li was shattered deep inside due to the shame that she would carry for the rest of her life and how society would view her from henceforth; that she had been raped and defiled while she slept alone that afternoon, her purity stolen and shredded, her reputation ruined forever. She had been seen in her naked, lewd and exposed state by at least two men, and rumours are abound and rife, according to the nurses who were kind enough to tell the truth albeit with some sugar-coating to pacify the wailing maiden in a private ward room. She knew, and Wei Ying could vouch for the situation in reality, that her story sent tongues wagging amongst different clans until a strict disciplinary gag order was put out, signed and sealed by sect leaders, which meant that her father’s friends - those uncles and higher-up elders - also knew about her shame.

Jiang Cheng sat beside his sister on the bed and grasped her hand, his upper half of the head bandaged like a bald egg, literally; while Wei Ying held shijie 's other hand, still with his supposedly bruised cheek dressed in gauze. Naturally, Jiang Cheng took it upon himself as a burden on his young shoulder for the family's ruin - no matter the outcome, Jiang Cheng as the heir apparent of his sect would have to field unsettling and daunting questions, challenge accusing statements and lascivious hearsays thrown from others, and confront those that dare to further sully the family's pride - and his own bruised ego. "I shouldn't have wasted my time doing frivolous things, such as hanging out with another boy and read unproductive literature," he lamented without revealing what he actually read that caused him to become careless with the passage of time.

"And I," Wei Ying added sombrely, "-- should have been a better sibling, by not leaving shijie alone, not when we're supposed to be a close-knitted family." He pursed his lips and hoped he said the right words, because shijie looked as though she was about to cry again - and she did.

(Of course she would, Wei Ying berated himself inside; from the hours of one to two, they were playing with Huaisang's birdies; from the hours of two to four, Jiang Cheng hung out with Huaisang and they circle-jerked to porn comics - while Wei Ying raped his shijie non-stop and emptied his loins again and again inside her; from the hours of four to four-thirty became Wei Ying's five more minutes that was extended several times, because he really enjoyed making babies inside his shijie and refused to leave her sweet tight semen-soaked pulsing pussy until much later - and that would be a secret he might have to carry to his grave, at least in this reality; after which, Wei Ying sought out the two errant boys masturbating to dirty pictures of naked women; and sometime between four-thirty and five, Meng Yao stopped by the dorm to look for his master, and chanced upon the violated woman fully naked on the bed, slumbering peacefully with nary a piece of garment covering her - and the rest, as they say, are rumours, speculations and obscene gossip. As far as Yan Li knew, and her story was acknowledged by the Jiang family, she fell asleep sometime after two, that she had nice dreams and felt refreshed and energetic throughout her dreamless sleep until she woke up into a nightmare of two men fighting over her naked body; and as far as Wei Ying swore with his three-finger salute, he remained like a good boy in the room, doing mundane things like giving his snoozing sister an ear-cleaning, then sweeping the floor, wiping the furniture, folding their laundry, and lazing about while cursing Jin Zixuan under his breath for that full two and a half hours, thus implying that he is fully innocent - and the Jiang family believed him.)

Upon hearing her hiccups and sniffles, Jiang Fengmian became flustered, and hurried to the attached bathroom to soak another washcloth with cooling water to wipe his precious baby girl's face. Jiang Cheng, who was obviously perturbed by the entire situation and unprepared to handle it from a more mature, emotional standpoint - because truthfully, he's only an adolescent, thirteen-year old boy -, rose from his seat, released his grip from the sister's hand, and went off to help his father fill a bucket; at least that'll make him feel a bit more useful and take his mind off the edge a bit.

With the two out of earshot, Wei Ying leaned in and caressed her hand lovingly, just like a brother's for his sister. Jiang Yan Li shivered at the ticklish sensations and she turned to face him, with an indiscernible look in her eyes.

“ Shijie , this is my promise to you. If you do not find happiness with Meng Yao, you must return home at once and I will gladly take his place. You know me better than anyone, that I'll swear upon my beating heart and pledge to take care of you for the rest of my life. I will protect you from the cruel harsh world that we live in, make sure that you'll never shed another tear of sadness, and that you'll always smile for me, if not for everyone.”

She stared at him, astonished at how the Xian Xian in her eyes suddenly grew from being the adorable three-year old brother to a tall, handsome and chivalrous, courteous young man by her side. She felt his other hand reach down and touch her belly, and he rubbed a couple of circles on where the baby bump would eventually protrude, months later - Xian Xian's fingers are a bit calloused against the thin fabric of the medical gown that she wore, but they are warm, and pulse with strong, reassuring heat.

“This baby... I'd also consider it as mine, ours, should you return to our home, and into my arms. The child will have a happy, loving family, blessed with happier and fulfilled parents. That, I promise to you too, Jiang Yan Li.”

She shuddered at the way Xian Xian pronounced her full name - husky, wanting, gentle and very tender, from lips straight into her ear, before she felt a light nip on her earlobe but she could only see the side of his face because he'd lean in too far against her cheek, her vision is blocked by his long, luscious hair, and her senses drowned in the smell Xian Xian's familiar, comforting scent, perhaps with a hint of his heartbeat where their heated skin touched, and if only, if only she could taste with her own lips to confirm the swelling feeling inside her heart--

The bathroom door tapped lightly as two men re-entered the private ward room with a bucket of water and a washcloth. They smiled too, when they noticed that she had calmed down and wasn't crying anymore, and she looked away, probably a little downcast and demure, although her cheeks pinked considerably than before, and she still held Wei Ying's hand for strength, if nothing else.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 255

(Elsewhere, Lan Zhan sneezed. He rubs his nose and snuffles. The bed he sat on hasn't been used for quite a while, because there is a slight musty smell, and it is probably a little dusty. He pulls out the bedspread and goes to air it outside, hoping to rid it of allergens and god forbid, even creepy-crawly dust mites as well.

"That sounds corny," the husband telepathically messaged the wife.

"Don't eavesdrop and ruin my moment, you old fart. I wanted to speak those words straight out of a teenage romance novel, while I'm still sixteen-years old," said the wife and he dismissed the husband's virtuous efforts to correct his immorality.

"You said before that once your shijie is sent off to Lanling, she wouldn't have a chance to escape anyway. Why keep her hopes up? You're just toying with her feelings," Another naggy line.

"So what? At least she'll have nice memories of me. I can't imagine that she'll want to return home after being treated like spoiled goods by her future father-in-law, then passed around like an expensive sex doll amongst his more promising sons to whore out her dignity and destroyed innocence. Meng Yao wouldn't be able to protect her at the Carp Tower other than on paper and by name, and she'll be snatched away and bedded nightly by other more powerful Jin men, that's for sure, judging from the genes that run inside every pure-blooded son of Jin Guangshan. But at least she can sleep peacefully even while having groups of horny, hungry men gangbang her, thinking back fondly of her home and my smiling face, right?” The retort was twisted and perverted as hell, but the husband didn’t qualify to argue on that point; and his relative, the Lord of the Hell in the Underworld, wouldn’t like his native homeland’s name to be described in such a sensationalized, cheap manner. The couple had gone down the perverse path long ago, and they were beyond redemption anyway.

“You’re sick in the mind and heart, but that’s why we love each other,” the husband sighed in resignation.

“I love you too, dear. Talk to you in two,” and Wei Ying, formerly the vile, notoriously cruel Yiling Patriarch, signed off.)

Later, Wei Ying stopped by Nie Huaisang’s ward, which is also a semi-exclusive part of the medical halls reserved for elites and relatives of sect leaders. He sent his and Jiang Cheng’s regards to the boy, and also bumped into War General Nie Mingjue; in which Wei Ying put on his greasy A.S.S. million-dollar niceties and kept generally good, though distant relations with that fearsome and imposing warrior. Huaisang introduced Wei gongzi to the Nie gege, and there was a look of discomfort, maybe a little guilt on his face when he learned that Wei Ying was an adopted son of Jiang Fengmian - but he said nothing else, because as Wei Ying’s Paperman already found out the evening before, the matter about Jiang Yan Li, Meng Yao and Jin Zixuan had been settled ‘out of court’ and the relevant sect leaders, like Jiang Fengmian, would do what is needed with their respect sects to conclude the agreed actions.

Nie Mingjue left shortly after, because he had other matters to attend to, such as to answer some sect-related questions from the Imperial cultivators that led the investigations of the mysterious dead body, at the main office.

“Ahh, it’s so frustrating! I’m the younger brother of one of those sect leaders under investigation, but my efforts to find out more has been stymied by that stupid restriction of any information and developments arising from the examination of the dead body, or its surrounding circumstances,” the Nie gongzi bemoaned the fact that he’d been thwarted no matter how sweet he appeared to his gege. Wei Ying patted the boy’s head and placated the latter with reasons that they - the group of youngsters who should be studying hard and staying in their rooms like good boys - aren’t privy to the proceedings because of the highly sensitive secrets of the discoveries, and probably, shouldn’t be sticking their noses into life-threatening matters where they should be.

“Ehh... you sound like my gege , Wei gongzi . It must be because you’re a year older than me that you’re so wise!” Nie gongzi giggled and Wei Ying scrunched his brows to look as fierce and serious, then twirled an invisible moustache above his lips, and puffed out his chest haughtily, to play an impression of Nie Mingjue - and the two boys fell into a series of laughter. Their mirth attracted some attention from nurse jiejie s on active duty, and they received a series of hisses to shush them up, because other patients are resting. Snooping Jiang Cheng, who preferred to leave his shijie alone with his father to talk through things, eventually found the two, following their sounds that echoed down the hallways, and soon, Huaisang’s ward room became a jolly haunt for the trio of boys.

They talked and entertained each other, without making too much noise and disturbance in the hours after breakfast service. Huaisang was covered with dressings and bandages all over his body except for his head, and Jiang Cheng was nearly the opposite - which made for a humorous comparison of fates after the brawl last evening. They were instructed to remain in the wards for further healing and observation, unlike Wei Ying who had checked out earlier that morning. At the ages fourteen to sixteen, the three jovial boys had little to hide from each other, and soon, they were embroiled in more serious discussions about what had transpired thus far.

Despite Team Jiang and Team Nie had reunited with their sect leaders, the boys learnt nothing significantly new about the mystery surrounding the dead body, other than to confirm that a man from an unidentified sect had been murdered under vile, vicious circumstances in Caiyi Town, and the Imperial police officials, assisted by their cultivators were on the case. Sect Leaders had been summoned for questioning, with vague remarks such as ‘the circumstances surrounding the deaths may be linked to the sects’ current and past histories’ - which is theoretically true, if the deaths aren’t purely physical and mundane in nature, and bears hints of cultivation magic, curses, revenge-taking, and the ilk. The investigations should wrap up within days, Huaisang said, at the same time the classes would formally start and that he would miss having Meng Yao around to wake him up on time, wash his clothes and keep his dorm unit clean.

Jiang Cheng’s jaws tightened, and he shared that he’ll also miss his sister’s presence, because a gilded and diamond-encrusted horse carriage will arrive by end of the week to take Yan Li and her new fiance back to the Carp Tower for a hastily prepared engagement ceremony.

“Ahh, I wish Meng Yao will wake up from the anesthesia soon, so that I can gently break the news to him. I have to conduct a severance ritual to formally release his bonded service involving thumbprints inked in blood, and return him to his family. I’m... I’m actually relieved that his original family will take him back, but I’ll miss him so much, he’s done a lot for the Nie family, after all.”

“You don’t say, Nie gongzi ... as the representative of my clan and on behalf of my busy father, I have to introduce my sister formally to Meng Yao in a shortened but still complex ritual according to the traditions. Fortunately, we have senior female disciples in our clan who can help me to carry out this ritual. It’s just so... complicated, and sudden. I can’t believe we came here to study, but will end up separating with A- Jie getting hitched to a new man.”

“Ah... Jiang gongzi , I should congratulate you and the Jiang family for the auspicious event! Should I bring a pot of tea and--”

“No need, Nie gongzi . I’m still having a headache from the concussion in my skull, so let’s do that when Meng Yao is awake and back to the dorms, and when my sister is introduced to him at your place. My father and your brother will still be around to preside over the simplified ceremony taking place in another sect’s grounds... it’s really strange, and awkward, to say the least.”

Then, Huaisang turned to Wei Ying, and asked for his opinion - because after all, surely he had a lot to think about, and a lot to say, in letting go of his favourite sister, as Jiang Cheng aptly put it. Wei Ying looked a little distracted - because he’d been daydreaming about how wonderful it felt to have sex with a peacefully-sleeping Jiang Yan Li, joyfully taking pleasure from her deflowered wet, tight pussy that he’d claimed to be his, while molesting her spread-eagled, vulnerable exposed body and grabbing her titties like there’s no tomorrow, and how he’ll make two-second trips to her bedroom in the Carp Tower once she’s kidnapped and forcefully wedded to a man she did not love, in a den full of hungry, horny Jin brutes, to counter-kidnap his shijie and drag her down to his underground kingdom of infinite lust, depravity and sexual slavery -, well, he blinked his eyes twice to clear his head.

“Well, there’s not much we can do right now, but to stay together and hunker down through the next few days in our rooms. Since our sect leaders are here, we should lead by example and do what is right, such as keeping calm and studying hard, and not be distracted by the matters beyond our control, such as the investigations and the loss of our loved ones. I’d like to have a word with Meng Yao too once he wakes up, because he’ll be a future in-law of our family and I want to make sure that he’s the right man for shijie,” (not, Wei Ying added on his own.) the sixteen-year old replied in a textbook-perfect response during stressful and tense times as this; and Huaisang nodded vehemently and praised Wei gongzi’s appropriate outlook in the matter.

“In fact,” Wei Ying said from where he sat on an unoccupied bed, opposite of the other where two bandaged boys were, “The two of you look like, and could be, brothers-in-law! So let’s keep it that way and strengthen our friendship... and brotherhood!”

Huaisang and Jiang Cheng couldn’t agree more.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 256

Wei Ying would rate Day Two as ‘quite okay’, at most. With extra patrols and higher risks of being interrogated by seniors for breaching freshly-imposed curfews, going outdoors became less appealing than, say, staying indoors to have crazy monkey sex with Lan Zhan in his dorm unit, now their love nest and soon, a sex dungeon. Furthermore, the atmosphere out there was rather glum, in that wounded, bandaged disciples mulled about, beaten up with bruises and rather listless from getting overdosed on painkillers, painting a dreary picture for any sixteen-year old to even want to venture out of his den of masturbatory and anal intercoursal joys.

They copulated on every furniture imaginable because they’re sixteens, or more aptly called, ‘sexteens’, rubbing themselves silly on bent and bumpy surfaces, bent over tables, hammered into beds, skewered and sawed against walls, even hanging off ceilings and upside down in various creative poses and sex positions. The aftermath was as fornicatingly filthy and obscenely awesome as conceivable within the limits of human sexual depravity, with cum dripping from ceilings to pillows, urine-stained wardrobes and poop-filled drawers littering the dorm room, legs of tables and chairs used as dildoes in lieu of Bichen, armrests turned into masturbatory toys, and bedposts transformed into titillating bases for sadomasochistic play with ropes, vibrators and chains. No matter how many times they came and spilled their passions on the floors, in any holes on the ground or in each others’ buttocks, on horizontal and vertical faces, with the husband’s penis pistoning his wondrous in-and-outs with plenty of squelches and squishes of overflowing semen dribbling like a garden hose gone wild while climbing up walls and atop furniture, they were still rock hard, ready to go for Round Twos, Threes and Fours, and very, very much aroused, as evidenced by their boners made of titanium (figuratively speaking), sexually flushed chests and abs, and limbs that kept moving and flailing about like doing dirty disco and pole dancing using each others’ bodies for traction, suction and all sorts of beastly mating moves on a dancefloor streaked with tasty, pungent bodily fluids.

By eleven in the morning - oh god how could it just be eleven o' clock, the wife cried in absolute boredom and nearly rammed the tabletop clock into his loosened but elastic youthful cum-flooded butthole - having exhausted every known sex position from the Kama Sutra text and their wild sixteen imaginations, the two simply cuddled up on a body-warmed soggy bed that the then-husband promised to clean up and air-dry later the day. They exchanged sweet kisses and even sweeter touches, though for the moment, their lusts were sated for the time being after frolicking enough than humanly possible in the last couple of hours.

“Ah, Jiang Cheng and Huaisang must be studying diligently now, after asking servants to fetch their school bags, then reciting the first two chapters of Philosophy lessons and memorizing three of Cultivation Science, though they won't be able to practise their calligraphy and exercise their cultivation moves for the time being due to their injuries,” Wei Ying moaned in boredom while sitting on Lan Zhan's lap and riding him, reverse-cowgirl style, “I told them I'll return to the dorms because there's no way I could study in those sterile wards, pestered by nurse jiejie s, and surrounded by moaning and groaning boys and men. But alas, how I've whittled my time away with pure unbridled mindless sex with a sixteen-year old husband!” The other boy simply “Mn” in acknowledgement and continued to pump his hips up and down on the bed to either push his penis in to plug any leaks from the cum-juiced ass, or simply, enjoy Wei Ying's warm presence in his arms, snuggle up like pillows just like lovers do when they have all the time in the world to snuggle, sneak one hand to the front to play touch-touches with the stiff, twitching penis, and let Wei Ying's ass-muscles knead and grasp lovingly, massaging his meatstick pleasurably, and convey their love through the sacred connection of a penis entwined in an ass like lock and key.

Wei Ying promised to return to the medical halls by lunch time to have lunch with his family in their private ward. Until then, he was free to make love to his beloved darling man (now, boy), make two-second trips to his underground kingdom, or do whatever he needed to do while surfing ErNet. Periodically, Lan Zhan had to get up to take a leak because keeping adequately, even over-hydrated while having crazy monkey sex was paramount - in which Wei Ying metaphorically grew two horns and became the mischievous imp, and herded the poor boy to his brother's office just a few minutes down the main path from the dorms. Of course, Huan gege was more than delighted to receive A-Zhan in crutches and to do the necessary behind closed doors - while Wei Ying whistled Yunmeng folk tunes outside and checked out the manicured gardens to smell the roses -, to relieve the boy of his pee, both golden and milky white one. After a good and hearty peeing session, Wei Ying lovingly steady the flushed, sated and sleepy boy - sex is relaxing, after all - and helped him back to the dorm on crutches. It's good exercise for the both of us by taking brisk five-minute walks every hour or so, and enjoy some fresh air, Wei Ying admonished the then-future husband whenever the latter complained of being constantly sexually abused by his penis-playing and penis-sucking gege in the brother's office, which is equipped with a portable finely crafted and decorated ceramic urinal pot - a luxury during the era circa 2000 B.C.

Thus, at noon, Lan Zhan was delivered into his gege 's arms on more time so that he could pee in the highly-envious urinal pot inside the brother's office while getting his penis rubbed vigorously and pleased until the last drops of didi -licious semen dribbled weakly into the gege 's swallowing throat, and the two would have a brotherly lunch, that is, a rather unexciting buffet spread of Gusu Lan-inspired cuisine inside the office that Wei Ying gladly skipped with plenty of lame excuses despite getting invited, and he headed off in a hurry to have his own family lunch elsewhere. Lan Zhan would be lovingly hand-fed by his gege , and his overheated dick pleased in better ways during Huan gege 's lunch break, including forcing the boy to make love to his older brother's rosebud - because A-Zhan was ordered to give thanks to those who made their meals and made their days better; one hundred individuals in total, and A-Zhan could only say his thanks until the thirtieth person's name or so, with one heartfelt, balls-deep fuck into Huan gege 's rosebud spread open upon the plush cushioned office chair, for each utterance of gratitude; since A-Zhan orgasmed uncontrollably when he hit his limit of thirty, ejaculating thirty watery squirts out of the tired, nearly limp dick, with gege coo-ing “A-Zhan, you’re such a good boy, be brave and keep trying, push it back in and move your penis into gege ’s loving hole for each worship, that’s it, in and out, in and out, such a good boy, you chanting and moaning loudly because it feels so good pray, doesn’t it?”, he had to start over and say his thanks again to the one hundred people that blessed A-Zhan and Huan gege ’s daily life.

When A-Zhan sniffled and hiccuped because he couldn’t reach one hundred anymore no matter how many times he’d tried, Huan gege relented with a very wide grin, and sought permission to say the prayers on their behalf, so A-Zhan agreed with a woeful look in his eyes. A-Zhan bent over the large office marble desk obediently, pulled his buttocks apart like a good boy, and allowed his gege to drill his didi -licious sixteen-year old tight youthful rosebud with unrestrained, eager joy, one thrust for each prayer, and Huan gege has no problems to achieve fuck number ninety-nine, before pulling out with a ‘Oops, gege made a boo-boo and miscalculated, so let gege start over again’, and went on to make sweet love to the boy’s blossomed anus many, many times, attacking the boys nipples and wildly-swinging penis with greedy, roaming hands, smacking that bouncy bubble butt where their bodies joined repeatedly then stealing kisses from behind the ear and cheeks because gege became lustful from sweet heated molten desire welling up from within the gege ’s excited loins; the boy’s swollen prostate was brutally massaged by the seven-inch monster dick, resulting in heated spurts of didi ’s seed uselessly to the tabletop and to the floor, before Huan gege groaned with such pleasure and satisfaction that the furniture rattled with rhythmic creaks, then one, two, three more hard slams until his massive penis was sheathed by the didi ’s warm and fluttering tunnel, and the taller man roared in the throes of his climax, spilling brotherly semen carelessly deep into A-Zhan, with one last prayer muttered in the hopes that sperm would take root and impregnate the didi ’s eggs somewhere inside.

Huan gege may be a calm person, but he hides the energy and vibrancy of a lively nineteen-year old beneath his gentle facade - and he continued to make love with his younger brother for several more rounds throughout lunch, behind closed soundproofed office doors, where servants and other workers could not see nor hear what lewd, dirty things happen within the heart of the main office building.

.

It would be routine for the next few days, Wei Ying thought, as the family once again shared a meal in the ward where Yan Li was housed, and they talked while eating their fill of hospital food - which wasn't too dreadful, since Jiang Fengmian specially ordered the nurses to prepare something nicer for their family, with added spice, of course. The boys were ravenous and scoffed down the food because it suited their palates better than bland Gusu Lan cuisine, while the father and daughter politely picked on bite-sized morsels.

Time does heal, at least for Yan Li, just as everything else in life moves on, refusing to stay stagnant at one point for too long. She started to smile a little bit more, even had a good nap during the hours between meals, and became more aware about her surroundings - she touched Wei Ying's cheek and Jiang Cheng's head and asked if they still hurt; of which, she received bright smiles as reply - because the glimmer of hope was bursting out into a full-fledged candlelit flame. Jiang Fengmian was busy with interrogations, but he managed to pop by every couple of hours or so to say hello, and give his precious baby girl a fatherly hug that she so deserved. Wei Ying gave his father a praiseworthy nod, because that man started to convince Yan Li to look up and beyond, to see things in a positive light, that getting married to Meng Yao isn't that much different to her former fiancé since both are from the same groom family, and that both hadn't known her well anyway so she might as well start anew with a more mature approach at a more suitable age of getting to knowing her fiancé, his likes and dislikes, his flaws and how to coax him to listen to her when he makes a mistake in their future family household-- that joke made her giggle, and her cheeks pinked at the prospect of getting married to such a silly and fearful man, one that is afraid of his wife and would bow down to please her, which is a befitting description for precious Meng Yao, as far as Jiang Fengmian learned from Nie Mingjue, the sole source of his information about that future son-in-law of his. At some point, she even hinted that she would like to properly have a word with him, alone, to find out more about such a rare, prized specimen of Men, as her father aptly put it, to her delight and more laughter.

Jiang Cheng broached the topic of the pre-engagement rituals and the preparations that are underway, which helped everyone to focus on the happier things of a family member getting married soon, rather than the dark events that happened the day before. Wei Ying chipped in about the situation in the Cloud Recesses, shared about the funny things he'd seen or heard around the dorms, and their blossoming friendship with Huaisang. He also borrowed books from the Library Pavillion not only for Jiang Cheng to read up on his lessons, but also books about Lanling, so that shijie can learn more about her future home and its people, that came with nice drawings and paintings of various famous sites, mountains and valleys, rustic villages and modern, sprawling cities and ivory and gold towers that the province is known for. Yan Li's mood improved as her family supported her in as many ways possible to move forward and prepare for her engagement.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 257

The rest of the day was spent in relative peace, with Wei Ying making pitstops between the dorms to have crazy monkey sex with Lan Zhan and cuddle up in the nude with his darling man (boy), visiting the medical halls to keep abreast with the developments of those recovering in the wards, and getting some fresh air exploring the grounds of the Cloud Recesses where there were less restrictions. During snack and mealtimes and other opportunistic intermittent occasions, Lan Zhan was promptly delivered to his brother's loving arms, where A-Zhan was able to spend quality time in the student affairs' office manned by Huan gege where the prized urinal pot was located, before the couple reunited for more leisure strolls through open gardens and beautiful pondside farms, returning to the dorms when it got too hot or windy outside.

Everyone was recovering fast, thanks to the healing magic of the Gusu Lan. By the end of Day Two, Jiang Cheng's head bandage was taken off after a series of healing spells cast by triads of Gusu Lan cultivators aimed like blue ethereal laser lights at his scalp - the modern-day equivalent to microsurgery, stem-cell therapy, and accelerated qi transplantation as a convenient all-in-one package. Huaisang too, enjoyed a speedy recuperation due to his elite status, and had six beautiful Lan jiejie s attending to him with their blue laser lights, and he didn't look like a mummy anymore after that. Wei Ying quickly threw away his medical dressing on the cheek, and applied some mud mixed with grounded grass to imitate a nasty bruise on the mend; likewise, Lan Zhan ditched the bandage around his ankle but kept a patch of gauze there for show - the then-future wife ordered the darling man (boy) not to discard the crutches just yet, because having his Huan gege look after and fuss over him with brotherly love was convenient, and that takes a load off Wei Ying's shoulders too.

Wei Ying noted groups of Imperial cultivators - easily recognizable by their dragon-themed uniforms and armour - were seen stationed around certain buildings to guard conferences and interrogations being held behind closed doors, or storehouses containing relics and old, ancient documents that were being investigated. Their presence did not cause any scene, people generally ducked and quickly moved out of sight, and all disciples were on their best behaviour after what happened the evening before. In addition, the Gusu Lan administration office did a laudable job in keeping everyone informed using noticeboards, such as posting the numbers of disciples wardened in the medical halls versus those that have checked-out after given the clean bill of relative health, list of chapters that students should read up during their free time, mealtime menus at the dining halls, opening hours of various offices helpful for the student disciples, and even a list of clans who had delayed their arrivals due to some kind of escalating situation in Caiyi Town and the surrounding areas of the Cloud Recesses - including the Qishan Wen.

By Day Three, Meng Yao was awake and he was formally introduced to Jiang gu niang and briefed by Team Nie and Team Jiang about what had happened, and how his fate would change in the coming days. Meng Yao was astonished but kept a polite silence to digest the incredible fortunes that befall him - he, a lowly servant born out of wedlock, with nothing to his name except a lifetime of servitude to masters, was recognized by the greatest, richest sect known in the country, and bequeathed a beautiful wife. However, before he was able to fully process the turnaround of his destiny, Jiang Yan Li had a little mishap and tripped over a wooden basin on the floor of the ward, and Meng Yao - despite his injurious wounds and the pain seen flashing across his face in gritted teeth and grimace - dove to the floor to catch her in his arms.

It was a momentous event, from what Wen Ying saw - the two stared at each other for a full minute, stunned to silence, and some kind of electricity must have passed between their locked gazes, rising blushes and the contact of heated skin. By the time Meng Yao kept apologizing for the gu niang 's alarm and distress - of which he was totally not guilty of, but he kept saying Sorrys anyway -, and patted her dress clean of dust, then checked her ankles and wrists to make sure that she didn't sprain anything other than his own waist - probably, because he was so small and short compared to her former fiance -, and she actually laughed it off to tell the man almost the same age as her, that everything's alright, and Thank You for his kind save.

There were many nods, nudges and appraising and pleased looks sent back and forth, and soon, both Teams quietly left the two to have a heart-to-heart talk, with Wei Ying beaming his widest non-A.S.S.-influenced smile ever.

Day Four rolled by, with nothing much happening as usual for the most part of the day. Wei Ying stopped putting on his make-up bruises, and continued to dawdle with family, friends and lots o' sex because sweet Guan Yin, he loved his raging teen hormones and the incredible surge of lust that needed to be sated almost every hour or so - and had the entire dorm unit meant for four for himself and his favourite darling penis; he almost stopped referring Lan Zhan as a man (boy) because all that mattered was to have that meatstick screwed deeply into his ass to make him see rainbows and stars.

At dinnertime, the heads of Nie, Jiang and Jin had a meal to commemorate their shared friendship and prosperity, which also became Meng Yao's coming-of-age ceremony to have his service to the Nie clan terminated, so that he becomes a new, free man to live as a rightful son of the Lanling Jin. The dinner function was private and included only key invitees to keep out as many curious eyes and ears as possible, and to keep it low-key as well, for obvious reasons. Wei Ying wasn't invited, but that didn't stop him from giving shijie a brotherly kiss to her cheer her up and boost her spirits before she walked through those heavy teakwood doors to formally meet her future father-in-law, in a back-to-back series of traditional, elaborate though simplified rituals and ceremonies where Jiang Cheng also played a role to give her away to Meng Yao, where Jiang Fengmian toasted to his future in-law Jin Guangshan, and thanked Nie Mingjue and Nie Huaisang for the Nie's gracious acceptance and kindness throughout the tumultuous changes in aligning the sects' respective family trees and branching lines. Everyone was dressed for the occasion, the sect leaders and their successors being garbed in their finest and most distinguished sect regalia and accessories, while Meng Yao draped an extra golden robe to indicate his new allegiance, and Jiang Yan Li in her purple robes that she'd also wore on the way to the Cloud Recesses a few nights ago.

Wei Ying had slipped another Paperman into shijie 's bra so that he could watch the procession and proceedings live. He didn't really understand the rituals or their significance other than to tickle the fancy for those who appreciate those elaborate gestures; such as, having Huaisang to draw a papercut on his right thumb to ink his bloody thumbprint onto a parchment that bore unintelligible ancient Nie manuscripts and saber patterns, followed by Meng Yao, and the latter was asked to kneel before the Nie brothers and bow before them three times in gratitude and serve them the best of Qinghe's rice wines, before all three men threw their cups to the floor with such gusto, and the breakage of the porcelain probably signified the severance of Meng Yao's final links to the Nie family; then, following yet another ancient ritual that Jiang Cheng had practised many times earlier that day, he had to hold his A-Jie 's hand gracefully, and almost in a trance-like state, moved smoothly like a dance eight steps in particular directions, bowing three times to each sect leader and whispered some intense words that Wei Ying guessed held no meaning other than to satisfy traditions, followed by lighting incense sticks, exchanging platters of fruits, cups of tea and wine, and more bows to figurines, bowls of water, bundles of lotus flower and seeds, even a brazier lit up with a small fire, and other prayer items that the Jiang jiejie s had prepared earlier as a recognition of the Yunmeng Jiang's paganistic roots.

Finally, Meng Yao and Jiang Yan Li knelt before their fathers and future father-in-laws, with Jiang Cheng and the Nie brothers at the side watching on solemnly to the end of the ceremony. Wei Ying observed as well, as though he was watching a fascinating documentary on ancient tribal traditions and religious rites circa 2000 B.C., and he noticed, in particular - because he was hiding inside shijie 's bra - how Jin Guangshan stared and marvelled at her abundant bosoms when she bowed low enough until her milky alabaster chest was in full view; the curvy crevice between twin plump teenage mounds seemed to seduced the dirty old man who could already be a grandfather at that age, and Wei Ying shivered in slight disgust at how the Sect Leader licked his lips and nodded in approval at what he'd seen with his own glimmering, hungry and roving eyes, that seemed to roam up and down Yan Li's body like a wolf licking its captured living prey, invisibly raking, clawing, peeling off her dress with his obscene imaginations, layer by layer. Meng Yao remained rather reticent and polite, keeping a genteel smile carved onto his face and proper mannerisms as dictated by the rituals, and behaved courteously towards Yan Li at all times, as he frequently sneaked glances at her direction to make sure that she was comfortable and not too tensed - but he failed to detect and discern what his blood-father was seeing, and thought that both sect leaders were generally delighted by the arrangement, which he falsely believed to be a stroke of his own good luck.

Unsurprisingly, at the end of the ceremony, Jin Guangshan made an unexpected announcement that he had to leave after dinner to attend to important matters of his sect, such as brewing troubles in his province, signing of important trade deals, and chairing his sect's own cultivation council - reasons related to internal affairs which the other two sect leaders would not question nor verify the validity. Moreover, the exhaustive rounds of interviews by the Imperial police and their cultivators have concluded, at least for the sect leaders, so he should leave soon as he is pressed for time.

"My dear Yan Li," he addressed her like a gentleman - which is very uncharacteristic indeed - and held her hand so that she may rise from the floor, "Why don't you follow you future Tie ... err.. May I...?" he quickly turned to Jiang Fengmian with a bright and cultured smile, as though he held a precious treasure in his hand - implying that he would treasure the woman like his daughter, just as how her own parents would; surely, Jiang Fengmian could not refuse such a respectful and parental gesture, so the Jiang sect leader nodded to allow the conversation to proceed as the Jin sect leader wished, so the latter returned to face his future daughter-in-law, “Yan Li, let Tie take you on his fairytale horse carriage tonight back to the Carp Tower, so that you don’t have to stay here any longer than needed in this rather sparse, dusty patch of ground in the middle of mountains. You’re such a good girl, civil and cultured in your manners, refined and kind in your attitude, tie cannot wait to take you to meet your future family where you will be loved and cherished.”

The smile is greasy, shijie , he’s gonna eat you alive, that Papa Wolf! Wei Ying clicked his tongue in annoyance, as a mere Paperman crinkling uselessly inside the soft bra material.

Jiang Yan Li was taken aback by the sudden change in plans and the bold advances made by her future father-in-law, so she wasn’t sure how to respond, and looked back and forth between the two sect leaders with uncertainty in her eyes.

“Yan Li,” the voice was low and persuasive, “The rituals dictate that you need complete the engagement ceremony in the heartland of the Jin within days after the pre-engagement with my true son Meng Yao tonight,” and he gave a nod to the small man who blushed and smiled sheepishly at the uncalled-for immense recognition - as though he’d been elevated to one of high importance - so Meng Yao kept his head low, obsessed in following his blood-father’s awe-inspiring commands, “The ceremony is much more complicated than what you see this evening, and it’s best for you to have a head start rather than idling your time here. Tie wants a blessed and successful engagement ceremony as much as your blood-father do, and I’m sure it’s the same for Meng Yao too. Tie ’s horse carriage is sturdy and fast, and we should reach the Carp Tower in less than two days, god willing. It’s a wonderful opportunity to meet the rest of the Jin family and spend time getting to know them. I'm sure my wives, that is, your future mother-in-laws, would be most delighted to taste your cooking and to share with you our family traditions too. Isn't that right, o' parent of my sweet daughter-in-law?"

Jin Guangshan's toothy grin gave Wei Ying the creeps, but Jiang Fengmian wasn't too good at handling such over-courteousness, plus everyone became a little awkward and too quiet mainly from the Jin sect leader's choice of very flowery and polite words. Jiang Fengmian finally relented after looking around and seeing that none of the men in the room could help him, so he nodded hastily with resigned 'Yes, yes, yes'-es. With the seal of approval in Jin Guangshan's grasp, he shot Jiang Fengmian with an expectant, impatient look. The man had no choice but to add icing to Jin Guangshan's cake and put a shiny cherry on top (for the latter to pop, later).

"My daughter," Jiang Fengmian addressed an uncomfortable-looking Jiang Yan Li, "What your father-in-law said is correct. There's no need for you to remain or to study here since your new family is keen to welcome you in their arms. The journey on a horse carriage will be comfortable, and I'm sure your father-in-law will keep you safe. It's a great chance to get to know your new family better, and A- Tie wants that for you," he parroted the words mouthed by the other man because what else could he say to alleviate his baby girl's anxiety?, "You'll stay at the Carp Tower for about a couple of weeks as agreed, and you can always come back to the Lotus Pier after that, if you miss your mum's cooking or your family and friends' smiles. The wedding ceremony will only take place later the year, therefore there's no rush other than to settle down with your new family, warm up to each other's hearts, so that the transition after your marriage will be smoother, and A- Tie will finally be relieved that you'll be in a place where you belong, cherished and loved, always."

With such hopeful promises given, and approval consented by both sides, Jiang Yan Li couldn't refuse - and she also smiled, because it seemed to be the right thing to do. Meng Yao reached out to hold her hand with a kind smile, which further reassured her racing heart that she was treading towards a new future, a new tomorrow, a new beginning, starting tonight.

Jiang Cheng sniffled and shed a tear, Huaisang did the same for no other reason than to be shaken by such an emotional scene unravelling in front of boys too young to understand how cruel and vile the world is.

Not long after, servants filed into the private banquet room in an exclusive dining building set aside by the Gusu Lan, as gracious hosts of such a historic meeting. Dinner was opulent, unlike the usual cuisine served by the Lan, because the rich and well-equipped Jin jiejie s manned the kitchens to make sure the sect leaders ate their fill, drank enough wines and had a fair share of merry-making to celebrate, in some ways, the end of their time in the picturesque but dreary, boring, and work-only Cloud Recesses.

Wei Ying also had dinner at the same time, in Huan gege 's room together with the Lan brothers, where the host was gracious enough to order some spicy food for that endearing A-Xian, as he started to get to know his lil' brother's best friend better. Wei Ying ate well that evening and had fun talking about all sorts of subjects including the wedding traditions of the Jiang and Lan clans.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 258

“Wei Ying, you’re not asleep.”

“How can I? It’s past ten at night, the carriage has left along with shijie . My dad and Jiang Cheng had been busy packing shijie ’s stuff from the medical halls right after their banquet, and I ran there to pass them the rest of her belongings from this dorm. It was like giving her away, as an older brother, though sadly, my importance in this whole story and her fate seems rather inconsequential and insignificant. My heart’s still beating fast from all that running, you know, and I couldn’t even say good-bye.”

“Why didn’t you?”

“Why should I, and what could I say, hiding and peeking from behind the bushes at the courtyard, with only key sect members allowed to attend her departure? Seein’ Meng Yao on horseback with a bunch of Jin goons setting off first, before the carriage finally made its move - which is so goddamn fishy I’m surprised why nobody sounded the alarm... ‘opening the path for the father and his beloved wife’, Jin Guangshan said to spur Meng Yao to ride his steed ahead, my ass!

Did’ya notice how gentlemanly Jin Guangshan seemed when inviting shijie into his fortified carriage with that lewd smile on that moustached face? It sickens me to the pit of my stomach, because that reminds me of bride-snatching scenes. Oh, and before that, the dirty old uncle kept putting his hand on her waist and thighs during dinner because he was seated next to her, which made her quite uncomfortable, but my dad simply dismissed it and pretended not to see anything, and even said that she should respect the Jin's culture and societal norms, whatever that means. That same waist-grabbing habit continued the moment she set foot into the carriage, because Jin Guangshan made her sit away from the door and put himself between her and the exit, with one hand tight around her waist and those fingers slid down to her hips and massaged her buttocks when the door closed with a click !”

“... It doesn't make sense. Why would Meng Yao be sent off ahead of the caravan?”

“He's gonna get beaten up by his escorts, you fool, that's what! I saw the way they grinned and sniggered at him, the way he was still bandaged, hobbling towards the horse, and needed assistance to be hoisted up and steadied on the saddle... they're gonna run him into a bush and kick his injured ass! Then they're gonna stage a show and say that bandits attacked 'em en route to the Carp Tower, and this will disgrace A-Yao's tattered reputation for good, as a newborn half-prince of the vast Jin empire. This kind of fate is worse than being Huaisang's servant!”

“And your shijie ?”

“I'm watchin' a degrading and awful porn video right now even as we speak. Barely two minutes after the carriage left the entrance gates to the Cloud Recesses, Grandpa Jin is gloating at his latest prize, and has his hands all over her struggling naked body. Her clothes have been forcibly ripped into shreds, he's kissing and licking her private parts like an old perv... yuck! He likes to stick his tongue into her flowerbud and suckle her clitty like a nipple until she accidentally squirted out pee... that's so shameful! But damn, he's an experienced old fox! He sure knows how to kiss young, inexperienced maidens with his greasy lips, grab and massage their milky titties, whisper lustful and perverse, sick lies into their ears, before going down between the legs to eat ‘em out like a pro.

Five minutes in, shijie is already drowning in unwanted pleasures of illicit love from her tie tie , but he knows how to manipulate her feelings and words using threats and religion, such as that it’s a god-given right for a patriarch to taste his new daughter-in-law before the son, or that she must submit to the teachings of the patriarch, which includes accepting lessons on how to make love and pleasure a man by her father-in-law; if she struggles or protests, she’d be doing the Jiang family a disservice and disgrace her future family, and the angered gods will send droughts and disease to the lands.

Ten minutes past, that dirty old man’s already spread her thighs and violated her flowerbud, sticking his dick happily in and out of that cunt with that wicked dreamy look on his face and victorious laughter echoing out from within the carriage. He’s already forced himself on shijie and started impregnating her against her will, because that old man’s making grandchildren inside his daughter-in-law! Sweet Buddhas on bulldozers, this grandpa’s has more stamina than most warriors I’ve known and his daddy bod is well-muscled even for his age, no wonder he’s said to be able to pin down thirty feisty resisting women at once, and bed them at the same time, to earn himself thirty sons each night, whenever he’s with his harem. He’s a born mass rapist, a criminal of all women, that’s for sure!”

“Calm down, Wei Ying. It’s just a porn video, as you say. You can’t do anything from here, in our shared bed, with guards patrolling outside the dorms during curfew. Relax.”

“Yeah... you’re right, lao gong , I should just detach myself and disassociate from any longing feelings I still have for her right now, otherwise I won’t be able to get any shut-eye. My Paperman did that, and after her bra was torn, I quickly hid under the lounging chairs that transformed into a king-sized bed equipped with straps and ropes, with a push of a lever... that scheming granddad that speaks with a forked tongue, he tricked her as soon as she sat in the carriage, because shijie believed she’d get a safe, speedy passage to the Carp Tower!

He’s such a wolfish fox, that Grandpa. He easily pushed her legs up and speared her between the legs in one swoop, despite her protests, screams and kicks. He could’ve just taken his pleasure just like that... but no, he likes to degrade women. When she kept trying to instinctively close her thighs while being plundered, which is a futile act anyway, Grandpa Jin duped her and claimed, with an oily grin, that the more she tried to close her legs, the faster he’d cum - of course she was horrified because no maiden wants to have dirty old men shaking with drooling, dreamy looks on their faces while locked between their legs. So she was tricked to spread her ass, legs and pussy as wide as possible, and Grandpa Jin couldn’t be more pleased at the unhindered access to her innermost sanctuary. He attacked her flowerbud so strongly, that she cried out in pain... that dog!

When shijie realized her folly, because that Grandpa really showed his drooling and dreamy face while pistoning very excitedly into her ruined pussy, she really fought back and started kicking and clawing. Then, he warned that the more she moved and squirmed around, the better it felt for his loins, and that he was going to unload inside her - because it was her fault for seducing him with such energetic movements. Of course she was terrified again and remained still, if only to catch her breath, with her legs widely splayed apart. Then Grandpa Jin bellowed his evil laughter at deceiving his daughter-in-law once more, and growled that it was she who spread her legs for him, and stilled so that he could rob her gone-virginity again and again, and he went ahead on full steam to rip into her womb with his boner! Horrible, I tell you, it’s horrible, the way shijie wept pitifully when she realized it was too late, because Grandpa Jin pressed her into the bed right to the hilt, hands grasping her hips so hard that they left bruising fingerprints, and he started pumping and jerking very strongly, moaning incoherently into her ashamed ears and cheeks about how good it feels to cum inside his in-law's little girl, with a tongue wiggling inside her ear canal like a smelly old man in the throes of his orgasm, and she felt nearly forty splats of warm, gooey wetness fountaining and filling up her moist insides.

And you know what? The horses slowed as soon as they started the descent from the mountaintop, and at this rate, they'll only reach their destination not in two, but maybe three or five days' time! He'll plant another one or two more babes in her belly by then!"

"... you mean, fraternal twins and triplets... but how? Isn't she with your child by now?"

"You uninformed old fart! Didn't you get sex education from your erudite teachers... oh wait, nevermind. From my Paperman's vantage point, I'm gettin' a good look at a wrinkled, veiny but impressively thick hairy penis drilling her soaked fluttering pussy, the same way his tongue moves inside her mouth, then how his fingers grope and knead her breasts and other erogenous zones on her squirming body. I tip my hat to that old man, he's a maestro at sex, and shijie 's weepin', gaspin', moanin' and cryin' at the same time in forced pleasure, like a whore. That's a big difference from when she was kicking and screaming at having her modesty outraged against her will, when that grandpa started undressing her early on; he'd muffled her shouts for help when they were still close to town, but once they were a good distance away, he simply chuckled and asked the carriage driver to take his time and allowed shijie to plead for her life and innocence until her voice was hoarse; but of course, the entire caravan crew works for Jin Guangshan as accomplice, so nobody would hear her screams anyway as that pervert savoured shijie like ambrosia of the gods. He knows where to touch and how to move his hips, so shijie ceased struggling or protesting as much once she started feelin' it, and she became more more docile, pliant, obedient to allow this dirty old man to rape her to his heart's desire.

Oh fuck, seein' that dirty old grandpa use that abominable Eight Sexy Stirring Vibrations technique with his hips... shit, he's good. That means he's got an iron-hard eight-inch monster erection lodged deep inside her and he's making these crazy grinding shakes that rattle everything, even the flow of qi in the air, that my Paperman is starting to lose its grip from the bed. In no time, her body would become so excited and lustful from all that excess sexual energies radiating from where that illicit couple is entwined, forcing her ovaries to squeeze out like an inverting a teat and release a few more eggs while she's still in her fertile period, and that monster dick speared into her womb will soon shoot its happy milk and make another baby in there, conceived from the perverted horny Jin Guangshan and my shijie ! Sheesh... I hate it when others beat me in the game of sex and baby-making...!"

“There you go again. Breathe in, and out. Let's talk about the future, since right now, too much is happening with your shijie . What happens next?”

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 259

“Hmm... with Meng Yao getting his ass beaten up and maybe left to die somewhere in the mountains, I’m sure Grandpa Jin will take his sweet time to taste the freshly impregnated pussy before her husband does - if ever -, and induct shijie into his harem. I’ve heard in a previous lifetime that Grandpa Jin likes ‘em sweet and tender, like delicate ripening loquats of thirteen and fourteen-year old virgins, so shijie is a bit like a jar of matured fine wine that he’ll like to sample and sip from time to time, rather than wolf down the entire cup in a single gulp. He’ll honour his diabolical words to teach her the immoral joys of father-daughter sex, and the shameful art of playing with and pleasuring older men, in his sordid bedroom once they arrive at the Carp Tower. He’ll threaten and silence her with lame excuses that she won’t be able to handle on her own, like spreading news that she was raped or that she’s a whore that seduced Meng Yao, and all that. So, she’ll likely remain in the Carp Tower and away from the limelight for a while, spending time riding Grandpa Jin on the man’s sex-stinked bed to keep him pleased and happy inside her juicy flooded pregnant cunt, and avoid triggering his deadly wrath. She’ll still send Fairy Messenger calls to my dad to say that she’s happy living there, because did you see how hopeful my dad was with the whole arrangement? She won’t want to break his heart.

Before you know it, Grandpa Jin would’ve found other pretty lil’ toys to play with, knowing how his brains and loins work. Without Meng Yao in the picture, she’ll be passed around the princes in the Carp Tower like that sex doll I mentioned earlier. If the future that we know is anything to go by, no Jin women would want to befriend or help her, and they’d rather see her becoming the next favourite sex slave in the harem. Even Jin Guangshan’s first wife would want to keep the girls in line to avoid any problems from arising, and shijie has such a low standing among the females since she lacks a decent husband, that she’s better off being kept for breeding purposes and for keeping the Jin men happy in the loins, for the rest of her sad life.”

“... Wei Ying, you truly have such a vivid foresight. I’m impressed and shocked to have no words in response.”

“I do, don’t I?”

“Mn. Yes, you do. Ah, you’re smiling. Good. Now let’s go to sleep.”

Wei Ying snuggles up with his favourite sexy darling man (boy), feeling lightened after baring his soul and his deep-seated concerns to his spouse. The room is empty save for the two, and tonight, it feels somewhat even emptier than usual, and a little cold to the touch. Lan Zhan embraces his then-future wife, and places a wooly blanket over them.

(Meanwhile, Wei Ying’s shijie continues to suffer in the hands of her new father-in-law. In a rare moment of conscious clarity, she woke up with her tied up in ropes to four corners of the carriage’s ceiling; her hands were placed above her head, and her legs spread-eagled and hips held up like a tasty morsel for Jin Guangshan to enjoy all night with his lips, tongue, fingers and that tool of mass terror between his legs. He’d pump a few spoonfuls into her, then withdraw, tired and sleepy, relaxed from orgasming many times in a row and letting his happy manhood remain inside her with gentle in-and-outs, and engage in lewd play by telling her bed time stories of how his seed makes its way into her fertile garden to grow roots, nurtured by her love and warmth, and soon, babies would sprout like fresh young shoots out of the ground, while massaging her breasts because he has a fetish for soft curves and mounds.

She endures the humiliation when mirrors are revealed on the ceiling and facing her exposed crotch, and she watches in horror while weeping in shame, how Grandpapa Jin uses his fingers to wipe up excess semen that had spurted off-tangent to streak across her sweaty belly, then inserts that sperm-slicked finger into her pussy and coat her clitty with that slimy, cooling and crusting milky substance. He'd massage her inner walls, scissor them to stretch her drenched birth canal when two or more digits plundered her inner sanctuary; he's tell her more dirty stories that he wants her to accept every single drop of his fatherly love, and that if she refuses, he'd break all promises and reveal to the world what had happened to her, and throw her out into the streets. That sort of threat shut her up effectively, and she cringed and grimaced in discomfort while her vulnerable, defenceless womanhood was inseminated again and again. Sometimes he forcefully kisses her cheeks and licks away the tears from her eyes, and tells her, "Look, look at the mirror at that side, watch how tie tie plays with your cunny and pulls out dollops of thick ejaculated sperm from your gaping pussy. It's like whisked egg whites... see, it stretches like webs, and now, tie tie will put it back inside you... tickle, tickle, tie tie wants to tickle tickle your cunny with his fingers again..."

As if that isn't enough, Grandpapa Jin whips out a Q-tip cotton swab and dips it into her spread-open flowerbud, then tunnels it into her pee-hole. He's very experienced in the female genitalia and had no problems sticking that semen-soaked lolly into her urethra, where he twists it like a vortex and moves it in a circular motion, until she cried out from a hot, aching, irritable sensation welling out from her bladder. Grandpapa mocked her, and accused her of being immature and underaged despite her good looks, and fucked her pee hole with the swab like an erect penis would. He teased her nerve bundles and g-spots with the finger that continued to search, locate and attack her weakest pleasurable areas inside her vagina, until she moaned very inappropriately and squirted pee straight into Grandpapa's hands.

With all the time in his grubby hands and nothing else to do inside the gently swaying carriage other than to sexually abuse and torment the squirming, hapless maiden in his arms, the dirty Grandpa played with his daughter-in-law's pee hole to his heart's desire, inserting more semen into the perky shuddering pinprick of a slit, shovelling rich viscous seed and packing the narrow tunnel then scrubbing its length with that accursed soggy cotton swab, until she sobbed and hiccuped with such shame that she had to pull a blanket over her head to cover her face, because the urge to pee became too strong from the convulsions wracking her swollen genitals, and then that terrible grandfather performed his finale of vibrating his tongue over that massively distended pee hole until it couldn't hold back, couldn't rein in the undulating waves of muscular contractions, and started to spasm uncontrollably despite her best efforts to suppress the boiling desires and very good feelings from her tortured lower body, and sprayed explosively into a laughing old man's mouth.

Grandpapa Jin became highly aroused and twisted in his perversion, as evidenced from his gleeful, soiled and flushed face, and, he licked his lips to show that he wasn't disgusted but he was, in fact, very, very much eager to play with her body until the last thread of her sanity broke. Leaving the swab deeply lodged in her shivering pee-hole, he proceeded to mount her again and again with his steel-hard penis. He roared with joy that he is blessed to be presented with such a pretty sexy maiden born of her naive parents, and he praised her cunny for keeping old men like him virile and energized; he demonstrated her how men in their forties orgasmed while looming above her, his bronzed, tanned muscular body slithered and slid wildy, hips slamming with powerful shudders, the old man's flesh blossoming to reds in sexual excitement, and very, very excitedly, he crammed his crotch against her and howled with great satisfaction, shouting obscenities and demeaning words such as ' Tie Tie loves your cunt so much! Your cunny makes tie tie so happy tonight!', 'You should be grateful to be tie tie 's whore! That's your purpose in life from now on!' and 'You like it, don't you? You like it when tie tie inserts his naughty penis into your naughty hairy pussy! Show tie tie how much you like being fucked into the bed by tie tie !'. He made it known, visually and audibly, that he'd achieved what every Man seeks in his lifetime - to sow his seed deep into willing and unwilling females so that his vile, fearsome lineage will prosper, flooding her insides with wet, gooey and opaque-milky warmth that Jiang Yan Li found to be overwhelmingly disgusting and extremely disconcerting that she started to cry pitifully, until that cotton swab lodged inside her struck something electrifying and she moaned, grunted, forced to enjoy those terribly pleasurable sensations radiating from inside her pelvis in rhythmic squeezing pulses, with her captor bellowing out hearty triumphant laughter in his conquest of siring more sons and daughters throughout the night.)

.

The next morning, there was a flurry of activities. Sect Leaders and their entourages on flying swords were seen off by a very busy Master Lan Qi Ren and the elites of the Lan family, as the meetings, interviews and interrogations have concluded, with cheers to everyone to take a much-deserved break of, say, two weeks as dictated by Sect Leader and self-proclaimed chief of the attending sects, Jin Guangshan, on a formal announcement printed on the Grand Cultivation Council letterhead, issued just the night before; the reason for this pause being that the man had 'some family issues' to attend to. The Sect Leaders were requested to convene at the Carp Tower after that two-week period.

Thus, during that morning, all eyes were on the other sects, with disciples waving good-byes to their patriarchs and fellow comrades, holding bags of souvenirs and home-cooked food sent from afar to last them for the duration of their stay in the Cloud Recesses to listen to the lectures of the Gusu Lan. Little attention was paid to what happened to their gracious host, who has provided commendable hospitality, meals and board for the past three or so days to these famous and powerful men and their followers.

Lan Xi Chen was caught up in a pre-dawn raid of the Cold Springs close to the Jingshi, where an entire patch of forest was mowed down overnight and a secret entrance to a cave that nobody knew, was discovered within the freezing, cascading spring waters by Imperial cultivators in the darkness of the night. He failed to stop them from entering the sacred grounds, but he had no real reason to because he didn't even know that there was such a cave, let alone what family secrets it kept, until he was rudely awakened by rumbling sounds of excavations carried out too close to his room. Being too late to the scene, unfortunately, Xi Chen had to remain outside the blockade in the chilly night, in a state of confusion and shock, but he kept his air of calm and persistently tried to win over the poker-faced Imperial guards with the prevailing sensibilities that visitors, such as the Imperial forces, should not carelessly pry into their host's private matters, in this case, the Gusu Lans' backyards; however, armed servicemen that serve the Imperial Court hold little regard for other sects, so they did not respond to Xi Chen's toothless threats of re-education in the do's and don'ts of host and guest relations.

A little before four in the morning, when most of the residents in the Cloud Recesses were fast asleep and therefore there was no one to assist the increasingly tired and taxed Xi Chen, the Imperial cultivators emerged from the underground cave with triumph etched in their faces and something glowing in a pouch, and they left without saying a word. Exhausted Xi Chen was downtrodden and was at a loss for words and thoughts for what happened - a blasphemous mark for the Gusu Lan sect, and a big ugly hole dug behind his didi's backyard -, and by the time he returned to his room before five at dawn when roosters would soon start crowing, he staggered to bed, not noticing a letter left on his desk that urgently informed him of Meng Yao's sudden departure, signed by the same dear friend whom he held dearly in his heart.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 260

Day Five is declared as an unofficial holiday, at least for the disciples studying at the Cloud Recesses. The student affair's office is closed for the day, Gusu Lan instructors and elders take the day off from a terribly busy morning, and following that, a long weekend shall pass, before classes resume the following week. As far as the students are concerned, the schedule is fine as they've had an interesting Week One of lockdowns, rumours about a murder that seemed to have died off on their own, a student brawl that left many hospitalized and spending most of the week in bed, a three-day visit by their patriarchs from Days Two to Four akin to Parents-Teachers Days, and for the rest, a good chance to explore the town, get to know the locals, and prepare for their studies in advance.

Wei Ying and Jiang Cheng had bid Jiang Fengmian and his followers farewell before the grand old Jiang Patriarch left on a return flight on First Class FeiEx back to the Lotus Pier. The family of remaining three group-hugged and exchanged heartwarming words, with Jiang Cheng bawling not-so-uncharacteristically as a boy because he'd also completed the tasks for his A-Jie's pre-engagement - a great accomplishment for the thirteen-year old successor of the Jiang clan to see off his sister, a watershed moment that signified his coming-of-age because jiejie will no longer be around to watch him grow up to be a fine man, and another stripe on his fledgling badge.

(A quick check on the semen and juice-stained piece of Paperman; Wei Ying learned that after a fitful night's sleep and just about ten hours after seeing shijie climbing onboard her fairytale carriage to Jin wonderland, she already carried her second child in her belly after the successful insemination from the much-maligned Eight Sexy Stirring Vibrations techniques performed unto her helpless womb, and dirty old gloating Grandpa Jin continued to wreck her cum-flooded pussy, missionary style, upon the surprisingly durable, high-quality king-sized bed within the creaking carriage, aiming for a third offspring. They had parked the carriage a little off-trail in the dense mountain bushes and away from any prying eyes from passer-by travellers, and Grandpapa Jin kept moaning how much he liked dipping into cups of matured fine wines like hers, sweet, aromatic, delicate and fragrant, again and again until he roars and ejaculates his forty spurts very, very excitedly inside her, and yet, that old and very experienced pornstar is still going hard and strong because he enjoys bedding women with young, soft flesh with firm pussy grasps - he's slowly teaching his daughter-in-law the right way of pleasing a man, and what better way than for them to flip over upon the bed, his arms behind his head, and he watches with roving, hungry eyes, how a daughter-in-law should sway and dance her hips seductively while riding a man's very happy penis to the heavens above, grinding back and forth, as deeply as possible to warm the shuddering, delightful tool where it belongs, reaching back with her fingers to play with his hairy, wrinkled but bouncing overjoyed balls, coaxing the old man to breed her pussy because she belongs to him simply because it's Jin Guangshan's god-given right from henceforth.

The dirty moustached and wrinkled perv gets an eyeful of how freshly-broken maidens orgasm shamelessly, driven mad by sex-crazed insanity of cresting climaxes, squealing like sows and shaking like a vibrating cocksleeve around his almighty tool of mass reproduction, blossoming with red flushes sweeping from her belly to her heaving chest, and to her face that spells drunken, mind-blown pleasures, of closed eyes and slackened jaws, shameless, totally a shameless slut enjoying having wicked, immoral sexual intercourse with her father-in-law even before she consummated her relationship with her future husband; and with just a curl of finger, she obeys her new favourite Grandpapa, and leans forward so that Grandpapa can play with her titties, grabbing them in tandem with each heartfelt fuck penetrating through her destroyed hymen, her breached cervix, kissing the freshly fertilized eggs now growing into new lives and coating them with more hearty jets of Grandpapa's milky seed, and Jin Guangshan enjoys making demeaning kissy lips to demand to be breastfed, and he gets two lovely mounds of Jiang Yan Li slapping against his face, because those milkjugs looked so sexy to the old man who dreams of stealing his babies' milk from their young mothers, so he kneads and paws at her bosom, violently sucking on the nipples until bitemarks and fingerprints decorated the areolae, just as lust fanned out to flame the Grandpapa's loins again and another volley of delicious molten forty-spurts begin their countdown, ready to launch and propel themselves straight into the maiden's lost innocence like a direct payload delivered to where it belongs.)

Wei Ying was a little distracted throughout the farewell, and Jiang Fengmian remarked, mistakenly, that the sixteen-year old boy felt that way because of the lack of sleep - who could sleep well when his shijie was, in some way, stolen and snatched away by a new family without adequate preparations by the mind and heart? - and that he wasn't invited to participate in the pre-engagement ceremony nor to see her off straight after dinner, for political reasons that Wei Ying begrudgingly accepted - because Wei Ying was considered an outcast of the family, in the eyes of patriarchal traditions, and wouldn't be considered as pivotal in such hastily conducted ceremonies. The fatherly figure gave Wei Ying a hug, and promised to smoothen all creases and release and relinquish unfulfilled feelings, once Yan Li had settled down in the Carp Tower for her engagement ceremony over there, about two weeks from now. He would invite Yan Li to return to the Lotus Pier so that at least the siblings can say their good-byes properly once they've finished their studies, help her to pack her belongings from home, and spend their last days together as the famous Yunmeng Trio before she is finally wedded off to her husband and her Happy Ever After, then permanently relocated to the Carp Tower.

(No need, dad, Wei Ying mumbled inside. By week two, she'll have been brainwashed and turned into Jin Guangshan's sex slave with baby number four or five bouncing in her oversized pregnant belly - the presence of Meng Yao, whether as a survivor or a husband who managed to claw his way back to the Carp Tower, is inconsequential. She'll not want to return to the Lotus Pier, having grown the roots for her babies from the bedroom of that dirty Grandpapa and that she'd been signed up into his harem. Two weeks, Wei Ying growled wordlessly, do you know how much damage can happen to a woman in two weeks, in the hands of that super stallion pornstar grand-daddy rapist Jin Guangshan? The Sect Leader's even announced that two week holiday for himself, and d'ya think it's for some kind of mundane family matters? No, dad, he's gonna spend two weeks having fun playing with his grandpa dick inside your baby girl, and 'used goods' won't even cut it once you see her remnant leftover physical and mental state, two weeks from now.)

Jiang Fengmian left after saying that he'll pass on any messages he receives from his precious baby girl, hopefully in a couple of days' time (Gone, defiled, devoured, thoroughly violated and owned by the grandpa. You willingly delivered that precious baby girl into those dirty old man's hands, in the hopes of a shotgun wedding would save her dignity, but in the end, she's a lost cause, Wei Ying thought). With that, peace seemed to reign the dorms occupied by the Jiang sect, at least for Day Five through to the weekend.

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

Day Five is a day of recovery and reconciliation. Thanks to the frequent healing sessions provided by blue laser-shooting healers from the Gusu Lan sect, by the afternoon, Jiang Cheng and Huaisang have been discharged from the medical halls, and given their prescription for take-home medication, some painkillers and proud smiles on their faces. There were no more bandages, but some ugly scabs, receding bruises and healing scars remained, which should soon disappear over time. No more migraines for Jiang gongzi , and no more body aches for the smaller but older Nie gongzi .

Jiang Cheng acted as though he'd seen the light and leapfrogged over Wei Ying in terms of age and maturity, because, in his words, he's a big boy now at thirteen years old, and he's living for the sake of himself, his sister who's no longer around, his parents whom he loved and owed their trust, and for the honour of his clan - not bad, Wei Ying thought, because he hoped this would teach Jiang Cheng about taking responsibilities and thinking twice before striking or scolding someone, also, not reading dirty comics when he should be studying.

Nie Huaisang had an equally emotional farewell with his gege, and without a servant to pick up after him, to wake him up on time and to wash his clothes, he too had a fresh change in perspectives. He vowed to be a better, more independent person and live like a good, virtuous cultivator disciple - a promise he'd made to Nie Mingjue the night before upon realizing that a world without Meng Yao could be frighteningly unmanageable by the spoiled-rotten Nie didi, and he finally appreciated Meng Yao's contributions to the family when he inked the severance papers with the blood of his right thumb. Wei Ying hummed his approval and then, told the two boys about their next plan.

They would room together as a closely-knit unit, because in a dog-eat-dog world of cultivation, one can hope to be strong and successful, only if he finds his comrades who will back him up during his darkest days - such as drunken student brawl -, to see through thick and thin together, as a brotherhood of growing men whose fates are forged from the harsh challenges that Life throws at them with impunity. Those words galvanized Jiang Cheng, in a manner of 'if Life gives me lemons, I'll make lemonades and eat the sour, bitter rinds with my sworn xiongdi!', and Huaisang who wasn't as poetic in heroic prose, applauded and cheered. Wei Ying then revealed that during their stay in the medical halls, he'd met with a Lan boy and befriended him, and wanted the four of them to stay and grow as one. Everyone was feeling rather high and full of newfound hope at that point, so Yes, Yes, and Yes'es, they returned back to the dorms with their belongings in hand, anticipating a fresh new start to their days at the Cloud Recesses.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 261

There were plenty of “It was you?”, “Really? Oh my god, I didn’t know” and “I’m sorry, I should’ve known”, when the three boys returned to greet their fourth member, only to find that said fourth member in the dorm room sitting face to face with one of the Heads of the Student Affairs office, Lan Xi Chen, also the older of the legendary Twin Jades of Gusu. Lan Xi Chen was apologetic and polite, as well as pragmatic when he finally learned that Wei Ying, or the golden A-Xian apple in A-Zhan’s eyes, is the adopted and eldest son of Jiang Fengmian; and equally, Jiang Cheng and Huaisang were impressed and ga-ga over Lan Wang Ji gracing one of the beds in their humble dorm room, thus securing positions of the First and Second Best-Looking Men in the cultivation world award under the same roof (never mind that bastard Jin Zixuan is third, Wei Ying is fourth, and Jiang Cheng is fifth, because having the top two is better than having the bottom eight, right? So says the eighty-twenty rule).

Jokes and praises aside, the five sat down to share some conversations and to catch up on matters that have taken place in the past few days that need further discourse, discussion and clarification. With Xi Chen around - his day off, and having well-rested after a good sleep from the hours of five to late morning -, the three non-Lan boys had their questions about their studies and upcoming lectures in the coming week answered, which they were grateful for. They also learned about what was happening in town - the Imperial police and their cultivators had collected all the needed evidence and concluded their investigation, and ‘dug a hole in the springs behind Wang Ji’s room gifted by his late parents’, and also left in the morning along with the body of a dead man - the one rumoured, and now, confirmed to have existed. He warned that the Imperial police were going after ‘a network of rogue cultivators and criminals, together with their deadly equipment and relics said to be connected to the string of murders we’ve seen around the country - not just in Gusu’, so they should pay attention to the periodicals on news about more notorious figures being caught, handcuffed and sent to the court to be charged in Chang'an, and of strange, magical and cursed items unearthed and examined further.

Such a huge, eye-opening, intriguing reveal excited the boys, at least for Jiang Cheng and Huaisang, and Wei Ying shared their enthusiasm too - well, he pretended to, at least -, while Lan Zhan became concerned about his Jingshi and said that he'll return there later to check on it, perhaps salvage more of his belongings and move them to the dorms for safety. Huan gege cautioned to boys that these are preliminary findings and news, so they must not recklessly share the information until and unless confirmed in the periodicals, or announcements on the noticeboards. "Until then," he smiled and even gave a friendly wink, "You're all our students, and you must study hard to earn your grades, so that you can become full-fledged cultivators and help society in dealing with such criminals, murders and thugs." Everyone agreed wholeheartedly.

With their bodies and health nearly back to the peak, and the curfew lifted, the four boys, now without bandages or crutches, were free to spend their free time bonding together. They studied in their dorm diligently, and made sure to memorize the first two or three chapters of the lessons they'll be having the week after - and yes, Jiang Cheng found books about 'how to study smarter' which he devoured within a single night together with Huaisang, perceived to be godsent although with very little actual results. Huaisang felt especially welcomed, because his three birdies in their cages were hung outside the window, and the four boys sometimes took turns to feed the birds and refill the water. Meng Yao sometimes remarked that carrying bird cages to foreign sect bases to study was inappropriate - a sentiment shared by Huaisang's older brother -, but the boy pressed on because he liked to train his pet birdies to sing.

Boisterous meals in the dining halls were still restrained under the watchful eyes of seniors, but rowdy by Gusu Lan standards - however, given that the crowd still hadn't reach maximum capacity, and that Student Affairs head Lan Xi Chen joined them too, so the four boys and one man were left undisturbed to enjoy their breakfasts, lunches, dinners and snacks; always, with Lan Zhan following his elder brother to the closed student office to take a leak periodically; the two youngest boys wondered what was so special about peeing in Huan gege 's office, and Wei Ying simply said that it's a terrible Lan secret that nobody would want to know. Mm-hmm, everyone nodded in unspoken consensus.

Outdoors activity picked up as well. When they were bored of studying, or when they felt their waistlines bulging, they went out to the courtyard to practise martial arts and sword fighting with one another, trying outsmart and outperform each other with signature clan moves, including Sabertooth Tiger Strikes being pitted against Spinning Lotus Petal Kicks. The fun intensified when cultivation magic was included into the fray, with Jiang Cheng sweating it out by casting a measly Level One Fire spell to burn a pile of garden waste he'd swept up with a straw broom, then Huaisang countered by heaving and puffing over a Level One Water spell to put out the flames with tiny uncoordinated water spouts. The two were then found out by seniors and made to squat under the sunlight while carrying buckets of fertilizer for the vegetable farms, as punishment for toying with open-burning, which is a no-no for environmentally-friendly Gusu Lan.

Wei Ying stayed mostly out of the spotlight during the next few days. He joined his newfound 'Gang of Four' in their activities, doodled penises and pussies into the corners of the pages of the books he read and drawing mustaches and speech bubbles containing toilet jokes on printed pictures (to Lan Zhan's consternation, because he'd have to erase them before the books were returned to the Library), and made more naughty Papermen out of the blank notebooks they were given for practising calligraphy; he was almost found out when Huaisang remarked that he never knew Papermen could be made from plain rice paper instead of those yellow talisman papers that cost a silver piece or two each - in which, Wei Ying blew at the boy's face, imbuing his breath with malicious, sinister Dark curses that cannot be detected by normal cultivation magic, so that Huaisang simply turned around and walked away and promptly forgot what he'd seen or heard. Those Papermen were sent to other female dorm units to spy on girls undressing, taking baths or doing what girls do in squat toilets; in addition, they act like bloodhounds for their master, sniffing out those lonely, weak-willed, and troubled girls who're known to be troublemakers, losers or have difficult backgrounds such as broken families and history of abuse - so that those plain Papermen would stick to their bodies or clothes, in that when the time comes, Wei Ying could control the victims' mind and bodies whenever he wants, summon them on moonless nights, and take them to the bushes to have demonic sexual intercourses and father plenty of cursed offspring inside their juicy, tight, virginal wombs at his pleasure and whims, before sending them off into cold black portals to be spirited off to faraway underground kingdoms, where they will be turned into sex slaves and breeding machines for the glory of the Dark Arts grandmaster.

Putting teenage fantasies aside, Wei Ying avoided confronting other disciples when exercising his fighting and spellcasting skills - that one Level Three Water spell was the only incidence he'd allow, because it was used to clean off Huaisang and Jiang Cheng's nuttled dicks. So he'd practise on his own with low level martial arts stances, cultivation moves and magic; however, being alone tend to attract unwanted attention - if a big-sized bully approached with pounding fists raring to punch a face or two - usually a Jin -, he'd trip over a rock and call for a senior for help, or pretended to suffer from stomach cramps, then flee.

To make sure that he would always have a bodyguard in the dangerous outdoors, he often drags Lan Zhan to the courtyard as a sparring partner and they would play-pretend by tapping their wooden training swords with each other's like playing a clapping game of Pat-a-cake or Pease Porridge Hot. In case anyone dared to challenge Wei Ying in his presence, Lan Zhan would stand in between like a real darling man (boy), with broad chest puffed up and a defiant look on his usually stoic face, that more often than not drives the opponent away with tails tucked between the legs (because an awesome Level Ten Fear spell was cast, really) - and visible squeal-y hearts can be seen floating above an adoring Wei Ying, sometimes.

In other instances, Wei Ying would sneak in an ambush and round up behind the darling man (boy) to give his rump a light thwup , in which the then-future husband nnnghs because of the masochistic love he receives, then stick the sword between the man (boy)'s thighs as though he was forced to perform intercrural sex, and that sword would be vibrated deep againsty his plump balls and rubbed vigorously against the underside length of his clothed, rapidly hardening penis, and Lan Zhan would hnnngh again with orgasmic delight - and Wei Ying would drag his darling man (boy) to the bushes for a quickie because his bum itches for a sixteen's hard and leaking, wanting six-inch dick.

Sometime during the weekend, the Gang of Four bumped into the older Jin Zixuan, who had since recovered and walked with a slight limp due to the torturous injury between his legs and on his face - the panda eyes were gone, but there were a couple of cuts on the cheeks, still. Wei Ying had always wanted to spit on the ground each time they faced off, but without shijie 's presence and problems lingering on everyone's minds, and with no reason to contest who would throw the first punch - Wei Ying simply shrugged, bowed his head and his hands shoved in his waist pockets, and muttered with a heavy, conceding sigh - like a grown-up version of himself -, "Sorry."

Zixuan was surprised, so was Jiang Cheng, and Huaisang was on the edge, biting his fingernails, while Lan Zhan remained expressionless at the back. Zixuan knew he deserved that apology because he lost a fiancée - which is a shame in the eyes of their patriarchal society -, and at the same time he was also relieved of a burden in his heart he'd shoulder alone since childhood, which was more than a mere annoyance since the betrothal that took place without his knowledge and he was scared at the prospect of marrying someone he wasn't interested in. He responded curtly with his own apology with a respectful bow, and said that he would still like to be friends with Yan Li and with the Jiang family once the entire engagement and wedding ceremonies had taken place and concluded, so that they may continue living in harmony as independent sects, and that bygones be bygones.

Wei Ying smiled, actually, and extended a hand of friendship. That hand was reciprocated with a firm grasp and a strong handshake with a polite grin. Everyone let out their breaths and cheered for the two men - because disciples from both sects had been embroiled in these two's tit-a-tats that had precipitated to numerous unnecessary skirmishes, that it was wearing down everyone's nerves, so it was a cause for celebration to end this once and for all -, until a senior came to check what was causing such a commotion, and the crowd hastily broke up, with each returning to what they were doing before, a little more jovial than before.

It was a brief gesture, but one that spelled enormous benefits and relief for both sides to have ended a bitter feud, finally.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 262

During a weekend afternoon, Huaisang's spoiled and clingy side started to show. He'd roll around the floor, pantless, with a dirty comic book published by Qinghe's best porn artists and writers, with Jiang Cheng, also pantless, following suit because he couldn't really take his eyes off those lewd but titillating erotic images and plots featuring naked women, feisty tigresses, seductive beautiful prostitutes and cute teenage schoolgirls acting like brainless bimbos towards the protagonist of the stories - but even reading porn and masturbating in the open with a fellow masturbator and porn consumer, has its limits. He gave the book to Jiang Cheng, whose eyes remained wide and his cheeks flushed, nostrils flared and looking absolutely engrossed as though he'd eat erotica for lunch, while beating his meat energetically page after page. Huaisang went to Wei Ying's bed and simply fell on the older boy and rubbed his face on Wei Ying's belly.

"What'cha doinnnnn'....?" baby faced Huaisang drawled, bored.

Wei Ying, who had his arms behind his head while lying face up on a pillow and his legs crossed like a laoban lounging at the seaside, opened one eye and peeked at a pouty Huaisang. "Nothin', just trying to take a nap until you crashed into my bed," Wei Ying mumbled with a grin, then with one hand, ruffled the younger boy's hair, which delighted the latter because Wei Ying was rewarded with a sheepish 'he he he' giggle.

(Wei Ying had been tuning into his Papermen that had spread across the country, each following a maiden in the Cloud Recesses; an Imperial police that had unknowingly returned to Chang'an or travelled to other provinces for their on-going investigations into the Yin Metal, with Papermen slipped into their clothes and luggage; or somewhere inside the sex-stinked carriage that was about to reach the Carp Tower - he quite enjoyed watching a sleazily grinning Jin Guangshan clambering down the steps to take a leak by the roadside without a care, because it was a bit chilly with drizzling rain the whole day and everything's soggy and cold even for early Summer - which was fine, because there's a sexy warm body waiting for him inside his transport with legs spread open; and because he was the awesome patriarch of his almighty sect, after all. Then after shaking himself off, he returned to the carriage without his pants on, was greeted by the sight of shijie weeping in shame while masturbating in front of her father-in-law and parting her cunny lips to let the sexually aroused man peer into her vagina, because the carriage was filled with aphrodisiac incense smoke that Grandpa Jin hid under a compartment packed to the brim with illegal sex toys and 'women-killing' arsenal, and just when shijie orgasmed again from fingering her clit too much, and oh how she squealed in her drunken, unthinking state, reading off scripts that she had been taught and trained by that dirty old man over the course of days, to 'please rape me, please rape my teenage pussy, daddy!', Grandpapa gladly delivered on her shameful wishes and went in with his half-hard dick with such virile joy, and enjoyed getting a welcoming fluttering, undulating reception that is rightly his, coming deep from the sweetly deflowered tunnel, ravaged and conquered by a man twice her age then coated with his tainted seed, where three babes had been conceived and their hearts beating strong from inside her juicy, fecund womb.

Grandpa Jin also liked to talk dirty and bully his new sextoy daughter, laughing at her misery and grinning sleazily while wiggling his eyebrows each time he shoved in so deep, that she grimaced, moaned and cried, 'No, I don't like this, please stop, take it out, I don't want it,' because at times of wakefulness, she realized she was truly being violated, and yet couldn't stop her body from responding against her will.

"As your father-in-law, I have the right to inspect you before you enter my castle in Lanling. I should test if you're still a virgin or not, but since the doctors said that you aren't, then shame on you. This grandfather will rewrite the history to say that you were a virgin, and a person of respectable background in this family took it before your husband did. That's a more acceptable answer, don't you think so? Here, Ah, Ah, Unnh, Oh that feels good, Let Grand Papa Take Your Vir Gin Ni Ty! How does that feel? Your cunny is shuddering with excitement, it cannot wait to be part of this grandpapa's family! Whore!"

"Your upper mouth keeps saying you don't like it and you don't want it, but what is it that I'm feeling right now from your lower mouth? Oooh, precious daughter, it's sucking me in so deep and doesn't let me go. You're a slut, you know that. Where's your integrity as the daughter of Jiang Fengmian? Where's that proud honesty of the Jiang family? Whore, liar, cheater, that's what you are! You deserve to get knocked-up by your tie tie and carry his grandchildren in your belly! Oooh, darling, you're squeezing me again, that feels so good!"

"Shame on you, your titties are so plump and soft, it's a crime not to let tie tie play with them and suck them dry before your babies do. Look at you, you're an embarrassment to womankind, spreading your legs for an old man twice your age, bred like bitch on the streets. I ought to throw you out and send these pictures taken by my modified Eye spells to your blood-father, and tell him I've been short-changed with a wench. Do you want that? No? Then spread those legs wider and let tie tie fuck you properly, you cocksleeve!"

"Ha ha ha, look at your silly face, did you just cum? Tie tie is an expert in making women like you cum so hard, that you'll only think of pleasuring men after this. Tie tie likes to lick the tears from your reddened cheeks, kiss your luscious lips to drink your cries, grab your titties like pillows embroidered with my name, and of course, shove in between your spread thighs and slap your bouncing buttocks because they feel so good on tie tie's hands, and write my name to claim you as mine. Can you read it? Tie tie is grinding hard, balls deep, and writing his name using your vagina as his canvas. There's so much milky ink pooling inside for tie tie dip his penis-brush and write, so you won't forget it. Memorize it, wench, you belong to tie tie and no one else! I'll discard you to my sons and they'll rape you every hour, and you'll only want to cry out the name that's been written inside your pussy!"

Later, toasty and warm after much intense and unwilling lovemaking inside their little cabin on wheels despite the pouring rain outside, she was mind-controlled to practise the art of feeding Grandpapa grapes, dumplings and pastries while sitting naked on his lap and his hands roamed passionately all over her breasts and waist, even making lewd grabs because those grapefruit curves fit into his meaty palm so well - in fact, every voluptuous curve that exuded her femininity and her fertility was savoured, molested and touched unkindly by the dirty old man. Then, calloused, knobbly grandpa fingers dipped between her squirming thighs to play inside her soaked, hairy teenage cunny. Next, like a trained wench, she moved on to give relaxing massages upon the gleeful old man's shoulders and limbs, rubbing her body sexily against his abs and pecs, then servicing his grey-haired penis and wrinkly smelly old men's balls with an erotic, oily sexual massage. Jin Guangshan growled with satisfaction and with a threat-veiled demand that she'd be cast out of the carriage without her clothes on if she didn't pleasure him more - she acquiesced to his commands and climbed up to straddle him, while the horse carriage slowly made its way down a windy path. She demonstrated, while squatting shamefully on his muscled thighs, how she likes to insert Grandpa Jin's flexing, hardened and excited penis into her exposed, well-used pussy, which also dripped with female juices from her own shameful arousal; once Grandpapa penetrated her to the deepest until he was pleasantly fully sheathed, she grind her crotch in circles and swayed in back-and-forth motions until Grandpapa gave his seal of approval in the form of powerful jerks inside her vagina - three-fours were probably released from his happy dick, from the dreamy, orgasmic, laughing look on the virile old man's face -, after which she performed what she had been duly taught - doing a sexy pole dance while riding her father-in-law inside the bumpy carriage for minutes, hours, through multiple orgasms, until she was told to stop. She had been properly impregnated with two sons sired by that sleazy rapist beside the first one.

Jin Guangshan praised the weeping, sexually flushed and agitated Jiang Yan Li for being such a good girl to make her tie tie happy even before reaching her new home, that she must be very impatient to be part of the family. With a hearty laugh, with one hand squeezing her breast, and the other with a thumb playing with her clitty while the other fingers raking lightly up and down across her pubic hair lower belly, even while she rode him very hard, more eagerly than she wanted to but she couldn't help it because her body was poisoned by the aphrodisiacs that sapped her will - Jin Guangshan proposed that she should just become one of his concubines instead of marrying that useless half-Jin she promised to engage to, now that she carried more of his children inside her belly than anyone else's. He also promised - with one thumb pressed and kneading the pea-sized clit in delicious circles - to use his special vibrating and pleasurable technique to force her to drop one more egg into the pool of semen that swirled inside her womb after days of insane non-stop sex, before they reached the Carp Tower, 'because tie tie likes you very much and especially your sweet pussy, that tie tie wants to give you a special present to formally welcome you into a very special family, that is, tie tie's harem'.

Realization dawned upon the woman's sex-hazed mind on what had transpired and what had become of her body - and her belly. She shivered and cried, jolting with spasms from the electricity radiating from her pleasure spot, thus unable to control her body, so she spread her legs wider and gave the dirty old man's penis a very vigorous squeeze, to plead to the Grandpapa that yes, to her utter horror that her lips spoke of words that she never wanted to hear, that yes, Grandpapa, she wants that special present to be part of that very special family, please.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 263

“What’s with you and Lan er gongzi ? What’cha two up toooooo.....?” Huaisang asked innocently, and woke Wei Ying out of his perverse reverie. There, that innocent blink of eyes, but how can Wei Ying fault the boy for being curious, when they were holed up in the same dorm room with four beds properly populated by four teenage, hormone-raging males from different sects and of different personalities. Huaisang and Jiang Cheng got along well, as evidenced by their ease in engaging in mutual masturbation and their common liking for sniggering and salivating over dirty heterosexual obscene material. Huaisang was also on good terms with Wei Ying, but in more of a neutral shixiong - shidi relationship than anything else; many lifetimes ago, Wei Ying would’ve also read dirty comics with him, but this time, he’s just looking out for his younger brother’s best buddy, and making sure that the four of them live together in relative peace.

With Lan Zhan, it was hard to explain, Wei Ying ruminated in his thoughts; since he was woken up from his so-called nap, he reached to the side for a lotus seed pod he smuggled into their room from his frequent trips to the outside world; Caiyi Town sells a bundle for a piece of silver, which was kinda expensive given that they can be freely - but illegally - harvested from anyone’s lotus farm, but beggars can’t be choosers in a city devoid of such farms, plus, he was given a small amount of pocket money by Jiang Fengmian before the latter left for home. Snacking on lotus seeds in the room is allowed and a healthier option than, say, peanuts, however both would draw unspoken ire from his darling man (boy) because Lan Zhan usually cleans up the littered shells and emptied pods afterwards.

Huaisang is a keen observer, and he knew that the boy had seen some interesting signs. The younger of the Twin Jades is well-known for his strict, no-nonsense and disciplined upbringing, and was rumoured to be able to silence detractors from far away - however, Wei Ying had merrily announced that it's fine to eat, drink, get drunk (from illegally procured jars from outside the Cloud Recesses - don't ask how, Wei Ying whispered), talk brashly, read porn and masturbate openly inside the dorm room, because while they must behave decently outside and curb their desires, they are at home in the dorm, and home is where the heart, the gut, and the loins are. Moreover, Lan Zhan had been pretty docile, and kept to reading his own books, meditating or playing his guqin quietly in a corner so that he wouldn't have to face thuggish and obscene behaviours shown by the other three roommates, that he doesn't say much except the minimum amount of words to state the facts and his "Mn"s -, and he always busies himself with cleaning routines that teenage boys usually don't understand. Thus, both Huaisang and Jiang Cheng really couldn't decipher what Lan Zhan was thinking or feeling -, and additionally, Lan Zhan goes out when Wei Ying does or when Wei Ying instructs him, such as to fetch water or more snacks, or when it's time for A-Zhan to pay a visit to Huan gege 's office. "It's as though he follows you around like a puppy, and listens to your every word," Huaisang had remarked, and Jiang Cheng hissed at him because Wei Ying hates dogs, so Huaisang apologized and added, "... err, follows you like a kitty, I mean, although the two of you only met earlier the week."

Wei Ying started at Huaisang because he racked his brains for a plausible answer without sounding too complicated, and at the same time, that fifteen-year old looked to the side and goosebumped in fear because Lan Zhan shot him those rare dirty, upset looks each time the boy touched Wei Ying inappropriately, such as rubbing his face on Wei Ying's belly, for instance. Huaisang grinned his 'he he he', and mumbled 'I'm sorry, I didn't know' and scratched the back of his head and sat up straight, then properly deposited his naked, pantless rump on an upright chair adjacent to Wei Ying's bedside - nevermind that in the room of four, two boys didn't put on the underwear, because it felt great to go naked and commando in that stuffy room in Summer.

"Well," Wei Ying hummed, and keenly aware that Lan Zhan was listening intently from the far side of the room; each bed hugged a corner each, "It's like this. You know how you feel when you've met your bestest friend, right? Sometimes you just click together because of mutual interests or goals, of having the same hobby, or favourite foods, or harking from the same village or speaking the same dialect in a foreign land... that sort of thing, yeah?"

Huaisang looked up and thought back, then he nodded with a smile, "Enn! Wei gongzi is right! Jiang gongzi and I are best buddies because we like to ogle at pretty girls in real life or on paper, my brother said he met some of his most loyal comrades when going on war campaigns because that's when he could see which of his men has a strong sense of purpose and righteousness, like him, and those men would end up in his personal circles of friends."

Good answer, Wei Ying gestured wordlessly with a thumbs up, and popped a peeled lotus seed into his mouth nonchalantly. "For me, it's probably that I'm such an airhead, a hopeless person when it comes to following rules like a law-abiding person, I'm a wild child in heart - ask Jiang Cheng how I behaved when I was younger, you'll find out -, and I always have something in the crosshairs because I'm quite a selfish, purposeful, self-driven and demanding fool," he said with a self-deprecating grin, "Probably because of my extremes, I'm drawn to persons on the other end of the spectrum, such as that wooden stump you see facing the wall over there, reading a magazine quietly as though he's in a library," he nudged his face towards the direction of his beloved darling man (boy), and Huaisang couldn't resist snickering. But he got the gist of Wei Ying's relationship to Lan Zhan, "Wei gongzi, you're attracted to opposites, and someone of that personality really appeals to you!"

"Yeah, like how blacks and whites can be inseparable like shadows to a source of light, but the two of us have many shades of grey, and who knows maybe a whole lot more rainbows going on between us! That's why I like ‘im and claimed that boy as my best buddy at first sight!” Wei Ying laughed. Huaisang joined in. Pantless Jiang Cheng listened half-heartedly, because he hnnngh’ed and ejaculated uselessly with just ten teenage spurts into a piece of tissue paper - he’s a learned man, so he has a box of tissues on hand this time - at a climactic scene in the dirty comic book that he was reading.

Elsewhere, Lan Zhan lowered his head by a mere fraction, and the tips of his ears turned red.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 264

The weekend was slow to pass, and with the four and everyone else not really in the mood to open their books after, say, nearly five days of memorizing, reciting and reviewing self-inflicted homework - everyone takes a bit of a break. Barring Wei Ying who has awesome teleportation powers that nobody in the town, or the world for that matter, knew, disciples were not allowed to venture out of the Cloud Recesses but they were given the green light to visit other parts of the town besides the academia section of the settlement. Jiang Cheng and Huaisang, best buddies and mutual masturbation extraordinaires, went to the market and visited some quaint shops, cultural establishments and even a local museum. The Gusu Lan are known for their spotless perfection, elegant cultural history, and minimalist but clean and organized society and architecture, so the duo had a relatively informative and comfortable tour learning about a different sect that seemed vastly different from their own, in some aspects, although Huaisang lamented that it seemed to feel rather sterile and sometimes, a little boring and monotonous; one can hardly appreciate displays of similar-looking white-coloured musical instruments, woven silk in various shades of whites and layers of light blues that they looked like pastel-whites and cloud-whites, an exhibition of white and light blue minerals mined from the mountains that range from blinding sparkling whites and deep intriguing greyish whites, and walls of historical texts depicting the Gusu Lan's over-4000 family rules in multiple versions on white backgrounds that looked centuries old and hold great significant value for the Lan sect, but in a building of whites with little variants of other colours, where silence pervades and there are few other visitors who mostly kept to their own, it was as exciting as watching white paint drying on a white wall.

Luckily for the two, they returned in time to catch a game of handball. At least they got a chance to work out a bit of sweat after that stiff whitewashed tour of sorts. Disciples from both sides were beginning to notice how close the two clan representatives were, and they took it as a signal that relations are good, so they should emulate their fearless leaders and spend more time together. The game was fun, with both sides doing friendly competitions, and everyone got to make more friends from the other sect, and have a good time together as a whole.

Wei Ying, on the other hand, popped into a portal undetected, had twenty-four thousand times of sex with the denizens of his underground kingdom and returned with clinking jars of Emperor Smiles. Lan Zhan too, disappeared for periods of two seconds each to run his personal errands whilst the two youngest boys went out, and returned, very refreshed and stifling a crooked smile. Then, the two zipped out together to have crazy monkey sex elsewhere, because Lan Zhan was adamant that he no longer wanted to clean the dorm room after the paint on the flooring was stained by their bodily fluids that, short of replacing the wooden panels, were tough to scrub off.

When the youngest two returned from their lacklustre day trip with a lukewarm reaction on their faces, Wei Ying only needed to raise his jars, and plates of lotus seed and toasted mixed nuts that Lan Zhan stir-fried in the woks in the kitchens earlier. He told them, they were having ‘herbal tea’ later that evening - with ten full crates hidden beneath someone’s bed, to the whooping joy of the two, and Lan Zhan “Mn”, because herbal tea was allowed, and he simply turned his attention elsewhere, say, to a Cultivation Times magazine or to a meditation session in a far, quiet corner, when the drinking games began, shortly after dinner.

When three of the four were tipsy, it was one of those heated, unsanitized and unfiltered moments where very personal questions were bounced back and forth and answers given freely with no real consequence the next day because everything would’ve been forgotten by then, flavoured with throbbing hangovers. There were plenty of dirty jokes and curiosity about gender identity and confusion and of course sex, as in how many positions and how many kinds exist out there, dreams, hope and fears of each individual, emotions, obsessions and feelings that are awkward, hilarious and creepy at the same time, sick fetishes and unbelievable fantasies for their age, and stuff that men (boys) usually don't talk about unless they were too in the deep in their liquor. Even Lan Zhan's ears blushed into pinks while he burrowed his head into the magazine, unable to tolerate the shameless absurdity and idiocy of youth at its peak. Wei Ying went pantless to experiment with novelty and drank wine through his asshole with the help of a handmade flute and farted bubbles through his nose, Jiang Cheng went full commando from head to toe, masturbated furiously in the nude and sang at the top of his lungs to an old traditional Middle Kingdom opera in falsetto while dancing the macarena and doing the limbo rock simultaneously, and Huaisang, still in his white robes, sobbed for his gege all night while fucking a homemade fleshlight strapped to a pillow made of bamboo stuffed with straw, warm custard pie, strips of fatty pork and whatever the boys could steal from the closed kitchen, and a wooden eight-inch length dildo fashioned out a wood block with the use of Sandu, coated with lard and stuck into the fifteen year old's ass.

Sometime during their deep intoxication, Huaisang asked how Wei Ying feel about letting go of his shijie , because he thought that someday he might have to experience the same if either he or his gege got hitched and he had to separate from the brother who had watch over him since birth.

“Well, it was sad and painful at first because no matter how much you prepare your heart, it'll never be enough to over the shock of losing someone - and I really mean losing, as in, that person won't come back, or things will never be the same after that. Then there's anger, because why should I suffer from the separation from my favourite sibling, right? Who's that asshole that dared to take away my favourite shijie ... yeah, that selfish kid in me was raving and ranting. After that, when it hits you, hours, maybe days because you realized that you haven't heard that person's voice or seen her image or shadow for a while, there's this really big gaping emptiness in you and in your surroundings. But you know, time heals the pain and emptiness left by the separation. I have to man up, keep my chins up and back straight, thinking only good things, like how shijie 's happier at the other side, with her new family, and believing that she's smiling, happy for what she's achieved and who she's become. After a while, you start to believe your own words, and they make sense especially when you start thinking about it maturely and from the other's lenses. It's shijie 's life, it's her happiness, and she is responsible for deciding her path forward, not me. I'm always there to support and cheer her on, but in the end, I can only say 'I'm happy for you, shijie ', because that's all I can do, you know?"

Inebriated Huaisang stared dazedly at the boy just a year older than him, but had already seen lifetimes of such heartstrings-tugging family drama and experienced the rollercoasters of emotions with such depth not thought possible during the tender youthful years - so he applauded clumsily, hiccuped and burped rudely, and because the beginning part about sadness, pain and separation struck such a clear, vivid chord in him for inexplicable reasons, flush-cheeked Huaisang hugged his alcohol and tear-stained pillow, and bawled like a drunken fool - again. Then, he fell into a nap and farted a string of wet bubbly sounds. The brown stain on the buttocks part of the white pair of pants was telling, and so was the rising stink.

Jiang Cheng heard part of the conversation, because he was jacking off the nth time that his limbs became jelly and his throat hoarse from singing falsettos, and pointed a shaky accusing finger at his older adoptive brother, saying, "Liar liar pants on fire. You said you felt pain but you hardly showed any real emotions even when dad explained what happened to her after she left with her future father-in-law. You're indifferent, you're cruel, you've given up, that's what you are, you even wished her happiness with that fake smile and said you'd want to talk to her when she returns after that engagement ceremony two weeks from now. How can you be that calm and happy, when before you'd draw swords with Jin Zixuan the moment he turned away from her and rejected her advances?"

Wei Ying sighed and sat cross-legged on the floor without his pants, irrespective of whether his asshole leaked Emperor Smiles or not. He countered petulantly, “Well, that’s because I’m three years older than you and I’m more mature. I skipped the whole part about pain and went straight into acceptance, you dimwitted didi . When you’re as old as me, you’ll do the same too, otherwise you’ll worry too much and start growing grey hair and beard, wrinkles will show up on your face especially that broad forehead of yours, and even your pubic hair will turn white,” and stuck a tongue out at the little Jiang gongzi .

Jiang Cheng hiccuped in an unsoberly and crude manner, then staggered to their dorm’s small built-in bathroom in search of the mirror to check his hair, face and pubes, before peeing on the tiled floor recklessly because he drank too much - then, he crumpled to the floor because it felt cool and nice against his heated flushed skin, and snored in his own puddle of body-warmed pee.

Wei Ying scooted on the floor to the side and leaned against Lan Zhan’s bed, smelling like an opened jar of wine himself especially coming out from his stinging, snotty nostrils. He used Lan Zhan’s thigh as an upright pillow of sorts and the latter responded by finally putting away the rumpled magazine, once again, sighing at the clean-up and decontamination he’d need to do in the aftermath of the youngest two in their dorm.

“You know, Jiang Cheng’s right. I’m lacking the drive and enthusiasm that I used to have. I could’ve leapt and grabbed shijie out of the carriage and kissed her on the lips to scandalize her, then kick Jin Guangshan’s balls on my way out, after that, do my flying kick across to whack Meng Yao’s ass at the same time, to show my disrespect and anger towards their cultured and ceremonial shenanigans. I’d make enemies out of the Jiang, Jin and Nie clans in a single night, maybe the Lan too since I’ve been such an ungrateful guest. Then graduate smoothly into the next Gusu Wei Dark Patriarch. Cue massive uprising, mass slaughter and murder, and getting pummeled by multiple sects at once, even drag down the Imperial forces if I have to, then I'll die a pitiful death and be resurrected sixteen years later. How does that sound, lao gong ?”

Lan Zhan caressed Wei Ying's hair then bent over and gave the man (boy) a light peck on the sweaty forehead, that wasn't smelling like a jar of alcohol.

“I'll still stand by your side, and wait for you for sixteen years if that happens.”

Wei Ying giggled, obviously getting drunk since his ass absorbed far more alcohol and more efficiently than his gut.

“Lan Zhan, have I ever told you that I love you like a fool?”

The darling man (boy) rose from the bed, depriving Wei Ying of a thigh-pillow for a moment, then went to bridal-carry Wei Ying to his - Lan Zhan's - bed so that the then-future wife gets to lie on husband-scented soft pillows.

“Mn. Always.”

Wei Ying laughed then, and broke into the same kinds of silly hiccups and burps, of a head swaying to an off-tune Yunmeng folktune hummed from crooked lips, of spinning eyes and uncoordinated limb movements that signalled his impending drunkenness. He gets a nice, warm wipe from Lan Zhan, who then went ahead to clean up the mess in the room, starting by picking up Huaisang by the collar - because he pooped in his pants - and flinging him into the bathroom where a modern showerhead was conjured out of thin air and the snoring youngest two gets a wash down at two in the morning. Much later, Lan Zhan snuggled up with the already-snoring, and he closed the man (boy)'s mouth because the liquor does stink quite a lot.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 265

In the late afternoon of Day Seven, a day before classes officially start, Huan gege looked a bit restless and paced about from building to building. The Gang of Four thought that being one of the heads of the student affairs' department, he would be anxious to make sure that classes began correctly and on time after a botched start. There were also rumours that the Imperial police and their cultivators had screened, checked and interrogated a much larger population in Caiyi Town and the surrounding areas and just left hours ago, so the students that had been held up at the foot of the mountains would finally ascend to the Cloud Recesses later that evening - including the Qishan Wen. Information about the fate of the dead body and the mystery surrounding it remained vague and unverified - but as Huan gege puts it, that should not concern the boys because their priority is to study and do well in the exams. There were no new announcements on the noticeboard, other than a dog-eared parchment that proclaimed that classes would start as usual the next day, and that all students, both currently residing in the Cloud Recesses, and those that would arrive soon, must report to their classes by eight in the morning.

The Gang of Four didn't want to disturb Huan gege or any seniors who looked swamped with work - preparing new dormitory rooms and the associated paperwork, busying themselves in an expanded kitchen and setting up more tables at the dining halls, sweeping the courtyards and adding a few more such wide open spaces for disciples to use, clearing up more halls to be converted as classrooms, and so on. Wei Ying estimated there were about fifty disciples from visiting sects, with the bulk of the numbers coming from the Lanling Jin sect, followed by Qinghe Nie then a paltry few from Yunmeng Jiang, and a quarter from other lesser sects and remote tribes. It seemed that the population in the Cloud Recesses is set to double with the second wave of students making their way to the town soon.

On the request of Wei Ying - because they really didn't want to run into harried seniors and be inadvertently roped into helping with student-welcoming rituals and routines on their day off - the Gang of Four went to visit the Jingshi. Wei Ying's intuition was right that the Cold Springs close to the Jingshi had been breached and invaded by the Imperial police, then part of its main artery of waterways excavated using cultivation magic, and something major happened underground - which Wei Ying presumed that the cave where the spirit of Lan Yi resided had been raided and plundered. The Gusu Lan were certainly unhappy with the incursion, but they did not know what was lost; so, they did what they could to repair the damage and now there is a huge ugly barren muddy patch where the springwater river and cascading waterfalls used to flow through, leaving the downstream muddy, opaque and unusable for bathing and drinking. A couple of servants were seen shoveling mud and trying to fill the gaping hole that was dug up by the Imperial police, and a few were seen crouching around the edges to plant fresh new grass sprouts in the hopes to beautify the place again as much as possible.

Taking the cue that they'd been reminded many times not to stick their noses unnecessarily into the investigations led by the Imperial police and their cultivators, the Gang of Four took a brief look and then went into the Jingshi.

To Lan Zhan's dismay, the building had been emptied out. A note had been pasted on a wall to explain that due to the damage at the Cold Springs, engineers were cautious that the resulting erosion from heavy rains and residual glacial melt during the transition of seasons may pose a risk to the structure, which is built upon a sloping surface, and a possible landslide could not be ruled out. The contents of the Jingshi have been transferred and stored in a separate location for safekeeping, and until further notice, unauthorized personnel are not allowed near the Jingshi and its immediate grounds for safety reasons.

“Eh... it’s signed by...” Huaisang squinted at the bottom of the notice, because Gusu Lan signatures are known to be elegantly fancy at times.

“That’s one of my uncles,” Lan Zhan explained curtly, after examining the notice, before moving into the interior sections of the building to find out if there is anything left other than the clean, spotless floor, the slightly peeling walls, and the cobwebs near the roof. At least someone swept the wooden floor before leaving, he thought, and Wei Ying heard that - so Wei Ying also went exploring and touched the walls and pillars as though he was doing a quality-check on the state of the Jingshi.

“Do your uncles have the permission to do this?” Jiang Cheng asked, feeling rather incredulous at the situation - because as a pampered gongzi, he never had any of his uncles touch his personal belongings, let alone a house that would’ve been bequeathed by his parents as a gift.

“Mn. All children of the Gusu Lan are raised and taught by the elite circle, which are our uncles. They have the rights over the children, that is, us. Their wisdom secures our future. Bringing up children is the shared responsibility of this elite circle, and of course, the parents as well, which unfortunately I have none.” The reply was calm, emotionless, as though reading from a textbook. Wei Ying sent a concerned gaze at Lan Zhan’s direction, who turned his head to look through an open window. Wei Ying thought the image of a forlorn-looking boy, staring off-space at the soft shaft of sunlight shining into the room, his shadows muted in the relatively lit room although there are unseen circles beneath his eyes that belies what goes through his mind each time he enters his former home; at the age of sixteen, Lan Zhan looked way beyond his years, although his handsome features tend to cover the sad and unsmiling lines, for better or worse, for the one who does not freely express his emotions.

“Ah, I’m sorry to hear that...” Huaisang immediately empathized and looked sorrowful, even downcast, which was a sudden change from his earlier joyful demeanour; he’d done it on behalf of the boy who lost everything at a very young age, if not for himself.

But Lan Zhan was steady and strong-willed. He shrugged, “That is the past, it’s alright now. This is the house I inherited from my mother, so I should cherish it as a good memory.” Ah, there are fingerprints on the walls where a table used to be, he figured and gently touched the cold, white surface made of wood and bricks.

The two youngest boys decided not to pry further - they’ve heard some stories about Lan Zhan’s background from the other disciples, but to see his single solitary home - at least the shell - made it feel more real, tangible, and in some sense, tragic. The stoic, sometimes icy and distant boy renowned to be the stuff of legends - the second best-looking person in the cultivation world, as some girls would squeal -, the boy was a real human after all, with blood flowing in his veins, feelings in his heart, and he also suffers from the realities of living in this cruel, harsh world, except that he does not openly tell all and bare everything from his soul, unlike the other more spirited kids of his age.

Wei Ying was the first to break the miserable spell by clapping his hands to call for everyone’s attention. Since there was nothing else to look at, they should thank the host for showing them around anyway, and move on to find the Hanshi, where Huan gege lives just across a small hill garden, he said. The boys bowed at Lan Zhan, a gesture which astonished the latter, and together, they walked out of the Jingshi while murmuring whether someday, they’d have the chance to visit a fully furnished building and admire those priceless centuries-old decor and Gusu antiques that Wei Ying alluded to in the first place that garnered the youngest boys’ interests - they'd seen some in the local museum, but Lan Zhan's collection was said to be ten times better and more interesting.

Just as they stepped out and started trotting towards the hill, they saw a white figure briskly jogging in their direction, from another building in the far distance - which the two youngest boys guessed is the Hanshi, because there's hardly any other housing buildings around, and therefore that said white figure in flowy white robes would be-- “Huan gege !” three voices shouted in unison and they waved at him.

.

The change in atmosphere was startling, and alarming, from a leisure tour of their friends' homes, to one of a person gone missing.

“I'm so glad you're here, as I was about to leave the town, but I didn't know if I had the time to leave a proper message at the dorms,” Huan gege looked restless and anxious with an uncharacteristic frown, and he stared behind them to look up at the slightly fiery orange skies in the horizon; the sun was setting over the tallest bamboo groves soon.

Lan Xi Chen wasn't aware that Meng Yao had departed until he found the handwritten letter addressed to him later in Day Five. He thought Meng Yao would only leave later that week, and he wasn't privy to the details about the pre-engagement ceremony and Jin Guangshan's sudden change of plans, which included sending away the future newlyweds to their new home so soon. Jiang Cheng filled in the details about the dinner and departure, with Huaisang adding about the severance ritual of Meng Yao's service from the Nie clan.

“Ah, no wonder I couldn't find Meng Yao that day, the one day when I took leave from working at the student affairs office, partly because I wanted to talk to my dear friend and check on his preparations. I thought he might need some help, but I see that he's already on his way - how brave and forward-looking he is, he's a grown-up man, isn't he?” Huan gege grinned sheepishly because he thought he'd still be a big brother-like figure to precious Meng Yao until the last day, which did not happen that way.

Huan gege couldn't help but to share some details about his history and relationship with Meng Yao, and how that tied to War General Nie Mingjue, after drawing some curious looks from Team Jiang, and a stoic - but clearly interested - Lan Zhan too. It was a brief past, about a friendship that blossomed over the years and through harrowing challenges with plenty of unnecessary melodrama and pity from Huan gege 's side, because he couldn't ignore such a precious, servant whose misfortune somewhat mirror that of any other orphaned children in this cruel, harsh world - Wei Ying could relate to that, and Lan Zhan too, partially.

“However, we made a promise earlier the week, shortly after the union of your sister and him was formalized by the two sect leaders, that he'd send a Fairy Messenger message to me at least once a day, for the first week or so after reaching his new home. I admit, I insisted on this because I was, and still, worried that he may not be able to adjust to his new surroundings, and could use some advice from my side,” Huan gege 's face returned to one of worry. “In the letter, he wrote that he left three nights ago, so I waited and waited. I figured that it'd take him two or three days to reach Lanling on a steed, but surely, he could just cast a Fairy Messenger spell from the stack of talismans I've gifted to him previously - if not a call en route to the destination, then at least a short message to say that he's doing well. Isn't that right?" he posed the question more to himself than the Gang of Four, which indicated that he was indeed agonizingly uneasy to the point of becoming upset at not hearing a word from precious Meng Yao. His mind was filled with concern for the man of short stature - is he safe, has he reached Lanling, did he encounter any troubles along the way?

Wei Ying was about to suggest the highly-illegal Reverse Fairy Messenger spell technique, but Lan Zhan beat him to it. “ Ge , if Meng Yao's safety and well-being troubles you, would you not go and look for him? Shuoyue is the fastest flying blade amongst our clansmen, and Liebing can speak to the forest spirits and echo off the residual movement trails of the living; surely you can cover the area up to the borders of the mountain ranges in less than a day,” he stated matter-of-factly; A-Zhan felt the discomfort of his ge , and wanted to suggest something that he could do without trouble others too much.

“That reminds me,” Jiang Cheng suddenly interrupted, now equally disturbed and he started tapping his foot, “A- Tie 's instructions to A- Jie was to call back once she's reached the Carp Tower. She should have arrived last night or latest by tonight, but I haven't heard of any news from my father yet. I should return to the dorms and contact my father.”

Huaisang scratched his head, and bowed his head slightly at Huan gege . He said, “Huan gege , appreciate your concern for Meng Yao, who's done a lot for my clan. Hearing this, I'm also a bit concerned for his welfare and situation, because he's served me for many years and he's become quite a friend to me. If you can update me about his location and status once you've contacted him, I would appreciate that too.”

Huan gege thanked the boys for their help and kindness towards an old friend of many, despite the difference in positions. He rushed off to summon a few Lan disciples to his aid, as Wei Ying suggested, because it was getting dark and it could be dangerous flying in the skies during moonless nights. “Don’t worry about us, we’ll make sure to sleep early and wake up on time for the classes tomorrow!” Wei Ying shouted with a strained smile and waved his hands at the disappearing figure running downhill from the housing residential area of the Cloud Recesses.

Noting that the sun was fast dipping into the horizon, the Gang of Four retraced their steps and headed to the dining halls for dinner, before a last look at their textbooks in anticipation of the start of the school week - a priority for the two youngest ones who were emboldened and highly motivated to do their best in the classes. Lan Zhan went off to speak to some of his uncles to ask about his belongings, including those priceless decor, inherited relics and other antiques that used to sit on the shelves and cupboards of Jingshi in the past, and Wei Ying followed behind because he really didn’t want to read anymore books at that point in his life.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 266

Jin Guangshan is a ruthless, shrewd harem master and mass propagator patriarch, who knew the tricks of his trade and the secrets to success. He was said to be born out of wedlock from a rape, inherited that violent and aggressive streak just like his own blood-father's, and has been raping maidens from a tender young but vibrant, youthful age, with his first illegitimate son born when he was merely twelve. By the time he wedded his first official wife, he had a vast harem under his belt living beneath the throne room, which was around the time when he was crowned the Sect Leader of his clan, after assassinating a number of competing half-brothers for the succession of the clan's leadership. He continued to find devious ways to steal fortunes, land and women from other clans and from faraway lands, whether by force or by illicit trade, and his empire thrived in as many farmlands and cities gilded in gold in honour of his name, as the countless number of half-offsprings he continued to churn out from the bedrooms of his den, the Carp Tower. (With a lifetime of hardcore crime, this man who was born of rape, who had been raping women his entire life, should die of rape as well.)

His tastes in women lie in extremes - on one hand, he had at one point in his life fallen in love with a woman who was, and still is, blindly faithful and subservient to him like a pretty string puppet, and she became his first wife. She would do anything for him, even trick other women to join the family as concubines and consorts, for the sake of keeping the megalomaniac happy. She became his pillar of civility and of level-headedness, reminding him not to devolve into his barbaric ways, particularly when the Lanling Jin sect took over the mantle of the Grand Cultivation Council a couple of decades ago, and had to behave in a more civilized, cultured way towards others on certain, say, traditional and ritualistic aspects of life. On the other, he also likes feisty little girls, particularly the younger 'uns who still think they can fight their way out of his sex dens by refusing, struggling and biting and clawing constantly until they're finally worn out, broken, exhausted and lost their will to continue, in which he'd finally savour his hard-earned victory by plundering their bodies until he was fully satisfied in his loins, and kick them out of the bedroom, like ruined dolls that had lost their novelty value, spoiled goods that have gone past their shelf lives, dirtied, pregnant, penniless and disowned by their former families, and with nowhere to go except to remain in his harem for the rest of their pitiful lives. Jin Guangshan lives in the thrill of conquest, of defeating others and of breaking them into submission, that is his guiding principle in life and what drives him to do more than anyone else amongst the lumbering and unreactive Grand Cultivation Council.

He leans against pillows on the king-sized bed inside his carriage, appreciating his handiwork of turning his daughter-in-law into another member of his harem. She's just another statistic in his personal scoreboard which rises regularly with each passing season, a number in the forgettable cesspool of so many other sex-starved, drugged maidens he'd taken, collected, eaten his fill, then left to gather dust beneath his throne room over the years - he doesn't like used goods, but there's nowhere else to store them besides throwing them out to the dirty streets, and he hates it when females cry and cling incessantly onto him for food, comfort, money, sex and warmth - so, to his personal whorehouse they go. He had stolen at least ten maidens, sometimes brides, from other tribal and clan leaders in the last season, in exchange for bribes, trade deals, military power, contraband and the ilk; none of whom he'd remember their names and he is beginning to forget this particular wench's as well, because after the initial, rather invigorating scuffle and struggles from forcing himself on from her and enjoy her juicy succulent fruits like the proverbial cup of mature wine being sipped against her will for many times - he is beginning to tire of her, that wench.

She doesn't fight back as much with angry tears or shouts for help after he'd popped her stolen cherry and then put her on drugs - the ones that waft from the incense burner placed beneath the king-sized bed, and he put a note to himself to order more of those very useful sachets of whitish powder from his favourite drug dealer down the block from the Carp Tower. The drugs made it easier to break her and turn her into a docile sex doll ready to receive his commands, and soon he trained her to become a wonderful cocksleeve and a passable body-warming pillow whose sole purpose is to pleasure men, starting from Grandpa Jin, of course. Like the said proverbial cup, he'd drunk as much as he wanted and emptied her out, so there's nothing else new to discover, and his interest wanes quickly. He'd touched and tasted her, savoured her flavours and textures, sniffed her feminine fragrance and devoured her purity, innocence and her entire being from the inside out; every inch of her soft, supple fair skin and flesh was thoroughly kissed, licked, suckled, groped and felt, explored and memorized, plundered with his lips, tongue, fingers and penis, and her vagina had been shaped to mould nicely to fit his massive manhood, her mind brainwashed to accept and love - even lust for - him as her soulmate, that the moment he looms above her, she'd become wet and squirt out her juices in anticipation of a breedworthy fuck, then smiled drunkenly and spread her pregnant pussy lips, then beg him to take her again and again until she inadvertently turns into an agitated, shrill witch, as though she'd been possessed by demons, spewing obscenities because she couldn't take it, couldn't control the monstrous lust welling up from within her gut, that demands that she gets fucked and screwed until she walks bow-legged, if only to quench that unending fire burning up her soul to ashes - that turning point was really becoming a chore, cringey and something he's like to avoid, sooner than later.

In fact, he received a short Fairy Messenger note from one of his sons - the legitimate ones - that a cage of fresh young girls had been brought in from a slave trader off the coast of the Great Eastern Seas, just the day before. Some are as young as nine to twelve, and Jin Guangshan sets his sights on his new prey with a tasty lick on his lips. The aged wench should be discarded and forgotten soon, because his lap and bedroom is better suited for fresh meat, brand new goods, and especially high-quality females of a lower age range that he prefers, compared to this rather nameless wench.

The woman, barely a few days from her engagement to her future husband, is a writhing confused mess of gasps and moans, tears and hiccups, of “Yes, Yes, please spear this flowerbud more and fill it with your manly milk, where it belongs, Grandpapa”s and “No, stop, it hurts, not so hard, I don’t want this, I don’t like it, pull it out, stop please stop”s. She rides Grandpa Jin most of the time, since he’s no longer interested to mount and rut deep into her missionary style, from the back or from the side. He prefers to lounge on the bed, gloating at his virile masculine victory and enjoy having the woman do the work - after all, at his age, twice of hers and having spent more than two decades bedding young girls, he deserved to live like a pornstar king, a laoban of his harem; she’d climb up and straddle him on her own, then do her sexy dances and hip sways, touching the old man’s body sensuously to elicit some arousal, shamelessly moan into his ears or pull him for a passionate kiss, even shoving her breasts to his lips or grabbing his hand to put them on her bosom - anything, anything to get Sect Leader Jin Guangshan to love her more -, even show him how an eighteen year-old’s desperately fluttering and aphrodisiac-excited pussy swallows a man’s penis and fuck lewdly in-and-out like a whore’s - but he’s hardly impressed, because he’s had the same done to him by attractive younger maidens over the last decades, with more finesse, showmanship and appealing styles than this innocent, sex-illiterate gu niang who probably hasn’t learn how to have proper wild sex until she met her father-in-law. Granted, she wasn’t wholly into this incestuous relationship, because she continues to resist the effects of the drug and her three-day intensive training done inside a creaky horse carriage, albeit half-heartedly; her determination to fight evaporates each time Grandpa Jin touches her skin, implying that she’s a weak-willed maiden who isn’t all that obsequious either, so she doesn’t fit into any category of the dirty old man’s buckets of favourite qualities and traits, which means that she’ll be binned into the harem trash beneath the throne room very soon.

The carriage arrives at the Carp Tower shortly before six o’ clock, just as the sun was setting, and is scheduled to reach the bottom of the towering marble stairs in a few minutes’ time. Jin Guangshan sighs, rather boredly, because reality comes biting back the moment he steps out and faces his vast kingdom and its intricate web of problematic politics, succession among half-sons that try to assassinate one another, war-mongering amongst his generals until neighbouring states complain of bloodshed and daylight robbery, staking his claims on faraway clans and lands, dealing with troubling illegal trade and line his pockets with more gold, having too much illegal money to launder, money-grubbing and unloyal subjects, backstabbing and catfighting wives, concubines and consorts - the list goes on.

Just as any man would like five more minutes rolling in the bed before waking up from a nice, relaxing dream, the dirty old grandpa smiled devilishly; he yawns as well, because sex is indeed relaxing and he'd lost count of how many times he'd fallen asleep while having his penis and balls massaged and pleased by the wench - perhaps he's getting old -, and wake up with nice convulsions running up and down his body until his toes curl and his throat rasps with delight. He tells the driver to drive around the sprawling compounds around the tower, and indulges in yet another lovemaking session with the woman in his arms, listening to her pitiful weeping and rhythmic grunts like ageless, timeless music to his ears. He quite likes to push his dick deep and grind in circles until he can make out the shape of his tool on her lower belly, gouging the flesh round and round the wench's birth canal, and he likes to cup his hands around any plump curves he can find on the sweating, moaning, squirming, sometimes jerking flesh, whether slapping and violently grasping fertile hips and buttocks, or milking those lovely milkjugs and shaking and vibrating them in his palms before squeezing them so hard that bruises are left in his wake; and of course, he likes to pound deep into her despite her cries and weak protests, stirring that pool of semen he'd left as a souvenir inside her wrecked, ruined, loosened vagina, and keep fulfilling his god-granted purpose on this Earth, that is to sow his vile seed in every wench like this one, and to make sure that more of his offspring are born to satisfy his pleasures - he'd rape his daughters and daughters-in-laws anytime, bed his grandchildren, and just a couple of years back, he got hold of a kindergartener great-grandchild who hadn't ripened and reached puberty yet, but he enjoyed her flesh anyway because she, like all wenches, belong to him as his property, his god-given right, and he can take his pleasure from them whenever, wherever, he wants.

The horse carriage circles around the Tower's compounds for quite some time, long after the sun has set and the moon has risen, simply because it's the prerogative of His Greatness, Jin Guangshan - period.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 267

“Lan Zhan, that’s awful. How can you write so eloquently and with such graphic descriptions, and yet speak so little in real life?”

“You asked me to write a scene. I just penned down my thoughts, that’s all. I’ve had plenty of experience with such kinds of scenes. It comes naturally.”

“I asked you to imagine and describe what’s going on with shijie over on the other side in Lanling, but this... this is akin to an erotica novel that we can publish and sell for money!”

“Mn. Publish, and sell for money.”

“Ahhh... you’re sometimes like a broken record, muttering just a few repetitive words at times, but explaining technicalities in great length on other occasions. There’s a glitch in your verbalization capabilities, though your perviness remains quite impressive.”

“Shall I put the script into this world’s core programming? Do you want your shijie to go through this experience?”

“Suit yourself. I’m here to watch hardcore porn through my Paperman’s eyes anyway, and shijie ’s my daily staple of heterosexual smut. There’s a lack of strong and notable female characters in the story, so it’s not as though I have a buffet to choose from.”

“Mn. After this, will you take a shower at the bath house? Or head for the dining hall for dinner?”

“Erm... sex in the shower, then food. I’m kinda horny after reading your script. C’mon Grandpapa Lan, shove your old cheesy dick inside Wei meimei’s fragrant, juicy and underaged ass-pussy! Ha ha ha!”

“... Mn!!!”

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

On the night before the proper start of the so-called Gusu Lan exchange programme’s academic year, at least for the Summer season of Year 2000 B.C., a handful of student disciples had some family matters to attend to first, before delving into their studies. The youngest two boys were well-versed and more versatile with next-gen talisman usage, including sending multiple notes using a Fairy Messenger spell whose spellcasting period was prolonged. Both Jiang Cheng and Huaisang shot short, typo-infested notes to their families back home, asking how’s everyone back there, have they had dinner yet, how are the family pets doing, what were the latest news in their home provinces, is uncle so-and-so doing well or has he kicked the bucket, even attach grainy images of themselves doing selfies with their school books in the age of medieval 2000 B.C.

Unfortunately, for the older generation, such rapidfire texting wasn’t a trending thing, and instead, more of an annoyance because why would any educated young man deliberately shorten four words to two, which made no sense and the resulting two-word phrase contains the wrong meaning and context, but used only to ‘sound’ and ‘pronounce’ the words that they were meant to replace? So, in the end, the frustrated party at the other end spent their silverpiece to make a proper voice call to their studying son / younger brother, which made the two boys huff and roll their eyes like emo teenagers, as they received those puffy amber balls of lights and squeezed them to connect.

“Really? A- Jie called back? Oh... you mean a text. Yeah, that glowy golden picture that’s like a parchment with words written on it, displayed for a short while until you disconnect the call... So, what did she say? Mm-hmm... Mm-hmm... Really? That’s it?... Can you text her back to ask when she’s gonna do a group call, ‘cause I want to talk to her and have Meng Yao join at the same time... of course you can do that, you just-- oh never mind... Well, of course you can’t reach her by voice call because she’s not picking it up. She wrote that she’s almost at the Carp Tower but the weather’s quite bad up North, so she will contact you later, right? Just leave her a text message that-- ah, shucks. Pass the Fairy Messenger spell to one of the younger disciples, will you?... Seriously, how techno-outdated tie and niang are without your children around?”

“ Ge ! Big news! Meng Yao didn’t call back Huan gege as promised, and it’s been three nights since! Huan gege ’s gone out with some aides to look for him up to the mountain ranges bordering the north of Gusu! I’m worried, ge , what if Meng Yao met with some kind of accident and he cannot call anyone for help?... I know he’s no longer a Nie servant, but still... Ge ...! Are you able to contact the Jin sect leader to find out what’s happened to Meng Yao?... Don’t get mad at me!... I know this is a private family matter and not one that concerns the Council, but how else can we find out what’s happened to Meng Yao? Ge ...! A-Sang didi will be heartbroken if anything bad happens to Meng Yao...”

There was plenty of drama going on, in which Lan Zhan sat still on his bed and meditated throughout the entire noisy episode. Huan gege had probably airlifted himself off with some seniors towards the north, using Shuoyue and Liebing, and other magical detecting equipment at the Gusu Lan's greatest cultivators' arsenal at their disposal (Wei Ying told Huan gege to bring along some raincoats, because it's raining cats and dogs in the North, past the mountain ranges, according to the weather forecast printed on this week's periodicals). War General Nie Mingjue, who had barely returned to the Nie stronghold fortress after a turbulent and much-delayed First Class FeiEx flight that had several layovers due to a spate of thunderstorms and bad weather raging from the Far North, was pestered to get in touch with their neighbours, the Lanling Jin and their leader to find out Meng Yao's whereabouts. Jiang Cheng kept close tabs on his stack of Fairy Messenger talismans so that in the event an amber ball of light reaches him, he'd be able to respond immediately with a call of his own, if needed; his A- Jie 's short message to her parents didn't really assuage him of his worries, because he really need to hear her voice to be sure that she'll be in the safe hands of her new family residing within the Carp Tower.

Wei Ying became a little miffed because he only managed to talk a bit with his father, before Madam Yu got on the line and he backed off - because he knew that his foster mother was terribly shocked and agitated at the sudden loss of her eldest girl, and for some reason, Wei Ying was always to be blamed for the bad things that happen to the family. 'But... getting engaged to a good man, isn't that a fortuitous thing?' Jiang Fengmian had asked in the background, and he vouched for Meng Yao's good character because he'd seen with his own eyes how gentle and caring the meek boy was; and then, there was a loud string of complaints, in which Jiang Cheng and Wei Ying had to shove their fingers into their ear canals lest the ear-splitting shrieks deafen anyone, because Madam Yu was utterly upset that her eldest girl traded a crown prince for a pauper in the hierarchy of the Lanling Jins, and she would lose face and never want to meet her nosy neighbours or have tea with her circle friends that consist of rich wives of sect leaders. Jiang Cheng and Wei Ying facepalmed at their mother's reasoning, and sweated as she continued her tirade of angry explosive accusations about getting cheated (of what, one wonders) and feeling cheapened (what is being measured and what is cheap here, one wonders again) by the transaction (really, are you selling your eldest girl for something profitable, that one asks) - because none of the males divulged the fact that Jiang Yan Li was already raped and that she bears a child before the engagement with her fiance.

The rather unsettling talk with families concluded - finally -, Jiang Cheng and Huaisang went to one side of the room, sat on the floor and began to study for tomorrow's lessons as promised to their family members back home. However, knowing the cycle of hormones in teenagers, and that it was night time when everyone's had their bellies filled and taken a hot bath, and on an equivalent of a Sunday night when one would want to maximize his weekend pleasures before Monday comes raging like an uninvited tempest - the two boys soon ditched their textbooks in exchange for yet more of Huaisang's exclusive R-18 material; simply because Huaisang is a powerful prince of his clan and could demand bookstore owners operating under Nie-sponsored merchant guilds to relinquish their erotica collection for his personal investigation and other research purposes, despite the fact that he's not yet eighteen years of age.

Jiang Cheng called out to his brother, "Wei Wu Xian, I've had enough of studying for tonight! I can't read words anymore and my vision is getting blurry from studying too hard, so I'm going to look at some pictures before I sleep!", in which Wei Ying rolled his eyes and gave a flat answer, "Sure, go ahead," because for some childish reason, Jiang Cheng still seeks approval from someone more senior than him to read illegal porn, in a room of four males where he would prefer to go pantless, armed with a box of tissues, and jack off eagerly on his own while flipping page after page of pretty topless gu niang drawn by avant garde artists of that era. Wei Ying thought it was a rather endearing habit that Jiang Cheng is still a didi at heart, always trying to emulate his da ge in some ways, or seek the da ge's permission, but not openly admitting to doing so because it's a shameful thing for an up and rising young prince, particularly in the matter of male masturbation and reading porn.

Huaisang scooted over with a vulgar magazine featuring full-blown pictures of naked gu niang posing in various sex positions, and Jiang Cheng's eyes went ballistic. The two started exchanging excited chatter, comparing sizes and imagining how soft, firm or bouncy they must feel - "they" being generalized in this context -, and soon, both were beating each other's meat because Huaisang read somewhere, probably a source with homosexual association, that it feels better to receive pleasure from another person.

Then, Wei Ying loomed behind them and extended his long arms over their shoulders, to the surprise and embarrassment of the two boys, then maneuvered them as close as possible until they were almost sandwiched facing each other and had to cross their legs over each other's hips while sitting on the floor, each protesting and wondering what is Wei gongzi up to. Wei Ying smirked and said something about experience being a better teacher, and since he's sixteen therefore he's older than the two, and reached down with one rather large hand to grasp two twitching, erect smaller but meaty dicks in a single swoop. He gave the two a terrifyingly good handjob with a tightened fist, and the two boys started to hump each other instinctively, because it did feel very, very nice to rub the undersides of their penises and engage in dick fencing with lots of pre-cum creating a frothy, squishy and slippery warm mess between their matted crotches. The enhanced hand-made cocksleeve turned out to be awesome, that he cackled like a witch when the two boys prematurely ejaculated almost at the same time - there was little warning, other than balls tightening, pulses running up and down those finger-long sticks of sausages, the boys' bellies and backs cramping up, and that tell-tale silly, dreamy, drunken faces, slackened jaws, half-yawns and eyes rolling back-esque sequence - and later, Wei Ying would wipe off the dripping smelly, mildly sweet semen off his face and hair, and asked the boys to try again and compare who shoots higher and further - which is much more productive than trying to gauge, visually, the size of breasts or the depth of vaginas on paper.

Jiang Cheng and Huaisang spent hours in competitive masturbating and mutual penile rubs, in pursuit of this new hobby and goal of measuring their growth spurts, to the delight of the older Wei.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 268

The boys hit the hay at exactly nine o' clock - because, as Wei Ying testified and tried it on himself many times in his lifetimes, orgasms are absolutely and delightfully relaxing and induces drowsiness in men within minutes after detonation, and doubles sleep quality instantly, sometimes quadruples if done in pairs, such as the case of the two youngest boys in the room, curled up like blushing (but dishevelled and drained) babes in each other's arms on Jiang Cheng's bed; like the stoic dad who doesn't say much nor complain about their 'sons' sexual misbehaviours, Lan Zhan walked over and picked the two up with a single arm, and arranged them like a pantless couple on the bed, because that's how he envisions men should be sleeping together anyway. Wei Ying yawned and remarked that it was fun teaching them how to pleasure themselves; he also gave them a preview of superior handjobs - the kinds that adult rapists and female prostitutes give to little boys -, testicle-play - such adorable pairs of little grapes, they are -, and a how-to guide to men's erogenous zones - because when touching dick, don't forget the nips -, including just a few seconds of having his fingers stuck into both boys' anuses to find their p-spots. The two squirmed and felt something itchy, even spicy-hot and ticklishly fart-frightening, but the sensation was too much for their underaged minds to comprehend and accept - anuses are for pooping, and poops stink, Huaisang whined - so, sex ed laoshi Wei Wu Xian decided to postpone those advanced lessons to another day, another night.

They should also turn in on time, and start to follow a healthy, Gusu Lan-approved routine, the then-future husband said. Stop calling ourselves then-futures, the wife snaps, because they're still married even in this alternate reality and at this age. The husband pinked considerably, and then started to undress, asking if they can play husband and wife, or daddy and mommy, frolicking and playing their adult games in bed when the two 'sons' are asleep.

Of course, the lewd and loose wife laughed and gave the husband a peck on the cheeks. After he washes his fingers, though, because Huaisang- erzi 's anus did smell like poop. So, after that said washing with soap and properly dried with a clean washcloth, the husband extruded a floor mat like squeezing a tub of peanut butter from his toes, and together, the loving couple dived in for a truly adult good time in a sex-paradise that would last for two seconds.

.

The first day of school is as important as one's birthday - it happens only once per academic year -, yet as mundane as waking up at five to brush one's teeth, wash his face and freshen up, putting on an ironed and creaseless uniform, taking that extra bit of time to comb his hair and sprucing up his appearances - make-up is not allowed within the school grounds -, don't forget the elegant shiny guan to beautify the topknot, then making sure his bags are packed, the correct books are inside, a first-day gift for the highly-respected laoshi is properly wrapped and bagged, before putting on his white socks and a pair of spiffy new white shoes. Oh, his underwear is washed and hung out the windowsill to dry, and he gives a quick prayer to the local deities that it does not rain in the morning. That is Lan Zhan's routine, and it does not change much over the course of the year. By five-thirty, he is ready with his school bag which looks more like a satchel, or more fashionably, a man-bag slung on his shoulder; a garbage bag lying by the door - he takes out the trash on his way out -, and a laundry bag - clothes and clothing items that need to be sent for washing at the common laundry facilities, including Wei Ying's soiled jammies, because he stripped the wife whilst the latter is still asleep, wrapped up in his blankie like a burrito so that precious Wei Ying doesn't freeze.

Students get their breakfast at the dining halls, which open at six as well - but some regulars like Lan Zhan can opt to be there earlier and cook their own meals, because the kitchens are also an educational facility for home economics -, and then they're allowed to change to more comfortable clothes if they would like to do some exercise or work out some sweat around their boarding school compounds such as the courtyard or the farms, shower at the communal baths filled with cold springwater at sunrise, and must be in the classrooms by eight.

Wei Ying though, wants his five more minutes, and the darling man (boy) gives him that, in the form of multiple trips to their underground kingdoms so that by five minutes past five in the morning, Wei Ying is more than freshened up and raring to start a brand new fulfilling day with his loins running on empty. Still, he'd roll around in his bed and watches his darling man (boy) do all the needed chores, such as sweeping their dorm with a straw broom, putting away everyone's stuff to where they belong, checking and rechecking that all cupboards are sorted out and closed, the stove's switched off - at least there's no fire or smoke -, the bathroom showerhead's deactivated and the buckets of water for drinking and washing are filled to the brim, and every wipeable surface is sparkling clean.

So, by five-thirty, the two head out, hand in hand into the chilly dawn, garbed in their white uniforms and an extra coat to stave off the morning chill; with Lan Zhan asking Wei Ying what he wants to eat, because the darling man (boy) would like to cook his lovely wife (also a boy) his favourite spicy dishes in the kitchens before six o' clock in the morning.

.

Jiang Cheng mumbled unhappily when the first roosters crowed a little before six. Having lived in a rural setting for part of his life when the Lotus Pier was still a small lakeside port town, he was used to waking up early to the sounds of nature. Since he and Huaisang are best buddies, he slammed pillows at the more princely and spoiled Nie gongzi to rouse the smaller but older boy. Both staggered and stumbled around with eyes half-closed and plenty of yawns, and to save time, they did their bathroom routines together although Jiang Cheng complained that Huaisang stunk up the place when he took a dump into the waste bucket and didn't close the lid - because that was dirty and Meng Yao always did that, not him, said the Nie gongzi.

Huaisang wasn't too good with his morning routines especially when he wasn't fully awake, so Jiang Cheng, being a boy almost two years younger than the Nie gongzi, had to help him wipe his body, tie his hair, and put on the uniform - because he never had to do 'em by his own, and Meng Yao was always the one who prepared him for the day, ranted the spoiled, yawning fifteen-year old prince. Fortunately A-Zhan had ironed and hung their clothes in their wardrobe the night before - while they slumbered from too much masturbation -, packed their school bags with the correct textbooks, forms and paperwork and other essentials like a set of ink-brushes and necessary writing equipment, and even written a note on things to check and do before leaving the room, pasted on the main door. Thus, Jiang Cheng easily referred to Steps One to Ten, checked the checklists, and he even added an apology in handwriting for - one, the messed up bathroom splattered with puddles of water and left without scrubbing down the stains or picking out strands of hair and pubic hair from the drain; two, the potty needs to be emptied in the fields and rinsed; three, the clay stove cracked and was rendered unusable after Huaisang tried to boil a bowl of water on it (don't ask how); and four, Jiang Cheng apologized for the footprints left on the floor, which need to be wiped by a soaked washcloth but they were out of time and had to rush off with their school bags, their first-day gifts for the laoshi, and a bundle of dirty laundry in their arms, at an alarming seven-thirty in the morning, when most disciples were done with their breakfasts. The two boys dearly hoped A-Zhan would continue his extremely valuable role of housekeeping for their dorm, because they clearly cannot manage it themselves.

Jiang Cheng and Huaisang managed to grab some dumplings and pastries and dunk them into savoury vegetarian broths and sweet soy milk to make swallowing whole mouthfuls a whole lot easier - there was loud chewing and even louder gulps and the thump-thump of fists on the chest and back when either choked, with drops of those broths and soy milk littering on the tabletop, to the consternation of the jiejie s tasked to keep the dining halls clean. Both boys still had something in their mouth - whether a piece of pastry (bing) or an apple - when they sprinted for the classrooms after dropping their laundry at the washing facilities, to be picked up after noon when the clothes had been hung to dry and collected then folded by school workers.

In any case, each disciple has his or her own challenges in starting the day, particularly after the nice week-long lockdown holiday. They put the past behind them, and shortly before eight, scores of disciples dressed in clean white robes filed in quietly to their assigned classrooms, armed with bags and other necessities, anxious yet filled with excitement to experience the Gusu Lan's renowned gold standard of education.

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

“Lan Zhan! Did you know that our voices are dubbed? Both in the audio drama, the donghua and even the live-action series?”

“Mn. That's what the end credits say at the end of each episode.”

“Lan Zhan, let me hear your original voice!”

“I... it’s... not a nice voice. A little low, and not as expressive. It sounds like a young man in his early twenties, just past college. There’s even a hint of dialect, which I’m trying to--”

“C’mon! C’mon! I wanna hear!”

“Ahem... Wei Ying .”

“AH HA HA HA HA HA. It sounds overblown! Too forced! Are you constipated?!”

“...”

“Aii-yoooo. Lan Zhan, don’t feel embarrassed. I like your voice, after all. Here, let me clear my throat and try it out.”

“Mn.”

“Uh-- Uh-- Ahem... Lan Zhan !”

“...”

“Say something! How was it?”

“It’s slightly lower than what I’m used to hearing. But it sounds just like you. Animated, lively. The pronunciation is spot on.”

“I have a dialect too, from the southwest around Yunmeng.”

“...”

“Bwah ha ha! Look at your face! You want to hear it in my home dialect?”

“... Mn!!!”

“Okay, here it goes...!”

(Later, Lan Zhan complained that Wei Ying’s intonation and pronunciation sounded all wrong, but it was spoken in such a sing-song way, which was quite comforting and melodious to some extent, that he made Wei Ying read a passage of one of his favourite classic Gusu literature.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 269

Since this is an interlude, and some time ago, someone asked for it:

‘Twas the night before the first day of school, in the hour of the walking dead especially a boy aged thirteen and the other fifteen, made to sleepwalk through their lucid dreams that they’ll not remember upon waking.

With the use of mischief and magic, Jiang Wanyin and Nie Huaisang were made to stand together near their beds, snoring as they stood upright, tormented by pleasurable nightmares that included Wei Ying’s almighty Hands, and soon, he enlisted the help of Lan Zhan’s almighty Fingers too.

Wei Ying’s mastery with handjobs are a given, because he’s sixteen-years old and a whole lot more, and he knows how to pleasure a man, especially himself - so it’s not difficult to extrapolate those techniques and experiences to others, especially those whose penises aren’t so long and thick, maybe about two fingers worth in size, that he can manage with each of his hand fisting and feasting every boy’s dick. Jiang Cheng and Huaisang dreamt of being trapped in a giant spider’s web, and for some reason, pitcher plants descended from the ceilings to rape their penises forcefully and against their will, and those pitchers felt as real as lubricated, tightened fingers, for obvious reasons. Then, tongue-like tentacles emerged from within those large pitchers and both boys started to cry in their sleep.

“Lan Zhan, Lan Zhan, put more effort into it, please. I’m not getting any more pre-cum than before,” the wife nagged, before going back to suck each young teenage boy’s penis while stroking vigorously. The wife loves to insert the tip of his forked tongue into the shuddering meatsticks, raping the urethral tube until it convulsed erratically and Jiang Cheng mumbled about peeing into a pitcher, then conquered the walnut-sized prostates until hip-swinging Huaisang moans like a woman, muttering that he's trying to shake 'em, shake 'em off by doing a belly-hip dance, and after that, the tongue, as usual, travelled and meandered its way to reach the boys' shivering, tucked and oh so cute slightly-fuzzed testicles and the wife enjoyed a tasty double serving of midnight snacks. The wife fondled the boys' balls and massaged those eggs; the more he squeezed and vibrate them using advanced sex techniques known only to adult male (rapist) professionals, the faster spoonfuls of fresh virginal boy-sperm were forcibly awoken by the sexual attacks, and they were unwillingly drained out straight into the hollowed tongue tips.

The husband crouched and focused on raking and kneading fingertips to the helpless prostate gland through the slick muscular walls, coaxing the defenceless organ to milk itself out with prostatic spasms to feed the greedy wife. He'd cleaned the shit out of Huaisang's buttocks and made sure Jiang Cheng's bladder had been emptied and the asshole had been douched too using swirling magical water spouts - to the boy's discomfort - so he knew that those cavities were hygienic, clean, not smelly, and he wouldn't suffer from food poisoning if he touched his food with those fingers that pleased the boys' prostate through the rectum.

After that, when the last available drop of semen was swallowed and only less-flavourful and less-appetizing seedless fluids were left, Wei Ying released the boys' penises from his double forked tongue - an impressive demonic mutation -, with a smacking-licious pop, and asked, "Do you want to do a foursome man-train? We could do rock-paper-scissors to determine who goes in first."

The husband really wanted to stick it into his good wife's anus and keep it there, because that's where he belonged, and that felt right - for the most part. But the wife said, no, nein, nada, because how often does the couple come across a willing foursome? More than you'd think, the husband wanted to retort, but he remained silent as usual, not wanting to stir the hornet's nest that was the bossy and bullying wife. So they played a game of man-train, starting with Lan Zhan being at the bottom, fucked by Huaisang, who was in turn, fucked by Jiang Cheng, and Wei Ying ruled the roost while laughing maniacally. Next, Wei Ying lost the game and he bawled like a babe because having one middle-aged man on top of a fifteen-year old who sandwiched the thirteen-year old and together, they flattened the poor soggy bottom bread that was Wei Ying's ass - it was too heavy to bear, and everyone's wild watery ejaculations dribbled all over his buttocks and messed up his bad-ass looks.

The couple enjoyed other iterations of the man-train game, although Lan Zhan thought that his wife's ass felt better, firmer, juicier and sexier to the touch. Wei Ying refuted his claims, saying that he was a hypocrite to butter up to the wife in the wife's presence, but in actual fact, and Wei Ying took video recordings as evidence, Lan Zhan went wild with passion like a beast in heat when he was lodged between Huaisang's buttocks, and he howled like a virile man who hadn't climaxed for years when he tasted Jiang Cheng's sweet thirteen-year old ass-pussy. Both boys were deflowered that night, thanks to Lan Zhan's mighty over-six inch monster dick, while Wei Ying dipped his own penis inside Jiang Cheng's hole and mm-hmm, nice and tight, just like all sweet young things, but he didn't quite savour the experience because as foster siblings, they'd spent time naked, arguing, pulling on each others' topknots and ponytails and engaged in play-wrestling, that it didn't feel like an authentic session of making incestuous love; and with Huaisang, Wei Ying wondered the boy had been raped by Nie Mingjue early in life, because the anus seemed a little loose for a fifteen-year old - not that he hadn't tasted any fifteen year-olds in his own underground kingdom harem - so Lan Zhan offered a plausible explanation, that probably he ate something spicy or oily at dinnertime, so his rump was loose and he suffered from mild diarrhea - thus that poop-in-the-pants episode -, and true enough, the next thing Wei Ying knew, he yelped in panic, frantically trying to pull out his penis from Huaisang's rumbling ass, because Huaisang dreamt that he was squeezing out the largest turd ever and his anal sphincters locked with a vice grip around the fleeing penis... Finally, as a result, Wei Ying bawled like a babe, because his crotch is covered with an explosive splatter of liquidy poop and that horrid unpuckering anus kept blowing bubbles of diluted stinky poop everywhere on the floor, and god knows if any went straight into Wei Ying's penis because it was quite a fart-astic detonation back there.

No matter, the husband assured his wife, and with a snap of his fingers embedded with an Infinity Gauntlet, reality was flipped, and everyone was clean again - fortunately.

Wei Ying breathed a sigh of relief, and his mood returned to sunshine and rainbows. I want to play double tag teams, he said with a grin. The husband thought that sounded suspiciously a technique used in wrestling in the Far, Far West, so he went along, curious as to what can be doubled for four males engaging in a homosexual orgy.

It turned out that Wei Ying wanted to play double penetrations, and since the two youngest boys were still sleeping with incredible discomfort etched on their faces and their squirming bodies - not to mention dangling shrivelled balls and half-limp penises -, Wei Ying cast Invisible Hands to aid him in maneuvering the boys' bodies to suit his desire, like puppets on strings.

There were lots of movements, so from time to time, the boys woke up, disturbed and drowsy, before falling back to an amnesiac sleep under Wei Ying's amazing Sleep-All spell (such a lame name, the husband remarked). At one point, Jiang Cheng dreamt - actually, in a state of wakefulness while his REM sleep period peaked - that he was gangraped by his bestest friends and family members. “I hate you, Wei Wu Xian! What have I done to deserve a person like you! You steal my spotlight and make me look dumb in front of tie and niang , and now, you’re worst than a monster between my legs... OOOOH Sweet Guan Yin, what was that? Do it, do it again! I command you to touch there again, and I don’t care how! What? Your dick, what else! Touch that spot again! OOOOH Sweet Guan Yin!” the boy wept, cried, moaned and groaned, and was truly a ball of contradicting emotions, harsh words and striking contrasts. In his dream, he was more readily open with his feelings, so he said what he needed to, to lift the heavy burden in his heart and be able to sleep better - a kind of cathartic release, really, thanks to the Sleep magic.

Wei Ying listened and learned what made his didi tick, so he embraced his lil’ brother and whispered to the husband below to ramp up his own giant penis, and together they watched A-Cheng drown in double homosexual pleasure with two dicks sawing in and out alternatingly from his blossomed asshole. A-Cheng’s nipples were suckled by his Wei gege , and his waist and buttocks were groped by A-Zhan gege , and it was sinful as hell that the thirteen-year old boy sang so sweetly each time two huge cocks skewered the rosebud with one meaty palm rubbing the belly that bulged with each heartfelt fuck. Wei Ying murmured to A-Cheng that he loves him no matter what, that he’s sorry for the hurt he’s caused, and hoped that-- “ Gege , didi ai ni! ” Jiang Cheng cried out so loud with a manly scream and a cracked voice of a thirteen-year old, and Wei Ying shed a tear at that point - he couldn’t hold back his feelings as well, so he leaned in to give an incestuous kiss to precious A-Cheng, and shot his load, fifteen rich spurts, signed with love from the Wei gege .

With two loads safely spilled inside Jiang Cheng’s boyish rump, leaving him twitching and drooling on the wooden floor from an exquisite high never felt before, that he even peed uselessly from the wonderful electric running through his nerve-ends - Huaisang was next to be sexually assaulted. The short but older boy was easily carried like a huge christmas present and placed on santa claus-Lan Zhan-papa’s lap. Wei Ying didn’t want to bottom per se, because his thin long legs couldn't hold much weight, let alone withstand the impact of two men's weight bearing down on his penis - it'd leave him crooked, bent and in all likelihood, infertile and screaming in pain for a while -, so he went in at waist level like inserting a key into its lock, easy peasy. As the two started to tag team against poor moaning and sore Huaisang, Wei Ying worked his evil magic like a witch that can peer into a man's deepest, darkest secrets. He asked, what ails you, my boy, and Huaisang started to blabber a whole lot more than he usually does, with his eyes closed.

"I don't know, I don't know, it wasn't me, it wasn't my fault," Huaisang mumbled, "Da ge was naked in the shower when I accidentally ran into the private baths, because my bladder was full. I was only nine at that time, I didn't know how to hold back my pee for longer than usual because Meng Yao never taught me how. So I screamed at the sight of my naked brother, because goodness gracious, he had huge muscles, and he flexed his biceps, pecs and abs while drenched by the torrent of water pouring from the top, and I had this unimaginably hot feeling welling up from my groin, and then peed on the spot!"

Lan Zhan could smell from a mile away at how this was going to turn out, so he became a little excited - perhaps the result of an introvert finding commonalities with others -, and fucked Huaisang's blossomed ass harder than necessary.

"I cried and apologized, then da ge scooped me into his arms to pacify me. I was so tiny and he was so big, looming over me, and somehow, that mismatch in size made me feel comforted, even happy, and a warm tingling feeling shamelessly went through my pee-pee. I couldn't control it, it was a physiological reaction to my brother's presence, and I cried again in horror and shame."

Wei Ying liked where this was going, so he too, increased his pace and started to draw circles, squares and stars once he went in deep and grind round and round the boy's bubble butt. Huaisang's ass was a bit larger and spacious than A-Cheng's, admittedly, so there was more room for the husband and wife couple to maneuver and to draw circles inside the Nie boy.

True enough, Huaisang revealed, in his tormented sleep, that Nie da ge ended up comforting the boy by playing with the nine-year old's penis until Huaisang squealed with unfamiliar but shocking tingles that resembled rhythmic squeezes of muscles across his pelvis. Rough, thick fingers peeled the boy's foreskin and rubbed the strawberry with such vigour, until it turned into a deep shade of excited red, engorged with blood and hardened up in a way that it shouldn't have - yet -, and Nie didi made many inappropriate grunts and groans for a boy of his adolescent age.

“Did Nie Mingjue make you cum for the first time?” Wei Ying asked out of curiosity, because he really wanted to know the Nies' deepest lewd secrets. Huaisang sobbed and nodded, yes, when was just ten-years old, he confessed. “Good boy, you did well, and it was the right thing to do to give your first orgasm to your older brother,” Wei Ying murmured and gave the fifteen-year old boy a sweet kiss on the cheeks. Huaisang visibly calmed down at that, as though he dreamt of something very nice all of a sudden. Lan Zhan guessed that Nie da ge must've appeared in the boy's dreams and patted the boy's head with a warm smile, and said the same thing. Not long after that, Huaisang was fucked silly and had his shrunken balls vibrated with Energy spells until he orgasmed, yelling his gege 's name many times, pleading the Chifeng Zun to keep playing with his dick because it feels very good to be touched by an older brother. The moment he slid off bonelessly to the floor, with two wet dicks popping out like lollpops from someone's mouth, the fifteen-year old let out a long string of farts - and pooped again.

Wei Ying pinched his nose and waved in front of his face, and demanded that Lan Zhan solved their unsexy woes once and for all. With a snap of fingers, the husband erased the unsavoury sight and odour, and cured whatever that was ailing Huaisang's bad tummy. The two were put to bed after a clean-up, absolutely drunk from getting drilled by two mighty cocks, each.

With their sexual fantasies for foursomes sated for the time being, and many more planned in the works for the next few nights, the couple went to bed with sexually flushed and secretly-delighted Lan Zhan screwed tightly and deeply inside his lovely Wei Ying, continually orgasming with weak penile contractions pumping seed into his contented wife, because in the end, no matter who they cross paths with or who they are paired to, that is where he belongs, which is, Wei Ying's sexy asshole.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 270

Classes are held during the hours of eight to quarter past nine, half past nine to quarter before eleven, eleven to quarter past twelve, half past one to quarter past two, and half past two to quarter before four. The lessons are a mix of indoor studies and outdoor activities, each led by a laoshi and assistant instructors, with breaks in-between, and lunch is served at the dining halls around noon.

With nearly a hundred students living and studying in the Cloud Recesses, there are logistical and curricular challenges that the Gusu Lan strive to manage with tip top excellence. There are seventy males and a little less than thirty females, and lessons are segregated by gender and rank. During the age of circa 2000 B.C., usually males receive proper education whilst females do not, however, there are exceptions because during these exceptional summer camp-like programmes, with a prolonged duration of stay away from home, lowly servants and sometimes, close family members of similar age groups as the students form part of the attendees too, and are welcomed by the Gusu Lan to study, improve and advance their lifelong education.

There are three classes, each accommodating about twenty to fifty students. The First Class is reserved for the elites, usually one or two representatives of the sect leader and another handful of seniors, individuals of potential or their most loyal followers. It goes without saying that the lessons are intended for aristocrats, dignitaries and future cultivation fighters and leaders, high in quality of content, and students receive top-notch instructions, training and learning material from the cream of the Gusu Lan's crop. Jiang Wanyin, Nie Huaisang, Jin Zixuan, even the despised and much-maligned bigwig Wen Chao served by Wen Ning that finally made their appearance, attended the First Class that almost exclusively consisted of male disciples; there are few and notable females, such as Wen Qing who hails from a respectable healer family of her sect, and Mian Mian who sat modestly at the back of the class because she wasn't really a tough cookie based on her name and appearance, but she can tough it out if the bad boys dared to challenge her.

Due to certain eminent sects have the money and the means to sponsor additional disciples to participate in this upscale, swanky and highly cultured part of the Cloud Recesses academy, nearly half of the student population have been registered to attend the First Class, with their fees fully paid (or free, for those hailing from the host sect), in which there are about twelve from Lanling Jin, ten from Qishan Wen, eight from the hosting sect, another seven from Qinghe Nie, just a paltry six from Yunmeng Jiang, and the rest, numbering more than ten, from lesser sects.

The Second Class is intended for the less refined ones, mostly lower class disciples who prefer to learn using their brawns rather than their brains. Instead of the scholarly arts, the class takes on more practical life skills, including DIY repairs, woodwork, metal crafting, agricultural sciences, hunting and foraging, forestry and mining, even trade and commerce. Here, artisans, farmers, blue-collared workers and astute merchants are made out of young teenage pimple-faced kids, destined for the lower working classes of ancient Middle Kingdom society. Naturally, the student population has a more balanced mix of male and female genders, and consists of none of the Great Clans, and entirely of the lesser sects, numbering about thirty in total. Lan Zhan signed up for the Second Class, because he thought he would benefit more in learning how to repair furniture in case the Handyman Of The House wasn't around, and crafting fine wooden or metal accessories to adorn lovely Wei Ying, than, say, reciting his family's over-4000 rules and learn Level Three magic spells for the nth time in his lifetimes.

The Third Class is for the runt of the litter, the leftovers, the lower-than-lower servants, the illiterate and the uneducated - but still, aspiring to learn something beneficial, particularly to serve masters better and to satisfy their masters' families. The student population is almost exclusively made entirely of females - Wei Ying being the only handsome thorn among the pretty pink roses, after his shijie and Meng Yao had deregistered from the class. If the First Class is considered unaffordably expensive by a wide margin compared to the reasonable charges levied for the Second Class, then the Third Class costs almost nothing in comparison to the former two categories - rightly so, because they spend most of their time learning how to do household chores and contribute to the everyday lives of the students at the Cloud Recesses academy; for example, lessons include the right techniques for doing the laundry, in which the students actually wash the clothes of the disciples from the other two classes; they are also taught how about janitorial skills, maintenance of cleanliness - sweeping, wiping -, organizing a disorderly room - housekeeping -, hospitality management - etiquettes in servitude -, and Wei Ying's favourite, studying about the culinary arts in whipping up cuisines from around the Middle Kingdom, baking his favourite breads and pastries, serving his mastered lotus root pork rib soup from the pot, and getting to try his and others' cooking. He signed up for the Third Class because he wanted to experience what the husband encountered day after day in dealing with his slothful behaviour, and maybe be motivated to change himself for the better.

(Actually, Wei Ying went straight to the Third Class because there were nineteen pretty jiejie s and meimei s and he was the one and only, most eligible bachelor among the lot. He plans to impress them with his skills, and receive plenty of pampering in return for his adorable behaviour, cheerful demeanour and boyish charms. He rubs his greasy palms as he fantasises about sticking Papermen into his classmates' bras and panties, and when the teacher isn't looking - mind-controlled, more likely -, Wei Ying will spend hours having wild sex in an orgy of nineteen jiejie s and meimei s on the kitchen countertops or on the beds in the training dormitories, and enjoy every minute molesting their naked soft and fair-skinned beautiful bodies. He wants to spend his mornings and afternoons 'studying' inside them, pumping deep and fast between their legs and shaking buttocks, and plant many fat and healthy babies in their freshly deflowered and claimed wombs as homework. It wouldn't count as cheating his husband, because in this alternate reality, sixteen years ago, he's still a healthy teenage boy with heterosexual desires anyway.)

Unbeknownst to the youngest two of their dorm mates, both Lan er gongzi and Wei gongzi spoke to Huan gege briefly the night before he left about changing classes. Huan gege was puzzled, but he was in a hurry, so he directed his younger brother to a particular drawer in his desk in the then-closed student affairs office, which contained the said forms for changing assigned classes. Lan Zhan filled his and signed using his family's seal inked in red, while Wei Ying did his and borrowed Jiang Cheng's seal - theoretically, representing their father's approval - while the youngest two were dead asleep after excessive masturbation. That morning, they queued up at the student affairs office, manned by another senior Lan disciple and submitted their forms, which were duly processed although the er gongzi drew quizzical looks - obviously; however since the necessary fields in the forms had been filled, and the seals from the respective families inked correctly at the bottom right, according to the Gusu Lan's standard operating procedure for administrative paperwork, no further questions were asked, and their applications were speedily approved and effected. They were directed to a storehouse to return their existing school bags to pick up new ones containing study materials suitable for their new classes, and then to the finance department to collect a refund for the downgrade and the respective receipts as proof of the transactions. The husband handed his money to add to Wei Ying's larger pile (because whatever the husband owns belongs to the wife), and the latter grinned - he now has lots of money to spend on good food and good wine outside of the Cloud Recesses, for certain.

Jiang Cheng and Huaisang didn't see their two other roommates in the First Class, but before they questioned the laoshi or his assistants, the first lesson had started right on the dot and on the wrong foot; these two were late by five seconds just when everyone took their seats, and had crumbs in their mouths - earning them one demerit point each in tardiness, another for eating in class, and one more for white soy milk stains on Jiang Cheng's white sleeves and for putting on shoes on the wrong feet for clumsy Huaisang. The two boys were upset, but they did not argue, because they learned how tough the Gusu Lan rules are. The first two, or was it three, hours were introductory sessions, that is, housekeeping rules for the entire duration of their studies, and immediately Master Lan Qi Ren took the centrestage to recite the over-4000 rules and passages that left everyone pretty much brain-dead by the time the first half-hour rolled by. The boys conveniently forgot about their roommates, their brains turned into cottons of spiralling texts filled with Gusu Lan rules, and slept with their eyes open; people left, right and centre of the class kept yawning and nodding, some threw paper balls and doodled on their books - whatever, to survive the onslaught of lethal boredom, and promptly earned demerit points when sharp-eyed assistants caught them doing so. Unsurprisingly, the entire Qishan Wen clan left with swear words and sniggers on their way out after the first half-hour, and the Master simply informed one assistant, "Minus fifty points for them for skipping classes."

In the meantime, Lan Zhan's first couple of lessons involved the science and art of crafting. There was an hour of theory, where students learned to make drawings and measurements on large pieces of rice paper, and they studied about the tools and techniques used. Carpentry and pottery were the order of the day, so every disciple made some kind of clay objects to be fired up in the kiln later, and carved something useful out of a sturdy piece of wood. Lan Zhan fashioned a simple but functional wooden belt buckle, and he managed to add a simple, minimalistic but elegant wavy cloud pattern without breaking it. The Lan laoshi hummed in approval, and it was a major breakthrough for a young man who had avoided craftworks like a plague since his early days. It wasn't terribly fancy, and if anything, it looked more like a ring of wood with little other embellishments or advanced carvings that would earn him more marks for his grade - but he passed, according to the teacher, so that was good enough. He admired his finished work in the sunlight filtering from across the window of the dusty, sawdust littered workshop, and faintly smiled. He thought how much more lovelier Wei Ying would look, wearing the white uniform with this shiny new accessory at the front-center of the waist - his cheeks pinked and the tips of his ears reddened. The laoshi asked if Lan Zhan was feeling well or if he was coming down with a fever from angsting over the small and delicate object in his hands, but he shook his head politely, and said that he would like to gift his hard work to someone he liked. Ahhh, everyone murmured, before they continued to use the tools on the workshop tables to sculpture more wooden goods.

Wei Ying, in another part of the academy, baked some sweet bean pastries, butter cakes and custard buns with the help of his new friend, and received lots of sweet kisses on the cheeks, touches on his hands, and flirting gazes in response, like a celebrity in a room full of fangirls filled with undying devotion to the very attractive and appealing young man. He didn't have to do much, really, because he lounged around, checking up on the girls and flirting with them, stealing their kneaded dough and bowls of ingredients for himself, then left fingerprints on their buttocks when he groped them as he walked by - white flour-prints aren't noticeable against white skirts -, and stole kisses from surprised, blushing maidens' cheeks when he leaned forward to ask for something. It was all done in good faith and fun, because the girls adored their A-Xian and let him get away with his naughty antics; he was fed with work-in-progress ingredients or pilot batches of baked goods, with 'try this, A-Xian, jiejie just made this. Does it taste yummy?', in which he 'Enn's cutely and gets a bite and sometimes, bosoms spills out when that jiejie puffs up her chest to try and seduce him - and he happily indulges in that jiejie 's sincere gestures by putting both of his hands on the woman's bared breasts and starts to massage them, before whispering, 'It tastes good, but A-Xian thinks it needs more milk,' and his hands slips into her bra with a sly, bewildered 'Oops!' look on his face, but that jiejie smiles sweetly, even wantonly, and lets the sixteen-year old boy play with her titties in a classroom full of lustful females.

He baked more than just buns and breads in the oven during the culinary lessons - he left a few more buns inside the girls -, and came out of the kitchens looking very refreshed, invigorated, beaming with rosy cheeks, a sheen of sweat on his skin, and a huge, satisfied grin. He was thrilled to discover that sweet bean paste and custard filling made great edible stuff to play with, when groups of three or more girls jostled around him and his happy genitals, licking, tasting and sucking him off until he came repeatedly in hiccupy laughs, because it felt really, really nice to be made sweet love by so many enthusiastic females using sweets, after all. After the lessons, he adjusted his trousers and thought that he might need a new belt and a buckle, after he became too impatient at one point and pulled down his pants too fast, tore something - but it didn't matter, not when a row of eager young twelve and thirteen-year old nameless girls waited for him with legs wide open inside the pantries, sending coy looks and shuddering moans, while rubbing their clitties and gaping pussies to coax him in. He'd made many creampiees like a laoban of a bakery - he stuck his cock inside each puffy juicy pussy-bun, shook his hips in eight directions and grind deep, deep in corkscrew motions, squirted his fifteen ejaculations of happy milky white custard with generous amounts of sweet moans and howls of pleasure, puledl out, moved to the next available bun, and repeated like a delirious non-stop sex machine. Those bread-making pantries became his new hideout and sex den with those lovely nineteen jiejie s and meimei s for when they study the culinary arts together.

(The masterchef laoshi , at that time, was cursed with a demonic spell, and ended up talking to a wall, interacting with it, shoving ladles, rolling pins and recipe books at the cold, unforgiving surface as though class ran as usual, not realizing that around him, there was an orgy of one lucky man and nineteen fertile young girls going on. Everyone received a passing grade in the end.)

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 271

By lunchtime, Huaisang was crying tears of frustration and hitting himself with a textbook until a lump appeared on his forehead, and Jiang Cheng wracked his head because he was numb from a whole morning of family rules and has an opening quiz in Philosophical Sciences in the afternoon, which he studied, but couldn't quite remember the facts. They ate little due to a lack of appetite caused by anxiety - they had a week to study, so there was no reason to fail, and yet, the moment the students were tested by listening to a passage and to interpret and write their clever, scholarly opinions, such as:

“The world is flat as a straight line drawn on rice paper, the sun is round in shape that rises in the east and sets in the west, why is this so?”

The four blessed directions that the winds blow throughout the four seasons, and the three universal aspects are creation, time and destiny, governs the five divinely elements of wood, fire, earth, metal and water. What does this signify, and discuss the consequences to the natural cycles on life, and the unnatural cycles of death?

Everything that exists has a yin and yang in perfect harmony, and a source of light with its dark shadow. Explain what does this imply to gods and men, and why?”

Huaisang put his head down and lay his forehead on the table. He'd given up straight away and decided to play with his birdies, packed carefully in a small cage inside his school bag. Jiang Cheng wrote a couple of sentences after an hour of rumination, and he too, was very disappointed that he couldn't respond intelligently to such a complex question and concept brought forward by the laoshi . The entire experience of studying and listening to lectures from the Gusu Lan masters took a turn from bad to worse, and school has never been more torturous and miserable for the Jiang gongzi .

Fortunately, he wasn't alone - he could hear lots of mutters and groans throughout the hour and when the time was up, there were soft curses, muted wailing and dismayed clicks of tongues, and he caught glimpses of answer sheets that were empty or only had a few lines written on them. Some did better, though, Jin Zixuan being one of them and some of the Lan classmates - he snorted and handed in his half-baked answer anyway. He contemplated breaking the bad news to his father later that day and come up with some believable, but lame excuse, such as that those questions weren't appropriate for thirteen-year old boys, or something to the equivalent.

They still had a few more lessons to go before the day wrapped up, this time more lectures in astrology and what to make of the signs in the skies and the divine premonitions that appear - they'd spend an hour practising cloud-watching in the afternoon sun and interpreting the shapes of clouds, for a start. Jiang Cheng marshalled up his remaining confidence and psyched his inner self that he's a big boy now, and he must be able to weather through these most distressing times of his life. Huaisang continued to sniffle and wiped tears of dismay from his eyes, and appeared listless, lifeless, and lacking any signs of enthusiasm, because the laoshi cheekily warned that guessing the animals from the shapes of clouds would earn them caning on the buttocks, and instead, they must elaborate at length what clouds mean to the fortunes and landscape of their nation's future prosperity. (At this point, many less-inclined students balked with a 'What the hell?')

Of course, to make life more hellish, the laoshi said that the drowsy-looking lot of unenthusiastic First Class students were a disgrace and needed to perk up a little bit more to show interest in their education. They were made to half-squat in the sun, while propping a heavy wooden beam over their shoulders with two filled buckets of water hanging precariously on each end of the beam; it was standard muscle-building exercise to strengthen one's core, toughen one's joints, build a steady footing and finetune one's equilibrium in balance. If anything, it felt like a punishment more than a martial arts training, for many of these spoiled gongzi who never really had to sweat it out in the outdoors.

.

Lunch for the royal couple duo was a take-out picnic outside the dining halls - where plenty of grumbling, unhappy First Class students would easily spoil anyone's appetite anyway -, and in a shady spot beneath an old tree. There, they shared moments of lovers exchanging their meals and hand-feeding each other with scoops of rice, noodles, stir-fried vegetables, slices of chicken and pork boiled in bland broths, an egg omelette each, and bowls of soup. Wei Ying wasn't too satisfied with the flavourless food, as usual, so he brought out a paper bag of his homework - surprise, surprise, he said to the husband, and picked out freshly baked sweet bean pastries, butter cakes and custard buns the jiejie s made for him. The two had a more enjoyable meal with their dessert included.

The couple shared about what they'd studied, both indoors and outdoors, and for a first day filled with new experiences, new friends and new lessons - it wasn't so bad, after all. Lan Zhan carefully took out a bundled package from his sleeves, and unwrapped the silk handkerchief to reveal the shiny new belt buckle. He pressed it into Wei Ying's hands with a knowing "Mn", and Wei Ying squealed with excitement. The wife gave the hubby a great big hug, and told him that he needed it for his trousers, which was falling off constantly since his old belt had broken during heavy use during the culinary class (what sort of ‘heavy’, he would not explain); it was inconvenient that his pants drooped constantly to expose his hips and part of his moon-pale buttocks (because he didn’t wear his underwear, and preferred going commando, for obvious reasons), and the jiejie s would flock around him and start putting their delicate fingers on them the way he groped their breasts earlier, and he felt, ironically, violated and his modesty outraged. He didn’t enjoy having girls’ fingers worming their way into his butt-cheeks, let alone try to pry their way to his prostate inside his anus - because that place was sacred, and reserved exclusively for his husband’s use. Wei Ying praised Lan Zhan for reading his mind and granting his wish for a new belt buckle, that saved Wei Ying’s purity - for that day, at least. Lan Zhan pinked again and lowered his head, a little sheepish and embarrassed.

~~~@@@~~~@@@~~~

While Jiang Cheng and Huaisang battled an afternoon of intensively boring philosophical tenets of star-gazing and cloud-watching and mulled over their astrological interpretations and implications, the blue skies dotted with pockets of cloud cover meant a rather good and comfortable start for Lan Zhan’s studies in agricultural sciences. He never really learned how to plant seeds and nurture plants until harvest time, and never quite explored the ways the growth and quality of crops can be manipulated by adjusting the soil, fertilizer, water, sunlight, pest control, even singing to the leaves, and all that. He’d always done things his elders had, toiled endlessly without much thinking, to put food on the table for himself and for lovely Wei Ying, and prayed for a good harvest season at the end of the day. The outdoor lesson taught him some new techniques on ploughing the fields to loosen the soil and to add extra nutrients and minerals mined from the Gusu mountains, for that extra boost for the seeds. Like every student, he was given a small square parcel of land with his name written on a signpost, and he would be graded based on how well his garden grows.

He planted some seeds in an experiment, not forgetting chilli seeds of course, and scattered a deliberately blended mix of fertilizer and other natural substances and synthetic chemicals that the laoshi mentioned, before watering them; following the laoshi 's superstitious teachings, he prayed and muttered some blessed words to encourage the plot of barren brown moist earth to grow healthy and thrive with as many chilli plants he'll need to make spicy congee, many mushrooms and root vegetables he'll need to add to his spicy hotpot, and tomatoes, onions and off-season tropical pineapples so that he can cook up a storm of spicy sweet-sour pork for his lovely Wei Ying someday. Other students planted a variety of crops too, including potatoes, white radish, leafy vegetables, and short fruiting trees, which would be enchanted with special life-giving spells by the seniors so that they can monitor the growth until harvest in a few weeks' time.

(Having learnt from experience not related to farming practices per se, while the students moved on to other parts of the fields, Lan Zhan excused himself for a bit, turned around and unzipped his pants. He masturbated fast and furiously until he was as ripe as a red tomato, huffing and puffing like a pervy sixteen-year old and orgasmed all over his precious square parcel of land. Then, he willed his pelvic and bladder muscles to stay awake and force out a violent spray of pee to maximize the surface area coverage, so that his seeds received godly nutrition in an instant. No doubt Lan Zhan's vegetables would score with blessed A+'s and some may suspect an element of cheating, but without eyewitnesses, anyone would be hard pressed to say when and how it happened, because in ancient times circa 2000 B.C., seeing a boy peeing in the open while standing by a curb or in farmland, was a common sight indeed.)

Indoors, Wei Ying faced an arch-nemesis of bedmaking. When asked by the laoshi how could a sixteen-year old boy not know how to differentiate between the head and foot part of a mattress and the associated part of the bed sheets - because he tried and thought he'd ace it, and got it in reverse -, Wei Ying teared in sheer embarrassment in the midst of giggle jiejie s and meimei s who clearly have vastly superior housekeeping skills than he was. He confessed, after getting a cane whip on his buttocks - because Third Class servants who didn't know how to make beds should not even exist, by the grace of the Gods of Maids, Butlers and Servants -, that he always had an older shijie to make his beds in the morning, and more lately, and older gege to do the job, so he never really had to think much other than which side of the bed he should sleep on that night. That kind of lame-ass excuse was intolerable for the fierce lady laoshi , so she harrumphed in annoyance, gave everyone the page numbers of the Manual of Housekeeping And Bedmaking to read in class, and strutted off to cool down.

The whole class, save Wei Ying, already mastered the Manual because it was part of standard education for servants across the country, so they ditched their books and went to console poor sniffing boy.

“A-Xian, A-Xian, don't cry, come and lie on jiejie 's bosom, you will feel better after putting your head between jiejie 's breast, it's like the first grade pillow that you'll learn from the books about housekeeping.”

“Here, A-Xian, lie on this bed and let jiejie and meimei show you how to differentiate the head and the foot of a bed. Such a good boy, you're eager to learn, aren't you, already taking off your clothes even without anyone having to ask. Do you feel the difference on the bed's firmness and shape near the head and at the foot?”

“No? Meimei is climbing up and straddling you, maybe her weight will help you to tell the difference. Oh, the two of you are bouncing so energetically, meimei is riding so healthily on your happy 'bedpost'!”

“You’re still not feeling it? Silly boy, look at your dreamy face and your drunken smile, lying on a bed with your classmates touching your lips, chest, arms, legs and even giving you nice footrubs while a long line of meimei s wait their turn to ride you. Ooh! You came already? Bad boy, she was eleven and you’ve popped her cherry and made a baby. You’re not really learning bedmaking, aren’t you? You like to learn about baby making!”

“Be strong, A-Xian, that jiejie is touching your balls expertly and guiding your hardening penis into the next meimei ’s sweet flowerbud. See? It’s going in, such a good and energetic boy you are! Good boy, you deflowered another one of our classmates, you did it!”

Wei Ying still couldn’t differential between the head and the foot of the bed, and he didn’t manage to read up the chapters of the Manual - but that was fine. He enjoyed getting laid and ridden like the stallion he was, for the next couple of lessons that afternoon. He’d ask Lan Zhan for tips about bedmaking later - there were rules about folding the bed sheets, tucking in the corners, arranging the pillows, smoothing the blankets - but for now, those studious intentions flew out the window once his beautiful sexy classmates clambered up the sagging piece of furniture, all vying for a sweet fuck with their handsome hunk (of sorts), purring and mewling like cats in heat, wanting to pleasure their harem master and ride him to kingdom come. Those who didn’t have the chance to have sex - because everyone wants to have a piece of ‘im -, were relegated to the likes of servants that they truly are, and they cleaned the rest of the dorm rooms as instructed without Wei Ying needed to lend a hand or break a sweat at all besides spurring the girls on with cheers of ‘Harder! Deeper! Faster!’, with connotations to harder scrubs on the bathroom tiles, deeper wipes to erase the stains on furniture pieces, and of course, faster sweeping for immediate results. Wei Ying enjoyed orgasming prematurely inside his new girlfriends, along with talking to them, getting to know them better and asking about their hobbies while fucking those lovely fresh young pussies like a stallion heterosexual lover - which he is, originally.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!

Chapter 272

By four o' clock, the couple reached their dorm room first. Being Second and Third Class'ers, they didn't have any real homework besides some general reading - because their lessons were more oriented towards practical assignments and hands-on activities, so they had a rather easygoing time that lasted for a couple of hours before dinner. There was time for a shower, for that so-called homework, of exchanging notes and stories and 'How was your day's, then Wei Ying finally learned from Lan Zhan and demonstrated his newfound bedmaking skills, but he ended up making boo-boos, wrapped in a blanket like a spring roll and the pillows scattered on the floor - so Lan Zhan sighed and shook his head. It is an undeniable fact that it's impossible to teach blundering Wei Ying how to make his beds in the morning, so he put that aside, gently unrolled the boy from his blankie burrito, and cuddled up - the next best thing to bedmaking.

They made sweet love after that. Wei Ying, having deflated his loins throughout the day into his new girlfriends, delighted in the lesser acts that are usually drowned off from the deluge of machine-like hip-pumps and animalistic savagery that is unbecoming of two men hopelessly in gay love. Their make-outs were prolonged, peppered with appreciative smoochies on the forehead, on the ears, the cheeks and the jawlines, accompanied by heartwarming, mushy phrases such as 'You're so handsome', 'I like you' and 'You're so precious'. Fingers explored every nook and cranny of masculine muscular outlines and sexy pulsing veins, tracing mischievous circles around man-nipples until the hairs around the rising swelling areolae tangled, dancing across six-pack abs that rocked and rolled to the amusement of the other, then, deliberately avoiding the crotch because they were saving the best for the last, the slid their thighs over and under one another, relishing in hairiness rubbing over smoother baby-soft supple skin, not to forget, rubbing their legs as well because both had rather long limbs so there was much tactile stimulation to be savoured between the two, and finally - footrubs! Wei Ying nnnngh'd when the husband's ball of heel fitted perfectly to the arch of his wiggling feet - like a ball and socket joint - and that lovely ball went round and round the soles, pressing on those sweet aching spots that made the wife squeal with unbridled joy; then, large hairy toes returned the favour to the husband, scraping with the fleshy pads of those hairy toes against the five balls of a smoother foot, in which the husband colloquially labels them as the ‘roots’ of his toes, and he likes it very much when the tendons and ligaments between each ‘roots’ are kneaded, stretched and simply touched with love and warmth - and soon, the two fell asleep on Lan Zhan’s bed, legs entwined with each other’s.

Jiang Cheng and Huaisang returned much later, shortly before the dinner bell, because they had to stay back overtime to help a laoshi carry stacks of paper - good virtues, good attitudes and good etiquettes set good examples to reverse demerits -, ask some pertinent questions about what they’d studied and received extra tutorials about the clouds and the constellations - until both boys had their heads in the clouds, literally, from lethargy and brain fuzz -, and chase after some seniors for tips for the next day’s quizzes. They had dark circles under their eyes and a frown on their tired faces when they entered their dorms, and couldn’t care less about the sight of two sixteen-year old boys snuggling up in the nude.

Wei Ying woke up with a yawn and with his naughty bits plainly in sight in broad daylight, and greeted their roommates. He explained, with plenty of white lies and lame excuses, about their change of classes - Second Class needed more Lan representation, so Lan Zhan volunteered; Third Class was lacking in students after the departure of Jiang Yan Li and Meng Yao, so Wei Ying chipped in -, and their terribly, terribly busy day (not) - that Lan Zhan suffered from aches and sores while slaving away under the hot sun in the farms, while Wei Ying worked his ass off doing a servant’s menial job - so that the youngest two were convinced that the older couple also suffered quite a bit in their first day in school. It sounded fair, but the two First Class students were too tired to process the illogicalities and discern fact from fiction, so they simply flung themselves to the bed, still in their rumpled uniforms that smelled a little ripe, asked ‘someone please wake us up to do our homeworks tonight’. and snored off almost instantly.

(Huaisang did ask, with droopy heavy-lidded eyes and a swaying gait on the legs, what is that - while pointing at the cold black slimy matted thing that looked like curly pubes greased with hair cream or something else equally icky - because this was the first time he pointed his gaze at the sixteen-year old's crotch and noticed it - which was really, Ernie who had been with the couple all this time and his sister tucked somewhere in Lan Zhan's crowning glory as a strand of hard-to-notice white strand. Fearing that he'd been outed, Wei Ying dismissed and pooh-poohed Huaisang's sight, because the fifteen-year old watched the pubes wriggle like worms and thought he was drunk-tired that his vision swung wildly to make a young man's pubic hair slither and slide like that - and said, that's my son, you fatigued fuck - implying that Huaisang probably mistaken his penis for something else; Huaisang shrugged and blinked his eyes blearily, and thought, yeah, maybe that's it, he was too exhausted to mistake pubic hair for cold black wiggly things.)

Dinner was, as usual, bland, mostly consisting of no-frills greens and whites with the odd portions of meat coloured dreary boiled browns. However, there were extra cold rice dumplings, baozi and sweet breads left from earlier the day in the canteen, so the couple took two portions as a take-out and brought them to the dorm room. Eating in the rooms was allowed as long as it wasn't a nuisance to the neighbours, and there was a clay stove to heat up leftovers if needed. Lan Zhan helped to arrange and pack the food carefully on a table, covered the bowls and plates, and left a small, neat handwritten note to the younger two to 'eat up and don't forget your homework'. After that, the couple cast an extremely vile corruption of space-time, which was undetectable by any means, and walked through. They emerged in Caiyi Town, behind a tower of barrels, and just in time for Lan Zhan's reservation in a restaurant that served everything from braised pork knuckles to succulent beef tenderloin roasts, lotus root pork rib soup, ten kinds of colourful congees, greasy meat fried rice and stir-fried noodles with fatty pork in black bean sauce, freshest salads and fruits in town, a kaleidoscope of sweet and savoury desserts, and free-flow of wine - for a fee, of course, paid by Lan Zhan's Jade Token express payments. Wei Ying had never been happier after a day of hard work, of living a regimented life, of having pointless abundant heterosexual intercoursing while straying to the other gender and fathering yet another generation of descendents, and finally, a loyal husband who had no qualms splurging on a sumptuous buffet for the wife, and a jar of Emperor Smiles in Wei Ying's hand with his beloved gay husband, in a loud boisterous establishment full of merrymaking, families eating, and drunkards gossiping and shouting.

Shortly before eight, the couple teleported back to the entrance gates to the Cloud Recesses, thus skipping through thousands of steps up the mountains, increasingly chilly weather, ominous-looking fog, and risks of getting robbed by bandits and kidnapped and raped by sex traffickers looking for tasty teenage boys to prey on; the wilderness around Caiyi Town and the mountain ranges surrounding the Cloud Recesses aren't as safe as one might believe, especially with the on-going rumours of more dead, blood-drained people turning up with blackend veins, whitened eyes and foul cracked skin all over, which disappear from the freshly dug graves several nights later - at least that's what the rumourmill said.

Once they walked through the gates, which also functioned as watchtowers with automated defenses to deter intruders - thanks to Lan Zhan's all-access Jade Token, of course - the couple held hands in the dark and took a late-evening stroll through the residential areas which were less patrolled, because most people had gone home by that time. Wei Ying held onto his bag of buttered bacon double cheese fries coated with fried eggs and chilli flakes topped with fat cream, and several sticks of skewered grilled meats, triple meatballs, deep-fried corn dogs and greasy sausages. The husband remarked that the wife was eating as though he was with child, and Wei Ying snorted, saying that he needed the protein after a day of spilling semen to sow his wild oats, thus emptying his man-eggs, both yolk and whites, to near-zero levels. Lan Zhan shot a confused look, before he shook his head with a wordless 'never mind', because between the romantic old married couple, the lines between sperm and eggs have long blurred into a common terminology.

Wei Ying likes to watch families sitting down together for dinner, and lounging around in their homes after dinner though lit windows and opened doors - it reminded him of what he did and didn't have; he had a fairly good upbringing in a comfortable environment, albeit one that didn't always gather around jovially at the dining table because his foster mother had plenty of unkind things to say about comparing their older versus younger boys, and the relationship soured over the years. He also noticed that each home was built in a rather standard manner, and designed similarly as the Jingshi, that is, there was always a hall to welcome visitors, a space for daily living and dining, and more rooms to the back including a study and the bedrooms. Certainly there were some minor variations, such as the placement of furniture and wall decor, an extra painting or a trophy display case somewhere, but that was as trivial as the differences between individuals - the colours of one's skin may differ, but the blood that runs beneath is the same. "It seems all our previous homes in the past lifetimes took a similar shape and design too, was it, by any chance, your doing?" the wife asked sweetly, and Lan Zhan lowered his head in silent admission. Ah, Wei Ying thought, no wonder he'd had a very good life living under comfortable roofs, with plenty of space and fully furnished and equipped living arrangements, always well fed and with a warm bed to sleep in. The grip between their held hands tightened.

They passed by the Jingshi, which was darkened since it was unoccupied and vacated. Wei Ying asked if Lan Zhan managed to locate his missing furniture, family heirlooms, precious relics and whatnots. The husband simply lifted an arm to point at his skin, indicating that yes, he retrieved everything and they were absorbed. No questions asked?, Wei Ying raised his brows. The husband shook his head wordlessly. Ah, of course, the wife conjectured, it was a Gusu Lan norm that once forms are properly filled and all prerequisites were satisfied, they would not hesitate to complete the process and relinquish everything to the true owner without another word, just like the occasion earlier that day when they submitted the forms to change their classes.

Wei Ying finished the after-dessert snacks and downed another few jars of tasty fruit wine without being noticed by patrolling guards, hopping and skipping in his inebriated merry state until his clothes were splashed with the heady, sweet liquor, then stole Bichen to cut down someone's fruit tree so that he could grab a bunch of ripened loquats to snack some more, and broke into the communal chicken coops to release some rabbits and steal two roosters to ask the husband with a beguiling grin, Are these chickens fat enough? Should we roast or grill them?, before laughing like a drunkard and nearly scaring a nearby family hiding in their home when he scrawled on someone's postbox "WWX & LWJ Wuz 'Ere" with a big Heart encircling their names (and Lan Zhan blushed at that, because he remembered). When all that needed to be done and eaten, had been done and eaten, Lan Zhan sighed and performed his Snap-It-Clean move; with a snap of fingers, something in their reality changed - very minutely and nearly unobservable to the naked eye of the ones being changed -, and Wei Ying no longer smelled like an alcoholic and his clothes looked prim and proper once again; and the embarrassing damage done in his wake was reversed. They returned to the dorms with half an hour to spare before the night curfew began.

Upon opening the room's door, they were greeted by the extraordinary sight of Jiang Cheng and Huaisang, both with bloodshot eyes and veins popping out on the temples, as they hunkered down on their beds with candles lit, and studied as though there was a huge life-changing exam the next day. They had many pages of scripts to copy and write - Wei Ying knew too well about that sort of experience, so both of them quietly said 'Hello' and 'Have you eaten?' in a rather apprehensive way because those two looked so intent and focused that they might burn holes through the books; the tray was cleared out, thank goodness, so taking that as a green light, the couple went to the bathroom together to take a quick shower, brushed their teeth and put on their jammies.

Noting the amount of paper and opened books scattered all over the floor, Wei Ying suggested that they can use his bed as an extra table; Jiang Cheng grunted something in appreciation and started picking up then dumping stuff in a more organized manner on his bed. Lan Zhan looked over questioningly, but he relaxed when Wei Ying grabbed his pillow and shuffled over to the husband's bed. He put a finger to his lips to signal that it's lights-out for them and to let the two younger boys get on with their homework in peace. The curtains around the bed were drawn for added privacy, and the two relished in the relative silence of heavy breathing, the crinkle of pages turning, and the dim amber torch light that bathed their bed, filtered through those curtains that help to block out sound too. At nine, the couple was asleep in each other's arms while the younger gongzi s stayed up until much later, eyes bloodshot, a bandana tied about their foreheads with printed words screaming 'Study Hard! Add Oil (加油)!'.

Notes for the Chapter:

Please put in a Kudos if you appreciate the existence of this fic. Thank you!